BOBBY JONES IN RACE FOR TITLE

Atlanta Star Being Prominently Mentioned for Honors in Open Championship

NEW YORK, June 10 (UPI)—Then, of course, there's Bobby Jones.

Asking the returning golf stars who they believe is likely to win the forthcoming open championship at St. Andrews next year, the press corps look for the next national title among their number.

The quality tests start today in 19 districts throughout the country, 1,100 golfers participating, nearly 1,000 amateurs and professionals striving to earn them. It seems unlikely that the 1928 open will be found outside the 25 exemptions when the qualifying automatically for this year's tournament.

But while each of the returning professionals has his eye on the exemption, today's trials, has his own hunch as to the identity of the next champion, they one and all agree that "of course" there's Bobby Jones.

Water Hugo, for instance, thinks highly of Young Horton Smith in the forthcoming championship at Wimborne, England. "The lad got the staff," said Water, who brought the British open title. "If I don't beat him myself none of the rest is likely to. Except, of course, that Jones."

TWIN FALLS TEAM IS DEFEATED 7-2

The Mountain Home baseball team defeated the Twin Falls team by a score of 7 to 2 in their Sunday afternoon to retain the lead again over the other teams of the inland league. The Mountain Home boys, however, were run out in the seventh inning, which cost them victory over the local lads.

The Mountain Home boys scored first in the fourth inning. Twin Falls tied the score in the fifth. Then the Mountain Home boys came back with two more in the fifth of the fifth to take a 3 to 1 lead. Then came the fatal seven innning when Twin Falls came from behind and took the lead from the Twin Falls men. The last tally of the game came for Twin Falls in the eighth inning when Paulson, who drew up the winning play, scored on a wild pitch by Hutchinson.

The score:
Team R. H. E.
Twin Falls 2 15
Mountain Home 7 15
M. Hutchinson, Tyrons, Orchard and McNealy; Pollio and Kewin.

Daily Poem

PRELUDIUM PASTORAL

—Leontine Adams

We leapt upon the bound hill,
There tuf a sheer drop from heaven;
Each such earthy sky was given,
And all the golden grass was still.
And drunk the light of light brilliant even.

A honey milk its roots distill,
Our taste is whet, our taste is wonn;
Our taste is wretched, wretched, so soon
Cast tristesse little, wry and chill.
For feathers by the daintiest down.

An dust, in no grass thing gives room,
In; only for the piercing grass;
The slender-stemmed, the violet, pass,
The creased early clover-blown,
And—all the tiny flowers and grass.

We were too still to track the sprout,
But pressed our ears upon a sound;
Of waters quickening underground;
And if a bark shrank out his whiz,
That shadow on your cheek I found.

The morning like a rose began,
Dewy and drawy grows the day;
Its peace will fill the heart away;
Whose taste is taste is taste is taste is taste
Within a bair's call all the day.

WEALTH IN WARFARE

ON THIS page today is published an open letter from George F. Hibberd of Buhl in which he expresses opposition to conscription of "men and dollars" as a national policy for the prosecution of war. The chief danger is that adoption of such a policy will fasten upon the American people the practice of conscription, according to the argument put forward by the correspondent.

The practice is already established as regards manpower. It was put into use in the late war just as quickly as the machinery could be set up to handle it. We may like it or loathe it, but conscription of manpower is established as a weapon of war. A great body of humanitarians is demanding that wealth be treated just the same as young human life.

Opposition to such a policy is widespread and deep-seated. For one thing, those opposed to the principle of conscription of manpower are ready to fight any extension of the application of the principle, whether it apply to wealth or anything else. On the other hand, there is a large body of thought that accepts and embraces the theory of sacredness of property. Human life may be, undoubtedly, more sacred than property, these opponents to conscription of wealth will grudgingly agree, but wealth must not be conscripted because the results would be ruinous, even if such conscription could be realized. Wealth can not successfully be conscripted, is their final argument.

The advocates of conscription of both wealth and manpower in time of war probably like conscription as little as any group, but they realize that the principle has been established, even in the United States, and they are convinced that to conscript wealth will have two highly important results: In the first place it will make for greater safety of the nation or nations adopting it; and the second place, it will make war so unpopular that wealth and the brains behind wealth will unite with the great mass of the common people to outlaw war. To outlaw war is the real purpose of those who would conscript wealth in time of war, and they act on the theory that just so long as wealth's position is relatively safe as compared to the lives of young men that selfishness will find a way to keep warfare alive. If every possibility of profit making is removed by war through conscription of wealth, then war will have been weaned from one of its chief fountains of nourishment.

