Report: Mistaken identity may have sparked shooting

Jerome prosecutor releases reports; no charges to be filed

By Mark Heinz and John T. Huddy
Times-News writers

JEROME – An Eden drug suspect's last words suggest he realized too late that the men who had broken through his door were police.

No criminal charges will be filed in connection with the Jan. 3 shootout at the home of George Timothy Williams, 47, Jerome County Prosecutor John Nicholson said in a news release Thursday. The shootout resulted in the deaths of Williams and sheriff's Cpls. James Moulson, 30, and Phillip Anderson, 23.

Nicholson released a thick stack of investigative reports late Thursday afternoon, revealing many details of a case that had been kept largely secret for the past two months.

To our readers
This story contains some graphic details about the Jan. 3 shootings in Eden. The Times-News has decided to include this information because of community speculation and rumors about the case.

Witnesses' accounts - page A5

Witness statements

The shooting might have stemmed from a case of mistaken identity, according to statements made by a female witness to the gunfight at Williams' house, 255 Atherton Ave., Eden.

The witness' name is blacked out of Idaho State Police reports, which Nicholson released Thursday. But sources previously have said Mary Ann Taylor, 36, was living with Williams at the time of his death and witnessed the shootout.

In a statement to Idaho State Police Investigators on Jan. 18, the woman said Williams likely mistook police for another man, whose name is also blacked out. Williams' friends and relatives previously have said Williams feared Taylor's ex-boyfriend, Douglas Norgard, in the weeks leading up to the shooting.

Norgard has admitted to being across the street from Williams' home at the time of the shooting, but he denies ever threatening Williams or Taylor. Norgard could not be reached for comment Thursday because he was in the Twin Falls County Jail on charges of possession of a controlled substance.

The woman said in the statement that Williams was deaf in one ear and had an ear infection in the other.

"As muffled as that thick door was, I don't believe that Tim heard them; I really don't," the woman said in her statement.

When the shootout occurred, the woman crouched in Williams' bedroom closet and heard bullets going over her head.

Louise Fisher, felony case assistant for the Jerome County prosecutor's office, hands out documents detailing the Jan. 3 shootout between an Eden man and sheriff's officers.

Highlights

Key points from documents released Thursday in connection with the Jan. 3 Eden shootout:

- No criminal charges will be filed.
- Neither of the slain deputies, Cpls. James Moulson and Phillip Anderson, were hit by friendly fire.
- Moulson and Anderson led the entry into the house, followed by Sheriff Jim Weaver and Undersheriff Jocelyn Roberts. Capt. Gerald Brant and Detective James Dunsbergen brought up the rear.
- Drug suspect Tim Williams suffered 25 wounds from an undetermined number of bullets.
- Most of the shots that hit Williams were probably fired by Moulson and Anderson.
- Williams shot both deputies.
- Anderson was wounded twice by one bullet.
- Moulson was shot three times.
- Williams used a single-action, six-shot, .44-caliber Magnum revolver. That gun was fired five times and was in Williams' hand – cocked over the sixth round – when he died.
- Moulson used an automatic 9 mm carbine with a 32-round clip. It was fired 15 times.
- Anderson used a .45-caliber semiautomatic pistol. It was fired 10 times.
- Roberts' .40-caliber semiautomatic pistol, with a 10-round capacity, was fired three times.
- Weaver, Dunsbergen and Brant did not fire.

What was found
Law officers said they found only a trace amount of suspected marijuana after the Jan. 3 shooting in Eden. Here's what they did find:

- Officers confiscated two Ziploc plastic bags, one with 3.49 grams of marijuana in it, the other with .12 grams.
- A set of scales, found in the upstairs kitchen portion of Williams' home. Residue, believed to be marijuana residue, was found beside the scales.
- A marijuana pipe on a dresser in the garage, next to the entry to the residence. Another marijuana pipe was found on Williams' master bedroom dresser.
- A trace amount of marijuana, found on a white paper plate on the bed in the master bedroom.

Counties' land swap irks some

Mini-Cassia senator proposes to acquire Blaine's 'tail'

By Michael Journee
Times-News writer

BOISE – A Rupert state senator wants lawmakers to endorse Minidoka County's possible annexation of a portion of Blaine County. But his plan might run into more resistance than he bargained for.

Residents of southeastern Blaine County's "tail" rely more on Minidoka County for services such as police protection and schools.

2001 Legislature

Budget items – B4

When Minidoka County commissioners and residents of the tail – a 360,000-acre strip of land protruding southward to the Snake River from the southeast corner of Blaine County's main body along the Wood River Valley – approached Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, about bringing the land into Minidoka County, he thought it made sense.

"The residents there can't even access their courthouse without going through Minidoka County," Cameron said.

With Minidoka County's leaders and a few area residents behind the idea, he said, he pushed ahead with a bill.

Vaccine test keeps AIDS from monkeys

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – In a study giving new evidence that AIDS can be controlled by vaccine, inoculated monkeys stayed healthy despite exposure to high levels of virus, researchers say. The new vaccine is being fast-tracked toward human testing.

Offering cheaper drugs – B6

In a report appearing Friday in the journal Science, researchers said the vaccine uses a one-two-three punch, with two shots to prime the immune system to resist the AIDS virus, and a final shot with a modified pox virus to boost protection.

Rancorous House passes Bush's tax-cut proposal; the Senate's next

Newsday

WASHINGTON – Dismissing any hope of bipartisanship, the Republican-controlled House Thursday approved the centerpiece of President Bush's tax plan, an across-the-board cut with an extra provision that would give every taxpayer a break this year.

"Who among us can say that the economy doesn't need a little encouragement?" said Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., before the House passed, 230-198, the $958 billion measure, with the help of only 10 Democrats.

Tax-plan comparisons, playing hardball – B5

Despite angry Democratic objections, the bill passage marked the second major victory on Capitol Hill for Bush this week as Republicans capitalized on their control of the White House and Congress.

The tax cut focus now falls on the Senate, where the bill already is being reshaped. There, the pace is much slower and the effort at reaching a bipartisan compromise is still alive, a reflection of the difficulty of getting a bill passed in a Senate split 50-50 between Republicans and Democrats.

In the Senate a pivotal bipartisan group has endorsed the idea of adding a "trigger" to the measure, to make the tax cut conditional on progress on paying down the national debt, an idea the White House opposes.

Sub officers' lawyers seek to shift blame to crewman

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) – Lawyers for submarine officers under investigation for the sinking of a Japanese fishing boat sought to shift the blame Thursday to a crewman who failed to report that the ship was nearby.

As testimony at a rare Navy court of inquiry entered its fourth day, criticism mounted of a fire control technician. The crewman neglected to tell officers another boat was in close range of the USS Greeneville minutes before the submarine surfaced and smashed through the Ehime Maru, killing nine people.

Friday marks one month since the accident. The court will help determine the fate of Cmdr. Scott Waddle; Lt. j.g. Michael Coen, the officer of the deck; and Lt. Cmdr. Gerald Pfeifer, the second in command.

Waddle cried while Griffiths described rescue efforts.

After the court session, the commander offered a long-awaited apology to the families of some of the nine victims who are in Hawaii to watch the inquiry.

AIDS

The first two shots use a vaccine containing DNA for three proteins like those found in the AIDS virus.

These proteins create a memory that prompts the immune system to attack when the proteins are later detected, said Harriet L. Robinson, senior author of the study.

The booster shot uses a modified smallpox vaccine with the three HIV proteins added. This intensifies the immune system's response against the AIDS virus proteins, she said.

"Our results show that we can protect monkeys against an HIV-like virus using an immunization scheme that is practical for use in people," she said.

Dr. Anthony S. Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said the study "provides some of the best evidence to date that a preventive HIV vaccine may protect against AIDS."

Border

Senate Minority Leader Clint Stennett, D-Ketchum, cast the lone dissenting vote against introducing Cameron's bill in the Senate State Affairs Committee Wednesday.

He and House Minority Leader Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, say the people they've talked to in the rail don't want the transfer, and say more public discussion is needed. Besides, bringing the bill now jumps the gun a bit, Stennett said.

Stennett and Jaquet represent a different legislative district than Cameron – a district encompassing all of Blaine County.

Legislative approval is part of the process for one county to annex part of another, but it's the final step, Stennett said. State law requires approval from both county commissions, and voters in both counties must OK the idea by referendum, before state lawmakers can discuss the issue formally.

"This is a bill that should be here in about three or four years after he's researched this and we know what these people want," Stennett said.

When Blaine County was created in 1885, the territorial legislature attached the tail to give the relatively poor and undeveloped county access to the tax windfall of the Union Pacific Railroad's main line along the Snake River.

The shift would add 360,402 acres to Minidoka County's current 489,629. Blaine County would be reduced to just under 1.35 million acres.

Blaine County Commissioner Dennis Wright admits the idea might have merit. It can be costly to maintain 12 or 13 miles of county roads in the area, with crews sent from the county seat in Hailey. "It may be a beneficial change for everyone," Wright said.

Cameron said the property's tax base, whatever it might be, is not a consideration. But he said he's trying to get those numbers together before hearings on the bill commence.

Wright too was unsure of the value of the property. Aside from the railroad line, he said, the sparsely populated land "is mostly just lava flows and desert."

Stennett, however, said the shift of taxable value is his main concern. "It takes some property value from Blaine County," Stennett said.

Wright is concerned with state law that requires the county surrendering land to turn over all records, deeds and paperwork concerning the exchange, and pay the bill for the work.

"That could be a mammoth research job," Wright said. "Who's going to pick up the tab for that?"

Like Stennett, Wright thinks the process is moving too fast. And he's a bit peeved at what he called the "back-room" nature of Cameron's bill.

"It isn't anything to feud over," Wright said. "But Blaine County would have never attempted to do something like this in this manner. We would've sent a contingent down to talk it over with the Minidoka County folks to see what they thought about it."

Until Stennett called Wright Monday to tell him about the upcoming hearing, Wright said he and his colleagues knew nothing about the bill.

Minidoka County Commissioner Don Handy said such a transfer has been considered for years, at least in Minidoka County. He said he knew the bill was coming for about a month.

Cameron said he's not trying to pull a fast one.

"I wasn't trying to do an end run," Cameron said. "Maybe we just went at it backwards."

Cameron and Handy said talk of the plan had been around since at least the beginning of the session in January, and they were nearly certain Blaine County lawmakers and commissioners knew about it.

Cameron also disputes Stennett's interpretation of the law and process. Cameron said at least seven similar land transfers have been done simply by statute in the past. In only three of those instances a referendum was held, and only after the Legislature acted.

He said he was unsure of the legal procedure, but has asked the state attorney general's office to check.

Census results show more diversity

WASHINGTON (AP) – A portrait of an increasingly diverse America emerged Thursday from the first official release of Census 2000 data as hundreds of thousands of people took advantage of the opportunity to identify themselves as members of more than one race.

The data, made available first to New Jersey, Mississippi, Virginia and Wisconsin, also confirmed forecasts of explosive growth in the Asian and Hispanic population, especially in the biggest and fastest-growing counties.

"We're on our way to becoming a country literally made up of every other nation in the world," said social scientist Kenneth Prewitt, former head of the Census Bureau.

The figures documented trends long predicted, depicting an increasingly diverse society as the new century dawned. Among the revelations:

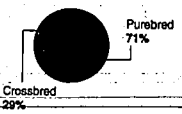
• New Jersey saw its Asian population soar at least 77 percent over the last 10 years, from 270,839 in 1990 to at least 480,276 in 2000.

• The population increased by 14 percent in Virginia, to nearly 7.1 million. But that was dwarfed by the Hispanic growth rate in Loudoun County, Va., in the outer suburbs of the nation's capital. The number of Hispanics there skyrocketed by 368 percent over the decade, to 10,089.

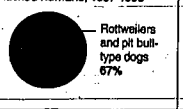
Canine attacks

The death on Monday of a boy who was attacked by dogs in St. Louis has focused attention on animal control measures. A study in the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association last year examined trends in 300 fatal attacks by dogs since 1979.

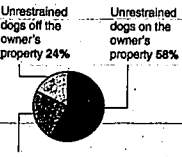
Purebreds accounted for most attacks
1979-1998



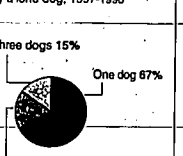
Killer breeds
More than 30 breeds fatally attacked humans, 1997-1998



Guarding the lair
Where attacks occurred, 1979-1998



Group attacks are rare
Most fatal attacks were made by a lone dog, 1997-1998



Why dogs attack
The study suggests that training, care and supervision affect an animal's propensity to bite. Victim behavior can influence the severity of an attack.

▶ Male dogs are 6.2 times more likely to bite than female dogs.
▶ Dogs not neutered are 2.6 times more likely to bite than neutered dogs.
▶ Chained dogs are 2.8 times more likely to bite than unchained dogs.

Mother lands in jail after dogs maul son

ST. LOUIS (AP) – Ten-year-old Rodney McAllister was no match for the stray dogs that neighbors had complained about for days.

The fourth-grader was found mauled to death by a pack of dogs Tuesday, bite wounds on most of his body, pieces of his clothing scattered around the park across the street from his home. The attack has horrified many in St. Louis and led to the jailing of the boy's own mother for not keeping closer watch over him. "He was literally eaten by the dogs," Police Chief Ron Henderson said. "They fed off of him."

Rodney McAllister

Neighbors told police they heard the sounds of "suffering" Monday evening, two hours after Rodney told his mother he was going to play basketball in the park, situated in a neighborhood of attractive middle-class homes as well as abandoned buildings and vacant lots.

Before Rodney's death, neighbors had complained about stray dogs in the area around Ivory Perry Park. Just a few days earlier, two officers from the city's Animal Control division had responded to the complaints.

"We did not see anything," said Richard Stevson, Animal Control program manager.

Two-person crews are usually sent to investigate complaints, but Stevson said Rodney's death prompted the agency to evaluate its procedures to see if larger crews should instead be used to sweep for animals.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, animal control officers rounded up 10 dogs in and around the park – two chows, a German shepherd, a Rottweiler and several mixed breeds. It was unclear how many of the dogs were involved in the attack.

Rodney's mother, Gladys Loman, 35, did not know where the boy was until police talked to her the morning his body was found, according to police. She said she assumed Rodney had spent the night at a friend's house. "Her lack of control put him in harm's way," the police chief said. "Parental control should have been exercised."

Loman was charged with child endangerment and held on $5,000 bail. She also faces an earlier charge of unlawful use of a weapon. Rodney's 13-year-old mentally retarded brother was taken into state custody. Loman does not yet have an attorney, the public defender's office said.

The family had moved to St. Louis in December from the town of Malden and lived in a homeless shelter for the first several weeks.

New York Daily News

NEW YORK – Vice President Dick Cheney shouldn't plan any overseas trips for the next six months while his latest angioplasty settles – a delicate period that often requires repeat emergency procedures, according to cardiac experts.

"There is a six-month window during which these things close down," said American Heart Association spokesman Dr. Richard Stein, a top cardiologist at Brooklyn Hospital Center. The angioplasty performed on Cheney on Monday has a 40 percent chance of closing again.

"You wouldn't want him to be in the midst of a complicated negotiation in an unsophisticated area medically, because he would have to pick up and get back to Washington if something occurred," Stein said.

Cheney also must worry about factors that he has little or no control over. Medical complications, genes and stress all affect coronary disease.

Shuttle hauls crew to station

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) – Space shuttle Discovery soared into the dawn Thursday, carrying a new crew to the international space station to relieve the three men who have been toiling in orbit for the past four months.

The shuttle will catch up with the space station early Saturday, and the fresh crew and the weary one will immediately begin trading places.

The international space station, Alpha, and its crew were passing high above the Indian Ocean near Australia when Discovery took off. American astronaut Bill Shepherd and his Russian shipmates, logging their 128th day in space, welcomed the news that Discovery was on the way.

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) – A coach has been fired because she tried to take a meat cleaver into school after an argument at a junior high volleyball game.

Toni Gay, a teacher's aide at the Rockford Environmental Science Academy, was arrested Saturday and charged with unlawful use of a weapon on school property and disorderly conduct.

Report: Disclosed secrets widen

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON – Robert Hanssen, the veteran FBI agent accused of spying, may have sold Russia some of America's most precious intelligence secrets, including information on how the United States tracks foreign submarines and sniffs out nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, intelligence experts said this week.

The loss of such technical secrets could dwarf the damage from Hanssen's alleged disclosure of a secret tunnel under the Russian Embassy in Washington, demolishing a number of the nation's most important intelligence programs and wiping out more than $1 billion in research and investment, the officials said.

Hanssen was one of a handful of FBI counterintelligence experts whom the Defense Department and other agencies called upon to protect a wide range of exotic high-tech intelligence programs collectively called "Measurement and Signature Intelligence," or MASINT, said a senior intelligence official who spoke only on the condition of anonymity.

Hanssen also accessed CIA and Defense Department computer databases to collect highly classified information on MASINT programs, according to counterintelligence experts who asked not to be named.

MASINT programs detect, find and track submarines, missiles and other weapons by analyzing the sounds they make, the heat they generate, the radiation they emit, the chemical traces they leave or other physical evidence.

Such programs have become increasingly important to the United States as other nations have learned how to combat more conventional forms of intelligence gathering, such as satellite photography and communications intercepts, said the senior intelligence official. They also have become critical to America's ability to monitor the proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and to keep track of mobile Russian nuclear missiles.

"If Hanssen sold the Russians everything he knew about these programs, the damage would be devastating, among the worst we've ever seen," the official told Knight Ridder. "These things can be compromised in an instant. They only work as long as the other side doesn't know what we can do."

Officials are still trying to assess how much damage Hanssen allegedly did, but his arrest affidavit charges that he passed on details of at least one "Top Secret SCI" (Sensitive Compartmented Information) MASINT program. SCI is a level of security clearance higher than Top Secret that restricts information to a small number of people who are cleared for a specific code word.

The MASINT document Hanssen is accused of giving the Russians detailed recommendations for the director of the CIA on how MASINT information would be collected and utilized into the 21st century, according to the affidavit.

The document was "highly specific and technical" and disclosed "... the Intelligence Community's consensus on specific MASINT objectives and studies leading to needed capabilities," the affidavit said.

FBI spokesman Bill Carter said he couldn't comment on what MASINT documents were passed or what threat they represent to national security. "We can't go beyond what's in the affidavit," Carter said.

Bush alters U.S. approach toward North Korea leadership

WASHINGTON (AP) – President Bush took a hard line against North Korea this week, ruling out an immediate resumption of Clinton-era negotiations between the United States and the communist government in Pyongyang and urging South Korea's president to be skeptical of his neighbor.

Bush praised President Kim Dae-jung, a Nobel Peace Prize winner for reaching out to North Korea's leaders, but said any deal in which North Korea agrees to limit its missiles must include verifiable terms that would prevent cheating.

"I do have some skepticism about the leader of North Korea," Bush said of Kim Jong Il on Wednesday.

The most sensitive foreign policy session of Bush's presidency produced discussions that Bush and Secretary of State Colin Powell termed candid and frank – signals that Bush and Kim Dae-jung took differing approaches toward the same goal of a peaceful Korean peninsula.

Kim has moved close to what he calls a declaration of peace with North Korea, which worries Bush administration officials who say the don't want him moving too quickly without demanding strong concessions from North Korea.

Bush himself said he would push for agreements that don't jeopardize America's national security interests.

"The president was very forthright in describing his vision, and I was forthright in describing my support for his vision, as well as my skepticism about whether or not we can verify an agreement in a country that doesn't enjoy the freedoms that our two countries understand," Bush said.

The United States came close under President Clinton last year to striking an agreement to curb North Korean missile development and missile exports in exchange for aid to the wretchedly poor North Korea.

FBI warns firms about hacking

WASHINGTON (AP) – Organized hacker groups, primarily from former Soviet countries, are responsible for recent increases in credit card thefts and extortion attempts, the FBI said Thursday. It said e-commerce companies should be more vigilant in protecting their customers' credit card numbers.

Investigators at the National Infrastructure Protection Center, the FBI's cyber crimes arm, cited an increase in thefts of credit card numbers and a similar increase in the fraudulent use of credit cards in Russia.

"The investigations have disclosed several organized hacker groups in eastern Europe, specifically Russia and the Ukraine, that have penetrated U.S. e-commerce computer systems," the FBI said.

woman said she saw Williams moving backwards in the bedroom, grabbing his abdomen in pain, saying, "Oh no, please, no, no, I didn't know, or something to that effect."

Officers' statements

Statements given to ISP investigators by Jerome County Sheriff Jim Weaver, Undersheriff Jocelyn Roberts and other officers at the scene give the following chronology of events:

Based on information from the informant, officers surmised that Williams was selling marijuana out of his house. Based upon that information, they decided to obtain a search warrant for narcotics and serve it at Williams' home. Roberts knew Williams, and had been to his house before.

In a briefing before the raid – which the informant attended – Weaver said Williams was known to carry a gun in the front waistband of his pants, especially when he left home. Weaver also said there might be up to 14 other firearms in the house.

That's a departure from statements Weaver made at a news conference a week after the shooting. At that time, Weaver told reporters he did not know before the raid the Williams might be armed.

Weaver could not be reached for comment Thursday night. The number for his home was changed to an unlisted number several weeks ago.

After officers assembled at Blacks Oil in Eden, the informant was sent into the house with Moulson and Anderson. She was sent into the house by herself, unlocking the door that leads from the street into Williams' garage. The door to Williams' living quarters is on the other side of the garage.

The informant was told to turn on the garage light as a signal for Moulson and Anderson, who in turn could inform the other officers it was time to move in.

Weaver and Roberts led the way into the garage. Moulson and Anderson followed. Capt. Gerald Brant and Detective James Dunsbergen brought up the rear. But Roberts discovered the door to the living quarters was locked.

All four officers in the front were yelling "sheriff, sheriff, sheriff," and Moulson was yelling, "sheriff, search warrant," according to Dunsbergen's statement to investigators.

Moulson, who weighed 225 pounds, moved into position to kick open the door. Roberts said he was at her left side and Anderson took up a position on her right.

Weaver stood behind them, and Dunsbergen and Brant hung back on the far side of the garage.

It took two or three kicks from Moulson to break the door open.

Weaver told investigators that as soon as the door was open, there was "a hail of gunfire."

Reports indicate Moulson, armed with an automatic carbine, and Anderson, armed with a .45-caliber semiautomatic pistol, fired the majority of shots. Williams fired five of the six .44-caliber Magnum cartridges in his single-action revolver. Roberts' .40-caliber semiautomatic handgun was fired three times, investigators concluded.

Roberts said she could not remember exactly when she shot, but thinks it was when she saw Williams pointing his pistol at Anderson. Roberts told investigators she didn't get any clear shots at Williams after that.

Weaver told investigators he never got a clear shot at Williams. His .38-caliber revolver was not fired, according to reports.

Brant and Dunsbergen left the garage and took cover outside as soon as the shooting started, reports say.

Roberts and Weaver also went outside after the shooting was over. Roberts and other officers told investigators they recalled Weaver yelling for Anderson and Moulson and radioing for help.

Other officers reported that the informant escaped the house through a window.

Aftermath

Weaver told ISP detectives that he went back into the house a short time later, as did Brant, Roberts and Dunsbergen.

They reported that they found Anderson lying in the doorway leading to the living quarters. Roberts checked for Anderson's pulse, but found none.

ISP investigators who later went into the house reported that it was apparent Anderson's body had been dragged a few feet back from where it had fallen, and was found by investigators near a freezer in the garage.

