WHERE PRESIDENT HOOVER WILL SPEND VACATION

Here are scenes and figures that will greet President Hoover when he establishes the summer White House in Glacier National Park, in northwest Montana, this year. An "official welcome" to the vacationing Chief Executive will be extended by Two Guns White Calf, upper left, the son of the last recognized chief of the Blackfeet Indians. There'll be fishing galore, and Gus Thompson, right, a former major league baseball pitcher, has been chosen to guide the angling President among the streams and lakes of the great park. Below you see the Mammoth Glacier Park Log Hotel, at the eastern gateway to the park, where the President and his party will dedicate for the thirteen-mile motor trip to Two Medicine Chalets on Two Medicine Lake. Upper center is a typical mountain-and-lake scene at the Hoover vacation site.

PESHAWAR UNDER FIRE OF BLOODY FRONTIER TRIBES

Order Restored in Changsha Following Bandit Attack; Northern Troops Claim Advance on Lunghai R[illegible]

LONDON, Aug. 11.—(U[illegible])—An unusually serious movement by warring tribesmen on the northwest frontier of India [illegible] seen here today in the attack by Afridis on Peshawar.

The persistence of the Afridis in remaining near the [illegible] despite the heavy bombing of royal air force planes and the attack of troops and the fact that British authorities were forced to summon reinforcements to Peshawar, indicated that the present movement is not an ordinary tribal insurrection.

PESHAWAR, Aug. 11 (UP)—Defending troops which have turned back repeated Afridi tribal attacks on Peshawar in the past three days were mustered today against the additional threat of an advance by the powerful force of the notorious Hadi of Turangzai.

Send Troops

Coincident with the tribal proposals to the Hadi that he move his forces against Peshawar, Rizalpur and Cherat, the frontier authorities were forced to send troops to Nowshera, some 20 miles distant, to meet indications Turangzai, who was warned by of an Akridi attack there.

The proposals to the Hadi of British authorities last spring when he advanced toward Peshawar, but it was not known whether [illegible] would

The fighting outside Peshawar continued simultaneously with the action of tribesmen continually crossing the Afghan frontier and hiding in caves five or six miles from the city. They made a practice of conducting raids or sniping expeditions during the night.

Take Part in Fighting

Airplanes, cavalry and gunners took part in fighting near the city yesterday when a large force of Afridis attacked Peshawar and hid in skirts of Peshawar and hid in orchards to ambush a group of the Poona horsemen (native cavalry). Six cavalrymen were wounded. The Afridis then moved on to the military supply depot.

BUTLER FORESEES A WET PLANK IN BOTH PLATFORMS

President of Columbia University, Long an Opponent of Prohibition, Considers a Showdown Near

NEW YORK, Aug. 11 (UP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, predicts the adoption of prohibition repeal planks by the forthcoming Republican and Democratic New York state conventions.

The noted educator, who has long been an opponent of the 18th amendment, is expected to lead the repeal fight at the Republican convention. He estimates that from 60 to 70 per cent of the delegates at the gathering will favor repeal.

With the anticipated adoption of a similar resolution by the Democrats, Dr. Butler said, controversy over prohibition will be removed from the New York state campaign. Heretofore, it has been a heated issue.

"The left has now run for the pussyfooter, the time-server and the hypocrite," Dr. Butler said in a statement issued at his Southampton, L. I., home. "Every public man and every candidate for public office must now stand up and declare himself."

Floods Pouring Out of Canyons "Deposit Mud" Over Highway, Obstructing Under Automobile Travel

SALT LAKE CITY, August 11, (UP)—Finishing touches to what is now almost a routine job—namely, the reopening of the Salt Lake-Ogden highway following a flood—were accomplished today by state highway construction crews north of Salt Lake.

All of the debris and mud will not be cleared away until midweek, highway officials said, but work today will greatly facilitate traffic. The biggest barrier on the Salt Lake-Ogden highway was between Beck's and South Bountiful—it being removed by a steam shovel today and Sunday traffic was able to move through the mud at a moderate pace. Three other obstructions between Farm-

Trade Commission Brings Charge of Unfair Methods Against Coal Association

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11, (UP)—Charges of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of the federal trade commission act were brought today by the federal trade commission against the Idaho Coal Dealers' Association, the Utah Coal Producers' Association, and the Retail Fuel Dealers' Association of Utah.

The commission issued a complaint charging the defendants with entering into a "conspiracy to restrain, restrict and suppress competition in the sale and distribution of coal in interstate commerce" by refusing to recognize other than its own members as retail coal dealers and by refusing to transport or sell coal to other than those members.

The Commission also charged the three associations with entering into an agreement whereby their recognized retailers would have "the exclusive business" of selling coal to all domestic consumers, all state, county and municipalities, and schools where truck or wagon service is required and to the employes of industrial concerns.

The effort of these agreements, the commission declared, was to limit and allot the sale of coal in interstate commerce to the members of the three associations in restraint of trade.

WOMEN TO FACE TREASON CHARGE

Communist Leaders Refuse To Accept American Flag At Camp in New York State

ELMIRA, N. Y., Aug. 11 (UP)—Warrants charging treason against the United States were issued today for two women leaders of a communist camp of 100 children, who are accused of refusing to accept the American flag.

Hostile feeling flared over the week-end when members of the Ku Klux Klan and another group purporting to be a "patriotic" American Legion caught unsuspectingly to hoist the flag in front of the camp, where a red flag has been flying.

A series of clashes followed, during which a party raided the camp, tore down the Soviet emblem and anchored the women leaders before a justice of the peace. Saturday night the fiery cross of the Klan blazed a warning at the entrance of the camp while the juvenile members gathered around jeering defiantly and singing communist songs.

The trouble started Friday, when patriotic society members presented an American flag to the camp. Mabel Ruth and Allene Holmes of New York City, directors, declined to accept it.

W. C. T. U. DENIES AN INCREASE IN LIQUOR PATIENTS

Dry Organization Says Numerous Drug Treatment Institutes Have Closed Doors Due to Prohibition

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11, (UP)—The Women's Christian Temperance Union, in a statement today, presented statistics in disproof that there are more intoxicates under prohibition than before, which it said was the impression created by a recent report from the Keeley Institute at Dwight, Ill.

Pointing out that this report showed less than 500 patients now at the institute, the statement, prepared by Mrs. Anna Marden Doyle, corresponding secretary, said that before prohibition there were between 5,000 and 10,000 persons "taking the cure at nearly 200 similar institutes throughout the country."

The Keeley Institute now appears to be the only "important liquor cure hospital on the American continent," she said.

"We recently made a survey of the liquor curse," Mrs. Doyle explained. "We had the names of 16 which had been operating just prior to prohibition and inquiry brought us the news that 105 of these had closed their

PARDON APPEAL OF BILLINGS TO BE CONSIDERED

Supreme Court Will Reconvene Tuesday for Purpose Of Hearing Evidence In Notorious Bombing Outrage

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11, (UP)—Members of the California Supreme Court will reconvene tomorrow for consideration of a pardon application filed by Warren K. Billings, convicted with Thomas Mooney of complicity in the Preparedness Day bombing, July 22, 1916.

The Tuesday session is expected to be one of the most sensational of the hearing. It will be a day for the defense with Edwin V. McKenzie, attorney for Billings, having men who convicted Billings and Mooney on the stand for cross examination.