"We read the statements of a lot of old fogies that a woman should enjoy personally preparing the food her husband eats. They are like a flock of wet hens. I doubt if my husband could eat food I prepare."—Vaughn de Leath, radio singer.

"I burst out laughing the other day when it was said of a certain man that he has devoted his life to his country—for he devoted his life to his country."—Ed Howe, Atchison, Kas., editor and writer.

IT SHOULD HELP BUSINESS

"The underlying structure of America's business is sound and there will be plenty of credit available for capital expansion provided the nation's credit system is not abused by excessive speculation" says a David Lawrence story dealing with the federal reserve board and its stand regarding the stock market.

It should be easy to see that point and to heartily approve the efforts of the reserve board to protect legitimate business and industry. That is the function of the federal reserve board and it is good to know that its actions have been effective.

Naturally there is some howling. The reserve board is criticised and one stock speculator classes Senators Cousins and Glass as "foolish buyers." Very well, but the Michigan senator is many times a millionaire and knows something about business. Senator Glass is a former secretary of the treasury and is one of the authors of the federal reserve act. Those men know what they are doing and it was time for them to become vocal. Excessive speculation was dangerous and involved dangers for the gamblers as well as others.

The reserve board and its supporters have not only rendered good service to the nation but they have helped save the speculators from their own folly. Had the board not taken hold of the situation affairs could have reached a stage where a real crash would have been inevitable sooner or later, with the gamblers in the role of chief sufferers. The stock market was being boosted beyond the limits of reason. Without knowing or caring anything about the intrinsic value of stocks people were blindly buying on the theory prices would go higher. There had to be a halt and it is a good thing to have it and get it over with. Legitimate business will be the gainer by the process.

PERILS OF SWIMMING

THE ARRIVAL of warm weather brings the swimming season closer to us; and this year, as formerly, there will be a long list of accidental deaths by drowning, in which the names of young boys will be in the majority.

Before the season begins, every city and town ought to resolve to cut this list down as greatly as possible. The dissemination of a few simple safety-first rules for the swimmers will help. Parents of active youngsters have an especial responsibility. If they can impress on their children, before the season opens, the need of using care and common-sense in the water, and can make the children see how serious the consequences of boyish foolishness at the bathing places can be, they will be doing much to reduce the total of summer bathing fatalities.

"Your first duty in life is toward yourself. So live that the man you ought to be may, in his time, be possible, actual!"—David Starr Jordan.

CONSCRIPTION

TO THE EDITOR:

You know the editor who has said so many things, and done so many things, in his editorials? In the matter of life, comes next to a yes upon the proposed conscription of men and dollars! And the point to how nearly conscription is coming is that it is so far from the spirit of American tradition, so far from the spirit of the people, that it will be hard to be believed, and they should remember, especially in this case, that it is now many months since our department of war divided our country into seven military districts, each with a chief supply officer, and many months have passed since contracts were signed with individual corporations for the furnishing, in case of war, all supplies; contracts to become operative upon the date of declaration of war. AND THE GOVERNMENT HAS NO MONEY TO SPEND ON CONSCRIPTIONS A REASONABLE PROFIT.

They are not few who see in these contracts, not too widely written, who in the press of the land, themselves a voice to follow toward war. It is to the contrary, terrible to remember, that in the war as in other wars, there were those who would profit in dollars from the blood and tears and anguish. A U. S. Senate investigation showing that coal-companies alone profited 300, 500, even up to 1,000 per cent on the price of coal.

Let those who would favor equal justice between man and man in case of threat of war, stand for:

1. A yes and no to war;
2. These conscripted that when raised war;
3. These conscripted that when raised war;
4. These conscripted that when raised war;

With our census and postal departments, one week ago, we know whether wealth would be first, next there would be the burning thereof, the death, the insanity, and annihilation.

We would plead, Mr. Editor, let us do nothing that would lead to general policy of our American.

A few days ago, there was totaled up 3,232,204 votes for the Labor party in England; a year ago last month, there was totaled in Germany, 9,400,000 votes for the Socialists and Liberal parties. This is now the world, is such a force for peace that it may make any conscription we, here, may adopt, ridiculous before the world.

