ATTEMPT TO KILL KEYES WITNESS

Isolated Trappers Locked by Snow Drifts in the Sawtooth Range Are Entertained Royally by Good Radios That Enliven the Lonely Days and Evenings

(Editor's note: Henry H. Graham, formerly a member of the Times staff, has just returned to Twin Falls after several weeks spent writing fiction at his cabin in the Sawtooth mountains above Hailey. In the following story he tells of interesting interviews with the snowbound trappers spending the winter there.)

By HENRY H. GRAHAM

Outside the little mountain cabin the wind moaned restlessly, swaying the pine trees and drifting the sheet of falling snow into a blizzard. So fierce was the storm that the kerosene lamp burning within the log shelter could not be seen more than ten feet from the building. Inky night had long since settled over the cold, snow-filled wilderness, so drab and lonely during the long winter months.

Inside the weather-tenton structure voices were filling the air. While flickering firelight from sizzling pine and fir burning in the hearth threw ghastly shadows on the walls of the room, a voice cracked out, "I'll kill you for the dirty cur you are—Rattlesnake Hahn!" A pistol shot rang through the cabin, followed by a woman's voice: "You've killed him, Jack!" she cried, mingled horror and fear—engulfing her. "I'll get the doctor."

"Better get the coroner," the man's gruff voice suggested.

Anyone entering the little mountain cabin at that juncture might have figured, quite naturally, too, that a murder had been committed within—that if he would have been reassured, when another voice, a fresh new voice, declared, "You have just heard the conclusion of the second act in 'Silence,' a drama of the north woods. There will now be a brief pause for station announcements after which the play will continue."

In Heart of Mountains,

Here was a cabin in the heart of Idaho's mountains miles and miles from even a railroad, yet the two trappers to whom it belonged were being—royally—entertained—night after night by the finest talent in America. Clear and resonant the radio programs came over the air with no electrical machinery and very little static to bothersome interference is practically unknown to radio fans living in the beaten paths. It is difficult to imagine what radio has meant to those who are bedridden, isolated and shut in, especially during the long winter nights. Even as recently as ten years ago trappers, woodsmen and isolated ranchers were without this magic source of entertainment. Today, most of them have battery-operated sets, finding rich pleasure in tuning in on stations located more than a thousand miles away.

The writer is acquainted with a young trapper who makes his home far up one of the wooded gulches in the Sawtooth mountains, living there winter and

HEFLIN DEPLORES STOCK MARKET AS GAMBLING DEVICE

Sensational Slump During the Last Few Days Brings Talk of Probe

MOVES TO INVESTIGATE TEMPORARILY BLOCKED

Statement of Federal Reserve Board False and Caused Trouble Is Claim

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (UP) — The sensational slump of the stock market during the last few days again was called to the attention of both houses of congress today, when further plans for an investigation were proposed.

Senator Heflin of Alabama was trying unsuccessfully in the senate to get action on his resolution calling upon the federal reserve board, to tell why it issued its statement of Thursday advising against speculative loans. Rep. Loring Black, democrat, New York, introduced a resolution in the house asking the same information and demanding to know if Montagu Norman of the Bank of England had anything to do with the reserve board statement.

Moves Blocked

Both moves were blocked temporarily but such a concerted effort was made for action that leaders of both sides in the matter may have to be taken when the question comes up again Monday.

During the brief senate debate before his motion was blocked, Heflin charged that the recent activities in the market constituted "the worst gambling scheme put over in this country in the last century." He said persons in every state interested in the market wanted to know why the reserve board issued the statement which is generally believed to have caused the fall of stock prices.

Gives Action

Action in the matter was blocked by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, former secretary of the treasury in the Wilson cabinet. He said Heflin's resolution was not acceptable and if any resolution was to be adopted it should be the LaFollette resolution which has been on the senate calendar for several weeks. The LaFollette resolution, favorably reported by the banking and currency committee, would express the sense of the senate that the federal reserve board should not attempt, through pressure, to prevent

DIGGING OUT SNOWBOUND TOWN

Snowfall has been exceptionally heavy in many states this winter. The snowplow that buried aside seven-foot drifts that had cut off the town of Colesburg, Ia., from the outside world is pictured in operation here. The town was snowbound and was facing a serious food shortage when aid finally arrived.

Irrigation District Bill Signed at Boise

BOISE, Feb. 9 (UP) — Governor Baldridge today signed the House Bill No. 11, authorizing irrigation districts to spread payments over longer periods of time under contracts with the federal reclamation service.

The house held a short session and planned to permit the committees to catch up on work over the week end. The poll tax measure was brought up again for discussion.

An attempt to revive the anti-fraternity bill in the senate this morning failed. A motion for reconsideration of the motion for indefinite postponement, which carried yesterday by a 22 to 12 vote, was defeated by a vote of 26 to 7.

A house bill calling for the monthly instead of quarterly payment of salaries of government officials was passed with eight other measures. Three bills were postponed for further consideration retaining their places on the calendar. After the new bills were introduced the senate adjourned until 10 a. m. Monday morning.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 9 (UP)—Relief from the abnormally low temperatures which have gripped the intermountain area for the last week, was promised by the weather forecaster today.

Pocatello, Idaho, reported 10 below and Boise two above. Below zero marks were general throughout the state of Montana. Havre reported -4; Helena -6; Kalispell -8; and Miles City -20.

FROST MENACES WATER SYSTEM OF TWIN FALLS

Large Service Main Breaks on Second Avenue North Today, Says Report

WATERUSERS ASKED TO CONTINUE PRECAUTIONS

Ground Frozen to Depth of Four Feet in Some Sections of City

The Twin Falls water distributing system continues to be menaced by the protracted cold weather and waterusers are asked to exercise all possible precaution, Harley Rayburn, waterworks superintendent, announced today.

A serious and unusual break occurred in a large main on Second avenue north and Fourth street, today, necessitating the closing of the main and halting the water supply to all waterusers serviced by that particular line. Due to the depth of the frost in the ground, the water did not break through the pavement but formed underground and the first intimation that the line had broken came when calls were received that the basement of a business house was filling with water. As a result the department had to "prospect" for the break along the main on Second avenue.

Meters Reported Frozen

The number of calls received by the department due to frozen meters and service lines increased in volume today, Mr. Rayburn said.

The department upgraded to waterheaters for cooperating several weeks ago when a large number of complaints of frozen service lines were received and temporary relief was obtained by the adoption of the department's suggestion. With the advent of warmer weather several days ago waterusers ceased to allow a small volume of water to flow continuously from one faucet on the premises and as a result a large number of frozen meters and service lines have been reported.

In some sections of the city the frost has penetrated to a depth of four feet in the ground, Mr. Rayburn declared.

Period Is Critical.

The next few days of warm weather will not bring relief and Mr. Rayburn asks that waterusers continue the practice of permitting a small flow of water to run until the department announces that the critical period has passed.

DEPARTMENT WORKS

POCATELLO, Idaho, Feb. 9 (UP) — The city water department removed 167 frozen meters and thawed out 675 frozen services during the month of January, a report submitted to the city council revealed.

Toral Shot to Death By Mexican Soldiers For Killing Obregon

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 9 (UP) — Jose de Leon Toral, professing to the last that he was a martyr to the cause of religion, died his second death facing the rifles of a firing squad at 12:35 p. m. today.

Toral was executed in the patio Alvaro Obregon at the federal penitentiary for the assassination last July 17 of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, president-elect of Mexico. He was shot at 12:35 p. m. C. S. T.

The prison was surrounded by 200 police, mounted and on foot, to prevent any possible demonstration. The crowd outside the walls was comparatively small, but thousands through the city waited for news of the execution.

By Obregon's Gun.

A bullet from the pistol of the man he had assassinated penetrated Toral's brain and the state was satisfied that he was dead.

