SUBMARINE MAY NOT BE RAISED

SUBMARINE

Weight of S-51 Is So Great That Big Cranes Are Unable to Lift Same From Bottom of Sea Today; Hope of Lost Crew Vanishes As Time Slips By.

NEW LONDON, Oct. 1—The two wrecking cranes Mohawk and Century, failed in the new effort to lift the Lukken submarine S-51 today. Official information was contained in a message received at headquarters here this afternoon.

The official message said:

"Extreme combined capacity lift of Mohawk and Century applied to stern for the purpose of taking time to compartments and tanks until all the hatches had been unfastened, secured. Attempt failed to start S-51. This indicates engine room and all forward rooms flooded. Intend to cut small exploring hole in engine room hatch."

With the new failure in rescue efforts, all hope vanished at the submarine that life could be saved. In fact the hope had vanished unofficially even before the two derricks failed.

Another desperate hope of determining whether life still continues within the craft will be made by means of the "exploring hole" in the engine room hatch.

Navy officers explained that this hole probably would permit of application of a compression gauge which would indicate whether or not water was in the engine room compartment.

BUTLER'S AUDITORIUM FILLED AT FUNERAL OF TWIN FALLS PASTOR

Fellow Workers Banquet Last Evening Was Largely Attended and Beautiful Tribute Made; Disciples Attend Twin Falls Minister's Funeral in a Body; Closing Rally of Young People Tonight.

BUHL, Oct. 1—The Baptist state convention adjourned at noon today to attend the funeral of Rev. E. O. Butler of Twin Falls, and the delegates and speakers were present in a body. The closing session will be held tonight when the Young People of the Baptist churches of Idaho will stage their annual rally in the Christian church, where the sessions are being held.

One of the outstanding features of the convention last evening was the big fellowship dinner which was given in the Methodist church with a large crowd. Rev. A. F. Colver of Boise acted as toastmaster and presented the speakers and musicians. Frank M. Willy who recently returned from the New York meeting of the Board of Missionary Control, gave a brief summary of that meeting and what it means to the Baptist denomination. He paid a beautiful tribute to Rev. E. O. Butler of Twin Falls, who died while at the head of the Baptist denomination. He stressed these points in the work of the Northern Baptist convention: Co-operation, and the splendid work of the various workers in the churches of the state which put the state over with a 106% return. He also spoke of the democracy of the denomination.

French Agree to U. S. Terms for Funding War Debt

Secretary Mellon Announced Late Today That the French Commission Had Agreed to a Tentative Settlement of the War Debt at Forty Million a Year for Next Five Years.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1.—A tentorary settlement of the French debt was reached here today between French and American debt funding commissions. It provides that France shall make certain payments for the next five years when the French capacity to pay will again be discussed by the two countries.

The French debt mission will leave Washington immediately for France.

The annual payment on account of the debt for the next five years will be $40,000,000.

This settlement was announced to the press late today by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. A statement explaining the settlement was promised in a few minutes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, following a conference with President Coolidge today formally closed that a tentative agreement for funding the $4,200,000,000 French debt to the United States has been reached as announced at the French embassy by a personal representative of Finance Minister Caillaux last night.

On the contrary, Mellon said, the French were informed at yesterday's meeting that "their proposals were not likely to be accepted." He added that "no proposal has been made acceptable to the American commission and none has been submitted to the president for his approval or disapproval."

Mellon said there was no difference of opinion among members of the American commission as reported. His statement follows:

"The representation in the press on the supposed authority of a member of the French commission that agreement has been reached and purporting to give the terms is entirely incorrect.

"Such a statement obviously did not come from Mr. Caillaux because the adjournment of the sub-committee last evening the French members were informed by the American members that their proposals were not likely to be accepted.

"There have been no differences of opinion whatever amongst the American commission. The visit to the president this morning was to inform him of the position of negotiations.

"No proposal has been made acceptable to the American commission and none has been submitted to the president for his approval or disapproval."

The French have made this tentative offer: The annual payment of $40,000,000 for five years; $60,000,000 for the ensuing five years; $100,000,000 for about fifty-six years thereafter, or a total payment of about $8,220,000,000.

Henri Bonet's Report Contradicted.

The announcement by Mellon flatly contradicts statements made last night by Henri Bonet, an authorized spokesman for Rene Caillaux, who gave out what purported to be the terms of the sub-committee agreement and cable back cries of more on the final success of the debt negotiations.

With Caillaux scheduled to leave Washington for France not later than tomorrow morning, only a day remains in which to bring about an accord which a week or longer period has so far failed to produce. The two commissions were to meet in joint session again today.

RIFFIANS BURN FRENCH TOWN

PARIS, Oct. 1—Souedia, in French Syria, lies a mass of smoking ruins because of reprisals between Christian inhabitants and Druse riflemen following last week's relief of the citadel by General Jamelin's French column.

The Europeans were obliged to evacuate Souedia when the riflemen shut off the water supply and otherwise made the city uninhabitable and took up a position at the oasis of Musseifre, 22 miles south.

After the soldiers had departed the inhabitants began quarreling. The Christians burned the Druse quarter as a reprisal for the shutting off of water. Druses countered by burning the military barracks and the Christian village.

The citadel, already badly wrecked by cannon fire, was burned to ashes.

General Gamelin is reorganizing his forces for a campaign to bring the rebels into submission. After burning Souedia they fled into the desert.

WOODROW WILSON MEMORIAL UNIVERSITY PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—A drive for $5,000,000 with which to erect a university on the outskirts of Washington to be known as the Woodrow Wilson Memorial University was announced here today by the National Woodrow Wilson Memorial association.

CANADA JOINS U. S. TO STOP LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Dominion Informs State Department That It Will Co-operate in the Suppression of Smuggling of Whiskey and Narcotics; Will Prevent Clearance of Ships With False Entry.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Canada and the United States have combined to suppress whiskey and narcotics smuggling along the great lakes and the Atlantic seaboard.

