College Students Stage Wild Party Featured by Booze; Investigation On

AFFAIR SHOCKS COLLEGE HEADS

Violation of Prohibition Law Alleged by the Authorities.

DALLAS, Tex., April 14—Details of a sensational "party" in which forty students of Southern Methodist university were alleged to have participated at Salvage lake, were presented to a federal grand jury today by David Coffman, United States district attorney.

Coffman said indictments charging violation of the prohibition law will be asked against the students, who "dined and danced with women of the street."

"Each guest was charged a quart of liquor as his admission fee," Coffman said.

"Students and women became scandalously intoxicated and disorderly," Coffman said, "and innocent citizens who attended, scampered to their dormitories in fright and disgust."

The party was reported to have been in celebration of the initiation of "The Dinkey" an outlawed fraternity organization of a salacious nature.

Dr. Horace M. Whaling of the executive committee of the faculty announced that students who stared the party and published "The Dinkey" would be expelled.

"It was the most insulting and revolting affair in the history of the school," Dr. Whaling said.

"We are going to the bottom of this thing and there will be quick action to punish the offenders. There will be no more parties of this sort and no more 'Dinkeys' at Southern Methodist university."

Evidence which Coffman planned to place before the grand jury included charges that the student promoters or the party picked up automobile loads of women from downtown rooming houses and brought them to the lake. Co-eds declared they were insulted by drunken students, beaten and forced to walk home unescorted Sunday.

Leaders in the party were said to be prominent athletes and fraternity men.

"We have the names of the men who sold the liquor," said Charles Hecke, federal prohibition agent.

"We also are in possession of names of students who transported wild women and liquor in their automobiles."

Find New Outbreak in Cattle Plague; Nine Cows Infected

LOS ANGELES, April 14—With only one new outbreak of the foot and mouth disease reported during the past 48 hours, state and federal health authorities today expressed hope that the epidemic is losing ground.

Nine cows in a small herd near Downey were found infected yesterday, while reports from scores of inspectors failed to reveal additional outbreaks of the plague.

Robber Suspect Is Held at San Diego; Wanted in Mid-West

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 14—Eugene Shearer to Des Moines, Ia., is held incommunicado in the city jail here at the request of Sheriff Frank A. Findley of the Iowa capital, charged with the robbery of a Des Moines bank. Shearer carried an automatic pistol when arrested Sunday, detective said, and told them that "a week ago I'd have shot you down as I was desperate."

Shearer said he was a member of a prominent Des Moines family and that police had "framed" him because of a quarrel, he had while working as a Pinkerton detective."

Daugherty Thought to Have Played Part in Indictment of Wheeler

WASHINGTON, April 14—Information reaching Senator Wheeler today from Montana convinced him that former Attorney General Daugherty played a part in securing his indictment at Great Falls, Mont.

A confidential report to Wheeler stated that John S. Pratt, a special assistant attorney general, appeared before the grand jury at Great Falls and urged Wheeler's indictment after the first ballot failed to result in an indictment. Several ballots were required to secure the 12 votes necessary to indict, according to the report.

Wheeler is understood to have verified the report that Pratt was recently in Montana. He indicated that he would ask Chairman Borah of the committee investigating his indictment to call Pratt as a witness to ascertain on whose orders he was sent there.

Motorcyclist Dies on Race Track at Los Angeles, Cal.

LOS ANGELES, April 14—The fifth human sacrifice to speed has been offered on the new Ascot dirt track, which yesterday drew perhaps the largest crowd in its short history.

Preceding him by one week was time after the track opened, Jim the death of Earl Wilson, a speed Craft was killed. Both the latter two were automobile racers.

POISON SCHEME IS DISCOVERED

Mrs. Mary-K. Eggleston Is Arrested on Serious Accusation.

LARNED, Kans., April 14—Mrs. Mary K. Eggleston, charged with plotting the death of two persons, today declared the accusation were part of a conspiracy to get her money.

She is in jail here facing charges of mixing a poison drink to be administered to Mrs. Laura Eggleston, and David Ely. Officials said Mrs. Mary Eggleston had been friendly with Ely and to make a will leaving her $60,000. They said she wanted to get Mrs. Laura Eggleston out of the way so that she could have the entire income from the estate left by her former husband which is now divided between the two women.

W. C. Pool told the officials he accused woman offered to pay him $200 if he would see that the poison was administered. R. C. Burgess, a detective, was then called and said he represented himself to Mrs. Mary-Eggleston as an underworld character and charges she repeated the offer to him.

A trim woman of 57 years, garbed in a gown of high collar and long sleeves, Mrs. Eggleston denies the allegations glibly. She said there was "deep plot of blackmail and graft behind this which will be exposed at the proper time."

"The outlook was never better than at present," Work said. "For rescuing existing projects from financial difficulties and for building new ones, the next 10 years experience behind us and the report of the special advisory committee—a stupendous accomplishment in itself will be laid before congress in a few days.

"That body will then have the benefit of the most searching inquiry ever undertaken on the subject in avoiding mistakes of the past and will not be working in the dark in considering necessary remedial legislation."

TWO HELD IN CRUEL DEATH OF PHYSICIAN

Police Jail Man and Woman While Investigation Continues; Woman Tells of Slaying Doctor and Putting the Body in a Trunk.

LOS ANGELES, April 14—A man and a woman are held today by police investigating the life of Dr. Benjamin Baldwin whom Mrs. Margaret Willis confessed she killed, "cremating his body in a trunk" in her home and buried into a lonely ravine.

Mrs. Willis surrendered at Central police station Sunday, calmly telling how she shot the physician, stuffed his body into a wardrobe trunk and then set alone in her apartment for more than 24 hours, until she was able to get aid in disposing of the gruesome coffin.

Burt Webster, forest ranger and a friend of the woman, surrendered with her admitting he loaded the trunk into the rear of Mrs. Willis' motor car without knowing its ghastly contents and then drove through the streets with it and the woman for hours before she told him of the crime.

The couple then went to an embankment on the outskirts of the city and dumped the trunk into a ravine.

Police went to the spot and found the body.

Mrs. Willis was placed in a cell and charged with murder. She said that Baldwin had been her physician and made advances to her while in her apartment Friday afternoon. She resisted and when he continued annoying her she shot him.

Mrs. Willis is 30 and attractive.

"I had to shoot him," she said.

