Boycott Drives Italy To American Nations As Raw Goods Source

Geneva Satisfied With Operation Of Sanctions; Fascists Within 250 Miles Of Addis Ababa

(By The Associated Press)

Italy may drop trade plumb into the laps of American nations because league sanctions are driving her to new markets, it was hinted authoritatively in Rome Wednesday.

In this connection, informed sources said Italian business leaders are eager to revive a trade mission to the United States.

Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, warned sanctionists they may expect Rome to look to "the vast raw material resources" of North and South America for commerce, adding that Italy will remember her friends.

The editorial said the United States refused to declare an oil embargo against Italy because of resentment against Great Britain's "imperial intemperance" in the current crisis.

"Deserters" Boycotted

In Geneva, a committee of experts said most League members are applying sanctions satisfactorily against Italy and that the so-called "deserter states," Austria-Hungary and Albania, are being subjected to boycott by powers enforcing sanctions.

Rome reported "nothing of note" on the war front but a delayed dispatch from the southern fascist army told that it had gone 50 miles farther inland to take Dararu in a dawn attack.

Wadara is only about 250 air miles south of Addis Ababa but recent Rome dispatches indicated the Italian "hell on wheels" column would head for Harar, more than 300 miles to the northwest, rather than toward the capital.

In Dawn Attack

WITH THE ITALIAN SOUTHERN ARMY AT COLO, Jan. 26 (Via Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland, Jan. 29)—Italy's hard driving campaigners have pressed 50 miles farther inland to take Wadara in a dawn attack.

This post, around which Ras Desta Demtu, the Ethiopian commander, had prepared for a last stand in the event of the capture of Neghelli, is 50 miles north of Neghelli, taken last week.

(Wadara is but approximately 250 statute miles almost due south of Addis Ababa and a bombing fleet rain lies between them. Rome dispatches yesterday said the Fascist southern army had swung east from Neghelli toward Harar, Ethiopia's second largest city, more than 300 miles northeast of Neghelli.)

Move Overnight

General Bergonoli's troops moved overnight from Neghelli to take Wadara. The attack took about 50 Ethiopian lives.

SEATTLE SKIER'S BODY DISCOVERED

Airplane Searchers Find Missing Man Dead on Mount Rainier

SEATTLE, Jan. 29 (AP) — The body of Delmar Fadden, 23, Seattle skier, missing since January 13, was found late today at the 13,000 foot elevation on Mount Rainier.

The body was sighted from an airplane by Ome Daiber, Seattle mountaineer, who last week led volunteer searchers afoot above the 10,000-foot level and found some of the missing young man's belongings.

Mount Rainier is 14,408 feet high.

Elliot Merrill, aviation instructor at Boeing field, piloted the plane from which the body was sighted. He was flying, with Daiber as a guide, so Charles Laidlaw, aerial photographer, could map the mountain peak with a telescopic lens in hopes inspection of the photographs

SPEAKER ATTACKS 'NEW DEAL PARTY'

Colonel Frank Knox Declares American People Face Serious Situation

CLEVELAND, Jan. 29 (AP) — Colonel Frank Knox, prominently mentioned as a Republican candidate for president, asserted tonight the American people would decide in the November election between "becoming vassals to a dictator in the guise of a democratic president or remaining free citizens of a free republic."

The Chicago publisher, in a speech prepared for delivery before a McKinley day dinner of the Cleveland Tippecanoe club, at which 1200 Republicans from northern Ohio were served, drew sharp distinction between what he termed a "socialistic new deal party" and the Democratic party.

He described the supreme court as "the one remaining American body in Washington."

Vassals Or Citizens

"In the months intervening between now and the national elections in November," Knox said, "the American people will have to decide for themselves between becoming vassals to a dictator in the guise of a Democratic president or remaining free citizens of a free republic.

"There is no middle ground. There is no other choice. We shall continue as a free nation or we shall become a nation with government in complete control of people's daily lives, their savings, and of their occupations.

"It cannot be otherwise. A coercive system cannot be grafted upon a voluntary system. We saw that in the NRA. We saw it again in the AAA. We have seen, too, how the supreme court—the one remaining American body in Washington—threw out these acts as unconstitutional."

Knox said the nation is facing something that is not an American form of government.

Stolen Cloak

"The American people have not faced so serious a situation since the days of the Civil war," he said.

Landon Charges Waste With Mismanagement

Kansas Governor Declares Country Needs 'Better Housekeeping'

(By The Associated Press)

TOPEKA, Kas., Jan. 29—Governor Alf M. Landon, asserting new deal mismanagement and waste are "delaying the return of prosperity," said tonight what the country "really needs is better housekeeping."

Outlining his views on national problems for the first time since mention of his name as a Republican presidential possibility, the man hailed by his proponents as the "Kansas budget-balancer" declared:

"The clinching proof of the new deal's failure is that almost as many persons are out of work today as there were when it first set up shop in 1933. * * * A nation will survive to correct its political mistakes. But if an unsound financial program is coupled with them, the nation faces destruction."

Confined to Issues

Governor Landon addressed a banquet climaxing the annual Kansas day celebration — this year the Diamond anniversary of Kansas' admission to the union. The speech was broadcast on a national network.

His prepared address confined itself strictly to national problems without reference to personalities or candidates for 1936.

Governor Landon warned of "powerful forces trying to convince our people that the constitution is not their charter of human liberties" and charged the works progress administration was "organized so that relief might be handled in familiar pork-barrel fashion."

The governor emphasized a belief that Republicans "should go into the campaign prepared to be as fair in conceding the good points of the opposition as we are courageous to point out what we consider the errors.

Creates New Problems

"But," he said, " * * * The administration has presented no permanent solution of our major problems. On the contrary it has created many new problems and its gross over-centralization of power reflects either ignorance or indifference in regard to our federal system of government. All this in my judgment is actually delaying the return of prosperity.

"Unfortunately, now as always there are people today calling themselves liberal who regard any suggestion of economy as reactionary. They seem to think wil-

F. D. R. CALLS FOR MONEY FOR BONUS

President Asks Congress for $2,249,178,375 Appropriation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt tonight fired back at a congress which had insisted on paying the bonus a request for $2,249,178,375 appropriation to meet the bill.

Without mentioning the subject of possible tax increases to provide funds, Mr. Roosevelt wrote Speaker Byrns that the veterans bureau had estimated $2,237,000,000 would be needed for actually cashing the bonus, with the remainder for administrative expense.

Meanwhile, veterans reported commercial interests were already competing for a share of the money to be distributed. The American Legion warned its members against pledging their bonds in advance, while New York brokers offered $40 immediate cash for each $50 bond.

Thrifty Veterans

Some business houses, too, were seeking lists of veterans and their addresses.

The capital wondered whether significence could be attached to the absence of any recommendation for new taxes in the president's letter to Speaker Byrns. At any rate, it appeared likely that for the present at least the money for administrative and other purposes would be raised in the usual way.

The bonus payment bill enacted Monday over Mr. Roosevelt's veto merely "authorized" payment, a usual course of procedure. Separate action is necessary to make the actual money available.

So late in the day was the president's letter sent that Speaker Byrns was at home when it arrived and publication of the text was delayed until tomorrow.

Walkout Seen As Evidence New Dealers 'Can't Take It'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP) — A Republican storm of protest and derision today followed the administration-approved walkout of two naval officers, a marine officer and the marine band on the women's patriotic conference on national defense.

First, Republican Leader Snell lashed at the withdrawal on the house floor. Then Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican national committee issued a sarcastically critical statement at the action as meaning that when New Dealers are criticized "they simply can't take it."

The cancellation of speeches by the officers, and the last-minute withdrawal of the marine band without playing a note was directly linked with an address delivered before the women's conference by Bainbridge Colby, former secretary of state. Colby charged the administration with "conspiracy to nullify the constitution."

After referring to the withdrawal of the officers as "typical of the attitude of the New Deal to criticism," Fletcher added:

"This boycott was followed up by an even more petty show of spite against the women patriots. Just as the marine band was ready to open the meeting last evening orders came from on high for the band to withdraw, and withdraw they did.

"So this is America.

"Perhaps the marine band will next be ordered not to play 'My country, 'tis of thee.' It might be regarded as a criticism of the New Deal."

Snell's criticism on the house floor followed only a few minutes after Secretary Swanson at a navy department press conference expressed full approval of the officers' cancellation as proper resentment against an attack on their commander-in-chief.

"Is this a forerunner of what Mr. Farley has said would be the dirtiest campaign in history?" demanded Snell.

"It certainly looks like it. To me this smacks of something un-American.

Five Fugitives Land In Officers' Hands

ST. ANTHONY, Idaho, Jan. 29 (AP). Freezing weather foiled the attempt of five inmates of the state industrial school here to escape.

Two of the shivering, thinly clad boys were found in a barn. They had taken their shoes off to warm their feet. Swelling made it impossible to put the shoes on again.

The third fugitive was picked up as he was headed south along the Yellowstone Park highway.

The fourth was apprehended when he entered a local hotel lobby to get warm.

The fifth sought shelter in the automobile of a deputy sheriff. The officer arrested him when he returned to the car.

Miller Fires Questions At Van Vlack's Witnesses As Defense Stresses Insanity

Frequent Clashes Between Attorneys And Relentless Cross Examination Mark Tacoman's Murder Trial

Teats Refers to Slaying of Officers

Testimony of specialist and layman that Douglas Van Vlack is insane was offered yesterday by his attorneys in his trial for the murder of his former wife, Mildred Hook.

Their testimony was marked by frequent clashes between attorneys and a relentless cross examination by Attorney General Bert H. Miller that proved amusing to the spectators and the jury.

They had a different reaction on the black haired young defendant. He wiped his eyes with a handkerchief on occasion.

Dr. S. S. Jones of Tacoma, the first specialist called by the defense, expressed the belief that Van Vlack is insane and has been for about a year.

Progressive Insanity

He described a type of insanity which he said becomes worse until its victim is "no longer fit for society." This disease, he said, is hereditary in 80 to 90 per cent of cases and may reappear after two or three generations.

Dr. Jones' testimony was interrupted by a state objection when Attorney Leo Teats for the defense asked him: "What would you say as to Van Vlack's mental condition when he shot the officers?"

The reference was to the slaying of State Traffic Officer Fontaine Cooper and Deputy Sheriff Henry C. Givens when they halted Van Vlack's car after his flight from Tacoma with his former wife. In questioning jurors, defense attorneys were insistent that these killings should not influence the verdict in the present case.

Prosecutors Adamant

When the state pressed its objection that proper foundation had not been laid for the question, Teats pleaded that Dr. Jones needed to hurry back to care for his patients. The prosecutors were adamant, however, and the witness was not recalled to the stand after a recess.

From another defense witness, Harold Myers of San Francisco, the attorney general wrung a concession that Van Vlack "appeared to know right from wrong."

The jurors found Myers' inability to remember details under Miller's relentless cross examination amusing. Some of them laughed and shook their heads.

"Hard to Get Acquainted"

Fred Thiel, proprietor of a Tacoma confectionery store where he said "the kids met," testified he had known the defendant eight years but not very well because "he was hard to get acquainted with."

He testified Van Vlack's reputation was "good" and became sarcastic when Attorney General Miller sought to press the point and demanded who the witness heard express that opinion.

"Perhaps I should have brought my directory down," Thiel retorted. The attorney general leaned back in his squeaky chair and smiled.

Attorney Teats gave the court room spectators a laugh when he challenged a witness by the attorney general about whether the witness had been instructed as to his testimony.

"Aw, I never even thought about that," Miller drawled, and the crowd broke into hearty guffaws.

