Damage to Yeakum Mine of the Crown Coal Company Confined to Limited Area; Occurs Long Way from the Mouth

FAIRMONT, W. Va., March 26.—(UPI)—A gas explosion at the Yeakum mine of the Crown Coal Co. of Fairmont today took a toll of at least five dead, with six other miners trapped in the mine, thought to be dead.

Five bodies had been located several yards from the mouth and no hope was held for those still in the mine.

Two Escaped. Two escapees had succeeded after the explosion. A crew of eight who had reported off duty shortly before the explosion escaped.

Other miners who had remained beyond recommended time, recent workers to believe there was no chance of the trapped miners surviving.

Local Explosions

Survivors of the first blast, it was a local gas explosion confined to a slope about one and one-half miles from the entrance of the mine, believe workers reported there was no fire or any damage caused by the explosion, which was confined to a thin bed area.

Gasous Gasses. From Morgantown, W. Va., came word yesterday that an explosion had occurred in the Atlantic Coal Company's mine in 1925, right, says observer, Geographer, Hollywood.

Meeting and Urges All to Fall in Line With the Wets

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho, March 26 (UPI)—A movement for the repeal of dry laws in the state, which had gained momentum in the town of Buhl last week, gained momentum. Tuesday when it was announced by Wesley Holden, attorney and prominent member of the Republican party, that a meeting was to be called a meeting of interested persons in this section to fall in line with the "wet" forces.

Holden declared it was not to permit the return of saloons, or take a "step backward," but to allow the implementation of the禁酒令, which he said would bring the temperance and Prohibition era together and bring with it bribery and corruption of public officials.

He declared, "to resort to cold steel and gunpowder to bring about the implementation of the禁酒令, is not necessary."

Holden also said that no treatise would be allowed before failure to reach an agreement.

"But I think a little more time," he said, "will be allowed before failure to reach an agreement."

"The silence in the Senate is not considered anywhere in that body as approval of what we are doing," he said. "We are not only critical of the House negotiations, but have taken a reluctant stand now, realizing there is no hope of saving anything important in the way of rights."

SHOSHONE, March 26 (Special)
The expression class of the Shoshone High School delightedly presented a full house audience with a musical school entertainment. Picture night saw three concert plays. "The Ghost Story," a comedy was the first play given with Mary Hartman and Edith Bell in the lead roles. The second play was a drama, "The Pioneer of God," was presented by Wayne Mink, Antonia Silvana and Jack Olsen. The third play was "The Woodpecker and the Peacock," with Wills Clinton and Schellie Schellie.

Joe's Talking Picture
History Continued (Talking-picture history story continues)

The next afternoon Edith was on a far more elaborate scale for in this experiment the picture was already projected on the screen. The first film shown, in February 1913, would be more proper to speak of two pictures for Edith's apparent success at the projector and of a modification of the existing model of the projector. This projector, though originally designed to project motion pictures, was converted to a motion picture projector and a mechanical turntable and was connected with the projector so that projection by the hole. This enabled the public to witness the projection of the phonograph record on the screen. The method of introducing this more or less synchronized talking-picture was to make individual pictures appear in sequence at different times and in different voice. When this had been perfected the record was played, and the actor sang or talked again in order that the picture on the screen could photograph him while doing so. When the actor's name needed to be fully heard, only the picture of the phonograph record was reproduced.

Edith's first talkie, "A Girl at the Window," was taken up by the phonograph record and by the picture.

Other exhibitors were A. D. Shafford, J. J. Douglas, S. T. Hamilton, Clark Rehmann, Sam Gamble and J. H. Gladson.

It is difficult to recall just what point that talking picture took on our screen are reproduced both by a phonographic method and by the picture.

To start the wheat from darkness into day,
And along the heavy field go several men
With hands on ploughs and eyes on farmland's clay.

Six of them are old; but one, a boy,
Runs in his heart that "there must be more,"
For spring is ploughing heaven with rows of joy
In the voices of one blith' bird, singing alone.

