COOLIDGE WINNER IN NORTH DAKOTA

FOREST FIRES ARE RAGING IN THREE STATES

CONGRESS TO BE RULED BY REPUBLICANS

Administration to Hold Upper Hand in the New Body; Would Oust Senator La Follette From Republican Status.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The new congress will be subject to the firm hand of the administration with one of its loyal supporters at almost every post of importance.

Unlike the present congress which the progressives controlled through their balance of power, the new congress will have a small, though, clear republican majority. This majority may dwindle later in the session as the solid progressives in the senate recover confidence but it will function at the start when the congress is being organized.

The new vice president, Charles G. Dawes, will preside over the senate, while the speakership of the house will fall, according to present party plans, to either Nicholas Longworth, present floor leader, or to Martin B. Madden of Illinois, chairman of the appropriations committee.

On account of the serious illness of Senator Lodge, republican floor leader in the senate, a successor to him will have to be found.

Senator Warren, Wyoming, comes next in line but because of his age and his devotion to his present post as chairman of the appropriations committee, there is some doubt that he may become floor leader.

Senator Curtis, Kansas republican whip, will undoubtedly attend to the routine responsibilities of the floor leader and Frederick H. Gillett, new senator from Massachusetts, will prove the principal spokesman for the administration on the floor of the senate.

Lodge's sickness effects the chairmanship of the foreign relations committee. Senator Borah, next in line for the chairmanship though not sympathetic with all the foreign policies of the administration, especially with regard to Russian recognition, will undoubtedly become the chairman.

Another solid progressive, Senator Johnson, California, is in line to succeed the late Senator Colt as chairman of the immigration committee.

A movement was under way in republican senatorial circles today to oust Senator La Follette from his status as a republican senator. On account of his seniority, he is near the top in a number of the most important committees in the senate. On account of the traditional reluctance to break senate precedent, however, some hesitation was felt about "reading La Follette out of the party" even though he did conduct a personal campaign against a republican president.

Cassia Countians Display Partiality for Republicans

BURLEY, Nov. 7.—A straight republican ticket carried in all of the election returns received from Cassia county in Tuesday's general election. The national and state officers of the republican ticket carried by a majority of 500 to 700 over the other three tickets, the democratic, progressive and socialist. The returns for the county officials carried the republican ticket by a majority of 500 over the other two tickets in the field, democratic and progressive.

The county officers elected at this time were: County commissioners: Isaac Gudmundsen, first district; L. A. Nelson, second district; F. O. Butler, third district; sheriff, Fred Pace; assessor, A. E. Cardell; treasurer, L. C. Dunn; county superintendent of schools, Ed Ward; probate judge, E. M. Wright; prosecuting attorney, John Burgess.

BALL MEETING SCHEDULED

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 7.—The American League schedule meeting will be held here February 12, Ban Johnson, president of the junior organization, announced here today.

SENATOR LODGE CLINGS TO LIFE

'Condition Unchanged' Is Doctor's Report at Midnight.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 7.—"Unchanged" was the report on the condition of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge at 7:30 a. m. today, 42½ hours after he had injured into unconsciousness from a stroke at Charlesmate hospital here.

A report at midnight from the senator's personal physician, Dr. Frederick H. Winslow, read:

"Senator Lodge's condition remains unchanged. He is still very gravely ill."

Governor-Elect of Texas Wires Wyoming Victor

TEMPLE, Texas, Nov. 7.—"Mr." Ferguson has wired her congratulations to Mrs. Nellie T. Ross, governor-elect of Wyoming, and acknowledged the latter's telegram of similar content.

"I want to commend the good people of your state for your election and I hope to have the pleasure of your acquaintance some time. It appears that you and I are the first of the kind. Best wishes for your administration," Mrs. Ferguson wired.

BOXING COMING BACK

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—Boxing practically outlawed in California for many years, is coming back. Returns today showed that the voters approved by a margin of approximately 25,000 a measure creating a boxing commission after the New York plan and permitting 12 round no decision bouts or 10 round bouts with a decision.

ASKS FOR DIVORCE

PARIS, Nov. 7.—Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry of New York, wife of the senator from Rhode Island, formally filed a petition for divorce with the tribunal here yesterday. Mrs. Gerry established a domicile at the Hotel Plaza Athene.

KENTUCKY, OHIO AND INDIANA LICKED BY TONGUES OF FLAME

Small Towns Lie in Path of Conflagration; Fighters Toil.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Nov. 7.—Forest fires were raging in three states today.

Sections of Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio were turning out to fight the flames which were adding hourly to damage already reaching hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Several small towns were threatened in the vicinity of Irvine, Ky.

Five hundred volunteers were playing fire guards around 10,000,000 gallons of crude oil tanks at Irvine to check the advance of flames reported to be within half a mile of the oil.

Five hundred acres of timber land near Columbus, Ind., were in flames.

Rains were reported subduing fires raging in the Hocking valley where coal operators were taking men from the mines to fight the flames. Damage was still considered great in this region, however.

WADSAW, Ind., Nov. 7.—A forest fire, presumably starting from a spark from a locomotive, was sweeping the woods between Lagwill and Pierceton in Kosciusko county today. Thousands of dollars worth of timber were destroyed and farm buildings were in danger.

Ballots Locked in Vault; Await Official Count

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 7.—With Senator Smith W. Brookhart winner by 4123 votes on the face of complete but unofficial returns of the vote cast for United States senator in Iowa, managers of Daniel Steck, democrat, today took precautions to see that the ballots were kept intact for the official count.

The ballots were ordered locked in the county vaults until called for on November 24, when the official count begins.

TOLL STANDS AT 28

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—The death toll in the pneumonic plague in the Mexican section of the city today still stood at 28 with no additional victims claimed during the night, according to reports from the central hospital. Nine patients are in the hospital suffering from the disease.

LAW PRACTICE CALLS DAVIS; SPLIT OCCURS

Defeated Candidate Plans Going Back to Work; Is Tired of Politics; Bitter Feeling Springs Up Between Two Factions.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—A complete new adjustment of lines within the democratic party was foreseen by political leaders here today as a result of the crushing defeat of its candidates in the election.

Friends of John W. Davis are open bitter at what they believe was the failure of some of the former leaders of the party to contribute any aid whatever in the campaign. They are certain that the count of the ballot proves that not everything possible was done in the old and tried in some vital sectors he was even "double-crossed" by those purporting to be his friends.

Some of those who stood by Davis throughout his difficult campaign have informed him, the United Press learns, that the least he can do is to "clean the senate with his enemies" before he loses hold upon the leadership. They want him to strike back.

They do not think Davis could have won under any circumstances but they do feel he could have made a showing twice as strong if all the elements in the party had worked as they would have in an ordinary campaign. They firmly believe some "swapping" was done by state leaders in some sections in the hope of saving their state tickets against the Coolidge wave.

Davis, however, is "sick of politics." He is prepared to step back into his law practice which he enjoys and has indicated to his friends that he does not desire leadership of the party unless it seems absolutely necessary to keep a semblance of unity within the ranks.

Clem Shaver, chairman of the democratic national committee, is of the same opinion as Davis. At any moment he may chuck his job and go back to West Virginia.

BERLIN.—Relief for the victims of the recent floods of the Neckar, Rhine and Main rivers was initiated by the Prussian government.

President Conceded North Dakota; Democrats in New Mexico War on Fall Rule

Independents Lose Hope of Winning in North Dakota; Fight Waged Against Former Secretary Fall in New Mexico Overshadows Outcome of Presidential Vote.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 7.—President Coolidge was conceded North Dakota early today as the independent leaders lost hopes of overcoming his lead of 9362, with 1951 precincts counted out of 2160 in the state, Coolidge had 91,331 and LaFollette, 81,969.

E. B. Hunns, Coolidge manager in North Dakota, estimated today Coolidge's plurality would be 5,000.

Arthur G. Sorlie, non-partisan, was elected governor by about 10,000 over Hulvor Halvorson, anti-league fusion candidate, and non-partisans regained control of the legislature.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Nov. 7.—Belief that returns from the remaining one-third of the state report would not materially affect the 2000 plurality of President Coolidge was voiced today by the New Mexico State Tribune, a Scripps-Howard paper and one of the leading democratic dailies of the state.

