ARMED U. S. FORCES ON WAY TO CANAL ZONE

MARINES TO PANAMA AS PRECAUTION

Force Regarded Unlikely Matter of Enforcing Dispute Rule

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The use of force in settling the Panama-Costa Rica dispute is not anticipated by the government, it was officially said at the state department.

The sending of marines, it was stated, is purely a precautionary measure and it is even doubtful whether it will be necessary to land them near the disputed territory.

The state department view is that Panama has no claim whatever to the Coto territory, having abandoned that when she accepted the Loubet award, in view of this fact that state department officials believe that the Panamanian republic will not no distantly be the way of occupation of Coto by Costa Rica.

The reason behind the state department's insistence on strict justice to Costa Rica—due in the fact that America is the guarantor of Panama's integrity and could not honorably permit Panama to exceed her authority and encroach on Costa Rican territory.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—American marines aboard the dreadnaughts Pennsylvania and Idaho left today bustening to General America, to see that the verdict of the United States in favor of Costa Rica in the dispute between Panama and Costa Rica, the United States has served notice on Panama that this government believes Coto Rica should have the disputed territory of Coto, which is at present held by Panama troops.

FREIGHT RATE CAUSES SLUMP IN ALL WAGES

That the farmer is getting less wages than anybody for his work, is the contention of the Farm Service, which has compiled figures to show that returns for the labor of the husbandman are small. This is intended indicates that even though the worker in the country is not doing well the employer is even worse off, relatively.

The following are facts cited to sustain this position.

F. W. Peck, director of the agricultural extension department of the university of Minnesota said the farmer is handicapped by his profit on labor and that grain producers now were receiving but 15 cents an hour on the average, for their labor. Any decrease in freight rates would be added directly to this 15 cents an hour, on the average, for their labor. Any increase in freight rates of 2 cents a bushel would represent an increase of 22 per cent on this profit, he said.

"Commissioner Potter injected into the hearing several times the complaint he has received by the farmer for his labor and that received by the railroad employes, and while Mr. Peck was testifying asked that the economic situation be made the commission's table comparing the two rates of pay.

"The wage workers in agriculture have the situation before their eyes and have yielded to it promptly. The wages of farm hands have dropped approximately one-half. Farm hands were the sought to the situation by saying that it was that or nothing. The factory workers, railroad employes and town workers generally are hard hit then—worse for the farmer and will have to face the same situation. Unemployment exists on a large scale because goods cannot be sold and they cannot be sold because the industrial situation is out of balance. Recovery will come as the balance is restored and cannot come otherwise.

Bearing on Freighters

"The Farm Service points out that the cost of freight is a factor in the low price paid the farmer and resulting low wages for farm help is the high rate of freight charges. It is therefore, urged that all possible means in getting freights lowered. It is pointed out that all the Spokane district, by the means of agitation and intelligent presentation of facts, got a big cut in freights, as did also California wine price received a big cut, and that the Spokane district even more striking results might be attained.

Two Oakley Men Are Drowned by Horse

OAKLEY, Aug. 22—Ernest Bedke, a prominent young cattleman, aged 24, and Harrison Lee, a resident of Oakley, were drowned late Saturday afternoon in a creek near here, into which Bedke was forced by a wild horse that he was trying to break and into which Lee evidently plunged to save him. There was no eyewitness to the actual drowning. Bedke, on a trained horse, had thrown a lasso over the head of the wild animal, which plunged and apparently forced the Bedke animal into the stream. Lee was afoot. About 15 or 20 minutes after the men had disappeared near the creek people missed them and went to the scene. The two horses were standing in the stream in which Bedke's hat also was seen. The bodies were soon found. Bedke's body was bruised much with the feet of the horses. The funeral will be held Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

HOTEL FIRE KILLS 12 IS ESTIMATED

Macon, Georgia, Is Scene of Disastrous Blaze—Searching Ruins for Bodies

MACON, Ga., Aug. 22—One person is known to have been killed and ten are missing in a fire which destroyed the Brown house, one of Macon's oldest hotels, early today.

It is feared the missing are buried beneath the ruins of the building, according to police and firemen.

Eight persons were seriously injured.

That the known death roll would grow as firemen, police and others completed searching the ruins, was the belief.

G. L. Wilder, a guest who escaped from the third floor by climbing from window sill to window sill, declared he left 16 men trapped on the third floor. Police, however, say that not more than six persons are missing.

The guest register was destroyed and there is no way of checking up the number of dead.

Firemen and police, assisted by volunteers were searching the ruins for bodies.

J. W. Hays, 60, was taken from the ruins. He died on the way to the hospital.

The fire started from an explosion of chemicals in a drug store next to the hotel. The blast shook the entire city.

The stairs and elevators of the hotel were destroyed with the blast and men and women leaped from windows.

Between 100 and 150 guests were at the hotel at the time of the explosion, Horace Weems, the clerk, could make no estimate of the exact number.

Men and women rushed from the burning building in their night clothes. Every fire apparatus in the city fought the flames which spread to other buildings threatening half a city block.

Five injured persons have been carried to a local hospital.

PASS McNARY BILL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The house today passed the McNary bill 314 to 21, enabling the war finance corporation to aid in the export of agricultural products. The measure makes $1,000,000,000 available through the corporation for loans to individuals and corporations to export America's crops. Conference between the house and senate now are necessary.

THE RAILROAD'S SLICE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Nearly $2,000,000,000 will have been expended from the United States treasury for the railroads when the administration's railroad bill is enacted, Representative Rayburn, Texas Democrat, told the house today.

Direct appropriations to date total $1,750,000,000 and another appropriation of $200,000,000 from the treasury will be necessary soon, he predicted.

TAX LEVY FOR HOME AFFAIRS LIKELY LOWER

Heads of Local Governments Expect to Allow for Increase in Valuations.

That the increase of 20 per cent of valuation will not be permitted to affect materially the total amount of taxes paid, in local district including Twin Falls county, is evident from the attitude assumed by the several boards having to do with fixing for the city, as a partial offset for the raise, it is asserted that the result has been a lowering of the state levy illiant this heretofore other districts, not raised, most.