When Toral was led in for the execution he was guided to a wall of the prison and stood with his back to it. A loop of cords of cord, stacked against the wall, was behind him.

The bullets tore a hole in the victim's body and he toppled forward on his face. The bullets passed through his back and opened the cords, from which a stream of sand poured out and covered the prostrate body.

Faces Squad.

Toral faced the firing squad at 12:25 p. m. and was then seated in a chair while a white cloth was removed with his right hand—just a second before the command to fire was given.

Then he placed his left hand over his heart to guide the shots. He cried "Viva," apparently intending to utter the rallying cry of the Catholic extremists, "Viva Cristo Rey," but the shots cut him off.

Capt. Jose Rodriguez, Rubiela, commanding the firing squad, stepped forward and delivered the coup de grace with a pistol which had been given to him by Obregon.

SHIP STRANDED OFF CALIFORNIA

Aid Being Rushed to Stricken Freighter; Japanese Boats Near Seattle Now All Right

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Feb. 9 (UP) — The tug "Sea Gull" was speeding today to the assistance of the freighter Sparrowhawk, stranded off Malibu Bay on the coast of Lower California.

The Sparrowhawk, en route from New York to San Francisco, reported last night that it was sinking helplessly in a severe storm. The appeal for assistance said the freighter's fuel supply had been exhausted. The vessel carried a general cargo and was manned by a crew of 25.

SEATTLE, WASH., Feb. 9 (UP) — The Freighter Alloway, which early yesterday sent out a distress message to the steamers Yozen Maru and Kaki Maru, reported today that assistance was no longer needed and that she was proceeding under her own power to Dutch Harbor, 300 miles from her present position.

The Alloway, an old, shipping board vessel, consigned to a Tokio firm for junking, had reported her engines disabled during a gale 1,000 miles off Puget Sound. The two steamers each within 100 miles of the vessel, changed their course and speeded to the disabled vessel.

The freighter's engines were repaired, the message said, and she is proceeding on her last trip.

FAMED ASA KEYES FOUND GUILTY OF RECEIVING BRIBE

Assassination of Borman, Who Turned State Witness, Is Attempted

KEYES PLACED IN JAIL FOR SENTENCE MONDAY

Gunplay Attributed to an Attempt at Vengeance by Henchmen

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9 (UP) — An attempt was made last night to assassinate Jacob Berman, who turned state's evidence to aid in the conviction of Asa Keyes and two others on charges of bribery, District Attorney Burton Fitts announced today.

Only the presence of guards who have been with Berman since he first decided to testify against Keyes, former Los Angeles district attorney, prevented him from being shot, Fitts said.

"Jack Boscheri, dismissed as a defendant during the conspiracy trial and a brother of Ed Boscheri, one of the convicted men, was taken to the district attorney's office for questioning.

Refused To Talk

Although he refused to comment on the attempted gunplay it was obvious that Fitts believed the action to be a vengeance move. Berman's life has been threatened a dozen times since he turned state's evidence, Fitts said.

The reported attempt to shoot Berman occurred at 9 p. m. Saturday night, just a short time after a party of 10 women and 3 men returned a verdict of guilty against Keyes, Rosenberg and Don Gettoff.

Detective Matthews and Berman stopped from Berman's apartment to take a short walk. Plots reported, when a man armed with a sun jumped between them.

Knocks Down Gun.

The assailant placed a sun against Matthews' ribs, evidently mistaking him for Berman. Matthews, a large and powerful man, knocked the weapon to the ground then picked Berman up bodily and carried him back into the apartment.

Matthews then barricaded the door and prepared for a further attack which failed to materialize.

More than a score of district attorney's detectives were sent to search the district near Berman's home in an attempt to pick up the trail of the gunman.

Berman was a keypoint in the successful prosecution of Keyes and the others on the charge that

"The Most Amazing Shopping Trip I Ever Took"

"You look quite animated today," said Mrs. Smith's neighbor as she dropped into an arm chair for a chat.

"I have been handling several little business deals during the past few days," replied Mrs. Smith, "and I've just closed the last one with the result."

Mrs. Smith held up a handful of crisp bank-notes as she spoke.

"But I shall not prolong the mystery," she continued, "I merely took a shopping trip through a part of the paper I had seldom bothered to read before—the want ad pages.

"I sold an old kitchen range and some odd pieces of furniture we had stored away and I disposed of about a hundred old books, some toys, clothing and so on.

"And I found out, also, that the want ad pages are wonderful places in which to buy things too.

"I consider my fifteen minutes with the want ad pages the most amazing shopping trip I ever took."

MURDERING RIOT BRINGS CURFEW

Six Hindus Stabbed to Death Early Today; Shops Looted and Buildings Are Fired

BOMBAY, Feb. 9 (UP) — Curfew law was proclaimed here today as riots and murders continued and a widespread wave of looting and burglary began as the latest phase of the religious war between Moslems and Hindus.

It has been impossible to list positively the number of those killed since the first riots last Sunday but estimates ranged from 100 to 110 dead and from 500 to 600 wounded and injured.

Shops in several districts were looted the afternoon, two buildings were fired and reports of isolated murders continued to come in.

Hindus Stabbed

Six Hindus were stabbed to death in riots and troops were ordered to open fire on a crowd of Moslems and Hindus. Fifty Moslems were arrested.

The decline between the Moslems and Hindus is vicious and even hardened troops are appalled at the ferocity of the stabbing duels.

Four new murders were reported this morning. The dispatch said 23 bodies, all bearing stab wounds, were placed in the mortuary between 4 p. m. yesterday and 9 a. m. today.

While the troops and police have succeeded in checking rioting on a large scale, a new murder wave was reported, one being nearly every 5 minutes in the bylanes of the mill areas.

The dispatches said the majority of killed and injured were Hindus.

In the notoriously lawless Minapura section, Moslems dragged a Hindu passerby into a mosque, cut his throat, and flung his body out on the road, other exchange telegraph dispatches said.

Patrolman Harry Hansen and Thomas Caroll were called in to take care of the body. They could detect neither heart nor pulse action, but decided to use the Schaefer treatment of working the hands and legs of the patient in a pump-like motion. Soon Dr. Josephine Doyle arrived, applied a pulmotor and injected adrenalin.

BRUINS CONQUER SHOSHONE TEAMS IN DOUBLE BILL

Co-eds Take Game 25. to 8, Boys Play Erratic and Very Ragged Ball to Win 28-7

The Twin Falls squash heavers took an erratic double-header from the Shoshone teams here last night, the girls winging the first battle by a score of 25 to 8 and the Bruin boys taking their game by a score of 28 to 7.

The Bruin girls played their usual consistent brand of ball, but the Twin Falls youths were hopeless. The boys worked an excellent passing attack, throughout, but had the gymnasium been lined with basket hoops there would have been but few more baskets sunk by the quintet. For five consecutive minutes during the second period the Bruins shot time after time at the basket without making a field goal, always having the ball in possession after each shot at the backboard. The ball had a custom of rolling around the rim of the hoop but never inside.

Shoshone Scores.

Shoshone scored first and Twin Falls repeated and then ran into the lead. At the end of the quarter the Bruins were leading 10 to 2 and at the end of the half led 16 to 4.

Coach Jones found that the men were completely off when trying to sink shots, so sent in a complete new quintet at the second half. These boys did fairly well, keeping possession of the ball but having caught the contagion and being unable to sink the easiest set up. Therefore, the first string went back as a group in the final quarter and the seconds went to the shower room.

The last quarter was a ragged, erratic performance on the part of both the Twin Falls and Shoshone quintets, ending with a score of 28 to 7.

Maidens Take Lead.