"The former secretary of the treasury gave out the following statement when asked by newspaper men how he stood on the Ku Klux Klan: "I stand four square with respect to this and all other orders and organizations on the inalienable guarantee of liberty contained in the first amendment to the constitution of the United States, namely freedom of religious worship, freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the right of peaceable assembly."

McAdoo had been using this statement as his answer to all klan questions.

SERPENT SEEN

New-Born Grecian Republic Will Be Closely Guarded

ATHENS, April 14—Ingenious measures were instituted today to guard the new born Greek republic, confirmed by an overwhelming majority in Sunday's popular plebiscite.

The government announced that formal discussion regarding the change in regime is forbidden for a period of five years and that activities against republican rule will be put down without mercy.

It is forecast that the first Greek president will be elected in June, although a date has not yet been determined definitely. Following the departure of former Premier Venizelos, ex-Minister Zaimis is mentioned as a leading possibility for the post of chief executive. In some quarters, however, it is believed, Venizelos may return and become a candidate.

GOV. PINCHOT MEETS TERMS

Pennsylvania Executive Makes Peace With Republicans.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 14—Governor Gifford Pinchot, leading exponent of prohibition enforcement, and long considered an insurgent in the ranks of rock-ribbed republicanism in Pennsylvania, has made his peace with the organizing.

By concession the republican nomination to President Coolidge and relinquishing whatever thoughts of it he may have had for himself, Governor Pinchot has served to solidify the republican party—on dry enforcement.

Recognition that Mr. Coolidge would be the republican choice at Cleveland in June came in an adroitly worded paragraph of a statement by the governor last night in which he acknowledged he was at the bottom of Francis J. Heney's retention, by Senator Crudens as counsel to aid the senate committee investigating prohibition enforcement.

Dragnet Spread for Wife Slayer; Scouts Find Body in Brush

CHICAGO, April 14—A nation wide hunt was on today for James De Joy, 30, on charges of the death of his wife, Anna, 28, bride of a few months. The woman's body was found in the brush of the Riverside forest preserve, near here, by two boy scouts.

Mrs. De Joy disappeared late in February. A few days before the disappearance she told her mother she was unhappy and in fear of her life.

A razor cut across the throat caused death. De Joy is the son of a shop keeper here and disappeared shortly the time his bride dropped from sight.

HARRY THAW BEGINS FIGHT FOR RELEASE

Attorneys Claim Treatment in Asylum Has Cured Inmate of Mental Affliction Which Forced His Confinement Long Ago.

PHILADELPHIA, April 14—Against the gruelling background of the Thaw case, begun today, a battle of that most potent of human emotions—mother love. Two mothers are fighting for their boys.

The one, Mrs. Mary Thaw, gray haired with her 76 years, seeks release of her son, Harry K. Thaw, from the "Kirkbride's" asylum where he has been incarcerated for seven years.

The other, Evelyn Nesbit, opposes freedom of the man who was once her husband, on the grounds that his release will imperil the rightful heritage of her son, Russell William Thaw, now a 15 year old student in Friends school at Atlantic City.

A court fight to free Harry Thaw and declare him sane started before Justice Monaghan today.

Thaw's attorneys and those of his dazed mother who want the boy who has branded her so much sorrow back for her few remaining years, are basing their action on a claim that the treatment the millionaire has received at the Pennsylvania hospital has cured him of the mental affliction which led to his attack upon Pardee Jack Gump, Jr., of Kansas City on Christmas day, 1916. It was following his attempted suicide after the affair that Thaw was adjudged insane.

Into the legal proceedings, seeking the present move for Thaw's release, Evelyn Nesbit, known to the world as a cabaret proprietor at Atlantic City, hurled her handicap.

"Harry Thaw must not be freed," she declared, and those whose duty it is to approve the release have accepted her intervention. "I'm not for myself I speak," Evelyn said. "I can make my way; scrub floors if necessary. It's for the boy, my boy, Harry's boy Russell. Harry is insane and he mustn't be allowed freedom to squander Russell's rightful heritage. He is the last of his kind, because if he is three months the world will be shocked by another terrible tragedy, such as those in which Harry's precious insanity drove him."

GOES TO HOSPITAL

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 14—Senator James Couzens has been removed to Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore "for further observation," his physicians announced today. His illness was said to be a recurrence of an gall bladder infection.

Grand Jury to Consider Criminal Cases Against Figures in Oil Scandal

SET WEDNESDAY AS TRIAL DATE

Evelyn Nesbit Wins First-Point-During Thaw Hearing Today

PHILADELPHIA, April 14—Evelyn Nesbit scored heavily today in the legal fight to free her former husband, Harry K. Thaw, from an insane asylum.

The petition presented by Mrs. Nesbit to Judge Monaghan to see and oppose Thaw's release on behalf of her son, Russell, was granted, when the trial opened before Justice Monaghan in the court of common pleas.

Thus he added to the large prominence of Evelyn for the days of Stanford White, the woman who claims for her 12 year old son the heritage of Thaw millions.

Neither Evelyn nor Mrs. Mary Thaw, Harry's mother, was in court when the case was called.

$15,000 BONUS RAISED SAYS BY COMMITTEE

Total Subscriptions Are Above $15,000 Mark, According to Committee's Statement Today.

BANK SHORTAGE COMES TO LIGHT

Vast Amount Disappears Mysteriously from Institution.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 14.—A shortage of $500,000 in accounts of the Fidelity National Bank and Trust company was discovered on March 31 by examiners for the Federal Reserve bank, officials announced today.

Since that date accountants have been tracing the shortage in an effort to determine where the deposition was made of the money. Results of the examination of the books was presented to a directors meeting this morning. The accountants' report was not revealed and two hours after the directors meeting started, they were still in session.

Large amounts of money were transferred to the bank today. Only a few anxious depositors gathered in the lobby however, and no further difficulty was anticipated. The bank has deposits of $12,500,000.

Grand Jury Indictment Is Listed Among Those to Be Heard.

WASHINGTON, April 14—The grand jury here Wednesday will consider criminal cases against principals in the oil scandal, the contempt indictment against Harry F. Sinclair will come up during the week for disposition by the court on a demurrer and the "crime conspiracy" will continue unknown—the trail of testimony concerning the reputed national connection and half million.

This was the program of senate and house committees outlined today for the week.

The grand jury was summoned in a dozen subpoenas which Attorney Pomerene and Roberts have drawn against at least five men prominent in the investigation.