Mr. Moore Wants Meeting

"Of course I cannot say what will be done until I consult the others formally on the subject, but I am in favor of a meeting of all the boards having to do with taxes," said County Commissioner T. F. Moore, when asked regarding the matter this morning. "I will say that necessary to raise as large a percentage on the valuation or local purposes as I think it is the first necessary, to raise as large a percentage on the valuation or local purposes as I think it will be

White Cross Will Be Topic at Conference

That the work of the White Cross hospital movement will occupy a prominent part in the forthcoming Idaho state conference of the Methodist church which meets here a week from tomorrow is evident from the fact that practically all of two afternoon sessions will be given to the subject of hospitals. The movement has already received great impetus here.

There will be a number of outside speakers and many workers will be attendants, including Bishop Theodore Wesley Burns, D. D., LL. D., who will preside, Dr. Edward S. Ninde, author of the First M. E. church of Philadelphia, and Dr. J. A. Glendening of Boise.

There will be an address of welcome by Mayor P. W. McCleary in behalf of the city and by Dr. W. W. Burks, of the Christian church, in behalf of churches. Responses will be made by Dr. Ira B. Aldrich, district superintendent, Caldwell, Ore., and Bishop Burns.

Other speakers will be Dr. H. J. Wade who has charge of the work in Alaska, Dr. G. W. Barnes, Dr. W. A. Archer, Dr. G. W. Barnes, Dr. W. A. Winters, Rev. W. A. Douglas, Rev. Ira C. E. Deal, Dr. S. E. GIRL CLAIMS SLEW KENNEDY

But Nobody Believes Her Story; Too Much Evidence Is Consensus Opinion

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—"Too much evidence" in the Kennedy murder case continued to be the hampering factor in the separate investigations being conducted by the prosecution and defense, both admitted here today.

A "complete confession" from a young woman at Manhattan Beach, who said that she had killed John Belton Kennedy in the weird "midnight murder" at Beverly Glen because he had wronged her, was the latest alleged solution of the crime to fade into thin air.

The woman's story proved to have been made up of whole cloth, the district attorney's office said today, after an investigation. No reason for the gratuitous "confession" could be ascertained.

Refunding Bill Is Reported to Senate

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The administration bill providing for refunding the $1,000,000,000 allied debt to the United States was favorably reported to the senate today by Senator Pearson, Pennsylvania, chairman of the finance committee. The terms are far from those laid down for the refunding to be completed in five years.

The bill gives the secretary of the treasury complete authority to refund and to extend time of payment of the principal or interest of any obligation of any foreign government owing the United States, and to accept the obligations of any foreign government in substitution for those now or hereafter held by the United States.

Tax Revision Bill Passes the House

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The republican tax revision bill providing for eventual federal tax reductions of approximately $500,000,000 was passed by the house today. It now goes to the senate.

The eventual reduction will amount to about $[illegible] a year, it will be about $[illegible] in 1922. The bill was passed after the house had taken the observation move to knock out the reduction of surtaxes on high incomes with dedicated revenue. A number of republicans voted against it. This followed the defeat of Representative Cooper's plan to convene the republican caucus for a four-hour recess in asking delay for the soldier bonus bill in the senate.

The democratic motion to recommit was lost by a vote of 226 to 149.

Why a B. P. Frost Proof Silo is the Best

1. Made entirely of wood. Double walls with dead air space between, affording perfect insulation, which eliminates loss from frost.
2. Walls are made of flooring run perpendicular, giving a smooth surface inside, insuring even settling of silage. Silos with horizontal staves construction are rough inside and result in loss of silage around edges, because the air gets in, due to improper settling.
3. Round shape of B. P. silo gives maximum capacity and stability and makes better silage.
4. Simple and economical to construct. All materials available at B. P. yards.
5. Wood makes most suitable silage. 1.5 inches of wood gives food protection equal to 24 inches of concrete.

Insure Against High Winter Feed Costs

The farmer with his B. P. silo filled with sweet ishing silage need not worry about high Winter feed costs. It pays for itself in a short time. Build your new silo NOW and be sure of plenty of the best feed obtainable. Ask any B. P. Silo owner.

Lind Auto Tries Out New Buick Four

The New Buick Four is here, "it far surpasses my expectations and that of my friends," said C. H. Lind of the Lind Automobile Company this morning after taking a short spin in one of the new cars. Several spectators and prospective purchasers gathered at the Lind garage this afternoon to look over the new car and admire its excellent lines, and the spirit and air of dependability which the new fours possesses.

The new designs are being turned up this forenoon and several citizens have enjoyed a try out on them now [illegible]

So there is something more to a Buick than so much steel, wood and rubber. A buyer purchases much more than well-designed parts, cleverly assembled. He purchases personal transportation — transportation of such character that he feels no limitation in going where he wishes, and when he wishes, on business or personal pleasure.

This accomplishment is an attainment that has taken years. It started with due recognition of the great possibilities of this motor car in business pursuits that awaited only the mechanical improvement of the car.

At the beginning, the Buick engineers were satisfied with the correctness of the valve-in-head principal of motor design. And since that time they have concentrated their attention and efforts on the improvement of the Buick valve-in-head motor.

Their success is seen reflected in the actual performance records of the new Buick cars for 1922. Power is supplied in abundance and with it is forthcoming that comes only from a

ALL STARS "SHOW" KIMBERLY PREVIOUS BEATING NO FLUKE

Take Neighboring Team into Camp, 13 to 3; Fix Pitches Fine Ball—Lemp and Thompson Work for Kimberly.

The All Stars took a fall out of Fix yesterday afternoon, on the Kimberly lot by the score of 13 to 3. The boys from beyond the sugar factory were never in it, as Phil Fix pitched one of his best games.

This game settles the supremacy of the two teams, and it was easily seen that the Stars are a wee bit too powerful for the rest of the teams around this section.

Lemp went in the box for the enemy, and in the first inning he made the local lads look foolish, but they found him for a run in the second and one in the third, and in the fourth they came to life and showed us "one of the best hitting teams in the state."