"Need Lots of Help"

Thiel said he met Teats on the golf course and the attorney asked him to come here to testify.

"We need lots of help," he quoted Teats as saying.

Later, Carl Van Vlack, father of the defendant, also asked him to testify, Thiel said.

Stanley Elliott, assistant prosecutor of Pierce county, Washington, testified about issuance of the warrant charging Van Vlack with abduction of his former wife. He said it was issued after he had received appeals from the young woman's attorney, from Wesley Lloyd, late congressman from Washington, and from Joseph F. Hook, her father.

Disclaims Pressure

He denied, in response to a question from Teats, that the congressman had been abusive and brought pressure to bear to obtain the warrant.

RALLY ENDORSES TALMADGE'S FIGHT

Georgia Governor Invited to Seek Nomination for President

MACON, Ga., Jan. 29 (AP)—Governor Eugene Talmadge, persistent foe of the new deal, was invited to become a presidential candidate today by Democrats dissatisfied with the Roosevelt administration at a "grass roots rally here.

Permission was asked of the Georgia executive to enter his name in presidential preferential primaries after the meeting adopted a platform calling for defeat of Mr. Roosevelt and demanding that the constitution be upheld.

The platform also "reaffirmed" planks in the "unfilled" 1932 Democratic national platform.

Vociferous Demonstration

The audience, composed chiefly of Georgians, greeted with a vociferous demonstration the invitation to Talmadge. In the partly filled city auditorium was a sprinkling of representatives from the 17 southern and border states asked to send delegates.

The governor, who had just finished a speech predicting "this crazy administration in Washington is going to end soon," declined to comment.

Recently he said in Washington he would enter a preferential primary in Georgia, provided the state Democratic executive committee decides upon that method of selecting delegates to the national convention.

The Talmadge-controlled committee has not yet acted. It may call a primary or name delegates, either instructed or uninstructed.

Crystalize Opposition

The rally was called by Talmadge and John Henry Kirby, wealthy Houston, Texas, lumber man and chairman of the southern committee to uphold the constitution, who said its purpose was to crystalize opposition to the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt.

E. C. Vandergriff, manager of Macon's million dollar auditorium, a crowd of about 2,400 only half filled the auditorium.

In characteristic fashion, Talmadge and his audience talked to each other.

Sometimes they shouted "pour it on 'em, Gene." Once some one cried "send them to the chain gang," when Talmadge charged the president had kept NRA employes on the payrolls nine months after the NRA was killed by the supreme court.

Although he had prepared a text of his speech, Talmadge departed from it frequently, as his audience urged him on.

He urged protection of states' rights, and said the south should lead the fight for them.

Counts Against New Deal

The new deal was assailed for "trying to ram legislation down the throats of our legislatures," and Talmadge called Secretary Ickes "a renegade Republican," Ickes recently referred to Talmadge as "this clown, being excellency."

The Roosevelt administration, the governor said, "under boondoggling logic decided to create a scarcity to

Federal Government Shifts Undiminished Relief Load

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP)—A dozen Democratic senators were informed at a private conference with Harry L. Hopkins today that almost as many persons are on the dole of work relief as a year ago.

The relief population reached an all-time peak of more than 20,000,000 last January, and Hopkins was reported to have said today that while there had been a "slight" improvement, the relief load was about the same now.

About 1,000,000 "unemployable" heads of families, however, now are being supported by state and local governments rather than through federal relief.

Secretary Morgenthau recently told the senate finance committee that possibly $2,000,000,000 would be asked by the administration for the next fiscal year's relief program.

Another subject discussed at the conference was the requirement that 90 per cent of those given work relief jobs be taken from direct relief rolls.

Some of the senators were said to have told Hopkins of complaints that persons in need who had been on the dole were being barred from WPA, but the majority was reported to have agreed with the WPA administrator that it was better to continue the rule.

NORTHWEST FEELS ICY BLASTS FROM CANADIAN REGIONS

Mercury Plunges to Sub-Zero Marks; Idaho Falls Holds Record With Reading of 23 Degrees Below

(By The Associated Press)

SPOKANE, Jan. 29—Canada's icy high pressure area moved to the northwest today, sending thermometers plummeting below zero to record cold marks for the year.

The hitherto moderate north Pacific coast area, from the Rockies in Montana to the ocean shore, south to Utah and Oregon felt the freezing cold. Much of the inland northwest country was covered with a snow blanket which protected winter wheat.

Highways were icy and dangerous, but no fatal accidents were reported to be due to the temperature drop. Likewise no other cold fatalities were reported.

Predicts Fair and Cold

The snap is due directly to the movement of the high pressure area that has held southwestern Canada in a grip of cold to the northwest, said E. M. Keyser, U. S. meteorologist here. He predicted "fair and continued cold" at least for two or three days.

Idaho Falls, in southeastern Idaho, was the icebox of the region with a temperature recording of 23 below zero. Nearby Blackfoot reported 17 below. Missoula, Montana, reported 4 below, Kalispell, Montana, zero.

TOWNSEND STRIKES BACK AT IDAHOAN

Author of Pension Plan Claims Senator Borah Reversed Stand

LONG BEACH, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP)—Dr. Francis E. Townsend indicated today that any possibility $200 old age pension plan advocates would back U. S. Senator William E. Borah for president has gone glimmering.

Dr. Townsend, who proposes payment of $200 monthly to persons over 60 years of age, roundly criticized the senator for a Brooklyn speech last night. Borah expressed favor of pensions of only $30 or $60 a month and calling the Townsend plan impractical. Dr. Townsend said Senator Borah is an "opportunist" and is "committing political suicide."

Only yesterday, Dr. Townsend asserted if the Idaho senator would "say publicly what he has said privately, Townsend forces would elect him president with the balance of power they claim to hold between the two major parties.

Claims Attitude Reversed

Today, however, the 67-year-old retired physician accused Senator Borah of reversing his attitude.

"Why," he said, "Borah in Washington told me 'You have the only practicable plan that has ever been proposed for the equitable distribution of wealth.' He may deny it now, but that's what he said.

"This eleventh-hour change isn't going to do him any good. People aren't going to vote for a man who hasn't definite ideas.

"Wishy-washy men are not going to get any place.

"Senator Borah is always indecisive and his remarks last night were characteristic of him. He is an opportunist. When millions are in dire distress, no man should criticise a relief plan unless he has something better to offer."

Travel-Advised As Panacea For War

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP)—If all the people traveled at least part of the time, said globe-trotting Claudia Cranston today, there would be no more war.

Her personal panacea for the belligerent spirit would be for every one to see and live for awhile in some country other than his own.

"It's the provincial, the stay-at-home, who always wants to fight," said Miss Cranston, a writer, who has flown 25,000 miles, climbed a glacier, and shot an alligator in the Amazon river.

N.Y. CENTER OF FIGHT FOR BORAH

Idahoan to Return to City for Final Rally After Another Speech

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP) — A bitter end struggle for delegates in the Republican national convention stared up in New York state tonight as the aftermath to Senator William E. Borah's address here calling upon "rank and file" party support.

Senator Borah's first eastern appearance as a Republican presidential possibility will be followed by two other campaign appearances, it was learned, to drive deeper the wedge between party factions demanding, on the one side, an uninstructed delegation, and on the other delegates pledged to Borah.

At some future date he is to speak in upstate New York—probably Rochester, Syracuse or Buffalo—and following that is to return to New York City for a final mass rally in Madison Square Garden.

New York Battleground

This program, and Borah's denouncement of "back room" manipulations in determination of a presidential nominee, led many Republicans of both "progressive" and "old guard" allegiance to predict freely that New York state would be made the campaign battle ground on which the issue of uninstructed delegations would be fought out.

The regular state Republican organization solidly supporting a policy of sending uninstructed delegates to Cleveland, professed to believe that a pre-convention fight for delegates would fail to give Borah even a single delegate from Brooklyn, in which the Borah-for-president supporters are laying the groundwork of their campaign.

The "progressive" Republican faction—led by W. Kingsland Macy, former state chairman, and William Ziegler, jr., wealthy leader of the Borah presidential committee—has announced its intention of placing a slate of Borah candidates in the April primaries to oppose all delegates declaring for an uninstructed delegation.

Outlines Procedure

The call was sent out tonight by Ziegler in a statement saying:

"Those interested in following the unsuccessful primary leadership in breaking up secret manipulation and selection can rally around his standard and should present candidates for delegates in each of the 45 congressional districts in New York state so that the party voters favoring Senator Borah may find the proper expression at the polls."

"The Republican party has in Senator Borah," Ziegler declared, "a leader who will carry the campaign to the people, thus making sure that the candidate for the party is selected by the people and not by special influences and special groups.

"Those who heard him must agree that the energy of his voice, the determination of his purpose and the clearness of his thrust will be determining factors in the selection of the candidate to be chosen next June."

While Borah passed over, "for the present," any specific pronouncement relative to his candidacy, Republican "progressives" accepted his appearance as a clear announcement, and as consent for a campaign to win delegates.

Temperatures Drop In Mountain States

High pressure central over Idaho has brought northerly winds and lower temperatures to the northern Rockies states and to Utah and Nevada. Traces of snow are reported from scattered points in Montana, and snow has persisted at Lucatello, in a restricted area, Elsewhere in the region covered by the high, skies are clear.

An area of active rainfall is present over southern California and in Arizona, produced by two low pressure centers—one over southern California, and the other over northeastern Arizona.

Near-zero temperatures continue in the central states, with unsettled conditions in scattered places.

Temperatures are slightly higher in the east.

SPEAKER ATTACKS 'NEW DEAL PARTY'

Washington has stolen the cloak of the Democratic party under which to hide its own socialistic skeleton.

"Real members of the Democratic party—statesmen as stated Smith and John W. Davis, each on different occasions the presidential nominee of the Democratic party—know it.

"As head of the New Deal party, Mr. Roosevelt will make a lot of promises to the American people in this year of 1936—just as, in 1932, he made a lot of promises to them as head of the Democratic party.

He accused the president of having caused to be written into law, wholly or in part, the twelve principles of the socialist platform which largely disregarding the pledges of his own party.

"But this year he will make his promises in the name of the Democratic party," Knox declared.

He recognizes it as a good vote-catching scheme."

Out After Remains

He assailed New Dealers who, "having stolen the birthright of the Democratic party, are out to take what remains—the heritage of the American people and their right to govern themselves."

New Dealers know, he said, that if they can discredit the supreme court they will bring down "the keystone in the arch of a Democratic form of government and, by so doing, undermine what can not be directly overthrown, to use a popular communist phrase."

The publisher asserted "the New Deal has lost its bloom."

"The American people, in disillusionment, have become all too familiar with the quintuplets that have been begotten in their midst, the quintuplets of broken promises, wasteful spending of the people's money—high cost of living—unsound money—and the centralization of power in Washington."

Do Something

Knox urged business men to "stop complaining and do something about it."

"This is no plum battle these new dealers are putting up," he declared. "The prize they covet is to run American affairs to suit themselves, and this means putting an end to our system of free enterprise and capitalism, all the wealth it has created for the people. They are out to win. Make no mistake about that."

The speaker said the president laid the groundwork for a case against business in his last message to congress, "on the state of the nation."

"His little helpers in the 'brain trust' are doing all they can to assist him. Their method is crude against business must be quite a lark, an adventure into the unknown, as it were, judging by the unbalanced sheets of the so-called 1937 budget that was submitted to the congress."

Quoting from Abraham Lincoln, Knox concluded:

"To business men specifically, may I urge that you do not surrender a political power already possessed, and which, if surrendered, will close the door of advancement . . . till all of liberty shall be lost."