The defeat of Senator Bursum by S. G. Bratton was conceded by the republican state central committee, as was the defeat of Hubbell, republican, by Morrow, democrat, for congress.

For governor, Richard Hannett, democrat, appears to have won out over Manuel Otero, republican, by about 3000, although republicans have refused to concede Otero's defeat.

According to the State Tribune, returns for president were not reported with the returns for state offices, the outcome of the political fight waged by the democrats against "Fall rule" completely overshadowing the outcome of the presidential vote.

Many counties of the state have not reported for president, but leaders do not believe the result will be changed.

Wilson Cabinet Member Makes New Comeback

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 7.—"Honest John" Burke, who went from Woodrow Wilson's cabinet as secretary of the treasury to Wall street and today is home to North Dakota in an old filivver and tattered suit, "came back" Tuesday. Burke was elected to one of the five seats of the North Dakota supreme court bench. It was the first office he has held since he sat in the governor's chair—one of only two democrats ever elected governor of North Dakota.

Burke's political career started in Turtle Mountains where he practiced law. He moved to Devil's Lake, practiced law and became governor. Porter J. McCumber later won the office away from him.

When Woodrow Wilson became president, Burke was made treasurer.

With the passing of the Wilson administration, Burke took his fortune to Wall street. He joined a brokerage firm and whom it went to the wall he paid over his personal fortune to the creditors.

Now "Honest John" sits in the seat of the mighty.

HUNT FOR ABDUCTORS

DUBLIN, Georgia, Nov. 7.—Police and sheriffs throughout Georgia and Florida were searching for an automobile load of kidnapers who made away last night with E. T. Dominy, 21, Laurens county farmer.

According to the youth's aged father, an auto load of men called at the farm home, tossed Dominy bodily into the machine and sped away. Dominy is estranged from his wife.

MRS. HARDING IMPROVES

MARION Ohio, Nov. 7.—The condition of Mrs. Warren G. Harding is improving steadily, it was said early today at White Oaks farm. Dr. Carl Sawyer, her physician, will probably have a formal statement later in the day.

MAGNUS JOHNSON GRACEFUL LOSER

Senator From Minnesota Takes His Beating Philosophically.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 7.—Senator Magnus Johnson, who was defeated for re-election by Henrik Shipstead, republican nominee, takes his defeat philosophically. Johnson said that the people had spoken and he was satisfied. He will go back on the farm and wait for "something to turn up."

"It would have been a different story if it had not been for the tremendous national campaign they put up against La Follette," Johnson said. "I carried the farmer-labor ticket and led all the way.

"It don't make so much difference to me. I was elected a year and a half ago and now I am kicked out. I left it to the people and they decided.

"I will go down to Washington for the three months session in December prepared to do my duty as I see it, and no one will tell me what to do. The politicians aren't going to have anything to do with it.

"I'm just as well satisfied to get out. I like to be down on the farm with the boys. I will be in Washington this winter and may be I'll work on the farm next spring. I like the farm work. It makes me feel good and I like to be home with my family. May be something else will come up—politics or something. I won't be able to tell what I am going to do until the time comes."

KIMBALL, Minn., Nov. 7.—"Now that he lost out, I wish he didn't have to go back to Washington this winter," Mrs. Magnus Johnson said today about her husband's defeat. "I don't care much about it down there. It's too lonesome away from the children—and I do like the farm. We've had some pretty hard times on the farm. The salary helped some, but of course, that isn't everything."

Mrs. Johnson didn't know whether she wanted her husband to continue in politics. That will be up to him, she said.

Robison Takes The Stand In Los Angeles Oil Trial

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—Extent of preferential rights in naval reserve No. 1 of the Elk Hills district, requested by the Pan-American Petroleum company in its bid for the construction of the second unit of naval oil storage facilities at Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, was not realized by Rear-Admiral J. R. Robison, he admitted in cross examination today.

These rights, involving permission to drill, are worth approximately $100,000,000 it has been estimated.

"When the bids came in and you considered them, did it ever enter your mind how large preferential rights asked by the Pan-American company really were?" Robison was asked by Owen J. Roberts, associate prosecuting attorney in the government suit to break the lease.

"No, I don't believe I considered this," Robison replied.

Robison followed this admission with two more on which the government laid great stress.

He admitted he was in error when he previously testified that he discussed the naval reserve leases with former Secretary of the Interior Fall "several times from October 9, 1921, until the policy of handling the reserves was drafted on October 25."

This admission came when Roberts showed him a travel voucher disclosing Fall was away from Washington until October 1, 1921.

Next he admitted that there was an error in the testimony of E. L. Doheny, before the senate committee in Washington, when Doheny stated that Robison had conferred with him and with E. J. Doheny, Jr., at their home in New York concerning the Pearl Harbor storage plans.

"I don't think I was in their house or saw them in connection with the matter in New York," Robison said. "I do not say I did not do so, but I did not go to New York particularly for that."

"Your best memory is that you did not see the Dohenys from 1921 until after the contracts were signed in 1922?" Admiral Robison was asked by Roberts.

"I have no such recollection," Robison replied.

BABCOCK DENIES JOHN JURKO NEW TRIAL IN COURT

District Judge Refuses to Try Case Again; Appeal Pending.

Motion for new trial arraigned this morning in the case of the State against John Jurko was denied at 2:30 this afternoon by Judge W. A. Babcock.

It is thought that the argument for reversal on appeal to the supreme court will be centered largely on the ruling made this afternoon, owing to the stress laid on the claim that the testimony of F. A. Wright was improperly admitted to impeach Mrs. Jurko's evidence.

Argument Today.

Motion for a new trial in the case of the state against John Jurko, sentenced to be hanged October 11, as a result of conviction for the murder of A. B. Vandenmark, was argued before Judge W. A. Babcock this morning and taken under advisement. The main point argued by the defense was that the testimony of the state witness, F. A. Wright, was improperly admitted for the purpose of impeaching the testimony of Mrs. Jurko. Mrs. Jurko said that Vandenmark approached her and solicited her to leave John and elope with him. At one time she was understood to say that this occurred the day before the killing and at another that it occurred on the day on which the killing took place.

White testified that he was around with Vandenmark on the last day during the hours mentioned by Mrs. Jurko. The defense objected on the ground that the period covered was not the same as that in regard to which Mrs. Jurko testified. The wife of the condemned man never very defective English and the transcript of the evidence shows both statements. The transcript is ready to go to the supreme court to which appeal has been taken. Prosecutor J. W. Taylor represents the county and W. H. Guthrie and H. C. Mills the defense.

SNOW CARPETS GROUND

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 7.—The first snowfall of the winter blanketed the upper Mississippi valley and the valley of the Red River front last night and today. A cold wind came down from Canada, bringing three inches of snow here and a temperature well below freezing. Reports from the Canadian northwest said it was six below zero there.

SWINK SENTENCED

JACKSON, Tenn., Nov. 7.—Wade Swinks Senator R. B. Swink was sentenced by Judge Ross G. United States district court here today to 30 months and 29 days in jail for violation of the prohibition laws.

European Laundry Marks.

Laundry marks vary greatly in Europe. In Bavaria every piece has a number stamped on it in large characters. In other parts of Germany a small cotton label is attached by means of a hot waterproof adhesive. In Bulgaria each laundry has a large number of stamps engraved with designs, and in Russia the laundry mark linen with threads worked in Arrow stripes. In some Russian towns the police issue regulations for laundries while in Odessa needs of marks are furnished annually to the laundry proprietors and these marks are in others may be used. By this system criminals and revolutionary agitators are often traced. Marks used in England consist of certain small letters or figures stitched in red thread. In some parts of France linen is defaced by having the whole name and address of the laundry stamped upon it, or an additional geometric design to indicate the owner.

If we were transported to the boxes of Borneo we might see a group of natives gathered together under the tropical palms, watching two men sitting on their haunches, facing each other across an earthenware dish, munching Bimo nuts. Each holds a gun in his naked hand and, at a signal, drops it into the Bimewater. It would not occur to us that this is a court of justice but the two men coming from the dish are litigants, and that he whose claim first wheels in falling into the Bimewater loses the case. The people of Borneo believe that their gods give them as a sign to him who is in the right.