Thompson took his place in the seventh and pitched nice ball, holding the Orwig boys to two hits.

Phil Fix, pitching his first game for the Stars, did nice work, and, with his teammates hitting the ball to all corners, was never in serious trouble.

He was cool as the proverbial cucumber, and the heavy hitters of Kimberly were completely baffled with his curve ball.

The largest crowd that ever saw a game at Kimberly was present, and it was fully 50 per cent Twin Falls.

In the second inning the Stars sneaked one over. After Hills had fouled, Morley walked, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch, and scored the first run of the game while Riley was throwing Kleiner out at first.

They added another one in the third. Whitzel opened the inning with a triple to right center, Neuman struck out, Beall was hit on the hand and then Zienke singled, scoring Whitzel. Watson fanned and Hills ended the inning by grounding out.

It was in the fourth that the locals tore loose. Kleffner started the fireworks by singling to right and went to second when Brown threw the ball back to first base. Fix singled to left, Kleffner moving up to third. Fix stole second on the first ball. Whitzel singled through short, scoring Kleffner and Fix went to second on the throw-in, and jogged to third on a wild pitch. Neuman walked and stole second. Beall whiffed the option, but Zienke doubled in center, scoring Whitzel and Neuman. Watson was granted a pass, and then Hills tripled to left, chasing Zienke and Watson.

Hills scored a moment later when Emerson fumbled Morley's easy roller. Kleffner ended the agony by grounding out. Seven runs, five hits.

In the sixth they went at it again. Beall was safe on Emerson's error and stole second. Zienke went back to the bench with his war club in his hand. Watson singled to left, and then Mr. Hills made his second triple of the day, scoring Beall and Watson. Hills spiked the rubber when Morley grounded out, short to first. Kleffner walked and stole second, but the Stars made their last run in the eighth on Watson's triple to left and an infield out.

The Kimberly folks got a kick out of the game in the second, when their heroes herded two runners across on three hits, no out and an error.

They scored their last run in the fifth, on a hit, last we heard of it before, and two errors.

NOTES OF THE GAME

(By Bleacherite)

We know now which town has the best team.

Fix used his noodle at all times, and the tighter the fix the better the Fix.

Lemp struck out our three heavy hitters in the first.

He made 12 of the local boys go back to the bench and tell Orwig why it happened.

Pat Thompson took the mound in the seventh, and his smoke ball was working fine.

Why didn't "Pat" start the game?

In the fifth Whitney was safe to first on a balk, with no one on the bases. Where did they get that fast?

I'm a stranger here, and I want to know.

They claimed that Fix was out of position at the time, if that is so, then each ball that he threw should have been called a "ball" whether it was over the plate or not. Just as long as the batter doesn't make an attempt to hit the ball the umpire shall call "ball" while the pitcher is out of position, but should the batter hit the ball it is legal and a play can be made. But a balk—never!

The umpires had their hands full, every close play causing an argument.

Such conduct in the weeds, as the "umps" would is law, and they rarely change their decisions.

"Beefing" at a ball game is detrimental.

Fix made a nice stop of Thompson's hot grounder in the fifth.

Whitzel and Otto Neuman pulled off a double steal in the first.

Fix sure watched the runners, and caught a sleeping beauty off first in the fourth.

Thirty-two strike outs yesterday. Eighteen of the All Stars whiffed the breeze while 14 Kimberly men chopped thrice in vain.

Don't forget our big game this evening, between the Hanks and the Legion.

Wednesday we have the Elks and Moose, and the two teams will positively be on hand to play.

The unfortunate occurrence of last Friday night will not happen again.

Bubi went down to defeat yesterday at the hands of the fast Jerome team by the score of 4 to 0. Steele, Twin Falls latest addition, did the throwing for Jerome and let the Bubilites down with two hits. Fourteen of them took the strike-out route.

Bill Bailey Chosen New Chief of Elks

Appointment of "Bill" Bailey, the hard-working Elks shortstop, as captain of that club in the Twilight League, was announced today by Manager R. H. Stevenson.

Otto Neuman and Bob Logan, team captains, will assist Captain Bailey in handling the team for the remainder of the season.

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

CHARLIE CROW.

"Caw, caw, caw," said Charlie Crow.

"Caw, caw, caw," he said again a moment later.

And a little bit later still he began once more to call out as he flew "Caw, caw, caw!"

"What is the matter with you," asked Clarence Crow.

"I'm thinking of how fine my black shining feathers look in the bright sunlight. I'm thinking of the dark purple shades that are in them. I'm thinking of my wings which are about as long as anybody's.

"I'm thinking how handsome a crow is Mrs. Crow. She dresses just as I do. She doesn't wear quite such a shining kind of black feather as I do. That is because She goes in the Birds' Lady Feather Makers.

"They make the Bird ladies their feathers and they make quieter feathers than the Bird Gentlemen Feather Makers.

"I'm thinking of all that."

"Fine thoughts," said Clarence Crow.

"Caw, caw, caw, those are fine thoughts of yours, Charlie."

"Glad to have you agree with me," said Charlie. "That is always very pleasant."

"Well, now," Charlie continued, "it would be worth while helped the farmer in our usual spring way."

"Ah," said Clarence, "it is the only time we do help the poor dear."

"Why is he a poor dear?" asked Charlie. "Or why do you call him that?"

"I don't feel sorry for the farmer. No, indeed, not at all. He can do all his own work if he wants to and no one will bother him. He can do just as he pleases about everything.

"He can eat up every scrap of grain he has if he wants to and no one will say, 'Run away, farmer,' or I'll make a scarecrow which will make you run away.

"For the farmer never tells himself to run away and he never makes a scarecrow for himself. So I don't feel sorry for him, not in the least, not in the least, not at all."

"Well," said Clarence, "the reason I said he was a poor dear, or the reason I had for calling him a poor dear was because it is only in the spring that we ever help him.

"It is quite true that in the spring we eat the worms and bugs in the ground which he plows for the early crops.