Indications—necessitatory to alert the government will be sought.

The government will file an answer to the demurrer of Harry F. Sinclair, who was indicted for contempt when he refused to answer questions of the investigating committee and then attacked the constitutionality of the powers of all congressional investigating committees. A date for argument of the legal technicalities will be set as soon as possible. Either way the decision of the court goes, the question will be fought to the United States supreme court.

William Cooper, Proctor, Cincinnati soap manufacturer and friend of General Leonard Wood, has been subpoenaed as the first witness before the investigating committee tomorrow. He furnished money for the Wood presidential campaign in 1920 and is supposed to have some information regarding the reported efforts of the late Jake Hamon to swing an oil reserve deal at the convention.

JAPAN REGRETS BILL'S PASSAGE

Nippon Still Has Faith That Public Will Solve Problem.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 14—The republican majority conference called today to plan the legislative program regarding immigration, taxes and the bonus dodged everyone of the major questions and "passed the buck" to the senate and the finance committee.

When the conference failed to express any preference as to whether bonus or taxes should come first before the senate, Chairman Smoot called a meeting of his finance committee to decide later in the day, which bill should be given the right of way.

The conference also failed to take any action regarding the proposal for a Japanese exclusion provision in the immigration bill, the third vital question which was to have been acted upon. This puts the question up to senators individually and does not pledge the party, as a party, to any course.

TOKIO, Japan, April 14—Japan views the action of the American house of representatives in passing the immigration bill excluding Japanese immigrants—as involving no Japan "a matter of honor and international prestige," Baron Sakatani, former finance minister and leader of public opinion, told the United Press today in an exclusive interview.

Viscount Shibusawa, an equally prominent leader, added that Japan "still trusts that the fairness of American public opinion will solve the problem."

"Both expressed "deep regret" at the passage of the bill.

GOOD COMEDY DRAMA AT IDAHO TONIGHT

"In Search of a Thrill," next-to-last Viola Dana's liveliest comedy melodrama, which opened today for two days' engagement at the Idaho theatre.

The picture, relating the exciting adventures of a pleasure-mad Alsatian flapper in Paris, was adapted to the screen by Basil Dickey from Kate Jordan's short story, "The Spirit of the Road," that appeared in Absolve Magazine. Oscar Apfel directed the picture.

STAR SETS HIGH STANDARD IN FILM

Katherine Macdonald has set a high standard for herself in "Chastity," a First National attraction in which she is playing at the Orpheum theatre for tomorrow, only one day.

Her picture is not only beautiful, but thrilling and well acted besides. The work of the star shows moments of real dramatic expression, while the supporting players provide excellent support in roles that are made unusual and interesting.

BUHL TOURIST PARK TO MAKE AUTOS PAY

At the regular meeting of the city council recently they came to an agreement with the school board for handling the tourist park for Buhl coming season on a basis of making a charge for all tourists stopping in the park. The charge will be 50 cents a night, whether it be for one night only or for ten. At the end of the season the school board is to receive 50 per cent of the net proceeds, and this amount is to be applied on the fund for seating the auditorium of the new high school building.

I. F. Constant is to have charge of the grounds and will do the collecting. Plans are under way for adding a number of improvements both in fixing the grounds and putting more conveniences into the most convenient and pleasant building. Buhl already has one of the best camping sites on the whole trail and the city cannot afford to keep up the expense of furnishing water and electricity, mowing the lawn and putting up the endless expense necessary for a first class camping place without some remuneration.—Buhl Republican.

Twin Falls Taxpayers Talks Before Parent-Teachers Association of Filer—Plan to Be Presented Against Delegates Elected.

The Parent-Teachers association met on Thursday evening at the Central school building, and was largely attended by the members and patrons of the school.

The president, Mrs. N. E. Anderson, presided and opening the business session the association decided to honor the reproduction in the near future of the play, "Rosary Beads," which was so successfully given by pupils of the eighth grade two weeks ago and to devote the funds received from the presentation of the play, for refinishing one of the rooms of the old school building.

Delegates were also elected to the state convention that will meet in Twin Falls the 3, 4 and 5 of May. Mrs. A. F. Anderson, Mrs. H. H. Schlomann, Miss Stevens and Rev. Gillilan were elected. Mr. Peck being the other chosen. Following the conclusion of the business a delightful musical program was given by Phoebe Smith, Vivanita Sayers and Blanche Hutlins, representing the seventh grade, after which Rev. C. E. Winning, pastor of the First Methodist church of Twin Falls gave a masterful address on present juvenile and home conditions, in which he said that the great crime wave that is sweeping the country is caused by juvenile offenders and that 50 per cent of the major crimes are committed by persons under 25 years of age and 25 per cent by young people under 21 years.

Buhl Barn with All Contents Is Burned to Ground

The Buhl fire department was called out at 4:10 Tuesday morning to fight fire at the Costello ranch. The fire was discovered about 1 o'clock and the alarm was immediately sent in Buhl for help. The barn and all of its contents except the stock was totally destroyed, the fire having to create a beaten path before being discovered for the hose to do any good on the barn, says the Buhl Republican. However, they succeeded in saving the silo, machine shed and other small buildings which were close out but for the prompt work the loss would have been complete.

The barn belonged to Thos. Costello who is now in Los Angeles. It was probably burned hot at this time we are unable to state the full extent. The contents, consisting of sets of good harness for twelve head of horses, a lot of seed wheat, enough seed beans to plant 80 acres, 15 tons of hay, two racks, manure spreader and a Ford car nearly new, all was partly covered by insurance, but the amount of the loss will not be known until after the adjuster reports.

The ranch is being leased by the Samuel brothers, Gall and Glen, and this loss is quite heavy on them.

Pigs Fed Standing Corn Will Do Little Rooting

Pigs fed standing corn with all the tankage that they would eat did no rooting. The pigs fed corn, only, did the most rooting. Pigs fed four-tenths pound per day of tankage with access to a third crop alfalfa did a small amount of rooting. Each lot also received coal and salt. The above results were prompted in experiments conducted by Prof. J. H. Shepperd at the North Dakota Agricultural college experiment station.

Dual Track Meet With Wendell Tuesday P.M.

Local track men will compete with Wendell in track and field meet to be held on Lincoln field Tuesday afternoon.