The state department today made public regulations of the convention of 1924 between the two powers, approved by President Coolidge and the Canadian cabinet providing that each government will notify the other when authorities believe a rum or drug running ship is clearing to cross the boundary.

Customs officers are directed to refuse clearances of vessels when it is evidenced from the tonnage, size and general character of the ship or supposed false statements declaring papers that smuggling is intended. This will prevent clearances of small motor boats from Canada to points in Mexico and Cuba, it was pointed out.

Shipments of liquor through Alaska to northwestern Canada must be transported under the customs seals of both countries, according to the regulations. Shipments must be accompanied by a guard and provision is made for record of final despatch from American territory.

Tax Roundup Gets in Much Loose Cash

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1.—The nation's greatest roundup of tax delinquents and dodgers resulted in the collection of $4,162,998 during August the internal revenue bureau announced today. Two thousand agents of the bureau made 45,845 investigations and levied $691,356 additional in assessments.

The number of delinquents was reported as 23,830, of whom 0688 were income tax dodgers and 14,142 miscellaneous tax evaders.

Colorado, Ned, Mexico, Utah and Wyoming reported 202 income delinquents and collections amounting to $2916 with $40,149 in assessments.

Oregon, Montana, Idaho and Washington contributed $11,257 from 805 income delinquents with assessments of $1479 and $15,877 from 1359 delinquents; from assessments of $21,936.

Arizona, California, Hawaii and Nevada reported 688 miscellaneous delinquents and collections of $9116.

Pretty Swindler

Limousines, diamonds, furs and clothes of prominent San Francisco are said to have composed the loot of Mrs. Harriette Hammell, beautiful proprietress of an exclusive shop who is missing. Detectives say she is one of the most skillful swindlers in the country. It is estimated that her various swindle schemes netted her $100,000?

ON TO OMAHA GOES OVER IN MANY CITIES

Kimberly Gives Liberally and Jerome Over With Idaho Falls, Blackfoot and Pocatello; Twin Falls Expected to Get Quota Before Friday.

The dance given last evening by the Twin Falls Post of the American Legion brought in quite a sum of money for the "On to Omaha" fund and this together with special contributions, placed the local committee within three hundred dollars of the quota at noon today. C. L. DeLong, one of the three members of the state committee has gone to Burley and Rupert today to aid in the work there and expects to be able to report that this district has gone over before night.

Kimberly has raised her quota of cash and beans and are loading enough beans today to feed a regiment. Idaho Falls has raised her quota of $800 and Blackfoot has posted her $750. Pocatello has gone over the top with $750.

Bend Will Go.

The American Legion band of Idaho with 35 pieces will go with the special train which leaves Pocatello on Saturday evening at 7 p. m. This is the Blackfoot Military band and is a splendid organization, it is stated.

A building has been secured in Omaha and space will be assigned in each of the hotels exhibits of Idaho products. Beans, potatoes, etc., will be featured at the display. Bend all the leading hotels and be served during the American Legion convention.

This special train will carry a large exhibit from the Twin Falls county fair besides vast products from the fields of Idaho to "show Omaha what we grow out west."

The Oregon Short Line has made a one fare for the round trip and the Pullman accommodations, including sleeping quarters during the convention will be only $16.35. The total cost of the train fare will be twenty-five dollars according to Mr. DeLong.

Communism Given Sharp Thrust By Secretary Kellogg

Inter-parliamentary Union of World's Lawmakers Assemble in Washington for Twenty-third Annual Session; World Powers Will Discuss International Law and World Peace for Several Days; Reduction of Armament Urged; Communist Says Barring by United States is An Outrage.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—A sharp thrust at communism was delivered by Secretary of State Kellogg in his welcoming address to the inter-parliamentary union today.

Without mentioning the name of Shapurji Saklatvala, communist British delegate, barred from entry into the United States by Kellogg, the secretary took occasion to sound a warning against encroachments upon constitutional government by the 270 delegates assembled from forty nations in the house of representatives.

Kellogg expressed the opinion of the American government as follows:

"Parliamentary government, used in its broad sense as including all forms of representative democracies, is today facing as grave problems as at any time within the memory of any man now living.

"There are forces at work for the disintegration of orderly representative government and for establishment of class rule which may well give us serious thought."

"The largest international assemblage in this country since the arms conference convened here today when the inter-parliamentary union opened sessions in the house of representatives to discuss the state of the world.

The meeting is the 23rd annual conference which has been held.

The agenda contains the following subjects:

Election of a new president; discussion upon "industrial or artisan life," General E. L. Phipps of Britain, and Dr. [illegible] of Germany; [illegible] of defense of [illegible] upon European [illegible] statesman M. Adolphe Max, president of the [illegible] of Brussels, on the problem of [illegible] by Dr. Paul Usteri, former president of Switzerland; [illegible] Baronessa Blanca Cecchi, senator, on the right against the use of drugs; discussion of the [illegible] parliamentary systems by M. [illegible] Mitchell, conseiller national of Switzerland; codification of international law by Elihu Root.

The daily sessions will continue until next Tuesday when the closing will come to a close with adoption of resolutions. The first day's meeting will be devoted to general discussion of the report of the secretary-general, the usual welcoming speeches.

Eighteen United States senators, 36 members of the house of representatives comprise the American delegation. [illegible] countries represented include Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Czecho Slovakia, Dominican Republic, Dutch East Indies, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Panama, Peru, Persia, Philippine Islands, Venezuela, Yugoslavia and United States.

SHENANDOAH WRECK TRIAL GOES AHEAD

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 1—The trial of wits between Captain Anton Heinen, who places the blame for the crash of the dirigible Shenandoah on the officers of the ship and the survivors who seek to clear their dead commander, Zachary Lansdowne, continued with the resumption of the hearing by the naval court of inquiry here today.