Edward A. Cunha and James F. Brennan, two former prosecutors who appeared against the pair in 1916 and 1917, testified last week that they believed the convictions were just. Cunha added that Billings and Mooney should have been hanged.

McKenzie told the United Press today that he will attempt to prove through the former prosecutors that developments in the last 7 years weakened the case against the men. Undoubtedly, McKenzie will stress the repudiation story of John MacDonald, who told the justices that his identification of the men as the bomb planters, responsible for the death of the two men was false.

Cunha claims to have documentary evidence tending to show that Mooney was interested in stopping the Preparedness Day parade and that he was opposed to the United States taking part in the world war.

The court probably will rule Tuesday on whether those documents may be admitted.

On Thursday the hearing will shift to Folsom prison where Billings, a "two-time" loser, is serving a life sentence. Due to a ruling that Billings can not leave prison to testify personally, the court is taking the hearing to prison.

Although it is not definite yet, the justices may go to San Quentin prison, where Mooney is serving his life term.

Homes of Slain Negroes Guarded By Armed Forces

MARION, Ind. Aug. 11 (UP)—State troops stood guard today around the homes of Thomas Shipp and Abraham Smith, Negro youths who were lynched by a mob last Thursday night after the confessed killing of a white man and attacking his sweetheart.

The bodies of Shipp and Smith were cut down from two maple trees in the courthouse yard Friday and taken to Muncie were returned yesterday and plans made for a private funeral services today.

Practically everyone in Marion saw the bodies as they dangled gruesomely from the trees all last Thursday night and Friday morning, but hundreds desired to see them again and large crowds milled about in the vicinity of their homes Sunday.

CLOSE OF LONG DROUGHT SPELL NOW FORECAST

Farmers in the Grain Belt Survey Crops and Try to Save What They Can; Outlook Bad in Most Places

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 11, (UP)—End of the drought was predicted in the southwest today and farmers of the grain belt surveyed parched and withered crops with a view toward saving what they could from the ravages of the sun.

Directing their interest toward Washington and the efforts of the federal government to provide drought relief, grain raisers resigned themselves to a bad crop year, prepared to salvage what they could and borrow enough money to carry them through the winter.

As individuals, farmers showed little interest in the monthly government crop report, due today, aside from the effect it might have on grain prices. Each could look out over his acres and calculate how much the long rainless weeks had cost him. His only consolation lay in slowly rising grain prices.

In many sections of the grain belt—especially Kansas and Oklahoma—the drought had cut in half the production of grain sorghum crops, which many farmers had hoped would bring partial compensation for loss through low wheat prices.

During the month and a half of severe drought in Kansas, the corn crop deteriorated at the rate of 1,500,000 bushels per day, according to estimates by agricultural experts.

E. C. Paxton, federal statistician, estimated a 70,000,000 bushel yield for the state.

The situation was less serious in Nebraska and about the same in Oklahoma.

Only in Texas did farmers weather the dry period with little loss.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11, (UP)—Temperatures almost chilly in comparison to those during the recent series of heat waves prevailed today in most sections of the country.

NATIONAL ARMY MOVES TO HALT RAIDING FORCES

Afridis Hordes Remain in Shadow of Indian City Despite Heavy Bombing Of the Royal Air Force

SHANGHAI, China, Aug. 11 (UP)—The National government continued today to enforce extreme measures to protect Hankow and other important Yangtze valley cities from Chinese communistic forces, but simultaneously were forced to meet the drive of rebel northern armies southward toward Nanking.

The total number of executions of communists in Hankow was raised to 46 in a week when 16 more agitators were beheaded. With the enforcement of martial law and efforts to suppress communistic elements within the city, the government officials were concentrating on checking the raiding army that overran Changsha and other cities.

Missionary Returns

Afterwards, Changsha was reported restored to order again and foreigners, including the American Presbyterian missionary, Lingle, returned to the city. Women were advised to postpone their return.

The communist army has [illegible] shadowed the city [illegible] north in many respects and forced a new alignment of the leaders. Gen. Peng Teh-Hui, chief leader of the fifth Red army and Huang Kung-Lueh, deputy commander, have signed communist propaganda pamphlets found at Yoo-Chow and elsewhere.

Peng was reported to be in command of a well-organized and modernly equipped army such as has forced a complete change in the former bandittike tactics of the communists. The main force of the communists was estimated at around 10,000 men.

PEIPING, China, Aug. 11, (UP)—Torrential rains turned the civil war battlefields of China to deep mud today as floods and fighting took a heavy death toll in Shantung province and other northern regions.

The northern armies from Peiping claimed to have driven the National government troops back 30 miles in a desperate advance southward. Casualties were estimated at 10,000.

A beating rain finally slowed up the battle, halting heavy traffic and flooding many towns.

Thousand Dead

The Chinese press reported 1,000 persons dead in floods between Peiping and Mukden, with 20 towns under water and ten bridges washed out. The rains continued.

Peng Yu-Hsiang, co-leader of the northern troops, informed Peiping headquarters by telegraph that his troops had advanced to

The Lassman Lie

He was a champion, fearless and honest. They knocked his wits askew in a game of football. He fought back the best he knew. A year ago he swam out to save a girl's life at Maine Beach. He was drowned in Long Lake, Maine, last month, his strength spent after he had saved the lives of two youths. And they strewed his watery grave with a pack of lies. His name was Al Lassman.

When disasters from Harrison, Me., last month told of Lassman's taking a canoe out alone at night, against the camp's rules, and of the canoe being found overturned, it was left to the imagination that Al had taken the easiest way out. In the last game of the football season in 1928, you remember, Al was kicked into a coma from which he emerged a mental and physical cripple. New York University, his alma mater, helped him in his fight for recovery, and, in justice to the officials of the university it must be recorded that their investigation of the circumstances surrounding his death cleared his name of the vile hint of suicide which the Maine camp officials suffered to flourish.

It Was Hard to Believe.

The story sent out from Maine belied the character of the man it aimed to discredit. Lassman never was a quitter. After lying unconscious for days after the fateful contact at Forbes Field, Lassman's first words out of a fitful delirium were, "Tell my pals on our five-yard line now, Chick Meehan, the Violet coach, but well stop 'em this time." He answered several operations after that in the attempt to restore his mental and bodily powers. He showed clearly the quality of courage that heroes have. So it was hard to believe he had slipped away into the water at night, as the stories from Maine indicated.

The university, a short time after his death, received an anonymous letter, giving a different story of the circumstances of Al's death. Al Nixon, graduate manager of athletics, pursued it. He caused Jerry Nemecek, who like Lassman was a counselor at the camp of Izzy Zarakov where Al met his death, to leave the camp and questioned Nemecek closely.

Damning Silence

Nemecek finally admitted that it had been decided at a meeting to maintain silence regarding the facts of Lassman's death—in order that the business of the camp might not be hurt by the near-drownings in which Al played the heroic role. One of the counsellors at the Zarakov camp was Al Marsters, the Dartmouth star of 1929. Nemecek is captain of the New York U. eleven this season. Zarakov, who operates the camp at Long Lake, is a former Harvard football player.

Had it not been for the enormous letter writer—a man who later let his name become known—Lassman's last beautiful sacrifice might have been handed out to the world as an ugly surrender to the compling darkness.

Gangland and the underworld and the modern larceny of the prize ring offer no [illegible] example of man's inhumanity to man.

This little story should makes you want to turn and look over your shoulder in apprehension of seeing there some wretch about to slit your back. It is shuddering.