During the past week the squad has been put through some hard workouts under the direction of Phil Kinz, who is assisting Coach Evans this year.

In the interclass track meet some good material was discovered, and Wendell may find competition keen.

Timm, Alvord, Walters and Martyn took good in the sprints with Alvord and Simpson strong in the hurdles. Alvord has also been high jumping well and has a good running mate in Murray.

Widmyn, Rosa and L. Hall have been shaking up well and will probably represent the Blue and White in the distance events.

Strong in Weight Events

With Jenkins, Timm and Murray the locals are strong in weights. Jenkins looks to be a real all round mainstay while Timm in the shot put and Murray, with the javelin look equally as well.

In the pole vault B. Martyn, Murray and Weaver took the best and should make going hard for Wendell.

The marks set by Timm and Alvord in the broad jump differ the least, the class meet took slightly good and will be hard to equal at any meet.

The local will start promptly at 3:30 o'clock with season tickets good for admittance.

BOXING

NEW YORK—Jimmy Johnston, former manager of Johnny Dundee, declared that an agreement had been reached between the owners of the Giants and Yankees and that he would act as matchmaker for baseball contests to be held in both parks this summer.

BOSTON—After having been postponed several times, the ten round bout between Harry Greb, middleweight champion and Bill Norfolk, negro light heavyweight, will be held here Saturday night.

MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 14.—Grain closed showing traditional losses on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

Lack of buying power kept wheat in low territory during the day's trading. Export business was moderate and confined to Canadian grains.

Indications of a better movement by next week-end and possibilities of a sharp decrease in feeder demand caused corn to rest at lower levels.

Oats were dull but showed better undertone than did other grains. Weakness in corn and provisions caused selling as did reports of rapid progress in seeding operations.

Under influence of grains and some selling by big packers provisions sold off at the close.

FARM CO-OPERATIVE SELLING

By GLENN C. HAYES.

(Copyright, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

How Butter and Cheese Are Sent to Market

DAIRY farmers were the world's first co-operators, cheese was the first agricultural product to travel the co-operative road to market. Butter soon followed suit.

Co-operative cheese marketing had its start back in the latter part of the middle ages. Some dairy farmers learned that the labor of cheese-making was greatly reduced if six or seven of them formed a group and each member took his turn at making the cheese for them all. Manufacture was the bottleneck. Marketing cost them nothing. Cheese sells more readily in cities than in the country. Marketing cost them nothing. Cheese sells more readily in cities than in the country. It says up hot, at the regular price and resells in the eastern market. The profits are divided on the patronage dividends among the members of the club. Profits are divided on the same basis among the members of the separate cream cries.

In 1921 the 345 Minnesota creameries joined together for closer co-operation and formed a state group the Minnesota Co-operative Creameries' association Inc. They divide the state into 15 districts and each district employs a field man or inspector whose chief duty is to improve the quality of the butter made in the creameries of his unit and to wear himself in a vaudeville act. A small levy is charged on each pound of butter produced during the year which pays the overhead expenses and the handling costs.

In Other Sections.

Minnesota is not the only state that has established a centralized butter market. The Wisconsin Co-operative Creamery association is organized on the same plan as the Minnesota association. In the Wisconsin Co-operative Creameries' association has been in operation for many years. On the Pacific Coast the Challenge Cream and Butter association, at Tulare, has a marketing cream and butter since 1911.

Where there are no co-operative creameries the farmers have organized co-operative shipping associations. Sometimes these are organized through the state farm bureau; some times through the Grange. Again the producers are affiliated with a produce shipping association. These have built organizations are responsible for slightly better cream prices, but they are not to be classed as real co-operative organizations. They are not the necessary step, though they form a fertile organization—merely a means to an end. An effective system of co-operative manufacture of these two products has been perfected but the marketing end is still in its infancy. Before the marketing of manufactured dairy products can be perfected, there must be a general standardization and improvement of the product. Already another step has been taken toward this goal—co-operative marketing associations have organized to sell through a national sales agency.

INDIANS HAD MANY SLAVES

Slavery Was Regular Institution Among the Many Tribes on the Pacific Coast.

Slavery was a regular institution among many of the Indian tribes on the Pacific coast from Alaska to California. Among many of these tribes there was a regular slave caste within the tribe.

The slaves were originally captives of war, and they and their children were condemned to perpetual hard labor, have inherited, sale or death at the will of the masters.

A milder type of slavery existed among some of the Atlantic tribes later when they came in contact with the white many of the Southern Indians, such as the Seminoles, Creeks, Cherokees and Choctaws, followed the example of the Europeans and became owners of negro slaves.—Detroit News.

USE CORN STALKS AS ARMOR

Placed Behind Steel Plates on Battleship and When Pierced by Shell, Fills Gap.

Behind the armor plate of the modern battleship lies a spelling of cellulose feet thick. If the outer armor plate is pierced by a shell the water reaches the cellulose, which immediately swells and fills the hole. So certain is the action of this material that all warships have been equipped with the queer jacket. The cellulose is made from cornstalks. These stalks are dried for six or eight months and then cut into short pieces and the pith extracted. The pith is treated with chemicals to make it fireproof, and compressed to one-sixteenth its original bulk. After being cut into blocks six inches square it is shipped to the navy yards.

THOS. JEFFERSON, CONSTITUTIONALIST

(By JAMES D. WHELAN.)

The tendency to regard Thomas Jefferson, the anniversary of whose birth will be celebrated tonight by the Jefferson club here, solely as "a great political philosopher," to use the words of Senator Borah, has caused many well meaning people to look upon him as a mere theorist instead of the greatest practical statesman of his age. Without justice, the school of privilege has striven to create the impression that Hamilton was the greatest factor in drafting the constitution, and the implication has even been given out that Jefferson opposed the adoption of that immortal instrument. Unfortunately, many liberals of insufficient information who admire Jefferson, and many radicals who should set inside the constitution accept these fallacies and strengthen the arguments of the exponents of monopoly.

As a matter of fact, Jefferson and his friends favored the adoption of the constitution, with the assurance that a bill of rights would be added and the first 10 great amendments voiced the Jeffersonian spirit. Jefferson was in France when the constitutional convention was held. Hamilton's talks in the meeting were so monarchial that he really exerted little influence. Madison was "Father of the Constitution."

The supplementary amendment idea was intimated in a letter from Jefferson in which he said, "The constitution is a good canvass on a few strokes only needed retouching. I am not of the party of the federalists, but I am much further from that of the anti-federalists."