NEW DEAL ASSAILED IN MANY QUARTERS

Challenges of Roosevelt Policies Threaten Big Break in Lines

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP)—Alfred E. Smith, Talmadge Democrats in the south and leaders for the Republican presidential nomination slided together tonight in the viewpoint that the new deal is unsound and un-American.

Their challenges of Roosevelt policies, if followed through in the campaign, presented the possibility of an unprecedented breakdown in party lines.

With the administration repeatedly inviting bi-partisan support for its principles at issue, the situation approached a focus in the political turmoil set off by Smith's Liberty league speech.

Leaders Uncertain

Veterans at the capitol were uncertain about what to expect. While Democrats meeting at Macon tonight heard Governor Talmadge of Georgia echoed Smith's charge of radicalism against the White House, it was noted that Senator Borah of Idaho, last night arraigned the Republican leadership as reactionary.

Control of the party organization carries so many advantages that an overthrow of either appeared unlikely at this time. If efforts to that end are frustrated, a question would remain as to the degree the losers in convention might refuse support of the ticket.

Democratic spokesmen have conceded their convention will not be all "milk and honey." Now some outstanding Republicans are showing concern lest the scramble for pledged delegations might leave costly scars.

Out in the Open

Before hearing Governor Landon of Kansas at Topeka tonight, the Kansas State Republican committee put him out in the open as a candidate for nomination. He did not declare himself, however.

Views similar to Smith's were expressed, but with more reserve, in saying the issue would be "far deeper" than a choice between parties because democratic institutions were at stake.

Former President Hoover contends the same. He will probably elaborate in a Lincoln birthday speech, February 12. The previous day will find Talmadge and Secretary Ickes on the same platform in Illinois.

Colonel Frank Knox of Illinois, another outstanding Republican possibility, agreed with Smith at Cleveland tonight that "the new deal has stolen the cloak of the Democratic party under which to hide its own socialistic skeleton."

"Roosevelt has retaliated control of the radical element," Knox commented, "but he has completely lost the conservative element. A catastrophic division exists in his party that will be fatal to success in November."

Contest in Ohio

Some Ohio Republicans were looking forward to a contest for Borah delegates there, despite the favor of others for an uninstructed delegation. The Idahoan said here he doubted whether to permit his name to be entered would be made "in a week or so."

In deciding the reply to him by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Smith spoke again in New York today of putting "country above party."

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, keynoter at the convention that nominated Roosevelt, commented tonight that "for every one that walks out with Smith, four will come in through other doors."

Barkley takes issue with Smith on the point that Republican independents like himself in the west would more than make up for any Democratic defections due to Smith.

PIONEER RESIDENT OF BUHL SUMMONED

Fred Nihart, 82, Publisher, Minister, Teacher and Politician Dies

BUHL, Jan. 29.—Fred Nihart, 82 minister, newspaper publisher, school teacher and politician, died at his home here at 10:15 o'clock this evening. He was a pioneer resident of Buhl, having come here in 1906.

He was born in Union, Center county, Pennsylvania, October 18, 1853, and for 21 years was a school teacher in five states, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, Nebraska and South Dakota. Forty-four years ago he was editor of a newspaper in Orangeville, Illinois, and later edited a paper at Grand Island, Nebraska.

He soon came west, however, and settled in Tremonton, Utah, founding the Tremonton Tribune. In 1906 he came to Buhl to make his home. In 1911 he was elected to the Idaho state legislature from Twin Falls county and in 1912 he was reelected, sponsoring the bill that paved the way for construction of the Clear Lakes bridge across the Snake river north of here.

Honored at Ceremony

As a tribute to his service to the state and the community he was honored at a ceremonial at Clear Lakes on December 30, 1935, less than a month before his death. Clear Lake's spring was declared and a bronze plaque was dedicated in his honor.

He was an ordained minister and for several years was pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Grace, Idaho. He was a member of the Buhl Masonic lodge and of El Korah temple of the Shrine at Boise.

He was preceded in death by his wife several years ago. He is survived by a brother, James L. Nihart of Homedale; a sister, Miss Annie Nihart of Buhl, and three sons, A. H. Nihart of Portland, Sam Nihart of Nampa and Melvin Nihart of Castleford.

The body rests at Life Evans and Johnson funeral home pending funeral arrangements.

REMOVE WALLACE, SENATOR DEMANDS

press conference with the observation that "it looks like I'm in danger." Wallace disclosed that, under the new farm program, the administration hoped to remove 30,000,000 acres from intensive cultivation.

The agriculture secretary also said that if the new legislation were enacted within 30 days, he believed an effective production control program could be placed in operation for 1936 crops.

Plan Tax Recovery

Wallace declared agriculture department experts were working, as well as treasury and justice department officials, on a plan to recover for the government $200,000,000 in AAA processing taxes ordered refunded to processors by the supreme court in its Rice millers' decision, but said agreement had not yet been reached on procedure.

It was his reference to the refund of those taxes as "the greatest legalized steal in history" that aroused Treadway's ire today.

"The president ought to begin cleaning out the cabinet from Wallace up or down," the Massachusetts representative declared amid Republican applause.

He asserted Wallace should "take a sprint from the cabinet, a walk would be too slow." Democratic representatives made no immediate reply.

Passage Predicted

The proposed legislation embodying the two-year soil conservation plan, and paving the way for federal-state cooperation for farm aid came out of committee without material change, with its sponsors predicting passage but with some members opposing it outright.

Senators McNary, or Oregon, the Republican leader, and Norbeck (R-SD) voted against the report, while Senator Capper (R-Kas) joined Chairman Smith in voting only for reporting it, but not for a "favorable" report.

Senator McNary said:

"I think the bill comes within the prohibitory language of the supreme court. It is not devised to do anything. There is no appropriation and no method of paying benefits. It is not complete in any regard and I don't expect any results from it."

charging a criminal attack against his former wife. When she learned the penalty was five to 20 years in prison, she asked for a peace order instead, he testified.

State Takes Charge

On cross examination, the state took matters into its own hands and produced Elliott's records as evidence, submitting copies of complaints which Mildred filed against Van Vlack.

Elliot said when Van Vlack talked to him about the attack charge, "he was very calm and deliberate."

Tests questioned the witness and asked if he wanted to ascertain if the complaints "showed the true facts."

Assistant Attorney General Taylor cut in with "If you're showing true facts."

Tests claimed Van Vlack and Mildred "had resumed marital relations" and therefore she could not get her final divorce decree.

Judge Adam B. Barclay ruled that Tests was not error and that the complaints charged Van Vlack with an attack, which did not constitute resumption of marital relations.

Nurse Sees 'Sweethearts'

Mrs. Alice Eckersley of Tacoma, a practical nurse, took the stand and her engagement with the attorney general on cross examination provided the highlight of the day's session.

Tests established the fact that Mrs. Eckersley, who took her patient to a Tacoma park for air frequently, had seen Van Vlack often with a woman. She said the couple would remain on a bench for some time and "appeared to be sweethearts."

The defense intended to prove the woman was Mildred and that she had kept company with Van Vlack in spite of her interlocutory divorce decree.

She saw them last about 10 days before "the tragedy," she claimed.

From the beginning, Miller confused the witness to such an extent she frequently had to stop her recitation.

Miller asked her who talked to her about the case before she came to Twin Falls.

She at first said no one and then admitted a fireman asked her if she would testify. Tests objected and stated that she had seen Mildred and Van Vlack in the park on many occasions.

Merciless Grilling

Miller began his merciless grilling to prove that the witness could not now positively identify the girl as being Mildred.

"Did the fireman tell you what the names of the couple were," he began.

"No."

She reversed her testimony a moment later and said she had been told Mildred's name. She said she saw their names in the paper.

Miller again asked the witness if anyone had instructed her as to what her testimony would be.

"No, sir. Nobody told me to tell anything but the truth."

"You think you're telling the truth?" he snapped at her.

"Yes, sir."

Mrs. Eckersley testified she saw the couple frequently "because we had to pass right in front of them."

Witness Waivers

"That gave you a magnificent opportunity to see their faces?"

Miller kept doggedly at the witness, seeking to gain his point.

She finally admitted she "positively recognized Van Vlack as the man."

"Can you say positively that the girl was Mildred?" the attorney general boomed at her.

"I feel it in my mind it was her."

"What you feel in your mind is not answering my question. Can you say positively that the girl was Mildred?"

The witness began to waver in her testimony and admitted she would not swear to it.

"You want to convey that you're positive the girl was Mildred, but you won't say she was positively," Miller exclaimed.

He rested and allowed Tests to again take the witness.

Tests produced pictures of Mildred and attempted to show them to Mrs. Eckersley for identification.

Tilt Over Pictures

Before he had a chance, Taylor rose to his feet and vehemently objected to it. He contended allowing the witness to see the pictures would be a cause of "associated prejudice" by "place in her mind a knowledge in the witness' mind that she does not have now—that Mildred was positively the girl in the park."

He expounded further reasons for withholding the pictures and finally shouted to the judge that their admission would be "assault and battery upon the sensibilities of this witness."

Tests entered the argument and asked the judge to censor Taylor for his statement. A recess was called.

The pictures were finally shown to the witness and Miller asked her if the girl was Mildred.

Mrs. Eckersley did not say but began telling what she thought. Miller cut her conversation and said "Please answer yes or no, witness. I insist on it."

"Do you say positively the girl is Mildred?"

"I can't positively say yes or no." "You can't say yes, and you can't say no?"

"No."

That's All

Accepts Defeat

The defense accepted its defeat on the point and refused to question further.

Mrs. Ray J. Bennett of Cortland, New York, sister of Mrs. Van Vlack, was the last witness and testified as to insanity in her family, recalling that her grandmother, a cousin, and a cousin of her grandfather were insane.

A certificate intended to show the grandfather's cousin had been confined to an asylum was offered as evidence but upon examination by Miller and Taylor, it was objected to. Judge Barclay dismissed court and said he would examine the certificate in his chambers.

Observed for Years

Dr. Jones detailed testimony dealt with his observations of the defendant's actions. He said he had known Van Vlack since 1924 and he was a frequent visitor at the Van Vlack home. He had treated Van Vlack for "fish skin," he said.

Tests asked his opinion of the defendant.

"He was very morose and irritable," Dr. Jones said.

"Was it a gradual thing . . . it didn't happen all of a sudden. You have an opinion as to his condition?"

"I have."

"What is it?"

"I believe he is insane."

"How long have you thought so?"

"From my observations about a year."

Permanent Affliction

Dr. Jones claimed he had no observation of Van Vlack's memory until he came to Twin Falls.

"Is this type of insanity permanent or otherwise?"

"Permanent."

"Is the disease progressive?"

"To my knowledge it is."

"Describe the disease."

Dr. Jones hesitated, then told of the symptoms and nature of the disease.

Tests then addressed the physician and upon the basis of "assumption" told Dr. Jones the brief history of the case.

Describing the flight of Mildred and Van Vlack through the fields after their car had been abandoned in a ditch south of Twin Falls, Tests said "the weather was bitter cold, it was frosting and snowing." Here Taylor interrupted to inform Tests there was "no snow." Tests corrected the court reporter and said "Eliminate the snow."

Memory Fails

He told of the couple's travels until they lay in the culvert where it was planned that Mildred go home and Van Vlack attempt to make his way alone.

Tests said at this point that Van Vlack remembers nothing more until he was found the next morning at the side of the highway by a group of searchers. He made no direct reference to the killing of Mildred.

Finally finishing his instructions to the physician, Tests said:

"What would you say the mental attitude was at the time he shot the officers?"

Taylor leaped from his seat shouting "Just a moment!"