Weaver said he found Moulson slumped over in a kneeling position, apparently dead, in the doorway of Williams' bedroom. Williams was lying – also apparently dead – roughly in the middle of the bedroom floor, according to Weaver's statements.

According to autopsy reports:

- Williams suffered a total of 25 wounds from an undetermined number of bullets. A total of 15 bullets were recovered from his body or from inside the body bag it was in. The deadliest wound was from a bullet that entered his face and traveled into his chest cavity, doing massive damage to his lungs and heart. Williams was also hit in the torso, shoulder and upper and lower legs.
- A trace amount of alcohol was found in Williams' system, but no other intoxicants or poisonous materials were found.
- Anderson's and Moulson's systems were clear of any intoxicants.
- Anderson died from by a single shot to the head. The bullet grazed his left hand and hit him just to the left of his mouth and continued into his head, lodging near the base of his skull.
- Moulson was hit three times. His bullet-resistant vest stopped one bullet. The second went through his upper right arm. The third hit him in the upper left arm and traveled through his chest cavity, doing massive damage to his heart.
- Moulson and Anderson were shot from the front; some of Williams' secondary wounds were from the back.

Thursday's developments

The release of the investigative documents, which had been sealed in the nine weeks since the shootings, came late Thursday afternoon. The reports were released to news reporters Thursday as a five-inch stack of photocopies, for which Jerome County charged $134.

Other than Nicholson's brief news release, the documents contain no overall summary of the investigators' findings. They include, among other things, reports on witness interviews, autopsy reports, photographs of evidence, diagrams of the crime scene, and photocopies of newspaper stories about the case.

In the wake of the release of data, an attorney involved in the case said he was withholding judgment.

"The release of today's report has allowed the Moulson family to take another step in the arduous hearing process," Jason Miciak, an attorney representing Moulson's widow, Amy Moulson, said in a prepared statement. "Legal considerations concerning ultimate responsibility can and will be addressed at an appropriate time. Today is not that time. For now, such concerns simply get in the way."

Summaries of witness statements

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – As part of the investigation into the Jan. 3 Eden shootings, Idaho State Police took statements from various witnesses, including Jerome County sheriff's officers and others.

Sheriff Jim Weaver

Questioned by ISP investigators on Jan. 8, Weaver said a woman living with Eden resident George Timothy Williams at the time of his death supplied police with information linking Williams to drug dealing.

(The woman's name is blacked out in Weaver's statement. But sources previously have said Mary Ann Taylor was living with Williams and witnessed the shooting. Taylor has a history of being a confidential informant for police.)

Moments before the shootout, the woman was sent into Williams' garage. Officers followed.

Cpl. James Moulson twice shouted, "Sheriff's deputies, we have a search warrant, open the door." Moulson kicked two or three times on the door in the garage, leading to the interior of Williams' home.

When the door opened, gunfire broke out immediately. A person fitting Williams' description came out shooting, Weaver said. Weaver said he tried to shoot, but somebody stepped in front of him.

Weaver said he saw Cpl. Phillip Anderson fall. Weaver then heard Moulson fire several rounds in rapid fire from his assault weapon. The shots then stopped. Moulson and Anderson both died in the shootout.

Weaver retreated to the garage.

Undersheriff Jocelyne Roberts

In a Jan. 3 statement, Roberts said she entered Williams' home and witnessed the shootout.

She also said deputies got information linking Williams to drug dealing through a female informant. That person went into Williams' home first, leaving the garage light on for officers.

Roberts said that Weaver entered the garage first, and she followed, with Moulson and Anderson. When Moulson kicked the door open into Williams' home, Williams came out of the bedroom with a gun, she said.

Roberts said she could not remember if shots were fired before she shot, but she said she did shoot. She backed out of the garage and took cover.

Deputy Gerald Brant
Sheriff's detective James Dunsbergen

In separate interviews after the shootings, the officers said they took positions behind Weaver, Roberts, Moulson and Anderson in Williams' garage.

Brant and Dunsbergen said they could hear Moulson and Anderson yelling, "Search warrant, sheriff's department." Moulson kicked open the door, leading from Williams' garage to his home. When the door opened, gunfire erupted. They said they retreated back through the garage door.

The eyewitness/informant

The eyewitness – whose name is blacked out in reports, but who previously has been identified by sources as Taylor – said in a Jan. 18 interview that Williams might have mistaken police for another person, whose name also is blacked out.

Williams had reported that he and Taylor were being harassed by Taylor's ex-boyfriend, Douglas Norgard, in the weeks before the shooting. (In previous interviews, Norgard has said he never threatened Williams or Taylor.)

The woman said Williams was deaf in one ear and had an ear infection in the other ear.

Beware the creeping hand of Uncle Sam

Do you wake up in the morning and hope for more federal intrusion in your life? Few people do, but that's not stopping some congressional Democrats from trying to turn Uncle Sam into the national nanny.

Egged on by school nutrition directors, one of them has vowed to introduce legislation restricting soft-drink-and-snack sales in public schools.

Holy junk food, Batman! Our children are at risk! Better get the U.S. Department of Agriculture on the case!

"Local food service operations and USDA have made great strides in improving the nutritional quality of school meals," says Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. "It is a real shame that this progress is being undermined daily by the marketing to our children of competing foods of little or no nutritional value."

One of Harkin's political soul mates, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont, plans to introduce a bill next week that would empower the Agriculture Department to restrict the sale of junk food in schools.

It may be a good idea, but must we – literally – make a federal case of it? Aren't local school officials qualified to decide whether to allow a Coke machine in the lunch room?

Few people will dispute that chocolate bars and soda make a poor substitute for a healthful and nutritious meal. But restricting the availability of junk food in public schools is a matter best left to parents and their duly elected school boards.

It's worth remembering that many school districts profit from vending machine sales of soft drinks and candy. This supplemental income often is used to subsidize other school activities.

Restricting junk food sales in schools may be a good idea. But must we - literally - make a federal case of it?

It's also worth noting that students are capable of making wise decisions without help from Uncle Sam. A couple of them, Colleen Meghan Underwood, recently arranged for a milk vending machine to be installed in Twin Falls High School.

That's the kind of initiative America needs, with local people doing things to improve their own communities. The last thing America needs is more top-down edicts from bureaucrats in Washington.

At first blush, the question of whether Uncle Sam should be involved in restricting junk food sales in schools seems pretty trivial. But it exemplifies a broader trend that has pervaded the federal government over the past eight years.

Americans don't need more Big Brother in their lives, regulating the length of their shoelaces and determining how often they wash their underwear. If you think it can't happen, just wait to see what comes next once Uncle Sam gets a taste of regulating junk food sales in schools.

Behind tragedy is an outcast's despair

PAT MORRISON

I think I have some inkling how Andy Williams felt on Monday morning.

Monday morning meant another week of school. Another five days of hearing yourself called "dork," "freak," "geek," "nerd." Five miserable days among teen-agers bigger and older and cooler – the brash, self-assured boys, the pretty, laughing girls.

Even when Andy warned some kids that he'd get even, even when he threatened, "I'll show you one day," they just laughed. Told him to his face that he didn't have the guts. Shoot somebody? Wimpy little Andy? Yeah, right. Uh-huh.

"One day" turned out to be Monday. Authorities say Andy packed his dad's .22-caliber revolver and went off to turn the hallways of Santana High in Santee, Calif., into a shooting gallery. The two students he allegedly killed, the 13 people wounded, were more than likely strangers to him. Santana High, with its nearly 2,000 students, has almost half the population of the entire Maryland town where Andy had lived for most of his life.

For me, the news arrived in two thunderclaps of sorrow, one extricable from the other: first, the tragedy of the dead and the wounded, and then the déjà vu despair of Andy Williams. My childhood was marred less by Sturge-Weber syndrome, which caused the birthmark that stains my face, than by what others said because of it. In dreams I still hear the casually cruel remarks that sent me burrowing deeper into my room and my books. I must have read "The Ugly Duckling" a dozen times, trying to believe it. I loved "The Count of Monte Cristo" – now there was a wronged man who knew how to mete out revenge with style.

Just wait, was the message. Your time will come. Wait and see, my family said. You'll show 'em.

The very same words Andy Williams used, to mean something very different.

Honestly, can any of us, savaged for how we look or talk or act, really say that revenge never crossed our minds? Maybe we imagined dishing it out personally, like the 12-year-old boy, another Sturge-Weber case, who broke his hand punching the one-kid-too-many who had mocked him. Or maybe cosmic justice simply hurled its thunderbolts on our behalf. One way or another, in fantasies, the bullies get their comeuppance, usually in the same humiliation they dished out.

We grow up, we cover up. The wheel does turn. At the high school reunion, the class jock may be a bum, and the prom queen runs to fat. The chess club president is on his second million, and the shy girl from the physics lab is on the Nobel short list. Bill Gates, who pathetically designed his high school schedule so he could at least sit in the same classroom with the prettiest girls, is now the richest man in the world.

But how do you tell that to a teen-ager, for whom "the future" is next weekend, and a high school campus is all the known world?

President Bush called the shooting "a disgraceful act of cowardice." Cowardice there may have been, but in this potent recipe, there were far bigger portions of anger and desperation and pain.

Three days before Andy Williams went gunning, an Internet service provider shut down www.SchoolRumors.com, a Web site based in the Los Angeles area. It offered virtual scrawlings on a bathroom wall, and in two weeks it let 67,000 students into that bathroom for a peek.

The stuff was scurrilous and vicious, cyberspace blood sport. One girl was reportedly ready to kill herself because of what the Web site said about her. Andy Williams may have killed because of what others said about him.

Amid all the Web site slams was a message posted by Wise One: "Don't be so judgmental ... think how you would feel if you were being called these names ... it's painful, also think of how your words affect people."

Not every kid who gets ridiculed gets over it. But not every kid who gets ridiculed gets a gun. What made this time and this boy different? Teachers and investigators and parents and reporters will be following the threads of Andy Williams' life back to the loom in search of a coherent pattern.

They already know all about the perils of drugs and booze. Now it's time to take a look at this other poison, the one we all carry with us, the venom of our own manufacture.

Drug editorial is on target

The drugs may be illegal, but having an addiction is not. When the users are not dealt with in the proper manner, it is like throwing the baby out with the bath water. If fear of going to jail was a deterrent to crime, we could make day-care centers out of the ones we have. Once these people have the stigma of a criminal record, the probability of building a successful future is doubtful at best. Then there is always the factor that they are put in the same facility with offenders who are more than willing to share their expertise with anyone who is with them.

Corn may be energy solution

Wow! Did you see the demonstration of the corn-burning stove on TV that dropped a man's heating bill from $600 a month to $60? Talk about a salvation for our farm industry to have a field of corn in your back yard representing an oil well. Because it works in a stove, it will work in a furnace and perhaps be the answer to generating electricity. As corn burns on the alcohol in it, it also burns pollutant free. What a deal!

I think the horrible problem of our excess money could be used to get this invention into a massive production by fall. When the majority of our heating oil is replaced by this corn-burning fuel, we can send an e-mail to Saddam telling him [illegible] wells.

There are two things to worry about: our oil baron president and vice president thinking this is not too great an idea and the Arabs buying the patent and hiding it under the rug. I would advise all farmers to heat up the phone lines to Washington and get this baby rolling.

Hunt prisoners were respected

On the subject of Hunt, Idaho, and the people who lived there, I've read the pros and cons.

During the second world war, I was an usherette at the Orpheum Theater. Each Saturday, these people would come from Hunt to do their shopping by bus. After shopping, they were allowed to come to the theater. We did what we could to accommodate storing their shopping; if not, they could use the empty seats. I'm not sure if the manager charged them to use the empty seats, but I'm sure he didn't.

I know we showed respect for these people, and I'm sure the clerks in the stores also did.

M-C suffers from small-town politics

Well, Mini-Cassia, it's been swell living here. But if I can find someone naive enough about the ways of this town and the small minds that run it, it's time to sell the house and leave before it dries up and blows away!

Evidently, the decision-makers in Cassia County are so well off they don't need any more income. But I am just a working man with a family, so before this place turns into a ghost town, it is time to take my money out of small thinkers bank and go!

All of you that are staying behind should reconsider who you have making decisions for you on your future! Good luck all.

Don't overreact after Hanssen spy flap

JAY TAYLOR

Fear of foreign spies was already inordinately high in the United States when the sensational espionage charges against Robert Philip Hanssen hit the headlines. The media and the public, always starved for drama, have been captivated. The executive branch is planning tough-sounding remedies, including new super organizations. Existing counterintelligence bureaucracies have exploited the "crisis" to grow and expand. And counterspy measures, resources and personnel are already greater than they were during the height of the Cold War.

President Bush is expected soon to approve establishment of a new counterintelligence policy board headed by a counterintelligence czar who will report to a new counterintelligence board of directors. This, despite the fact that there is no more KGB, no more Soviet Union.

Judging by discussions in the media, the new so-called proactive measures being planned are those that monitor our own people and control sensitive documents. An example of one of these measures is the explosion in job opportunities for internal security agents in the State Department. If former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's plan is carried out, State will hire 500 new security agents, bringing the total of such officers in the foreign service to 1,500. This compares with a total of only 2,500 foreign service officers who perform the department's core work of diplomacy – reporting, analysis, advocacy and negotiation on bilateral and international issues – including ambassadors, their deputies and other program direction officers.

While security expands, some 700 other foreign service positions remain vacant because of lack of funding. Some of the work normally done by diplomats is now being performed by officers in our foreign missions from the CIA and the Pentagon, neither of which have a comparable budget problem.

Yet the current danger we face from foreign espionage is a mere fraction of that posed from the 1930s to the fall of the Soviet Union in 1991. The mighty KGB's successor, the SVR, like the Soviet Navy and all the other wings of the old Communist regime's security establishment, is a shadow of its former self. For eight years, the SVR did not even contact Hanssen, one of the best-positioned moles in the United States the old KGB ever had. Except for Cuba, the SVR has lost all of the KGB's sister services, including the once extraordinarily effective East German Stasi. Moreover, since the emergence of Russia as a relatively open but very strained society, the ability of Western services to penetrate the SVR has geometrically increased. The double agent in the SVR who exposed the apparent double-crosser Hanssen apparently handed over the entire KGB file.

The deeds of our counterspy turncoats resulted in the deaths of some of our Russian moles and are deserving of harsh punishment, but the consequences of their actions had no critical impact on vital U.S. interests. Notably, the FBI tunnel under the Russian Embassy in Washington reportedly revealed by Hanssen apparently produced no major intelligence. (Likewise the previous big American tunneling exercise, the famous 1950s CIA dig in Berlin, was a bust from the start. A Russian mole in London tipped off the KGB to the project before it even began.)

The massive spying and internal security apparatus of the KGB did not save the Soviet Union. Why now, when we face no such monolithic monster, do we need a counterintelligence czar, expanded polygraphs, more intrusive monitoring of personnel, a draconian "official secrets act" and many more internal security agents in the State Department and elsewhere?

We won the hot and cold wars the old way, by maintaining a reasonable level of internal controls but concentrating on offense – penetration, mole implantation and communications intercepts. We need to safeguard counterintelligence and other sensitive information, but the possibilities and the consequences of both foreign espionage and counterspying should be kept in perspective.

Jay Taylor was deputy assistant secretary of State for intelligence coordination in the Reagan administration. He wrote this commentary for the Los Angeles Times.

OPINION

ROBERT J. SAMUELSON

The tax and budget debate is essentially a quarrel about political philosophy. President Bush wants to limit the size of government by depriving it of more money to spend. His Democratic critics want government to keep as much in taxes as possible, because they want to spend it. In fiscal 2000 federal taxes represented a post-World War II record of 20.6 percent of gross domestic product (national income). Over a decade, Bush wants to nudge that below 19 percent of GDP, while Democrats prefer to keep it above 20 percent. At today's incomes, each percentage point of GDP is worth about $100 billion. That's the central issue between them – and they're obscuring it.

We have diehard liberals preaching the virtues of reducing the federal debt; hot because they believe in smaller government but because this makes them seem frugal, cautious and even conservative. Meanwhile, President Bush flaunts his proposed spending increases for education and Medicare, not because he believes in bigger government but because they make him seem humane, sensitive and even liberal.

The result is calculated confusion. The antagonists informally de-emphasize their central dispute – the size of government – and shift the debate to side issues that (they hope) will disarm their opponents. For example:

Does a faltering economy need a tax cut?

This is Bush's ace. The more the economy weakens, the harder it is for Democrats to resist tax cuts. There's a certain common-sense appeal to bolstering people's purchasing power by reducing their taxes. Already, many Democrats talk in the $700 billion to $1 trillion range – not that far from Bush's $1.6 trillion between 2002 and 2011.

Do Bush's budget numbers add up?

No, say critics. His budget skimps on paying down the federal debt – all the Treasury bonds and bills issued to cover past budget deficits. Worse, the tax cut might create future deficits when combined with programs not in the present budget: an anti-missile defense and private accounts for Social Security, for instance. All this is possible, especially if the surplus forecasts turn out to be too optimistic. Still, the critics' case is wildly overstated.

Between 2002 and 2011, Bush projects budget surpluses of $5.6 trillion. This is defensible; the Congressional Budget Office made a similar estimate. The tax cut would reduce the surplus by $1.6 trillion and require an extra $400 billion in interest payments. This leaves a surplus of $3.6 trillion. Of that, Bush would use $2 trillion for debt reduction. (From 2001 to 2011, the debt would drop from $3.2 trillion to $1.2 trillion.)

Now we're at $1.6 trillion in surplus. Bush proposes almost $200 billion in new spending – mainly for changes in Medicare, including a drug benefit. Bush labels the remaining $1.4 trillion in surplus a "reserve" against faulty estimates, further debt reduction or more spending. If you're trying to make Congress set spending priorities – as Bush is – his approach isn't unreasonable.

If there's a tax cut, who should get it?

Politically, this is Bush's Achilles' heel. He says that taxes belong to the people who earned them – not the government. OK. The political problem is that most federal taxes are paid by a small constituency of the well-to-do and wealthy. With its across-the-board rate reductions, Bush's plan gives them the largest dollar cuts. Citizens for Tax Justice, a liberal advocacy group, estimates that the richest 1 percent get 31 percent of the income-tax cuts. Democrats want smaller tax cuts to concentrate benefits on households under $100,000.

To handicap the tax debate, watch these issues. If the economy weakens further, pressure for tax relief will intensify. But so will pressure to redirect the benefits down the income ladder. My view is that the economy needs a tax cut. I would accelerate Bush's across-the-board rate cuts and the doubling of the child credit (from $500 to $1,000). But I would cut today's top rate of 39.6 percent only to 35 percent, not 33 percent, as Bush proposes.

Like Bush's critics, I think the long-term budget projections are too uncertain to enact his full tax package now; so I would defer action on his other proposals (abolishing the estate tax, marriage-penalty relief, new charitable deductions). But unlike his critics, I think Bush is correct on the central issue of government's size. The real choice now is not between cutting taxes and paying down the debt. If immense surpluses emerge, Congress – Democrats and Republicans – will spend them.

It's the wrong time for huge spending increases. The retirement of the baby-boom generation will inevitably increase government spending, exerting pressure for higher taxes. If we raise spending now, we will begin this process from a higher base of spending and taxes – taxes that will ultimately have to be paid by today's children and young adults. This would be a dubious legacy.

Workshop to improve development services

SUN VALLEY – A conference about sharing resources to strengthen youth development programs in south central Idaho will be held in Sun Valley today and Saturday.

About 200 people are scheduled to attend the conference, which will highlight what are considered some of the best examples of schools, social services and other agencies working together to provide services that educate youth, increase their employability, and provide life skills, mentoring and counseling. The conference also will promote networking among agencies and programs. Officials from the state Department of Juvenile Corrections, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, and the Idaho Department of Education are scheduled speakers.

The conference is sponsored jointly by School-to-Work, Juvenile Corrections, Health and Welfare, and the youth council of the Southern Idaho Works Board.

Shoshone grazing board to hold spring meeting

SHOSHONE – The Shoshone District Grazing Board will discuss funding for range improvement projects on public lands at its spring meeting. The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Bureau of Land Management office at 400 W. F Street in Shoshone. The meeting is open to the public.

Public hearing location changes to school

TWIN FALLS – The meeting location of a public hearing on statewide student testing and school accountability has been changed. The meeting, sponsored by the State Board of Education, will be held from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Sawtooth Elementary School, 1771 Stadium Blvd., in Twin Falls.

An earlier meeting for school administrators, teachers, and school board members will be held from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the school. The meeting for educators will be geared toward gathering information about how schools are testing students and what is working, what is not working, what schools would like to see, and testing costs.

The meetings are a chance for Magic Valley residents and educators to offer their input about how often statewide tests should be administered and what rewards or sanctions, if any, should be implemented based on student and school performance.

Idaho is moving into the assessment and accountability stage of its standards reform movement. Standards define what students should know at each grade level, and the state tests are considered a means to ensure that students are learning the standards.

Panel to interview five judicial candidates

SHOSHONE – The 5th Judicial District Magistrate Commission on Tuesday will interview five finalists to replace Lincoln County Magistrate Judge John Melanson, who has been appointed as a district court judge. The interviews will be held at the Lincoln County Courthouse in Shoshone and are open to the public. The commission will deliberate behind closed doors after completing the final interview. Interviews are scheduled as follows:

- Wayne G. Crookston Jr. at 10 a.m.
- Mark A. Ingram at 10:50 a.m.
- Thomas D. Kershaw Jr. at 11:40 a.m.
- Casey U. Robinson at 1 p.m.
- Stephen A. Thomsen at 1:50 p.m.

Blaine County considers medical building appeal

HAILEY – A proposed medical office building next to the new St. Luke's Wood River Medical Hospital will be the subject of an appeal before the Blaine County Board of Commissioners at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the old county courthouse.

Blaine County Planning and Zoning denied St. Luke's a conditional use permit to build the building in June, primarily because of the size of the proposed building. St. Luke's and Blaine County Citizens for Smart Growth subsequently filed appeals. The public is welcome to attend but no public comment will be taken.

Idaho Power raises buyback rates

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Idaho Power Co. has upped the ante.

The utility had proposed paying farmers for not running irrigation pumps this season. But not enough farmers submitted bids for 12 cents per kilowatt hour to make it worthwhile.

So the company raised the bid to 15 cents. The bids include more than 12,000 acres in Minidoka County and 20,000 acres in Twin Falls County, including about two-thirds of the 20,000-acre Bell Rapids project in western Twin Falls County.

"It seems like it's a good deal," said Jerry Boyd, general manager of the Bell Rapids Mutual Irrigation Co. "I think the farmers will like this."

Idaho Power late Wednesday reported its decision to accept bids of 15 cents or less per kilowatt hour. That plan now goes to the state Public Utilities Commission, which still must approve the project details.

The PUC plans a public hearing at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in Boise. Idaho Power expects the commission to make a final decision by March 15.

At the 15-cent cutoff, the bids include a cut of about 410 million kilowatt hours at an average of 14.2 cents per kilowatt hour, from about 360 irrigators and covering 136,300 acres of farmland.

For Bell Rapids, whose bid was based on kilowatt hours –

Public hearings on energy issues: The Idaho Public Utilities Commission will conduct a public hearing at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at its offices in Boise on Idaho Power Co.'s proposed irrigation power buyback program.

The PUC also plans a public workshop at 5 p.m. and public hearing at 7:30 p.m. on April 5 at the Best Western Cavanaugh's Hotel in Twin Falls on Idaho Power's proposed emergency rate hike and its annual Power Cost Adjustment.