Memories of Early West Revived in Conversation With Desert's Settlers

By HENRY H. GRAHAM.

Now that Idaho is attaining wide prominence as a state, having outgrown its desert childhood and developed into the fertile valleys and broad acres we have on early, it is interesting to turn back the pages of time and review what has happened during the years that are gone.

Idaho has been steadily developing, particularly southern Idaho, for a great many years. Most of the first pioneers, those hardy men and women who blazed the western trail, have crossed the last divide. They smoothed the way for others and lie buried beneath the sod of their beloved state. Many of those who took up the burden where the trail-blazers left off are dead; not all of them. Many of the frontiersmen are still living. Some of those identified with Idaho's development left the scene of their greatest activity to seek fame and fortune elsewhere. Different luck has come to each one.

Price Revisits Scene.

Ed V. Price used to drive a stake to Boise in the last century. Rock Creek was then a stopping place on the old line, and Rock Creek Jim, the oldest of the Shoshone tribe, who died several months ago, often told vivid stories of the stirring incidents which occurred in his vicinity—skirmishes between red men and white—stage coach robberies and similar events which were almost an every day happening in that uncouth period.

Price is now one of Chicago's leading clothing manufacturers, being president of the company which bears his name. He left Idaho while still young to make his fortune in Illinois. Starting in a small way he rapidly grew to the prominent place he now occupies in the commercial world. Price visited Twin Falls and southern Idaho, about a year ago, making the trip in his new Pierce-Arrow, quite a contrast to the weather-beaten stage he used to handle in the days of his youth. He expressed surprise at the development of the region which he had known only as a desert, parched and forbidding, full of rattlesnakes and rabbits.

Notes Changes

As he gazed in satisfaction at the fertile fields and progressive cities Price said:

"I believe we had more excitement in the old days with the robberies and Indian attacks. All these are gone now but in their place I see the magical effect of irrigation. You have made a garden of this land that God forgot—made a veritable Eden out of the sandy Idaho.

"I do not regret my stage coach days in southern Idaho. It was a wonderful experience for me. We had good times then just as we do now. Sometimes the going was rough but we managed to get along and I think the privation was good for us."

In Reminiscent Mood

Price was in a reminiscent mood while in Twin Falls. He talked freely of old times and took particular delight in comparing them with the present state of civilization.

"When I was driving the stage," he continued during the course of our talk, "this country was merely a series of ridges and hollows covered with gray brush and molested by vermin of all kinds. Shoshone falls was little known east of the Rockies and was difficult to reach. The scenic wonders of the Snake river lay unheralded—they were yet to be thrown open to the public. With the country's development, however, they were not to remain long in obscurity. Now they are well-known."

Price remained in Twin Falls for several days renewing friendships and forming new ones. It was apparent from his kindly manner that he was sincere in his felicitation of the wonderful strides made locally. Every day he saw something to take his eye, something he had overlooked. Such a change was a distinct shock.

Indian Sees Change.

No more picturesque description of early days ever was given than that of Rock Creek Jim, the aged Indian, who died at Twin Falls on September 20. Rock Creek Jim saw it all and talked of it most vividly. A monument will be erected to his memory. This will be constructed where the trail crosses Rock Creek. It will be a splendid tribute to the settlers' friend.

Knew Famous People.

Judge Smith, a kindly man without an enemy in the world, lived at Shoshone in the early days. None knew Idaho better than he. Working as a telephone lineman in the early days of the state he erected miles of wires, probably more than any other man. Smith was a resident of Shoshone when it was an uncouth desert village, full of saloons and kindred places.

He was well acquainted with many of the characters found in B. M. Bower's famous novel, "Good Indian." After hearing him talk about the different red men mentioned one could enjoy the book infinitely more. Smith passed to the beyond several years ago and with him many of the choicest untold stories of the early west.

AT THE... THEATRES

Norma Talmadge in her latest First National picture, "Secrets," now showing at the Orpheum theatre, plays four different roles in four different periods and in gowns of four different fashion cycles.

It is a picture of modern romance with flashbacks into three other periods of romance among the Shakers, out in 1923, the picture later shows Norma first as a young wife of the early days in Wyoming and the far west.

Then the action switching to the year 1870, Norma has become the mother of a growing family. The passing years of the photoplay's story next show her in the gowns of the later '80s of the last century. Her hair has greyed and the children have grown but it is the same Norma of the early sequences of the story. Last of all, Norma is shown again in modern costumes in 1923.

"Secrets" is an unusual picture. It has an unusual story which is developed in a novel fashion. And in it Norma has a splendid opportunity, of which she avails herself to the full, to display a remarkable range of characterization.

One is hardly able to believe that the Norma seen in the early sequences as a young wife and as a mother is the same person who is shown later with grey hair and in the black silk dress so much favored by our grandmother.

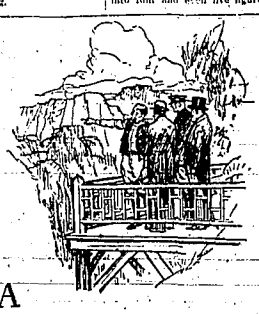
Wood From Cobs

A good substitute for wood is said to have been made from corn cobs. The cobs are ground into a pulp, mixed with a substance that binds the product together and compacted by powerful hydraulic pressure. When the process is finished, it is said the wood is so hard that it can be whittled, shaved or turned in a lathe without danger of chipping.

Money in Unsealed Packets

The implicit faith of the public in the honesty of the post office is shown by the huge sums of money sent through this channel. One ordinary business letter, not stuck down, was found recently to contain a negotiable check for half a million. Frequently banks, and even private people, send unsealed letters with checks running into four and even five figures.



A distinguished coffee meets many distinguished people

It is the glorious West that visitors from abroad most want to see in America. Not the least of the thrills they relate back home is that "wonderful western coffee!" And thus has the coffee tradition spread to every Old World capital.

You know their enthusiasm is well founded the moment you break the vacuum seal of a tin of Hills Bros: Red Can Coffee and release that rare aroma. You are doubly sure when you taste the flavor. As one zealot said, "They may copy the can, but not its contents!"

With all its high quality, Hills Bros. Coffee is not high-priced. It is economical to buy—and economical to use. Hills Bros., San Francisco.

WEST POSSESSES MORE ENTHUSIASM THAN EAST REPORT

(By HENRY L. FARRELL)

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Perhaps the east will deny that western football can offer if any kind of a pattern off which its game could be improved. The difference between eastern and western football always has been a subject of debate, and even if competent critics do assert that the western game is better, there are easterners who will question the competence of the judgment.

Setting aside for the moment that question of mechanical football, there is one sure thing. The west certainly has more real football enthusiasm and more real football interest than the east. The west also can give us east a dozen good lessons in the proper way of building stadiums and in taking care of the crowds.

There are three great football structures in the east that are devoted exclusively to football and track events. The Harvard stadium, the Yale bowl and the Princeton stadium. They are regarded in the east as the zenith of architectural skill and the maximum of comfort for the spectators.

There in the east who think that the football structures of the "Big Three" are the last word should take a look at the Ohio State stadium in Columbus, the Illinois memorial stadium in Urbana and the Nebraska stadium in Lincoln.

Compared to these three big structures of the middle west, the best in the east are antiquated and out of date.

For instance, the press boxes in the Ohio State stadium and the Illinois stadium are glass enclosed and steam heated. The tables are roomy and comfortable and the service is perfect. The same care in providing protection from the weather, in offering room and comfort for the spectators and courteous service is carried out just the same for those who buy tickets as for those who work in the press box.

The "Big Three" has an idea that it is beyond the public and the press. It looks upon the inclination of the "Big Ten" to be nice to the public as a tendency of a west that is radical in politics and radical in sports.

Yale, Harvard and Princeton graciously set aside a section of their stadiums that wouldn't be accepted by anyone else for the press. There is no covering over the press box and there is no shelter for the fans. The "Big Three" cares nothing if the reporters up in the clouds know who is carrying the ball and they apparently figure that the spectators are less concerned in the real happenings of the game. It is, enough their attitude is, that thousands are given the courtesy of seeing a "Big Three" team on the field.