Stir in Court Room

Taylor's objection created a temporary stir in the court room. He asked that the witness be restrained from answering. Miller took up the argument by saying that "hypothetical questions are improper when there is no evidence to prove the facts assumed."

Larson then made an extended statement to the judge and said "if the counsel's objections were upheld we would eliminate experts' testimony."

After considerable debate over the question, Tests asked Judge Barclay to consent to the release of four physicians who had attended the trial and who had to return to their places of business. One of those mentioned was Dr. Jones. Tests said the doctor "was badly needed in Tacoma by his patients" and wished to return to take care of his practice.

Taylor said "If the doctor is needed so badly in Tacoma, why was he brought down here before he was needed?"

The judge asked what he intended doing in that respect.

Taylor proposed that "we keep him here until the trial is finished or we're through with him."

Popular Place

Thiel began his testimony under Tests' questioning.

After establishing his identity and occupation, he was asked if his place of business was a meeting place for young people.

Thiel leaned over to Judge Barclay and said "Your honor, they'll think I'm bragging if I answer that." The judge assured him that was not the case.

"It's a very popular meeting place," he continued.

He said he had known Van Vlack since the family moved into that section of the city—about eight or 10 years.

Tests asked him if he got to know Van Vlack well.

"No." Thiel said "he was a very hard to get acquainted with."

"What was his reputation?"

"The people out there . . ." Thiel was stopped by Judge Barclay and told to answer the question.

Reputation Scanned

Miller took Thiel on cross examination.

"Who did you hear say his (Van Vlack's) reputation was good?" Miller asked.

Thiel, after, do you want names? I should have brought my directory down."

Thiel named several persons who mentioned Van Vlack's reputation.

Miller picked out the names one by one.

"How come you heard the first person say Van Vlack's reputation was good?"

Thiel told how he was in a store when Van Vlack and his mother were there. When Mrs. Van Vlack had finished shopping, he said Douglas picked up the parcels and opened the door for his mother.

Thiel quoted a woman as saying "Isn't it wonderful how courteous Douglas is to his mother?"

"What does that have to do with peace and quietness?" cutted Miller.

"Did you ever discuss it (Van Vlack's reputation) with the second person?"

"Yes, sir."

"With the third?"

"Same answer."

"With the fourth?"

"No!"

Van Vlack's Temper

Tests asked Thiel if he ever heard anything of his repute about Van Vlack.

Thiel said he hadn't.

Miller asked him if he ever heard about Van Vlack's temper.

"Yes," Thiel said.

"Oh, you did. When?"

"After he was discharged from the Meadowvest dairy."

"Why did he leave the dairy?"

Thiel said Van Vlack was discharged but that the manager told him Van Vlack was one of the finest boys he ever had, but he was unreliable and irresponsible."

"You were brought here as a witness by the defendant," Miller asked. Thiel was unable to explain his reason why he was in Twin Falls.

Miller stopped him and said "You didn't know what you were testifying to until you reached Twin Falls?"

"No, not exactly . . . your honor, I'd like to explain."

"When did you find out?" Miller interrupted.

Thiel sought Judge Barclay's instruction as to what to testify.

Tests offered an objection and said Miller was interfering that he had put the words into Thiel's mouth.

Rest For Van Vlack

"Can you tell us why your should be called as a witness?" Miller continued.

Thiel explained that Tests asked him if he would testify, and that later Mr. Van Vlack asked him.

Miller finally said "You think you have told us all you can about the defendant?"

"Yes, except generalities."

"In your own heart, you've done the very best you can for Van Vlack?"

"Yes."

NEW KING ATTACKS SERIOUS PROBLEMS

Britain's Monarch Anxious to Strengthen International Relations

LONDON, Jan. 29 (AP)—Great Britain's new King Edward VIII quickly attacked today the grave international problems surrounding his empire.

He had his busiest day, receiving distinguished foreign visitors, including representatives of nazi Germany and anti-nazi Austria. Observers said he was anxious to strengthen international relations.

After conferring early this morning with Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, the king saw Baron Konstantin von Neurath, German foreign minister; Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, vice chancellor of Austria; Maxim Litvinoff, soviet commissar for foreign affairs; Nicolas Titulescu, foreign minister of Rumania; Armindo Monteiro, foreign minister of Portugal; and Joaquin Urrutia Cadaval of Spain.

Not only the king but Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Eden spent many hours conferring with visiting diplomats come to attend the funeral of King George V yesterday.

The British government displayed increasing signs of irritation at what it termed continued Italian propaganda in Egypt and the middle east.

Attacks Statements

Abandoning protests and representations to Rome as a means of trying to halt the reported Fascist propaganda, authoritative officials released a broadside against three recent statements assertedly broadcast from Rome, all of which they declared untrue.

The cabinet returned to work after the funeral of the late king and whipped together defense budget estimates for parliament.

Eden discussed with Pierre Etienne Flandin, new French foreign minister, French fears that Germany is preparing for a Rhineland coup. It was stated authoritatively, however, that the matter was not discussed in Eden's earlier conference with von Neurath.

A more aggressive British attitude toward Italy was indicated by the vigor with which the British denied what they called radio reports broadcast from Rome and picked up in Ethiopia.

Referring to a report said to have been broadcast last night to the effect that two schools at Jijiga used by the Egyptian Red Cross as hospitals were actually barracks, the British stated their observer at Harrar reported the schools were genuine hospitals and that not an armed man was in either of them.

According to the British another Rome report stated a Swedish Red Cross mission at Harar was ready an Egyptian wireless station, at which all operators were Red Cross insignia. This was denied.

Among the distinguished guests present were Mrs. Rebecca Wilson, Boise, district state deputy, who acted as installing officer in the absence of Mrs. Edna Ross, Boise, state manager; Mrs. Jane Wilson, Pocatello, special deputy, and Mrs. Elizabeth Cumberland, Pocatello. Plans were made for a card party to be held in the near future for the benefit of the Grove. Refreshments were served.

CARD CLUB AND HUSBANDS ENTERTAINED

Members of the Sodales Pinochle Club and their husbands attended a dinner party at Buhler's Cafe last evening. Later the group motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Whidman where the latter hours were spent playing cards.

Mrs. Pierce and Mac Smith received high score awards and consolation prizes were awarded to Mrs. Norris and L. H. Whidman.

GAY SOCIAL EVENTS PRECEDE O. A. O. DANCE

Preceded by numerous social events, including an informal party for twenty guests at the Colonial tea rooms, presided over by Mr. and Mrs. E. W. McRoberts and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Johnson, and a dinner for sixteen guests at the Park Hotel, the January dance of the O. A. O. Club took place last evening at Radioland.

Dance hosts of the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pink, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bates and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Roberts. Mrs. D. L. Alexander and Mrs. C. A. Bailey were co-chairmen of the ball and music committee, and Mrs. W. L. McFarland, of the program. The Ambassadors played the music for dancing.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS HAVE KENSINGTON

The We-Tom-A-Chick Camp Fire group met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mary Frances Bates. The girls sewed for their Firemaker's rank. Roll call responses were their favorite school studies. Refreshments were served, and one game was played.

TRI-C CLUB GIVES PARTY FOR NEOPHYTE

Miss Billy Mae White was accepted as a pledge to the Tri-C Club last evening when the group entertained at a backward party at the home of Miss Alice Reed, Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Cobb and Mrs. Mabel McKee were low.

Mrs. B. C. Huffman gave the address of welcome. Mr. Anderson sang a solo. Mrs. Rupert Teagan gave a toast to the husbands. Mrs. Laura Pschannen presented a piano solo. L. O. Cobb delivered a toast to the women. Mrs. Mable McKee gave a reading.

ROOM MOTHERS PLAN VISITORS' DAY TEA

To get first-hand information concerning educational methods of 1936, and perhaps to contrast them with the now-outmoded methods of their own school days, parents of Twin Falls Junior high school pupils will visit the classrooms on visitor's day, Wednesday afternoon, February 13, between one and four o'clock.

Room mothers of the Junior high school Parent-Teacher Association, meeting yesterday afternoon in the school building, made plans to serve a four o'clock tea to the visiting parents.

Members of the committee on arrangements are Mrs. R. J. Douglass, Mrs. Roy Evans, Mrs. J. G. Nelson, Mrs. J. R. Nielson, Mrs. G. E. Daubner, Mrs. E. F. Gardner, Mrs. C. R. Sherwood and Mrs. C. C. Lowe.

The executive committee of the Junior-Senior High School P.-T. A. at a meeting last evening made tentative plans for a Colonial silver tea to be given next month.

Mrs. Vern C. O'Leary, junior high school principal, announced that clothing and shoes were needed by a number of junior high school pupils.

NURSE TAUGHT ON FIRST AID METHODS

Members of the Tawasi Camp Fire Group, meeting yesterday afternoon at the high school, were addressed on first aid by Mrs. Nelson, registered nurse. Plans were made to entertain at a dinner Saturday evening at six o'clock at the home of Mrs. R. L. Reed.

Thousands Attend Roosevelt Dances

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP)—Throughout the nation thousands of men and women will help President Roosevelt celebrate his 54th birthday tomorrow night at dances and parties.

Much of the money derived from the sale of tickets will be used in the fight to combat infantile paralysis.

The president himself will hold his own party with his "gang" in the White House. But at 11:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, he will speak his appreciation to the dancers over a nation-wide radio hook-up.

Local agencies will receive 70 per cent of the proceeds. The remaining 30 per cent will go to the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia in which the president is particularly interested.

BUILDING AND LOAN GROUP DISBURSES $835,000,000

CHICAGO, (AP)—H. T. Donaldson, of Lansing, Mich., first vice president of the United States building and loan league, says investors in member associations received $835,000,000 in cash in 1935.

The figure represents maturities, withdrawals, dividends and cash loans on the security of share accounts.

POLITICS

The word "politics" is defined in most dictionaries as the science of government, a politician one versed in the science of government, a student of the science of government. Bearing in mind the definition it follows that the more politicians the better the chances for sound government.

The country then should be grateful to Al Smith, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Senator Borah and a host of lesser lights whose recent speeches can have hardly helped but render politics-conscious many thousands of persons who ordinarily pay but little attention to the problems of government.

No matter what we may think of the views of any of these all are performing a service of unquestionable value. They are causing people to think and think seriously upon a topic of vital import to the future of the country. It is impossible to reconcile the views of these men but it is quite easy to understand the position of each and to choose intelligently between the philosophies of each. And that is what is needed throughout the United States today, an informed public opinion, capable of separating the chaff from the wheat and willing to do its own thinking and reach its own conclusions.

DREAM PROFITS

Americans, of all people, should know by this time the hollowness of war industry profits. It is in the very nature of things.

Wealth comes from accumulation of useful and desirable things. War munitions are shot away and used up without producing any wealth, but destroying wealth even while they destroy themselves. In trying to pay for them the fighting nations impoverish themselves and inflict loss on the nations they buy from. And with their buying power gone, they are lost as markets for peaceful goods.

It should hardly be necessary to point out to any American the concrete facts supporting these general statements. They are part of the history of the World War, through which this country made more dream money from war munitions than any other country ever made—and lost it again many times over.

The factories and farms that poured our material wealth into Europe in the big war seemed to benefit, because at first the foreign governments paid, and later our own government provided the credit and paid the bills for itself and the allied governments. But that left a vast foreign debt, which is not yet and never will be paid by the debtor countries. So our people are carrying it, and the very business concerns that sold the war stuff are paying heavy federal taxes for interest on that debt, and eventually must pay their share of the principal. On top of all this is the far greater debt incurred by our own war participation, into which we were dragged by our munition business as much as anything.