APPLETON SCHOOL NEARLY COMPLETE

JEROME, Aug. 11.—(Special)—The new school building in the Appleton school district is near completion and will be ready for school at the beginning of the school year. It is a building that this community may well be proud of. The material used in the construction was red brick. It is a two story building and particularly well arranged, the lower floor consisting of a large auditorium 23 by 70 feet, with a stage at one end, to which there is a separate entrance. The rest of the lower floor is taken up with one class room, the boiler and fuel room. On the upper floor of the building is divided into four class rooms and the principal's room. The finish is a gray varnish. The building is wired for electricity but the line is not built that far yet. The school house sets back from the road about 600 feet and is situated in a large pasture which will make an ideal play ground. The approximate cost of the school house is between $25,000 and $26,000. Mr. Paul Kerrick had the contract for the construction of the building.

Congressman Speaks

The regular meeting of the Jerome Rotary club was held at the North Side Inn in the Rotary club room. The principal speaker was Congressman Addison T. Smith of Twin Falls. Mr. Smith commented on the growth of Jerome and the rapid development the country is making. One outstanding point in his talk is his contention that every citizen, in whatever walk of life should be encouraged to express his views on legislation.

Seven of the Nimayan Campfire girls left Sunday for the boy scout camp, 12 miles above Ketchum, on the Sawtooth Highway, where they will enjoy a week's outing.

BOOTLEG FASHION HOUSE IS FOUND

PARIS, Aug. 11. (UP) — A "bootleg" fashion house, which employed high-salaried quick-witted artists to appropriate the choicest designs of some of the best known fashion creators in Paris was believed uncovered by police here Saturday.

Commencing with the arrest of two women who were said to have admitted they sketched the exclusive designs of the great dressmaking establishments, the police continued a round of visits to apartments they suspected of being engaged in the unauthorized fashion exploitation. Many Frenchmen, some of them of noble birth, were busy assembling the illegal sketches for shipment to New York where the police entered, officials charged. Some of the women were artists who had slipped into style showings representing themselves as news writers, and who had memorized the costumes so to sketched afterwards for eight cents to a dollar each.

The artists in such illegal establishments, the police said, must be women of intelligence and careful regard of detail. Their task is most difficult; since they must memorize perfectly each costume as the mannikin wearing it passes by at an average pace, allowing a view of her for usually less than one minute.

Frequently the artists are required to memorize 90 costumes in the course of an afternoon, noting every detail of such items as collars, pleats, color fabric, belt, height, and dress length. Then, when the style showing is over, the artists must hurry to the studio, and sketch as many of the costumes as possible exactly as the creator designed it. A good sketcher, it was said, can average $60 a day.

LEGGE TALKS TO IDAHO FARMERS

BOISE, Aug. 11 (UP)—Solution of the problems of Western agriculture must come from the west-erners themselves, Alexander Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board, told 12,000 western Idaho and eastern Oregon ranchers in Caldwell Friday evening.

Legge said that he was no magician who could by a trick of handicraft change the economic situation from which the country suffers, but that his message was one which they, themselves, must largely apply in the solution of their problem.

The outstanding purpose of the farm board, he said, is to bring about an organization of the farmers and enable them to solve their own problems and place agriculture on a substantial and permanently safe basis.

"The constant problem of any industry," declared Legge, "is to balance the production demand against estimated production and until the farmer learns this lesson he will continue to lag behind other industries in his rate of return.

"They call my advocacy of acreage production rank heresy, yet a great automobile manufacturer none other than Henry Ford, insisted it was the farmers' duty to plant just as much as he possibly could and raise everything his land would bear. Yet that same manufacturer at that very moment was producing only 40 per cent of his capacity in automobiles, not because he couldn't sell them, and since then he has shut down entirely. In other words he has followed the example I have tried to advocate for you folks."

MAN DROWNS AT BANBURY PLUNGE

BUHL, August 11, (Special)—Making no outcry and showing no signs of distress, Orval Malby, 32, Linn, Kansas, sank beneath the surface of the water at Banbury natatorium, in the Snake river canyon, Sunday afternoon, about 6 o'clock, and drowned before his friends became aware of his danger.

Malby arrived a week ago from Linn, Kansas, and had been working for J. H. Glander, an old acquaintance, living southwest of Buhl. He had come with the family to spend the afternoon at the natatorium. Eating an unusually hearty picnic dinner, he shortly afterward entered the resort pool. The Glander family spent the afternoon visiting and watching the bathers.

Pool Crowded

The pool was crowded, as is customary on Sunday, and Malby was not missed among the swimmers for some time. When Mr. Glanders failed to locate Malby in the pool, he became alarmed and notified Mr. Banbury and search for the body was made for the body.

Divers discovered the body in 12 feet of water and brought it to the surface. All efforts to resuscitate Mr. Malby were without avail. Coroner P. E. Drake was notified to come to the scene Saturday and bring a doctor. Dr. Shurts of Buhl arrived soon after the call and Dr. George Halley and the coroner a short time later from Twin Falls. The body had been in the water perhaps an hour, and all efforts failed to bring back life. A pulmotor from Buhl was used and every possible effort made to revive Mr. Malby. The body lies at the Johnson undertaking parlors at Buhl. His parents have been notified at Linn, Kansas.

Warns Bathers

Speaking of the casualty, Coroner Drake issued the following warning this afternoon:

"This should act as a warning to bathers not to go into any pool immediately after eating a hearty meal. At least an hour and a half should elapse before taking a plunge or bath and all bathing places should be posted and children taught the danger of swimming too soon after eating.

"This is the second case brought to my attention where drowning was due to this hazard."

Defies Parents After Elopement

"I'll stick by my husband." That was the answer of the former Marjorie Malin, above, to the repeated efforts of her family—long prominent in New York society—to have her recent marriage to a Wall Street bond salesman annulled. LOSS TO DECLO PUTS BRUINS IN FOUR-WAY LEAD

Declo forced Twin Falls into a four-way tie for leadership of the Inland league second half Sunday in a game on the Declo diamond, when after getting away to a good start on the offerings of Pullmer, pitching for the Bruins, they pounded out sufficient hits to bring in 14 runs, while the Bruins tallied but five times.

Early in the third inning a triple, two homers, and a double of Pullmer caused his retirement in favor of Lyons, who tried but failed to stop the deluge of Declo hits.

As a result of Sunday's defeat, the Bruins enter a four-way tie with Oakley and Declo for honors of the second half of the schedule.

Landowner Called In Southern States

James B. Wells, resident of Idaho for the past eleven years, died suddenly at Fairmer, Alabama, July 23, according to information received here by M. O. Conover from his sister, Miss Ruth Wells. "Jim" Wells, as he was familiarly known, had been in the employment of Mr. Conover for the past five years, and his death is deeply regretted by Mr. Conover and family.

Mr. Wells was called to Alabama last February by the death of a older brother. He decided to remain in the south for a year, looking after his deceased brother's agricultural interests, the hot dry climate that section of Alabama impaired Mr. Well's health and resulted in his sudden death.

Mr. Wells owned a farm of 120 acres five miles south of Hansen.

Local Golfers Win Three-Way Tourney

Although handicapped by the absence of four of the first ten ranking players of the club, a fifteen man team of Twin Falls country club club-swingers won a triangular tourney from golfers of Rupert and Burley Sunday. Points scored by the teams were: Twin Falls' 17½, Rupert 15½, Burley 5.

ington and Rayaville were less serious. Major obstructions were reported on the cutoff road to Weber Canyon and on the Davis county "mountain road."