Flea market to help homeless animals

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME – A myriad of treasures await the bargain hunter this weekend at the Jerome Pet Pals Flea Market. And money made from the sale of those treasures will benefit a good cause.

Televisions, microwave ovens, antique oil cans, a pedestal sink, bicycles, a brass elephant, furniture, clothes and other good finds have been donated to the sale and proceeds will help homeless animals in Jerome.

Members of Jerome Pet Pals Inc. have spent the last month collecting items to be sold at the market and cleaning, arranging and pricing the merchandise in Moose Hall.

The organization has been working with the city of Jerome to improve conditions at the city animal shelter which they recently gave a new window, a new sign and a fresh coat of paint.

"We're hoping to make enough money help the city enlarge the animal shelter," said Marjorie DuBois, a Pet Pals board member. "We want to expand it and make it better."

A $10,785 improvement project is scheduled to begin this summer and includes outdoor dog runs, a new chain-link fence and remodeling of the indoor kennels. Pet Pals has agreed to put $2,000 into the project and the rest of the funding will come from the city. Pet Pals is also planning future improvements for the shelter, including landscaping, pet doors, a larger area for dogs, a room to house cats, an infirmary for sick and injured animals and a reception room.

Pet Pals also wants to start low-cost spaying/neutering and vaccination programs that would be available to all animals.

Each year, an estimated 4 to 6 million dogs and cats are euthanized in America's animal shelters because homes cannot be found for them, according to the Humane Society of the United States.

Thousands upon thousands of puppies and kittens are born each day because of the uncontrolled breeding of pets. Stray and abandoned animals add thousands more offspring to the population.

In just six short years one female dog and her offspring can be the source of 67,000 puppies. In seven years one cat and her young can produce 420,000 kittens, according to the HSUS.

One of the solutions to the problem of overpopulation is spaying and neutering. In cities and towns that have implemented sterilization programs, the number of companion animals who had to be euthanized declined by 30 to 60 percent, according to the HSUS.

To encourage adoptions of animals, the city of Jerome has agreed to waive all adoption fees and issue a free one-year license to all adopted animals.

Pet Pals is hoping the city will budget for the maintenance of the shelter with help from volunteers.

Lawyer: Paper shouldn't have printed statement

Idaho Supreme Court hears case in Twin Falls

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – A 40-year-old handwritten statement that disrupted a Boise man's life so much that even his own family doesn't want anything to do with him should have never been printed in The Idaho Statesman newspaper, the man's lawyer said Thursday.

"They (The Idaho Statesman) knew there would be suffering by the people involved," said John L. Runft, Fred Uranga's Boise lawyer at an appellate hearing before the Idaho Supreme Court in Twin Falls. "The cause of action here is a matter of intrusion."

Uranga filed a complaint against The Idaho Statesman in October 1997 alleging an invasion of privacy by the publication of private facts and the intentional infliction of emotional distress. The Idaho Statesman filed a motion for summary judgment in August 1998, which the court granted.

Uranga appealed that order, arguing that the press does not have the right to publish any and all matters of public record.

The case revolves around an Oct. 15, 1995 feature story in The Idaho Statesman titled, "The Boy Most Likely." The article looked back at the 1955-56 "Boys of Boise" events involving the investigation of homosexual activity in Boise, specifically, the impact of the investigation on a Boise teen-ager named Frank Jones.

The article, which took up The Idaho Statesman's front page and several inside pages, contained an unedited reprint of a handwritten statement by Melvin Dir during the investigation in 1956.

In the letter, Dir states that he had a homosexual affair with Jones and that Jones had talked to him about the gay affairs that he had with Uranga, who was his cousin.

Uranga, who had just graduated from high school and married his high school sweetheart at the time the statement was written, said Thursday that he had never had any gay involvement with Jones.

Jones later committed suicide.

Uranga, now 64 years old, also said that he had no knowledge of Mir's written statement and had no involvement with the investigation.

Moreover, Runft argued Thursday that when The Idaho Statesman called Uranga and asked about his late cousin, Mir's statement was never brought up.

Deb Christensen, the attorney representing The Idaho Statesman Thursday, said Mir's statement was included in district court records regarding the Boys of Boise investigation and was open to the public.

"In this case, this affidavit was filed and maintained by the court," she said at the hearing. "The big picture here is I know the facts really make Mr. Uranga look like he got beat up and I'm sure he did...But there is a constitutional privilege that can't be pushed aside that says once you put this in the public domain, you can't be punished."

Several Supreme Court justices questioned The Idaho Statesman's story.

Partnership could help health care

By Julie Pence
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS – Technology, or "telemedicine," is the key to improving health care in the Magic Valley, said St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center CEO Sandra Bruce.

So technology is the primary motivation for a planned partnership between Boise-based St. Alphonsus and the Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital. And that should eventually improve patient care.

So after the paperwork between the two entities is finished in June, the first goal will be to get new technology up and running.

"Technology makes geography irrelevant," said Bruce, who added that patients won't see many changes in health care during the first six months of the partnership.

"After the technology improves, then care will change because patients will have quicker, more direct access to more expertise," she said.

A clinic physician offered a similar prognosis for partnership.

"In the short term this will make no difference," Dr. Robert Lobb said. "In the long term, health care will be much better and more efficient."

Promoters for the St. Al's-clinic partnership met with about 100 health care providers and local leaders Thursday to continue a "community dialogue." Bruce assured them that no services or doctors will leave the clinic, and no new doctors will come to town to replace doctors now here.

"This is a regional partnership that will give community access to a larger system, more money and administrative expertise," she said.

Officials approve road deal

By Karen Terrell
Times-News correspondent

ELKO, Nev. – Calling the South Canyon Road settlement agreement a "major victory," Elko County commissioners voted unanimously Thursday afternoon to sign an accord that could lead to rebuilding the controversial road near Jarbidge, Nev.

When signed by the federal government, as expected, the agreement would end a dispute over road ownership and repair which began in 1995.

Commission Chairman Nolan Lloyd said the county's negotiating team was given a mandate to ensure county ownership of the road, and ensure the road is rebuilt. Both goals were met, he said.

Commissioners Brad Roberts said the team proved ownership of the roadway and got the best deal possible from the U.S. Forest Service and the Justice Department.

"If you want anything more, you'd have to go to court to get it," he noted.

Castleford officials plan cleanup

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD – City officials have targeted May for cleanup.

Work will start with Johnny Horizon Day on May 5, and continue on May 19 starting at 9 a.m.

City Council members will be out to help clean properties in and around town. The council will be enforcing a city ordinance, passed in January, aimed at keeping old motor vehicles, household goods, equipment, machinery, rubbish, litter, and refuse from piling up on properties.

Castleford cleanup

Castleford's cleanup day is slated for May 19, from 9 a.m. to finish. For more information, call the city clerk, 537-6544.

Future Farmers of America members will be available on May 19 to help where needed and PSI Waste Systems of Twin Falls will donate the use of Dumpsters for the day.

Free hot dogs and sodas will be furnished for cleanup volunteers.

The council is asking all residents who are physically unable to clean up their property to call the city clerk at 537-6544. On May 19, volunteers will clean lots at no cost to the homeowner.

After that date, homeowners will be charged for cleanup.

Anyone who violates the cleanup ordinance is subject to a misdemeanor fine of up to $300, and jail time. Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy Mike Cooper is on duty every day in Castleford, and will enforce the ordinance if residents do not comply.

The ordinance can be reviewed at the city clerk's office, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

In other business:

• Water meters will be read starting this month and will provide starting numbers for next month's billing.

• Jackie Frey of Emergency Operations Program and Emergency Plan reviewed the city's disaster readiness. A shelter and warning sirens are in place and the council voted to purchase a weather radio to be placed in a strategic place.

Aryans want to carry weapons in parade

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) – Aryan Nations members say the city of Coeur d'Alene allows military veterans to march with rifles and handguns, and they should be able to do the same – with loaded weapons.

The group plans to march July 7 in town, the group's spokesman said Wednesday.

"State law says we have the right to wear sidearms and carry rifles in upright positions," Aryan spokesman Shaun Winkler said. "State law is on our side on this issue."

But Police Lt. Don Jiran said the law allowing the carrying of openly displayed weapons does not extend to parades. The city parade permit specifically bans firearms or other weapons, Jiran said.

"They cannot march with weapons," Jiran said. "It's a city ordinance."

Winkler estimated that 80 to 100 white supremacists will show up for the parade.

"We will be exercising our Second Amendment rights to bear arms," he said.

Coeur d'Alene allows military veterans to march with firearms in the annual Fourth of July parade, Winkler said.

"The veterans carry guns," he said, "so what's good for them should be good for us."

But Jiran said the American Legion and other bona fide military or military-related organizations have an exemption to carry ceremonial firearms. Those firearms must be unloaded if carried during a parade, he said.

Winkler said he plans to wear a holstered 9mm pistol and carry an AK-47 semiautomatic assault rifle.

Aryan founder Richard Butler, who has a concealed weapons permit, also will be wearing a sidearm, Winkler said. "We have no intention of pointing our guns at anyone, and we have no intention of shooting anyone," Winkler said. "We just want to exercise our constitutional rights."

The Aryan Nations has a city-issued permit for July 7, but the specific route for the Saturday parade has not been set.

Study: Off-road vehicles harm public lands

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – Uncontrolled use of off-road vehicles washes away topsoil, pollutes waterways and disrupts animal habitats, according to a study released Thursday.

The report, by the Davis-based California Wilderness Coalition, recommends that California authorities monitor the effects of off-road vehicle use and more aggressively police both areas where it is allowed and where it is forbidden.

In their eagerness to find new terrain, off-road vehicle users are trespassing on private property and degrading landscapes in areas they are not supposed to go, the report said.

It recommended increased enforcement and higher fines.

"If you throw a bubblegum wrapper out the window of your car, it can cost up to $1,000, but if you take your off-road vehicle into the wilderness, it can cost only $50," Coalition Director Paul Spitler said.

Officials estimate that anywhere from 500,000 to 2 million off-road vehicles traverse California wildlands each year. No one keeps statistics that track how many off-road vehicles venture into restricted areas, Spitler said.

A representative of an off-road enthusiasts group said he thought the wilderness coalition report ignored conservation work that off-road groups have done.

"I'm not going to say that there certainly aren't problems, but the report fails to acknowledge all the good projects that have been accomplished over the years," said Don Amador of the Idaho-based BlueRibbon Coalition.

He said his group has restored meadows, rehabilitated hillsides and rerouted trails to use land more responsibly.

Filer City Council approves ordinance

By Mickey Brown
Times-News correspondent

FILER – A twice-denied ordinance came back to life Tuesday and received approval after it was found a previous action of the Filer City Council was inconsistent with state law.

Gary Slette, attorney for property owner Catherine Bourner, challenged a decision made last month by the council to deny the application of Homestead Investments owner Crest Hughes. Hughes had asked the city to change the zoning of 46 acres along Pole Line Road and 2250 East from agricultural to residential-ag to build a 35-unit subdivision.

Lack of a tie-breaking vote stopped the project after a 3-3 deadlock of council members, which included members living in the area of impact.

Mayor Russell Sheridan Jr. told council members he could not vote on matters dealing with land-use or zoning issues. The tie stood and the motion failed.

However, Slette pointed out that council members living in the area of impact cannot act on issues when adopting ordinances or approving subdivisions so last month's vote was in error. Sheridan agreed and drew on the vote of city residents on the council, making it a 3-1 vote which approved the application.

Meeting

The Filer City Council will hold its next meeting at 7:30 p.m. April 3 at City Hall.

In other business Tuesday:

• Members approved the appointment of Bill Shank to the area of impact commission. Shank replaces Dave Benedict on the three-year post.

• Tom Peizer, owner of Golden Spur Subdivision, asked the council about the feasibility of reducing the lot size for future developments from 8,000 square feet to 6,000 square feet. The council told Peizer he would have to apply for a zoning ordinance amendment.

HAILEY

Viva Gay Segmiller

Viva Gay Segmiller, 64, a resident of Ketchum for many years, passed away on Tuesday, March 6, 2001, at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise after a short but courageous battle with Lou Gehrig's disease.

She was born April 3, 1936, in Pocatello, the daughter of William and Verna Ellett and married Kenneth D. Bradley on July 23, 1955. Later divorced, she loved to spend time with her family. She loved sports. Watching basketball with her son-in-law was something she always looked forward to. In her youth, she was considered a tom-boy. She loved to play hardball and was on one of the first women's hardball leagues in Idaho.

The family would like to thank the staff at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Ketchum, the staff on the 6th floor ICU at St. Alphonsus and the Boise Lifeflight crew for the very professional, yet loving care they gave to not only our Mother, but to our family as well.

Surviving family members include her daughter, Faro Lynn (Robert) Smania and her son, Clarence Todd (Valerie) Bradley, residents of Ketchum, as well as her sister, Rita (Bob) Goodrich of Anaheim and brother, William (Mary) Ellett of Orange County, both California. Surviving also are seven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her parents and two brothers.

Friends may call at the Wood River Chapel in Hailey from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m. on Sunday evening as well as on Monday from 10 a.m. until 11 a.m. at the Sun Valley LDS Chapel. Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Monday at the LDS Chapel in Sun Valley. Burial will follow in the Ketchum Cemetery.

Arrangements are under the care of Wood River Chapel of Hailey.

Escaped killer returns to Oregon

POCATELLO (AP) – Convicted Oregon killer Lee John Knoch has been returned to Oregon after spending five days in the Bannock County Jail.

The 23-year-old is charged with escaping from Snake River Correctional Institution in Ontario, Ore., on March 1. Oregon officers escorted him back this week.

Knoch had served the first two years of a life sentence. In 1997, he beat Newberg resident Robert Holliday unconscious with a shovel, then buried him in the nearby hills. Newberg police said Holliday was alive when buried.

Holliday was due to testify against Knoch at trial for kidnapping and abusing him a year earlier.

He ended up at a home on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation early the next morning where the homeowner beat Knoch with a shovel and detained him until police arrived.

Given that Knoch was serving a life sentence without parole in Oregon, local authorities had no interest in keeping him to answer criminal charges, Bannock County Chief Criminal Prosecutor Deb Lantermo said.

"We decided to send him on back," she said.

Court upholds order to retry case

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld a lower court order for the state to immediately retry once-condemned killer Donald Manuel Paradis or immediately release him.

The three-judge panel rejected claims by the attorney general's office that U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge improperly shifted the burden of proof to the state and then indulged in speculation that notes taken by the trial prosecutor would have changed the outcome of the trial had they been disclosed to Paradis and his attorney.

Attorney General Al Lance has yet to decide whether to ask the full 9th Circuit to review the decision of Appellate Judges A. Wallace Tashima and William Canby and U.S. District Judge Roslyn Silver, who was filling in on the panel.

The appellate court found that Lodge was on solid ground when he determined that the notes of then-deputy county Prosecutor Marc Haws contained information that could have allowed Paradis to challenge the credibility of forensic pathologist William Brady. Among other things, Brady testified that Palmer died in northern Idaho – something the former motorcycle gang member has consistently disputed.

Paradis, 52, and Thomas Henry Gibson, 49, were both convicted of the June 1980 strangulation death of 19-yaer-old Kimberly Ann Palmer, whose body was found in a stream bed near Post Falls. Along with fellow biker Charles Amacher, Paradis and Gibson had earlier been acquitted in Washington state of murdering Palmer's boyfriend, Scott Currier. Amacher has since died and been repeatedly cited as the killer of both Currier and Palmer.

Both bodies were found within 60 feet of each other in northern Idaho.

Paradis and Gibson were both sentenced to death. But in May 1996, then-Gov. Phil Batt commuted Paradis' death sentence to life without possibility of parole because he said there was an element of doubt about his guilt although the governor expressed no doubt that Palmer was killed in Idaho.

Doc asks for donations for legal fees

FARMINGTON, Utah (AP) – Dr. Robert Weitzel, facing a possible retrial in the deaths of five elderly patients, has turned to Utah's physicians for help paying legal bills.

Weitzel said he received one check for $1,000 and has raised an amount in the upper four figures.

Weitzel, 44, sent a six-page letter to 4,400 physicians throughout the state, detailing his troubles.

He said he wanted the physicians to hear his side of the story.

"The Department of Professional Licensing has misled physicians and the public," Weitzel said in a telephone conversation Wednesday.

The department suspended Weitzel's Utah medical license in August 1999, and since he has been unable to practice medicine, he needs help paying his legal fees, he said.

Weitzel was accused of killing five elderly patients with overdoses of morphine and other drugs at the 10-bed geriatric-psychiatric unit of the Davis Hospital.

Weitzel contended he was merely providing comfort care for terminal patients.

He was charged with five counts of first-degree felony murder, but the jury convicted him on two counts of felony manslaughter and three counts of negligent homicide.

Heyburn to get first crack at art collection

By Aaron Brock
Times-News writer

RUPERT – Local officials will have a chance to keep the artwork that hangs in the hallways of Heyburn Elementary School, in the city where it was first collected.

Minidoka County School Board members decided Thursday that the district will not request proposals from municipalities and organizations to take the artwork. Instead, it will wait and see what the city of Heyburn can do first.

"I'd like to see what Heyburn comes up with," said board chairman Randee Martin, adding that the paintings "aren't going anywhere."

Steve Olsen – the assistant director of the Museum of Church History and Art in Salt Lake City, who has been examining the art situation – has urged the board to take immediate steps to ensure the paintings do not deteriorate any further.

In their current location, the paintings suffer damage from poor climate control, Olsen has said.

But Kurt Catmull, head of the school maintenance department, said some stopgap measures could be taken to preserve the paintings, while Heyburn formulates a plan.

The cities of Heyburn, Burley and Rupert and the College of Southern Idaho are all interested in acquiring the paintings, district Superintendent Nick Hallett said. But taking proposals in the immediate future might eliminate Heyburn, which will need some time to come up with a proposal.

Heyburn Mayor Cleo Cheney addressed the School Board last week, and said that while Heyburn is interested, it would probably need about two years of preparation time before it could accommodate the paintings.

Heyburn alumni have supported keeping the art in Heyburn, and the district owes it to the alumni to give them the necessary time, board vice chairman Greer Copeland said.

In other board action:

- A plant facility budget, set up to handle major maintenance and repair issues, was presented by district treasurer Pam Wade.

The projected budget for 2001-02 is about $1.7 million, she said.

- Bids for two new special education buses will be accepted by the district.
- A market analysis, to compare the wages paid by the Minidoka district with similar area businesses and other Idaho school districts, will be done by Bridge Communications, of Jerome.

The purpose is to learn whether the district is "in line or out of line" in its salaries, said Hallett, who said small changes could be made if the study revealed district pay differs widely from the norm.

Energy costs sap Cassia County School District

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

BURLEY – Due to increasing energy costs, the Cassia County School District has already hit the year's budget for natural gas spending.

Because natural gas has gone up more than 20 percent since July, the school district this month spent the last of its $175,000 allocation for natural gas, the district's Jim Pierce told the School Board Thursday. The district is still well within the allocated $280,000 for electricity, Pierce said.

Intermountain Gas expects rates to go up between 18 and 25 percent, while the Burley electric department and United Power will see a 40 to 70 percent rate increase, Pierce said.

It is unclear whether Raft River Electric Co-op rates will go up. The city of Declo's rates are locked in for the next five or six years, Pierce said.

Superintendent Jerry Doggett said the district needs to begin some kind of energy conservation program, such as cutting back hallway lighting.

In other district business:

- Dan Gillett, the district's curriculum director, showed board members the packets that will be distributed to parents of preschool children.

RUTH STREETER/The Times-News

Dan Gillett, curriculum director for the Cassia County School District, shows School Board members the packets being put together for parents of preschool age children. The district is launching a campaign to get children ready to enter kindergarten. Gillett says 80 percent of students are not entering school at grade level.

The packet informs parents about what their children need to know, and offers suggestions on how to get children ready.

With the help of the local Kiwanis club, the district will also post advertisements on billboards. And using Burley High School's drama club, the district will also take out spots on local radio stations, Gillett said.

- Board members accepted resignations from nine teachers, effective next school year.
- Two board positions will be up for election May 15. The three-year terms of David Pickett, who serves Zone 1, and Tim Preston, for Zone 2, expire this year.

Pickett announced Thursday he will not seek another term. Preston was not at Thursday's meeting.

"It's been a great six years," Pickett said.

Candidacy declarations are due at the school district's main office by 5 p.m. April 13. Write-in declarations are due by 5 p.m. May 1.

The polling place for Zone 1 will be at Burley High School. The polling place for Zone 2 will be at Burley Junior High School. The polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m.

The district's supplemental levy election will be the same day. The district is asking voters to renew the current $623,435 levy.

Senate defeats legislation to extend Clean Air Act

BOISE – The state Senate on Thursday defeated legislation intended to extend Idaho's Clean Indoor Air Act to ban smoking on public school grounds and in daycare centers. Critics said the measure went too far.

"We are treading on very thin ice," Republican Sen. Shawn Keough of Sandpoint said. "Smoking is still legal."

The legislation, killed on an 18-14 vote, would have banned smoking not only inside public school buildings but also on the grounds. It would also have banned smoking in licensed daycare centers when children are present even though many of them in rural parts of the state are part of a private residence.

Opponents pointed out that school districts already have the authority to impose the kind of smoking ban the bill contemplated without the added requirement of posting signs that the ban was in effect. In the case of daycare centers attached to private homes, they argued that the bill was simply an unwarranted government intrusion into private lives.

Proposed change helps win decency endorsement

BOISE – A proposed change aimed at ensuring "general standards of decency" helped win an Idaho House panel's narrow endorsement of a bill requiring up to half a percent of the value of major state building projects be put aside to finance public art.

The measure that won unanimous approval in the state Senate cleared the House State Affairs Committee only 9-8 on Thursday and only with the recommendation that it include language suggested by Republican Rep. Kent Kunz of Pocatello.

His proposed amendment would require that any art financed through the program meet "general standards of decency and respect for the diverse beliefs or values of the Idaho public." The move saved the bill sponsored by Republican Sen. Bart Davis of Idaho Falls from almost certain defeat by committee members skeptical of spending taxpayer money on art that some might find offensive.

Idaho House approves bill addressing abortion issue

BOISE – The Idaho House overwhelmingly approved a bill addressing the reasons a federal magistrate partially blocked enforcement of a new state law requiring parental or judicial permission for minors seeking abortions.

House Democratic Floor Leader Wendy Jaquet of Ketchum and Republican Rep. Ruby Stone of Boise were the only opponents on Thursday as the measure was forwarded to the Senate. "I had problems with this bill last year. I continue to have problems," Jaquet said.

The bill came in response to a ruling late last summer from U.S. Magistrate Mikel Williams, who enjoined what he said were overly restrictive portions of the so-called parental consent law passed by the Legislature last winter.

Senate expands Idaho's drunken boating law

BOISE – The Senate expanded the state's drunken boating law on Thursday to include penalties for operating a boat or jet ski under the influence of alcohol while children are aboard.

In addition to curtailing the rising number of accidents involving drunken boaters, Sen. Robbi King-Barrutia of Glenns Ferry said the additional criminal liability could serve to keep the same adults from driving with the children after they come off the water.

Conviction of endangering a child by operating a boat under the influence would carry a maximum prison sentence of 10 years.

Rupert man faces charges in connection with beating

The Times-News

RUPERT – A 35-year-old Rupert man was arrested early Thursday and charged with attempted murder, in connection with the alleged beating of another man. David Earl Pace was still in custody Thursday afternoon in the Mini-Cassia jail. Pace, who was later charged with possession of methamphetamine, had not yet been arraigned.