Those World War munitions we shipped to Europe came out of our country's economic blood. No wonder American business and agriculture turned anemic. Any great export of munitions now or hereafter will probably come also, directly or indirectly, immediately or eventually, out of our economic blood, hurting even the economic groups that imagine they can profit by it.

EFFECTIVE SALES TALK

There are four parts to all well prepared lectures and sales talks, say two college professors who have been studying these subjects. They are described as the "Ho, hum", "What about it?", "For instance", and "So what?" stages.

In the "Ho, hum" stage the skilful lecturer or salesman breaks through the listener's boredom or suspicion and attracts his attention. In the "What about it?" stage the speaker touches the listener's interest and experience. In the third stage examples are set forth explaining the argument. In the final stage the lecture or sales talk must be brought to an issue.

The professors may have studied the subject thoroughly and their advice to speakers may be excellent. But isn't their psychology just a little off in the titles for the four parts of a talk? What if the "Ho, hum" stage merges into the succeeding stages, and when the speaker finishes the audience yawns and says, "So what?" It would be discouraging, to say the least.

SECRET POLICE

(Boise Capital News)

A new experiment in police snooping is being tried in Seattle, Wash., where the mayor has appointed 100 private citizens to work secretly for the traffic division, spying on citizens who break minor traffic rules and leave their cars parked too long in one place.

The Seattle Star, a fellow member with The Capital News in The Scripps League of Newspapers, is fighting this spy system, referring to it as "Seattle's Secret Police, comparable to the OGPU of Russia."

The Star editorially declares: "If the plan shows any good results, the spy system may easily be expanded to 1000 or 100,000 favored members, who will undertake to regulate the conduct of all other Seattle citizens and their visitors.

"And then, one fine day, if something happens that this army of volunteer and unpaid police workers do not like, its members may don pink or blue or yellow shirts, descend on city hall, capture the mayor, take over the city government and provide a nucleus for a state and then a national dictatorship. Adolph Hitler and Benito Mussolini started off with just such a band of secret operatives. When such departures are made from the processes of law and order, then liberty is in jeopardy."

The United States still remembers that nothing did more to defeat prohibition than the army of agents, who invaded homes without benefit of search warrant and violated all principles of American liberty. This nation is not ready again to submit to an unauthorized spy system.

More power to The Seattle Star for its stand against this new attack on the inviolate rights of our citizens!

EVASIVE WITNESSES OBSTRUCT JUSTICE

(Boston Transcript)

When, hereafter, a witness in a New York court says he can't remember, or doesn't know, or makes other evasive answers to the questions put to him he may soon find himself in jail for contempt. Supreme Court Justice McCook, who has sentenced a man to 30 days for dodging away from the direct response, spoke of the offender's retreat from evasion to evasion, and from falsehood to falsehood. Continuing, the justice said: "The simplest form of obstructing justice is to refuse to answer a proper question. Another form is to assert failure of memory when there is in fact no such failure. A third is to protest at all times that one has nothing to conceal and is telling the truth, but to pretend to forget or pretend to remember what is not so, whichever may be handiest at the time, to lie when one can, to tell the truth when one must, and by glibness and insolence waste more time than would be possible under either of the other methods." Here are portraits of witnesses who appear in courts throughout the land. He who conveniently forgets is a familiar figure on the stand. So is the witness whose testimony is a retreat from evasion to evasion. He may be himself a dangerous criminal, but is fair to say that he may be instead one who is afraid for his safety if he tells the truth. This New York case is that of a restaurant keeper who had evidently been paying money to racketeers as the price of protection against labor troubles and immunity from the explosion of stench bombs on his premises. Called before the grand jury by Thomas E. Dewing, special prosecutor of racketeers, the recalcitrant witness shaped his testimony under the urge to save his skin and his property from the men who had been extorting money from him. He now finds that fear may not absolve him from punishment for his defiance of the court.

Hope is expressed that the case of this man will serve to induce other victims of racketeering to tell the truth. If it does, suppression of that form of crime will be made easier. Whether or not it succeeds in a given case may be due to the extent of the terror under which the witness labors. He may prefer jail to the threat of assassination, or event of a "beating up." Victims of racketeering are not heroes. If they were they would defy the racketeers when first asked to pay liberally for "protection."

BREAKFAST-FOOD

Easy for Him

At the circus the strong man dipped a sponge into a pail of water and squeezed it until every drop of water was out of it. He invited anyone to enter the ring and try to squeeze another drop out of the sponge.

Several men tried, without any result. At last a small man entered. To the astonishment of all, he squeezed out drops after drops!

A member of the audience recognized the man and shouted: "That's not a fair test! He's a bill collector!"

HURRUMPH!

"Your unions here in England are like ours in America."

"Yes, the resemblance is striking."

The Critic

Among Sir William Rothenstein's famous sitters was Professor Einstein, whose portrait he did in Berlin. "During one of the sittings," says Rothstein, "a solemn stranger, looking, I thought, like an old tortoise, sat listening to Einstein, who, so far as I could understand, was putting forward tentative theories. His expressive face radiated, as he expounded his ideas.

"From time to time the stranger shook his head, whereupon Einstein paused, reflected, and then started another train of thought. When I was leaving, the presence of a third party was explained.

"'He is my mathematician,' said Einstein, 'who examines problems which I put before him, and checks their validity. You see, I am not myself a good mathematician'."

Not Used

"Is there much money used in politics?"

"Comparatively little," answered Senator Borahum. "But there is a scandalous amount of it wasted."

WASHINGTON
By Ray Tucker

JOBLESS. Washington's statistical experts cock one eye while microscoping the A. F. of L.'s revised unemployment figures. They think it more than coincidence that these appear simultaneously with William Green's new drive for a 30-hour week.

Government calculators find flaws in the figuring which estimates the jobless at 11,500,000 as against 15,630,000 when President Roosevelt took over. They note that Mr. Green counts as "unemployed" all over fifteen who are out of work. This boosts his total of new eligibles for employment to 4,000,000 since 1929, whereas official guessers put it nearer 2,300,000. Mr. Green also finds that there are 200,000 fewer farmers. AAA census-takers report that there are 2,000,000 more down on the farm now than in boom times.

Arguing over unemployment is like arguing over the population of Mars — there are no definite facts and no base to start from. But there are confidential charts in several statistical agencies which indicate that the best available figures also actual unemployment to be slightly more than 7,000,000. Yet evidence that these are not political blueprints is the fact that they will never be published.

HEALTHY. A breakdown of Mr. Green's analysis reveals where the economic machinery squeaks. It confirms in startling form the contention of private economists that industry is not the big bad wolf of the depression.

Unemployment in manufacturing amounts to only 16 per cent of the 1929 average of jobholders if salaried help is included. The really sore spots are the building lines and transportation — all kinds. Unemployment runs about 50 per cent in construction and 36 per cent in railroads, pipe lines, water carriers, etc. Mining ranks next with 32 per cent and then follow the public utilities with 25 per cent. These are the spots where "priming" is needed.

Healthy signs are found in reemployment trends in trade and service groups. Only 13 per cent of tradesmen are out of work on the 1929 basis. The number of those rendering personal services is within 12 per cent of the total in days when nobody shaved himself or shined his own shoes. People are beginning to buy and doll up. Only four groups show increases — those in educational work, small shop-owners (entrepreneurs) and those who boss somebody else. The payroll patriots — federal, state, city, etc. — are more numerous now by 214,369. That's official!

INFRINGED. Senatorial silverites are sniping at Henry Morgenthau's new-you-see-it-now-you-don't policy of purchasing the metal behind their backs.

The latest scheme to satisfy sentimental curiosity as to how many billions he has piled up where he is getting them and how much they cost is Pat McCarran's bill. Though seemingly innocent on its face it simply provides for repeal of three silver sections of the original law. It repeals the provisions imposing a 50 per cent tax on all profits from sales of silver.

Americans can't dispose of their holdings under this law because it is a tax upon profits even at top prices. The result has been that the Secretary of the Treasury has grabbed silver in foreign countries, where dealers are free of the tax, and he won't divulge his overseas secrets to Congress. But they haven't forced Henry's hand yet. Although the bill romped through the Senate, Mr. Morgenthau has some good friends in the House. They returned the measure to the Senate with the polite warning that it "infringed" on their right to originate all revenue legislation.

TROPHY. FDR had the best kind of advice on whether to approve or veto the bonus bill. At a quiet White House conference the veterans' lobbyists and legislators told him that the wisest game was to preserve his record for consistency by turning thumbs down.

The ex-soldiers' spokesmen frankly informed the President that he would win the bonus boys' respect by showing enough courage to defy them in a reelection year. "We haven't anything at stake this time, Mister President," they said, "because we have enough votes to pass it over your veto. You disapprove it, we'll repass it, the soldiers will get their money, they'll admire you for your nerve and next fall they will forget that you opposed us."

But the lobbyists didn't tell Mr. Roosevelt the whole story. To pass the measure through Congress in the first place was a hollow victory for them because nobody believed for a moment they would lose on Capitol Hill. Approval by the President would have rubbed the shine off their triumph, but to repass a veto was to make a trophy out of it.

NOTES. Radio-set makers are becoming jittery over the political squabble about air favoritism and censorship . . . They have asked 450 Washington newspaper correspondents to send in their ideas . . . Jim Farley's numerous visits to the White House these days may be a tip-off that he's going to step out soon . . . He'll leave whenever FDR gives him permission . . . Joseph Israels, Haile Selassie's publicity agent, is the son of the late Bella Moskowitz, who was one of Al Smith's politico-publicity advisor. . . Martin Davey's peace-making visit to the White House wasn't such a powerful powwow as the headlines made out . . . He spent fifteen minutes with the President, an hour with the press on the White House doorstep . . . It's an old Washington custom.

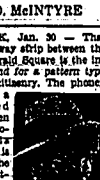
New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 — That strictly Broadway strip between the Circle and Herald Square is the incubating ground for a pattern type of worthless citizenry. The phoney diffusing a bright-eyed charm so often marking indolence. In his conceit he is convinced he has out-smarted his fellows.



O. O. McIntyre

They have to work in order to work it down. He sleeps most of the day and appears in a well barbered glow for breakfast in the late afternoon. Oddly enough, he is rarely a boozer. His lingo has the studied cliche of vaudeville. His prototype lives in the fiction of Damon Runyon.

Most of them are skilled in the art of self-mockery, are sure defense against ridicule. I have known at least a dozen and frankly for a half hour or so their companionship is a lot of fun. One knows instinctively the truth is not in them, yet always they amuse.

The law never touches them because their pilfering is so petty. There are women, with whom they are never seen in public, who provide what they call "walking around money." And there are invariably small tricks they can turn, a fiver here and a tenner there. Sponges need little to expand.

Floyd Gibbons, whiling away between-battle tediums on the Ethiopian front, is working on another making-life-easier innovation. No. 1 was a buttonless shirt, the cuffs being in solid circle and the tie holding the collar and very short vent down the bosom. No. 2 is to be a collapsible, easily folding pith helmet. Only those who have journeyed to tropical countries know the horrors of trying to pack the standardized model. Gibbons' Christmas greeting cards were mailed from Jerusalem.

Another of the town's indefatigable party hurlers is Ted Saucier, who sounds the publicity tom toms for the Waldorf and a dozen other institutions catering for food and drink. A cuisinier taught many tricks by apple-cheeked Oscar himself, he likes to fill his bachelor chambers with jovial spirits, don the white apron, coat and funneled cap of the chef. In a way it's a gesture toward letters. Mr. Saucier, a true gourmet, has been on a strict diet for several years.