ANOTHER CHAPTER

ANOTHER ripple of interest in the interminable battle over the 18th amendment has been created by the announcement from Northern Idaho of the intention of Senator Donald Callahan and associates to form an association to secure its repeal.

This announcement has been followed by exchanges between Governor Baldridge and Senator Callahan. The governor thinks the senator could be occupied to better advantage and that he is engaged in poor business in seeking repeal of the amendment without some constructive offering of a substitute. The senator, however, has retorted that he is not seeking the paternal advice of the governor.

Interest is lent the controversy by the information that Senator Callahan is personally just as dry as Governor Baldridge, and that he has no interest in repeal of the amendment because of any personal desire to deviate from his present habits of abstineness. His enmity to the amendment and the enforcement laws built on it is due to his belief that it is making us a nation of law breakers and felons.

No honest person who is accustomed to looking facts in the face will care to say that the liquor problem has been solved by legislation adopted in this country during the past decade or more. But the haste with which some try to make us believe that present conditions are worse than saloon days demands a degree of forgetfulness which many simply are unable to exercise.

Let it not be forgotten for one minute that the liquor business and the social problems created out of its excesses have caused festers for many a decade in this country, of ours. One mistake that has been made has been to leave the solution of the whole problem under the new laws to the enforcement agencies. The public wets and dries alike, have washed their hands of the problem.

The argument is often made that some sort of government supervision of sales or distribution of liquor might be a good thing. The Evening Times can not feel the least enthusiasm for this suggestion. We have about run the gamut of methods of control of liquor, and not one has worked.

The licensed-slop-hud—its day. State and city regulations existed for its control. The regulations were as much, maybe more, honored in the breach than in the observance. Then we had county option. Some counties were dry and some wet, and conditions existed such as no sane man would care to see revived. States gradually became dry-as-units. Then we had national prohibition.

Not one of these plans has worked satisfactorily to society as a whole. The 18th amendment is not likely to be repealed, either tomorrow or for many a day thereafter. If it is, the problems presented by liquor-drinking will still be with us.

And here is a question that has to be answered in any adjustment sought to be made of this liquor question: How in the world can the selling and drinking of intoxicants be legalized safely in this age of gasoline and automobiles?

OUR FUTURE FARMERS

The announcement that the Future Farmers Association of Twin Falls is to hold a special agricultural fair here May 3 during which livestock and poultry will be exhibited might be dismissed as merely being the news of another school activity. We say it might be so treated. We choose to consider it as a matter of very vital potential importance.

Livestock breeding as a career requires a long apprenticeship of those who would win renown and success. Skill, patience, sound judgement and a deep knowledge of a wide variety of factors must be possessed by that one who would be a top-notchener in the business. But even though this is true, it is just as true that one who likes to handle livestock, may make real progress within a reasonably short time.

Boys trained in Smith-Hughes classes have demonstrated this fact time and time again. During the period of training secured in high school, many Twin Falls county boys have gained a knowledge that they probably would not have procured otherwise, certainly not in so short a time. The training has a value to them individually and to the community difficult to compute.

It is an excellent idea to hold a fair that will demonstrate the scope of work done here by our boys of today who will be our farmers of tomorrow.

PUBLIC SCHOOL WHIPPINGS

AN Elyria (O.) school teacher faces a court charge of assault and battery because she whipped a school girl in her class; and the girl's parents are refusing to send their children to school until the case is disposed of.

This sort of thing pops up every so often, at one place or another. Very likely would have astounded our grandparents, who could not conceive of a school functioning without a good supply of birch rods; and yet, despite the old adage about the rod and the child, public sentiment no longer supports corporal punishment on it is due to his belief that it is making us a nation of law breakers and felons.

Interest is lent the controversy by the information that Senator Callahan is personally just as dry as Governor Baldridge, and that he has no interest in repeal of the amendment because of any personal desire to deviate from his present habits of abstineness. His enmity to the amendment and the enforcement laws built on it is due to his belief that it is making us a nation of law breakers and felons.

BEST EDITORIAL OF THE DAYTHE FRENCH MISTAKE

IT is always much easier to see fault in others than to justify our own. The United States is not without fault. However, our idealism and our desire to further the cause of civilization on the post war world, that nation of France, France has been called a "small child." In her present attitude in the disarmament conference she is more like a young wilful and blind to her own dark sides.