Instead of being in favor of overthrowing the constitution, Jefferson favored strict construction in order that not merely the spirit but the letter should remain intact. His seeming violation of this principle in the case of the Louisiana purchase was only in seeming, since he desired a constitutional amendment to ratify it, and his followers would not act on his suggestion, so we had the territory without the amendment.

In spite of this, there is a widespread belief that Jefferson favored the idea that the courts should give effect to all laws passed by congress regardless whether they believed them constitutional or not. This is not true.

In a letter to Judge Spencer Roane, dated October 12, 1815, Jefferson said: "I hope our courts will never countenance the sweeping pretensions that have been set up under the words 'common defense and general welfare.'"

He added that he had taken this view when the question was first raised and that his opinion in this regard had been confirmed by 25 years reflection and experience.

Of course, Jefferson with reason opposed judicial usurpation as a great possible menace. Moreover, he favored calling a constitutional convention every generation, to keep the fundamental law of the land up to date, but nobody realized the value to the cause of liberty of a stable construction of the meaning of the organic law more than he.

In fact, stability was absolutely necessary, in order to insure for all time the great principles for which Jefferson stood. These principles were summarized 15 years ago by A. A. C. Chandler of Richmond, in a biography of Jefferson as follows:

"Jefferson stands in history for republican government and the sovereignty of the people; opposition to privileged orders of nobility and the entail system; universal education and local civic culture; liberalism; separation of church and state; freedom of thought and speech; local self-government; economy in government and small public debt; a policy of peace; political equality and universal suffrage; strict construction of the constitution and the sovereignty of the states; well trained militia and small standing army; metallic money, either gold or silver, as a standard, and no paper legal tender; opposition to bounties and monopolies; emancipation and deportation of slaves, expansion of the United States to include Louisiana, Florida, Cuba and Canada; maintenance of Indian reservations; judiciary beyond the control of the legislative or executive branches of government; small navy; opposition to dictation; rotation in office; opposition to all secession movements, north or south."

The calamity that would come with the start of the foot and mouth disease in Idaho would be so great that no one dare treat the request of the state department lightly when they ask that all containers and packing received from California be burned. This disease is one of the easiest to spread that is known. Millions of dollars have already been lost to California because of the epidemic and Idaho cannot afford to take the least chance even though some may not see the necessity for the extreme quarantine regulations. Better be safe than sorry.

The Sick Pearl

BY BERTA RUCK

Blue Ribbon Fiction

SYNOPSIS.

Up in the time Margaret Verity was twenty years old she was a robust outdoor child. She set her women's mother dress down but they fared comfortably in a cozy cottage in Lower Mount. Mrs. Verity's husband was a sailor who died in the sea in the year of 1914.

Just before Margaret's twelfth birthday Mrs. Verity's uncle, Tom Lloyd, sent the child a check for five pounds as a birthday gift. Margaret decided she and her mother would spend the money on a trip to London. They barely made the train and the girl pushed them into a first class compartment occupied by Charles Mount, an big man who, fashionably, happened ill from sea air. Margaret chatter amused him, and he asked her to write to him. She wrote him but died, leaving his letters to Margaret. Five of letters she without any trouble. He met Arthur Mount, a young bachelor Archie, who was a spendthrift. And her she money, hurting shared with Cynthia the gigantic Mount fortune on the death of their father.

Margaret, now thirteen years old, is a beautiful, blase, and mature young woman. She knows the ropes in her head but at the bottom she is still a child. Margaret's first meeting with Archie, who is an admirer of men's portraits, pallid, reclining, cocktail shortness, stirred Margaret's sixth sense, neither conscious nor moral of the most startling type. Among her suitors is Lord Oakley. His sister Cynthia is the young honeys' closest friend. Margaret gives a dance at the flat for her Uncle Tom, who returns to London after an absence of many years, and there she meets Archie Mount. Margaret believes ill. On her return she goes to the hospital in Cheyne Walk. Archie Mount calls to see Margaret. Margaret is carried on board for life. All the guests but Margaret underpressure leaving, and the party ends with the young prince being shaved. He is furious when the discovers the trick; grows violently sick, and loses all idea of the time she's blotted; has a vague remembrance of stairs and a room, and after which she finds herself unknowingly on an island with Archie Mount as her sole companion.

INSTALLMENT XXX.

THE INFERNAL GIRL BECOMES THE WRETCHED CHILD.

As it was probably the first time for years that she had given to any man more than a casual, languid, unseeing glance, it is perhaps worth while to record the impression made upon her by this being, who, lately so elegant in drawing rooms, now moved so deliberately, perspiring, breathing deeply, wrestling with his tree, but mastering it as completely as she, after effort could master a deeply rooted obstinacy.

Eve, beholding Adam for the first time in the sweat of his brow, wrestling with forces of nature, possibly found him better worth watching than when he lolled in that orchard at her side. Now the sight of presentable young men was no novelty to Margaret. Had she not lived surrounded by the creatures? But what attention had she paid to the actual looks of that bodyguard who stared, cajoled, wooed, sighed, kept open doors, picked up programmes and fans, after effort could master a deeply rooted obstinacy.

Eve, beholding Adam for the first time in the sweat of his brow, wrestling with forces of nature, possibly found him better worth watching than when he lolled in that orchard at her side. Now the sight of presentable young men was no novelty to Margaret. Had she not lived surrounded by the creatures? But what attention had she paid to the actual looks of that bodyguard who stared, cajoled, wooed, sighed, kept open doors, picked up programmes and fans, after effort could master a deeply rooted obstinacy.

"I regret Cottie men's looks," she had admitted, when Cynthia Oakley had exclaimed, "Men are so hideous!"

"Oh, dear, "It doesn't matter what the bridegroom is like to look at, does it, Cynthia? I mean I have myself heard girls remarks that as the bride is to live with him?" Young girls gravitate towards the loveliest school fellow. During school days that is natural enough, but is it a good sign when, in their late teens and twenties, they fall as Margaret had failed to find the man better worth looking at? To have the ideal of all-beauty fixed at feminine beauty only is but a one sided vision. Some girls cherish it. To these men become less and less. Already men have become to them infinitely less than the whole wigdom spread with smoothly shining faces or deeply carpeting furs. Soon, in some girlish eyes, men will be mere solid, clothing, slabs of matter, taking up so much cubic space and obstructing so much sunlight. Men who could see beyond the depths of sixpenny indifference under the pretty, girlish, incessant ripples of seeming interest! It's not good sign! Whose fault is it?