Lieutenant Commander Chas. E. Rosendahl, senior surviving officer of the dirigible, speaking for all the survivors, sought to elicit from Heinen statements tending to sustain the judgment of the Shenandoah's officers. But Heinen, with terse promptness, turned every thrust.

The dirigible expert was questioned at length technically on wind, weather and navigation. Then Rosendahl snapped:

"Do you believe there is any airship pilot in America beside yourself who could have saved the Shenandoah?"

"There are many," Heinen replied calmly. "Lansdowne among them."

Floods in Japan Kill Many and Destroy Houses

TOKIO, Oct. 1—A thirty hour rain with resultant floods have taken a heavy toll of life and property damage in central Japan.

Twenty are known to be held in Yokohama; six in Yokusaka and three in Tokio.

A thousand houses have been demolished and other thousands inundated. Traffic has been crippled and light and power cut off in many parts of the city.

The imperial hotel is partly flooded.

ASKS COMPLETE PROBE OF AIRCRAFT BY BOARD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Acting Secretary of War Davis has asked Major General John L. Hines, chief of staff of the United States army, to make a survey of criticism and suggestions brought out in testimony before the president's aircraft board.

Criticisms and suggestions which are worthy of consideration may be made by the commission it was said at the war department today.

FORMAL CHARGES OF KIDNAPING ARE MADE

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 1—Formal charges that C. C. Stone, aged father of Jack Hoxie, screen star was responsible for the kidnaping and killing of Nina and May Martin, school girls, was presented to the county grand jury today by District Attorney Asa Keyes. The Martin sisters were brutally murdered in August, 1924. Their skinned bodies were recovered six weeks later in Glendale swamp after hectic searching by officers and a citizens posse.

SICK WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Can Be Carried Comfortably Over The Critical Period by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

—Note Mrs. Headden's Case

Macon, Georgia.—"During the Change of Life I suffered with my whole right side and could not lie on my left side. I was in bed about two months and could not get up only as my son would lift me. After doctoring without relief a man who was rooming with us told my son that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured his mother at the Change of Life, so I began taking your medicine. After taking it for two weeks I could get out of my bed by myself. I am now 53 years old and in better health and stronger than ever in my life. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to many suffering women, young and old, and you may use my name any where as long as you please. I will be glad to answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. F. E. HEADDEN, 5 Hoft Avenue, Macon, Georgia.

In a recent country-wide canvass of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 200,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported they had been benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

FILER GREETS LEGION MEET OF DISTRICT

Enthusiastic commendation of the work of the women during the world war by State Commander O. W. Worthwine and a stirring appeal by State Committeeman C. L. DeLong, of the "On to Omaha" special were features of the meeting of the district American Legion and the Woman's Auxiliary here last evening.

The state commander gave women credit for winning the Great war and for their efforts in behalf of world peace. He said that the action of the Women's Auxiliary in seeking a world's peace conference was right, and that, as conditions were such that war was still possible, they were right in their attitude in demanding that all industry be subjected to draft.

Mr. DeLong explained the details of the Omaha convention and the exhibit which the Legion expects to take. Several car loads of produce will go from southern Idaho to the exhibit, he said. The produce will be assembled at Pocatello and sorted. The building at Omaha will be furnished by the Union Pacific. The special leaves Pocatello Saturday evening at 7:10.

L. N. James was elected district adjutant to succeed Leslie M. Foy, resigned.

The Catholic women of Filer furnished the banquet, for which Benoit's Rainbow orchestra furnished music. The meeting adjourned to attend the "On to Omaha" dance at Danceland in Twin Falls, which was well attended.

Mistaken Atmosphere

The pastor had been holding revival services for some time. Much interest had been taken in them, but on this particular evening the meeting had been more than usually interesting.

As the service drew to a close the pastor said in his concluding remarks, "What a heavenly atmosphere there is here this evening." Happening to glance, as he said it, at the pew where his wife and sister sat, he saw a broad smile overspread their faces.

When the congregation had gone, he said to them, "What made you girls smile so when I was speaking?"

"Oh," said his wife, "we couldn't help it. Jack Smith (a noted village character) had been 'coon hunting skunks and he came into the meeting without changing his clothes and sat down right behind us, and when you spoke of the heavenly atmosphere it was too much."—Harding Herald.

BRUINS PLAY ALBION FIRST GAME FRIDAY

Coach Felix Plasting and Faculty Manager R. V. Jones are not feeling very jubilant over the outlook for victory in the game here tomorrow with the heavy Albion Normal team. This is the opening game for the Twin Falls high school and yet the team is badly broken up by several attacks of influenza and none of the men being crippled in scrimmage work.

The coaches are not looking at the first game as hopeless but they realize that they are up against a fast team and yet the Bruins are not in the best trim by any means. Bera is out of the backfield lineup because of injuries. Prahm, the big end, and Eddie Martin at quarter, are sick with the flu. Hinton is also indisposed and some else will have to start the center position. He hasn't got a knee wrenched the other night in practice and may not be in the game. Some others are bruised up from hard scrimmage and all in all the Bruins will not be in the best of shape for the opener tomorrow.

However, the Bruins are charging hard and Coach Plasting is optimistic of a good showing in the opener. The Bruins are charging hard and Coach Plasting is optimistic of a good showing in the opener. The Bruins are charging hard and Coach Plasting is optimistic of a good showing in the opener.

Adventurers Lured to Their Fate in Mexico

Sinaloa, Mexico, was the objective of a number of filibustering expeditions prior to William Walker's famous invasion of Nicaragua. Walker was on his way to Sonora when stopped in Lower California. The failure of many bold adventurers to pick up bushel baskets of gold in California in the days of 1849 sent them rampaging in every direction, and Sonora presented a special lure because it was an old settled region, and marvelous tales were told of its mineral wealth.

Two Frenchmen of noble birth who were stranded in California successively endeavored to carve out an empire from this supposed El Dorado, and both lost their lives in the venture.