DRUGGISTS BOW TO ALCO TEAM

The Fisher Drug bowlers successfed last evening to the expert work of the Alco representatives, winning the necessary two out of three games at the local alleys. After taking the first two contests easily the merchants eased up a bit and permitted their rivals to capture the last game.

A feature of the match was the mark of 242 hung up by the Alco men in the second and deciding game. In this stanza Scilley rolled 226, Thompson 214, Ashbry 192 and Self 180. Taylor fell somewhat behind the others, having only 116.

High score for the evening was won by Scilley, who had 531. His teammate, Thomason, beat him out for an individual game, however, by 7 points. Both were comfortably well over the 200 line.

Reduction of the bowling league membership to six teams was decided upon last evening by the directors. The reason given for this step was that a strengthening of the different teams would result therefrom.

The teams remaining in the league are Butter-Nut, Golden Rule, Alco, Grossman, Unbarch and Fisher Drug.

The score of last evening's match follows:

Alco	1	2	3	Tot.
Scilley	167	226	138	531
Thompson	158	214	137	489
Taylor	163	146	129	438

SCRAPS FROM THE GRIDIRON

CAMBRIDGE—Harvard's regular quarterback, Cheek, will not be able to play against Princeton, it was announced today. The varsity went through a long defensive drill against the scrubs.

NEW HAVEN—The freshmen eleven romped through the varsity for two touchdowns in the final scrimmage before the Maryland game. Butterworth and Sturnham, two members of the varsity, were injured and forced to leave the field.

PRINCETON—A revamped Tiger team with the heaviest line and the lightest backfield available will start against Harvard Saturday.

ANNAPOLIS—The varsity went through a hard scrimmage brightened by word that several of their best men banned from the team on account of deficient scholastic work will be reinstated in time for a week before the Army game.

WEST POINT—Army was given another long workout in perfecting new plays they will use against Florida next Saturday.

CHICAGO—With the heaviest team from tackle to tackle in the conference, Chicago today hoped to defeat Illinois Saturday with smashing line attacks.

URBANA—Despite their injuries, Hall, Sliemer and Mellwain will play against Chicago if they are needed, it was indicated in the final workout before the game.

ANN ARBOR—Northwestern plays used by the freshmen received little scoutd against the varsity in practice yesterday.

Commerce Chamber Elects Hodgin as Its New President

Marsh Shad L. Hodgin was elected president of the chamber of commerce at a meeting of directors held last night. Appointment of standing committees was deferred until next day, and the president authorized to appoint a blue card committee in the meantime.

Report of the tourist park for the year indicated that nearly 12,000 had been accommodated and that the praise for the system was almost universally voiced.

Following the report of Secretary Charles E. Dodge regarding the at tendance at the Milwaukee live stock show, resolutions were passed thanking the Union Pacific and its representative, C. G. Gimmons for assistance rendered. C. E. Lind reported progress in the road south and predicted that in ten years the highway would be hard surfaced.

The informal sentiment regarding the position of secretary to be filled later was unanimously for retention of Mr. Dodge if he would consent to remain.

Power in the Blood!

You will be compelled to admit that the results of S. S. S. are really amazing!

MAN'S GLORY is his strength—yet how few there are who are really as strong as they should be. The blood thins, gets weaker, blood cells wear out—general weakness and a gradual break-down of the system results.

We know there is one thing that puts power in the blood, and that is more red blood cells! S.S.S. builds them by the million! We know that as blood cells increase in number, blood impurities vanish! But have you ever actually taken advantage of this wonderful fact? Thousands just like you have never thought of it. So-called skin eruptions—pimples, boils, blackheads, eczema all pack up and go when the tide of blood cells begins to roll in. Blood cells are the fighting giants of Nature. S.S.S. is one of the greatest blood cell builders, blood cleansers and body builders known to us mortals. Here is your opportunity! S.S.S. contains only vegetable medicinal ingredients. Before S.S.S. could build red blood cells, it roots out impurities, builds firm flesh, fills out hollow cheeks, beautifies the complexion, builds you up when you are run-down.

S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

It was at the Old Bailey in London and not in Chicago that a judge the other day declared: "This is an era of sensationalism. A number of boys commit these sensational crimes, and to me it is incomprehensible. have tried two cases of boys of perfectly good character who have committed atrocious murders." In Chicago the aim of the lawyers on both sides is to depict the youthful murderers as of perfectly bad character.

THE TEST OF DEMOCRACY

If ever anyone had any doubt that the Great War, in Mr. Wilson's classic phrase, was fought to "make the world safe for democracy," the electoral record of the last twelve months ought to dispel that doubt. Before 1914, in Europe at any rate, elections were relatively infrequent and in many countries had little effect upon government policy. Today elections are being held, or have recently taken place, in all the leading countries of the West and in many lesser states as well. And in Great Britain two elections have been held within a year, an example which may be soon followed both by Germany and Italy. Certainly the war has given democracy its chance to make good.

Yet despite its triumph everywhere, never has the popular enthusiasm for democracy been less. In old days when kings and aristocracies held unchallenged sway popular government seemed to promise the millennium. There is no desire today for a return to the outworn systems of yesterday, but there is much less confidence than there was that the machinery of democracy is the panacea for human ills. People are at odds with their politicians with the constitutions under which they live, with the apparent inability of legislatures or governments to straighten things out to their satisfaction.

None the less, democracy has come to stay. That is not because democracy creates in itself a particularly efficient system of government. It notoriously does not, as every business man will agree. Nor it is mainly because a democratic system makes it impossible for those in high office to ignore the well being of the people and to deflect government for long in the interests of a single class or clique. The fundamental reason is because democracy creates better men and women, by throwing the ultimate responsibility for public policy on the people themselves instead of making it possible for them to shuffle off that responsibility onto others. Democracy is not so much an efficient system of government as the best system of educating responsible citizens which has yet been contrived.

The contrast was well shown in the Great War. Imperial Germany was probably the most efficient government that the world has ever seen. Yet its efficiency was imposed from above, as a result of Bismarck's success. It was not a growth in understanding from below. Despite their prestige, the Germans were politically the most docile, least responsible and least independent of all the great peoples of the earth, the Russians only excepted. In consequence it was possible for a small clique to utilize the gigantic state machine of pre-war Germany for the ends of a policy of their own, practically without any effective internal resistance of the German people themselves. Yet when it came to the issue, despite unpreparedness and improvisation, democracy stood the test of war better than more highly organized autocracy.

Today, except in the case of Russia, and presumably only temporary also of Italy and Spain, the peoples are in control of their governments. Democracy, therefore, is on trial as it has never been on trial before. And the prospects of its success rest, as its name implies, with the people themselves. It is the fashion just now to put all the blame on the politicians. That is sheer hypocrisy. No doubt there are bad politicians. They are bad because they appeal to the ignorance, or cupidity, or self-righteousness of the people. But they succeed because the people follow their flattery and promises, instead of following the less exciting and less tempting lead of those who tell them the truth, that good government spells self-sacrifice and not the distribution of benefits.

Democracy will be a success just in proportion as the thought of the people is governed by public spirit, by wisdom, by brotherly love, and by the active desire to promote honestly the welfare of all mankind. It will be a failure just in proportion as their thought is governed by selfishness, ignorance, or prejudice. No party has the monopoly of virtue. All parties are instantly responsive to any real demand for better things from the electorate. So in the next few weeks the people will be on trial. It is to be hoped they will rise to their opportunity.

The SEA HAWK

by RAFAEL SABATINI

Under the glaring African sun this amazing crowd stood assembled to welcome Sakr-el-Bahr; and welcome him it did with such vocal thunder that an echo of it from the mole reached the very Kasbah on the hilltop to herald his approach.