The Minidoka County Prosecutor's Office said the victim, Shannon Noah Smith, 29, was airlifted to Bannock Regional Medical Center in Pocatello, where he was listed in critical condition Thursday with severe head injuries.

At around 2 a.m., Pace called the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department to report a burglary, Minidoka County Prosecutor Rick Bollar said. When deputies arrived, they found Smith lying in Pace's driveway, his condition "to the point of being life-threatening," Bollar said.

The charges were based on the belief that Smith suffered a "severe and continuous beating over an extended period of time," a news release from the prosecutor's office said.

Bollar said he believes Smith had been kicked. Bollar said investigators haven't ruled out the possibility that another object was used to beat Smith.

Pace was later charged with drug possession. A search warrant was later executed at Pace's home, but no drugs were found there. The investigation is continuing and Bollar said he expects more arrests to be made.

Panel reports on town's leukemia epidemic

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) – Experts have put viral or bacterial infection at the top of a list of possible reasons for a childhood leukemia epidemic tied to the small Navy and farming town of Fallon.

But the experts, in a report to the Nevada Health Division, said their theory requires more examination at state and national levels.

Twelve cases of acute lymphocytic leukemia, or ALL, involving Fallon have been confirmed by state health authorities.

A suspected 13th case of ALL turned out to be a Fallon-area boy suffering from aplastic anemia, a disease described by experts as unrelated to ALL although both involve bone marrow.

None of the victims, ranging from toddlers to teen-agers, has died, although ALL and aplastic anemia are life-threatening.

The experts' panel, formed by state Health Officer Mary Guinan, said the infectious agent theory is based on "population mixing" – an "unusual mixing of people, often in relatively isolated rural areas."

Guinan said the complex theory assumes chromosome damage resulting from infection, and the chromosome damage in turn could lead to cell abnormalities such as ALL.

Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and Boise-based St. Luke's Regional Medical Center last month announced plans to pursue its own partnership.

Bruce said the clinic would continue to collaborate with Magic Valley Regional. Doctors using both hospitals will continue to enjoy those privileges. But she also said competition is healthy.

"If you're the only gas station in town that means you have to be pretty honorable," she said.

When the deal is complete, the clinic will become part of the third largest Catholic health care system in the nation.

Known as Trinity Health Systems, it is also the fifth-largest health care delivery system in the United States. Currently it consists of 52 hospitals, 302 clinics, 30 long-term care institutions and a multitude of partnerships with labs and other health care providers. In Idaho the system serves about 675,000 people.

In the future, Bruce said the Trinity plan also includes spiritual healing, which includes such things as soothing environments; massage therapy; and an alliance with Harvard University for alternative health care.

some kind of absolute privilege here," Chief Justice Linda Copple Trout said. "Anybody can come in and stick something in a court file. It seems to me that that is a totally unfair burden to put on a court clerk."

Trout added the story was not about Dir and questioned the need for Dir's statements to even have been published.

Justice Wayne Kidwell agreed. "It was difficult for me to understand why the Dir statement was given such prominence in the paper," he said.

Following Thursday's hearing, Runft said if the Idaho Supreme Court finds for The Idaho Statesman, Uranga's case is over.

If the Idaho Supreme Court rules in Uranga's favor, the case could be taken to the United States Supreme Court – and the effects of a decision there could be far-reaching, he said.

"Depending on the ruling, the Federated Publications (the company that owns The Idaho Statesman) will appeal this to the United States Supreme Court and this particular case might be of interest to the Supreme Court. But we have to be extremely careful and protect the First Amendment," Runft said.

Runft said he expects the Idaho Supreme Court to make a decision in the next few months.

In other Idaho Supreme Court business:

- The Supreme Court heard arguments about Beverly Frazier's complaints against the J.R. Simplot Co. Frazier had filed suit against Simplot's Heyburn plant in 1997, where she had worked for more than 20 years, alleging sexual discrimination and a hostile workplace environment.

Simplot later filed a motion for summary judgment on the case, which was approved by the court. Frazier appealed the court's decision.

Her lawyer, Eric Clark of Twin Falls, said Frazier had been discriminated against, passed up for a job and tormented by fellow co-workers.

Tyra Stubbs, Simplot's Boise attorney, disagreed, saying there was no evidence that she had been discriminated against.

- The justices also heard arguments on both sides about the Cassia County commissioners' approval of Larry Watterson's special use permit to develop a gravel pit on his 46-acre farm in Cassia County.

But residents of the nearby "VIP Estates," a residential subdivision of luxury homes, appealed the commissioners' decision, saying the gravel pit is not harmonious with the area.

They also argued that the commissioners violated certain provisions of the Idaho Code.

Road

While the commissioners agreed to the settlement, some people in the audience Thursday had concerns over the terms.

O.Q. "Chris" Johnson, one of the original organizers of the volunteer attempt to reopen the roadway in 1999, said the agreement allows the federal government to take away local property rights.

He also argued an environmental study, as required under the National Environmental Protection Act, is "not mandatory for repair of state and county roads."

The NEPA study, paid for by the Forest Service, is a part of the agreement.

Former Commissioner Roberta Skelton said the agreement still gives the Forest Service too much control, leaving the agency "holding all the cards." Skelton, who lost her bid for re-election last fall, was a member of the original mediation team for the county.

But Elko attorney Grant Gerber, another founder of the Jarbidge Rebellion, said the agreement would take the county out of the legal arena. He did not like elements of the agreement, but said the county should sign off on the document.

Shovel Brigade president Demar Dahl pointed out that the agreement would rule out any trespass charges against volunteers who worked last July 4 to reopen a portion of the road.

"It is a victory for everyone in the West," he said.

Forest Service spokeswoman Erin O'Connor said she was pleased with the unanimous vote and expressed hope this will clear the way for a better working relationship with the county, over South Canyon Road repair and other issues.

Power

not acres – the program would mean a reduction of 30 million to 35 million kilowatt hours.

Last year, Bell Rapids used 63.4 million kilowatt hours to lift 51,000 acre-feet of water from the Snake River to the project. That adds up to a power bill of about $2.5 million – or about $138 per acre.

An acre-foot is enough water to cover one acre with one foot of water, or about 325,850 gallons.

Bell Rapids farmers won't plant a lot of the crops that are not making money this year, but they are still planting beets and spuds and maybe some oats as a cover crop to help control weeds and erosion, Boyd said.

Some farmers will still get a cutting of hay, and some saved enough water to get a second cutting or to complete a winter wheat crop. But they'll still be farming, so the program won't be devastating to the local economy, he said.

Under the buyback program, Idaho Power proposed paying farmers not to run their irrigation pumps during the irrigation season – typically the time of highest power demands. The company sought bids from farmers who could commit to cutting their power use by 100,000 kilowatt hours – the equivalent of a 60 horsepower water pump running for 2,000 hours.

The program is part of the company's efforts to reduce the amount of high-priced power it will have to buy on the wholesale power market.

The company generates about half its power at 17 hydroelectric facilities in southern Idaho. About a third comes from coal-burning power plants in Wyoming, Nevada and Oregon. The rest it must buy on the wholesale market.

The utility has enough generating capacity to meet most demands in most years, except during peak use periods in July and August and in November and December.

This year, with a low snowpack and low expected runoff, the company anticipates having to buy more power on the wholesale market.

Idaho Power hopes to keep power rates down by avoiding as much as possible, having to buy power on the wholesale market. Since last April the company has spent about $161 million on wholesale power purchases.

The company has asked the PUC, which regulates public utilities in Idaho, for an emergency rate increase. But PUC declined to act on the request immediately. Instead the commission will consider the emergency increase at the same time it considers Idaho Power's annual power cost adjustment.

Public meetings on the proposed rate increases are planned through Idaho Power's service area.

Senate approves first pieces of 2001-2002 budget

BOISE (AP) – The Senate approved the first pieces of the 2001-2002 state budget on Thursday, endorsing a major infusion of cash into programs for the elderly and significant new spending on park facilities.

In a series of lopsided, mostly unanimously votes with little debate, the Senate approved budgets ranging from $49,200 for the Women's Commission $33.2 million for the Parks and Recreation Department.

All the bills, components of the state's first $2 billion budget, still require approval of the House, where leaders have been holding up action on budget measures because of conservative dissatisfaction with the 10.6 percent overall increase in general tax spending.

They also want to see what action the Senate takes on tax reduction. The budget-busting $200 million tax cut approved by the House is expected to be modified by the Senate next week.

While small by comparison, the $5 million general tax budget for the Office on Aging has one of the largest increases at 26 percent because budget writers added $900,000 to expand services for Idaho's rapidly growing elderly population. Recommended by Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, it is the largest infusion of new cash into senior citizen services in decades.

2001 Legislature
Border brouhaha – A1

The agency gets nearly $6 million from the federal government and other sources.

The extra cash more than doubles state spending on services like homemaker assistance, meals and transportation that enable more senior citizens to remain in the homes longer.

The state saw its population over 60 grow by 25 percent during the 1990s to more than 200,000 while spending to serve those people remained essentially flat.

The parks budget includes Kempthorne's request for $738,000 for a Lewis & Clark interpretive center south of Lewiston and $400,000 to be matched by local interests for a science center at Burneau Dunes State Park near Mountain Home. But it was also padded with $150,000 each for improvements at Malad Gorge State Park southeastern Idaho, Harriman State Park north of the Upper Snake River Valley and the Old Mission in the Panhandle.

The state is also still paying $1 million a year for a private campground and church camp it bought on Payette Lake to expand Ponderosa State Park in McCall.

Washington state House co-speaker Clyde Ballard, R-East Wenatchee, conducts a pro-forma session outside the Capitol building in Olympia, Wash., Thursday, because the legislative building is still closed for repairs from last week's earthquake. Helping in the proceeding are Sean Kochanlewicz, right, and the speaker's attorney Allen Hayward. Engineers are optimistic that lawmakers will be able to return to the Capitol shortly, but another state office building may have to be demolished. A two-story brick building called the Employment Security Annex was structurally damaged in last week's 6.8-magnitude quake.

Senate backs direct aid for school buildings; House prospects slim

BOISE (AP) – The Senate overwhelming approved a plan for direct state support of public school building projects on Thursday, but any attempt to funnel general tax money through it to local districts likely will doom the measure in the House.

Without the infusion of tens of million of general tax dollars into the proposed building support formula, the bill is meaningless both as a source of local property tax relief and as a response to the district court order for some kind of direct aid program to assure all students attend school in safe classrooms.

The issue is that any money diverted to school buildings will come out of the cash available for a tax cut, and the House is pressing to retain as much of it's budget-busting $200 million tax cut as possible.

Sen. Darrel Deide, the former Caldwell school superintendent, agreed that by itself the proposition will not resolve the state's courtroom problems, but he maintained that it gives the state another tool "that will provide some additional help to school districts."

Critics argued that it just relocated money among all 113 school districts instead of focusing the cash on the districts with the most serious school building problems.

"To solve the problem we have to throw away some old conceived notions, that we have to fund the wealthy along with the poor" Senate Finance Chairman Dean Cameron of Rupert said. "We put children in jeopardy by doing it that way."

Under the plan, the 27 school districts that at one time made up the group suing the state for financial aid for buildings would receive just 10 percent of any money funneled through the proposed building aid formula.

The seven largest districts would get 37 percent.

The House has approved turning an existing $10 million loan fund in a grant fund for the neediest school districts to cover the interest they have on outstanding building bonds. But many of the districts suing the state have not been able to get approval for bonds or special levies to incur any debt interest.

The approached underscored another difference between the House and Senate on the philosophical question of the state providing direct money for school buildings. Idaho is the only state in the nation that does not make any direct contribution and still requires a two-thirds supermajority to pass school bonds.

The two chambers also remained at odds late Thursday over trying to appeal 4th District Judge Deborah Bail's ruling to the Idaho Supreme Court. Senate Republicans overwhelmingly objected to the appeal while House Republicans overwhelmingly supported it. The matter is still pending.

Advocates of both the House and Senate aid approaches contend they provide incentives for reluctant districts to approved bonds by reducing the property tax commitment to repay them.

Man in HIV case won't stand trial

BOISE (AP) – The Ada County prosecutor's office has dismissed a case against a Meridian man accused of knowingly attempting to transmit the HIV virus.

The dismissal came on Wednesday, a day after a judge ordered a new trial on the charge for Christopher Steider, 20. A charge of battery with intent to commit a felony was also dropped.

Steider was found guilty of both charges by a jury in November. But on Tuesday, 4th District Judge Joel Horton granted a motion for a new trial, ruling that evidence Steider's accuser had previously filed a false rape report when she was a juvenile should have been introduced during his trial.

Prosecutors decided not to go ahead with a new trial because Steider is back in prison serving a 10-year sentence after violating parole in connection with a 1999 statutory rape conviction.

Steider was out of prison on parole last June when he was charged with the two crimes. On the same day, June 6, Steider also was accused of having sexual contact with a 16-year-old girl. He admitted to the sexual contact, said Deputy Ada County Prosecutor Jean Fisher, which resulted in the parole violation and Steider's return to prison.

Clinton heard pardon pitches from rich, famous

Requests rolled in from everywhere, ex-counsel says

WASHINGTON (AP) – It wasn't just first family brothers and friends calling the White House seeking presidential pardons. Rock star Don Henley, historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr., veteran newscaster Walter Cronkite, Lady Bird Johnson, former Presidents Carter and Ford and a long line of lawmakers also were in there pitching.

Before Clinton granted his 141 pardons and 36 sentence commutations, just hours before leaving office, the White House and Justice Department received calls and letters from a "Who's Who" of America's rich, famous and influential.

A member of the House Government Reform Committee, which is looking for evidence of pardons-for-dollars, called the White House seeking presidential clemency for a constituent. Committee co-chairman Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., says he pushed for that pardon for financier Michael Milken, but it wasn't granted.

Carter, who called Clinton's pardon of fugitive financier Marc Rich "disgraceful," asked Clinton to offer clemency to Patty Hearst Shaw, who was kidnapped in the 1970s by the radical Symbionese Liberation Army, joined the group and helped rob a bank. Ford wrote in favor of former Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the one-time chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee who served time for misusing public funds. Both received pardons.

Former White House counsel Beth Nolan said requests rolled in from everywhere.

Henley, a singer and songwriter, called Clinton's senior aide Bruce Lindsey to urge Clinton to reduce the sentence to time served for Thomas Waddell III, who had been sentenced for conducting an illegal gambling business. Clinton commuted the sentence.

"He (Henley) called my office a number of times and I think I ultimately spoke to an assistant of his," Lindsey said. "He (Waddell) was a man who was involved in gambling in California and was now very active in ... trying to help other people break out of that."

Schlesinger wrote a letter of support for Samuel Loring Morison, a former naval intelligence analyst found guilty of espionage and theft for leaking classified satellite photos to a magazine. Morison was pardoned.

Several foreign heads of state also weighed in on pardon applications, Nolan said.

Former Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak raised the Rich pardon with Clinton several times, according to presidential aides. And former Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., called White House chief of staff John Podesta to pass along a message from King Juan Carlos of Spain. An Israeli official had asked the king to call the White House to support the Rich pardon, and Brademas passed the King's interest to Podesta.

Cronkite, President Lyndon Johnson's widow Lady Bird Johnson and former Johnson speechwriter Liz Carpenter all backed the successful pardon application of Ruben Johnson, an Austin banker (no relation to the Lyndon Johnson family) convicted of receiving kickbacks he says were actually developers' fees.

"He's known all these people for years," Ruben Johnson's lawyer, Denise Tomlinson, said. "They knew that he had an illegal sentence."

Former Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy, who was found innocent of taking illegal gifts, supported Clinton's decision to grant seven pardons and a commutation for others caught up in a $23 million investigation that accused Espy of being too cozy with the food industry he regulated.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson and several lawmakers stood up for Mel Reynolds, a Chicago Democrat convicted of lying to obtain loans and of illegally diverting campaign money for personal use. Reynolds' sentence was commuted. And Jackson wrote letters in support of two former officials of his PUSH organization: Dorothy Rivers and John Bustamante.

Bustamante, a pillar in Cleveland's black community, pleaded guilty in 1993 to a federal charge of defrauding an insurance company. He was pardoned. Clinton's decision to commute the sentence of Rivers, who was convicted of tax evasion and stealing from a federally funded organization, drew ire from federal prosecutors in Chicago.

"We were never asked for any input. We were not aware that this was being considered," said Randy Samborn, spokesman for U.S. Attorney Scott Lassar in Chicago.

All these requests were joined by calls from the Clintons' siblings.

Bush sets aside conciliatory tone in pushing tax plan

By Janet Hook
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – President Bush came to power talking like a conciliatory centrist, but this week in Congress has shown him ready and willing to join Republican lawmakers in charging hard to the right.

With little pretense of reaching out to Democrats, Bush and congressional Republicans are flexing their political muscle in service of two core conservative aims – cutting taxes and rolling back regulations. In the process, they have used hardball political tactics that have left Democrats fuming at their own powerlessness.

Analysis

With Bush's support, the House on Wednesday followed the Senate's lead and voted 223 to 206 to wipe out federal regulations to reduce repetitive stress injuries at work. In pressing the repeal, congressional Republicans deployed a little-used fast-track procedure that crippled the ability of Democrats and their labor allies to mount an effective fight.

Bush and his congressional allies are poised to grab another legislative trophy Thursday: House passage of a $1 trillion tax-cut bill. The measure – the cornerstone of Bush's overall tax-reduction package – was whisked to the floor after scant committee review.

These aggressive tactics may not work in all cases for the GOP. The tax-cut proposal, for instance, will move far more slowly in the Senate. But the week's events have provided an early glimpse of how far Republicans will go to seize any opportunity to press their agenda.

Such efforts are alienating even some conservative Democrats, once considered potential allies for Bush. "What we see is great cause for pause and concern," said Sen. John Breaux, D-La., a leading centrist who has been courted by Bush.

Some Republicans also worry that the House's handling of the tax cut and workplace regulations could squander an opportunity to make good on Bush's promise to change Washington's partisan tone.

"If it was up to me, we'd be doing things differently," said Rep. Ray LaHood, R-Ill. "This is not exactly the way to build good esprit de corps."

Indeed, if the past few days are any indication, Bush has made little progress toward thawing the thick hoarfrost that has chilled relations between the parties for years.

The exception may be education, as a Senate committee appears on track to give bipartisan support Thursday to key elements of Bush's reform plan. But the bipartisanship was maintained only by postponing action on the more contentious issues in the education debate, such as voucher payments that could be used for private-school tuition.

The key to the GOP push for fast action on the ergonomics and tax-cut issues has been rock-solid unity among the Republican rank and file. In taking advantage of GOP control of both the White House and Congress for the first time since the mid-1950s, the party so far has demonstrated extraordinary discipline.

To be sure, a few Democrats are expected to support the tax-cut bill in Thursday's House vote. And in both the House and Senate, a handful voted for overturning the ergonomics regulations.

But for the most part, Democrats are playing their own brand of hardball. Party leaders, for example, are using delay tactics to stall a bankruptcy-reform bill that just months ago enjoyed broad bipartisan support. And the leaders have been working for weeks to keep their rank and file from straying to support Bush's tax cut.

It wasn't supposed to be like this.

When the year began with Bush pledging to change the partisan tone in Washington, some dismissed it as lip service. But there were grounds to think it was not mere rhetoric. For instance, Bush had worked well in Texas with Democrats, who held great power in the state legislature. And immediately after Inauguration Day, he brought dozens of congressional Democrats to the White House for friendly, get-acquainted meetings.

Ever since, however, it has become increasingly clear that behind Bush's bipartisan talk is an unyielding commitment to his agenda. He is trying to win Democrats not by offering to make changes to address their concerns, but by applying political pressure. He has spent the past two weeks traveling the country to push his tax cuts, concentrating on states where Democratic senators could face tough re-election fights in 2002. Those Democrats, in turn, are not amused.

"Congress is not going to be stampeded into rubber-stamping his (tax-cut) bill," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., one of the potentially vulnerable incumbents.

By the same token, Baucus was one of six Democrats who broke with the party to join all 50 Senate Republicans in voting Tuesday to repeal the ergonomics regulations.

If anything, the week's developments raise a basic question about the relationship between Bush and congressional GOP leaders – namely, who is leading and who is following? The big push for repealing the ergonomics rules came from top Senate Republicans. The plan to put tax-rate cuts on a fast track came from House GOP leaders.

Bush, however, made a point of publicly embracing both initiatives.

"The president has said right from day one that he was going to fight for the tax plan on which he ran," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said. "This is just the beginning ... and we'll keep building support."

Comparing tax rates

Current law

Single person	Percent	Head of household	Percent	Married-joint filing	Percent

Unapproved corn turns up in product

WASHINGTON (AP) – A variety of biotech corn that prompted nationwide recalls of food products last fall has shown up in yet another product, Kellogg's-made veggie corn dogs, the anti-biotech group Greenpeace said Thursday.

The frozen product, which is sold under the Morningstar Farms label, was purchased in a Baltimore Safeway store last month and tested positive for StarLink corn, the group said. The corn was approved only for animal feed because of unanswered questions about its safety for humans.

The product also contained a variety of genetically engineered soy that is approved for food use, Greenpeace said.

"Americans have asked Kellogg's over and over to stop this genetic experiment on our food, yet Kellogg's refuses to listen and tries to mislead consumers," said Charles Margulis, a Greenpeace spokesman.

Kellogg's spokeswoman Chris Ervin said the company has notified the Food and Drug Administration and was commissioning its own tests of the corn dogs.

Engineers point to deteriorating public works

WASHINGTON (AP) – America's public works – its bridges, roads, dams, schools and other infrastructure – are in a poor state of repair, a civil engineering group said Thursday, suggesting it will cost $1.3 trillion over five years to begin fixing the problem.

"When you've got rolling blackouts in California, bridges crumbling in Milwaukee and kids in Kansas City attending class in a former boys' restroom, something is desperately wrong," said Robert Bein, a California civil engineer who is president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, which released the report.

The report noted that more than one-fourth of U.S. bridges needed repairs, one-quarter of the nation's urban freeways were congested, and the aviation system has not kept pace with the sharp increase in passengers and flights.

Federal employees owe billions in delinquent taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) – Federal employees, including members of Congress and their staffs, owe the government more than $2.5 billion in taxes, a situation the head of the IRS says could undermine public confidence.

The tax delinquency rate for federal employees and retirees as of October 2000 was 2.9 percent, compared with 5.7 percent for the U.S. population as a whole, the Internal Revenue Service reported Thursday.

The new numbers actually represent an improvement from last year, when government employees' delinquency rate was 5.2 percent and the rate for the population as a whole was 8.1 percent.

The number includes those who owe taxes but have not entered into an installment agreement with the IRS to pay the bill. It doesn't necessarily mean a person is cheating or evading taxes.

"Tax delinquency among federal employees can damage the credibility of the tax administration system," IRS Commissioner Charles Rossotti said in a letter to federal agency heads pointing out their noncompliance rate.

"If the public perceives that federal employees do not maintain the highest level of tax compliance, public confidence in government will suffer," he added.

Also improving from last year were members of the House and Senate, their staffs and other legislative branch employees. The House's rate was just over 5 percent, compared with 8.4 percent last year, and 4.4 percent for the Senate, down from 7.5 percent last year.

The IRS, which has released the data since 1993, is not permitted to disclose names of individual taxpayers.