First came Marquis Charles de Pindry of Poitou, who set forth with 200 followers and was murdered in his sleep at Cocospera. Next came Count Gaston Raoul de Raousset-Boulbon of Provence, who was executed by Mexican soldiers August 12, 1853.

It was a pity that De Raousset was cut off before he brought his scheme of empire to fruition. He was a fascinating type of the soldiers of fortune, but he had a fatal weakness—he loved all beautiful and romantic women. The last one to receive his gallant devotion detained him until an overwhelming Mexican force surrounded his little army of 240 Americans. After a valiant resistance the Americans were defeated and De Raousset captured.

"Allons, mes braves," he said to the firing squad in a clear, cheerful voice. "Do your duty! Fire true—aim at the heart!"

A volley cracked. Count de Raousset-Boulbon fell dead. — Adventure Magazine.

IDAHO U. HAS HARD FOOTBALL SCHEDULE 1925

University of Idaho Has Some Hard Games for This Year's Schedule; New Bleachers Will Seat Over 7,000.

MOSCOW, Oct. 1—New, permanent bleachers with an additional seating capacity of 5000 have been erected on Maclean field, University of Idaho's athletic arena, this summer. Approximately 7000 persons can now be accommodated. Space on the semi-circular hill around the athletic field will permit the erection of temporary bleachers to seat 2500 additional persons, bringing the total seating capacity to 10,000. This will be done soon, it is said, in preparation for Idaho's first and biggest home game of the season, with the University of Southern California, October 30. This game will mark the official home-coming day for Idaho graduates and former students.

The thick carpet of grass which covers MacLean field has been cultivated all summer and will make an ideal gridiron for Idaho's home-coming game. "The field is in better shape now than it has been for many, according to members of the coaching staffs at the university.

Advance ticket sales will be handled throughout the state before each home game, it has been announced, and efforts will be made to provide suitable accommodations for out-of-town visitors who come long distances to see Idaho's grid battles.

Idaho's home and near-home games this year are very important ones. The U. S. C. game, October 30, probably is the most important. But the W. S. C. game at Pullman, October 17, and the Gonzaga contest at Spokane, October 24, each will attract hundreds of Idaho supporters. University of Montana journeys to Moscow to meet Idaho in the last home game of this season on November 7.

Our Debt to Children

Better teachers, fuller school equipment, it matters not what they cost. We owe them to our children. And we owe them more. We owe them our own example. What we do, and the lives they live with us, will affect them most. Give them a chance to be useful in their childhood, to practice economy, to do for themselves. If the greatest men have usually been born in the country and later gone to the city, there is a reason. Huxley warns us not to let a child's schooling interfere with its education. It ought to have the best schooling our brains and our purses can procure. But its deepest education is in the hands of its parents.—Norman Hapgood, in Hearst's International.

Use Ribbon Wire

When you have to carry an electric wire from a base plug underneath the rug to a lamp, get a length of ribbon wire from the electrician's and use it instead of the regular cord. This avoids lumping of the rug.

Record Swim!

Speaking of swimming feats, Otto Kemmerich, noted German paddler, is believed to have set a world record in his 37-mile jaunt from Fermarn Island in the Baltic Sea to Warnemuende, making the distance in 32 hours. He was unaccompanied through the rough waters having only a thermos bottle of hot tea, a compass and wrist watch with him.

Saves the Linoleum

Landslide Forms Peninsula

Near Sebastopol on the Black sea a landslide recently removed about 190,000 tons of earth, thrusting it into the sea in such a way that when it settled it had formed a peninsula and several new small islands that may be made habitable.

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE

Arthur J. Peavey, Administrator with the Will annexed, of the Estate of Jennie L. Snow, Deceased, Plaintiff,

Paul M. Ellis, a bachelor; Idaho Implement-Vehicle Company, a corporation; and C. O. Meiss, Defendants.

Under and by virtue of an Order of Sale issued out of the above entitled court, in the above entitled action, dated the 19th day of September, 1925, wherein the Plaintiff obtained a decree against the Defendants herein on the 18th day of September, 1925, said decree being recorded in Judgment Book Eleven, at page Seventy-four of said District Court; I am commanded to sell all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

Lot numbered Fourteen (14), in Block numbered Twenty-nine (29) of the City of Twin Falls, as same is shown and designated on the official plat of Twin Falls Townsite, on file and of record in the office of the Recorder of said County and State; together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in any wise appertaining.

Public Notice is hereby given, That on the 10th day of October, 1925 at the hour of 2:00 o'clock P. M. (Mountain Time) of said day, at the East front door of the Court House of the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, I will, in obedience to said Order of Sale, sell the above described property to satisfy Plaintiff's Decree with interest thereon, together with all costs that have accrued or may accrue, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States.

Dated this 22nd day of September, 1925.

Pimples
What can I do?
"Oh, why can't I have a skin like other girls? Why did I have to have these ugly pimples, blotches and blackheads on my face?
"If I could only do something that would clear up my skin and give me back my beauty, I would be the happiest girl in the world. What can I do?"
What? Why, you're talking! It is in you to be happy. Forget your troubles! Just build up the rich, red blood in your body. Then your skin will be as clear as lovely as any girl's.
All that is needed is a little iron. Take Nuxated Iron, the famous iron tonic that has been used by thousands of men and women with such remarkable success. Nuxated Iron is the iron that builds up the blood in your veins. Without iron you can't have a clear skin, bright eyes, strong nerves, a good appetite, or even a good disposition. Without iron you can't even think straight. Without iron you can't have the pep and vigor to do the things you want to do. Without iron you can't have the beauty you want to have.

IDAHO PRISON IS CROWDED

A visit to the state prison of Idaho will convince the most skeptical that crime is either on the increase in the Gem State or else the population of Idaho is growing rapidly. Recently the writer had occasion to look the prison over and was surprised to find that Negroes, Mexicans and Indians were crowded into the same section of the penitentiary with the whites. Convicts should be punished but this is a little more extreme than we would agree was justice.