By the time, however, that he reached the fortress his procession had dwindled by more than half. At the sok his forces had divided, and his corsairs, headed by Othman, had marched the captives away to the bagnio whilst the camels had continued up the hill. Under the stout gateway of the Kasbah they paused into the new courtyard to be ranged along two sides of it by their Saharowi drivers, and there brought clumsily to their knees. After them followed but seconds, two score corsairs to a guard of honor to their leader. They took their stand upon either side of the gateway after profoundly salaaming to Arad-el-Jin. The Basha sat in the shade of an awnings enthroned upon a divan attended by his waxen Tasmanni and by Marzak, and guarded by a half-dozen janissaries, whose sable caftans made an effective back ground to the scene and gave to his jewelled robes in his white turban glowed an emerald crescent.

The Basha's countenance was dark and brooding as he watched and his life to the service of Islam, who had been accepted by Sakr-el-Bahr, and stood now before Asad to be confirmed in his office.

Marzak interposed petulantly, to exclaim that already were there too many erstwhile Nasrani dogs in the ranks of the soldiers of the Faith, and that it was unwise to increase their number and proportionate in Sakr-el-Bahr to take so much upon himself.

Sakr-el-Bahr measured him with an eye in which scorn and surprise were nicely blended.

"Dost say that it is presumptuous to win a convert to the banner of Our Lord Mahomet?" quoth he. "Go read the Most Perspicuous Book and see what is there enjoined as a duty upon every True-Believer, and bethink thee, O son of Asad, that when thou dost in thy little wisdom cast scorn upon those whom Allah has blessed and led from the sinfulness wherein thou dwelst into the bright meadows of Faith, thou dost cast scorn upon me and upon thine own mother, which is but a little matter, and thou dost blaspheme the Blessed name of Allah, which is to tread thy way that lead into the Pit."

Angry but defeated and silenced, Marzak fell back a step and stood biting his lip and glowering upon the corsair, what time Asad nodded his head and smiled approval.

"Verily art thou full learned in the True Belief, Sakr-el-Bahr," he said. "Thou art the very father of wisdom as of valor."

the advent of that line of burdened camels. His thoughts were still laboring with the doubt of Sakr-el-Bahr which Fenzileh's crafty speech and crafter reticence had planted in them. Of a sudden his eyes sparkled, and he rose to his feet to welcome him as a father might welcome a son who had been through perils to a service dear to both.

Sakr-el-Bahr entered the courtyard on foot, having dismounted at the gate. Tall and erect, with his head high and his forked beard thrusting forward, he stalked with great dignity to the foot of the divan, followed by Ali and a mahogany-faced fellow, turbaned and red-bearded, in whom it needed more than a glance to recognize the rascally Jasper Leigh, now in all the panoply of your complete renegado.

Sakr-el-Bahr went down upon his knees and prostrated himself solemnly before his prince.

"The blessing of Allah and His peace upon thee, my lord," was his greeting.

And Asad, stooping to lift that splendid figure in his arms, gave him a welcome that caused the sneering Fenzileh to clench her teeth behind the fretted lattice that concealed her.

"The praise to Allah and to our Lord Mahomet that thou art returned and in health, my son. Already hath my old heart been gladdened by the news of thy victories in the service of the Faith."

Then followed the display of all those riches wrested from the Dutch, and greatly though Asad's expectations had been fed by those by Othman, the sight now spread before his eyes by far exceeded all those expectations.

In the end all was dismissed to the treasury, and Tasmanni was bidden to go cast up the account of it and mark the share that fell to the portion of those concerned—for in these ventures all were partners—the Basha himself, who represented the State, down to the meanest corsair who had manned the victorious vessels of the Faith, and each had his share of the booty, greater or less according to his rank, once wrinkled of the total falling to Sakr-el-Bahr himself.

In the courtyard were left none but Asad, Marzak and the janissaries, and Sakr-el-Bahr with Ali and Jasper. It was then that Sakr-el-Bahr presented his new officer to the Basha, as one upon whom the grace of Allah had descended, a great fighter and a skilled seaman, who had offered up his talents

And thereupon he gave welcome to Master Leigh, whom he hailed as the pride of the Faithful under the designation of Jasper-Reis.

That done, the renegade and Ali were both dismissed, as were also the janissaries, who, quitting their position behind Asad, went to take their stand on guard at the gateway. Then the Basha beat his hands together, and to the slaves who came in answer to his summons he gave orders to set food, and he bade Sakr-el-Bahr to come sit beside him on the divan.

Water was brought that they might wash. That done, the slaves placed before them a savory stew of meat and eggs with olives, limes and spices.

Asad broke bread with a reverently pronounced, "Bismillah!" and dipped his fingers into the earthenware bowl, leading the way for Sakr-el-Bahr and Marzak, and as they ate he invited the corsair himself to recite the tale of his adventure.

When he had done so, and again Asad had praised him in high and loving terms, Marzak set him a question.

"Was it to obtain just those two English slaves that thou didst undertake this perilous voyage to that distant land?"

"That was but a part of my design," was the calm reply. "I went to rove the seas in the Prophet's service, as the result of my voyage gives proof."

"Thou didst not know that this Dutch argosy would cross thy path," said Marzak, in the very words his mother had prompted him.

"Did I not?" quoth Sakr-el-Bahr, and he smiled confidently, so confidently that Asad scarce needed to hear the words that so cunningly gave the lie to the innuendo.

"Had I no trust in Allah, the Allwise, the All-knowing?"

"Well answered, by the Koran!" Asad approved him heartily, the more heartily since it rebutted insinuations which he desired above all to see rebutted.

But Marzak did not yet even himself defeated. He had been soundly schooled by his guileful Sicilian mother.

"Yet there is something in all this I do not understand," he murmured, with false gentleness.

"All things are possible to Allah," said Sakr-el-Bahr in tones of incredulity, as if he suggested—not without a suspicion of irony—that it was incredible there should be anything in all the world that could elude the penetration of Marzak.

M. E. PINCH, Sheriff.
By H. E. PHARRIS,
Deputy.

Sewing Needle Old —

The sewing needle dates back to antiquity, and it is not known who invented this implement. It is evident from relics that stone needles were used in the Stone age. The Chinese are believed to have been the first to use needles of steel. They gradually spread westward until brought to Europe by the Moors.

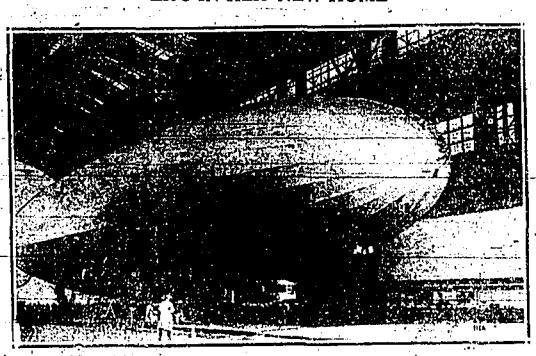
ZR-3 IN HER NEW HOME



The ZR-3 is safely settled in her new home. Here the big dirigible is seen tucked away in the giant hangar at Lakehurst, N. J. She will share this with her sister ship Shenandoah. Naval and marine guards may be seen all about the new arrival. A few lucky persons have succeeded in getting into the shed to give the Leviathan of the air a good "once-over."

FROM BROADWAY TO SCHOOLROOM

Hazel Vergez, 16-year-old New Orleans dancer, made good on Broadway. For two years she danced with Ziegfeld's Follies. But now she has turned her back on the bright lights and gone back home. She is going to enter college. Here she is as the Follies girl and as the co-ed.

PRODIGY

Mary Willis of Dorchester, Wis., learned to recite the alphabet, count to 50 and do a little reading and writing when she was a year old. Now, at the age of 13, she is a freshman at Northland College, Ashland, Wis. Mary wants to be a gymnasium teacher when she grows up.

THROW HIM BRONC DUFFY FROM BEE TO BEAVER

Will Rogers has reversed the usual order of things. He has presented a silk and studded nose-bag to the broncho that throws the most cowboys at the rodeo now being held in New York. Bonnie McCarroll, of Boise City, Idaho, is exhibiting it.

Duffy Lewis is taking more or less of a leading part these days. He led the Salt Lake Bees this season, led the Pacific Coast league in hitting, and now he's to lead the Portland Beavers next year. Lewis has bought an interest in the Portland club with Ten Turner and is to manage the team.