In the past two months I have seen two striking victims of the New York pace. Both talented girls that it fell to my lot to exploit when a theatrical press agent. They were young, beautiful and vibrant with dewy freshness and each became a name in the theatrical world after our paths crossed so briefly. New talent came along and over a space of ten years their celebrity gradually faded. Both had married several times. Today they are blowzy, hard bitten women with gin busks to their voices, over-painted, overdressed and over emphasizing their tiny hour of fame. It was incredible that little more than a decade could exact such a toll. I left each in slight shudder.

Ed Sullivan seems the only column to give constructive criticism. Among those braving the footlights. He has played several return engagements at one of the largest Broadway motion picture houses and last night hung up a record matching that of Jack Dempsey in the flush of his championship, an all-time high for the house. He has the darling faculty of Irish talk but without flippancy and perhaps in that quality lies much of his appeal. There is a definite hardness among audiences these days toward that arrogant assumption by actors they are the last word. Genius no longer has to declare itself. The trend is to meekness in every endeavor.

Thingumabobs: Harold Bell Wright is a favorite author of Hallie Selasie . . . Nathan Burkan, who inherited Luchow's, is Charlie Chaplin's lawyer and closest confident. . . . Amon Carter, Ft. Worth editor, as a hobby grows the biggest pecans in America . . . Charles MacArthur's idea of fun is to leave dainty lingerie around the house for Helen Hayes to find after she has been away on a trip. . . . Jack Dempsey now smokes a dozen black cigars a day.

From a Cosmopolitan story: "It was a breakfast he loved. Wet hash flicked with green peppers in it criss cross of crisp bacon, poached eggs in golden shimmer, smothered fried potatoes, crab apple jelly, thin toast and a goblet of milk with just that proper chill."

Hawkins, my drooling bib, the large one!

Guiding Your Child

By ALICE CLARISSA RICHMOND

RATIONALIZING

A useful term which has of late taken its place in everyday speech is "rationalizing" as opposed to "reasoning." Rationalizing is really one form of "wish-thinking." One does something, sometimes unwisely, sometimes justifiably. What one does is not the point, but the reasons one gives one's self and others for doing it.

Tommy, for example, goes out in the rain and comes in drenched. While out he sees the garage door open and closes it. His mother asks him why he went out in the rain. It was a case of straight disobedience, and he knew it at the time he went out. But in answer to his mother he says, "I went to see if the garage door had been left open, and it had been, so I closed it." He believes his story now, and unless his mother is very suspicious she must believe it too.

Not only children are guilty of rationalizing. Everyone is apt to do it at some time, and many adults indulge in it quite as commonly as children do. It is, none the less, crooked thinking, and the only time it can be adequately dealt with is in youth.

The fact that Tommy had disobeyed and gotten wet should not have been as important to his mother as the reason the child gave for his behavior. Very quietly she should have talked over the matter with him, reminding him of his probable feelings when he went out, and leading him to face the fact that the garage door was an excuse after the fact.

If, every time a child "rationalizes" his acts he is persuaded to face himself, punishment for his wrongdoing is inadvisable. The child has learned a far more important lesson than obedience, when he has learned to think straight and to tell himself the truth.

LANDON CHARGES WASTE WITH MISMANAGEMENT

ingness to throw other people's money around without any consideration of value is a peculiar sign of a pure heart.

"They show too little consideration for the toll which millions of American men and women will have to undergo in order to pay off the debt so gaily incurred. Already the average family spends one-fourth of its income for taxes, whether the family knows it or not. It will take much more than that to pay the bill which political wasters have contracted in the American people's name. Those in power responsible for this reckless extravagance are not liberals. They are more nearly benighted reactionaries. * * *"

Time for Action

"The time has come for a direct attack on the attempt at Washington to substitute a tax-eating bureaucracy for a liberal Democratic system. Business recovery offers more promise of employment than a thousand wildcat schemes. * * *

"There must be a revival of confidence in national credit, confidence in soundness of the dollar, confidence in the government at Washington. These guarantee the perpetuity of our American system of democracy and under that guarantee will come a flood time of recovery."

Farm Problem

A farmer and independent oil operator when he became governor in 1932, Landon said the nation's farm problem must be approached "on a non-partisan basis."

Declaring "there is no single solution," he recommended a program of soil conservation coupled with some plan which would give farmers equality with industry as regards protective tariffs.

"A policy that is not limited in its benefits to immediate cash returns but seeks as well to rebuild the fertility of the soil * * * would fit in with the demand of agriculture for equality with industry," he said.

Domestic farm prices have "largely been fixed by the prices bid by our foreign purchasers. In other words, the surplus has set the price for the whole crop.

"The proper application of soil conservation principles would help materially to prevent the production of such price depressing surpluses."

Because farmers have been forced to sell on the world market, the governor said, they are "entitled to some counter-vailing provisions, to some compensating tariff equivalent in order that (they) may receive an equal benefit.

Purpose of Tariff

"The purpose of the tariff is to protect workers and industry from the cheap competition of foreign labor. The farmer should be given this same protection."

He said "when the record of the administration is challenged their only answer is, 'what would you do?' and he added:

"That begs the question. Their program is not only ineffective, it is destructive of the American system. In the face of the fact, no reasonable citizen should ask us what to do. The American people propose to solve their problems under the American system. * * *

"The choice ahead of the American people is not whether to keep on with the mistakes of the so-called new deal or return to the mistakes of the old order. The old order belongs to the past, but sound American principles persist. * * *

"What our nation really needs today is better housekeeping. Our women could show the way. They have had more successful experience than any political spendthrift in getting full abundance out of living and in managing to put by something for a rainy day.

"Kansas has tried to do that kind of housekeeping."

Economy in Kansas

The governor related that since 1929 Kansas property taxes have been reduced 32 per cent; the per capita cost of state and local government 28 per cent. He said total revenues for state and local purposes in 1934 were 24 per cent less than in 1932.

And he added:

"Savings were not made by skimping necessary services, or dodging new responsibilities of relief. * * *

He recalled that it has been said "the demands for relief have imperiled our federal finances" and asserted:

"That is only a half truth. The money actually reaching the unemployed and impoverished has not rocked the treasury. The rocking has been done by abysmal waste through changes of policy, maladministration and ruthless partisanship.

Desperate Need

"We need desperately a cheaper, simpler and more responsible relief administration throughout the union."

Governor Landon said Kansas cooperated fully with the administration on relief—"the records will show that no state cooperated more fully."

"With the passage of the five billion dollar relief bill, however," he said, "came the melancholy discovery that a non-political administration of relief was not intended."

He declared "the emphasis on relief has obscured the fact that employment, not aid, is our larger problem."

He credited the supreme court's action — "cutting away some of the errors in recent national legislation" with giving "a healthful impetus to our entire economic life. * * *"

Financial Vortex

In his specifications of what he termed "an unsound financial program," he said:

"The budget proposed for the next fiscal period by the nation's chief executive is the final grim proof of the financial vortex into which we are being drawn.

"It's prediction of a deficit of 'only a billion' is delusive. * * * The period undoubtedly will end with a deficit greater than those of each preceding year of this administration. * * *

For the Republican party's next national platform Gov. Landon urged:

"A straight-forward declaration that will set forth the careful thought and serious convictions not of one person but of many.

"Behind that platform," he added, "must be an honest intention to redeem its pledges, not to throw it on the junk pile the day after election."

Landon Awaits G. O. P. Move

FREQUENTLY mentioned as a possible Republican presidential nominee, Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas so far has maintained silence on his plank. He's shown in typical poses at Topeka. Top in a family group with Mrs. Landon and their children, Nancy Jo and John Cobb, 21-months' old. Below at the executive mansion he alternately buckles down to work and takes his ease.—(AP Photo).

THE BOOMERANG CLUE

By Agatha Christie

Continued From Last Issue

SYNOPSIS: Bobby and Frankie are trying their best to determine first, whether there was murder done in the matter of the man who fell over the cliff; second, what Bassington-ffrench's connection with the matter was; third, how it happens that the photograph found later in the dead man's pocket was not the one Bobby saw there in the first place. Is Bassington-ffrench guilty? Are the Caymans mixed up in it? Who tried to poison Bobby? What do the dead man's enigmatic last words mean?

Chapter 12

DEDUCTION

"According to our present theory it goes like this," Bobby continued. "Dead man X at deliberately pushed over cliff—presumably by Y. Y, mention the initials, it is important that X should not be correctly identified, so the portrait of Mrs. C. is put in his pocket and the portrait of Fair Unknown removed. Who was she, I wonder?"

"Keep to the point," said Frankie sternly.

Mrs. C. waits for photograph to appear. Then turns up as grief-stricken sister and identifies X as her brother from foreign parts."

"You don't believe he could really have been her brother?"

"Not for a moment! You know, it puzzled me all along. The Caymans were as different class altogether. The dead man was—well, it sounds a most awful thing to say and just like some deadly old retired Anglo-Indian — but the dead man was a pukka sahib."

"And the Caymas emphatically weren't?"

"Most emphatically."

"And then, just when everything has gone off well from the Cayman point of view — body successfully identified, verdict of accidental death, everything in the garden lovely—you come along and mess things up," mused Frankie.

"Why didn't they ask Evans?" Bobby repeated the phrase thoughtfully. "You know I can't see what on earth there can be in that to put the wind up anybody."

"Ah! that's because you don't know. It's like making crossword puzzles. You write down a clue and you think it's too idiotically simple and that everyone will guess it straight off, and you're frightfully surprised when they simply can't get it in the least. Why didn't they ask Evans? must have been a most frightfully significant phrase to them, and they couldn't realize that it meant nothing at all to you."

"More fools they."

"Oh, quite so. But it's just possible they thought that if Pritchard said that, he might have said something more which would also recur to you in this light—anyway they weren't going to take chances. You were safer out of the way."

"They took a lot of risk. Why didn't they engineer another 'accident'?"

"No, no. That would have been stupid. Two accidents within a week of each other? It might have suggested a connection between the two, and then people would have began inquiring into the first one. No, I think there's a kind of bad simplicity about their method which is really rather clever."

"And yet you said just now that morphia wasn't easy to get hold of."

"No more it is. You have to sign poison books and things. Oh—of course, that's a clue! Whoever did it had easy access to supplies of morphia."

"A doctor, a hospital nurse, or a chemist," suggested Bobby.

"Well, I was thinking more of illicitly imported drugs."

"You can't mix up too many different sorts of crime," said Bobby.

"You see, the strong point would be the absence of motive. Your death doesn't benefit anyone. So what will the police think?"

"A lunatic," said Bobby. "And that's what they do think."

"You see? It's awfully simple really."

Bobby began to laugh suddenly.

"What's amusing you?"

"Just the thought of how sick-making it must be for them! All that morphia—enough to kill five or six people—and here I am alive and kicking."

"One of life's little ironies that one can't foresee," agreed Frankie.

"The question is, what do we do next?" said Bobby practically.

"Oh, lots of things," said Frankie promptly.

"Such as—?"

"Well—finding out about the photograph—that there was only one, not two. And about Bassington-ffrench's house-hunting."

"That will probably be quite all right and above-board."

"Why do you say that?"

"Look here, Frankie, think a minute. Bassington-ffrench must be above suspicion. He must be all clear and above-board. Not only must there be nothing to connect him in any way with the dead man, but he must have a proper reason for being down here. He may have invented house-hunting on the spur of the moment, but I bet he carried out something of the kind. There must be no suggestion of a "mysterious stranger seen in the neighborhood of the accident.' I fancy that Bassington-ffrench is his real name, and that he's the sort of person who would be quite above suspicion."