The most hazardous part of this arrangement is that a "break" may occur some of these days similar to the one staged this week in Lincoln. If such a break does come with the crowded condition the likelihood of escape is all the more probable. If there were more guards and a larger space for the housing and confinement of these wards of the state the chances for such an escape would be greatly lessened.

The warden announced recently that there were now 820 prisoners confined within the walls of the prison and yet the cells will accommodate only about 200. This shows the congested condition.

Some years ago the ministers of Boise and a group of business men pressed this question before the board of prison commissioners and urged a program of improvement but nothing was done at that time and very little since. The earnings from the shirt factory has been used for some of the prison necessities but this has not gone very far. It is expected that a special appropriation or perhaps a bond issue may be asked for in the next few years.

WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS LETTER

WASHINGTON—Recent events in Washington probably have given a pretty widely-spread impression that all isn't quite right with American national defense.

This impression is correct.

The controversy over the merits of war versus surface forces isn't the only trouble. Still worse, army and to some extent navy morale is badly shattered.

WHETHER one considers Col. "Billy" Mitchell right or wrong in his invasion views, nobody can hold that the opinions of the superiors of his superiors are evidence of a man in a frame of mind to work effectively toward the ends that they deem best.

Now, Col. Mitchell is not alone in an unfavorable opinion of these same superiors. He simply is the only one who says in public just what he thinks.

Any number of officers are ready to voice such sentiments in the strongest terms if assured they won't be quoted and thus get into difficulties—which not many of them afford to disregard as Col. Mitchell goes.

Still, they do talk with an occasional outsider and, of course, far more freely among themselves.

• • •

IT isn't aviation deficiencies solely that all the kicking is about.

The complaint is that the country's whole military establishment is running down.

That it's on a peace instead of a war basis is recognized as all right, but the malcontents' argument is that retrenchment has been altogether too far.

Maybe the establishment's size is adequate, they say, but its quality is being allowed to deteriorate.

To short the growing, in the last analysis, is directed against the administration's economy policy.

• • •

DISSATISFACTION in the Navy Department isn't quite so acute. The personnel, however, does feel the pinch of tight money. Armament limitations are bitterly resented, too.

However, the navy men are not so seriously at odds among themselves.

Probably this is due in part to the fact that they haven't been split by the aviation dispute which has rent the army.

Few if any navy airmen take the position that their service has rendered all others obsolete. Or, if they do, they keep it to themselves.

Nevertheless the departmental atmosphere is one of depression and discouragement.

WASHINGTON—What politicians say and what they really think often are two quite different things.

For instance, Republican politicians say they expect their party to gain COUNTS or more Senate seats in the next Congressional election.

Also for instance, Democratic politicians predict that their crowd will gain control of the house.

It isn't a bit likely that either group actually thinks any such thing.

• • •

WHEN the Republicans speak of controlling the Senate, they mean that they think they can control it on paper now, but they can't depend on all their own votes—that is, the votes of those possibly nominally classed as Republicans.

In the way they tell it, the agricultural states are so much more progressive than they were that radical sentiment has subsided and they're confident that these states will choose "regular" Republicans in place of "insurgent" Republican senators in 1926.

• • •

THE point the Republicans neglect to stress is that all the changes favor their foes of at least as Democratic seats to the Democrats and that there's no prospect the Democrats will lose any seats to them.

Seven Democratic senators' terms will expire next year and all will succeed themselves or be succeeded by other Democrats. This is certain because the selections will be made by the voters of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, and they always do select Democrats.

At the same time the terms of 15 Republican senators will expire and the states they represent include Arizona, Colorado, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri and Oklahoma, which generally select Democrats.

Besides this, the Republicans will have to fight hard in Idaho, Nevada, New York and Utah.

• • •

THE Democrats may make some gains in the lower house.

They hold few, if any, seats representing normally Republican districts, and the Republicans do hold a number of seats representing normally Democratic constituencies—three in Kentucky, two in Maryland, seven in Missouri, two in Oklahoma, two in Tennessee and one in Texas. The Democrats may gain some of these but hardly enough give them control unless there should be a landslide, of which there's no suggestion at present.

CHAPTER IX—The last sections begin to fill up with settlers of all nationalities. Jake and his wife have decided in the neighborhood. Mrs. Alton remains strangely aloof. Winter sets in.

CHAPTER X—Frank and Jean enter into a marriage engagement. It is well understood that John and Marjorie are soon to be married. Frank almost loses his life in a snowstorm. Spoof drives thirty miles to the nearest town to make arrangements for a double wedding.

CHAPTER XI—Frank and John, lost in a blizzard, spoof on a fool's errand, through a storm. Jean, learning of the affair, nearly has pneumonia. Mrs. Frank's jealousy is fully aroused. The women go after Spoof and bring him back safely. Jean confesses to Frank that she loves Spoof, though he does not suspect it, and breaks her engagement.

CHAPTER XII—John and Marjorie are married on Christmas day. All the neighbors attend the wedding, bringing such gifts as they can command. Mrs. Alton, alone of the neighboring settlers, is not present, claiming the necessity of her caring for little Gerald.

"Partners all!" Jake commanded. It was evident he was to be master of ceremonies; he had just taken a great chew of tobacco to promote the flow of language. The insistent note of the violin brought Jack and me, with Marjorie and Jean, Mr. and Mrs. Burke, and Mr. and Mrs. Brown, to the center of the room. The dancing would be of the "square-dance" variety, which was no novelty, to us or to the Burkes, and which the others would soon pick up under the guidance of Professor Jake.

"Sluto yer partner! . . . Pass'er by . . . Dulance to the next." And we were off. Jake and the fiddler warmed up with the dance, and presently the shanty was rocking with the stamp and the swing of it. Those were not the days of dancing that is little more than a walk; one danced with all his heart and body, and was not afraid to shake the floors and ceilings.

The end of the set found us perspiring and happy.