The Bruin maidens scored first in the initial game after the first half dozen tries at the net. The co-eds, defense was working perfectly, the Shoshone girls getting but three shots at their hoop in the first quarter, one coming as a free throw and the other just as the whistle for the quarter blew. The score for the first period was 12 to 0 for the Bruin lassies. Several substitutions were made for both teams during the final half but the game was changed little by the shakeup. (At this point Twin Falls led 15 to 1.) The lineups were:

Girls' Game

To Fight Or Not To Fight Question Fans Must Answer

To fight or not to fight! Duncan Johnston, matchmaker for the American Legion Post, is in a quandary and he wants the fight fans to tell him what to do. He has an opportunity to match Bud Travis and Rocky Moore for a return bout here in either two weeks or three weeks. Should he do it or should he not? He wants the fans to either write him or call him at the Con. W. Hesse store and give him their opinions. He is silently of the opinion that the fight would be better if the lads were given a longer time to rest up and prepare for the next bout. What is the verdict? The decision must be made by not later than Tuesday morning of next week.

Mr. Johnston states he has been considering the selection of a partner to enter the ring with Ray Copenhaver of Buhl in the next card. There is a man at Boise who is being considered and the next card may feature Buhl's "Battling Buckaroo."

FILER MAIDENS TIE BUHL GIRLS IN UPSET GAME

Buhl Boys Win from Filer by Close Score of 25 to 23 in Last Few Minutes of Playing

FILER, Feb. 9 (Special) — Fighting until the last gong the Filer basketball girls, coached by Miss Barbara Rugg, played the Buhl girls to a 23 to 23 tie here last night in the biggest upset in the basketball history of the section for years. The Buhl boys were hard pressed by the Wildcat boys but managed to eke out a 25 to 23 victory in the last few minutes of play.

The Filer girls displayed the hardest fighting spirit any girls' team has displayed in this section for ages. At the end of the first quarter the visitors were leading, 9 to 8 score. The Buhl Indians rallied strongly in the next period, overcame the lead and jumped to the front of 13 to 10 by the close of the half.

Filer Has Fight.

In the second half the Buhl girls came out with too much confidence, while the Filer girls were back with their old zip and fight. The home team scored 10 points while Buhl scored six in this period and in the final canto continued the vigorous battle to make nine points while Buhl made five, tying the score. The lie was not played off as there is a provision in the rules of girls' basketball stating that games tied are to remain that way. It was the first threat made against the Buhl girls' team during the past five years of playing.

This makes two tie games played by the Filer girls this season, one with the Twin Falls team when the lie was literally played off, the victory going to the deserving Filer maidens.

Boys' Game A Battle

The game between the boys' teams was as warm a battle as that between the co-eds. Filer took a two point lead and maintained this advantage until the middle of the final quarter. The Buhl boys put up a fast snappy attack in the remaining two minutes, making two baskets, one to tie the score and the other to win the game as the timekeeper pulled the trigger on the gun to end the fracas.

Both games were the first I have refereed this season," stated Referee Westergren at the close of the final battle. The lineups were:

Girls' Game

The fight was stopped two rounds later.

Local News in Brief

Fruit Growers to Meet

There is to be a meeting of all fruit growers and shippers in this section, Monday evening at 7:30 at the offices of the Twin Falls chamber of commerce to discuss the advisability of building a large cold storage plant here. The apple growers and lettuce growers alone, it is claimed, would be benefited by such a plant. The apples may be stored immediately after picking, in a great many instances, while the lettuce will be absolutely necessary to prevent any deterioration of quality. Only one handling and shipping will be necessary, and the cutter, after apples may be stored at a much lower expense until such time that they may be shipped to a cannery to be worked up into jams and jellies. Lettuce is a perishable crop, and soon after picking, unless it is put in a cold storage, it begins to wilt and shrink rapidly. With a cold storage plant here it would be possible to do away with any waste along this line, in many cases the market prices would make it possible to hold any perishable crop until such time that the market conditions are the best of the growers declare.

Continued Cold.

The recent cold wave that has held this section in its grip for the past few days is continuing with undiminished zeal, last night being no exception. The readings for the last 24 hours showed the maximum of 15 above, a minimum of 3 below, and a low point of 7 below for last night. Cheer up, folks, there are a number of more months to go yet. The effect that "it can't last forever." If winter helped the winter wheat the farmers who had foresight enough to plant the crop are lucky. The lucky who put in chatted mortgages on his neighbor home to buy a coon skin coat can't kick either — let the creditors do that. This kind of weather is tough on the ice men though—people would rather have a pair of wool mittens for a couple of ear muffs than all the ice at the North Pole—can't blame them for that either. I'm like the Arab on the desert, he'd rather have a good Idaho spring than all the sand in the whole Sahara waste—even if it was an irrigated project. This sounds like a day.

Will Mobilize

Mobilization day is to be one of the most important features of the entire week's activities, and is to be in the nature of a drill. Sunday, next week, is a prearranged near-by hike, and on Tuesday, the Troy laundry vehicle will be sounded as a signal, at which the boys are to drop the task they are performing, and assemble at the city park with emergency rations and first aid kits, in the shortest possible time. Following the mobilization the boys will be assigned to special duty, to which they will give their undivided attention.

The drill is being observed to train the boys to be prepared for any emergency that might arise unannounced in this community.

Did it ever strike you that the removal of a bodily organ is a mighty inefficient way to deal with an inconvenient condition of affairs? Where the trouble is, is that we don't know how to stop it, so we just get rid of the organ altogether! Well, it's a Chiropractor never gives such advice, for the reason that once the trouble is definitely known, they know that a deficient supply of vital energy is reaching that organ, and what is more to the point, they know how to release the pressure upon nerves which is responsible. It is not that method more efficient than depensing with an organ for which Nature found a use?

SEEKING BEAUTY

Robin Walker

Seeking beauty, looking high,
To the mountains and the sky,
Seeking beauty in the trees,
In such wondrous things as these.

Seeking beauty in the rose,
As its scented charms disclose;
In the ever restless sea
With its depths of mystery.

Seeking beauty in strange places,
In the crowd of eager faces,
In a river or a star,
Searching, searching, near and far.

Treading over stones and clods,
Knowing not they, too, are Gods.
All have charm beyond compare,
God has made it everywhere.

THE PRINCE'S SERVICE

THE PRINCE of Wales has never served his nation better than by his recent tour of inspection of the British mining areas. It makes a weird, fascinating picture, this tale of the prince investigating poverty. There is the boyish, slender heir to the throne, lonely and ill, stalking down muddy streets between tumble-down shacks while underfed, hopeless people stand in doorways to see what message the next king of England has for the depths of woe. The trip is making all of England see the picture, focussing attention on an accumulation of misery that had gone too long unheeded.

There is not a great deal of hope for many of these British miners. There are whole villages where no one has worked for months; where every inhabitant lives on the government dole, dependent on charity for every bite of food and every rag of clothing; where mines have been shut down so long that weeds are growing on the slag-heaps by the pit heads; where houses have been abandoned, never to be occupied again.

All of this has been true for quite a while, and England has known about it in a hazy sort of way; but it took the prince's visit to impress the facts on the general public. Whatever is eventually done to relieve the distress, much of it will be due to the prince's visit.

This, of course, does not touch us very closely on this side of the Atlantic. But the underlying principle is worth looking at, whether you live in England or Idaho.

England is not the only country that has had festering sores, but refused to look at them. The ostrich habit of burying the head in the sand and ignoring all unpleasant sights is as common in the ew World as in the Old.

In the United States, for instance, there are plenty of things that would shock us unutterably if we would look at them steadily.

Our own coal miners, as it happens, have troubles of their own. In Pennsylvania there are mining towns where conditions are nearly as bad as they are in England.

We have city slums, too, where vice and crime and misery exist in a degree to make the dingle weep. We have certain textile manufacturing towns where hunger and unemployment are familiar, every-day acquaintances to most of the inhabitants. We have agricultural regions where honest, industrious men have seen poverty come upon them through no fault of their own.