In all, 166,397 federal employees were paying off $651.5 million in taxes through installment agreements as of October, nearly 40 percent of those with a balance due.

Postal Service cuts back on building construction

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Postal Service is freezing new construction and leasing for hundreds of planned projects across the country, saying the agency is facing serious financial losses.

The announcement Thursday was accompanied by a warning from the postal governing board that universal service to every home every day could be in danger without changes to the laws that regulate operation.

More than 800 planned projects in all states will be affected by the freeze. Postal officials didn't provide a dollar estimate for the affected work.

While first class mail went up a penny to 34 cents in January, several increases in other types of mail that had been sought by the agency were rejected or trimmed by the independent Postal Rate Commission. With rising costs, postal officials now say they face a $2 billion to $3 billion loss this fiscal year. They are planning to apply this summer for another rate increase to take effect next year.

After five years in the black the post office had a $199 million loss last fiscal year.

Among the problems cited by the Postal Service are wage rate increases that exceed the rate of inflation, escalating fuel costs, changes in the type of mail being processed, a communications marketplace marked by increased competition and forecasts calling for the diversion of some first-class mail to electronic alternatives.

The construction and leasing freeze affects facilities that the agency has made commitments to but where construction has not yet begun.

"All new construction, new leasing and expansion planned for 2001 is frozen," postal spokeswoman Judy de Torok said.

The projects already under way won't be halted, she said.

Company plans AIDS drug price cut

Knight Ridder News Service

PHILADELPHIA – In a new effort to make AIDS drugs affordable in the world's poorest countries, Merck & Co. announced this week it would offer 90 percent discounts to developing nations.

The move, aimed at the growing AIDS crisis in Africa, will make Merck's powerful anti-AIDS drug Crixivan available to governments, nonprofit organizations and private employers in Africa and other underdeveloped areas for $600 per patient per year. In the United States, the same medicine costs about $6,016 a year.

Another Merck AIDS medicine, known as Stocrin, will be offered to developing countries for $500 per patient per year, compared to $4,730 in the United States.

Even at those deeply discounted prices, though, the drugs may still be too expensive for most nations in sub-Saharan Africa, where 70 percent of the world's 36.1 million carriers of the AIDS virus live. There, the average per-capita income is just $520, and many nations spend less than $10 a year per person on health care.

Wednesday's announcement by Merck, whose U.S. headquarters are in West Point, N.J., may prompt cuts by other major drug firms. It comes amid growing pressure from international humanitarian groups, AIDS activists and Third World governments to use cheap generic versions of the same medicines.

Generic knockoffs of AIDS drugs, which generally cost 80 to 90 percent less than brand-name medicines, threaten to dismantle the drug industry's patent protections. Drug patents are a crucial asset that allow pharmaceutical companies to profit from their discoveries – and to pay for research and development of new drugs.

The pharmaceutical industry went to court in South Africa on Monday to block the importation of generic AIDS medicines to that country, which has 4.2 million people, including 20 percent of its adult population, infected with HIV, more than any other nation in the world.

Raymond V. Gilmartin, Merck chairman, said he hoped the new discount offer, which makes Crixivan available at less than generic versions of the medicine, would spur broader access to the drug in areas of the world where AIDS has taken its greatest toll.

Peter Piot, director of UNAIDS, the U.N. agency overseeing the AIDS pandemic, said he welcomed Merck's annoucement. "As prices fall as close to costs as we can get them, it means that we can concentrate on the other issues: building and strengthening health systems, raising finances, and ensuring that a wider care agenda is delivered."

Merck said it is making the drugs available at cost, with no profit to the firm.

Dr. Anne-Valerie Kaninda, medical director for Doctors Without Borders, the Brussels-based humanitarian group, called Merck's new discounts "a step in the right direction," but said Merck's offer still doesn't match the offers made by two generic-drug makers in India.

One of the Indian firms, Cipla Ltd., has offered a combination of three anti-AIDS medicines – which don't include a protease inhibitor like Crixivan – for $600 a year for governments and $350 a year for Doctors Without Borders.

AIDS activists also criticized Merck's offer, citing the inability of developing countries to pay even the discounted prices. "It's an offer you can't afford to take up," said Katie Krauss, of ACTUP/Philadelphia.

Merck acknowledged the funding gap that would leave "millions" in the developing world without AIDS medicines. The firm said there is an urgent need for "other stakeholders," including wealthy countries such as the United States and private philanthropic groups, to come up with additional funds to plug the funding gap, estimated by Harvard economists at between $5 billion and $7 billion a year for sub-Saharan Africa.

Merck officials are hopeful the Bush administration, which will unveil the details of its proposed budget next month, will take the lead in offering more funding for AIDS in Africa and other hard-hit regions. Currently, the U.S. government spends between $300 million and $400 million a year on such programs.

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., and Sen. Russell Feingold, D-Wis., on Monday asked Congress to approve legislation that would authorize $25 million a year to strengthen African health systems so they could provide anti-AIDS medicines.

AIDS cocktail

In the mid-1990s, the advent of protease inhibitors — drugs that block the replication of the HIV virus — revolutionized HIV treatment and helped to sharply reduce AIDS fatalities. Protease inhibitors are usually combined with drugs called reverse transcriptase inhibitors to form the proverbial AIDS cocktail. Here's how the drugs work together to stem the spread of HIV within the body.

Once inside the cell, the virus sheds its protein shell and releases its RNA, or its genetic material, into the cell. Reverse transcriptase inhibitors block this step in the process.

The viral RNA fuses with the host cell's DNA, allowing it to replicate until the cell wall bursts, releasing the virus to infect other cells. Protease inhibitors block this step in the process.

Liberia denies backing rebels in Sierra Leone

MONROVIA, Liberia – Liberia denied backing Sierra Leone's rebels and said it will fully cooperate with the United Nations to prove its innocence before sanctions take hold in two months.

"This will show to the international community that Liberia has nothing to hide, that we are not a rogue state," Foreign Minister Monie Captan said late Wednesday, hours after the Security Council voted to impose sanctions.

The U.N. Security Council accuses Liberia of supporting rebels in neighboring Sierra Leone, where tens of thousands of civilians have been killed, and many more raped and mutilated in a systematic terror campaign to gain control of the country's diamond mines.

In a unanimous vote Wednesday, the Security Council warned Liberia that travel restrictions and an embargo on its own diamonds will go into effect in two months unless Liberia ends all support for the rebels, including arms and diamond-trafficking.

Court throws out some charges against Pinochet

SANTIAGO, Chile – An appeals court on Thursday threw out homicide and kidnapping charges against former Chilean dictator Augusto Pinochet, but said the retired general could still be tried for covering up the crimes.

The Santiago Court of Appeals ruled 2-1 to throw out the more serious criminal charges against the 85-year-old former dictator.

Pinochet had been indicted and placed under house arrest on Jan. 29 on charges stemming from the "Caravan of Death," one of the most notorious cases of human rights abuses during his 1973-90 dictatorship.

The caravan was a military group that executed 75 political prisoners shortly after the 1973 coup led by Pinochet. The remains of 18 of the victims were never recovered.

Pinochet's lawyers appealed, calling the homicide and kidnapping charges "arbitrary, illegal, and unconstitutional."

England calls off races due to foot-and-mouth spread

LONDON – Hoteliers, pub landlords and shopkeepers in the western English town of Cheltenham faced the loss of millions in revenues Thursday, after one of the country's biggest racing events was postponed because of the foot-and-mouth crisis.

The Cheltenham National Hunt Festival, the most prestigious event in European jump racing, was called off after an outbreak of the disease near stables used by some of the horses.

Agriculture officials reported eight new cases Thursday, bringing the total to 104 since the beginning of the outbreak on Feb. 19.

Britain has taken strict measures to stop the spread of the highly infectious livestock disease, closing country footpaths, discouraging travel in the countryside and canceling sporting events.

Muslims begin to leave Saudi Arabia after pilgrimage

MECCA, Saudi Arabia – Bumper-to-bumper, buses and cars left this holy city on Thursday as nearly 2 million Muslims ended a pilgrimage marred by the deaths of 35 pilgrims who were crushed or trampled during this year's rituals.

Hundreds of thousands of pilgrims were still crowding the Grand Mosque in Mecca, where they performed a "farewell circling" of the Kaaba, the cubic stone structure Muslims face during their five daily prayers. In prayers before leaving Mecca, pilgrims ask God to accept their pilgrimage, which every able Muslim is required to make once in a lifetime.

Mecca's streets were filled Thursday with pilgrims buying prayer rugs and plastic bottles to fill up with Zamzam water, the holy water of Mecca that is given to friends and relatives as a gift. Many stood in long lines at money exchange shops, converting unspent Saudi riyals, or near phone booths to call loved ones with news they'd completed rituals of the annual hajj, or pilgrimage.

Saudi authorities haven't revealed the identities of all the victims of Monday's tragedy, which took place in the tent city of Mina, where pilgrims symbolically stone the devil in three days of rituals.

Demolition of statues to resume with end of festival

KABUL, Afghanistan – The demolition of two ancient monumental statues of Buddha was to resume Thursday with the end of the Muslim festival of Eid al-Adha, the Taliban's foreign minister said.

"The destruction of the statues will start again today," Wakil Ahmed Mutawakil told The Associated Press by telephone from Kandahar, headquarters of the hardline Islamic militia.

The Taliban began demolishing the towering statues of Buddha – which are hewn out of a mountain in Bamiyan – after their supreme leader ordered the destruction of all statues in the country as offensive to Islam. The demolition was suspended during the three-day Muslim holiday.

Amid a worldwide outcry, the United Nations has tried to plead with the Taliban to reverse the edict and, in particular, salvage the Buddhas at Bamiyan.

Generic manufacturer plans to sell drugs in Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) – A generic drug manufacturer has asked South Africa for permission to sell its own cheap, versions of patented AIDS medications in the country.

The Indian company, Cipla, asked the department of trade and industry Wednesday to grant it a license to produce eight anti-retroviral medications to treat patients with AIDS.

Last month, Cipla made a general offer to sell copies of the patented medications to developing countries for about $600 a year per person, about 5 percent of what those drugs cost in the United States and Europe.

Dr. Yusuf Hamied, CEO of Cipla, said his company had written to pharmaceutical companies in December seeking permission to manufacture their patented drugs in return for a licensing fee.

Since he had not had a response in three months, he decided to ask South Africa to unilaterally give him a license to sell his products in return for a 5 percent royalty payment to the pharmaceutical companies who developed the drugs, he said.

"It's about time we approached the governments themselves, instead of the companies," he said.

Legal experts say the application could take more than six months to process.

The offer came the same day pharmaceutical giant Merck and Co. announced it would sell two key AIDS medications to poor countries at about one-tenth their U.S. price. The offer was far more specific than previous announcements by major pharmaceutical companies of cut-rate AIDS drugs to the developing world.

Earlier this week, the pharmaceutical industry began arguing in court against a 1997 South African law that would have permitted the health minister to allow the importation or manufacture of generic versions of patented medications.

The pharmaceutical industry sued in 1998, arguing the law was arbitrary and gave the minister too much power. The trial was postponed Tuesday for six weeks.

The industry, which had also argued South Africa's patent law already allowed for the importation of certain generic medications under specific circumstances, said it supported Cipla's right to apply to sell the medications.

Females around the globe gather to observe International Women's Day

GENEVA (AP) – From a demonstration in Sri Lanka for an end to civil war to a minute of silence in Turkey for victims of rape and honor killings, International Women's Day was observed around the world Thursday with calls for peace, prosperity and equality.

The public gatherings coincided with academic conferences and release of reports on the condition of women at the turn of the millennium, focusing on sex slavery, inequality in the workplace and death rates in pregnancy and childbirth.

"There isn't a single country or institution in the world where men and women enjoy equal opportunity. And even though we've been struggling for decades to achieve fundamental change, we have to admit that there's still a long way to go," Gro Harlem Brundtland, head of the World Health Organization and a former Norwegian prime minister, told a U.N. Women's Day meeting in Geneva.

But Mary Robinson, the U.N. high commissioner for human rights, said attitudes can change quickly. She noted that when she was elected Irish president in 1990, she was the nation's first female head of state – and she was succeeded by another woman, Mary McAleese.

"Apparently there are small boys in Ireland who are complaining to their mothers, 'Why can't I grow up to be president?' That seems to me to be an excellent experience for small boys in Ireland," she said.

At the U.N. headquarters in New York, observances focused on a Security Council resolution adopted Oct. 31 calling for special measures to protect women and girls from rape and sexual abuse in war and for a greater role for women in making peace.

A council statement Thursday urged all 189 U.N. member states to increase the representation of women in decision-making "for the prevention, management and resolution of conflicts." It also urged all parties involved in armed conflicts "to protect women and girls from gender-based violence."

Noeleen Heyzer, executive director of the U.N. Development Fund for Women, said women are determined to see the resolution carried out. "It's not only the fact that women need peace, but peace needs women," she said.

In Colombo, Sri Lanka, more than 1,000 women demonstrated to demand an end to a 17-year civil war and to protest increases in taxes and utility prices. Hundreds of women marched through the Indian capital, New Delhi, to demand equal rights, better health care and education.

Tens of thousands of women dressed in brightly colored, traditional veils joined a rally in Mogadishu, Somalia, to support the end of a decade of killing and banditry in the Horn of Africa.

In Turkey, thousands of Kurdish women held a minute of silence for victims of rape and honor killings, in which young women suspected of immoral behavior are murdered by relatives for shaming the family.

London Mayor Ken Livingstone announced measures to crack down on domestic violence, including the possible eviction of offenders from public housing.

In Brazil, women farmers staged protests in major cities against worldwide economic policies they say are unfair.

'There isn't a single country or institution in the world where men and women enjoy equal opportunity.'

Macedonia drives ethnic Albanian insurgents from border village

SKOPJE, Macedonia (AP) – Macedonian troops on Thursday drove ethnic Albanian insurgents from their stronghold on the border with Kosovo, a region where renewed fighting has raised fears of a rising Balkan war.

U.S. troops in the area – near the border village of Tanusevac – confirmed the insurgents had fled. Most of the village is in Macedonia.

The Americans are part of a multinational effort to curb the flow of weapons and fighters from Kosovo, the overwhelmingly ethnic Albanian province in the Yugoslav republic of Serbia, into northern Macedonia.

Although the rebels have not spelled out their goals, it is assumed they are fighting for self-rule in areas near Kosovo that have large ethnic Albanian populations. Albanians make up about 25 percent of Macedonia's population.

The fighting at Tanusevac started before dawn, when about 50 ethnic Albanian insurgents attacked Macedonian troops, unleashing horses ahead of them to see if the area was mined, Defense Ministry spokesman Blagoja Markovski said.

Macedonian troops responded "with force," Markovski said.

After sunrise, U.S. troops entered parts of the village – which the Albanians call Tanusevci – on the Kosovo side of the border, U.S. spokesman Maj. James Marshall said.

"We have just concluded a successful operation by eliminating a safe haven for armed groups here in Kosovo," the commander of U.S. peacekeepers in the province, Brig. Gen. Kenneth Quinlan, told reporters on the Kosovo side of the frontier.

Quinlan denied claims by ethnic Albanian villagers that American troops had crossed into Macedonia during the operation. The border is poorly marked.

On Wednesday, the U.N. Security Council condemned the Balkan violence and urged political leaders in Macedonia and Kosovo to "isolate the forces behind the violent incidents."

Chiapas rebel leader honors peasant hero on march to capital

Los Angeles Times

CHINAMECA, Mexico – Rebel leader Subcommander Marcos on Thursday took his campaign for indigenous rights into the heartland of the Mexican Revolution, placing a floral wreath on the spot where peasant hero Emiliano Zapata was assassinated 82 years ago.

On the 13th day of a 2,100-mile trek from his base in southern Chiapas state to the nation's capital, Marcos pointedly followed Zapata's famous trail in the central state of Morelos.

The Chiapas insurgents call their organization the Zapatista National Liberation Army, recalling Zapata's determined battle for land rights during the 1910-17 revolution. Zapata, a Nahua Indian, waged a ferocious war against the sugar plantation owners who exploited the peasants in Morelos, his native state.

Marcos repeatedly invoked Zapata's struggle nearly a century ago to underscore the Chiapas rebels' modern campaign for Mexican indigenous rights.

"Zapata did not die here on that April 10 (in 1919). His face changed. ... He is the face of all of you," Marcos told several hundred villagers gathered here around a statue of Zapata built on the site of Zapata's assassination by rivals.

President Vicente Fox, whose election last July ended seven decades of one-party rule, has welcomed the Zapatista march. And Fox has worked hard to convince Mexicans that he is sincere in wanting to address problems of indigenous poverty and strike a peace deal for Chiapas.

But Marcos has shown himself to be suspicious of the government's professed willingness to negotiate a peace deal.

"We don't want this march to be converted into a duel of personalities between Marcos and Mr. Fox," Marcos declared at Chinameca, where Zapata was killed. "The problem is not whether Fox or Marcos is more popular, but whether the indigenous peoples are going to keep living as folkloric objects, stuffed in the trunk of history of this country."

Some blame fireworks for China deaths

BEIJING (AP) – Premier Zhu Rongji on Thursday blamed a lone madman for an explosion that destroyed a schoolhouse, killing 41 students and teachers in rural southeastern China.

But the father of an 11-year-old son killed in the blast said officials were lying. Zhang Chenggen said the school in the village of Fang Lin in Jiangxi province had forced children to manufacture fireworks to cover its budget and benefit teachers.

"Everybody knows it is caused by the fireworks. The government is trying to cover the facts. Please do not believe them," Zhang said by telephone.

Zhang said thousands of people had demonstrated Wednesday outside the school to demand punishment of those responsible. Most of the dead were students, but some were teachers.

The disaster, which came the week of the annual meeting of China's national legislature, is extremely embarrassing for Chinese leaders, whose reputations have already suffered from a string of fatal building collapses and fires.

Police erected roadblocks around the village to keep out reporters and detained at least three who tried to reach the remote mountainous area. State television and major newspapers have not reported on the disaster.

State media in Jiangxi were ordered Wednesday to withhold information from foreign reporters, according to a newspaper employee in Nanchang, the provincial capital.

Police experts were combing through the wreckage of the school where the explosion Tuesday morning ripped down walls and left a heap of books, bricks and furniture. Exposed inner walls had Chinese flags and patriotic slogans still neatly pinned up.

Around 190 people were inside at the time of the blast. Witnesses have said that 37 of the dead were students and the other four were teachers, though no official breakdown has been given.

PALANGKARAYA, Indonesia (AP) – A peace mission by Indonesia's head of state ended in bloodshed Thursday when police and native Dayaks clashed on Borneo, where hundreds had been slaughtered in ethnic violence.

Hospital officials said at least one man was killed and four wounded when officers fired warning shots and used plastic bullets to disperse a rock-throwing mob just minutes after President Abdurrahman Wahid left the region.

Unconfirmed television reports said as many as four died in the fighting outside the office of the provincial governor.

Police ordered reporters and camera crews to leave the scene as bloodied victims were placed on the backs of trucks. One television cameraman's videotape was confiscated.

The violence is a further blow to Wahid, who is fending off calls for his resignation over a range of crises and scandals as Indonesia struggles with its uneasy transition to democracy.

The ethnic and political turmoil has damaged investor confidence. Standard & Poor's credit rating agency has downgraded its forecast of Indonesia's economic performance from stable to negative.

Musician Peter Schickele has been bringing the fictive P.D.Q. Bach to life since 1965.

Peter Schickele does his wurst in Ketchum Saturday

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM – Look out, music lovers: The man behind the odd, irreverent, but hardly irrelevant P.D.Q. Bach is about to be unleashed upon this sedate mountain resort.

Composer-satirist Peter Schickele will perform with The Lark Quartet Saturday night at Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church on Sun Valley Road, the final concert of the Sun Valley Center's 2001 Chamber Series season.

As you might fear, the group will be doing the witty "Schickele Quintet," as well as a Brahms Quartet.

Time for Papa Bach to roll over his grave one more time. Schickele, for the uninitiated, is the man who wasn't content to let bad musical legends die.

No. He had to uncover the highly figmental musical secrets of the least and certainly oddest of Johann Sebastian Bach's 20-odd children while rummaging around a Bavarian castle in search of rare musical gems. Schickele, whose "Schickele Mix" is heard nationwide over Public Radio International, happened upon the original manuscript of "Sanka Cantata" that day and a musical atrocity long buried was unleashed upon an unsuspecting world.

Since, the lampooner of baroque music has kept audiences in stitches with his presentations of "The Abduction of Figaro," "Birthday Ode to 'Big Daddy' Bach," "Blaues Gras (Bluegrass) Cantata," "Grand Serenade for an Awful Lot of Winds and Percussion," "Hansel & Gretel & Ted & Alice," "Fanfare for the Common Cold," "P.D.Q. Bach: Music You Can't Get Out of Your Head," "The Wurst of P.D.Q. Bach," "Uptown Hoedown," "Sneaky Pete and the Wolf" and "An Hysteric Return: P.D.Q. at Carnegie Hall."

P.D.Q. Bach was the "youngest and least-distinguished" of Johannes Sebastian Bach's 21 children, according to Schickele.

If you go ...

- What: Peter Schickele and The Lark Quartet will perform the final concert of the 2001 Chamber Artist Series.
- Where: Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church, Sun Valley Road, Ketchum.
- When: 8 p.m., Saturday.
- How much: Tickets, which are $15 for adults, are available at the Sun Valley Center at Ketchum, by calling 726-9491, or at the door. Kids through the 12th grade get in free.

The 65-year-old New York musician has collaborated with Joan Baez, penned "Where the Garbage Goes" for "Sesame Street," written part of the music and lyrics for the Broadway show "Oh, Calcutta!" and appeared on the "Tonight Show with Johnny Carson," and with Arthur Fiedler's Boston Pops.

Iowa-born, Schickele grew up in Fargo, N.D., playing the bassoon. Pretty well, as it turns out. He graduated from Swarthmore College in 1957, having by then composed and conducted four orchestral works, a great deal of chamber music, and some songs. Schickele studied composition at Juilliard School of Music, earning a master's degree in 1960. Then on a Ford Foundation grant, he composed music for high schools in Los Angeles before returning to teaching at Juilliard. The concerts of P.D.Q. Bach, which had bee annual affairs at Juilliard since 1959, burst upon the general public in 1965.

"He's an incredibly intelligent, funny guy," said Michelle Witt, director of performing arts for the Sun Valley Center. "He does all sorts of music from classical to jazz, to blues. With him, excerpts of familiar popular pieces pop up in the strangest places." Schickele will appear with the Lark Quartet, a 16-year-old New York ensemble made up of violinists Jennifer Orchard and Diane Pascal, cellist Astrid Schween and violist Danielle Farma.

The quartet, which recently signed a CD contract with Arabesque Recordings, has performed all over the world, including the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. It's also been part of Lincoln Center's Great Performers Series.

The foursome will perform for a free children's concert at 11 a.m. Saturday at Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Hailey.

Enter The Times-News' pick-the-Oscars contest

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – Are you a crouching tiger or a hidden critic?

Whichever, here's your chance predict the winners of this year's major Academy Awards in the eighth annual Times-News pick-the-Oscar contest.

The Academy Awards will be handed out March 25. Contest entries are due by March 21.

Send them to Pick the Oscar, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls 83303, fax them to 734-5538, or e-mail them to crump@magicvalley.com.

Winners will be notified March 26.

Coming soon? The $10 movie ticket

The Associated Press

NEW YORK – Want to get your fill of "Chocolat"? See who gets eaten in "Hannibal"?