The flood was typical of two other inundations that visited this section this summer. Low hanging, lead-colored clouds suddenly poured torrents of water onto the hills overlooking Farmington, Bountiful and Kaysville Saturday night. Floods poured out of the canyons, particularly Shepherd canyon, and swept over farm lands and highways; the usual flow of mud followed in their wake.

A check of the damage today revealed it is not as serious as first anticipated. There was some damage to farm lands, traffic over the Bamberger electric line was temporarily disrupted and highway traffic was checked but there was little actual cash loss.

FEDERAL FARM BOARD OFFICIAL TALKS IN CITY

"The big thing in marketing is to increase the demand for your product. This may be done by finding new uses for the product, or by making it more attractive. Improve the quality, and you increase the demand, with the result that you get better prices," J. W. Jones, representative of the federal farm board, told more than 50 persons at a meeting in the city park here Saturday evening.

"There is, indeed, a result of supply and demand, but which supply is a more or less definite, by demand quality, demand is one of the most elastic things in the world. Demand may be created or killed."

Citing the California orange growers, the lima bean grower, and the California walnut growers as examples of marketing groups which have created a demand for their products, Mr. Jones declared a marketing agency must have identical interests with those of the producers. "The lima bean cooperative marketing association, by magazine and newspaper advertising, has built up a market for limas until the price for the beans, which would probably have been about $3.50 last year, was $11.50," he said.

"Some such project must be entered by every grower of Great Northern beans, if the demand for the product is to keep pace with the supply. Bean growers of this state should unanimously endorse present existing cooperative marketing associations," he asserted.

Mr. Jones was introduced by C. H. Detwiler, manager of the Southern Idaho Bean Growers association. The talk here was the last of a series of six made in different sections of the county during the past week. Mr. Jones left Sunday for Denver.

Filer Man Injured In Auto Accident

Bruises and cuts were sustained by Robert Bartow of Filer when the car in which he and two others were riding was struck by a car driven by Lee Munyon, of Filer half a mile north of the Washington school into Saturday night. The Barton car turned over in the barrow pit, but righted itself, landing on its wheels.

The Munyon car failed to stop following the accident, but was captured eight miles from the scene of the crash. Munyon admitted being at fault and promised to pay for the damage done to the Barton car. He was released.

E. F. Schwartz reported to police Sunday night that his car was struck by that driven by Ed George, damaging the former's fender, in a minor collision on Main avenue north.

O. Colwell was arrested by city policemen Sunday evening when the car he was driving crashed into a parked car on Second avenue west. Colwell was intoxicated, officers said. He was jailed, and charges were to be placed against him Monday.

FAIR TIME

BEFORE many more weeks shall have passed it will be fair time again in Idaho. It may be difficult to realize now while summer temperatures prevail and the vacation urge calls a wilting populace to forest and mountain, but a mere day-after-tomorrow that game populace, or an appreciable portion of it, will be attending fairs, those close at home and some not so close.

Thus does the Idaho Statesman remind us all of fair time, of harvest time, of autumn, so soon upon us. Continuing it says:

The day was, and not so far removed, when the country fair was an outstanding social event for all the countryside. Two months prior to the time of holding the fair, boys and girls were ambitious to earn extra money against the needs that pressed upon youthful fancies when all the wonders of the sideshows called. The trip was made either by train to the county seat, 20 miles away, or else the family arose at 3 or 4 o'clock, did the chores and then rode at plugging gait behind Bill and Maud in the old surrey.

Family reunions attracted relatives from as far away as 30 miles. Dinners were taken from home, you may recall, huge dinners provided by such cooks as only live in memories of childhood. The dinner was spread over a tablecloth on green grass under the trees, picnic style, and there was much of merry making while it was eaten. Even if slower those were quite colorful days—and the fried chicken had a flavor and was eaten with such gusto as shall not prevail again for the generation which then was in childhood.

The fairs have changed since those days along with all the multitude of changes that have been worked in every phase of living. The fair of today has lost a great deal of its social flavor. Relatives living on farms a mere 10 or 20 miles apart are likely to call on each other after supper while driving in the evening's coolness.

The successors to those boys and girls of yesterday who counted themselves fortunate if they managed to hoard 25 or 30 cents for a wild spending spree at the county fair the one day they could attend are not content with any such paltry sums.

Young Bill raises pigs, and he is counting on winning at least $25 with his entry at the fair. He had outstanding success last year in the club class and made the older breeders surrender a part of the money offered in the open classes. Jim has dairying for his project, and his yearling heifer and that bull calf he schemed around and bought this spring are looking mighty promising. Jim wears an air of abstraction at times, but his mother understands that it is his concern over his charges that claims his attention.

If the fairs have changed from what they were in the old days, most of the changes have been for the better. The midway as it existed in those days has vanished for all practical purposes, and the entertainment features remaining offer less that is offensive to a discriminating public taste. The opportunities for stressing the educational have been developed until your discerning student can form a more conclusive opinion of the progress of a community by a careful study of exhibits during one day at the fair and shrewd questions asked exhibitors than he could by a week of independent inquiries.

Pumpkins and squashes and tall, tall corn; vegetables proud in colorful perfection and of a size to make the stranger gasp; livestock consciously aware of its superiority over the common run—all these and much besides we shall soon be seeing.

For county fair time approaches!

They do say that the results of the Lauterbach-Severns commissionership race in the primary, which wound up favorable to the former, meant much more than appears on the face. It seems that Severns was expecting the appointment which Lauterbach won following the death of Commissioner Breckon, but that a fractional fight broke out which deprived Severns of the place. He ran for the nomination and won, which may or may not have been a slap at one of the factions in this county.

Advance rumors anent the approaching state conventions indicate that deadlock impends between the Gillis, McMurray and Defenbach forces, and that just to cinch the matter an additional candidate will be thrown into the race. Watch for him. Then the Republican county convention here may develop a little fireworks on the matter of an instructed delegation. All of which will add zest to otherwise dull proceedings!

Novellus Torquatus Drank Three Gallons of Wine at Once

Novellus Torquatus of Mediolanum (Milan) could drink three congii (gallons) of wine at one draught. According to Pliny, Novellus was known as the "Titiomedus" for his drinking feat.

Home of Francis Drake in Small English Town

One of the rooms in the oldest house at Stadnes, England, the Knowle where Sir Francis Drake lived for a time, has been stripped of some valuable wallpaper which has been sold to a London antiques dealer. This paper, hand-painted with Chinese pictures, was prepared about 1720 by a famous Chinese artist, who came from Shanghai. Its removal from the wall involved a long and anxious process. After being dampened the paper was backed to prevent mildew, and then carefully peeled. Owing to cold weather the process was interrupted, and some days were spent before the paper was finally removed. The Knowle was for centuries in the possession of the Pellett family. It is a curiously built house, almost surrounded by a low corridor, suggestive of a ship's alleyways, though the original architecture has been affected by later additions to the building. Sir Francis Drake, like other distinguished sailors, seems to have been a great lover of dogs, and placed tablets on the walls recording the lives of some of his pets.

Defenders of Jerusalem Worthy of Their Race

When Titus, son of Vespasian, soldier, emperor of Rome, after a long and exhausting siege, took Jerusalem, Mount Zion held out last of all against the legions. In spite of the efforts of Titus to save the splendid temple Herod had rebuilt and beautified, some reckless flung flaming torches into it, and caused its utter destruction.