But we don't get excited about any of these things. In a vague way we know that they exist, but we don't do anything about it. We haven't been jarred into activity.

Perhaps it would be a good thing for us if we had someone who could open our eyes to a few things. We always have good intentions but too often it takes a catastrophe to get us into action.

EINSTEIN'S THEORY

TRYING TO assimilate the ins and outs of Professor Einstein's latest theory is by no means the simplest diversion you could select for a quiet evening.

It starts out very harmlessly. Gravitation, magnetism and electricity are all different manifestations of the same force. This is new, but it isn't hard to grasp. You decide that if this is all there is to it, the intricacy of the whole thing has been vastly over-rated.

But that's only the beginning. There are implications, it seems, that follow; and they are no light mental exercise for anybody.

As a result of the new conception, says Einstein's most prominent disciple, we must revise our conception of the electron. The electron has no reality; it is simply a name for a disembodied force.

This, too, most of us can accept—chiefly because we have only the laziest conception what an electron is supposed to be.

But there is even more to it. What applies to the electron, it is said, applies also to everything in the universe. Sun, stars, moon, the earth—everything is unreal. These things only seem to be. They are shadows non-existent and without genuine substance. The solid ground under our feet, the blazing sun in the sky overhead, are equally vague and hazy. The entire universe is something between a shadow-shape and a dream.

All of this it is said, is implied in Einstein's new theory.

To most of us, probably, the whole thing sounds like sheer nonsense. Yet it is accepted by level-headed scientists; furthermore, it is not particularly new. This is the first time it has been put forward as a scientific theory; but, in all ages, poets and artists have voiced it as their greatest creed.

Shakespeare saw it ere ever with Einstein. But he put it more beautifully. In "The Tempest" we find this:

"The baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep."

What is that but the transfiguration of Einstein's higher mathematics into music? Poetry and logic, carried to their highest points, meet. The seer and the scientist see the same vision.

And what is that vision, again? Simply this: that the one reality, in a world of moving shadows, is the internal one. Only the soul stands sure. All the rest is merely the stage setting for its earthly incarnation. You, yourself, are more enduring and immortal than sun, stars or earth. They dissolve and vanish without trace. Reality lies within your heart.

This was Shakespeare's vision. Apparently Einstein, following science instead of poetry, reaches the same conclusion.

CLARK'S THEORY

IT IS A startling new theory of man's origin that Dr. Austin H. Clark, of the Smithsonian Institution, recently presented.

Dr. Clark denies the Darwinian theory of the descent of man. He does not believe we have any kinship with the ape, and doubts very much that the "missing links", believed by evolutionists, are really missing links at all. Man first appeared, he says, in something very like his present form, and has changed very little.

During the next few years we may be assured that Dr. Clark's new theory will undergo the closest sort of scrutiny by other scientists. It may be years before the final verdict is returned. Meanwhile, the very fact that he presented it is one more proof of the fact that science, at its best, is not wedded to any one rigid theory and does not close its eyes to evidence which may contradict its previous findings.

It will be interesting to see what Dr. Clark's fellows say about his theory.

OWNING A HOME

SOME interesting statistics on home ownership are presented in a recent press bulletin from Walter F. McDowell, president of the U. S. League of Local Building and Loan Associations.

To begin with, Mr. McDowell reveals that fully half of the homes in the United States are owned by men earning less than $2000 a year. At least 90 per cent of the people who buy homes do not pay for them outright, but borrow the money from building and loan or similar institutions. And he adds:

"Any person who is willing to live within his income and who really wants a home can manage the small, regular and systematic deposit of a few dollars each week or month to build up the required savings."

The growth of individual home ownership in recent years is a good sign. For all the prevalence of installment buying, we still have the thrift habit.

Headline in a New York newspaper says, "Hoover Wrestles With His Speech." Maybe there are some formidable figures in it.

THE KEY TO MEN'S CLOTHES

(Chicago Tribune)

IN THEIR general design men's clothes were fixed about one hundred years ago, and the garments that went with cold, ill-heated houses, stage coaches, and the undeveloped sanitary and heating systems of that time have come down today without a fundamental change. It was a hard working but unathletic age, and the variety of movement and freedom of today was not then customary. Our warm houses and quiet summers, our deliveries and means for cleanliness could not be much considered then. Clothes were warm, close wrappings of heavy woolen goods and were washed rarely. The times were stuffy, and the sturdy clothes that men wore then survive now in a different age. Where women fit their clothes to the modern needs, men keep the ancient model.

The key to the men's clothes problem is about the waist, and here the main improvement must be made. Without his coat a man looks undressed and awkward, baggy and anything but beautiful. His shirt is tucked in. His trousers cut without celat somewhere south of his armpits, and whether he wears belt or galluses the effect is far from pleasing. Being an easily embarrassed creature man therefore wears his coat, summer and winter, and usually a vest besides. They are uncanny garments, binding, stiff with buckram, and the heavy collar and the padded shoulders, where they should be cool, make summers miserable. To our warm winter houses they are unsuited, to pleasant summers they are the chief enemy. But men dare not take off their coats.

When man will wear a blouse of washable material to replace the present tucked in shirt a fundamental gain in clothes for him will be ushered in. It should be a blouse of fairly heavy cotton goods, hanging outside the trousers. It should reach down to the hips and should hang straight, or be bound below by a wide band of elastic, a light, loose belt might be worn outside of it.

With such a blouse a man could remove his coat and look well-dressed. He can indeed wear it as a garment, like an overcoat, that would be worn according to the temperature. With a blouse below, with its attached collar and a tie, the coat could be discarded gracefully except as it is needed. The blouse would be changed daily, as the shirt is now, and the hot, unsanitary coat of today would take its proper place.

Already this evolution of men's clothes is taking place on the golf links and in the crews. The sweater coat and the flannel hunting blouse are somewhat similar to the blouse for daily wear. A washable blouse hanging outside of the trousers is the key to future improvements in men's dress.

ALL KNEELING
Reviewed by
MISS BEATRICE HARDEN

Everyone was invited to Christabel Caine adorbably the fourth, even from the time she was asked to play the part of a court lady as a little girl in a play. The story of Christabel's conquests over her worshipers is told in the novel, "All Kneeling," by Anne Parrish, author of "The Perennial Bachelor," "Semi-rose Marmiee" and others, published by Harper and Brothers, New York and London.

Christabel thoroughly approved of her family and surroundings. The lack of money could be bravely borne, when "the Aunts" so kindly paid Christabel's ways to boarding school, sent her to Europe and then to study "Her Art" in New York.

Christabel would write poetry, everyone admitted—but only Uncle Johnnie admitted he could not understand the poems.

While in New York, Christabel meets Elliott Foster, an artist, who falls in love with her. They become engaged. But, then, one day at the seashore with her friend "Aunts," she meets Curtis, so she writes to Elliott.

"Let me go from your life with no bitterness, no crying out, but gently, as the little Mermaid vanished into foam" and so strange is habit that she ended the sentence "my darling," and had to rewrite the letter.

Christabel and Curtis are married. There is the honeymoon abroad and Christabel lured Home again; Christabel spends her time writing and then the war comes.

Ellen, a young woman, a distant relative of Christabel's comes to live with Christabel and Curtis. Ellen was engaged to Nick, but he also was added to the conquests of Christabel.

But, Uncle Johnnie's sudden death, left Christabel alone, as the one person who had understood her had deserted her, the she had deserted others in her thoughts.

YOUR CHILDREN

Olive Roberts Barton

© 1929 by NEA Service Inc.

When does a child feel justified in disobeying? Here are some of the reasons:

If he thinks you are indifferent and don't really care whether he obeys or not.

If he thinks the law he overstepped is of no importance.

If it is impossible for him to obey on account of some unusual circumstance.

If he sees his parents breaking the same law.

If he possesses more knowledge about a certain subject than his parents, and knows he possesses it.