That'll be $10, please.

That's right. In a city where Broadway shows can cost $100 and a meal at the Alain Ducasse restaurant goes for $250 per person, the age of the $10 movie will be ushered into Manhattan on March 2.

"Ten dollars has kind of been the magic number for a while that no one had hit yet," said Paul Dergarabedian, president of Los Angeles-based Exhibitor Relations Co., a company that tracks box office receipts. "What remains to be seen is if people will go along."

The Loews Cineplex Entertainment chain hopes so. But while the bikes will take place at a dozen of the company's theaters in Manhattan, prices will remain unchanged just a few miles away in Brooklyn, where movies cost $8.

The chain, which owns about half of the city's screens, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection this month and plans to close 21 of its 365 theaters nationwide.

But is all the hubbub over ticket prices enough to make a Manhattanite long for the cellu-loid palaces of Fresno, Calif. ($7.50 for a movie), Kansas City ($7), Los Angeles ($9) or Jackson, Miss. ($6.50)?

City Council Speaker Peter Vallone, who called for a boycott of Friday night movies two years ago when the price rose to $9.50, said breaking the $10 barrier is unconscionable – particularly if baby sitters, parking and popcorn

'The Creature Creeps' come to Buhl tonight and Saturday

The Times-News

BUHL – The students of the Buhl Drama Department will perform a melodrama in three acts, "The Creature Creeps," at the Buhl Middle School Auditorium tonight and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Admission will be $3 for students and seniors, $4 for adults.

The play is student-produced by the Buhl Thespian Society and Phantom Pig Productions (the Buhl Drama Department). A.J. Hoffman is the student director with Jana Davidson serving as assistant director.

There are 12 cast members and two understudies.

The play is a spoof in the Transylvanian style of "Frankenstein."

It is a mystery where the mad scientist develops a transformational formula to bring his creation to life.

"Being a director is a lot harder than I thought," Hoffman explained.

"There are many details that most people overlook. There are the costumes, the staging, building the set, getting the right props. There is the problem of getting people to work together and introducing new people – people who have never acted before – to the stage. But it is fun."

CSI Wind Ensemble gives concert

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – The College of Southern Idaho Wind Ensemble will perform at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium. The concert, which was originally scheduled for Sunday, will feature a variety of works for band.

The concert, under the direction of CSI faculty member George K. Halsell, is entitled "March MQlange," and will open with a John Philip Sousa classic, "The Free Lance March." This will be followed by a performance of a seldom-heard work, "Classic Overture," written for wind band by the late 18th century composer, Francois Joseph Gossec.

The third piece is a new work for band, "Metalla," by the Belgian composer Jan Van der Roost.

The concert, under the direction of CSI faculty member George K. Halsell, is entitled "March MQlange," and will open with a John Philip Sousa classic, "The Free Lance March."

"Metalla" was written for a band in Altenkirchen, an area of Germany known for its iron mines, and it evokes the feeling of massive, gray metal structures.

One of the most popular types of music for band is a suite of music based on British folk songs. The CSI Wind Ensemble will perform such a suite, entitled "Songs of the British Isles," by the American composer Albert O. Davis. The Wind Ensemble will follow the suite with a performance of the "Grand Serenade" for an Awful Lot of Winds and Percussion by Johann Sebastian Bach's fictive son, P.D.Q. Bach.

The concert will conclude with a favorite of the concert band literature, John Zdechlik's "Chorale and Shaker Dance," based on the well-known hymn tune, "Simple Gifts."

Admission is a suggested $3 donation to the CSI Music Activities Fund. For more information, call Halsell at 733-9554, Ext. 2556.

"New York City is the entertainment capital of the world and yet average New Yorkers and their families can no longer afford to go to the movies," said Vallone. "The city should be a place for everyone to enjoy. It should not just be a playground for billionaires and tourists."

Loews spokeswoman Mindy Tucker said the price reflects only a 50-cent increase and going to the movies is still a good deal.

"Real estate is more expensive, labor is more expensive, everything is more expensive in Manhattan," she said. "Hopefully, the consumer will look at this and compare it with other entertainment options and see movies are a bargain."

Band's songs to become stage musical

Knight Ridder News Service

The songs of Queen, one of rock's most theatrical groups, are to be turned into a stage musical.

In an interview with London radio station Capital Gold, guitarist Brian May said Wednesday that the band is working with playwright Ben Elton. "The rumor is that we're doing a musical, which is true," May said. "Ben Elton has written us a fantastic script."

May said the show would not tell the story of the band.

Fronted by Freddie Mercury, Queen produced a string of hits during the 1970s and '80s, including "Bohemian Rhapsody," "We Are the Champions" and "We Will Rock You."

Mercury died of AIDS in 1991.

May said he hoped the Queen musical would reach the stage late this year or early in 2002.

'Meet the Parents' reaches local video stores

Combined wire services

'Meet the Parents'

This comedy has one provocative premise: What if you visited your girlfriend's parents for the first time, only to come face to face with Travis Bickle? In other words, Robert De Niro at his toughest. As Jack Byrnes, he's a former CIA psychological profiler who's just a little too protective of his daughter. Male nurse Greg (Ben Stiller), who wants to marry Jack's daughter Pam (Teri Polo), has his work cut out for him. Making nice with the father-in-law from hell isn't easy. But Greg is determined to keep trying – and that's what powers the movie. Director Jay Roach (who did both "Austin Powers" movies) knows to play to the movie's twin strengths: Stiller and De Niro. Throw these guys together, turn up the intensity. Stiller's absolute discomfort as Greg is essential. That tension tweaks everything. And there are few better sight gags than Stiller – obliged to borrow a swimsuit – trying to squeeze himself into a Speedo.

'The Contender'

'Broken Hearts Club'

The 'Broken Hearts' of this gay-themed ensemble dramedy refers both to the name of the restaurant where the main characters hang out and to the fact that for the most part, they have been unsuccessful in love. It's certainly not for lack of trying – or for lack of talking about it. The love lives (or the lack thereof) of Dennis (Timothy Olyphant), Cole (Dean Cain), Patrick (Ben Weber), Benji (Zach Braff), Howie (Matt McGrath) and Taylor (Billy Porter) are endlessly autopsied and analyzed over beers, breakfast, birthday cake and softball. In that sense, they're just like straight guys, at least the sex-obsessed, commitment-phobic straight guys of cliched Hollywood. As craggy, drag-dressing Jack, the group's unofficial den mother, "Frasier's" John Mahoney is an anomaly, the only one of the Club to be involved in a stable, long-term relationship. One day, protagonist Dennis suddenly wakes up and realizes, "I want something more." Unfortunately, so do I.

"Our advanced science and technology in medicine must always be guided by the hearts and hands of human beings."

Dr. David McCluskey
Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital

It might surprise you to learn that a major regional medical center has been living and working in your neighborhood for years. It's Saint Alphonsus. And we've been bringing advanced healthcare right to your doorstep for some time now.

Life Flight, the area's premiere aero-medical team, has served Twin Falls for 15 years, most recently with is own full-time base. We've also undertaken several partnerships with local health organizations around your neighborhood bringing you the Saint Alphonsus Nephrology Center and the Saint Alphonsus-affiliated Twin Falls Physician Center for primary care. In nearby Jerome, we have managed operations at St. Benedicts for over 15 years, assuming its sponsorship this year. And now we are lending our support to your own Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital as they begin to explore the ways to improve healthcare delivery even more in your community.

While Saint Alphonsus knows that the advanced technology and resources we can bring to your community are important, we also understand how much you still need a human touch. That is why we insist on nurturing local control.

Because Saint Alphonsus is more than a leading regional medical healthcare system. We are more than health professionals. We're human. And we care enough to deliver quality healthcare one patient at a time. We care enough to work with and support your local hospital. We are at work in your neighborhood.

'15 Minutes,' 'Get Over It' hit movie theaters

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times, Knight Ridder Newspapers and Associated Press reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

'Cast Away'

If there is one movie star we would consider spending two hours of a movie alone with, it might be Tom Hanks, who here plays a Fed Ex troubleshooter stranded alone on a desert island after a plane crash. After learning to survive, he's then forced to learn how to live without stimulation, distractions and excuses. Reteaming with "Forrest Gump" director Robert Zemeckis, Hanks turns what could have been an overbearing important lesson – turn off your cell phone, appreciate what you take for granted – into something rich and unexpected. Rated PG-13; disturbing imagery. 2 hours, 23 minutes.

'Chocolat'

Anyone who regrets the shuttering of '60s-style liberation theology – which was most often reduced to "if it feels good, do it" – will be happy to see it reopened for business in Lasse Hallstrom's fable about an enchanting stranger who opens a chocolate shop in a small French town. "Chocolat" divides mankind into two types: those who fear pleasure and resist all temptation, and those who don't. Guess whose side it's on? Rated PG-13; brief nudity, sexual themes. 1 hour, 50 minutes.

'Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon'

This rapturous fantasy-adventure from director Ang Lee ("Sense and Sensibility") does for the much-maligned martial arts genre what "Star Wars" did for outer space pictures: transform the cheap and cheesy into something rich and fantastic. The complex plot, propelled by a stolen legendary sword called Green Destiny, puts the forces of good (honorable warriors Chow Yun Fat and Michelle Yeoh) and evil (a mystical villain played by Cheng Pei-pei) in contention for the soul and skills of a headstrong teen-ager (Zhang Ziyi). The conflict literally takes flight in breathtaking action scenes choreographed by Yuen Woo-Ping ("The Matrix"), but the film stays grounded in real emotion and Lee's beautifully embroidered vision of a long-ago China that never was. 2 hours. In Mandarin Chinese, with English subtitles. Rated PG-13; violence.

'Down to Earth'

An inept and unfunny remake of "Heaven Can Wait" starring Chris Rock in the Warren Beatty role of a man taken to heaven before his time, then returned to earth in a new body. The twist is that the only corpus available is that of a wealthy old white man, but Rock and directors Chris and Paul Weitz ("American Pie") throw away the gag, and confuse the audience, by letting Rock remain Rock. That means the comic shock of having Regina King, as an activist, fall in love with an old white capitalist (who isn't), is neither shocking nor funny. Tag this toe DOA. Rated PG-13; language. 1 hour, 23 minutes.

'15 Minutes'

The crime thriller "15 Minutes" runs two hours. That's eight 15-minute chunks of time you could have better passed organizing your sock drawer. While trying to keep rooted in cops-and-killers action, the movie makes foolish stabs at social commentary, trying to double as a satire on media culture and the price of celebrity. But the effort is so crudely written and farcically performed that "15 Minutes" does little more than roll around in its own muck. Robert De Niro plays a celebrated homicide detective who teams with an arson investigator (Edward Burns) to track a pair of headline-grabbing, murderous immigrants. The characters are shallow, the action ridiculous. This mess is a real nosedive for writer-director John Herzfeld after his edgy "2 Days in the Valley." R for strong violence, language and some sexuality. 120 minutes.

'Get Over It'

'Hannibal'

The much-anticipated sequel to the Academy Award-sweeping "The Silence of the Lambs" disgraces its predecessor, turning one of crime fiction's most memorable and malignant characters – the brilliant, seductive psychopath Hannibal Lecter (Anthony Hopkins) – into a cartoon cannibal. Director Ridley Scott and writer Steven Zaillian have attempted to tone down the gratuitous ugliness of Thomas Harris' novel. But the story, which tenuously reconnects Lecter to the haunted FBI agent (Julianne Moore) with whom he maintains a mysterious bond, is still a convoluted bore with no point and no point of view. It's all just a prelude to the most disgusting climax ever served up in a major motion picture. Everyone involved should be ashamed. Rated R; graphic violence, language. 2 hours, 11 minutes.

'The Mexican'

A violence-prone screwball farce that has its eye on being a jaunty, picaresque adventure, kind of a updated version of those off-the-cuff road movies of some years back. It wants ever so desperately to be successfully hip and off-beat, but it can't manage to make it happen. Its best performance is not given by its pair of leads – Brad Pitt and Julia Roberts – but by James Gandolfini of "Sopranos" fame. (2:03. R for violence and language.)

'O Brother, Where Art Thou?'

An eccentric, picaresque Southern period comedy, rife with the kinds of genial madness only writer-director Joel and writer-producer Ethan Coen can come up with. "O Brother's" music is a living presence, and with apologies to an excellent cast, just about the star of the picture. The film's inspiration and story line are a typically eclectic Coen Brothers mix – contrasting the ancient Greeks with the cliched movie South. Though it may be foolhardy to look for logic in a Coen brothers film, this one makes it most pleasant to try. With George Clooney, John Turturro and Tim Blake Nelson. (1:43. PG-13, for some violence and language.)

'Recess: School's Out'

A pint-sized Ferris Bueller and his pals try to thwart a campaign to eliminate summer vacation in this feature-length cartoon from Disney's TV division. Kids may like "Recess" well enough, but it's as bland as a lunchbox full of carrot sticks. Rated G; nothing objectionable. 1 hour, 23 minutes.

'Save the Last Dance'

Julia Stiles is a white suburban ballerina dropped into a predominantly black Chicago high school after her mother is killed; Sean Patrick Thomas is the school's best dancer and prize catch, and she catches him, much to everyone's distress. The movie wants to be the interracial "Dirty Dancing," but it's just too well-scrubbed. Rated PG-13; violence, language. 1 hour, 50 minutes.

'Saving Silverman'

The latest and famest of the how-low-can-we-go teen comedies has idiots Jack Black and Steve Zahn kidnapping the cold, controlling fiancee (Amanda Peet) of their clueless friend Jason Biggs, threatened by her plot to end their friendship and break up their Neil Diamond tribute band. Inept, ugly and unfunny, it makes director Dennis Dugan's comedies with Adam Sandler ("Big Daddy," "Happy Gilmore") look like Cary Grant-style sophistication. In Cretin, with no subtitles. Rated PG-13; gross-out attempts at humor, allegedly comic violence, alcohol abuse. 1 hour, 31 minutes.

Movies

mail carrier (David Arquette) babysitting a small boy (Angus Jones). The movie barks, bites and has fleas. In short, it's a real... oh, never mind! With Paul Sorvino, Michael Clarke Duncan, Leslie Bibb, Joe Viterelli. (1:34. PG for crude humor, language and comic violence.)

'Shadow of the Vampire'

It's built on a morbid joke – what if the unknown actor who played the vampire in the silent classic "Nosferatu" was really a vampire? But this beautifully composed and ambitious examination of the place where artifice dissolves and art takes over is always absorbing, even when it's failing to congeal into anything particularly profound. John Malkovich is the height of haughty pretension as director F.W. Murnau, who attempts to ensure his movie's authenticity by casting Max Schreck (Willem Dafoe) in the role of the unsightly dead Count Orlock, concealing the truth from the rest of the company, and essentially sacrificing them to art.

"Shadow" director E. Elias Merhige is hardly humorless, and comedy periodically peeks from under the shadows and fog, and his reproduction of Murnau's tableaus are impeccable.

But the real art is in the performance of Dafoe, who finds the human in the monster and vice versa. Rated R; violence, sexual situations, drug use, nudity. 1 hour, 33 minutes.

'Sweet November'

Updating a 1968 drama about a free-spirited sexual samaritan who takes a new lover every month as kind of reclamation project would seem risky at best and ridiculous at worst in the post-AIDS era, but this remake is neither.

It's just another tale of a work-obsessed jerk (Keanu Reeves) who finds the true meaning of life with the help of a woman who teaches him how to smell the roses (Charlize Theron). If you've seen the original, or the commercials, you know Theron's tragic motivation, but the script requires Reeves to remain clueless, a pose he's mastered. Rated PG-13; sexual theme and situations, language. 1 hour, 57 minutes.

'3000 Miles to Graceland'

Kevin Costner and Kurt Russell star as Elvis imitators who rob a Las Vegas casino and then have to live (and die) with the consequences. A reduction to near-absurdity of many modern cinema trends and a film that takes a shot at redefining shameless for a new generation. (2:05. R, for strong violence, sexuality and language.)

'Traffic'

Director Steven Soderbergh has once again opted for a change of pace. As written by Stephen Gaghan (based on a British TV miniseries), the film effortlessly intertwines several complex stories across two countries and several cities without ever dropping a stitch. Unfortunately, it's much less secure when it comes to dialogue and the creation of individualized characters. Some of its narrative threads are noticeably less compelling than others, and its people have a tendency to sound a lot like standard brands. One of the difficulties with the film is that it feels like the filmmakers are tiptoeing around the implications of their good work. The film's best performance is by Benicio Del Toro as a Mexican state policeman. With Michael Douglas, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Don Cheadle, Luis Guzman, Ray Castro and Dennis Quaid. (2:27. R, for pervasive drug content, strong language, violence and some sexuality.)

People in the news

Curtis, daughter of actor Tony Curtis ("Some Like it Hot") and actress Janet Leigh ("Psycho"), has starred in "True Lies," "A Fish Called Wanda," "Trading Places" and three "Halloween" films. She's married to Christopher Guest, and they are the parents of Annie, 14, and Tom, 5, and have a home in the Wood River Valley.

"We are raising generations of motherless children," she says in the March issue of More magazine, making it clear that she means upper middle-class mothers "who have chosen careers that demand they hand over the child-rearing to other people."

There's also this consideration, the 42-year-old actress says: "The realities are that as you get older, there's a point where you quickly become a caricature of yourself. I have to be careful to get out before I become the grotesque caricature of a hatchet-faced woman with big knockers."

"The Tailor of Panama," directed by John Boorman, also stars Geoffrey Rush and Pierce Brosnan. It's scheduled for release later this month.

Time for another actor as governor in California?

LOS ANGELES – Is muscle-bound Hollywood action hero Arnold Schwarzenegger going to run for governor of California?

A day after saying Schwarzenegger wouldn't try next year for the office held by Democratic Gov. Gray Davis, publicist Jill Eisenstadt said Wednesday her client's mind "is not made up," and that Schwarzenegger will decide in the next couple of months.

On Tuesday, Eisenstadt said the "timing's not right" for the action star, explaining that Schwarzenegger had family and film obligations preventing him from running for public office next year.

The star of the "Terminator" films and "Predator," among others, whet the appetites of fellow Republicans dreaming of an actor-to-governor sequel when he told a Los Angeles Times columnist a month ago that the governor's job was appealing.

After all, Republican Ronald Reagan had gone from Hollywood to Sacramento to the White House.

NEW YORK – Burglars stole $360,000 worth of jewels and other valuables from the Manhattan townhouse belonging to the daughter of actor Dennis Hopper.

Marin Hopper, a fashion consultant, and her husband, John Antonopoulos, were out of town when the burglary occurred sometime between last Friday and Tuesday, police said. The investigation continued Thursday.

Antonopoulos, 56, discovered the theft Tuesday night after he returned from Europe. Hopper, 38, had gone on to Los Angeles from Europe.

"These very valuable things that are important to my family – heirlooms – have been stolen and violated, in such a manner that it's devastating," Antonopoulos told the Daily News.

Police said the townhouse door was open when Antonopoulos arrived home.

Michael Jackson breaks down talking of childhood

The King of Pop broke down in tears as he talked of his own childhood in a speech to one of England's oldest and most prestigious universities Tuesday, reports Agence France-Press.

Michael Jackson arrived nearly three hours late at the Oxford Union, the students' body of Oxford University, to pass on his views on child welfare and to officially launch his Heal The Kids children's charity.

Jackson told the audience of more than 500 students and invited guests that he was "the product of a lack of childhood."

"I come before you less as an icon of pop and more as an icon of a generation, a generation that no longer knows what it means to be children," he said.

The 42-year-old singer, his right foot in plaster and without his trademark face-mask, broke down in tears for 20 seconds talking about his own childhood and his treatment by his manager father when he was part of the legendary family group, the Jackson Five.

"He seemed intent ... on making us a commercial success ... but what I really wanted was a dad," he said. "The cheery 5-year-old who belted out Rockin Robin and Ben to adoring crowds was not indicative of the boy behind the smile."

Man would prefer to avoid physical intimacy

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 70-year-old male. I have had erectile dysfunction for five years. I am sure this was the cause of my last divorce. I like to date women, but when it's time to initiate a physical relationship, I usually move on.

When I showed no interest in sex, one woman asked if I was gay. Another went so far as to ask me to "prove it."

I have a heart condition, diabetes, and the medicine I am prescribed prevents me from taking Viagra.

Abby, how do I handle this gracefully?

– JUST WANT TO DATE IN MODESTO, CALIF.

DEAR JUST: You don't owe these women an explanation unless you're considering a committed relationship. I see no reason to disclose your medical problems before that.

Continue dating. Don't isolate yourself. Many women out there are just looking for companionship, too. You will find someone. Trust me!

DEAR ABBY: I just lost my husband. He was 61 years old and suffered a massive coronary at home. Taking care of all the things a "new" widow must do has been very hard.

My husband had been married before, briefly, in the 1960s. When I contacted the Social Security office, they told me I would have to provide a copy of his divorce papers – among other documents – before I could receive his widow benefits. (Thank God his mother is still living and could tell me which city to contact and the approximate year of the divorce.)

I am writing this for the benefit of other women who are second and third wives. NOW is the time to get the divorce papers from their husbands' previous marriages. Doing it while you are grief-stricken is very stressful – HANGING BY A THREAD, TULSA, OKLA.

DEAR HANGING BY A THREAD: Please accept my condolences for the sudden loss of your beloved husband. I am sure many couples will be grateful that you made it a point at this difficult time to warn them.

You now need all of the support you can get, and I do not mean just financial. I hope you will find a grief-support group to help you through. Many readers have written to tell me how helpful they are. Please let me know how you are in six months. I care.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 23 years. Last week she got a letter from an old boyfriend, and she called him. I can understand why this guy is curious, and I don't mind that she called him, but they've been meeting for coffee.

I am not a jealous person, but I don't understand what he wants. I feel she should have just said "thanks for calling," and let that be the end of it.

We have never had any problems in our marriage, but I feel we are now definitely headed for one. Got any suggestions?

– WORRIED IN WICHITA

DEAR WORRIED: It's time for you to meet this old beau. The next time they have a coffee date, you should be included. It may put your fears to rest – or alert you that trouble is brewing.

Hey Gemini - prepare to call the moving company

Mexican author wins acclaim

MADRID, Spain (AP) – Elena Poniatowska, one of Mexico's most widely translated and celebrated living writers, has won the Alfaguara literature prize for her novel "Heaven's Skin," the story of a young man who discovers the meaning of life through science.

Poniatowska, 68, said her latest novel depicts the story of an astronomer who tries to find meaning in life, love and another world. During that search, the book describes events in Mexico's recent history.

"My book is a vindication of the science in a country that hasn't any," she said. "I wanted to give scientists a voice."

Country singer likes the Opry

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Country singer Brad Paisley wants fans to know he'll be playing at the Grand Ole Opry "as much as they let me."

Paisley, 28, has played the Opry, in Nashville, Tenn., more than 35 times since launching his career in 1999. He recently became a cast member.

"You know how tour shirts will sometimes list cities? Well, my tour shirts, what we did as a joke because I play there so frequently, is we would list cities, for every 10 or so, we'd put in the Grand Ole Opry after it. Des Moines. Grand Ole Opry. Houston. Austin. And I plan to be there at least once a month."

Paisley said his upcoming album will be both surprising and familiar.

"There's a couple of things that you'll hear and immediately when you hear this, you'll say, 'Uh, oh, I didn't know he'd do that.' But not in a bad way hopefully. Strings that we didn't have on the first record that would harken back to say Ray Price. Or a bluegrass-type number. You never know."