DIDN'T WORK

Nicholas Sokolowsky of Detroit started out to insure bachelors and bachelors girls against marriage. But too, many weddings wrecked his Perpetual Endowment Society. Police seized his books, closed his offices and threatened prosecution. They could do nothing, though, for he had obtained a state charter, and was operating within the law.

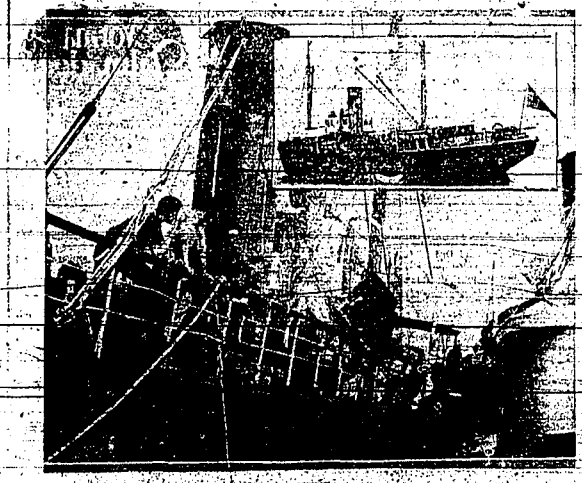
THREE MILLION LESS DRINKS



The British Steamer "Quadra" dared to come too close to the Golden Gate—so now she is inside the Gate, booze and all, a prize of the Coast Guard cutter Shawnee. Here you see the government agents boarding the "Quadra," about to discover that she carried 12,000 cases of champagne and whisky—144,000 bottles—or 3,168,000 drinks which won't be drunk! This gives you an idea of the size of the Quadra, a twin-screw craft.

EXTRA GIRL GETS CHANCE TO PLAY WITH VALENTINO

Many girls dream of the day when somebody will discover how beautiful or charming they are and pick them for a leading role in a motion picture. It actually happens to few. Helen D'Algy, twenty-year old Spanish girl, is one of those few.

She had done extra parts in several pictures without attracting attention until a few weeks ago when Rudolph Valentino happened to be watching a scene being made at the Paramount Long Island Studio for "The Side-Show of Life." He was struck by her girlish beauty and a few days later, as a result of his insistence, she was chosen as leading woman in his latest Paramount picture, "A Sainted Devil."

They are shown above rehearsing one of his first scenes for the picture.

Lesson for November 9

THE FEEDING OF THE FIVE THOUSAND

LESSON TEXT—John 6:1-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—I am the bread of life. John 6:35.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Feeds Hungry People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Feeds Five Thousand.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christ Meeting Human Needs.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Jesus Saves.

In the previous chapter, Jesus showed Himself to be the source of life. He here proves Himself to be the sustainer of life.

I. Jesus' Compassion for the Multitude (vv. 1-5, cf. Matt. 14:14). The state of the crowd always incited the Lord's sympathy. He knew that they were as shepherdless sheep (Mark 6:34). They were going forth with no one to care for them. Besides, they were ignorant, so much so that they had no appreciation of Him. Added to this, was their awful physical hunger. This condition roused the Savior's pity. This is true of the multitude today. The crowd surges about us daily as shepherdless sheep. There is no one to care for them. Then, too, they are ignorant. Sin has so thoroughly blinded them that they are not conscious of their lost condition. Down deep in their hearts is a hunger for something good. The millions of earth are hungering for Christ, though ignorant of their real needs.

II. The Lord's Conference With the Disciples Touching the People's Need (5-9).

This was not done for His benefit, for He knew what He would do (v. 6). He is equal to any occasion. His object in this conference may be summed up as follows:

1. To teach them their sense of obligation to the multitudes. Men are slow to recognize their obligation to the great shepherdless multitude. We need to be taught the wonderful truth that God has made man His partner in the salvation of the world. We are workers together with God (II Cor. 6:1). It is a most solemn obligation to cooperate with Him in saving the millions who are groping in darkness.

2. To teach them their true helpessness in the face of such great needs. The loaves and fishes were as nothing in the presence of five thousand men besides women and children. Well might Andrew exclaim, "What are these among so many?" We may plant and water, but the increase comes entirely from God.

3. To teach them their sufficiency in them the Lord. The mission worker needs to know that Christ is the only source of supply. Without Him we can do nothing (John 15:1-8). We can no more carry on the work ourselves than the branch can bear fruit without the vine. The branch supplies the life and strength for the production of fruit. Philip's mistake is of no use in the face of such need. The Lord Jesus has all power.

III. The Lord's Method of Accomplishing His Work (vv. 10-13).

We observe here the orderliness of Christ's work. He pauses to give thanks for their scanty supply, teaching us that we should always bring our abilities and gifts to God, that He might bless them to His use.

1. The Lord's part, was to bless and break the bread, even as we create the needed supply. This part the disciples could not perform. The Lord must begin the work. The same kind of bread was provided for all, rich and poor, young and old, women and children.

2. The disciples' part was to distribute that which He had blessed and consecrated. This is true of the missionary today. His part is to take from the hands of the Lord that which He has blessed and consecrated, and distribute it among the starving multitudes. We are not responsible for the supply; but we are responsible for its distribution to all those who are hungering and perishing for the bread of life.

3. The people's part was to sit down and eat. They had no part in the provision, neither its distribution, but only to take from the hands of the disciples and eat. This is an illustration of the part obedience plays in our salvation. "When all had eaten to the full, much was left," illustrating the superabundance of Christ's salvation.

IV. The Effect (v. 14).

The people recognized Him at once as the Prophet who should come. They believed Him for His works' sake.

Must Tread the Path

Death's but a path that must be trod, if man would ever pass to God.—Thomas Parnell.

Shut Off Pumps on Minidoka Project; To Clean Ditches

BURLEY, Idaho, Nov. 7. — The pumps at all three pumping stations of the United States reclamation service on the southside Minidoka project were shut off Wednesday, November 5, thus closing the season of furnishing irrigation water and water for domestic and stock purposes in the three canals.

Project Superintendent Darlington says that the work of cleaning the ditches will go forward at once as long as good weather lasts so the ditches will be in shape for spring when the water season opens again. Up to date the farmers have been busy with their crops and unable to work with their teams. But Mr. Darlington feels certain that now they will be available to work on the ditches. There will be some inside work to do too in readiness for the next season, such as overhauling the machinery and electrical apparatus at the power house and at the three pumping stations.

CHLORINE GAS FOR TREATMENT

The Twin Falls Clinic has installed an outfit for the freezing of chlorine gas in the treatment of all forms of acute respiratory infections. The Literary Digest for this week has an article on the use of chlorine gas in sterilizing the air of halls and schools to protect the frequenters from colds and various respiratory infections. The use of chlorine gas for the treatment of colds, bronchitis and kindred ailments, it is said, came into general prominence some months ago when President Coolidge asserted that he had been decidedly benefited thereby, since that time much attention has been paid to the matter by the medical profession in general. Several hundreds of cases tried out under scientific methods at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., showed 71 per cent cure, most of them with only one hour's treatment; the treatment is simple, and may be taken at the patient's home, hence is readily available to all, it is asserted.

He Could Have Been.

Mr. A. is a very enthusiastic lodge man, spending about five nights out of every seven at various lodge rooms—of all of which lodges he is a member. His wife, who is rather tolerant of the whole business, however, does occasionally get peeved enough to say a few sarcastic things. And the other night came her chance. For a wonder, her husband was at home for an evening, curled up in a rocking chair before the grate fire and reading busily. For a long time she sat silently watching him, then she asked, "John, what are you reading?"—"My ritual," he answered. "Well, I must say," she remarked with some spirit, "if you had studied your marriage vows as much as you have studied that ritual you would be a model husband."

Takes pills for years—finds first permanent relief in Kellogg's Bran

Have you found permanent relief from that terrible disease—constipation? The woman whose letter follows discovered—as thousands have discovered—that Kellogg's Bran succeeds when all else fails. This is because Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran. Nothing but. All bran—so—so effective. This is what she wrote:

"Gentlemen:

I am so wonderfully happy over my discovery, I feel I must tell it a world about it. For years I have been ill continually from constipation, always resorting to pills or the like, never having been free from it since I heard of your Kellogg's Bran.