"We go flying along and we go down on the ground and we get such good bugs and things. That helps him a great deal.

"But later on we don't help him so much. We take just what we can, and we help ourselves. Of course we don't just go along in the springtime to help him. We like the good meals we get and then, too, we might as well say that the ground is in fine shape for planting, for we like what is planted, and we like to see it grow!"

"No matter," said Charlie, "we do help him in the springtime. We help him a great deal.

"And I think it is fine that we do, caw, caw, I think it is fine.

"We're regular old robbers anyway. We're a pretty bold, bad lot!

"After the little crows come we just go marauding and hunting for everything and we don't care whom we rob at all.

"We don't care where we get our food, nor how! That is the way with the crows.

"And when folks hear us calling, 'Caw, caw, caw,' they don't know whether we're just been robbing someone or are just going to rob someone or have, for a change, not been robbing anyone.

"Of course we know what our own sounds mean, but we aren't going to let them know them. If we can prevent it.

"Caw, caw, caw, we don't let them know about our sounds and their meanings."

"Caw, caw, caw," said Clarence, "we won't do that!"

"The way of the transgressor is hard," is an old scriptural saying but does not seem to apply to those transporting liquor across the Canadian line into the United States. Let us hope that some check will be placed on this nefarious traffic.

Tourists who are stopping at our park state that Twin Falls has the finest tourist park anywhere in the west." One gentleman stated the other day that the only one which compared at all favorably with this one was a park at Winfield, Kansas.

An eastern preacher says the Bible should be on every lawyer's shelf.

We don't know a better law-book for a lawyer to read than the Bible. It is the basis of much of our law and contains some pointed references to lawyers. We recommend to lawyers a reading of Verse 46, Chapter 11, in the Gospel of Luke:

And Jesus said: "Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! For ye laden men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers."

The average citizen of Twin Falls feels that the price he is paying for coal is too high, but who is to blame? Let's look up and see where the principal part of the cost of delivering coal into this tract goes and we will find that practically five dollars per ton goes to the railroads for hauling it from the mine to this point. This seems to us to be a penalty too great for any people who boast of living in the land of the free and the home of a self-governed people. When such outrages can be perpetrated isn't our great democracy crumbling and isn't this one of the signs that should serve as a warning to our people that it may be necessary to fight again for our liberty.

No one questions the fact that this city needs a railroad but there is a big proportion of our people who feel safe that we need two rather than just one road. If we had just one big dry goods store it would be far from satisfactory if we had just one store of each line. It would not satisfy the public then how can you hope to satisfy the people with just one railroad especially when you have to endure the prohibitive tariffs charged by the present company. Competition will tend to lower these rates and give us better service, therefore, let's build the new road to Nevada.

What is the intent of the railroads operating in this tract? Is it to bankrupt the residents here by penalizing them to such an extent they will lose their extensive holdings. The cost of marketing the crops from this rich part of Idaho is so great that the growers would almost be better off not to produce a crop at all. Think of a penalty of from one to twenty-five dollars per acre on the crop of your soil. Such a policy on the part of the railroads will not only bankrupt the residents of this tract but when that is done it will react on the railroads and cut off a lucrative income. It would surely be a boon to the railroads to establish a lower freight rate and thus increase their volume of business. Experts tell us that it is volume of business which creates the profit anyway for the railroads.

PULL THE TEETH

Your most powerful instinct is self-preservation—the desire to keep on living.

Self-propagation—craving to have children—is second.

Vanity comes third.

On this is built the science called psychology.

The impending disarmament conference in Washington will interest you keenly. For one thing, your taxes can be lowered if the world lays down its arms. More basic, it appeals because it is tinkering with your instinct of self-preservation. That strikes home.

Let's hold this instinct of self-preservation up by the hair and take a look at it from all sides.

Every form of life, animated by the instinct of self-preservation, develops some form of defense.

The mule kicks. The rattlesnake attacks its enemy with salvos from its hypodermic teeth. The dog bites. The cat claws.

If science could evolve a new animal or plant without any mode of defense, it would soon develop weapons.

For instance, the chimeroms. It once had a soft skin. But it developed its thick hide to protect itself against poisonous insects. So, too, the wild pig grew a tough hide as protection against snakes.

Small fish have needle-pointed dorsal fins. These rise, when frightened, making it hard for a big fish to swallow the small ones.

A South African plant, called the Mesembryanthemum, is attracting considerable attention among scientists. This plant so closely resembles the quartz pebbles, among which it grows, that it often is picked up in mistake for a stone.

Scientists say that this plant's camouflage means of protection was developed by its instinct of self-preservation.

Similarly, the ptarmigan, Yukon bird, changes its feathers to white, in wintertime, to make it invisible against the snow.

Militarists for thousands of years have preached that every form of life develops some means of defense—the armies and navies are natural processes in human life.

The fallacy of this is that man has conquered the world of beasts. All of his natural enemies are under control.

Man's only remaining enemy is himself—and man is quarrelsome only when he is armed.

War between nations is barbarous, futile, senseless.

Disarmament by one country might be dangerous. But when the whole world disarms, as eventually it will, each man, each nation, will be relatively as well-protected as if all were armed.

Lions in fighting, thank Providence for their teeth and claws. If pull the teeth and claws of every lion and each lion would be safer and possessed of the same relative defense against other lions as before.

Disarmament is the perfect protection for man.

TEARS, IDLE TEARS

It doesn't help, when trouble's here, to shed the loackish, bring tear; I well recall the fateful day when my old hen refused to lay; I needed eggs to poach and boil, and brace me up for lonesome toil; but when I sought the biddy's coop, she'd laid no eggs, and cured no whoop. And I had fed her costly hay and kindred grub, that she might lay. I might have wept, and torn my hair and rent my board in my despair; instead of that I chased the fowl, beheaded her, despite her howls, and had her for my evening meal, and then remarked, "How good I feel!" And so I make the best of things when grief in my direction swings. I once possessed a baby steed, and when it balked every rain or plead or weep, or let hot language roll, or soak it with a cedar pole, When on a journey I would start, I took some volumes in the cart; when balk once showed the steed, I'd open some good book and read, and spend an hour in coaxing there, instead of paying of the air, and when the horse deigned to go, I'd speak a loud, commanding "Whoa!" And so he quit the balking game and as a traiter earned much fame, because the best of bald-faced rages, and brought me in ten hundred wages. I always make the best of things, and am as happy as nine kites.