It seemed as though with it all hope of preserving their nation had vanished, and the remnant of the Jewish defenders of their city hurried across the bridge over the Tyropoeon gorge between Zion and Moriah, into the old city of David and the ancient palace of their kings, where they put up a fierce resistance to the Roman legions that had won slain or wounded, and the buildings David had built, and others had added to, had fallen in ruins about them.

Diesel Engine

During the last decade of the Nineteenth century Dr. Rudolf Diesel of Leipsig brought out an internal combustion engine which involved in its operation a principle that had never before been applied in practical mechanics. Due to the great increase in the value of high compression and conceived the idea of mixing the fuel and air at the very moment when power is needed for the working stroke. He come to the conclusion that cheap, low-grade oils could be utilized as fuel if introduced into a highly heated charge of compressed air at the proper time. He enlisted the aid of manufacturers and after some experimentation brought out the most economical heat engine that had ever been produced.

Proving Truth of Adage About That Last Laugh

Back in 1850 Thoreau picked up a story at Plymouth that had to do with a certain General Winslow. It seems that Winslow was a member of a party of Plymouth gentlemen who rode off by the shore for a "high time" at the Gurnet, and who had it.

When they were ready to return they found that General Winslow was sound asleep on the ground, and it occurred to them that it would be an excellent joke to leave him there. As they rode along somewhat they amused themselves by conjecturing what he would do when he awoke and found himself alone at that distance.

In due time he did awaken and realized the situation. Being still somewhat excited by the wine he had drunk, he found his horse and rode along the shore in the opposite direction from the shore road to Plymouth, to the Sagamore hotel.

From there in Plymouth Bay is about a mile and a quarter across the bay; it was low tide, and Winslow waded his horse as far as the beacon north of the channel at the entrance to Plymouth harbor. Then he boldly swam the animal to the end of Plymouth beach, about half a mile farther, notwithstanding a strong current; and having landed safely, he whipped up and reached town, having come only about eight miles.

He had ample time to warm and dry himself at the tavern before his companions, who had to ride 20 miles through Marshfield and Duxbury, arrived.

When they found him sitting by the tavern fireside they thought it was his ghost.—Brockton Enterprise.

Great Eastern Surely World's Unluckiest Ship

At Milwaukee there still exists the massive concrete bed and slipway laid down over seventy years ago for the building and launching of the Great Eastern, probably the unluckiest ship ever constructed. The first time she put to sea an explosion below the decks killed ten of her firemen. On her maiden voyage her captain fell overboard and was drowned. Next she ran on a rock and ripped open her hull. Following this her crew seized her for their unpaid wages, she having sailed for New York prepared for 2,000 passengers and returned with 100. When the vessel was broken up the skeleton of a workman, who had disappeared mysteriously during her construction, was found wedged between the outer and inner plating of her hull.

Highlander's Apparel

The Highlander costume consists of a short tunic, vest and kilt, heavily pleated, passing around the waist and reaching not quite to the knees. Short trousers are worn under this kilt. The stockings are gartered below the bare knees and low shoes are worn with the costume. In front, hanging from a belt around the waist, is a sporran, a pocketbook purse covered with fur, and a large plaid or scarf is wrapped around the body, the ends hanging down from a brooch fastened on the left shoulder. The headgear is a cloth cap or bonnet in which a sprig of heather is stuck, or in the case of a chief, an eagle's feather. The distinguishing feature of the costume is the tartan.

Fish Anyhow

At the regular convocation of the high school, Mr. ——, the principal, introduced to the assembly the winners of the district Latin contest. In his remarks he called them "the Latin sharks" of — high school.

Some days later in one of the roll rooms, the teacher and her pupils casually mentioned a certain girl, who was one of the Latin winners.

"Oh, yes," said George, "I know her. She's one of those Latin whales."

"You don't mean whales," said a pupil. "You mean sharks."

"Well, anyhow, it's some kind of a big fish," answered George.—Indianapolis News.

Atmospheric Phenomenon

Tuesday, September 6, 1881, is known in New England as the Yellow day. It was characterized by an intensely brassy appearance. Many persons reported a smell of smoke in the air, and this is generally believed to have been the cause of the peculiar phenomenon. It is known that extensive forest fires were raging in Canada and the West. Another suggestion was that it was caused by an active volcano in the interior of Labrador; another that the smoke was derived from immense peat bogs in Lancashire which in dry seasons burned to the rocks.

Origin of the Kilt

A Scotsman writes in the London Daily Telegraph: He who reads his Bible will find that the kilt was originated in the Holy land. The military guards worn by the soldiers of the psalmist, King David who formed his personal bodyguard were cut short to the knee, thus giving them greater freedom in the defense of Jerusalem and in attack against their enemies. This is one reason British Israel, an important modern religious movement, considers Scots to be the chosen, leading, and most important race of people on God's earth.

Satan and Black Cats

According to an old legend, Satan's favorite form of disguise was a black cat, and this probably gave rise to the superstition that a black cat brought bad luck.

FORD PLANE CARRIES ARMY CREW IN NON-STOP FLIGHT TO PANAMA

AVIATION history was made recently when a crew of four Army airmen, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Jacob E. Fickel, executive officer of the Air Corps Material Division at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, landed at France Field, Canal Zone, after a non-stop flight in a Ford tri-motor transport plane from Miami across the blue waters of the Caribbean. The plane with its heavy gasoline load covered the 1140-mile jump in 11 hours, 20 minutes.

To military men, the flight was of great tactical interest as it demonstrated the practicability of direct air contact between continental United States and Panama without the necessity of crossing any country but Cuba. From a military standpoint this is considered important as Central American countries have been averse to permitting American military planes to fly over their territories.

Flight of Military Value

Of greater interest, perhaps, was the fact that the big Ford plane still had 200 gallons of fuel in its tanks when it was landed at France Field. The weight of this amount of gasoline is greater than the weight of a great demolition bomb, proving that the Ford transport could have carried such a missile to its objective.

Lieutenant Albert F. Hegenberger, who was navigating officer of the flight, won international fame four years ago when he successfully navigated an Army plane in the first flight between the Pacific coast and Hawaii. Lieutenant E. C. Whitehead was co-pilot and Sergeant K. D. Wilson radio officer.

Despite the fact that the plane carried in the cabin 440 gallons of gasoline, weighing more than 2,500 pounds, in addition to the 300 gallons in its tanks, it took off easily after a 900-foot run in the early dawn. Average weather conditions were encountered during the flight, the plane having favoring winds part of the time and head winds the remainder.

The navigation throughout the flight was by compasses and radio, no astronomical observations being taken, the plane being held on its direct course without difficulty and reaching a landfall at the Canal Zone within a mile of the mark aimed at. Throughout the flight, Colonel Fickel was in constant communication with pilots in the cockpit by means of a telephone.

Plane Phone Effective

This method of communication proved extremely effective, particularly because of the fact that Colonel Fickel, from his seat behind the temporary emergency gas tanks in the cabin, was able to communicate instantly with Lieutenants Whitehead and Hegenberger in the pilot's compartment. In the same manner reports received by radio were transmitted to the pilot and navigating officer.

Landed on Schedule

At 4 o'clock the afternoon of the flight, after all but 250 miles of the course had been covered, Colonel Fickel radioed to the army station at France Field that he would arrive at 6:30 p. m. The landing was made at 6:30 p. m. to the second.