Every morning I take two tablespoonfuls before my breakfast—and since the latter part of August I must admit have not experienced one self upsetting which I have had for years. I have started my little girl of four years on your Bran, and already I have noticed a change in her. I thank you."

Name and address furnished on request. Write the Kellogg Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

If eaten regularly, Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is guaranteed to relieve permanently the most chronic cases of constipation. Eat at least two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. Money returned if not effective.

Notice the wonderful nut-like flavor. This flavor is delicious—so different from ordinary, unpalatable bran.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, made in Battle Creek, is served by America's leading hotels and clubs. Demand Kellogg's Bran. It will bring back your health. Start eating it today. Sold by all grocers.

Red Bottom Tanks

When the day's work is done, what lemons refreshing than a long, cool drink of fresh water? Hard-worked horses enjoy it as much as we do. Red bottom tanks will accommodate and conveniently keep it always ready for them.

Two sizes—the round and the oblong with round ends. Made of high grade galvanized steel. Red bottom tanks are guaranteed for 5 years. Look for the red bottom. Refuse substitutes, which are not genuine unless so stamped. Warranted 5 Years

A CHAPTER OF WAR HISTORY

By George E. Roberts

From the Monthly Bank Letter for Ocober, Issued by The National City Bank of New York

The September Letter referred to certain current expression of opinion to the effect that international loans and international bankers were often responsible for wars, and in the course of our comments said:

> The United States government never has gone to war to protect the investments of its citizens in foreign countries, nor has war ever been made by any country that we know of in behalf of the investments of its people in foreign countries; foreign loans and foreign trade have been subjects of disagreement and controversy; they are points of contact, and wherever people come in contact disagreements are likely to arise, antagonisms may develop, and where the antagonisms develop along national lines they may lead to war. Economic considerations are a very important factor in human affairs, which countries as well as between counties, and are likely to be as long as men strive for economic gains, but it is impossible to frame a set of war consequences for the collection of debts. * * *
> It is safe to say, not only that no war ever has been begun for the collection of debts, but that no war ever has been due to the influence of bankers or private financial interests. The people who imagine the contrary have a very dull conception of more favorable to such interests in a period of wealth-destruction than in a period of general wealth-accumulation, which of course is fundamentally sound.

In response to the foregoing we have received a copy of the same with the first sentence of the second paragraph underlined, accompanied by the following letter:

> Omaha, Nebraska
> 9-19-24
> National City Bank,
> New York.
> Dear Sirs:
> Do you really mean to assert in the underlined sentence of your September letter on page 149 that the loans by J. P. Morgan & Co. and the American banks, who had advanced some 500 millions or more to the Allies, did not do their part in the winter of 1916-17 to drive this country into the war or were to the Allies, did not do their utmost in the allied drive? Why did U. S. Treas. Melton by Morgan & Co. not take the Treasury closer to actual hostilities over declaration of war, what they had advanced to the Allies, thus assuming that timber without security to the U. S.?
> If you have any data to contradict the inquiries of many millions of people and which seems to be justified by many circumstantial, if not documentary evidence, it might not be amiss to assert it in your next Letter.
> Respectfully yours,
> (Signed) A. L. MEYER.

There is no basis or warrant whatever for the implications carried by the inquiries of this letter.

The Anglo-French five-year loan of $500,000,000 which was floated in this country in October, 1915, was handled by an organization of bankers and investment houses headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., and comprising 1,570 subscribing houses, located in all parts of the country. These bankers, however, were not the only participants, for there were sub-participants back of them. These houses sold the bonds to investors, this widespread organization giving them a like distribution over the country. This issue passed out of the hands of the bankers at once. Bankers who are bond distributors buy bonds as a merchant buys goods, for the purpose of selling them, and sell them as quickly as possible in order to be in a position to repeat the operation.

This issue of bonds was paid off at maturity, October 15, 1920, the British Government paying one half in full, and the French Government floating a new loan of $100,000,000. As these payments were made to private holders it is evident that the United States Government never had any participation in this loan.

The loan to which the above letter probably refers was a demand loan held by a smaller group of bankers at the time the United States entered the war, April, 1917. This loan has had some publicity through a reference made to it by the late Walter H. Page, at that time United States Ambassador to Great Britain, in Volume II of his "Life and Letters," pp. 261, 272-273, as follows:

> And we came in the nick of time for them, I say truth. It we hadn't, their exchange would have gone down soon and and broke. I had been forced that afternoon I sprang with Mr. Balfour and Mr. Bonar Law to the Foreign Office.
> The matter that was chiefly pressing at the time of the Balfour visit was the fact that the British balance in the New York banks were on a serious position. It should always be remembered, however, that Great Britain was financing not only herself, but the nations with which she was allied in the war. This in April 6, 1917, Great Britain had entered into an agreement with J. P. Morgan to the extent of $400,000,000 and had no cash available with which to meet this more than half. But the loans had been secured in the purchase of supplies, both for Great Britain and the allied governments, and securities, largely British consol stocks and bonds, had been deposited to protect the bankers. The money was now coming due; if the obligations were not met, the credit of Great Britain in this country would crash the vanishing point. Bonds at first sight seem good enough security, but if Germany should win, the American Government finally would be left with the bonds of a country that the first Liberty Loan. This act saved the credit of the allied countries; it was, of course, only the beginning of the financial support that America brought to the allied cause; the advances that were afterward furnished from the American Treasury made possible the purchases of food and supplies in enormous quantities.

As this Bank was a participant to an important extent in this loan, we are in a position to know how its was handled and how it was financed. Mr. Page was not attempting to write a detailed or exact account of the transaction, nor were his informants attempting to give him such an account, and the statement was given in the conversation as a few words of explanation about these securities' is necessary. After the exhaustion of the proceeds of the Anglo-French loan of $500,000,000 the British Government continued to cover its purchases in this country by shipments of gold and by sales in this market of American securities which it procured from British holders. Laws were passed by the British Parliament creating inducements for the British owners of such securities to convey them either temporarily or permanently to the British Government, for the purpose of aiding in financing its purchases in the United States, and very large amounts were obtained in this manner.

These securities, which had been under accumulation by British investors—insurance companies, investment companies, individual investors, etc.—in all the years since British investments in this country began, were of a very high class—many of them underlying bonds of the oldest and strongest railroads, and in general such as had brought that which for the most part had been infrequently seen in the markets in recent years, being held as permanent investments.

These securities were sent to the New York representatives of the British Treasury, J. P. Morgan & Co., to be sold or used as collateral for loans. Several time-loans were issued on such security and distributed on the public market, and in all more than $1,000,000,000 of the securities were sold by J. P. Morgan & Co. Obviously, however, sales had to be made at low prices compared with the prices which these securities had commanded before the war, and it was desirable that they should not be pressed for sale faster than the market could absorb them without depressing prices still further. To avoid doing this, the demand loan was resorted to as affording some latitude in making sales and in the selection of dates for selling time-loans to the public. The demand loan was shared in by a selected list of the larger banks, in and outside of New York. At the time the United States entered the war this loan was approximately $345,000,000 and was secured by collateral of the kind described above, having a market value at the time of about $700,000,000 and readily salable.

When the United States entered the war the Government at Washington immediately assumed supervision over the security markets in order to mobilize the financial resources of the country in the most effective manner. It did not want flotations, even by the governments associated with it in the war, which might interfere with its own plans for bond offerings, and insamuch as it was necessary for the purchases of those governments in this country to continue, it was quickly decided that all interests would be best served by having the United States Government finance such expenditures itself. That was the end of foreign flotations in this country until after the war.

By the time the United States Treasury was ready to take over the full burden of payments on account of British purchases, which was a month or so after the United States declared war, the demand loan had increased to approximately $400,000,000, which was the high point, with collateral still approximately double that amount.

The statement that this loan was taken over by the United States Treasury is a mistake, so far as the bankers have any knowledge of it. They never approached the Treasury, or had any negotiations with the Treasury on the subject, nor did they ever make any demand on the British Treasury for the payment of the loan. It was paid gradually, from funds accumulated by the British Treasury with J. P. Morgan & Co., but this account was constantly receiving funds from various sources, as the sale of securities, the sale of exchange, transfers from a Bank of England account with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, etc., and at the same time was being drawn upon for current payments by the British disbursing officials. That the United States Treasury came to the support of the British Treasury at that time, is, of course, common knowledge, and that some of the funds used in liquidating this loan may have come from that source is possible. As to this we have no knowledge but the payment of the loan was in no degree dependent upon receipts from that source.