And so the evening warm on. Ole and Olga joined the dancers in the third set, and thereafter never left the floor; Andy Smith ventured into Marjorie's arms, and in five minutes was fellow younger than he days of his apprenticeship on the Clyde; Spoof danced with Jean as much as seemed necessary. When Spoof was not monopolizing her, Burke or Brown or Smith was. But at length she spurned us all in order that she might win Mr. Sweatt to the floor. The Russian hesitated, fearing to appear foolish, but he would have been more or less than human if he could have resisted Jean's entreaties, and presently she was leading him through the simple movements of a cotillion.

At length they went. The flurries of snow had driven by; the moon poured its silver radiance on a world of downy ivory, and the bigger stars blinked stolidly from a steel-blue heaven as our guests bundled themselves into sleighs and jingled away and took their departure. Their cries of good wishes and good luck wafted back to us above the crunching of the snow. We watched them until each foot out of sight in the white moonlight.

Upon after Jack and Marjorie and Jean crossed the snow-filled valley to their overcrowded house, and left me to pine that was overempty. For a long time I stood looking into the stove, with lid and lifter in my hand, in the act of putting on more wood. The glow of the coals went gray as I watched, and, for the first time in my life, I measured the depth to which the plummet of loneliness can plunge.

CHAPTER XIII

I had given Jean up, under protest, as the only thing to do. But having made my protest I meant to accept my fate with dignity; I would take my sentence like a man, and serve it without whining.

I had been long in going to sleep, and as a consequence had awakened late. The shack was bitterly cold; the only comfort lay under my heavy blankets. As the light increased I counted the knobs of frost that had formed on the roof of the balls that come through the roof. I had never noticed that so many nails had missed the rafters. We were rather bad carpenters. My mind leaped back to the time when, in a little hut in Sussex, lying all the events crowded between, as the violin leaps from height to height across great valleys in the psalms. How unreal and far away it all seemed! But another leap carried me to the bank of a river, and little children playing in the sand, and a slow-pacing water wheel that sprayed its mist of diamonds in the sunshine. I saw her little calico dress, her little brown face, the twinkle of her yellow hair hung about her cheeks. That was Jean.

The clock had stopped! It was with terrific suddenness that I realized the clock had stopped and in my barren shanty was the silence of the tomb. Its round, glassy face grinned an imbecile grin at me from its place on a shelf on the wall. Its hands showed a quarter to four. . . . Well, there was nothing very mysterious about occasion, but in the excitement of the wedding party I had merely forgotten to wind the clock. Only an overwrought nervous system could discern anything uncanny in that. I reasoned all this out, with absurd deliberation, as I rubbed my eyes and wondered why the clock had stopped. Or perhaps the frost had stopped it?

My watch had fared better, and when I drew it from my pocket on the outside of the bed-tick friendly bustle of its ticking was reassuring to my ear. I could hear the companionable center of its balance wheel galloping down the road of life by my side. "Next to a dog," I said to myself, "a watch is the best friend a man can have."

That set me thinking about dogs, and I wondered why in all these months I had neglected to provide myself with a dog. As a sort of insurance, I grimly followed. One always can fall back on a dog.

The hands of the watch said half-past eight, and I suddenly remembered that there were cattle to feed. It would be a decent thing to get up and do all the chores that morning, if they were not already done. So I drew my underwear from beneath my pillow, and sprang from the friendly shelter of the blankets.

I hurriedly started a fire; watched it until it had a proper draft; turned the damper in the pipe to guard against its getting beyond control after I left it. Then, after drawing on my pea-jacket, cap and mitts, I set out for the stables. The morning was gray, with a scattered sifting of small snow-flakes, but the nip to the air was not nearly so uncomfortable as it seemed when contemplated from under the warm blankets. I reflected that comfort and happiness are largely a matter of the point of view. But that doesn't help when the bottom has fallen out of your particular universe.

The stove fire was red hot and the kettle was belching forth a small gayety of steam when I got back to the shack. My search for remnants from the feast of the night before was astonishingly fruitless, until I remembered that the young Hansens had been turned loose upon the left-overs. So I cooked a mixture of oatmeal and water, which I called porridge, boiled two fresh eggs, thawed out part of a loaf of bread, melted a piece of butter, and sat down to a meal that was hardly calculated to make one rejoice in my single blessedness.

After breakfast I washed my few dishes, swept the floor, made my bed, and generally set the house in order. Even then it was only ten o'clock, with nothing more to do until noon. At noon there would be a repetition of the routine, and then nothing to do until night. At night there would be supper and the evening chores, and nothing more to do until morning. And the next day the same, and the same, and the same.

It was mid-afternoon when Jack burst in upon me. "Well, old Robinson Crusoe, how goes solitude?" he demanded.

"Bolten," said I, "but I can always change my mind if I want to."

"Aha!" he exclaimed, in return, clasping himself about the middle. "A blow in the fifth rib! A subtle blow under the fifth rib!"

Jack was obviously in great spirits, but, with a sudden sobriety, he sat down beside me and I felt his hand on my knee. "It's not quite the thing, old chap," he said, "to cut up dead, just because we're married—that is, some of us."

"I haven't cut you," I retorted. "Give me time."

"I know it's a raw deal for you," he went on, disregarding my interruption; "and I'd give my glass eye of my happiness if it would help, if I could put it right. It's a little embarrassing for us all. But don't you think Jean is worth a fight—a little more fight than you have made?"

"I understand Jean," I said, particularly Jean's English. If she wants me now she'll have to say so."

"Oh, get off your high horse. Here's a fine nag, anyway! Jean thinks she loves Spoof, but she doesn't. She's just infatuated with him. She'll grow out of that. But you might help her along a little."

"I'm not so sure. Spoof's a pretty decent chap," I said, inwardly giving myself credit for amazing magnanimity.