"Yes," said Frankie thoughtfully. "That's a very good deduction. There will be nothing whatever to connect Bassington-ffrench with Alex Pritchard. Now if we knew who the dead man really was—"

"Ah! then it might be different."

"So it was very important that the body should not be recognized. Hence all the Cayman camouflage. And yet it was taking a big risk."

"You forget that Mrs. Cayman identified him as soon as was humanly possible. After that, even if there had been pictures of him in the papers (you know how blurry these things are) people would only say, 'Curious, this man Pritchard who fell over a cliff is really extraordinarily like Mr. X.' "

"There must be more to it than that," said Frankie shrewdly. "X must have been a man who wouldn't easily be missed. I mean, he couldn't have been the sort of family man whose wife or relations would go to the police at once and report him missing."

"Good for you, Frankie. No, he must have been just going abroad, or perhaps just come back (he was marvelously tanned, like a big game hunter—he looked that sort of person), and he can't have had any very near relations who knew all about his movements."

"We're deducing beautifully, Bobby," said Frankie. "I hope we're not deducing all wrong."

"Very likely," said Bobby. "But I think what we've said so far is fairly sound sense—granted, that is, the wild improbability of the whole thing."

Frankie waved away the wild improbability with an airy gesture. "The thing is—what to do next?" she said. "It seems to me we've got three angles of attack."

"Go on, Sherlock."

"The first is you. They've made one attempt on your life. They'll probably try again. This time we might get what they call a 'line' on them. Using you as a decoy, I mean."

"No, thank you, Frankie," said Bobby with feeling. "I've been very lucky this time, but I mightn't be so lucky again if they changed the attack to a blunt instrument. I was thinking of taking a great deal of care of myself in the future. The decoy idea can be washed out."

"I was afraid you'd say that," said Frankie with a sigh. "Young men are sadly degenerate nowadays. Father says so. They don't enjoy being uncomfortable and doing dangerous and unpleasant things any longer. It's a pity."

"A great pity," said Bobby, but he spoke with firmness. "What's the second plan of campaign?"

"Working from the 'Why didn't they ask Evans?' clue," said Frankie. "Presumably the dead man came down here to see Evans—whoever he was. Now, if we could find Evans—"

"How many Evanses," Bobby interrupted, "do you think there are in Scarsbolo?"

"Several hundred, I should think," admitted Frankie.

"At least! We might do something that way, but I'm rather doubtful."

"We could list all the Evanses and visit the likely ones."

"And ask them—what?"

"That's the difficulty," said Frankie.

"We need to know a little more," said Bobby. "Then that idea of yours might come in useful. What's Number 3?"

"This man Bassington-ffrench. There we have got something tangible to go upon. It's an uncommon name. I'll ask Father. He knows all these county family names and their various branches."

"Yes," said Bobby, "we might do something that way."

"At any rate we are going to do something!"

"Of course we are. Do you think I'm going to be given eight grains of morphia and do nothing about it?"

"That's the spirit!" said Frankie.

"And besides that," added Bobby, "there's the indignity of the stomach pump to be washed out."

"That's enough," said Frankie.

Ariel Crowley, assistant attorney general, filed his answer today in the action instituted by George B. Wallace, Inc., and nearly a score of other dealers and caravan operators, who sought to restrain the state from collecting a $5 tax on each automobile brought into or taken through Idaho in so-called caravans.

About two weeks ago, Judge Winstead, in overruling the state's general demurrer to the complaint, declared the act violated the interstate commerce clause and was unconstitutional.

Giants Collect Big Delegation Of Rookies For Season

Barney Ross Agrees To Terms For Middleweight Title Battle

Boss Bill Terry Of New York Club To Inspect 14 Freshmen

Five Pitchers, Two Catchers, Four Infielders And Seven Outfielders Join Gotham Baseball Forces

By Eddie Brietz
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—One of the biggest delegations of rookies in recent years will be looked over by Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants at the Pensacola training base this season.

The Giant spring roster, a doggy affair in ultramarine, came out today. It lists 32 players slated for tryouts. Fourteen or almost half the number, are freshmen.

Terry will put 13 pitchers and four catchers to work at Pensacola, February 24. Nine infielders and seven outfielders will begin drills a week later.

Five of the colts are pitchers, two are catchers, four play the infield and three are outfielders.

Among the hurling newcomers is Harry Gumbert, who won 19 and lost 10 games for Baltimore in the International league before joining the Giants in the last few weeks of the 1935 season.

Marberry Joins Staff

Two former American leaguers also will bid for berths. One is Dick Coffman, whom Terry purchased from the Browns during the winter and who is counted on as a relief hurler. Fred (Firpo) Marberry, who for years starred in relief roles for Washington and Detroit, is the other. Marberry was picked up after asking for his release as an American league umpire.

Clarence Anderson from Tyler in the West Dixie league and Theodore Dasey, who prepped with Beckley, W. Va., in the Middle Atlantic league, will fight it out for the third string catching berth. The veteran Glenn Myatt will not return.

"Smoky Joe" Martin, a third base sensation at Nashville, and Charles English, a second baseman from Galveston, appear to have an edge on the other infield recruits. James Ripple, who pounded out a .333 average for the Montreal International's, had a good chance to stick as a reserve outfielder.

The Dodger roster, also announced today as one of the first official acts of John Gorman, the new business manager, shows Brooklyn management is going to do a lot of experimenting at Clearwater during March.

Manager Casey Stengel will look over a squad of 34 players, including 11 pitchers, three catchers, 10 infielders and 10 outfielders.

Price of Rookies

Wayne Osborne, a pitcher for whom the Dodgers paid the San Francisco Missions $20,000, is supposed to be the prize of the rookie lot. He won 17 games in the class AA Coast league last year.

Another hurler from whom great things are expected is Al Butcher, a 200-pound giant from Galveston with 24 victories to his credit.

Stengel left California yesterday and will reach New York Saturday.

Queen Of Tennis Called 'Tops' As Sculptor's Model

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody saw a new sculpture of her head in terra cotta today, and heard herself called "tops" as a sculptor's model.

"The breadth of her nose at the top where it joins the forehead gives a Greek effect," said Wheeler Williams, the sculptor. "She is as good a model as you can get."

"I think it's an awfully good likeness," the tennis star said when she viewed it in the Karl Freundi gallery where the head will go on exhibition February 16.

The premier of the gallery called it "the best portrait I ever saw."

Mrs. Moody posed at the sculptor's request in a balloon hangar on the west coast, where he and four other sculptors were designing pediments for the commerce and department of labor building in Washington, D. C.

Pedley Replaces Veteran Poloist

Hitchcock to Be Missing From Lineup for First Time in 15 Years

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP)—For the first time in 25 years, during which he helped keep the United States supreme in international polo competition, Tommy Hitchcock will be missing from America's lineup in the matches for the classic Westchester cup, to be defended this June in England.

Simultaneous with the disclosure today that for business reasons the world's only ten-goal player had decided not to go abroad, the U. S. Polo association invited Eric Pedley, California star, to join the American squad.

The selection committee passed over two eight-goal players, Cecil Smith of Austin, Texas, and Elmer J. Boeseke, jr., of Santa Barbara, Calif., in seeking Pedley, who now has a seven-goal rating. Boeseke has been out of competition for a year, due to an injury.

Pedley, the first and only westerner ever named for international cup play, was a sensation at No. 1 on the American side that last defended the trophy against England in 1930.

The likely lineup, totaling 31 goals, will be Pedley at No. 1, Phipps No. 2, Iglehart No. 3, in place of Hitchcock, and Guest at back.

Dwight Davis, Tennis Cup Donor, To Be Honored By Fifty Nations

Associations Plan to Pay Tribute to Founder of Competition

PARIS (AP)—Lawn tennis associations of nearly 50 nations plan to pay tribute this year to Dwight F. Davis, founder of the Davis Cup competition.

The associations will present Davis a gold watch either at the annual meeting of the International Federation to be held in Paris in March or at the July business meeting of the Davis Cup nations at Wimbledon.

Played On First U. S. Team

Davis started the competition which bears his name in 1900. The cup matches at that time were confined to the United States and Great Britain. The donor of the Davis Cup did not foresee that tennis would become a general international sport and that this trophy would become the symbol of world championship.

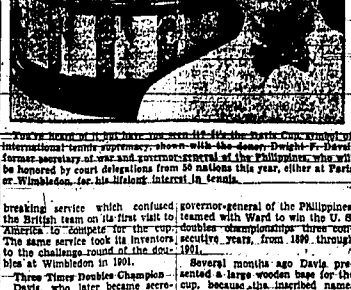
When the first Davis Cup match was played at Longwood, Boston, in August, 1900, between the United States and Great Britain, Davis was a member of the American team. He was then a leading player and now, though in his late fifties, he still is seen frequently on the courts.

With his partner, Holcombe Ward, Davis invented the American breaking service which confused the British team on its first visit to America to compete for the cup. The same service took its inventors to the challenge round of the doubles at Wimbledon in 1901.

Three Times Doubles Champion

Davis, who later became secretary of war of the United States in the Coolidge administration and governor-general of the Philippines, teamed with Ward to win the U. S. doubles championships three consecutive years, from 1899 through 1901.

Several months ago Davis presented a large wooden base for the cup, because the inscribed names of the winning teams had covered the surface of the trophy.



You've heard of it but have you seen it? It's the Davis Cup, symbol of international tennis supremacy, shown with the donor, Dwight F. Davis, former secretary of war and governor-general of the Philippines, who will be honored by court delegations from 50 nations this year, either at Paris or Wimbledon for his lifelong interest in tennis.

Ricks Collegians Roll Up 90 to 24 Score at Gooding

Viking Basketeers Go on Rampage to Overwhelm Bobcats With Display of Brilliant Passing

GOODING, Jan. 29.—Viking basketeers of Ricks college at Rexburg volunteered a course in hoop instruction here this evening and when the scorer finally got down to his last sheet of paper the Gooding college Bobcats were found to be victims of a 90 to 24 trounicing.

Exhibiting uncanny timing of passes and shots, the Vikings played keep-away from the first, made virtually every shot good and turned in a brilliant exhibition of cagecraft with a shifty defense that functioned every time the Bobcats obtained the ball. Half time count was 40 to 13.

Last half was more or less a repetition, although the difference between the two teams was even greater after Painter and Herd, Bobcat stars, fouled out early in the second half.

Parkinson made 22 of Ricks' points while Callister made 17, Jergensen 13 and Packer 11. Others were evenly distributed among the other six members of the squad. Painter topped Gooding with seven.

Second game of the two-game series will be played here Thursday evening.

Parkinson (22)	RF	(6) Gruse

Grimmett (11)	LG	(4) Herd

Substitutions: Ricks—Woods (8), Jergensen (12), McKinley (6), Black (5) and Rydiach (3); Gooding—Uhl (3), Webb, Berryessa and Wheeler.

M-Men Conquer Elks of Burley

Twin Falls M-Men basketeers broke into the victory column against tough opposition last evening when they battered their way to a 42 to 31 win over the highly touted Elks from Burley. The game was played in Twin Falls high school gym.

Lead during the first half was interchanged with the Magic City five edging out an 18 to 16 margin at the half. From then on the lead continued to increase.

Johnny Wells of Twin Falls scored 12 points while Barlow was high for the Elks with 11.

Next game for the M-Men will be at Pocatello, Saturday, when they invade the lair of the Orange Transportation aggregation, rated as the highest of the commercial teams in southern Idaho. The Pocatellans already hold one win over the M-Men.