The essential facts are that this loan was amply secured with collateral of American origin, that the lending bankers had no occasion for anxiety about it, and that they did not turn it over to the United States Treasury. Its payment was not dependent upon this country's entering the war, or upon any resources of Great Britain other than the collateral. There never was a time so the life of the loan when it could not have been liquidated from the proceeds of the collateral.

Of course, the whole miserable story of the influence of the bankers for the entrance of this country into the war falls when the alleged motive for it disappears. It had its origin somewhere among the people who like to believe that sort of thing. The master mind of the war policy unquestionably was that of the President, whose character and memory need no defense against the calumny.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Grain futures finished with good advances on the board of trade today.

Heavy export business and higher foreign markets sent wheat up sharply. Practically all interests bought grain freely but most influential traders coming in on reports of flood damage in Australia and prospects of lighter Argentine shipments. Export sales for the day were reported 2,500,000 bushels. Sharp advance on the New York stock exchange also helped strengthen sentiment.

Corn was carried along by wheat although some disappointing husking advices from the central area brought moderate short covering.

Oats were inclined to lag and only raised a fraction of the day.

Higher hogs and some buying for foreign accounts strengthened provisions.

PARENTS ARE URGED TO DO THEIR SHARE

A plea for responsibility of parents was made this afternoon by Mary Ruth Fisher, principal of the Twin Falls high school, in a talk to the W. C. T. U. and auxiliary societies in session in the Christian church here. Miss Fisher said that there was far less understanding between children and parents now than there was a quarter of a century ago. At that time they were closer together and the parent assumed much of the responsibility now thrust on the teacher. She strongly urged greater understanding by parents of the viewpoint of the children sincerely, love, and the forbidding of substitutes for reproofs of impractical of the children instead of license on one hand or arbitrary and unreasonable repression on the other. There was a large crowd in attendance.

Baptists Have Pageant.

The Japanese pageant presented by the women of the Baptist church was received with applause and acknowledgments of appreciation.

In behalf of the W. C. T. U. a paper on "Love" was presented by Mrs. H. T. Blake. This was followed by reports from Mesdames William Baker, David Schuster, George Wiley and Charles P. Dwight. Mrs. C. E. Scott conducted the devotionals.

Following the talk by Miss Mary Ruth Fisher on Building for Life, this afternoon, short talks were made on the activities of young people by Mesdames W. Montooth, G. M. Hall, T. F. Warner, C. L. Allen and James D. Whelan. Mrs. Goodrich led the devotional service for this meeting.

Interspersed throughout the program were musical numbers by the quartette consisting of Mesdames Nunenaker, Wiley and Westcott and Miss Edna Graham. Miss Weaver gave a reading and Mrs. W. Zenas Smith sang a solo.

Bad Luck and the Devil Pursued Him

"I don't think any one has had more bad luck and sickness than I have. In 1905 I had two ribs in, arm and collar bone broken in a railroad accident. Then I had pneumonia. After recovering I pressed a picture when a bell chased me, leaped me over the fence and broke my right leg. In 1910 I had typhoid fever; since then severe stomach and liver trouble, which no medicine or doctor touched until five years ago I got a bottle of Mayes' Wonderful Remedy, which proved the first ray of light in 12 years." It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all drug stores.

SWIFT AUTO IS SLOW MACHINE SAYS WINSHIP

Noted Educator and Editor Tells Teachers and Parents Changes Are Taking Place in Educational Lines with Astounding Rapidity; Would Have Examination for Parents.

That an auto traveling 50 miles an hour is a slow vehicle compared with the way things are traveling today; that there have been more changes in the educational life in the last eight years than took place in the preceding half century and that there are to be followed by still more momentous changes; and that it is unsafe to assume that because a thing existed yesterday it must necessarily continue to exist tomorrow, were thoughts suggested by Dr. E. A. Winship in his lecture before a good sized audience in the high school auditorium last night.

Dr. Winship spoke at length on some of the tendencies of the times, and described the working of the Emily Griffen school of opportunity in Denver with its 5000 students. He said that parents and teachers must both wake up to a realization of changed conditions and cooperate in making a success of the public school system of America for the coming generation and this it over the crisis which has arisen due to the shifting of the mill of force from the teacher to the superintendent.

Teachers from all parts of Twin Falls county and from Jerome and Hurley were in attendance with a goodly number of people from this city.

Dr. Winship predicted that his grandchildren, two of whom are now in Harvard, would witness establishment of tests to see whether pupils were fit to bear their own property.

DAMPIER MUST SERVE SENTENCE SAYS HIGH COURT

Lawyer Consulted of Sending Obscene Matter Through the Mails Finds Judgment of Federal District Court Upheld by Higher Tribunal.

BOISE, Nov. 7. The United States circuit court of appeals has affirmed the judgment sending E. H. Dampier, attorney of Rupert, who was convicted in United States district court here last February, according to copy of the decision received Thursday by U. S. Davis, United States district attorney. Dampier was sentenced on March 7 by Judge F. S. Dietrich to pay a fine of $1,000 and serve six months in the Minidoka county jail. He was convicted on an indictment containing five counts, charging that he sent obscene letters through the mails to a young woman of Rupert.

Tried in February.

Indictment against the Rupert attorney was returned at the last February session of the United States grand jury, and his trial started before Judge Dietrich and a jury on February 25. Dampier was found guilty on all five counts.

Motion for a new trial was filed on grounds the verdict was contrary to the law and to the evidence, and that the court erred in not instructing the jury as to the law applicable to the defense on alibi. Judge Dietrich denied the motion, and an appeal was taken to the higher court at San Francisco. According to the district attorney's office, it will be a few days yet before mandate from the circuit court of appeals is received.

Another case in which the judgment of Judge Dietrich's court is affirmed is that of John Rantala, convicted at Coeur d'Alene, at the last session, on a charge of violation of the prohibition law. His sentence was six months in the Kootenai county jail and a fine of $500.

DEFEATED CANDIDATES TO BE GIVEN PARTY AT THE IDAHO TONIGHT

Joe-K of Idaho Theatre Invites All Defeated Candidates to Be His Guests This Evening at the Idaho Theatre.

Through the Twin Falls Daily Times, Manager Joe-K of the Idaho theatre, extends an invitation to all the candidates who were defeated in the election on last Tuesday to be his guests at an informal theatre party to be held tonight. Joe-K says: That he has one of the best shows on that he has ever presented and that seats will be reserved for the "whole gang." Let's each and every one of us be "sports" and accept this offer and be at the Idaho theatre at 7:45 p. m.

Box seats will be reserved for the unfortunates but the audience is kindly requested not to bring eggs.

POOL HALL BURNS; STOPS INJUNCTION

Attorneys Appear to Argue Case Only to Find That There Is No Building to Closer Origin of Fire Unknown So Far.

Because fire of unknown origin burned down the W. C. Griffin pool hall in Rogerson at 3 o'clock this morning, and there was no building to fasten an injunction on, the case of the state against Jamil Griffin, the Rogerson Department store, J. A. Hudson and J. E. Robert, to close, the case was dismissed on motion of Prosecutor J. W. Taylor at 2:30 this afternoon by Judge W. A. Babcock. Griffin was arrested October 24, along with a clerk in the restaurant for alleged illegal possession and action was started to close the hall.

Character witnesses subpoenaed yesterday to appear today and the attorneys appeared shortly before noon to take up the matter. When the witnesses appeared they informed the lawyers that there was nothing to close. Court adjourned until 2:30 this afternoon to obtain confirmation which resulted in dismissal. The case against Griffin is still pending.

It is said that building and stock were insured for $2,000.

The complaint filed by the prosecutor stated that Griffin and Hudson were interested in business operated in the building, that the Rogerson Department store had an interest in the place and that J. E. Roberts was prepared to be agent for the owner, whose name was not given.

A survey of the traffic hazards of Cincinnati is being planned.