Respectfully yours,
George F. Hibberd

Gooding Discusses Oiling of Streets

GOODING, June 19 (Special)—The city council of Gooding called a meeting of the property owners on both sides of Main St. from 6th Avenue to the N. S. L. bridge on the north side, to discuss the question of oiling main street between those points. Quite a large number of the property owners were represented and many discussed the pros and cons of the question. The meeting was presided over by Mayor A. F. James, who explained the proposition, and gave his observations on the street oiling question. After the discussion, members of the board went recently on an inspection trip. It was decided by a vote of those present that the proposed "sooty" oiling would be the best. It costs 25 cents a gallon and that the cost for that part of work should not exceed $35 per lot. And the city will oil all the street out of the general funds of the city.

BIL FOSTER.

The Post Specialist will be in Gooding every Sunday in June, at the California Hotel, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Many fine lubricants
even the costliest oils have this fault:
They form hard, flinty carbon

DEPOSITED in layers inside your motor, flinty carbon causes knocking. Abrasive bits drop off, grind into working parts of the engine. Flakes hold valves open, waste power, burn valve-stems. Even a small quantity of hard carbon causes serious trouble in a modern motor.

All oils form some carbon when they burn. But there is a vast difference in both the amount of carbon and the kind.

And in one particular oil the carbon problem has been overcome to an amazing degree.

Less carbon—soft carbon

from this finer lubricant

Shell Motor Oil actually forms less than $\frac{1}{2}$ the carbon you'd get from the costliest oil! And what little it does form is soft, sooty—most of it blows away through the exhaust.

Create new vacuum stills at Shell refineries produce this remarkable new oil, keep all its sturdy body intact.

Shell Motor Oil will withstand heat enough to ruin ordinary oil. It is a finer, finer lubricant under every driving condition.

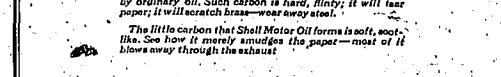

And it also saves you the damaging effects of hard, carbon—literally adds thousands of miles to the life of your car! Refill with Shell Motor Oil; buy it always when you need an extra quart.

Today's high-compression motors have as little as $1/32$ inch clearance between cylinder head and pistons. Even a thin layer of carbon causes trouble. Shell Motor Oil, formed of the finest quality oil, is almost an essential to proper performance of such motors.

Under the finger at the left are carbon scarpings deposited by ordinary oils. Such carbon is hard, flinty; it will tear paper, rip clothes, tear away steel.

The little pile of Shell Motor Oil forms a soft, waxy mass—it will not damage paper, cloth, or metal.

See how it melts—like butter! The paper—most of it blows away through the exhaust.

SHELL MOTOR OIL

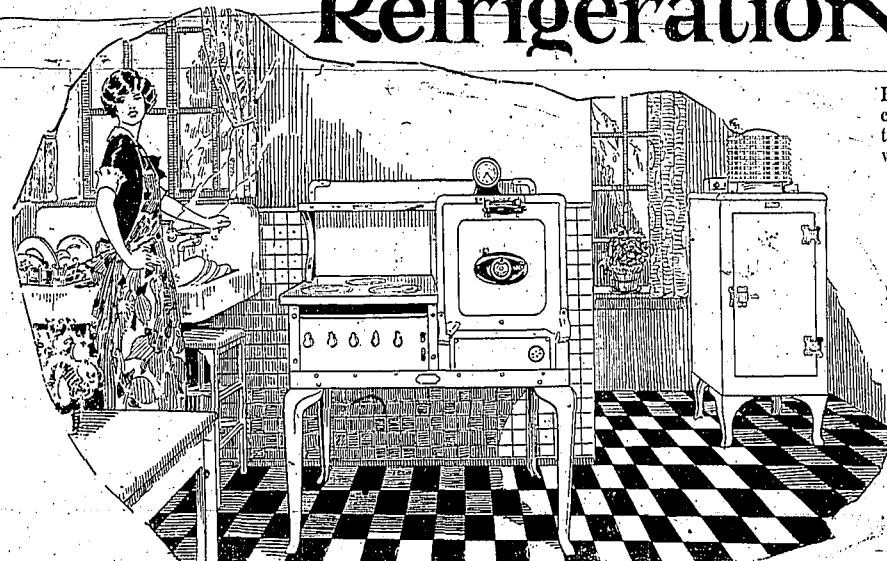

Shell 400, the "dry" gas that explodes cleanly and keeps out of the crankcase, is the ideal running mate for Shell Motor Oil. Even Shell Motor Oil can be ruined by "thinning" with a "wet" gas.