The plane carried for emergency a rubber boat, capable of inflation by air, and equipped with an 8-pound radio set powered with a 6-volt battery and having a range of 50 miles. Its use was not necessary, however, although the crew reported after the flight that their only period of anxiety was when they were flying over Bartlett Deep, one of the deepest spots in the Caribbean.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES by JONES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Way down the shore they went. About half an hour reached a place that brought a smile to each one's face. His that boats tied the dock and my their cargo sure was queer. "Look at the mules," one Tiny cried. "I guess they also like to ride. They look so funny in a boat. What are they doing here?"

"Why, they're Missouri mules, my lad," replied the travel Man. "They've had a long, long journey over the sea. They're over here to work. You see, our mules them folks can't go wrong. They are good and strong. When mules are rather slow in traveling but then, they never balk.

"Right now they're being shipped away to some town near. They'll leave today." Just then the mule boats started off and, how the mules did jump. At first they didn't like the ride, and they all huddled side by side. But then, they soon got used to it. No more did their hoofs thump.

The boats had sails and up way down the shore they went. About half an hour was spent in watching how the ship would take the boats along the stream. "Well, we can't see them any more," said Scouty "Let's go back to shore. I've seen so many things today, it all seems like a dream."

They shortly landed, safe and sound, quite glad to get on solid ground. And then they found a place to eat and sat down to some lunch. "Gee, everything tastes good," said one. "This eating habit's lots of fun." When they had eaten all they could, they were in a happy bunch. Out on the street again, they found a husky fellow walking round. A great big trunk was on his back. Said Scouty, "Who are you?" The man replied, "A porter, son, and moving trunks is my day's fun." He then shook hands with Clowny and the lad said "Howdy, do."

(The Tinymites see a strange cobbler in the next story.)

The term "congress" was first used for a deliberative body during the Seventeenth century, when it was applied to the meeting of the delegates assembled at Cologne in an attempt to end the Thirty Years' war.

No Political Worries Harrass Hoover Here

No wonder President and Mrs. Hoover spend almost every week-end at their mountain camp at Rapidan, Virginia, away from the wearisome cares of office. For who could resist a babbling brook and shady nooks like these? The president and first lady are shown at the left admiring the beauty of the falls of the Rapidan river, a general view of which is shown at the left. Note the rustic simplicity of the retreat, a far cry from the busy activity of the White House.

On Honeymoon With Calles

Here's the new Mrs. Plutarco Calles, now on her honeymoon with Mexico's famous "iron general" and former president, whose bride she became at a private wedding at General Calles' farm near Mexico City recently. Only a few relatives and four of Calles' closest friends attended the civil ceremony, no religious ceremony being held. No pictures were permitted, but this striking photograph shows the bride, formerly Miss Leonor Llorente, a famous Mexican beauty as she appeared as an amateur singer during a recent festival. General Calles' first wife died several years ago.

NOW 'I WAS DRUNK', SAYS MacDONALD

Despite his story at the Supreme Court hearing in San Francisco that he was not drinking on the day of the Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco in 1916, John MacDonald, recalled "key" witness in the Mooney-Billings case, went before the Pardon Board at Sacramento Saturday and told Gov. Young a brand new period. According to witnesses, "Yes, sir, I drink! I was drunk that day," he said. Pardon Board members left to right: Judge C. H. Wheaton, Atty. Gen. U. S. Webb, Court L. Smith, Lieut. Gov. H. L. Carnahan, seated, James A. Johnson and Gov. C. C. Young. At left, Mr. "Mac" on the stand.

They are to be married on September 3, when Mencken will abandon the bachelorhood which he has praised in numerous writings.

The title of "Miss Universe" and $10,000 award go to her if she wins.

Tones of Green Sanctioned for Wear in Autumn

PARIS, Aug. 11 (UP)—Green tones for winter are predominant among the new style displays that can be seen in the Champs-Elysees establishment of Chantal's.

Even the trouser evening dresses failed to prove as startling as the "green" and "greenish" coat and dress, done in many variations in the shade preferred by blondes.

This collection, always interesting for its original sports apparel and the striking cut of its original sports apparel and the striking cut of its coats, was marked this year by the lightness of tweed and jersey-tweed fabrics, the new neck-line which accomplished a modern square effect through the placing of yokes, sleeves and fur collars, and the various tricks used in crossing or tying white tabs to achieve collars of dresses and coats.

All the autumn browns being used by practically every house in Paris came in for interesting treatment at this Champs-Elysees establishment. The black and white combinations which are running brown a close second, were plentiful too. And Chantal sometimes combined all three for ensembles of stunning design.

Furniture Style Show Promised

The American housewife has become the most particular woman in the world in furnishing her home and furniture designers are ever improving their designs to meet her meticulous taste, Bert Sweet, of Sweet Furniture Stores says, following his return from Tacoma, where he attended the Western Furniture Conference on July 22 and 23.

"Things that pleased the American woman a few years ago are not marketable today," Sweet said. "Her increased knowledge of interior decoration and home arrangement together with changes in social structures of cities has brought new demands on this subject received considerable attention at the convention.

"The industry has watched these changes closely and for that reason the first National Home Furnishings Style Show will be held this year. For eight days, Sept. 24 to Oct. 1, retail furniture dealers throughout the United States will display in their stores the latest designs that have been created to meet the demands of the age.

"New and well-defined ideas in merchandising by which the retail store may better assist their customers in selecting the proper furnishings for their homes was brought out at the convention, he said. The latest style creations already are on the market, ready for the public's inspection, indicating that leaders in the industry are optimistic over future business prospects.

Cloudburst Blocks Road in Mountains

Heavy rains in the Hailey country Saturday, which culminated in a cloudburst blocked a narrow portion of the road up Warm Spring canyon between the Hailey and Ketchum Nesh chains, according to reports reaching Twin Falls. The deluge deposited a mass of debris at the foot of a ravine, changing the course of the stream at that point and preventing several cars from getting out of the canyon. A wall of water four feet high roared down the mountain side, narrowly missing a car that had just negotiated the road. Another cloudburst occurred at West Fork below Boards Sawmill, traffic being delayed only a short time, as workmen got busy and repaired the washout Saturday.

All week the mountain region was drenched, clouds enveloping the wooded slopes. Deep mounds of mud were deposited at the mouth of rain-washed gullies, rendering the roads perilous in many places.

CROP REPORT IS GIVEN OUT TODAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11, (UP)—The department of agriculture today announced the drought and hot weather during the month of July had combined to decrease crop prospects in the United States almost 7 percent.

A rather wide belt from the middle Atlantic states westward to the Mississippi valley, the department said, has had the driest growing season on record. June and July rainfalls shortage in the south central states generally exceeded any previous recorded year.

The government report, which is as of July 31, estimated potato production at 374 million bushels which is 24 million bushels less than was estimated as of June 30. The 10-year average potato production is 391 million bushels, while last year's crop was 365 million bushels. The condition not published for July 31 was 75.9 per cent.

STOCK MARKET IS IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 11, (UP)—Price movements were irregular on the stock market today. The pace slowed up materially from the rate of last week when a rapid decline was in progress.

Selling broke out at intervals throughout the session and bears tried hard to force a selling stampede, but on each such effort they were repulsed and forced to cover.

DENVER METAL

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 11 (UP)—Silver 35¾; lead 5.60.