Sisters

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER 1.—When his two daughters, Alix and Cherry, the latter just eighteen years old, and his niece, Anne, leaving Strickland, retired, to living at Mill Cove, a short distance from San Francisco, his closest friend is Peter Joyce, scion of a aristocratic family in the vicinity. Harlin Lloyd, young engineer, falls in love with and secretly becomes engaged to Cherry.

"Cherry, now?" he asked, detaining her for a moment. "She—you don't think that perhaps Peter admires her?"

"Peter!" Anne echoed amazedly, and stood thinking.

Peter was more than thirty years old, thin, scholarly, something of a solitary, the sweet, dreamy, affection his neighbor who had shared the girls' lives for the past ten years. For some reason she could not, or would not, define, Anne liked the idea of Cherry and Peter falling in love.

"Somehow one doesn't think of Peter as marrying anyone—" she said dowly, still trying to grasp the thought.

"Peter is a dear fellow," the doctor agreed. "But Cherry—why, she's lovely enough! He—I don't suppose he really ever kissed her—" The old man hesitated, began again; "Just fancy," he assured her. "Just an old father's fear that she is growing up too fast!"

"Because we all, not just especially, small dear," Anne reminded him, sniffing. "Peter," she added thoughtfully, "has kissed us all, now and then!" She stopped for a dutiful good-night kiss, and was gone.

Downstairs, the doctor sat on, thinking, and his face was grave. He was thinking of little Cherry's good-night kiss, half an hour ago. She had rested against his arm, and he had held her there, but what had been the thoughts behind the blue eyes so near his own? He realized with a great rush of fear that some man had kissed Cherry in night, had held her against a tobacco-scented coat, and that the girl was a woman, and an AVERED woman at that. Cherry—kissed a man! Her father's heart winced away from the thought.

Young Lloyd and Peter had walked home with her. But if Anne was right in her suddenly suspicious of Lloyd's intentions, then it must have been Peter who surprised little Cherry with a sudden embrace.

And as he came to his conclusions a certain relief crept into the old man's heart. Peter was an odd fellow; he was ten years too old for the child. But Peter was a lover of books and gardens and woods and music, after all, and Peter's father and this old man musing by the fire had been "Lee" and "Paul" to each other since boyhood. Peter might give Cherry a kiss his innocently as a brother; in any case, Peter would wait for her, should he ask consideration and tenderness when he did win her.

Cherry, he reflected fearfully, was as pretty as her mother had been at eighteen, with the same rounded chin and apricot cheeks, and the same shadowed innocent blue eyes with a film of crystalized hair blown across them. She had the strange, the indefinable quality that without words, without glances, draws youth toward youth, draws admiration and worship, draws love, and as he raised his father for the first time tonight formulated in his heart the thought that she might be happily married—married—married! Why, what did she know of life, of submission and courage and sacrifice? It would be years, many years, before the snowy frills, and the pale gold head, and the firm, brown little hand would be ready for that!

Not many hours after he went slowly up to bed morning began to creep on the little valley. Alix, at her early bath, heard quail calling, and looked out to see the last of the fog vanishing at eight o'clock, and to get a whiff of fragrance from the Peruvian lilies, blooming this year for the first time. At half-past eight she came out into the garden, to find her father somewhat ruefully studying the tumbled ruins of his yellow banksia rose. The garden was still wet, but warming fast; she picked a plume of dark and performed heliotrope, and began to fasten it in his coat lapel while she chaffed him.

"Well never get that back on the post, my dear boy," Alix said insistfully.

Her father pursed his lips, shook his head doubtfully. He came somewhat week ago, had been spending fantastic sums of money, and was now suffering the inevitable reaction. Alix, at her elbow, heard quail calling, and looked out to see the last of the fog vanishing at eight o'clock, and to get a whiff of fragrance from the Peruvian lilies, blooming this year for the first time. At half-past eight she came out into the garden, to find her father somewhat ruefully studying the tumbled ruins of his yellow banksia rose. branches well toward the ridge-pole, story and a half above their heads. But the great wind of yesterday that had ended the spring had brought in the summer and dragged it from its place and flung it, a jumble of emerald grass and sweet clusters of cream blossoms, across the path and the rest of the garden. Alix tentatively tugged at a loose spray, and stood biting her lip.

Her attention was distracted by the setter puppy who came clumsily waddling toward her. "Hello, old Bumpy-doodles!" she said with rich affection, kissing the dog's silky head, and burying both hands in his feathered collar. "Hello, old Hock!"

"Alexandra, for heaven's sake stop handling that brute!" said Peter Joyce disgustedly, coming up the path "I dare say you've not had your hands free, either. Go wash your hands! Morning, Doctor."

Father and daughter turned to smile upon him, a tall, lean man, with a young face and a dandy crossed head and with touches of premature silver at his temples.

He was a bachelor, just entering his thirties, a fastidious, critical, exacting man by reputation, but showing his best side to the Stricklands. They had a vague idea that he was rich, according to their modest standard, but he apparently had no extravagant tastes, and lived as quietly, or more quietly, than they did. He liked solitude, books, music, dogs, and his fellows. The old doctor's one social enjoyment was to visit Peter, and the younger man went to no other place so steadily as he came to the old house under the redwoods.

"Morning, Peter!" said Doctor Strickland now, smiling, at him. "Have you had yours?"

"My house," said Mr. Joyce, fastidiously. "In a well-appointed place, sir," he added, pursing his lips to whistle, as he looked at the rose tree. "Monday's wind did that!"

"Tuesday's wind and Dad," Alix answered. "Will it go back, Peter?"

"I—I don't know!" he mused, walking slowly about the wreck. "If we had a lever down here, and some fellow on the roof with a rope, maybe!"