But more than for any other reason a child will disobey and feel justified in doing so, if he has the idea that certain rules made for him are unjust.

I know that many parents believe in unquestioning obedience. And that is well should one. Obey should be unquestionable. But if obedience is questioned, then the chances are that there is a good reason for questioning it and for disobedience, particularly if the offense is often repeated.

Disobedient—But Why?

So if you have a boy or a girl who persists in overstepping the bounds of authority in any particular thing, I should begin to think it over. Is he wrong, or is the trouble with you and the law you have made?

Is the law reasonable? Are you sure the thing you are asking him to do is right, just and fair? If you are convinced that you are not playing tyrant and not demanding something out of all bounds, then consider the other things.

Is it a foolish thing you demand? Does your child think it a law worth obeying? Does he respect it?

Maybe it is something you know absolutely nothing about, while he is well informed. You may say, "Don't go skating, John, the ice is thin and dangerous," while he himself saw two men making tests and a policeman putting up a sign that read: "Safe for skating Today."

Again, you may be doing the very thing you won't allow him to do. That is your right, of course, but it is food for thought. It may be the very cause of his feeling privileged to do it too.

Few children deliberately disobey the same law repeatedly unless they feel justified. And you cannot do much about it until you find out the reason for this feeling.

That the Store Which Advertises Is the Store You Like

A store has certain fixed expenses — rent, light, heat, salaries.

If a store has sales of $100 a day and expenses of $50 a day, its expenses are 50 per cent of its sales.

But if the store—through advertising—increases its sales to $200 a day, then its expenses would be only 25 per cent of its sales.

And when advertising increased its sales to $1,000 a day, its expenses would be only 5 per cent of its sales.

Fixed expenses can only be reduced by increasing the volume of sales. Advertising increases the volume of sales and therefore reduces fixed expenses.

Advertising, by reducing the percentage of expense, makes possible lower prices.

GROWERS SHOULD PROCURE CLEAN STOCKS OF SEED

State Agronomist Calls Attention to Provisions of Laws Governing Sale of Seeds

BOISE, Idaho, Feb. 9 (Special)—Each spring a per cent of the red clover seed produced in Idaho during the growing season will be in the hands of the growers, according to C. H. Ahlson, field agronomist with the University of Idaho agricultural extension division and state seed commissioner. Most of the farmers will plan to dispose of this seed to neighbors. Some lots will be pure and ideal for seed production purposes. Others will be impure and will result in a loss of hundreds of dollars to the men who purchase and use it for seed production. According to the state law, explains Mr. Ahlson, all growers who dispose of clover or alfalfa seed for seed production purposes are classed as the category of the established seed dealer. All lots must be sampled and tested and pass the requirement of the seed law for Idaho before the seed can be sold, offered, exposed, distributed or held in possession for sale or distribution. A violation of this provision is considered a misdemeanor.

Buyers Cautioned

Farmers buying this seed for seed production should insist on being the detailed analysis of the sample. 99.5 per cent seed may be undesirable for quality seed production. The consumer should be interested in the per cent or part per cent not mentioned. Five pounds of one per cent impurity may contain 18 dodder per pound; 25 sweet clover seed; 360 alfalfa seed; 360 dock seed per pound; 60 foreign seeds which are inoperable. The presence of these foreign seeds would make a sample of high purity undesirable for seed production purposes.

After the farmer has purchased a lot of seed he should send a two-ounce sample to the state seed laboratory, boise, or to the branch seed laboratory, University of Idaho, Moscow, for detailed analysis as a further insurance that the seed is desirable.

The cost of red clover seed for an acre is only 5.6 per cent of the total cost of production, the author, Mr. Ahlson concludes. The cost of seed is the smallest item and ordinarily the most important. The sooner farmers realize that pure seed, is essential the more profitable will be the enterprise.

Two "Old" Chairs Evolve From One

PARIS, Feb. 9 (UP)—Clothing and furniture in the same fashion that bootleggers cut water-house rye and bourbon is the most recent development in the business of the antiquary at Paris. The development of this new trick is only one of the desperate measures being resorted to by the antiquarians to make the rapidly dwindling supply of "real" pieces last.

It is not uncommon to split a good chair down the center and finish off both halves with styled modern upholstery, thus turning two superfluous old chairs where only one existed before. The chairs are sold with the statement that they have been "slightly restored," that is, if they are sold by a solid and reliable firm of art dealers. If the firm is more than casually unscrupulous, the speech about restoration is omitted.

Americans are by far the greatest sufferers from deception on the part of antiquarians, and it is estimated by one dealer that seventy-five per cent of the so-called antiques which are bought by wealthy citizens of the United States are fakes, either in part or in their entirety. But the Frenchman suffers alone with the foreigner. The wealthy provincial is shorn by the Faubourg St. Honore along with the same ease that Texas uses to the shearing of visitors.

POTATO OUTLOOK FOR 1929 MADE BY DEPARTMENT

Over-Production in 1928 Led to Terrific Losses in All Sections of Country Is Report

Potato growers in nearly all parts of the United States suffered such terrific losses from over-production in 1928 that there is little probability that any excess acreage will be planted this season. Preliminary reports on the acreage which growers intended to plant indicate that if the weather is given average care, production in 1929 may be expected to vary from 400,000,000 bushels about in the proportion that growing conditions are more favorable or less favorable than usual. Considering the low cost of seed potatoes this season, this prospect need not discourage efficient producers of late potatoes, but it does not encourage speculative plantings. Heavy stocks now on hand will tend to hold down the price of new potatoes until the end of June, so prospects for southern growers are none too bright, even though their acreage is reduced around 25 per cent as now seems probable.

The acreage planted to potatoes is so little dependent on weather conditions at planting time that the acreage planted in 1929 actually differed far from what farmers report as intended. Two years ago the January reports indicated an intended increase in plantings of 13 per cent. Abandonment from flood, hail, and blight, was rather heavy, and the increase in the actual planted acreage was only 11.3 per cent. In January, 1928, an intended increase of 7 per cent in plantings was reported, and the acreage available for harvest was increased about 10 per cent. Reports this year seem to indicate that growers are now planning to plant about 10 per cent less acreage than they planted last year, indicating the probability of a backward acreage slightly below that of 1927. This estimate allows for average prospects; there is no reason to expect large changes in acreage material changes from plans between now and planting time.

In estimating the acreage of potatoes intended next season, allowance must be made for the upward trend in yields that is resulting from more intensive methods of production. In general, the conditions are experienced this season, and yield follows the trend of recent years, a yield of 1,000,000,000 bushels may be expected. If this yield is secured on an acreage 10 per cent below that available for harvest in 1928, production would be about 400,000,000 bushels, and supplies after July 1st will be about equal to the average during the last five years. In spite of prospects for next year, it should, however, be borne in mind that yields have often been relatively low when prices of potatoes and potato growers discouraged. This year farmers are planning to use a little more seed per acre, but the crop is not receiving the usual attention.

Acreage Reduction Expected.

While the indications of intended acreage are, of course, only approximations, they are sufficiently uniform to indicate that the principal reductions in acreage are to be expected in the early states, in the commercial sections of the second early states, that is Virginia, Maryland, Oklahoma, and Kansas, and in the important potato area extending from Minnesota to North Dakota. Substantial reductions are also to be expected in Idaho and Colorado. Maine reports a decrease of about 8 per cent and New York a decrease of 4 per cent, but there are as yet no indications of any reduction in the acreage in Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. Nebraska and South Dakota and a few other scattering states are planning slight increases. On the whole, the acreage reported as intended in the late potato states seem well balanced. The eastern states indicate only slight reductions in the intended acreage of late potatoes, for yields there have been increasing, and because of local markets, commercial growers seemed to have succeeded in securing fair returns even in some years of rather low prices. This large acreage, close to the markets justifies the discrepancies reported as intended in the commercial late potato areas farther west, where the depression this season is most severe.