BOSTON, Aug. 11, (UP) Demand for wool is fairly brisk on kills and finer domestic wools with prices quite firm. Business appears slightly better on both 58-60s and 56s grades at very firm prices. CHAPTER XVII

Down in the prison yard, Morgan found Butch the same old happy-go-lucky Butch. He was relaxing in a group of his cronies. When he saw Morgan he slowly detached himself from the others and without any perceptible show of joy walked slowly toward him.

"Hello, ladybug, did you fly away home?" he greeted.

"Hello, Butch." Morgan felt a real affection for Butch. "I was filed right back again."

They started walking slow through the yard.

"How all the dames, Morg? Did you give 'em my what's-is?"

"Sure—all of them. They just thels almost."

As they ambled along, this one and that called a greeting at Morgan. Most of them accepted in a matter of fact way his return among them. Morgan sensed an undercurrent of unrest in the air.

"There's something cockeyed, Butch—what is it?" he asked.

Butch hesitated a moment before with a slight movement of his head. Morgan turned and looked. He saw nothing but the closed grill and the armed guard pacing the other side.

"Vase," explained Butch, "every day he has been going to that vase with a bunch of flowers he picks in the garden. The screw opens the gate to get them."

"Six of us is going to stroll through that gate."

"You're crazy!"

"I'm giving it to you straight, Morg. He and Joe framed it."

"Joe? I thought he was a trusty!"

"He's—but he's a con like you an' me. His old dean is been hustlin' it's his idea." Butch paused and looked around. "There he goes now—pipe him off."

Joe was double-timing toward the corridor. He reached it, he tripped and the guard halted. Joe held up a bunch of flowers. The guard took them through the bars and Joe, smiling and nodding his head, walked away.

"See?" enthusiastically urged Butch.

Morgan shook his head. He could find no significance in this bit of soft pantomime.

"Vase," Butch explained, "Every day for three months he's been going to that gate—with a bunch o' flowers to pick in the garden. That screw's owed to him now—don' think nothin' of it."

"Well? No more do I."

"Gee you're dumb, Morg. Well, every once in a while there's a big bunch of flowers . . . and the screw goes to the gate—savvy?"

"I got it—some mornin' he'll open the gate and six o' you'll crack through—very simple." His tone was ironic.

"What could be simpler?" Butch spoke with all the naivete of a child.

"What comes off after you come through?"

"Then we bust through the outer gate—the car'll be waitin' on the outside."

Morgan looked at him in astonishment, but asked merely:

"When does all this come to pass?"

"Thanksgivin' day—at noon! Most of the screws is off then—for that hot turkey. An' we'll give it to 'em cold turkey—a belly-full!"

Butch laughed long and loud, and then quickly restrained himself as one of the guards turned suddenly.

"Butch, you're nuts . . . if you crack anybody it's the chair."

"What the hell's the difference?—I'm hooked here the rest of me life anyway."

"Who's in on it?"

"Joe . . . the Hawk . . . Dopey . . . Jo—"

"The Hawk—that means blood and nothing less."

"Butch, Butch, appeared Dopey in the suggestion. "He swore he won't chib nobody."

"Huh! He croaked his own mother."

"She's he his" Butch sh[illegible] thalla. "He cut 'im . . . he's [illegible] chased a group of convicts cackby. 'Don' tell 'em you're headin' straight. I believe you, Lord help me.' But they'll make a patsy out o' you."

The Hawk and Dopey walked up. "So long, good luck," Morgan waited away. He was to look for Kent. There was a set, convincing look on his drained face. "He saw Dopey and walked up to him without a greeting, he added.

"Where's Kent?" . . . "Call house . . . number three." Dopey stood staring after him. Morgan scrubbed on his way, forging through the crowd of men. At the door of the cellhouse he saw Kent, coming out with a wheelbarrow loaded with hoes and magazines, for they made him a trusty in the library. Then Kent saw Morgan his face blanched and he suddenly set down the wheelbarrow. He looked about furtively, as though seeking some means of escape or source of rescue.

"I don't blame you for not wanting to see you," his voice was trembling. "It was that greaser . . . Butch . . . I . . . You're a damned liar. But I don't want to discuss that," corrected Morgan curtly. He signaled to Kent and drew him aside.

"Look here, Kent—you're in on that break!"

"Butch poached!" Kent parried.

"Yes—it's dynamite. But that I gives a whoop about you . . . but those others are my friends . . . this thing's a kickback. You're trapped. You got a Chink's neck."

His steady gaze caused Kent to drop his eyes. He faltered:

"You—you don't think—Butch—Hawk—Dopey—"

"I don' have to think. An' you don' know how I . . . Morgan narrowed his eyes, and the look was hard and penetrating. "Lay off—it's the beef, Kent." And he walked on.

As he reached a far corner of the prison yard, Wallace strolled along after him. Morgan paused and with face cane silent and sullen.

"What's you and Butch like, so important to talk over?"

Morgan shrugged his shoulders.

"Lay off me, will you? I don' my bit in the hole an' I'm doin' my full in all—"

"Little more respect in your tone—hear?"

"Pardon me—sir."

"Even the Dever won't do that. An' no flippin' out o' you, Morgan, or I'll make you wish you had. You'd never met your old dean!"

"Yes, sir," said Morgan. "That would be no new wish. They took best me to it."

TELETYPESETTER PROVES SUCCESS IN RECENT TEST

News Stories Are Sent Out On Telegraphic Impulses And Set in Typo by New Device in New York State.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 11. (UP)—The teletypesetter, a device which can set type by electricity at great distances, has been put into successful application on a chain of newspapers.

The Westchester County Publishers, Inc., announced that the invention has been used with satisfactory results on a string of publications in this county. The instrument, invented by Walter W. Morey, and developed with the collaboration of Frank E. Gannett, publisher, Edward L. Bernays, counsel, and others, makes it possible for news stories to be sent out by telegraphic impulses and set in type almost instantly in distant cities.

It gives newspapers using the device an even speedier method of assembling news than the present systems in this country, which already are the fastest in the world.

The papers in the Westchester group, which is headed by Noel Sullivan, are the Yonkers Statesman, Mount Vernon Daily Argus, New Rochelle Standard-Star, Port Chester Daily Item, Tarrytown Daily News, Ossining Citizen-Sentinel, and White Plains Daily Press.

The publishers described this new method as follows:

"When the teletypesetter is in operation at the home office in White Plains, the keys of the typesetting machine are depressed either by magic and the impulses telegraphed from the keyboard of the distant sending machine are instantly reflected on the keyboard of the receiving typesetter. As the keys are tripped electrically, they bring down matrices from which the lead letters are cast into a line of type as in ordinary typesetting.

"To transmit those impulses over the wire the operator at the sending end strikes letter keys on a keyboard like a typewriter and code combinations of holes are punched in a paper tape. That paper tape, passing between electrical contacts, sends the impulses out on the wire and they are received in the newspaper offices on a machine which reproduces the code holes in a similar paper tape. The reproduced tape is passed through an electrified typesetting machine, where the impulses from the distant keyboard are automatically transferred to the corresponding keys on the typesetting keyboard."

Bandit Goliath Meets a David

There was a spectacular finish to the spectacular bandit career of this four-time criminal, "Tiny" Brandff, above. Knocked unconscious by a diminutive Negro patron of a restaurant he attempted to hold up, the giant bandit was arrested and has confessed several robberies to police. Among the crimes he has admitted was recently holding up with a toy pistol—a drug store in the heart of New York's crowded Times Square.