"Of course he is," Jack agreed, somewhat too readily, as it seemed to me. "But that has nothing to do with it. Jean isn't putting you and Spoof under the magnifying glass, so to speak, and studying out which is the more decent chap. It isn't done that way. And to save her life she couldn't tell you why, today, she thinks she loves Spoof, and why, tomorrow, she will know she loves you. Reason doesn't enter into these things at all."

"That doesn't make it any easier for me."

"Maybe not," Jack admitted. "And, as I have argued that reason doesn't enter into the consideration, I suppose it is of no use to reason about it. Then let us get onto ground you can understand. Come on over for supper."

I accepted with more alacrity than might be expected of a young man who was resolved that although tied to the stake he would not thrust his feet in the fire. Marjorie kissed me when I went in—a kiss for her dear old bachelor brother, she said, obviously in fun, but I think there was a pang of deep sisterly sympathy underneath. Jean was calm, poised, self-controlled; her eyes seemed larger than usual, and the white of them showed that clear blue-ness that is found in some kinds of delicate china. Either the lamp light was peculiarly yellow or Jean's complexion was below the mark. She chatted freely, almost too freely, and laughed upon occasion, but there was no ring in her laughter.

Altogether, it was rather a difficult evening. We played cards after supper, and tried, as so many others have done, to forget our troubles in the chance of a lucky card. Even the cards were against me. Jean and I had always played together, but, for, night, Jack insisted that it was not meet that a man should have his wife for a partner at cards, so the combination was broken. I may have had a subconscious and disturbing feeling that Jean's hand, to my left, would have made better holding than anything I could hope to draw from the deck. At any rate I played abominably and went home early.

And so the days dragged on. I kept a corner of my south window rubbed clear of frost so that I might maintain a lookout for a visit from Spoof. Although he was my rival, or because he was my rival, I felt that I had with Spoof something very much in common. But Spoof seemed suddenly to have discontinued his visits to Fourteen and Twenty-two, and for the first time in that winter the trail to his shack was entirely overblown and obliterated in a waste of snow.

Jack came over every day, and Marjorie and Jean came two or three times a week and gave my shack the womanly touches of which it was beginning to stand in need, but Jean never came alone. I began to understand that the prairies give solitude without privacy; if one seeks privacy he goes to the city for it.

Thus passed a score of weeks had passed when one evening it occurred to me that I could kill a dull hour or two, and discharge a somewhat neglected civic duty, by writing a letter to my father. Investigation proved that I had no writing paper, so I went over to Jack's to borrow some. They had none, either, but Jack produced an old account book with some blank sheets in it, which we decided would do quite well for the purpose, as we weren't particular about stationery.

Jean was in her room while I was there, and did not come out, so in a few minutes I returned to Fourteen. There I set the lamp on the table and spread the old account book out before me. It once had been owned by Jack's father; the first pages were filled with items which apparently had to do with the purchase of the Lang farm, and with the services in the woolen mill. I glanced over them with casual interest and as I did so a loose slip fell from the pages. I picked it up from the floor and found a number of lines in Jean's handwriting:

When through the livelong day I sigh
And ponder on my sad estate,
I would my Nemesis defy
And burst the bounding cords of Fate.

Now would I tear each bond away;
Now would I rise your sad reproof;
Come, let us live and love we may,
Come to me, Spoof.

"So it has come to that," I said to myself. "Love-sick doggerel!" I crushed the sheet of paper in my hand in a rage, even while a hot flush of color ran up my face at the realization of the fact that I had read something never intended for other eyes—for my eyes least of all. So she could tear the bonds away; she could risk his "sad reproof"; she could do anything but find words to fill out the feet of the last line. "Come to me, Spoof!" With a sudden stabbing at my heart the question interrogated me. Could Jean be ingenuous enough to use those dots, after the manner of our modern writers, to suggest something which she shrank from saying in plain English?

• • • • • • • • • • • •

I resolved to have it out with Jean. There was no sense in letting things go on like this. Jean and happiness were her grail, for the taking, but she persisted in writing moonstruck doggerel to a man who apparently cared no more for her than for the post that marked the corner of his section. Spoof's continued and deliberate neglect—I called it neglect now—admitted no other explanation.

By E. E. FRATER,
Deputy.

Middle Age Customs

Old Scandinavian custom considered keys the badges of the lady of the house, who was said to be married to locks and keys. In the Middle Ages every housewife was expected to have two keys hanging from her girdle and, for the sake of the poor lady, we can only hope that they had shrunk, both in weight and size.

Sunrising

When the sun approaches towards the gates of the morning, he first opens a little eye of heaven, and sends away the spirit of darkness, and gives light to a cock, and calls up the lark to matins, and by and by gilds the fringes of a cloud, and peeps over the eastern hills, thrusting out his golden horns, like those which decked the brows of Moses when he was forced to wear a veil because himself had seen the face of God; and still, while a man tells the story, the sun gets up higher, till he shows a fair face and a full light, and then he shines one whole day.—Jeremy Taylor.

DAILY MARKET REPORTS

GRAIN DROPPED AGAIN ON CHICAGO MARKET TODAY

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Grain futures took further drops in today's session on the board of trade. Wheat led the slump, December (old) reaching an new low; May (old) a new bottom on the crop. The close was on a fair reaction.

Wheat went into the sinking spell after a delayed start owing to confusion over the new style of trading. A prominent house, said to be operating for influential longs set the pace. When the market began to sag under this pressure, other holders of sizeable lines liquidated.

Trade in corn was not impressive, action being influenced by weakness in wheat.

Oats held within the usual narrow range.

Provisions eased off late.