The early potato states that market before July have a real problem this year. On January 1 merchantable stocks in hands of growers and local dealers were close to the record January holdings 6 years ago, being estimated at 151,000,000 bushels compared with about 100,000,000 bushels last year. To permit early potatoes to sell to advantage in competition with these storage potatoes, production must be reduced sufficiently to keep early prices in a luxury class. This was accomplished in the spring of 1923 and 1925, but, in each case, a radical reduction in acreage was necessary. This year, growers in these early states apparently intend to decrease their acreage about 25 per cent. Such reduction would relieve the situation somewhat, but it would appear that prospects somewhat less favorable than usual.

YOU and BASKETBALL

ARTICLE NO. 22

By H. C. CARLSON, M. D.

While the time spent, formerly, on perfecting center plays was out of proportion, it is, nevertheless, advisable to have a few simple plays in reserve. The most advantageous time to spring these plays is at the start of the halves or after a timeout, especially in a very close game. It is of importance not to leave your defense wide open, because the play may backfire and lose a game.

Some of the simplest plays are often the most effective.

(1) With both forwards rushing in for the ball, one pivots and makes a quick cut for the basket. The other continues and hits the ball back under the basket. The guards are in strong defensive positions and the play is better with opposing guards sticking close to the forwards and rushing in for the center tap.

(2) One forward going fast to center tips the ball back to a guard on the same side of the ball in shot. The opposite guard crosses over to the vacated guard territory and his man is taken by the second forward coming back into defensive territory.

(3) A safe and sane play is for one forward to get the tap behind the center, with the other forward coming over to the sideline of the other forward. The first can hit the ball safely to the sideline, with the center cutting first for the two-man triangle. If he is unable to go into the basket, he can pivot and give the ball to the first forward, who is completing the circle around the center and cutting for the basket on the opposite of the original side of the floor.

Regardless of the possibility of the plays, there is no possibility of minimizing all the threats of individual offense.

ISOLATED

summer than her cabin built with his own hands. Each winter night, after visiting his trap line on skis, he starts supper, pokes up the log fire in the grate, fills the old pipe and turns on his radio. Haunting melodies of the old masters fill the air, or perhaps a lecture of some kind, or stock market reports, for some sport even that young trapper is anxious to hear. And while hams and potatoes are satisfying the inner man, soul-satisfying music from a famous concert orchestra affilights him the same as it delights crowds of diners in the supper room of a great hotel.

"It's Wonderful."

"It's wonderful," the young trapper once told me, "to sit alone in my cabin with the thermometer forty below zero, snow three feet deep on the ground and listen to the wonderful things that come over the air. Every evening I listen to news events and am as well-informed in world happenings as though I read a paper each day. I know where to turn the dial to get just what I want, and I have often hurried home from my trap line to be in time for something particularly choice.

"And recipes man, you don't have any idea what they mean to me. Some years ago I made up my mind I would try one new recipe each week with my meals. Each week about every meal ham and what eggs I had changed the food peculiarities. I tried dozens of various tempting dishes I lacked the knowledge to prepare them. When I heard that recipes and home-hold hints came over the air regularly I trotted out a little notebook wherein are recorded a supply of special things. And when I hear a woman's voice saying anything like, "And now, sift two cups of flour with a teaspoonful of baking powder," I get out my little book, knowing that I can quite apt to be rewarded with a delicious recipe. Potatoes and grains is a dish of which I have always been especially fond, but until a light-hearted lady gave me the recipe over the radio it was just one of those dishes you dream about and never taste. Now I have potatoes an grain whenever I desire. Yes, sir, I can, you are found on my menu. While the recipes are probably not exactly the kind my mother used, they sure satisfy the cravings of my sweet tooth. Do you know, I even make candy once a month or so and on what I had for ice cream pie, ala mode, in fact. Can you believe it?

At Pole Flights.

"Boxing is a sport I like passionately well. Some times I am expectedly run into a prize fight which plays with the dial. Nothing pleases me more than to see "they're in a clinch; they're out of it now, hammering each other with rights and lefts to the body." Or, "swing to at left, follow in reading, fire while sounds of hysterical cheering fans ring with the announcer's voice in a big arena off-stage. Radio is wonderful and uncanny at any time, but especially in the snowbound hills.

"On nights when I'm very tired after a hard trip through the deep snow I simply turn the dial until I find a good, clean, high class phonograph concert. Then I crawl in bed, grab an interesting magazine and prepare for a good time. Many times I have been lulled to sleep by soft, dreamy music floating through the great white spaces from toward full moon. But I usually wake up when the station signs off. Guess it's my subconscious mind working. One night I dropped off to sleep while the radio was playing "Memory Lane". It was one-thirty when I awakened. The music had stopped and in its place was some of the wildest howling, shrieking and whistling I have ever heard over the radio. The set needed adjustment. By turning the dial a few notches I found hot jazz came in.

"In the dead of winter with storms all around and the ground deep-blanketed with snow, I'm a big kick out of the California stations. While a blizzard was raging outside my cabin, 'if you don't mind I'll take off my coat. It's too hot here,' and sunny down here for August and four-fifths of the mercury stood at 23 below zero."

The Tulle Frock Grows Up and Becomes Sophisticated to a Degree

By FRANCES PAGET
Copyright, 1929, by Womens Wear Magazine

NEW YORK, Feb. 9 (UP) —The diaphanous tulle frock has been graduated from the ranks of subdebs and debutantes and is now grown up enough to frequent matrons and mature places, and to be worn by women who are certainly not as young as they look.

Smart shops as well as exclusive ready-to-wear houses are reporting that there is an immediate demand for frocks of this character and in a wide range of colorings including the extremes of black and white. Its popularity is credited to the fact that the tulle dress of the moment has a new identity. It is no longer just a pert and youthful frock with profuse ruffles, a type that can be worn with impunity only by the most slender. The new tulle frocks are just as sophisticated as its sisters in satin or chiffon.

For example, it makes a point of concentrating its width at the hem, which achieved in a deep shirred or circular flounce, or in a wide border fashion of layers or sections of the material, and contrasting with the slenderness of the above. This slenderness is rendered even more marked because of the infinitesimal tailored belt, also of the sheer medium, with perhaps a large cluster of flowers at the waistline front, repeated at the base of the decolletage at the back.

Shoulder straps take their cue from the belts, and are narrower if possible, giving a more sophisticated air to the bodice section.

This appearance of softness rather than crispness, that seems such a part of the new tulle frocks, is due not only to the cut of the frock, but also to the fact that many of the tulles used have no dressing.

MAY APPOINT MINISTER

DUBLIN, Feb. 9 (UP) — This Irish Free State is considering the appointment of a minister to the Vatican, it was understood today.

February 12th means little to the foreigner. To the American it means much, for on that day in 1809 Abraham Lincoln was born. Every school boy knows the glamorous story of Lincoln's life—the romance of one of the most powerful and pathetic figures in American history. We remember him best as the genius who faced the country through four years of internecine strife, keeping the union together when disolution seemed inevitable. But we also think of him as a young man—"Honest Abe," student by nature and rail splitter by profession. Ambitious and industrious, he worked his way through the library of Illinois winters.

Life was primitive in those days. Compared to the hurry and bustle of today, the variety of pleasures and amusements which surround us now, his life was one of austere simplicity. Even on was his food. Pork, sweet potatoes, pumpkins helped make up his plain but substantial fare.

These foods have been tastefully prepared to meet the present day demand for attractive dishes.

♣ K 4 3

West— Leads ♡ 6 — East—

South (Declarer)
♠ Q 10 8

♣ Q 7 6 2

The Bidding: South bids pass trump and all pass.