"Mr. Lloyd is coming over!" Alix announced. Peter nodded absently, but the mention of Marlin Lloyd reminded him that they had all dined at his house on the very evening when the mysterious gale had commenced, and with interest he asked:

"Cherry catch cold coming home Tuesday night?"

"No; she squeezed in between Dad and me, and was as warm as toast!" Alix answered casually. "How'd you like Mr. Lloyd?" she added.

"Nice fellow!" Peter answered.

"He's awfully nice," Alix agreed.

"Who is he?" Peter asked curiously. "Where are his people and all that?"

"His people live in Portland," the girl answered. "He's a mining engineer, and he's waiting now to be called to 33 Mile; he's to be at a mine there. He's lots of fun—when you know him, really!"

"Talking of the new Prince Charming, of course?" Anne said, joining them, and linking an arm in her uncle's and in Alix's arm. "Don't bring the poppy in, Alix, please! Breakfast, Uncle Lee. Come and have another cup of coffee, Peter?"

"Prince Charming, eh?" Peter echoed thoughtfully, as they all turned toward a delicious drift of the odor of bacon and coffee and crossed the porch to the dining room. "I was going down for the mail, but now I'll have to stay and see this love matter through! Thanks, Anne, but I'll watch you. Where's Cherry?" he added, glancing about.

Cherry answered the question herself by trilling in in a Japanese wrapper, and beginning to drink her coffee with bare, slender arms resting on the table. Nobody protested, the adored youngest was usually given her way.

"I heard you all laughing, under the window and it—woke—me—up!" Cherry said dreamily.

"It seems to me," Anne, who had been eying her uneasily, said lightly, "that some one I know is getting pretty old to come downstairs in that rig when strangers are here!"

"It seems to me this is just as decent as lots of things—bathing suits for instance!" Cherry retorted instantly, gathering the robe about her, and giving Anne a resentful glance over her blue cup.

"I never saw rope somewhere—the doctor insinuated," Where did I put that long rope—what did I have it for, in the first place—

"Yeh and it is up the apple tree," Alix reminded him. "The tree that died after all—"

"Ah, yes!" said her father, his attentive face brightening. "Ah, yes! Now where is that rope? He turned as Alix observed that she had seen it somewhere, and advanced a tentative guess as to the color, his eyes fell upon Cherry, and wrapt from Cherry's dreamily fresh face for she was dreaming over her breakfast—to Peter, and he wondered, if Peter had kissed her.

"Come on, let's get at it!" Alix exclaimed, with relish. "Come on—Sweetums," she added, to the dog. She caught his forepaws, and he whipped his bushiest tail between his legs, and looked about with mingled curiosity while she crawled through a runner dance. "He's the darlingest pup, we ever had!" Alix gloted to Cherry, who was departing for the upper regions and a complete costume.

"Bring your cigarette out here, Peter," the old doctor said crossing the garden to look in the abandoned greenhouse for his rope. "I'm not here," he stated. Then he began again. "You bought Cherry being last night?" he asked.

"As a matter of fact, I didn't," Peter answered, in his quick, precise tones. "I came with Lloyd and Cherry as far as the bridge, then I cut up the hill. Why?" he added sharply

"Won't wash!"

"Nothing's up," Doctor Strickland said slowly. "But I think Lloyd admires—or is beginning to admire—her," he said.

"Who—Cherry?" Peter exclaimed, with distaste and incredulity in his tone.

"You don't think so?" the doctor, looking at him shrewdly, asked energetically.

"Why, certainly not!" Peter said, his face very red. "She's much younger than Anne and Alix—"

"It doesn't always go by that," the doctor suggested.

"No, I know it doesn't," Peter answered in his quick, annoyed fashion. "I should be sorry," Cherry's father admitted.

"Sorry!" Peter echoed impatiently. "But it's quite out of the question, of course! It's quite out of the question. She—she wouldn't consider him for an instant," he suddenly decided to great satisfaction. "You doesn't forget that she has something to do with it! Very fastidious, Cherry. She's not like other girls!"

"That's true—that's true!" Doctor Strickland agreed, in great relief. They turned back toward the garden, in time to meet Alix and several dogs streaming across the clearing. Over the girl's shoulder, was coiled the great rope; she leaped various logs and small bushes as she came, and the dogs barked madly and leaped with her. Breathless, she stumbled and fell into her father's arms, and both men had the same thoughts, one that made them smile upon her boyishness and lightness; the other that is twenty-one—eighteen is three long years younger and less responsible!"

"Hamon's dream" of an oil road he began shortly after he became identified with the oil game and through the latter days of his life his oil road was almost an obsession.

500,000 JOIN IN RENT-HOG WAR

Tenants in Louisiana Organize to Protect Themselves Against Profiteers.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22.—The biggest "rent hog" hunt ever staged is promised in September by an organized army of 500,000 tenants in Louisiana.

Under the leadership of the Louisiana Housing Commission, appointed last January by Governor Parker, the army will demand remedial legislation of the state legislature which that body meets September 6 at Baton Rouge.

Rent gouges in this state to date are estimated to total more than $20,000,000.

Preparation for the "hunt" began July 4, when Morgan A. D. Hill, chairman of the commission, issued a call to rents by all tenants, requesting those who had been gouged to fill with him statements of rent raises, together with copies of their leases. Thousands have replied.

Hill and commission members have worked fast, seeking to get their purpose accomplished before October 1—Louisiana moving day.

Legislation covering three joker points has been prepared and the Housing Commission will endeavor to have it rushed through:

ONE. A permanent State Housing Board, with supervision in housing matters and embracing a rent commission, with powers of rent adjustment.

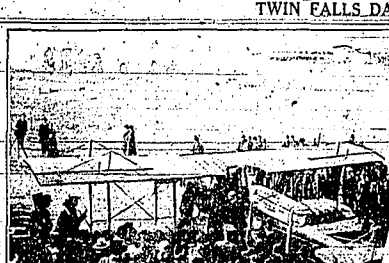
TWO. Establishment of a rent court.