SWAC future looks grim

ST. GEORGE, Utah – What once looked bright, now is on the verge of fading away.

For 15 years, the Scenic West Athletic Conference has provided junior college athletes in Idaho, Oregon, Utah and Colorado the opportunity to compete in a high-level league that nationally ranks near the top, season after season.

But the glory days are nearly over, and the SWAC will never be the same again.

SIDELINE VIEW
Kevin Hall

Cornerstone colleges Ricks and Treasure Valley are abandoning the league after the 2001-02 season. TVCC is migrating west to join the Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges. Though the Chukars will play baseball and softball in the SWAC through the 2003 season, they dropped volleyball this past year. And Ricks is scuttling intercollegiate athletics altogether, as part of its transformation into an Idaho campus of Brigham Young University.

More schools may follow.

Already Coeur d'Alene's North Idaho College is playing soccer in the NWAAC, though athletic director Jim Headley said NIC President Michael Burke is committed to remaining in the SWAC. Seemingly stable colleges such as Dixie State and Utah Valley State are headed toward eventual NCAA membership, with both already offering bachelor's degree programs.

And how many more years are school officials going to fund a perpetual loser at Colorado Northwestern Community College? The men's basketball team has won just one league game in two seasons, and finished this year with a 22-game losing streak.

UVSC athletic director and men's regional director Michael Jacobsen is not sure what the future holds for the dying conference.

"I think there's an awful lot of uncertainties right now," he said. "I know when we met with the athletic directors last summer, we all felt confident that things were pretty solid."

That was before the TVCC announcement and the Ricks bombshell.

"It's really kind of disturbing in some ways," he said. "Right now, we're by far the No. 1 conference in the nation if you look at the number of national championships."

Jacobsen said if other programs go the way of Treasure Valley, there isn't much that can be done.

"We'll just have to work together and try and maintain the SWAC as long as we can," he said. "When that no longer is possible, we'll just have to see what is best."

One might think it'd be easy for the SWAC to lure schools away from neighboring states such as Arizona, Nevada and Wyoming. Jacobsen said that's an option.

"Anything is possible," he said. "The NJCAA does districting. So right now, a Southern Nevada (Community College) is not in our district (so) we couldn't take them automatically. They would have to apply with the NJCAA to redistrict them."

But even if that were to occur, Jacobsen has his reservations.

"The only thing wrong with Southern Nevada, the way I see it, is if you bring in a school that has only one program, they can put a lot of money into it," he said. "All the rest of us are trying to run broad-based programs. That puts us at a disadvantage. To bring someone in the league for just a playing schedule, I'm not real high on that."

Jacobsen said any school that might want to join the future SWAC will have to offer the five core sports: men's and women's basketball, volleyball, softball and baseball. Jacobsen isn't sure what will happen in the next two to five years.

"I think we're going to have an awful lot of dialogue to find out what people really want to do," he said. "Honestly, there's not many options to increase the size of our league."

Natalia Kortisova — Belinda Stubbs

ST. GEORGE, Utah - Yes, Natalia Kortisova, there is a God. And He is a basketball fan.

Seventh-seeded College of Southern Idaho pulled off the Region 18 Tournament's first upset Thursday, eliminating defending region champions No. 2 Ricks College 71-67 at Burns Arena in St. George, Utah.

Kortisova's rainbow-like, 3-point prayer put CSI up by one point, 68-67, with 50.4 seconds to go. The lead change was the last of four in the final four minutes.

"This sounds corny but that is the first time I prayed to God," said Kortisova, who finished shooting 4-of-5 from the 3-point line. "I just felt it all game long."

It was the first victory for CSI coach Kendall Grant over friend and former Ricks colleague Lori Woodland. The two hugged after the game.

"She told me she loved me and she said she was proud of me," Grant said. "It's a satisfying victory but it hurts a little. My life was spent there (in Rexburg). I know the pain they're feeling right now."

Belinda Stubbs led Southern Idaho with 16 points. Jinga Gosschalk added 15 and Kortisova 14. The triumph also avenged a 32-point embarrassment to the Vikings on Feb. 23 and puts CSI (18-12) into today's semifinals and a meeting with No. 3 seed Utah Valley State College (22-9) at noon.

Ricks, which was led by the 21 points of Candis Wilcox and 17-point, 16-rebound effort of Mandie Little ended its season at 26-4.

Woodland said her team felt the burden of a town's overblown confidence.

"We had everything to lose," she said. "We had a team that was pretty stressed out and scared. There was a lot of pressure and a lot of expectations. And I think it got to us. We came out a little frightened and more not to lose than to win."

"(CSI) came very aggressively, and to win," Woodland said. "They had nothing to lose and it became readily apparent as the ST. GEORGE - Though No. 8 seed College of Eastern Utah tried to top the College of Southern Idaho's upset of second-seed Ricks College by beating top-seed Snow College in first-round action of the Women's Region 18 Tournament on Thursday, it wasn't to pass.

The 12th-ranked Lady Badgers survived a scare by CEU with a 19-9 run over the final five minutes to break open a five-point game and post a 74-59 win. Snow advanced to face fourth-seeded Salt Lake Community College, who got 21 points from Brook Hansen to beat host and fifth-seed Dixie State College, 74-63.

Utah Valley State College sent North Idaho College home with a 60-58 triumph and will face CSI today at noon in the first of the women's semifinals. Salt Lake plays Snow at 6 p.m.

In men's semifinals today, 4th-ranked Southern Idaho squares up against No. 3 seed Snow College at 2 p.m. before top-ranked and No. 1 seed DSC plays UVSC at 8 p.m. All four winners meet in the tournament championships on Saturday. The women start at 5 p.m. with the men facing off at 7:30 p.m.

Thursday's games:

Casey Cooke scored a game-high 24 points as top-seed and No. 12 Snow College (29-2) fought off a game College of Eastern Utah 74-59 on Thursday.

Ambre White led the Golden Eagles (17-14) with 16 points. CEU trailed by only five with five minutes left before the Badgers went on a 19-9 tear for the win. Snow shot 48.5 percent to CEU's 28.6 percent, though Eastern Utah won the battle of the boards, 54-48. CEU hauled in 26 offensive rebounds to keep the game close.

Snow's Lacey Yates chipped in 14 points and teammate Kamie Jo Massey grabbed 12 rebounds. The Badgers shot a low 2 of 13 from behind the 3-point line.

A-1 teams grab pair of victories

By Nathan Jerke
Times-News writer

FILER – The A-1 All-Stars shined Thursday night in Filer as both girls' and boys' basketball teams defeated their Class A-2 counterparts.

In the girls' matchup the A-1 squad used the entire team to defeat the A-2 teams, with every girl scoring to contribute to the 49-27 win.

The game started slow for both sides but fired up after the first four minutes. Jerome's Kendra West started the scoring for the A-1 team with a basket and teammate Keely Osborn hit a long jump shot to go ahead 4-0. Brandi Escover, also of Jerome, hit a 3-pointer to give the A-1 a 9-6 lead at the end of the first quarter.

The A-1's played stingy defense in the second quarter, allowing only six points in the period, while their offense fared better than in the opening period, scoring 15 points including two 3-pointers.

A-1 held a 24-12 lead going into the locker room and never gave any sign of letting up in the second half.

Led by Minico's Lisa Patterson, the A-1 started the half on an 8-2 run to take a 32-15 lead.

Buhl's Hattie Hiatt kept the motor running for the A-2's, grabbing two put-backs in two trips down the floor. But it was Escover finding a wide-open Keri Coats of Twin Falls that finished the quarter and gave the A-1's a 19 point lead heading into the last period.

The A-2's battled back in the fourth quarter as Filer's Jesse Lassen found Declo's Amy Zollinger on a lay-in. And Buhl's Katie Williamson hit a long jump shot to keep the score with striking distance.

But the A-1's were too much as

Speedskating records may fall

Salt Lake City's Kearns Oval touted as fastest in the world

The Associated Press

AP photo

A female Chinese speedskater follows Russia's Aleksandr Kibalko, Bart Veldkamp and Vadim Sajutin during practice for the World Speed Skating Championships in Kearns, Utah Thursday.

KEARNS, Utah – If the brand-new Utah Olympic Oval lives up to its billing, get ready for world records to tumble at the world single-distance speedskating championships.

SALT LAKE 2002

"The U.S. team has raced here two weekends and we've had some fast times," said Annie Driscoll of Roseville, Minn. "I've had two personal bests, so I was pretty impressed with the ice. I'm definitely a fan."

That's good news to Nick Thometz, a three-time Olympian who works as speedskating program manager for the Salt Lake Organizing Committee. His input went into construction of the $30 million facility.

"We're trying to make the best sheet of ice we can," Thometz said.

The world's fastest track has long been the former Olympic venue in Calgary, Canada, which currently holds world records in eight of the 10 events that will be staged in Utah from today through Sunday.

But the altitude of Kearns, in the suburbs 12 miles from downtown Salt Lake City, is 4,600 feet. That's about 1,100 feet higher than Calgary, and the thinner air should mean less resistance, harder ice and faster times for skaters.

"It's possible, very possible," said Casey Fitzrandolph of Verona, Wis., who set American records to place second in the 500 and 1,000 meters at last week's season-ending World Cup event in Calgary.

With seating for 6,500 fans, the oval is sure to be one of the biggest draws and noisiest venues during the 2002 Winter Olympics. The American athletes praised the ice, the locker rooms and other parts of the arena.

"It's a nice atmosphere," Driscoll said. "It's world-class, definitely. The people are great. It's a great place to skate, and by the time the Olympics come around it will be even better."

Belle's career ends

Bad hip forces Orioles slugger to retire

The Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. – Albert Belle's career ended Thursday when the Baltimore Orioles said the outfielder was "totally disabled and unable to perform as a major league baseball player."

Belle was examined by two team doctors Wednesday and found to have a severe case of degenerative arthritis of the right hip.

"Belle has agreed that he is physically incapable of performing as a player and concurs with the findings of the doctors," the Orioles said in a statement.

Belle will be placed on the 60-day disabled list today – the first step to protect the Orioles' insurance coverage of his contract, which guarantees the slugger $39 million in the next three years.

About 70 percent of that total will be reimbursed to the team by the insurance company.

"We have been anticipating this for some time," said Syd Thrift, the Orioles' vice president of baseball operations.

Albert Belle

For the Orioles, it was difficult to watch Belle struggle through spring training in which the ailing superstar found it difficult to do the most mundane of tasks, such as run to first base or chase down a liner to the corner in right field.

"It's a very sad event for a young man 34 years of age not to be able to play baseball again," Thrift said.

When he played the game, Belle did it with vigor and sass. He hit 381 homers and drove in 1,239 runs over 12 seasons. He's still the only player to have 50 homers and 50 doubles in one season, a feat he accomplished in 1995.

LET THE CONFERENCE SEASON BEGIN

CSI starts SWAC play with trip to Utah Valley State

By Joe Sunnen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – The time for tuneups and checkups is over for the College of Southern Idaho baseball team.

Ready or not, the Eagles throw out the first pitch of the Scenic West Athletic Conference season today against Utah Valley State Community College. And after 16 games and a so-so 8-8 record, CSI is still more promise than substance.

"We just need to throw more strikes," CSI coach Jim Walker said. "I'm not even talking quality strikes, just more strikes. We need to cut the walks at least in half and we'll be OK. Over 70 percent of the people we walk score. That's something we need to fix.

"We're hitting .291 as a team. I can't ask for more than that. The problem certainly isn't our offense."

The problem this year has been the Eagles' pitching staff. The bad news is things won't get any easier in conference play. The good news is CSI isn't alone.

"I think the only team that feels confident with their pitching staff is (defending SWAC champ) Dixie State," Walker said. "It helps that they're a warm weather team but we're probably in the second-best climate and look where we're at."

Only one CSI pitcher has thrown a complete game this year, and the team's leader in innings pitched is a reliever. If the Eagles are going to succeed in the SWAC's seven-inning doubleheader format, their pitchers will have to throw at least five quality innings per start.

CSI baseball

Today: CSI vs. UVSC, 1 p.m., at Orem, Utah
Saturday: CSI vs. UVSC, noon, at Orem, Utah

"If we want to win, we need to stay away from giving up the big inning," Walker said. "We match up pretty well on the mound with Utah Valley but we'll need to cut down on the walks."

Utah Valley is 3-8 this season, but hitting has been a bigger problem for the Wolverines than pitching. Utah Valley has two solid pitchers in freshman Shane Reedy and sophomore James Dayley and a good blend of youth and experience. Reedy's fastball can reach 90 mph and Dayley is capable of dominating a game.

"They have a great pair of one and two pitchers," Walker said. "They're going to live on the outside half of the plate against us and we've been working on that. We can hit a little bit but it could be tough."

Sophomore Craig Kilshaw will likely start the first game for CSI and freshman Andy Myette should be on the mound in the second game. The Eagles are also moving freshman Matt Gunning from right field to first base and sophomore Sydney deJong will start in center field instead of Chris Westburg, who is moving over to replace Gunning.

"Defense and pitching are how you win," Walker said. "We can find a way to manufacture runs and we're getting better at finding our strike zone. We'll just have to wait and see how it works out."

Kitna goes to Bengals; Seattle cuts Kennedy

By The Associated Press

Around the NFL

Both veterans were cut Thursday after long, distinguished careers with their teams.

The Seahawks released their eight-time Pro Bowl defensive tackle two days before he was to receive a $2 million roster bonus. Seattle signed free agent John Randle last week after his release by Minnesota, and Randle will take Kennedy's place on the defensive line.

Kennedy's salary was to count $7.3 million against the cap next season. He was to earn $4.5 million in the final year of his contract in Seattle, where he was the 1992 NFL Defensive Player of the Year.

"Cortez has accomplished a great deal for this franchise over the last decade," coach-general manager Mike Holmgren said. "He has always handled himself with class and been a dedicated member of the Seahawks."

Inside linebacker Kirkland, also 32, was cut in part because the Steelers needed money to sign former Lions guard Jeff Hartings to a $24.75 million, six-year contract to replace seven-time All-Pro center Dermontti Dawson.

Once the Steelers' highest-paid player, Kirkland was to have made a base salary of $4.775 million in 2001 and had a cap value of $5.745 million – or about 1-12th of the Steelers' total cap.

Kirkland indicated he probably would sign elsewhere, preferably with a team that "may be closer to the Super Bowl."

Cincinnati found a quarterback to compete with the disappointing Akili Smith, signing Jon Kitna, who lost his starting job last season in Seattle. Kitna agreed to a four-year contract with a $4 million signing bonus. The deal is expected to be for close to $10 million.

"When they called my agent at 5:01 in the morning on the first day of free agency, that put the message right there that they were serious about it," said Kitna, 28.

Kitna is the second free agent signed this week by the Bengals, who were farther under the salary cap than any other team. Former Minnesota defensive tackle Tony Williams signed Tuesday.

Tiki Barber, whose rushing and receiving helped the Giants win the NFC, re-signed for six years and $24 million, with a $7 million signing bonus.

game were on. They just kept playing hard and giving everything they had."

Following Kortisova's basket, the Golden Eagles went back to their physical, trapping, harassing defense that had baffled the Lady Vikings the entire game. Ricks called a timeout with 36.7 seconds left, then inbounded the ball to Wilcox. It had been Wilcox, who single handedly brought the Vikings back from near-death with a pair of 3-pointers to first tie, then take the lead (63-62) in the final 4:28.

But the Rexburg-native's luck ran dry as she dribbled out to center court before losing the ball to a cat-quick Crystal Hardcastle, who pounced on the loose ball before signaling a timeout with 26.7 seconds left.

"I'm playing D, and then all of a sudden the ball's wide open," Hardcastle said. "I jumped on it."

From there, Hardcastle and Jinga Gosschalk played keep away in the backcourt before Gosschalk was fouled with 9.4 seconds showing. The sophomore hit one of two free throws for the 69-67 advantage.

As Gosschalk's second shot caromed off the rim, however, CSI post Elisha Booth was whistled for an over-the-back foul, which put 80 percent free throw shooter Lindsey Johnson on the stripe for the chance to tie. But Johnson missed both attempts and Hardcastle raced downcourt with the errant ball before being yanked from behind with 3.9 seconds left.

She netted both shots for the four-point margin as all Ricks could do was target a shot from halfcourt. The horn sounded and a mass of gold-and-black uniforms celebrated in the free-throw circle.

"It's awesome," Hardcastle said. "We're the underdog and we've been that all season. So we just decided, 'Why hold anything back now?'" final three minutes in succumbing to fourth-seed Salt Lake (23-8) 74-63.

At the five-minute mark, Dixie forward Nicki Howard mixed verbal jabs with Salt Lake guard Lisa DeVries, who responded with a shove, receiving a technical. But Dixie's lack of offense spelled its demise as the Bruins made 10-of-16 free throws to seal the victory.

SLCC's Hansen had a game-high 21 points. DeVries added 12, Mata Tukafu 11 and Lindsey Karren posted a double-double with 10 points and 11 rebounds.

Candace Baldwin led Dixie State (19-12) with 14 points and 11 rebounds. Howard added 12 points with 11 boards and Suzanne Jolley put in 11 points.

No. 3 Utah Valley State 50, No. 6 North Idaho College 48

Ashleigh Chamberlain poured in a team-high double-double with 14 points and 12 rebounds as third-seed Utah Valley State College (22-9) held off North Idaho College 50-48.

The Cardinals (16-14) had a last chance to tie after UVSC guard Mickey Folsom missed the second of two free throw attempts with 7.8 seconds left. But an errant outlet pass to Amy Lewis sailed out of bounds and the Wolverines killed the final three seconds for the win.

Twins Amy (16) and Angie Lewis (14) led No. 4 North Idaho in scoring. Utah Valley faces seventh-seed College of Southern Idaho in the first of two women's semifinals today starting at noon.

All-Star

Lisa Patterson of Minico led the A-1 team with 9 points in the win. Filer's Jesse Lassen finished with 11 points and 7 rebounds for the A-2's.

The A-1 boys finished with the same outcome but by a much different means, pulling out a 91-81 victory.

The A-1's started off with an early 11-4 lead that grew to a 16-4 edge by midway through the first quarter. The A-2's got going on a Ty Popplewell driving lay-in and foul shot. That was quickly followed by a 3-pointer by Buhl's Jeff Walker that brought the A-2's to within four at 17-13.

But Justin Heatwole answered with a 3-pointer to take a 20-13 lead near the end of the first.

Burley's Kam Redder opened up the second quarter with two 3-pointers followed by fellow Bobcat Josh Garn's 3-pointer and a put-back to take a 38-24 lead midway through the quarter.

The A-2's came back to within ten points as Buhl's Sean VanElderen grabbed a rebound and put up the shot, 38-28. But the A-1's continued to build up a lead and play solid defense. The A-1's held a 52-36 lead going into the locker room.

The second half started off the same way, with Twin Falls' Brandon Nielson scoring five points in the opening minutes. The A-1 held a 22 point lead by the end of the third quarter behind nine points by Jerome's Brad Stokes.

Jacoby Fox of Declo opened the fourth quarter with a 3-pointer from the corner to close the lead, but the A-1 defense was able to hold and the game ended 91-81.

Cal Ripken league holds observation on Saturday

TWIN FALLS – An observation for Cal Ripken baseball leagues will be held on Saturday at Harmon Park's No. 3 diamond. Times are noon for 9- and 10-year-olds and 3 p.m. for 11- and 12-year-olds.

Registration forms, birth certificates and a $50 fee will be required one hour before designated observation times. Due to a limited number of teams, registration will be on a first-come basis.

For those unable to attend Saturday, a second observation day will be held March 14 at 5:30 p.m.

For more information, call Kim Pullin at 734-8455, or Pete Turner at 734-7643.

BUHL – The Buhl Lady Indians will hold their annual Father/Daughter Basketball Game today at 6:30 p.m. in the Buhl Middle School gym.

The game is for freshman, J.V and varsity girls' basketball players to play against their fathers. The mothers will be involved in a shooting contest at halftime of the game and may be involved in the actual game if they desire.

Admission is free and the public is encouraged to attend. Parents are asked to bring a dessert for a post-game social. For more information, contact Joe Shepard at 543-8292.

St. Patrick's Run & Walk set for Saturday

HAGERMAN – The annual St. Patrick's Day Run & Walk will be held Saturday at Malad Gorge State Park starting at 10 a.m. in the picnic area.

Malad Gorge State Park is located off I-84 at Exit 147 (the Tuttle exit). Entry fee is $15 if signed up March 6 and $20 id registering after that. Race-day registration starts at 8:30 a.m. in the picnic shelter. Entry fee includes a t-shirt and the postrace party, which will include smoked trout for lunch. Non-participants can eat for $4.

Run routes of 5.5 and 3.5 miles and a walking route of 3.5 miles are available. Proceeds from the event go towards Hagerman Valley community projects and the construction of scenic overlooks at Malad Gorge State Park. Call Kevin Lynott for more details at (208) 837-4505.

Pomerelle Mountain sets Competition X

ALBION – Pomerelle's Competition X 2001 will be held Saturday

Competition X is open to mountain bikers, skiers and boarders of all ages. A $5 entry fee and a Pomerelle release waiver signed by a parent is required for all competitors under 18. Trophies and medals will be given to the top three places in each division. Pepsi-Cola will be giving away a snowboard.

The mountain bike competition will begin at 10 a.m., with the ski and snowboard competitions following at noon. For more information call (208) 673-5599.

Panthers trying to trade Beuerlein

Carolina coach George Seifert called Beuerlein into his office Thursday and informed him the Panthers were looking for teams to take the 35-year-old journeyman, a league source speaking on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press.

Beuerlein is coming off a rough year in which he threw for 3,730 yards and 19 touchdowns and was sacked 62 times, more than any other quarterback. But he played behind one of the NFL's most porous offensive lines; the Panthers gave up a league-high 69 sacks last season while going 8-8.

Shot put champion suspended

INDIANAPOLIS – World shot put champion C.J. Hunter received a two-year suspension Thursday for testing positive for the banned steroid nandrolone, and he reiterated that he has retired.

Hunter, husband of triple Olympic champion Marion Jones, was suspended by USA Track & Field organization after he chose not to fight doping charges brought against him by the International Amateur Athletic Federation and USATF.

Hunter, who announced his retirement in Sydney, Australia, last year, accepted the ban, but "vehemently denies knowingly taking any banned substance" and maintains he is "the victim of an otherwise legal, contaminated supplement," the USATF said in a statement.

Majerus turns down UNLV job

LAS VEGAS – UNLV has now been snubbed by two Ricks in a row.

Utah coach Rick Majerus followed Rick Pitino's lead and told UNLV officials Thursday that he was not interested in the Runnin' Rebel basketball job.

UNLV athletic director Charles Cavagnaro said he talked with Majerus about the job, but that Majerus did not want to come to UNLV.

"At this time he thinks the best thing for him is to stay with the Utah program," Cavagnaro said in a statement released by the school.

Over the weekend, Pitino rejected a courtship from UNLV and a job offer that reportedly would have paid him $1.6 million a year. UNLV finished its season on Saturday and is not eligible for postseason because of NCAA sanctions.

Majerus talked to UNLV twice before about the position – in 1992 and 1995 – and turned it down both times.

Correction

Buhl senior Ty Popplewell was accidentally not included as a member of the A-2 All-Conference team in a story in the sports section on Thursday. Popplewell was named to the All-Senior team as well being named to the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference honorable mention squad.