Bedding the Play: West leads 6 of hearts. Declarer wins this trick with Jack of hearts and determines to establish his club suit. Declarer leads 2 of clubs, wins trick with King of clubs and then leads 3 of clubs. If East covers with Jack of clubs or 10 of clubs should Declarer cover with Queen of clubs.

The Error: Declarer covers with Queen of clubs.

The Correct Method: There are five clubs outstanding held by opponents. They are probably distributed three and two. Had East held Ace of clubs he would have taken the first trick. It is therefore held by West. There is nothing to be gained by covering with Queen of clubs. Any of clubs will, in all probability fall on the second club trick and the remaining clubs will be established, as shring guide.

The Principle: In seeking to establish a suit proceed on the theory that the missing cards are normally distributed.

The life of the Hollywood film "bathing girl" is just one short picture after another, unless she happens upon a part in which her pulchritude may be displayed in a feature, instead of a two-reel comedy.

Over fifty shapely beauties, therefore, were delighted, fed, clothed, and enabled to pay apartment rent and installments on the radio, by the filming of First National's "Naughty Baby." The peppy comedy-drama, co-featuring Alice White and Jack Mulhall, is to be on the bill at the Orpheum theatre tomorrow.

"Naughty Baby," along with representative and colorful glimpses of New Year City life, is a long and interesting beach sequence. There the fifty-odd beautiful extras "figure." A delectable variety of figures, in fact!

Thelma Todd, Doris Dawson, Frances Hamilton, Natalie Joyce, and other notable film beauties add their charm to the scene, and figure prominently in other parts of the picture, which Mervyn LeRoy directed. An equally notable group of men make up the large supporting cast.

Irish Leader Gets Month Inside Jail

BELFAST, Ireland, Feb. 9 (UP) — Samuel de Valera, Irish republican leader, was sentenced today to a month in jail for violating the orders of Northern Ireland to enter six counties.

De Valera was elected Tuesday land government building day while trying to pass the Ulster boarder to address a Gaelic meeting in Belfast.

HAPPY MATING RULE GIVEN BY REPRESENTATIVE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (UP) — A recipe for happy marriage was given in an interview with the United Press today by Rep. Edgar Howard, Nebraska "Free" democrat, and known in Washington as the "Philosopher of the House."

Howard in his congressional biography writes "married at lawful age to Elizabeth Paisley Burich and still married." He says his system for happy marriage has been successful for more than 40 years.

"The secret of being 'still married' is for each to say at marriging time 'I shall decline to discover any fault in the one I have chosen for my life partner,'" he told the United Press.

Howard, who resembles the late commoner William Jennings Bryan, believes if every one contemplating marriage would follow this doctrine there would be less divorces in this modern age.

"Of course you have to try to please all the time," he said. "The wife must strive to please the husband and vice versa. It can not be one-sided.

"Children are essential to every home, they knit it together. A home where children might be and yet are refused admission would be to me very much like a plate of corn cakes without neither butter or syrup. It would be devoid of interest."

Howard believes women who remain single do so from choice but that bachelors refrain from entering matrimony because of selfishness or cowardice.

"Every woman who enters, a long state of matrimony does so by choice as every one has had an opportunity to marry at some time during her life," he said.

"But most bachelors remain so because they are cowards or because they are selfish." They are cowards because they fear to bear the burden of marital state they see others bearing and are selfish in refusing to give up the privileges which belong to bachelorhood."

Howard is one of the most picturesque men in the House. He was formerly lieutenant governor of Nebraska and was closely associated with Bryan when the latter was running for President on the democratic ticket.

He now describes himself as a "free democrat."

they plotted to bring acquittal of Julian Petroleum defendants.

Admitted Bribe

Berman, who himself was a Julian defendant, testified that he paid out $40,000 to Keyes through Getzoff to insure the outcome of the trial.

He further said that Rosenberg paid a sum of $125,000 to get his dismissal.

During the arguments Berman's testimony was attacked bitterly by the defense who claimed that he was "a vile felon who knew no truth."

Berman was accused in the Julian trial of having organized the giant pools which caused the collapse of the $100,000,000 oil corporation through the use of 5,000,000 shares of over-issued stock.

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Calif., Feb. 9 (UP)—Extra precautions will have to be taken to guard Asa Keyes, former Los Angeles prosecutor, from prison vengeance, if his sentence to San Quentin for accepting bribes is carried out.

Warden James Holohan admitted today that the coming of Keyes to the gray walls behind which he sent so many men would create an unusual prison problem.

Your Income Tax

No. 5.

Many persons married during the taxable year fail correctly to compute the amount of their personal exemption.

The revenue act of 1928 provides that if the status of the taxpayer changes during the year, his personal exemption shall be determined by apportionment, in accordance with the number of months the taxpayer was single and married. For example: A couple married on July 21, 1928, and living together on December 31, 1928, may file a joint return and claim an exemption of 2,208.33; that is, 7-12 of $1,500 for the husband while single, or $875, plus 7-12 for the wife while single, plus 5-12 of $3,500, or $1,458.33, for the period during which they were married. If husband and wife make separate returns each may claim a personal exemption of $1,604.17. The husband is entitled to 7-12 of $1,500, or $875, for the period during which he was single and ½ of 5-12 of $3,500, or $729.17, for the period during which he was married. The wife is entitled to a similar exemption. Similar provision is made with respect to the head of a family. A person, who, on July 31, 1928, ceased being the head of a family—the support in one household of a relative or relatives being discontinued—is entitled to an exemption of $2,660.67, which is 7-12 of $3,500, plus 5-12 of $1,500.

With respect to the $400 credit for a dependent, the taxpayer's status as of the last day of the taxable year determines this credit. If during the year his support of such dependent ceased, he is not entitled to this credit.

"MY MAN," starring Fannie Brice, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

In an apartment in the Bronx, Fanny Grice is bringing up her orphaned brother, Phil, and her pretty sister, Audrey. Fanny, older than Audrey, makes every sacrifice that her sister, now a stenographer, may be saved from the humdrum life she, herself, leads. On her way to work Fanny watches a handsome young man demonstrating a muscle builder. She hurries on to Thorne's, theatrical costumers, where she sees Lazarus, art director for Waldo, theatrical producer, hears Fanny sing and promises to give her a try-out. Then on her eighteenth birthday, Audrey tells Fanny she is leaving home.

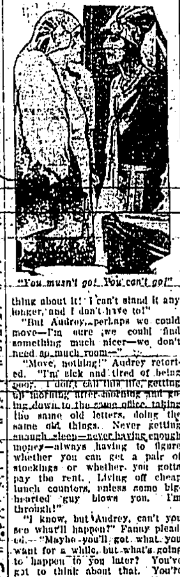
Audrey pulled away from her sister and started to get her satchel.

"But Audrey, you don't know what you're doing," Fanny tried to reason. "You don't know what this means—what disgrace you'll—"

"Oh, for the love of mud!" Audrey turned on her sister, her eyes flashing. "Stop preaching. I'm eighteen today—my own boss. And you mind your own business. If you think I'm gonna waste my young life the way you've wasted yours you're pretty much mistaken. What fun 've you ever had? What've you ever done? I hate this rotten hole! Hate everything about it! I can't stand it any longer, and I don't have to!"



"You mustn't go! You can't go!"

"But Audrey, perhaps we could move—I'm sure we could find something much nicer—we don't need so much room—"

"Move, nothing!" Audrey retorted. "I'm sick and tired of being poor. I don't call this life, getting up morning after morning and going down to the same office, taking the same old letters, doing the same old things. Never getting enough sleep—never having enough money—always having to figure whether you can get a pair of stockings or whether you gotta pay the rent. Living off cheap lunch counters, unless some bighearted guy blows you. I'm through!"

"I know, but Audrey, can't you see what'll happen?" Fanny pleaded. "Maybe you'll get what you want for a while, but what's going to happen to you later? You've got to think about that. You're going to waste a few years of your youth on some man, and when you really need someone, you won't have anybody. You mustn't do it—you mustn't!" Fanny reached towards her sister, the tears blinding her eyes.