THREE. Changes in eviction laws preventing eviction of families because of rent disputes.

FOUR. Placing property values on the basis of rent returns and assessing accordingly.

The Tenants's Rights association has been organized to follow up and reinforce work of the Housing Commission. Real estate interests also have organized to fight the rent legislation.

Following its fight in the legislature, the Housing Commission will launch an ambitious building program, which members say, will enable New Orleans and Louisiana to catch up with its housing shortage in three years.



AIRPLANE AS HEARSE—This is said to be the first airplane funeral hold in America. The coffin of an American aviator is shown on the plane which transported it from the aviator's home in the mid-dle west, to the cemetery. Permission to take this photograph was given on condition that no name or location be given, as members of the family had arranged the private funeral simply as a fitting tribute to a flyer.

"Marry Yourself and Avoid the Divorce Mill!" Is the Latest!

THOMAS BARR, JR., AND HISBRIDE, MISS WARNA L. JOHNSON

(By Newspaper Enterprise)

NEWCASTLE, Ind. Aug. 20.—We intend marriage with each other and desire to accomplish the same under the care of this meeting.

By these words Miss Warna L. Johnson, of Richmond and Thomas Barr, Jr., of Newcastle made themselves man and wife on August 18.

The bride and groom are Quakers. Marry yourself is permissable under Quaken laws. It also is possible under Indiana' laws, which recognize the Quaker custom. The ceremony is simplicity itself and no state marriage license is required. The ceremony was carried out ill church, in the presence of the congregation.

This was the first marry-yourself wedding in this state in 50 years.

The Friends' doctrine is that no human power can unite two persons in marriage, the solemn declaration of the parties themselves being the true marriage ceremony.

Barr's mother is Rev. Daisy Dougla-tas Barr, the pastor of the Friends church in Newcastle.

"I believe that if more couples were to marry themselves it would lessen the divorce evil," she says. "Records show only three divorces among Quaker couples who have entered wedlock through this ceremony."

MADISON MILLS, Va., Aug. 22.—Colonel T. G. Gilbon, pioneer merchant and miller of Madison county has an athletic family.

"There are fifteen children in his brood—nine boys and six girls. All the boys play ball. They call their team the Gilbon Brothers nine.

"I'm mighty proud of my family," says Colonel Gilbon. "I guess I'm about the proudest daddy in the world.

"There aren't fifteen such—but anyhow:

"I didn't do much ball playing when I was a kid. Didn't have time.

"I once objected to my boys playing ball. After I saw the good it did them, I was for it and encouraged the girls to play basketball.

"I'm sorry that there weren't 11 boys in my flock so we could have a full football eleven."

Like the Pops.

The Gilbon boys by parallels the famous "Dallas Boy and the Seven Little Pops" who are now on the stage.

The Gilbon brothers are only just beginning to pitch together in the game. They intend to play a big season and then—but they are more interested in the future than in the past.

"I can't say what I'm going to do after this season," Hugh H. Gilbon said. "I'm not thinking of leaving my brothers and the only opportunity I have to take the field is in the game of family gathers up around our annual game they renew their boyhood friendship.

"Our team is composed of four pitchers, two catchers, one each at first, second, third, short, left, center and right fields, and Harry H. (bottom row) O. Littleton and Carroll H. (right).

"Our team is made up of boys, sisters and brothers all to be baseball or bust.

"We stick together like athletics in bind a family together—and the bigger the flock the better."

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when it fades, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Adv.

FARMER POWER COMPANY WILL PUSH PROGRAM

New Board Chosen and Plans Made to Proceed When Power Site Ready

Redetermined to push construction plans as soon as litigation connected with its Clear Lakes power site is concluded, the Farmers Mutual Light and Power company held a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting at Buhl Saturday evening, electing a new board of directors and declaring its intention to hasten the day of cheap per kilowatt electricity.

Three members of the old board of directors were re-elected, these being Peter Erickson, L. V. Sonnie and W. Hemling. R. L. Hurst and J. J. Glojkowski were elected to the board in place of H. Murphy and E. A. Littler. The new board will meet tonight to organize.

Putting shoulders to the wheel now the keystone of the meeting Saturday, a financial campaign will be shortly launched to increase the present $15,000 fund already subscribed sufficiently to construct the company's projected transmission line and distributory lines, as necessary.

By the 12th of next month, it is expected, the Clear Lakes power site litigation will be ended. The title is now disputed in the case of the Idaho Power company and Mrs. Sylvier vs. W. T. Hazzard, who sold the site to the Farmers' Mutual. The state supreme court handed down a decision in favor of Hazzard, but an appeal is understood to be in prospect.

Serving every consumer with current at cost, is the outlined program of the mutual power company.—It expects to be able to deliver current at 4 cents per kilowatt, whereas the present rate is 9 cents. Another attraction held out to stockholders in the company is the opportunity to secure electrical appliances of any kind at 30 per cent below retail cost.

Name of Norman Origin.

Those who bear the name "Fox" should not jump to the conclusion that the word has anything to do with the animal. The Normans were very fond of a given name (now obsolete) which was spelled Fulque or Fulke. It was as common then as Tom or William today. But the Anglo-Saxon tongue found it very difficult to pronounce and gradually the name came to be known as Fox, in which form it still survives. Variations are Faux, Faxon, Vaux, Fowkes and several others.

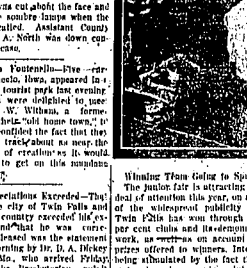
Winning Club Record Is Stimulating Juniors to Make Big Effort at Fair



Winning Team Going to Spokane

The junior fair is attracting a great deal of attention this year, on account of the widespread publicity which Twin Falls has won through its 100 per cent clubs and its demonstration work, as evidence on account of the prizes offered to winners. Interest is being stimulated by the fact that the state champion canning club under its local leader, Mrs. E. A. Bryant, is going to the great northwest fair and exhibition at Spokane, which opens September 6. This club, which consists of Acme Schubert 3rd frame and Zola Rowbaby, made a record of 17 minutes last year, at Boise, while the nearest competitor took 22 minutes. That it has not lost its "athletic foot" is indicated by the fact that at a trial demonstration yesterday it made a record of 18 minutes, and expects to equals that time without extra intensive training. The club won national recognition last year for its work.