Left Driver Lamenting

While soldiers of the American Expeditionary force were stationed at the barracks in Paris there were strict orders that all cats must be in the barracks by midnight.

It became a regular occurrence to lose one of those one-lung taxicabs stop at the gate and three or more soldiers dash out from the barracks and through the gates calling as they came:

"Gangway for a bucket of paint." This was the signal to the sentinels at the gate to step aside and let these fellows through, then close up and not let the taxicab driver through to get his money.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

History of Paper Making

The art of making paper seems to have been known to the Chinese at a very early period. Different writers have traced it back to the Second century, B. C. Paper first became available for the rest of the world in the middle of the Eighth century. It was probably first brought into Greece from Asia. There is a record of its use by the Emperor Irene about the end of the Eleventh century. The manufacture of paper in Europe was first established by the Moors in Spain in the middle of the Twelfth century.

The Quick and the Dead

In every big firm there are the quick and the dead. There are the all-alive, keen, progressive men, and there are the standstills, who say "No" to every good suggestion.

This struggle between the go-ahends and the pullbacks makes a bad mess of many a balance sheet.

My advice is—bury the dead and get into step with the quick.—Herbert N. Casson in Forbes Magazine.

Affection

A bowl of pulu and indignation came from the back yard where four-year-old sonny and little sister were playing.

"What is sister crying about?" called mother.

"Oh, I was just putting her with a board," answered sonny, calmly.

Oldest Wooden Building

Horyiji, one of the seven great temples of Nara, contains treasures of the fine arts of Japan of 1300 years ago. The main hall, pagoda and middle-storied gate are the oldest wooden buildings in existence, dating back to the Eighth century.

Reminiscence of Early Days of "Fair Harvard"

The student who works his way through college is not fairly recent phenomenon.

He can go back in 1657 in this country and find a precedent at Harvard. Incidentally, the child prodigy can find a precedent in the same year, for the student in question, Zachariah Bridgen, entered Harvard at the age of fourteen, and graduated four years later, at the age at which many are just getting through high school.

Zachariah, according to information received by federal educational officials, served as a waiter and rang the school bell. The steward's books show him charged with "commons and sizings" (board, together with drink ordered from the buttery) tuition, "sundyrents and breef" (room and bed), "fyer and candell" (fire and candles), "wood, etc," and a charge for "bringing corn from Charlestoth."

He was credited on his account with "silver, sugar, wheat, malt, Indian (corn) hoege and a bush of parsnipes." He was also given on December 31, 1654, credit for "ringinge the bell and waytinge" 1 pound 2 shillings and 6 pence.

The total cost of an education at college in those days run from $100 to $200 in silver and groceries.

Frenchman First to Get Idea of Sewing Machine?

France has celebrated the centenary of the invention by one of her citizens of the sewing machine. It is claimed that it was M. Barthelemy Thimonnier, a native of Ambelie, in the Rhone, who first conceived the idea of making a machine do the work of hand-driven needles. writes the Paris correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph.

Thimonnier was a tailor, but, once he began to work on his idea, he became so engrossed in it that he neglected his own business to the point of ruin, and many of his neighbors roundly declared that he was a madman. He persevered in his experiments, which were the most difficult, because he had not even an elementary knowledge of mechanics, and in 1830 took out his first patent.

An inspector of mines who happened to be visiting the region at that time realized the great potentiality of Thimonnier's invention, and installed him in a workshop in Paris.

Helium Production

The production of helium from natural gas in the United States for filling balloons and airships originated in the United States bureau of mines in the spring of 1917 just after this country entered the World war. Helium had been discovered as a constituent of natural gas in 1905 at the University of Kansas by Professor Cady and Doctor McFarland. It had been discovered in mineral substances by Sir William Ramsay as far back as 1895, and its properties were then studied sufficiently to demonstrate that if it could be obtained in sufficient quantity it would prove the ideal gas for balloons and airships on account of its extreme lightness and absolute inertness.

Odd Smallpox Cure

Voltaire, back in 1723, suffered from smallpox. He recovered after being in bed a month. To the father of a woman who was to play a great part in his life in the following 10 years, he made this optimistic report of the remedy which he is confident alone made possible his quick recovery.

"Smallpox is, in a simple form, merely the blood ridding itself of its impurities, and positively paves the way to more vigorous health.

"The doctor gave me emetics eight times, and made me drink a hundred pints of lemonade. This treatment, which you will think extraordinary, was the only one which could possibly have saved my life."—Detroit News.

Presidential Office Vacant

Inasmuch as the term of the actual President expires at midnight, March 3, and it is the custom for the incoming Chief Executive to take the oath of office at midnight, March 4, there is, strictly speaking, a 12-hour period when the country is without a president. The law is silent as regards the hour when the President shall take the oath of office, and it has been a matter of personal convenience. In the event of a pressing emergency there is nothing to prevent the incoming official being sworn in during the first hour of the fourth of March, although this has never been done.

Joy of Youthful Readers

Probably Edward Stratemeyer could have claimed the distinction of being the most prolific writer of juvenile fiction. During the 40-odd years of his writing life he produced more than 900 juvenile books. "Soldiers of Fortune" series, the "Putnam Hall" series and the "Frontier Boys." Writing under a variety of pen names and with numerous secretaries, this author brought out in addition to the above mentioned, boys' lives of many great men.

Most Readers Do Not Read

Journalism is increasing rapidly in popularity as a profession, but the majority of adults do not know how to read a newspaper intelligently. This is the statement of a California educator who urges classes in newspaper reading in the advanced grades of schools. In every paper of repute, all over the country, there are great stores of excellent, vital and interesting information on a variety of subjects, most of which is skimmed over by the average reader.

Charm of Incantation Used to Fight Witches

While the first of May was a time for merrymaking in some countries in ancient times, it was not altogether so in Ireland. There were too many dangers, too many omens, too many witches and fairies about—more on May eve than on any other day in the year, except Halloween. The old Irish year began on the first of May, and like the old Biblical people it was the time of spring cleaning. For weeks before, the Irish housewives industriously cleaned their houses, changing every corner, and fumigating the rooms with Juniper. This was a strong preventive against the witches.

When the great day arrived—in fact before midnight—each family was well prepared. All the fires had been extinguished, awaiting the great Beltane fires which the kings of Ireland lighted on the mountains, and from which the peasants rekindled their own hearthfires. With the first light of May day the men of the house made a din with the pots and pans and cow bells. The half-starved dogs were let loose and howled about the house. The women, the rescuers of mice that waved them here and there, and everyone chanted, "Witch flee, flee from here or it will go ill with thee."—Boston Herald.

An excellent definition of a lyric is it: short poem, musical in style and personal in tone."

Norma Shearer Wears Stunning Gowns in New Talkie

The most beautiful gowns she has ever worn are displayed by Norma Shearer in "Let Us Be Gay," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the famous stage play, now playing at the Idaho Theatre.

Gilbert Adrian, noted designer, created the odes for Miss Shearer and the pantaloon-neckline costume she wears in the bedroom sequence now is becoming a national craze. The sports ensembles and evening gowns are the most striking yet to reach the screen.

Robert Z. Leonard directed the new Shearer film with Rod La Roque appearing in the leading masculine role. The supporting cast includes Marie Dressler, Raymond Hackett, Hedda Hopper, Tyrell Davis, Sally Eilers and Gilbert Emery.