Giants Credited With Building of Causeway

The Giants' causeway is a group of basaltic rocks on the north coast of Antrim, Ireland. This prominentory, which is a portion of the basaltic formations found in the county of Antrim and near Londonderry, projects into the North channel. It is called Giants' causeway from the legend that it was the beginning of a road which the giants began to build across the channel to Scotland. In past geological periods the basaltic rock seems to have been forced upward. After long periods of erosion a long line of perpendicular cliffs 500 feet high is left. For a distance of about 300 or 400 feet are many thousands of symmetrical columns. Most of these are six-sided, although some of them have five, seven, eight and even nine regularly shaped sides. In diameter they range from 12 to 20 inches. The tops of these columns form an uneven floor. Some of the columns, "pressure," as they are called, the Giants' causeway, are 40 feet in height. FINAL TRIBUTE PAID TO TWIN FALLS PASTOR

Large Concourse of Ministers and Lay Citizens Hear Warm Encomiums on Beloved Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Twin Falls at Funeral Today

The first Baptist church of this city was crowded at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon with mourning members of the congregation, delegates to the state Baptist convention, which adjourned for the occasion, and with citizens of all denominations, who came to pay a last tribute to Rev. E. O. Butler, a minister, who during a brief residence in this city had won a place in the hearts of all.

Following the playing of the funeral march the Scripture lesson and prayer were given by Rev. George M. Martin pastor of the Baptist church at Blackfoot, from which city Rev. Mr. Butler came to Twin Falls. A number of members of the Blackfoot congregation came down to attend the funeral. Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Clark, George Webb and son and J. Petrie arrived last evening overland and others came on the train today and joined in spirit with their pastor during the reading. The Baptist choir sang, "Abide With Me." After which the obituary announcement and sermon were given by Rev. W. A. Shanks of Boise.

Tribute to Brother.

State Superintendent Shanks, who in his state work had been thrown into intimate contact with the departed, spoke of him in the highest terms.

"He traced briefly the history of the Rev. Mr. Butler from the time when at his home in Ramsay, Ill., as a student in the common schools, he had started his career as a preacher, through his life including his college at Shurtleff, his early pastorate at Stonington, in his native state, where he began the work as organizer and builder, for which he was noted and his marriage at Vandalia to Malinda Catherine Diamond, who was his faithful partner until called recently by the Master.

"Continuing the life of the departed minister in Colorado, the speaker followed Mr. Butler describing his association with him in Idaho, and of his efficient activities in behalf of the church and association, as well as to adorn his life. With a brief eulogy of the religious life of Rev. Mr. Butler, the sermonium closed.

"Why I Is" Masters sang a solo entitled "Peace to Pass."

Other Tributes Given.

After the Baptist choir had rendered the hymn, "Saved By Grace," M. G. Brykendall, chairman of the board of deacons in this city spoke of the work in the Twin Falls church during the pastorate which has just ended. He told about the thoughtfulness of the departed, and his unselfish devotion to duty which continued until death.

WORK BY COMMUNITY.

Rev. A. G. Pearson, chairman of the Twin Falls ministerial association was the next speaker. The Presbyterian pastor told about the co-operative spirit shown by Rev. Mr. Butler, and the benefits which his presence here had conferred on Twin Falls.

"During his short stay," declared the speaker, "he has left an everlasting imprint, not only on the members of his congregation, but upon the people of the community in general, by reason of his earnestness, and meekness of character. This imprint is the result of the impressions received by all who met him as a man and a citizen," Rev. Mr. Pearson told briefly in the earnest manner in which he had co-operated in ministerial work.

"Rev. A. F. Colver of Boise spoke of his experiences with Rev. Mr. Butler, and this was followed by a brief but feeling tribute by Rev. Bruce Kinney, D. D., of Denver, relative to constructive activities and organization labors in Colorado. The ceremonies at the church closed with the singing of "Nearer Home" by the Baptist quartette.

PHEASANT TIME DISGUSTS TWIN FALLS HUNTERS

Late Broods Are Small and Do Not Flock; Bean and Cornfields Are Taboo, General Dissatisfaction Voiced Because Lawmakers Fixed Season Opening So Early.

With hundreds of hunters out, the most unsatisfactory pheasant season in the history of Twin Falls county opened today, with few birds visible and many of these small. Hunters blame the present law for the situation, inasmuch as the season is split to be 30 days too early. There is no report from the duck hunters, as the big drive today was on pheasants.

"We asked for an open season for November and December," said Secretary Charles Larson today, "and they gave us October and November instead. The result is that the birds are not flocking together and the second hatching is no bigger than quail."

"The season is from 15 to 30 days too early," said Attorney C. A. Bailey, noted sportsman, who, being called to Jerome on legal business was unable to hunt. "The farmers are posting their farms in many cases and they are not at all to be blamed. They are busy in their fields and hunters shooting around where they are working in beans will scare horses. I know of two instances yesterday where premature hunters were responsible in cases of that sort, in one a team ran away. In another a mule was cut up."

Another well known hunter said he went out but did not fire a shot. He said he felt that he could not go into a bean field or cornfield at this time of year without doing damage. One month later when crops are gone the situation would be different. He felt that it would be selfish for a farmer to close his place to all hunters when the crop was secure but did not blame them at this time.

"Pop" Fisher, who usually brings in the limit returned after a long tramp with a scrawny specimen and a huge disgust.

Both Licenses Asked—Darrow Brothers Seed & Supply company of Twin Falls have applied for both federal and state warehouse licenses for the new warehouse which is under construction here. The reason for seeking both is that it is proposed to be able to handle any storage business which falls under either, and there is some difference in the provisions of the law with reference to what is covered. A 15000 bond is necessary before the license will issue, after which an examination must be conducted by both state and federal authorities. The capacity of the house is 16,000 bushels.

Car Collision at Hansen; Nobody Hurt

President of Chile

A smashup which might have resulted seriously for occupants of the cars involved took place last evening on the road north of Hansen's bridge, when George Pettingill, dashing to Shoshone to see his mother who is critically ill, lost control of his auto and crashed into the machine of Mrs. Tom Blodgett, who was driving out with Mrs. A. R. Scott and Miss Eva Brown. Nobody was hurt. The sheriff of Jerome county, who came along helped repair the Blodgett car which got into Hansen on its own power. The other car was towed to Eden for repairs.