All this is arousing the different clubs of all sorts to do the utmost to get into the "Diamond A" class and place Twin Falls on the map of the world.

Statement by Club Leader O'Reilly

The questionnaire which has been sent out to the 450 club members indicates that exhibits in every department will be complete. Generous prizes have been offered by the Fair association and the county commissioners for this department of the fair.

Among the agricultural exhibits which the boys will display are potatoes, corn, wheat, sugar beets, beans (together with garden vegetables of all kinds. A total of $400 is offered as premiums in this department.

Thirty-four head of pure bred registered Shorthorns will completely occupy one of the large show barns on the grounds. These Shorthorns are of excellent type and quality and are the property of the club members. One hundred and ninety-five dollars is offered in premiums.

Some 22 head of registered Jersey stock will be exhibited in this department, where $150 is offered in prizes.

Boys' Department

The best department of the livestock show will be the Duroc swine. The boys of the Twin Falls fair are owners of more than 150 head of pure bred registered Duroc swine, some of them being among the best in the northwest. A special club futurity of $200 is offered at the fair for swine in addition to the district futurity of $200. In which the club will compete. Alfred Stronk, who lives a mile east on Addison avenue, possibly has the finest Duroc litter in the northwest. Many breeders of this class of swine who have visited his herd pronounce them as undoubtedly the best.

Girls' Department

In the girls' department complete exhibits in canning, cooking and sewing will be on display. There will be about one hundred girls who will have canning exhibits, about 125 who will have cooking exhibits while 150 girls will display exhibits of their sewing. The sewing club girls held the championship in sewing for this year, having made the greatest record that ever was reported to the Department of Agriculture in competition.

In addition to the agricultural display, Hershock and home economics exhibits contests will be held for the boys where they will have an opportunity to place cattle, sheep and swine. The three boys making the highest record in this line of work at the county fair will be taken to the state fair to compete for the state championship.

A judging school for the purpose of giving the boys instruction in this line of work will be held at the home of A. A. Davis on the pole line northwest of Twin Falls, on Wednesday afternoon, August 24.

Demonstrations in canning by the cold pack method and in cooking will be conducted at the county fair by teams of girls from Castleford, Sunny Side, Poplar Hill, Washington, Marsh, Filer, Curtis, Shamrock, Excelsior, Kimberly, Melrose, Kimberly Rural Juniors, Orchards.

The contests from will consist of two girls who will demonstrate the making of biscuits, shortcake and tea rolls, for the benefit of the public immediately following the completion of their demonstration, the public will be invited to sample their cooking.

The Canning Contest—The demonstration team in canning will consist of three girls who will demonstrate the canning of fruits and vegetables by the cold pack method.

The cooking team and canning contest will be held immediately after the county fair will be taken to the state fair to compete for the state championship. This honor was won by Mrs. E. A. Bryant's team last year. Her team consisted of Acme and Zola Rowbaby and Agnes Shubert. These girls are now busy for their plans to attend the interstate fair at Spokane this fall where they will compete for the championship in the northwest in competition of livestock than they had last year and had no difficulty in sweeping the boards last year.

"Yankee Doodle,"

The authorship of "Yankee Doodle" is generally ascribed to Dr. Richard Shuckburg, a British surgeon, who was in the Colonies during the French war. This has attributed the present version of "Yankee Doodle" to Edward Harvard Bangs, also graduated from Harvard in 1764. The tune has been attributed to various countries and even carried back to the church of the middle ages, but most likely it had its origin in Gaul land. It is found in an opera by Sarg and Arnold, "Dan in Guy's Society" in London in 1784.

well-balanced motor long in the making.

Just as the motor has been brought to the highest pitnacle in its development so have its co-related units been developed, and co-ordained at the same time. No one part has been advance at the expense of the another; perfect balance and proportion have been sought and obtained in a generous measure. And in preserving the correct relation between power and load, comfort and safety, performance and durability, true motor car efficiency has resulted in the Buick.

The new four-cylinder car will be manufactured and sold in accordance with the Buick Creed, which in part reads: No matter what the price, a Buick car must and will give the maximum of that service for which it was intended and must bear its proportion of the responsibility of maintaining that high prestige which Buick cars have established.

"Buick reputation, no pro-eminent by firm and fair was not won, by chance, but is due to the policy established with the production of the first Buick car and so consistently adhered to ever since—that of giving the owner the maximum of service for the minimum cost."—Adv.

RECOVERS HEALTH AFTER 15 YEARS

Oakland Man Gains 20 Pounds Taking Tanlac and Is Now Feeling Fine

"When I saw that I had gained 20 pounds in weight I was not much surprised, for I have been eating like a wolf ever since I began taking Tanlac," said Walter B. Tucker, of 1021 Sixty-sixth St., Oakland, Cal. "Why, this medicine has rid me of a case of indigestion that troubled me for fifteen years. My stomach got into such a disordered condition that my appetite was that bloated me up as tight as a drum, and I would have burning pains in the pit of my stomach, and in my chest. Sometimes I could hardly retain a thing in my stomach, my appetite almost left me and I hardly ever ate a mouthful for breakfast.

"I had awful headaches, my kidneys were in bad condition and I had such pains in my back I could scarcely bend over and straighten up without suffering agony. I would lie for hours at night suffering torture and in the morning feel as weak I could hardly drag myself to work. Every now and then I would have to lay off from work for a day or two.

I have now taken four bottles of Tanlac and my appetite is great and nothing I eat gives me the slightest trouble. I no longer suffer from gas on my stomach and in fact I haven't an ache or a pain anywhere. I sleep sound all night and wake up feeling ready for anything that comes to hand.

Tanlac is sold in Twin Falls by Schramm-Johnson, Drugs, and by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.