Summary:

Braddock May Meet Tournament Winner, Declares Joe Gould

'We Consider Louis Stricken Fro mThe List Of Candidates,' Asserts Manager Of Champion

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP)—A hint that there might be world's heavyweight title fight between Joe Louis and Jimmy Braddock this year came today from Joe Gould, Champion Braddock's manager.

"If the report is true * * that he will not challenge in 1936," said Gould, "we consider Louis stricken from the list of contenders.

"A man cannot be considered for a championship fight unless he is ready and willing to challenge.

"Last year we went on record as saying we would be pleased to give Louis a crack at the title. Now that he is apparently unwilling to challenge, he has eliminated himself. From now on let there be no cry about drawing of the color line."

Gould said he based his statement on press reports quoting the Negro fighter's manager, Julian Black, as saying Louis would not challenge for the title this year.

If that be true, Gould said, Braddock will meet in September some other contender selected in an elimination tournament.

ON THE SIDELINES

Of all the winter sports devotees — the slalom ski people, the skaters, the curling delegations — the bob-sledder is one of the most interesting. Why will grown men, old men so far as competitive athletics is concerned, risk their necks on a lightning fast bob course?

Because there is nothing like the thrill of gliding at a mile-a-minute speed down sheer mountain sides, around hair-pin, banked curves, with physical danger—perhaps even death — as the price if the driver makes a false move.

A bobber must be a big man, since speed depends quite a lot upon the pull of gravity. The United States bobbers who will compete in the Winter Olympics at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, for instance, average 205 pounds. They can put together a 4-man combination on one sled who scale 485 pounds.

Largest, Heaviest, Oldest

Besides being the largest group and the heaviest in the Olympic delegation, they are the oldest, averaging 32 years.

And the really expert bob-sledder is one of the rarest individuals in American sports, there being only about 100 recognized in these United States, of whom carry licenses.

Oh, yes, a license issued by the conservation department of the State of New York is required before you can pilot a sled down the dangerous curves of the Mount von Hovenberg course, where the Germans met disaster at the 1932 Winter Olympics. Up there in Essex County, New York, each passenger and pilot must sign a waiver before daring the curves and speed of the course. It is intended to release the state from liability for injury. The course was built at a cost of $250,000 and is maintained by the conservation department.

When Ile German 4-man crew left the course at breath-taking speed it catapulted 110 feet through the air, landing in a forest. All four suffered fractures and one a broken back.

They're Denied Insurance

The course above Lake Placid is considered much more dangerous and exciting than the one the Americans will find in the Bavarian Alps, where the officials stressed the safety feature.

Another drawback to this unique, dangerous competitive sport is that its devotees usually can't get any insurance. An insurance company cancelled the policy of Francis Tyler, an American Olympic bobber who also is a Lake Placid policeman and who, consequently, was considerable of a risk already.

The American team that went abroad recently expects the stiffest Olympic competition to be supplied by the Germans and the Swiss, who are more familiar with the quirks and turns of the Alpine courses.

However, there may be a threat in the Czech bobbers, who have something new in the way of sleds, their new sled is built of iron tubing with steel runners—and that's all the spies have been able to find out, for the Czechs are jealously guarding the new wrinkle in steering that may be an asset on the nine-curve, mile-long German course, with its nine per cent grade.

Seventeen nations enlisted for the Olympic competition of bobbing.

Perry Recovers From Injuries

World's No. 1 Tennis Player to Enter Competition at Wimbledon

LONDON, Jan. 29 (AP)—Fred Perry isn't through with competitive tennis temporarily or otherwise.

The sparkling Briton said so himself today when he announced he intends to take part in the Wimbledon program next summer, including the Davis cup competition, and then go to the United States for the singles tournament at Forest Hills.

Perry said he was well on the way to recovery from injuries he suffered in the bad spill he took in the first set of his semi-final match against Wilmer Allison in the American championship at Forest Hills, last September. The injury has been variously described as a ruptured kidney and a broken vertebra.

"I've followed the doctor's orders and I'll be right as rain" when I start practicing again in three or four weeks," Perry told The Associated Press.

The first intimation that Perry's injury was of a lingering nature came last November when he announced from Australia he would be unable to participate in any of the tournaments there because he was still bothered by the effects of the fall.

Perry's program includes defense of the Wimbledon all-England singles and mixed doubles championships as well as bid for the doubles crown.

Ambitious Champ Of Welterweights Ready for Risko

Chicago Battler, Seeking Fourth Crown, Accepts Offer to Meet Ruler of 160-Pound Division

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29 (AP)—The ambition to crack all records for the fight game by reaching championship heights in four weight divisions sent Barney Ross in quest of the middleweight title today.

Through his managers, Sam Pian and Art Winch, the black-thatched welterweight king agreed to terms offered by promoters Herman Taylor and Bobby Gunn for a middleweight crown battle with Ed (Babe) Risko, the 160-pound ruler.

Announcing the Chicagoan's agreement, Taylor and Gunkle said they hope to get Babe Ownerse, Risko's pilot, to get his signature to the articles.

The proposed bout would come off indoors some time in March, probably over the 15-round route, since Pennsylvania's new athletic law permits that distance for championship engagements.

Moose Hoopsters Defeat Wendell

Jerome Quintet Chalks Up 73 to 33 Victory on Home Court

JEROME, Jan. 29 — Jerome Moose hoop aces played at home this evening and demonstrated smooth passing to turn back the recently organized but surprisingly strong Wendell town team, 73 to 33.

Jerome kept up the scoring march from beginning to end and appeared to be at the peak of condition. Atkins of Jerome scored 22 points. Tomlinson carded 13 and Moon Shepard, recently acquired from Savage Independents of Kimberly, 12. Carl McConnell led Wendell with ten points.

Jerome reserves won a preliminary from the Wendell second team 40 to 8.

Summary:

Denver Fighter Defeats Lewis

Light Heavyweight Champ Takes Beating at Hands of Emilio Martinez

DENVER, Jan. 29. (AP)—Unable to flash any threat of a knockout punch John Lewis, light heavyweight champion, was beaten by Emilio Martinez of Denver in a 10-round battle in city auditorium tonight.

Lewis' title was not at stake.

Martinez beat the Phoenix, Arizona, Negro with a driving left-handed attack, popping leather steadily into Lewis' mid-section and occasionally to the face.

Lewis drove the Denver puncher to the ropes in the third round and again later in the fight, shaking him with right-hand smashes, but missed frequently.

Martinez, bobbing and weaving, offered the champion few attractive targets. Neither scored a knockdown.

Lewis, who will defend his championship against Jock McAvoy of England in New York April 3, outweighed Martinez, 181 to 178¼.

Martinez lost a decision to the Negro last March.

By FRANK MACMILLEN
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP)—An energetic buying drive in the final hour of stock market trading today sent price averages to new highs since 1931.

Aviation and motor shares formed the spear-head of the advance, but the price line was strengthened along a broad front.

The Associated Press averages gained .4 of a point at 89.1, bringing it up to another new top since early September, 1931. The industrial, rail and utility components each made peaks for 1935-38 or longer.

In individual issues there were gains of 1 to 4 points in numerous cases, a considerable part of the day's activity, however, was provided by low-priced utilities and motors, where gains were in many cases fractional.

Trading galloped along at the finish. In the stock exchange 2,604,333 shares changed ownership at a somewhat reduced hourly rate from the four-hour session Thursday, when volume was 2,292,890 shares.

Motor Buying Boosts List

Brokerage observers said that the buying in motors appeared to have given the list its biggest boost, where the earlier firmness in oils, farm shares, and utilities had not attracted a particularly aggressive following.

Woolworth added a fraction at 53½ as its earnings report for 1935 was published. They showed net profit equal to $3.20 a share, compared with $3.30 in 1934.

The threatened order by Westinghouse Electric directors to pay common stock dividend rate to 75 cents a share from 50 cents in recent quarters, failed to stimulate the stock. It ended a bit lower at 108¾.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP)—Foreign exchange firm; France demand, $6.56¼; Cables, $6.56¼; Montreal in New York, $100.21¼; New York in Montreal, $99.78¼.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 29. (AP)—The general cotton market close very steady at net advances of 4 to 12 points.

WHEAT QUOTATIONS SLUMP AT CHICAGO

Stop-Loss Selling Thrusts Grain Values Down to Below $1

By JOHN F. BOUGHAN
(Associated Press Market Editor)

CHICAGO, Jan. 29 (AP)—Stop-loss selling by holders of futures thrust wheat values down today to well below $1.00.

General liquidating sales of wheat at Liverpool, with European continental countries offering freely, did much to unsettle prices. A particular source of weakness abroad was Portuguese government action authorizing wheat exports that will total 11,000,000 bushels.

Wheat closed heavy at about the day's bottom level, ¾-1¼ cents under yesterday's finish, May 99½-¾, corn ¼-⅝ off, May 99½-¾, oats unchanged to ¼ lower, and provisions varying from a cents setback to an equal advance.

Uneasiness of owners of wheat futures was increased by the fact that no export business of any consequence was announced at Winnipeg, and that domestic demand for flour remained disappointing.

Corn, oats and rye took their cue from wheat weakness.

Provisions were little changed despite downturns of hog values.

STAMPS in The News

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

A stamp issue that, as far as numerical content is concerned, borders on a collection in itself comes this week from Senegal. The grand total is 45.

The act—really three sets in one for regular postage, airmail and postage due—brings new designs to new adhesives of this French colony. Senegal is located on the west coast of Africa and has about the same area as Nebraska. The issue replaces the type of stamps that has been in general use since 1914 with color variations from time to time. Those stamps bore a "natives preparing food" drawing.

For the 24 regular postage denominations, two designs are used. Value from 1 to 45 centimes inclusive, of which there are 11 picture a long bridge, with a native boat in the foreground. The remaining 13 values 50-c to 20-francs, illustrate a mosque before which two natives are rather prominently pictured. Naturally, there are a multitude of shades to provide the color variety needed for so many items. At least three, 1.50-f, 1.75-f and 20-f, have tinted paper.

The postage dues total 10, ranging from 5-c to 5-f. Here, too, there are complete changes in design, the stamps being approximately twice as large as the old ones. The numeral of value is placed within a double circle surrounded by a lozenge-like frame.

Completing the issue is the group of 11 airmails, the first for this colony. Like the regular postage, two designs are employed to separate high and low values. The 25-c to 2-f, inclusive, have natives on shore watching a plane in flight over the coast-line. The others, 3-50-f to 5.50-f, illustrate a biplane whizzing above a camel caravan in the desert.

COLLEGE LINCOLN VISITED TO CELEBRATE CENTENNIAL

GALESBURG, Ill. (AP)—This city is getting ready to celebrate its 100th centennial and the 100th birthday of Knox college here.

Mrs. Philip S. Post of Chicago, trustee and chairman of the Knox centennial committee, says it was just 100 years ago that two young men in Whitesboro, N. Y., banded together for the establishment of a university on the Illinois college for the pioneers of Illinois.

Another historical date to be commemorated will be the 90th anniversary of the Lincoln-Douglas debate on Knox campus, October 7, 1858.

GAMEBIRDS UNHURT BY RECENT STORMS

Continued Cold and Snow Would Bring Need for Relief

Game birds in south central Idaho have weathered recent storms in good shape, but should cold weather and snow continue the birds may need some relief in certain localities, Grover Davis, deputy state game warden, reported last evening following an investigation.

Reports had been received by local sportsmen that pheasants were suffering for lack of feed as a result of the storms in districts south of here.

The warden's report said:

"Feed conditions for pheasants in this district are not now alarming. The present cold spell has been of short duration and the birds were in excellent condition before the present cold weather began. However, should the cold weather and snow continue, the birds may need some relief in certain localities."