Partly, perhaps, that of the everyday clothes of man, which so obscure them the travelling slacks, the earth colors, dreamy, dusty, shrunken coats indicate that they well wear. A moment, too, upon that changeless black and white which is the foil for women's multicolored evening bravery! Who will weave their personality into their romance? Partly it may be that the sweculiar form, at its best is strenuous movement, is not often enough seen by the gently tired feminine contemporary, except in games and sports. These remain life last structural of male creation. Place a figure wanting in the screen. Hence the numbers of well dressed women among the spectators in accounts of prize fights.

Always watching young Mount, Margaret was pervaded by a brand new respect for a man's strength; hit only subconsciously did she then take in, his graceful ease under those rough garments, or notice how much younger looking he now was because of the rumpled hair, the flush of his fair skin, the some alive look of a man actively engaged in work that takes his mind as well as his body. Consciously she only thought that he was strong, swift, handy, good at these outdoor things. She only wondered, with a little relief for him, what she would have done if she had been left here all by herself without this man! Terrifying idea! Instinctively it drove her a step nearer, to where he worked.

Presently he turned, remarking to the sun bathed, fragrant landscape in large, "That's enough. Better not leave that fire too long. We'll cut this lot down now. Now, if you don't mind hanging on to this, here—"

Suddenly Margaret was on to that whole—the whole shape they made their way: hauling rustling branches, catching a tough bow and then on a boulder angle, now and then slipping a foot, bringing down a miniature landslide. Down to the bendire creek they made their arduous way, he and the infernal girl.

Reaching the beach they threw down the load, stoked up their fire, turned again to the cliff. Twice, three times they made the journey, each time facing changing fewer winds. Mount had plenty to think about. Margaret had enough to do to keep the young man from seeing that, though she had begun stout-heartedly her afternoon of toil, her heart was now failing her.

Before you are hard on the girl, think what her life of the last years had been; think how flaccid were the muscles of her overgrown, undersized body! The only physical activity she had known had been those dances long, and these were not dancing muscles which were now brought into play. She became footsore, weary; her back ordered breaking. After the last of three climbs, these dirty hands, trailing bough that ever sore upon contact, made Margaret's limbs also seemed too weighty for her to lift, too slanky for her to guide. Her heart pounded. Her face stranged. She set her teeth so as not to gasp.

Not so long before, the car had been ordered to take Miss Verity from hotel to millinery, a stone's throw away down the boulevard, to wait for two hours and then to take her back again. Had she exercised Miss Verity's who owned that Rolls and who chose those hats in fives, with no price mentioned, was a later development than the sturdy little Margaret who had dug sweet pea trenches in that flower garden. We grew from our childhood. We return to our beginnings. With surprising quickness Margaret Verity began going back to that basis of healthy, well inherited pluck, of sticking things out.

So she set her teeth as she tugged her branch down the cliff. She dragged it right up to the fire and only then she dropped it. She dropped it so well and dandy that young Mount, stacking up his own bough, looked sharply round.

In consternation he ejaculated, "Good Lord! you're all in . . . O——"

She held her tousled brown head well up as she replied dazed, "I am all right—that she could go on again in a moment if she took a little rest. But then her head dropped. The whole of her young length dropped, like one of those cut boughs, to the beach. Hardly knowing what was happening, she was just conscious of firm, warm, shirt-sleeved arms put about her.

She sensed the comfort of human warmth, contact, of a low pitched voice that quickly said, "All right. That's all for you Miss Verity. I'm going to take you to your cave now. Come along."

Through that rock passage he supported her into the creek on which she had opened her eyes an eternity of experiences ago, to the sight of the man who had left Margaret. Then and there she could have fallen asleep as she walked those few steps. Her eyelids drooped over her eyes; she had to force them open again, to fix them on his face.

She was just sufficiently awake to see how encouragingly, gently, he smiled at her, as they reached the cave.

"Sit down a minute——He knelt—He scooped out in the sand a small hole that she did not realize yet was the campsiteer's grocery for the big tome. Through closing eyes she watched him. Sunset of peach and amber, making glorious the sand, turned to softest rose color the ordinary white shirt, which was clinging to the young man's shoulders and back.

"You ought to have a coat on," Margaret murmured. "You ought to put on that motor coat."

It sounds an ordinary remark? Possibly it sounded ordinary to him. But the reason it marked an epoch was because it was for the first time since she had left Homex that the girl had first considered the comfort of some one else.

"I'm all right. I've got a sweater. Yes, honest Injun. I have. I'm going to sleep in this. Anyhow, it won't be cold here, even at night. Providential, isn't it, this weather? Now! I shall tuck you up like a baby——His voice was the voice of some man talking to a sick puppy. Some men are as indulgent to babies, children, ailing women as others are with animals behind. ——like a baby, in this. I say, Miss Verity, you didn't happen to look in the pockets of that coat of mine last night?"

"It was your coat then?"

"You didn't look in the pockets? No? Well, look here now."

His hand, green with tree mould, black with smoke, held out a blue wrapped packet.

"Chocolate? Naturally enough the wretched child—his thoughts dropped the infernal girl for the time being; she was now the wretched child——was once more starving. "Chocolate!"

"And some water biscuits."

"Good heavens, are there?" Margaret cried greedily. "I thought—I thought we should have to be rationed, like people are, to one meal a day."

"We'll see about that, later. There will be a small sidown supper tonight, though."

Sharing that supper of a quarter of a pound each of pot chocolate, of water biscuits, and of string water, which he brought in in an oyster shell, these tollers satisfied a part, at least, of their ravenous hunger. Then he disposed about her the heavy, fur lined motor coat, thicker than blankets.

"Don't stir tomorrow morning. Well, I'm sorry you won't be able to, I'll do the breakfast front. First catch your trout, of course. You sleep. You stay long there until the stiffness goes off. I'm afraid you can expect to be stiff all right," he warned her with that new gentleness of tone.

Inwardly he fumed, "If this miserable kit were a boy now, I could fix her, give her a good rub down and a massage. Devilish awkward! Infernal shame. Probably all that is the best thing for her, but, Lord!"—

"I'm afraid that's all I can do for you!"