"Oh, can the sob-stuff," Audrey exploded. "What year d'ya think this is? 1850? It's 1928 and times of changed since grandma was a flapper. I got a perfect right to live my own life the way I wanna live it, and nobody's gonna stop me. I been listening to your sermons long enough. You're living the way you wanna live, but it's not the way I wanna live. I don't try to tell you where you get off, and you've got no business trying to tell me."

"I'm not trying to tell you, darling," Fanny insisted. "But I know you don't know what you're getting into. Please, Audrey, listen to me."

Audrey shut her satchel with a click and picked it up.

"Audrey! You mustn't go—you can't go!" Fanny barred the door with her body.

"You let me out of here!" Audrey stamped her foot, her cheeks flaming with anger.

"Audrey, who—who is it?" Fanny stalled for time.

"None of your business," Audrey snapped. "I'm leaving, and I'm leaving now. Don't worry, I'm not coming back—no matter what happens. I guess I can take care of myself. You won't be bothered with me. Now, let me out." She tried to push past her sister.

"No, I won't," Fanny sobbed. "You can't go, Audrey. I won't let you go."

"Oh, yes you will!" Vigorously Audrey pulled her sister away from the door and tried to open it. But Fanny grasped the handle.

For a moment the two struggled, the one trying to open the door, the other trying to prevent its opening. The tears rushed to Audrey's eyes—tears of anger and hate. She raised her hand and slapped Fanny squarely across the face. Fanny's shoulders sank. She felt limp, unable to cope any longer with this strange being who had once been her sister. Without a struggle she allowed herself to be pushed aside. The next moment Audrey had flung open the door, seized her satchel and was running out into the hallway. A door slammed.

Fanny stood silently there, tears running down her cheeks. She put her hand up to her face, touching it as though to assure herself that it belonged to her. She crept out into the living room and looked about. Her head was swimming. She felt as though she were going to faint. She sank down into a chair, staring straight before her.

The door burst open. "Hey, sis, where's Aud gone?" Phil burst into the room. Then he saw Fanny's tears. He ran over to her and crouched down before her. "What's the matter, sis?" he pleaded taking her hands.

Fanny held him close to her and wept.

CHAPTER IV

And now once more the days dragged into weeks. But the disappointment of having no word from Lazarus was as nothing compared to the sorrow and the anxiety Fanny felt at the loss of Audrey. If Lazarus had forgotten her, if Waldo wasn't interested, why that was just another dream that had passed into oblivion. But Audrey—that was another matter; that was something that struck deep and hurt. It wasn't Audrey's actions and their effect on herself that Fanny remembered, but it was the worry, the constant fear for her younger sister. And she had not heard from the girl since the day she had flung herself out of the house to "live her own life."

And the loneliness of it all. For Fanny was terribly, hideously lonely these days. She had made very few friends on her own account, scarcely having time to bother about friends. All her time had been spent in doing things for Audrey, planning for her, living through her. If Audrey was having people at the house it was as though Fanny had invited them. She took more interest in their comings and goings that she did in her own. And now, all that was gone. The apartment seemed pitifully dead and bare. Fanny came and went, doing all things mechanically, with heart and mind someplace else.

Day after day she waited for a letter—for some sign from Audrey. Day after day she went downstairs in the morning to the mailbox, hoping against hope. But no letter appeared. Evening after evening she hurried home from work, almost trembling in her excitement, afraid to look in the box, and fearing not to. Until she came to hate the sight of that little brass plate, staring back at her with empty mouth.

Two more months went by, and now it was the middle of February, cold and raw and miserable. Fanny hurried to her work, pulling her too-thin coat closely about her, trying to shut out the heavy chill. The protecting warmth of the dressmaking establishment thawed her blue hands and her numb feet. She hung her wraps in the locker and walked over to her table. There, in front of her, lay a little white envelope. She closed her eyes and caught her breath. She was fired—discharged—services no longer required! That was all she could think of. She sat down heavily and reached for the letter. Her mouth opened. She stared. "Bronson Waldo Productions, Inc., 1600 Broadway, New York City," she read the return address on the corner of the envelope. And it was addressed to her—to Miss Fanny Grice, in care of Thorne, Inc.

With trembling fingers she tore open the flap and tried to read, but the letters seemed to swim before her eyes, and she could scarcely breathe. She believed that she saw something about Mr. Waldo—give you an audience—a date—Joe Lazarus's name, but she thought that she must be dreaming. She turned to the girl beside her.

"Marie," she held out the sheet of paper. "Would you read that to me, and tell me if you see what I think I see, and then pinch me and see if I wake up."

The girl took the letter and scanned it.

"Read it—read it out loud," Fanny importuned weakly.

"My dear Miss Grice," the girl began. "Mr. Waldo will be very glad to give you an audience tomorrow morning, February 19, at ten o'clock at his office, 1600 Broadway. Sincerely, J. E. Lazarus. P.S. Better bring along some of your songs and do your best. I'm counting on you. J. E. L."—Well, of all the luck! Say, Fanny, that's swell!"

TODAY DECLARED HOLIDAY ON MART

NEW YORK, Feb. 9 (UP)—America's army of stock market traders saw their profits, run up in the greatest bull market of history, dwindle by about three billion dollars this week as a result of the federal reserve board's utterance on the credit situation.

After having soared to a new record high industrial average for all time at $322.06 on Tuesday, when Wall street was confident the market would go on upward indefinitely, the market ran into a snag and the industrial average broke to $301.53 at the close Friday, a loss of $20.53.

Today was made a holiday. Stock exchange officials gave as the reason an influenza epidemic but traders read between the lines and saw an intent to give the market a chance to readjust itself.

As the market community looked backward, it saw one of the most exciting weeks in exchange history.

further expansion of loans for speculative purposes, just exactly what the board did do in its Thursday statement. The resolution also asks the board what legislation congress could pass "to prevent future excessive use of federal reserve funds for speculative purposes."

The Heflin resolution would ask the board why it issued its statement. Finally Heflin agreed to strike out the inaccurate part of his resolution and tack it on the LaFollette resolution but at Glass' insistence the matter went over.

"Spirit" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ Scientist Sunday, Feb. 10. Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb, and it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake, and the people wondered. Luke 11:14. The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook. "Science and Health with Key to the Scripture," by Mary Baker Eddy: Spirit blesses man, but man cannot "fetch whence it cometh." By it the sick are healed, the sorrowing are comforted, and the sinning are reformed. These are the effect of one universal God, the invisible good—dwelling in eternal science. Page 78. Also it is the season when we are more especially called upon to commemorate, and call to mind, and ponder and think over the suffering of our Saviour, Christ. The voluntaries of Immanuel Lutheran will hold an important meeting on Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Every voliing member is expected to attend. The Young People will meet at the church on Monday evening at 7:30.

RELIABLE USED CARS

What is a used car bargain?

What is a used car bargain? Is it a used car of uncertain age and mechanical condition, sold at a so-called "marked down" price?
Or is it a good car, sold by a reliable dealer, for a price that he knows is fair?
We know automobiles. That's our business! And we know what they're worth when we take them in trade on new Buicks.
We always give our used car customers a square deal—both in the price and in the condition of the car.
Our reputation is too valuable to risk by anything short of absolute fairness and honesty.

Judging an Investment

An investment can be judged by its safety and the return that it yields.
Too high return at the beginning often ends in no return—at all. Too much safety at times may give you little or nothing for your outlay.
We have been selling used cars for five years. Our buyers have implicit confidence in making their investment with us.
Every sale has meant safety corresponding to the price they wanted to pay. The return has been exactly as we represented it.
Come in today and look over our stock. Learn why we have gained the confidence of so many used car buyers in this city.
