community, and undoubtedly in all the communities that go to make up this district of Idaho, who know want. Their lot may be a dark one.

The writer ran across two such men just the other day. One lucked even a postage stamp to write to relatives, he said. The other was searching for relief bodies.

In a Christmas season that promises to be merry for the vast majority it is still a fact that there are those who are needy. Irrespective of why they may be in need of help, certainly there can be little question as to the desirability of helping them. Such help will benefit both those who give and those who take and make Christmas more worth while.

GOOD-BYE, Mr. O'MALLEY

FRANK Ward O'Malley, brilliant wit and writer, has shaken the dust of those United States from his feet and has gone to Europe to live. He is still a patriot and a lover of America, he informed reporters when he arrived in Marseilles, but prohibition marks this country as having lost its senses. Frank decided to join the other 100,000 former Americans who have elected to become expatriates for the nonce.

We who are left, some 120,000,000 of us, must try to struggle along without the cheerful presence of Mr. O'Malley. Undoubtedly he will be missed, for a time at least, but we shall do our best to get along without him. He is best known for his brilliance as a conversationalist, we have been informed, but his conversation has never done us in Idaho much good.

There is a task he might perform that would have some real value to all of us now living as well as to posterity. We offer the suggestion for what it may be worth. In between times of tipping up another one with the gracious, if somewhat thrifty French, and the expatriate Americans we wish Mr. O'Malley would make serious research and find the answer to this rather heavy, involved, complex question, which has baffled its hundreds of thousands in this country: "Did the M. I's or the marines win the war?"

A woman writer says men hardly count nowadays. They are kept pretty busy counting at this time of year, though.

Yawning after a meal may mean that you have eaten too much, says a physician. Unless you are at a banquet where the after-dinner speaking isn't so hot.

The showing made by Coach Dorothy Call's high school sextet of basketball tossers in defeating the Castleford team by a score of 41 to 2 in the opening game of the season indicates that the locals can score.

We in Idaho have a little snow and some winter, and the Middle West has lots of snow and lots of winter. Santa Claus is pretty good to this Idaho country, if you ask us!

If some of you have gone to sleep on the job this is to remind you that Christmas is almost here.

TANGIBLE PROPERTY RELIEVED BY A MILLION

Baker Democrat-Herald

Tangible property, which all agree has been bearing too heavy a tax burden in Oregon, has been relieved to the extent of a million a year thanks to the 1929 legislative estimates prepared at Salem fix the probable income from these sources for next year at $300,000, which automatically reduces the general levy by that much. Other savings amount for the other $120,000 by which the next levy is smaller than the old.

How this works out is shown by the fact that Baker County is to pay the state $329,794-64 next year, last year we paid $390,114-52, which gives us a reduction of $60,319-88, or a little more than a dollar per capita. Not a big saving when spread over so many people, but quite noticeable, and pointing the way to further progress in shifting the burden away from general property and on to other forms of income or wealth.

The fact is, of course, that the big end of the tax money raised is spent locally for the city, the schools, and the county. No economies or shifts in the state fiscal system will produce a great effect in the tax bill because if state taxation were removed altogether there would still be a big bill to pay. However, a good start has been made in complying with the demand of the farm for relief. A million has been taken off the tax roll in Oregon.

Daily Poem

RESPONSE

"And as we came across the hill,
The huckleberry leaves were not:
You might have made a little snow,
Had you been here" (the letter said):

That was a poem for the eyes,
Not there, not then, had I essayed
To paraphrase it in more words:
It is in absence souls are made.

For heart joins eye in cherishing
Familiar leav' for away,
I know how eager hearts burn
Across our hill's gentle gray.

Oh, yes! I see it all, good friends:
I see it all—so bright, so soft,
And there against the autumn sky,
—You, coming home across the rift.

—Alice Lawry Gould

THEN SOMEBODY ELSE?

ONE of the pertinent questions about which newspapers are speaking and private citizens are full of conjecture right now is whether the Union Pacific will make a test case in the supreme court of the right of the interstate commerce commission to issue an order to compel that system to construct the Crane-Crescent Lake gap.

One guess probably is as good as another.

The Oregon Journal has offered a number of very good pointed reasons why the Union Pacific should accept the order as it was given and proceed with the construction of the cutoff. The direct interest of the Twin Falls valley in the Crane-Crescent Lake case is nominal only, but we are frankly admitting that our indirect interest is lively.

This district wants an extension west of the Minidoka-Bull branch. We want to receive the advantages of a shorter haul to the Pacific coast, and construction of this extension which has been the dream of this country for many years will shorten our westward haul by more than 400 miles.

If the Union Pacific constructs the Crane-Crescent Lake gap to provide a shorter haul for Western Idaho and Eastern Oregon, then we in this part of Idaho on the south side of the Snake river are most assuredly going after the Buhl extension with every bit of energy we possess. And we shall do the same thing—the Crane-Crescent Lake gap is not built.

But this thought occurs to us: If the Union Pacific does not want to build the Crane-Crescent Lake gap, even after the interstate commerce commission has established a precedent in ordering this construction, thus putting the stamp of its official approval on the necessity of the added railroad facilities, why should not the Western Pacific build it and thus get a part of the freight haul out of Idaho and Oregon?

From Crane, Oregon, to Twin Falls, Idaho, to build is not so great a distance. Neither would it be far from Twin Falls to Ogden, and with a competing railroad operating in this territory, service and consideration far in excess of that accorded this great producing district in the past might be expected.

It may be too much to expect railroad competition in this district, but the dream is not without foundation. Certainly we do need a shorter haul to the west. Certainly we do need relief from the discriminatory freight rates that are now assessed against us. Certainly we do intend to keep battling away all summer and longer if necessary to help secure some of those reliefs in railroad transportation to which this district is entitled.

BUHL GIRLS WIN AND BOYS LOSE

THURSDAY, Dec. 20, (Special).—Hanging close to the sheets of the Hagerman quarter during the first half of the game, with a score of 5 to 7, Buhl boys basketball team, playing Thursday night at Hagerman, made one-half basket in the second half while Hagerman piled their credit up to 12, winning 12 to 6. Buhl girls won from the Hagerman team with a score of 43 to 15, indicating that their possibilities this year are as good as in the past seasons.

The Hagerman team was composed of the following players: The girls were: Mary Lane, and C. Knechtel. The boys were: Fred, Thurston, Swab, Jupp, and guards.

At Hearing on U. S. Radio Monopoly

Merging of all telegraph, radio, and cable companies under government regulation was advocated by Owen D. Young, chairman of the Radio Corporation of America, to prevent radio monopoly in the communications field. He is pictured above, center, as he appeared before the Senate interstate commerce commission committee to urge amendment of the law which prohibits such monopolies. At the right is Senator James C. McPherson, committee chairman and at the left is Senator Charles C. Bill of Washington.