"Thank you most awfully, Mr. Mount——"

"Good night!"

"Good night!"

Bible Thought for Today

MAN'S BIRTHRIGHT.—Thou wast put him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet.—Ps. 8:6.

Easy to Lead Sheep If You Know Proper Method

Most sheep lead well if properly handled, old shepherds say. Even the stubborn, diseased breeds will come along if they once started right. No real shepherd tries to drag a sheep by the neck or wool. From the sheep's left side he guides it, with his left arm around its neck, tickling the base of the tail with his right hand. The sheep moves—sometimes faster than he expected—but it moves.

In catching a sheep, too, there is a right way to hold the struggling ram, and a wrong one; the wrong one hurts the lamb and will cause a bruise that takes two months to heal. Wise shepherds know that the wool is only slightly attached to the flesh, and that holding by the wool tears the tender skin loose from the flesh even farther than the hand's grip; the resulting bruise not only is painful to the sheep, but damages the carcass for market until it heals.

The best of practical tips that old shepherds pass among themselves make up a large part of the curriculum course in sheep and wool production regularly included in the extension service of the plant agricultural college at Pullman.

The course is free, the only requirements being residence in New York state and a chance to stick with sheep while taking it.

Hogs Get Little Benefit From Undigested Grain

Some people argue that hogs will get the benefit from unmolasses and undigested grain which passes through animals. It would appear that this logic is no better than to contend that the threshing machine needs no special adjusting because, after all, the floor of hens will get the grain which passes out the wind stacker. Everyone knows that when grain becomes wet, and allowed to become stale, in case of hogs following stock, the quality of the grain for feeding purposes is much reduced.

It is true that calves several months old do not masticate their food thoroughly, thus grinding oats and corn will be profitable.

Mineral Mixtures Quite Necessary for Hog Herd

Swine growers who are puzzled about mineral mixtures will find their questions answered in the following formulas which include the essential ingredients combined in the right proportions. A careful survey of experiment work with immunizing agents suggests the following mixtures:

Four parts acid phosphate, or two parts rock phosphate, or one part bone meal with four parts ground limestone, salt in parts moistened wood ashes, or one part air-slacked or hydrated lime with one part salt.

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITHOUT the blister. You just apply it with the fingers. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then comes a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oils of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

WHEN WATER IS INTOXICANT

Nature, However, Has Provided Against Accumulation in Poisonous Quantities.

Water in excess is an intoxicant, according to Science Service. With the aid of an extract from one of the ductless glands and also without such assistance in controlling thirst, Dr. Leonard G. Rowntree of the Mayo clinic has proved that excessive water drinking, by either humans or animals, may result in intoxication.

"Water intoxication," he says, "is hard to produce, as nature has provided against the accumulation of water in the body in poisonous amounts. Through thirst the intake of water is regulated to the body's needs. Unless the intake is greatly in excess of the output through the kidneys and the skin takes care of the surplus, in order to control the thirst, an extract from a small ductless gland at the base of the brain was used. Under the influence of this drug the patient kept drinking water until he developed marked headache, nausea, a staggering gait, unsteadiness of muscle and inability to stand or walk, which lasted for a few hours.

"The same process was tried with dogs with even more striking results. The convulsions of water poisoning are cerebral in origin and of extreme violence at times, proving fatal in from one to ten or fifteen minutes."

Boils

THERE is a reason for everything that happens. Common-sense kills misery. Common-sense also stops boils! S.S.S. is the common-sense remedy for boils, because it is built on reason. Scientific authorities admit its power! S. S. S. builds blood-power, it builds red blood-cells. That is what makes fighting-blood. Fighting-blood destroys impurities. It fights boils. It fights pimples! It fights skin eruptions! It always wins! Mr. V. D. Schaff, 257 15th street, Washington, D. C., writes:

"I tried for years to get relief from a bad case of boils. Everything failed until I took S.S.S. I am now absolutely cured, and it was S.S.S. that did it."

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

DUAL CRIME IS CHARGED TO WAGNER

Sisters Testify That Wagner Committed Statutory Offense Against Each of Them; Young-er Girl Is a Juvenile; Testimony Showed That He Struck Older Sister Over Head.

Jack Wagner, proprietor of a restaurant on Main avenue south, was bound over today under $1500 bond by Probate Judge O. E. Duvall after a preliminary hearing. It is alleged that Wagner committed a statutory offense against a juvenile and her elder sister, Mrs. Pearl Miller, according to testimony rendered by the girls and by Chief of Police Phillip O. Herriman and Dr. Charles D. Weaver.

According to the complaining witnesses Wagner whom she says she had never previously seen, came to her home one evening while her mother was in the hospital following an operation, and invited her to take a car ride. She says that on the next evening he returned and took her and another sister out to a vacant home near the tourist park and, after inviting her in, assaulted her. She says that they came out later and the man, whom she claims was Wagner, went away with her sister and remained an hour and a half or two hours. The girl is alleged to be somewhat retarded intellectually.

The sister, Mrs. Pearl Miller, who is 20 years of age, alleged that he took her a short distance away and after hitting her on the head, assaulted her. One discrepancy in the testimony is that one sister says that the affair took place on March 5 and the other says on March 15. Attorney W. F. Guthrie subjected the sisters to a long cross-examination. Chief O. O. Herriman identified a car identified by the younger sister as the one in which Wagner is said to drive.

Wagner denies the crime and says he never saw the girls before arrest, but did not take the stand at the preliminary.

No. 137—Naming Cards Turned

A number of court cards are laid in a row faces up. In the performer's absence, any one is invited to turn around as many cards as he chooses, then his return the performer names the cards turned.

In most packs of cards the face cards have a thick line at one end and a thin line at the other. The performer takes care to lay the cards with the thick lines all at one end, as shown in the illustration. Naturally, he can pick out the turned cards upon his return by simply looking for the thick line, as shown by the second illustration.

It is the belief that this indicates that the road, while it may not be finished this year, will under the call be so far advanced that it will be easy to complete early next year. It is stated that the road is satisfying the possibility of finishing the line by January 1 and meeting just this side of the summit. On the other hand the engineering department will not promise to have the road fully completed much before the first of June, 1925, at which time the permit expires.

BOY SCOUTS TO HOLD CITY AND CO. ELECTIONS

Next Week Hall to Be Built at Scout Headquarters in Shoshone Basin; Scouts Will Hold City and County Elections During Scout Week; Parents and Churches to Cooperate During Week of April 27-to May 3.