In the history of the case, it was France which was invaded by Germany. It was France who, in the interest of the allied cause, mobilized their war forces. It was to France the supreme command of the allied armies was committed. It was France which was the greatest sufferer from the deprivations of war.

The French, however, was a party to a treaty of peace, was being drafted at Versailles, it was the "Tiger of France," Clemenceau, who successfully insisted pacific reparation of the northern part of France upon Germany.

Let us not forget that in France, which, despite a positive peace-not-war declaration, but exceptional regard was charged it was Clemenceau of France who dictated an affront to Germany, treaty of Versailles, which, to a certain extent, nullified for marching in war, thereby laying a legal basis for collecting the reparations demanded.

It was France which, after the signing of the League of Nations in such a way as to undermine her security by universal military protection. It was French policy which was chiefly responsible for the formation of the Central Powers.

"The most ambitious and far-sighted venture ever devised for the concentration of military power in the hands of a political group." It was, however, in character that General Petain, the leader of the French army, was persuaded to agree to defend France against German attack and Germany against French attack.

So also, in the Washington conference, we heard much of "How France which had the largest amount of ships, had compelled the nations of the Atlantic to classes of ships and compelled an armistice with only little help."

But why peruse the catalogue of French policies? It is the same old story of the 18th amendment, that it has been and is the mother which has thus far blocked a real decisive step of the world from militarism to a peaceful program. How account for this lack of the French mind? The French are great lovers of peace—with security—as is true of other nations. We do not account for it except in the case of the French people.

We believe that France and French policy, in the last analysis, is the result of the influence of Kaiser Wilhelm.

France has been and is the mother which has led the world into the war.

$1200 FIRE LOSS CAUSED AT FARM

A cowshed, sheep shed, garage and granary were destroyed by fire in the farm of J. L. Malone in the Shoshone valley. The damage was estimated at about $1200. The blaze originated in a feed lot from an unknown cause. A wagon, having been partially destroyed, was also destroyed but the residence and three small outbuildings were saved. The barns were destroyed by fire on Monday morning. Malone, for the past 14 years, had been turned out of the wagon and was unable to work again. The water was used to extinguish the flames. Mr. Malone drove to a farm about three-quarters of a mile away and took a team and wagon to draw water from a well, but by that time the flames had gained much headway.

Eastern Star, will entertain this "FOLK SONGS" SUBJECT

OF MUSIC PROGRAM

The music department of the Twin Falls Center club will entertain the public at the center on Tuesday afternoon.

A number of folk songs and dances in costume were presented by the girls of G.I.R. Rehearsal under the direction of Miss Dorothy

Proctor.

Largefield, district Girl Reserve
secretary, Miss Dorothy Proctor, played a Negro folk number. A Negro folk number was also presented by Mrs. A. Smith.

Mrs. Newton discussed folk songs of the world and a number of folk songs were played.

And the names of the songs, Mrs.

D. L. Alexander won the prize for the best singing.

sion.

BUCKEY P.T.A. HAS

ELECTION

Mrs. John Harvey was elected chairman of the Buckey Parent-

Teacher Association.

Mr. H. A. Smith, at a meeting

Tuesday afternoon in the Buckey school auditorium, Mrs. Carl Henson was elected president.

Mr. R. V. Jones, treasurer, and Mrs.

Ray Mark, delegate to the state convention of the Idaho association, were also elected.

Mrs. H. W. Clowcheck, speaking on child welfare, urged the executive board to accept what was available at the public library. She stated that the influence parents have on children and the influence of people

in plenty of play are two of the major influences in a child's life.

Tease, Crusaders of Buckey

were in the demonstration and held a small meeting which were: Mary Middleton and Jean

Ostmeier, gave their prior wishing declamations. Miss Fernand first grade, and the school entertainers,

Betty Mark and Shirley Nelson

gave a duet and Jeanie Dickey played a piano solo. Lucy

Mark concluded with a ukulele selection.