Plans were laid yesterday for the celebration of Scout Week which will be held in Twin Falls from April 27 to May 3 inclusive. On Saturday of Scout week the scout officers will take charge of the city and county and look after all the details of city and county government, according to plans arranged yesterday at the Twin Falls scout council meeting. Donald McLean reported on the scout camp for the summer and stated that a new mess hall would probably be built as the present one is not large enough and is not located at the proper place for piping water and is not fly proof. He stated that about sixty boys would perhaps attend camp for a period of two weeks and that the cost would not exceed fifty cents per day for the boys.

Mr. McLean further stated that the new mess hall would be built after the style of army halls and that the boy scouts would help build this structure. It claim from the forestry department can be secured these will be utilized for this purpose and there is to be a sawmill installed near the camp early this summer.

The meeting of the scout council held yesterday in the probate court room of the county court house was attended by Chairman T. M. Robertson, Secretary A. Wilton Peck, Judge O. E. Duvall, Scout Executive F. Douglas Hawley, Scout Commissioner W. E. Passer, Zenas Smith, Donald McLean, P. W. McRoberts, Dr. F. E. Beebe, W. E. Parish and I. H. Masters.

Plans were outlined yesterday to have the boy scouts attend church on Sunday, April 27, in uniform and the ministers will be asked to speak on this occasion concerning scouting.

Schedule for Scout Week

On Monday, April 28, registration will be held. On April 29, the regular election will be held. Only first class scouts will be eligible for election and for this reason Roy W. Gardner, director of training, will hold a court of honor and a number of the scouts will examine for first class scouts. Thursday, May 1, the scouts are supposed to take their parents to school with them. Friday the big parade will be held followed by athletic contests at Lincoln field. This will be in charge of Dr. Hoskins and Prof. Anderson of the high school will be invited to assist in the athletic events. On May third the scouts will take over the city and county officers and will also act as members of the board of education.

Howard E. Sabin was elected director of publicity and a member of the Twin Falls scout council yesterday.

Mr. Masters suggested that the Rotary, Kiwanis and Legion luncheons feature this movement on their programs during the Scout week.

Mrs. L. E. Joslyn will have charge of school day, representing the Parent-Teacher association. Mrs. H. M. Wolfe of the Twentieth Century club will have charge of elections for the city, county and school board of education.

Many Scouts Here

Scout Executive Hawley gave a detailed report of the work which is being accomplished in the Snake River Council and stated that there were 516 registered scouts in this district and about 225 225 unregistered, making a total of about 715 boys engaged in scouting in this district. He stated that a number of these troops were planning to become registered soon.

He stated that Twin Falls scouts had planted 111 trees at Shoshone park. He also stated that Dupont and Burley were doing good work and that the Dupont Court of Honor was worthy of special mention.

Dr. Passer emphasized the need of the organization of more troops in Twin Falls and stated that if we could organize more of the older boys into scouting it would materially aid our delinquent problems in this city.

No. 138—Finger and String

Some one places the tip of his finger on the table and a string is looped over it. Then the string is wound about, as shown in the diagram. Apparently the finger is a "captive"; but when the string is unwound it quite is free.

The method quite simple, but very clever. In unwinding the string, the outer end A, which is slightly shorter, is wound over the tip of the finger. Then when the two ends are unwound together, the loop will come free, as the center of the loop has been transferred from the finger to point C.

TEAPOT DOME AUTHORITY TO TALK TONIGHT

Noted Speaker Who Managed Campaign for Senator Pill and Issued First Pamphlet on the Oil Scandal Will Address Jefferson Club on Thomas Jefferson at Parish Hall.

Called to court in Adams county, in a case which could not be continued, Mayor C. Ben Ross was compelled to cancel his appointment to speak at the Jefferson club meeting tonight and in his stead has sent G. H. Harris of Pocatello, one of the best known orators in the northwest. Mr. Harris was manager of the general headquarters of the democratic senatorial committee when Senator Pill was elected in the state of Washington. He was himself democratic candidate for congress, and was beaten by a small majority after a whirlwind campaign.

Mr. Harris has the credit of writing the first political pamphlet, so far as known, on the Teapot Dome situation, the document appearing in August, 1923, in the Pill senatorial campaign. He is a Kentuckian by birth and has lived in Idaho eight months.

Mr. Harris will speak on Thomas Jefferson, and will be principal orator of the evening.

There will be too short speeches by women, a musical program and refreshments at the close.

Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

Nature has provided that the development of the young animal, or the young human, shall be by physical exercise. With children, as with all young animals, this exercise is best and most naturally secured through the influence of play.

It is interesting to note that some of the most profound of our philosophers, as Prof. Max Muller, have shown that many of the games indulged in by children are well-nigh universal, and have their origin in remote antiquity.

It is not at all improbable that the child of the cave-man, a half a million years ago, played "tag," "ring around rosy," "leap frog and "blind man's bluff." The game is true of the modern descendants in India, in Alaska, in New York City, or in any hamlet in the country.

It is interesting to note that "tag" and various games which involve wrestling and mimic combat are a part of the natural education of young animals, as well as of young humans.

Old-fashioned, bouncy "romps" are excellent exercise for children and parents. Games of "bear," "puss wants a corner," "hide and seek," etc., can be made play and exercise, and are valuable for all ages, if grown-ups can toss their "dignity" aside only to take part in them.

For-out-of-door exercise there should be, if possible, a sand pile for the younger children. Swings are also good for exercise, and can be put in the outside doorway, or on the porch if necessary. A few sticks, or boxes, spools and wheels, or a cart, wheelbarrow wagon, a kiddie car, velocipede, roller skates, ice skates, sleds—any of these will give the children of various ages the right kind of play exercise.

Or a child will derive a vast amount of amusement, and healthy exercise, too, from a bow and arrow, a wooden gun, or a hammer and saw. Marbles and tops get a child out of doors, and are valuable toys.

It can readily be seen that these exercises are of a wholesome, developing character, calculated not only to ensure bodily perfection, so far as muscular development is concerned, but to cultivate the admirable traits of quickness, dexterity and courage.

Rev. W. H. Tolliver Accepts Call to First Baptist Church of Hugo, New $125,000 Church Building Just Below Completed with Membership of 500.

Mrs. W. H.