Senators overthrow Boston 5-3

NHL

BOSTON (AP) — Shawn McEachern and Radek Bonk scored two goals each, lifting the Ottawa Senators over the Boston Bruins 5-3 Thursday night.

Ottawa, which lost to New Jersey on Tuesday, has lost back-to-back games only once this season. The Senators are 10-3-1-2 since the All-Star break.

Joe Thornton, Brian Rolston and Mike Knuble scored for Boston.

Flyers 5, Flames 2

PHILADELPHIA — Keith Primeau scored a career-high three goals and Roman Cechmanek made 22 saves as Philadelphia beat Calgary.

Devils 6, Wild 2

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Sergei Brylin and Patrik Elias scored 50 seconds apart in the first period and New Jersey spoiled the return of former coach Jacques Lemaire.

Scott Niedermayer, Bob Corkum, Petr Sykora and Randy McKay also scored as the Devils won their sixth straight.

Penguins 5, Thrashers 3

ATLANTA — Jeff Norton scored the go-ahead goal with 3:37 remaining and Jaromir Jagr had two goals and an assist as Pittsburgh beat Atlanta.

Mario Lemieux, who had two assists, was on the ice for four of Pittsburgh's goals.

Avalanche 5, Blues 2

ST. LOUIS — Joe Sakic had two goals and an assist to lead Colorado over slumping St. Louis.

It was the fourth time this season Sakic had multiple goals. The last time was Jan. 4 against San Jose when he scored twice.

Milan Hejduk had a goal and two assists for the Avalanche, and Rob Blake had two assists. Ville Nieminen and Steve Reinprecht also scored for Colorado.

Lightning 1, Hurricanes 0

TAMPA, Fla. — Martin St. Louis scored with 59 seconds remaining, and Kevin Weekes made 20 saves to lead Tampa Bay over Carolina.

The Lightning have won three of four after winning only once in their previous 11.

The last-minute victory was the second straight for Tampa Bay, which hadn't won back-to-back games in five weeks.

Weekes has posted three shutouts in his last six games and extended his scoreless string to 113 minutes, 47 seconds.

Beltre needs surgery; Mets done with Sheffield

By The Associated Press

Dodgers third baseman Adrian Beltre will have surgery Monday to close a wound in his abdomen from an emergency appendectomy two months ago.

"Beltre will not be ready by opening day and it is uncertain when the 21-year-old third baseman will return.

"If you're asking do I think Adrian will play baseball this year, unequivocally yes," team physician Dr. Michael Mellman said from Vero Beach, Fla. "If you ask me when, I'll be a lot smarter after the surgery."

Beltre underwent an emergency appendectomy in his native Dominican Republic on Jan. 12 and hasn't eaten solid food since. The wound, in his right lower abdomen, has not healed as doctors expected.

"Now, we'll have an idea after the surgery how long I'll be out," Beltre said. I think it will be better for me."

Also, the Mets are done trying to make a deal for Gary Sheffield, general manager Steve Phillips said.

Phillips talked again to Los Angeles GM Kevin Malone on Wednesday night and came away convinced there was no way to trade for the disgruntled Dodgers slugger.

"There is really no foundation upon which to continue the dialogue unless something changes," Phillips said from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

In games Thursday, it was Texas 6, Toronto 5; St. Louis 5, Florida 4; Montreal 4, Los Angeles 3; Kansas City 7, Minnesota 5; Cincinnati 8, Philadelphia 4; Cleveland 6, Tampa Bay 2; Pittsburgh 9, Boston 8; Colorado 6, Anaheim 3; San Francisco 2, Seattle 1; Anaheim 5, Oakland 4; Arizona 6, the White Sox 1; San Diego 10, Milwaukee 5; Oakland 5, the White Sox 4; Houston 2, Atlanta 0; Detroit 3, the Yankees 0; and Baltimore 4, the Mets 1.

Weber State knocks out Idaho State

Lady Grizzlies move on in women's tourney

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Jermaine Boyette went a perfect 10-of-10 from the field, scoring 24 points to lead Weber State past Idaho State 86-67 in the opening round of the Big Sky tournament on Thursday night.

Boyette, a sophomore guard who sat out the first five games of the season for playing in five illegal city recreational games last year, also had six assists and made two of two 3-pointers.

One of those triggered a 15-4 run early in the second half, giving sixth-seeded Weber State (15-13) a 60-46 lead.

Doug Silva, who finished with 14 points, had helped keep Idaho State in the game in the first half, scoring his team's final six points of the half, including a 3-pointer at the buzzer that cut Weber State's lead to 37-31.

Rashad Kirkland led the Bengals, who were outrebounded 40-25, with 15 points and 10 rebounds.

Boyette, who is averaging 18.5 points per game in conference play, left the game in the second half with a flexed hip but said he wasn't badly hurt.

The Wildcats will face top-seeded Cal State Northridge (20-9), the tournament host, tonight in the semifinals.

Big Sky Tourney

Women's Tourney
Montana 76, E. Washington 55

POCATELLO – Lauren Cooper scored 25 points to lead Montana to a 76-55 victory over Eastern Washington Thursday night in the opening game of the Big Sky Conference women's tournament.

Third-seeded Montana (20-8) made a 20-4 run in the opening minutes to dominate No.6 seed Eastern Washington (10-18).

Montana led 39-21 at the half.

In the second half, Montana made a 16-2 run to take a 63-39 lead with seven minutes to go. The lead grew as large as 27 points on a layup by Cheryl Keller with 2:18 left, which made the score 74-47. Keller finished the night with 16 points, while Linda Cummings chipped in with 14.

Eastern was led by Jennifer Paluck with 12.

Montana will play No.2 seed Montana State in the semifinals tonight. The two teams split their games this season with each team winning at home.

Idaho State's J.T. Nelson, left, prepares to go up for a shot against a Weber State defender Thursday in Pocatello.

Another day for Knight

Rumors circulate about a job; fired coach says he'll sue

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) – If Texas Tech plans to hire Bob Knight, it's keeping current coach James Dickey in the dark along with everyone else.

"Tough loss," was all athletic director Gerald Myers said to Dickey on Thursday after Oklahoma State defeated Texas Tech 71-59 in the first round of the Big 12 tournament.

Dickey, who finished in a tie for last place in the Big 12's regular season, said he met with Myers on Tuesday and asked him face-to-face if he was going to be replaced.

Bob Knight

"He said he'd talk with me later," Dickey said.

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal quoted an unidentified former college coach who is close to Knight as saying that Myers and Tech president David Schmidly were in Florida to talk to Knight about the possibility of replacing Dickey.

In a report on its Web site, the Dallas Morning News quoted an unidentified source as saying the university had favorable discussions with Knight. It also quoted sources as saying a campus visit by Knight would probably occur before a job is offered.

The Morning News source also said the school plans to fire Dickey and buy out his contract, which has three years left with a base salary of $200,000.

Myers refused comment Thursday.

Knight, who won three national championships at Indiana, was fired last fall after he grabbed a student by the arm and was said to have violated a no-tolerance policy.

Knight, who has been spending time with the St. Louis Cardinals at spring training, did not speak with reporters Thursday. But Florida Marlins manager John Boles said, "I showed him around the place a little bit and asked him how he was enjoying the year off, and he said he wasn't. He said he'll be someplace. He'll coach next year."

On Thursday, Knight told Indiana University he intends to sue the school for slander and libel from his September firing, alleging his former employer cost him more than $7 million.

According to a letter obtained by The Associated Press, Knight alleges the university also violated the Indiana Open Door Law, inflicted emotional distress and interfered with his ability to find a coaching job.

"If the university doesn't negotiate with us, we have no choice but to sue," said Knight's attorney, Russell E. Yates of Denver.

Knight was fired Sept. 10 by IU President Myles Brand after 29 years as coach for violating its "zero-tolerance" policy. The firing came after Knight grabbed a freshman student by the arm, and lectured him on manners after he greeted the coach informally.

Knight had 180 days to notify the university of his intention to sue. That deadline is today.

Broncos swamp Long Beach St.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) – Abe Jackson scored 20 of his 25 points in the first half, including five 3-pointers, as Boise State routed Long Beach State 95-70 Thursday in the opening game of the Big West Conference tournament.

Making their first tournament appearance in two years, the Broncos (17-13) built a 24-point lead in the first half on 63.3 percent shooting and never looked back in winning their fourth straight.

Long Beach State (18-13) came into Anaheim Convention Center, as the third seed and lost for the second time in eight games. The 49ers never got closer than 18 in the second half.

The 49ers were led by former Syracuse player Ramel Lloyd, who had 34 points before fouling out with 4:27 remaining. Travis Reed, in his first season after transferring from UCLA in 1999, added 15 points.

But Long Beach State was just 18-of-37 from the line and Boise State's defense forced the 49ers into 15 turnovers.

Jackson set Boise State's single-season 3-point record with 81, passing Mike Tolman, who had 77 during the 1997-98 season.

Kejuan Woods added 24 points for the Broncos, including three of their 10 3-pointers. They were 21-of-28 from the line.

Five minutes into the game, Jackson hit three 3-pointers in helping the Broncos to a double-digit lead they never relinquished.

Lloyd scored 12 of Long Beach State's first 15 points in the second half, but when his spurt ended with a 3-pointer the 49ers were down by 20 points.

Big West tourney

Utah St. 74, Cal St-Fullerton 43

ANAHEIM, Calif. – Dion Bailey had 13 points as 10 of Utah State's 12 players scored in the Aggies' 74-43 victory over Cal State-Fullerton in the opening round of the Big West Conference tournament Thursday.

Shawn Daniels added 11 points and nine rebounds and Toraino Johnson had 11 points. Bailey made all six of his free-throw attempts as the Aggies went 16-of-24 from the line.

The Aggies (25-5), the defending tournament champions, will face sixth-seeded Boise State (17-13) in tonight's semifinals.

Harmon's season mirrored the disruptions that Fullerton faced in Donny Daniels' first season as coach. Harmon missed a month of practice with a stress fracture in his foot, then was suspended for the first two games. His foot never recovered and he missed almost a month with a new stress fracture.

Fullerton trailed by three when the Aggies put the game away with a 31-11 run to close the first half ahead 40-17. Johnson and Bailey each had six points in the spurt.

The Titans never got closer than 21 points on a basket by David Castleton early in the second half. They shot 30.5 percent and were just 5-of-12 from the line.

Leading by 22 points, the Aggies stretched their advantage to 69-35 with 2:46 remaining on a 20-9 run that included seven by Bailey.

The Aggies, used to beating their opponents by an average of 13.8 points, had already defeated Fullerton twice by an average of 18 points.

Fullerton's troubled season ended with nine losses in its final 12 games. Daniels, a former Utah assistant, worked under NCAA probation and sanctions and never saw his entire roster together because of injuries and suspensions.

Univ. of Calif. Irvine 71, Cal Poly-SLO 66

ANAHEIM, Calif. – Jerry Green scored 31 points and UC Irvine rallied to beat Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo 71-66 Thursday night in the opening round of the Big West Conference tournament.

The Anteaters (25-3), the regular season champion and top seed for the first time ever, won their eighth straight and advanced to tonight's semifinals.

Sean Jackson, the Big West's top long-range shooter, added 15 points – all on 3-pointers – for the Anteaters, who were outrebounded 46-36.

Watende Favors led the Mustangs (9-19) with 27 points, including consecutive 3-pointers that capped a 17-7 run early in the second half and put Cal Poly ahead 47-43. Favors had 13 points in the spurt.

Chris Bjorklund added 23 points and 10 rebounds for the eighth-seeded Mustangs, who were playing in their first Big West tournament since joining the conference three years ago. The loss was their sixth in a row – under interim coach Kevin Bromley, who took over after Jeff Schneider quit Jan. 10 when the Mustangs were 5-7.

Jackson hit two 3-pointers in a 9-2 run that put Irvine back in front 52-49. Bjorklund answered with a basket for Cal Poly's final lead of the game with 5:57 remaining.

The Anteaters scored five in a row to go up 57-51 before Bjorklund hit two free throws to draw Cal Poly within four. The Mustangs never got closer.

Green, the conference player of the year, hit 7-of-8 free throws in the final 58 seconds to complete Irvine's third victory over Cal Poly this season. For the game, he was 13-of-14 from the line.

Pirates surprise Hoyas in Big East

NEW YORK (AP) – Seton Hall, the team that didn't clinch a spot in the Big East tournament until the last game of the regular season, advanced to the semifinals with a 58-40 victory over Georgetown.

The Pirates (16-13) opened the second half with a 24-3 run and held the Hoyas (23-7) to half their season scoring average in matching the fewest points ever allowed in a Big East tournament game.

College basketball

Andre Barrett had 12 points to lead Seton Hall, which started the year ranked 10th in the preseason poll before going 5-11 in the conference. It is the Pirates' first appearance in the semifinals since 1994.

Georgetown got two points from its starters in the second half and finished 17-for-58 from the field (29.3 percent).

No. 10 Boston College 93, Villanova 79

NEW YORK – Boston College punctuated its worst-to-first march through the Big East on Thursday, ripping Villanova 93-79 and advancing to the semifinals of the conference tournament.

BC, which went from 3-13 and last in the league a year ago to 13-3 this season, made 10 3-pointers. The 10th-ranked Eagles (24-4) will face Seton Hall tonight.

Troy Bell, the conference's co-Player of the Year, led BC with 25 points on 10-of-15 shooting. Kenny Harley had 19, and Ryan Sidney added 13.

Ricky Wright was 9-of-9 from the field and scored 21 points to lead Villanova (18-12). Michael Bradley had 14 points and 12 rebounds.

No. 21 St. Joseph's 82, La Salle 74

PHILADELPHIA – Jameer Nelson set career highs with 23 points and 11 rebounds to lead St. Joseph's to an 82-74 victory over La Salle and into the semifinals of the Atlantic 10 tournament.

Marvin O'Connor scored 16 points, and Damian Reid added 15 for St. Joseph's (25-5), which will play Massachusetts in tonight's semifinals.

Rasual Butler scored 28 points to lead La Salle (12-17).

No. 25 Fresno St. 60, Rice 52

TULSA, Okla. – Demetrius Porter scored 21 points to help Fresno State beat Rice 60-52 in the quarterfinals of the Western Athletic Conference tournament.

WAC player of the year Melvin Ely, who averages 16 points a game, was held to a season-low six on 1-of-3 shooting. The Bulldogs (25-5) play Hawaii in the semifinals tonight.

Mike Wilks scored 21 points, and Erik Cooper had 20 for Rice (14-16).

Pittsburgh 66, No. 19 Notre Dame 54

NEW YORK – Pittsburgh threw a defensive curtain over All-American Troy Murphy and stunned Notre Dame 66-54 to advance to the semifinals of the Big East tournament.

The Panthers will face either Syracuse or Providence, who played in the second game of the night doubleheader.

Ricardo Greer led four Pitt players in double figures with 17 points as the Panthers (17-12) reached the tournament semifinals for the first time since 1989.

Murphy, averaging 22.6 points per game, managed just eight for the Irish (19-9). It was the second-lowest total of his career.

Women's Top 25
No. 7 Oklahoma 102, No. 20 Colorado 93

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – Caton Hill scored 23 points as No. 7 Oklahoma beat No. 20 Colorado 102-93 Thursday night to advance to the finals of the Big 12 Conference tournament for the first time.

Oklahoma (26-4) made eight 3-pointers in the first half and went on to tie the tournament record of 14 and break the previous points record of 98.

LaNeishea Caufield scored 19 points, Rosalind Ross added 17 and Stacey Dales 16 for Oklahoma.

Mandy Nightingale scored 22 points, Linda Lappe 18 and Jenny Rouilear 15 for Colorado (21-8).

No. 13 Iowa St. 73, No. 11 Texas Tech 62

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – Angie Welle had 25 points and 11 rebounds as Iowa State advanced to the finals of the Big 12 Conference tournament.

Lindsey Wilson added 15 points, and Megan Taylor had 10 for the Cyclones (24-5).

Planette Pierson scored 13, Jia Perkins 12 and Katrisa O'Neal 10 for Texas Tech (23-6).

Southwest Missouri State's Jackie Stiles shoots against Indiana State in the first half of the opening-round Missouri Valley Conference Tournament game Thursday in Springfield, Mo. SMS won 92-63.

No. 16 S.W. Missouri St. 92, Indiana St. 63

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. – Jackie Stiles scored 22 points as Southwest Missouri advanced to the semifinals of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

Stiles, the NCAA women's career scoring leader, played just 24 minutes as Southwest Missouri's defense held Indiana State to 37 percent shooting for the game.

It took Indiana State (10-18) more than six minutes to score a field goal in each half.

Erika Rante scored 15 points for Southwest Missouri (23-5) and Tara Mitchem added 14. Erica Vicente finished with 11 assists.

Kiwana Battle led Indiana State with 15 points, and Kourtney Mennen added 11.

Spurs come within a half game of Utah, drop Portland

NBA

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) – Derek Anderson scored 29 points and Tim Duncan had 16 rebounds as the San Antonio Spurs used a 23-6 run to open the third quarter and rout the Portland Trail Blazers 93-79 Thursday night.

The latest showdown between two of the West's best teams further jumbled the tight playoff race in the conference as the Spurs moved within a half-game of Utah for the Midwest Division lead.

Meanwhile, Portland fell from second-best in the conference to fifth.

Bonzi Wells scored 16 points to lead the Blazers, and Rasheed Wallace, who did not start, was ejected for the second straight game and for the fourth time in his last 13 games.

Rockets 99, Clippers 87

HOUSTON – Cuttino Mobley scored 16 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter and Steve Francis had 22 points and a season-high 15 rebounds in Houston's come-from-behind win.

Maurice Taylor, who had scored only seven and 16 points in the Rockets' two losses to his former team earlier this season, added 21 points as the Rockets matched last season's win total (34) and three games back of Phoenix for the last playoff spot in the West.

Hornets 97, Magic 84

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – Baron Davis had 23 points and nine assists as the Charlotte Hornets, playing without leading scorer Jamal Mashburn, beat Orlando.

Mashburn missed the game with a bruised sternum, suffered in Tuesday's loss to Minnesota, but the Hornets won for the 10th time in their past 12 games.

Tracy McGrady had 19 points for the Magic.

Del Greco toes line on golf tournament

Golf

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) – Al Del Greco lined himself up with the target, approached the ball with a smooth gait, struck it dead center and, as he has so often over the years, walked away with another easy 3.

Now, the kicker: He made par, not a field goal.

The NFL's seventh-leading all-time scorer played in the Buy.com tour's season opener Thursday, where he shot 5-over-par 76 – respectable, although not quite good enough to give up his day job.

Del Greco made the tournament by playing well enough earlier in the week to earn one of 14 qualifying spots.

The former Tennessee Titans kicker has made a living keeping his nervousness bottled under stressful situations. His first pro tournament, however, was a completely different experience.

"On the front side, I felt like I was in a cold sweat the whole time I was out there," Del Greco said.

A near scratch player who is almost universally recognized as the best golfer among athletes in other sports, Del Greco learned all about the difference between the celebrity events he dominates and the pro game, where livings are on the line.

"The biggest difference is when you look at scoreboard," he said. "Instead of one guy under par, it's 15 or 16."

16-year-old on verge of cut at Honda Classic

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. – Ty Tryon is on the verge of something not even Tiger Woods could do – take a week off from high school and make the cut on the PGA Tour.

Tryon, a 16-year-old sophomore who got into the Honda Classic as a Monday qualifier, proved he belonged Thursday with birdies on the last three holes for a 5-under 67, which left him only two strokes out of the lead.

Jesper Parnevik, Ben Ferguson and Geoff Ogilvy each shot a 7-under-par 65 and shared the first-round lead on the TPC at Heron Bay. Eighteen others, including Tryon, were within two shots heading into the second round.

Jen Hanne leads Welch's-Circle K Champs

TUCSON, Ariz. – Jen Hanna shot 9-under 63 for a two-shot lead after the first round of the Welch's-Circle K Championship.

Hanna tied Laura Davies' first-round record and came within one stroke of the tournament record set by Kristi Albers in the 1998 second round.

Hanna birdied the first hole of a back-nine start and three more before the turn, then charged to five birdies in a six-hole stretch through the 17th.

Skinner moves out front at Florida Classic

GAINESVILLE, Fla. – Sonny Skinner shot a course-record 8-under 63 for a one-shot lead after the first round of the Florida Classic, the season-opening event on the Buy.com Tour.

Skinner, who had eight birdies, needed just 22 putts to set the course record at Gainesville Country Club.

Australian Rod Pampling was second with a 7-under 64, and Jason Hill was third with a 65. Heath Slocum and Ryuji Imada shared fourth place at 5-under 66.

Rios survives shaky start, advances to quarterfinal

Tennis

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) – For the first time since he won the season opener in Dohar, Qatar, Marcelo Rios has advanced to the quarterfinal of an ATP tournament.

The 25-year-old Chilean, seeded seventh, defeated Rainer Schuettler of Germany 3-6, 6-3, 6-2 Thursday in the second round of the Franklin Templeton Classic.

The tournament already had lost its top two seeds – Pete Sampras and Andre Agassi – to first-round upsets, and Rios seemed in trouble too after a wild first set in which no player could hold serve for five consecutive games.

Rios, though, never lost serve again, growing steadier as the 23-year-old Schuettler succumbed to mistakes.

Earlier Thursday, Francisco Clavet of Spain, who upset second-seeded Guillermo Canas 7-6 (5), 7-5 to advance to the quarterfinals for the third time this season.

Lapentti, Rusedski out at Citrix Championship

A day after No. 3 Carlos Moya and No. 6 Alex Calatrava lost to qualifiers, second-seeded Lapentti lost to Belgium's Xavier Malisse 6-3, 6-4 in a match that lasted just 74 minutes.

Lapentti, who has yet to win consecutive matches this season, broke Malisse in the first game of the first set. But Malisse broke back to tie it 1-1 and again to lead 3-1.

Rodent racing sweeps U.K.

Hamster races replace horse racing during disease scare

LONDON (AP) – Horse racing is barely back after a one-week suspension, its premier event has been postponed indefinitely, and major international rugby matches are being called off. With an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease leaving British sports in disarray, what's a gambler to do?

Well, at least the hamsters are running.

In this nation of inveterate bettors, the wagering world is getting creative – or maybe a little desperate – as a severe outbreak of the livestock ailment has quieted the action at the gambling parlors that dot the streets of most major British cities.

"We've been running hamsters in these little dragsters," said Ed Pownall, a spokesman for the online company, Blue Square. "You put an exercise wheel in the middle of a 10-inch-long dragster. As they run in the wheel it moves the thing forward."

The hamsters race in a small studio in north London, and the action is broadcast live on the company's Web site.

Blue Square has been taking between 300 and 350 bets for each contest – compared to several thousand for the average horse race – but Pownall said about 2,000 people have logged on to view each race.

A hamster races in a 10-inch-long dragster at a small studio in north London Thursday. Because of the restrictions on British horse racing due to the foot-and-mouth outbreak, an Internet betting site is offering hamster racing to keep its gamblers happy.

"It's just been fun for people, to get them through the day without the horse racing," he said.

The rodents run six at once along a 30-foot track – so far, the fastest time is 38 seconds. Today, the winners of each of the week's four races will face one another in a tournament showdown.

Horse racing was suspended for a week because of fears that transporting the animals through the countryside from race to race could spread the highly contagious foot-and-mouth disease.

The suspension ended Wednesday, but many individual events are still being called off, including the Cheltenham National Hunt Festival, the most prestigious event in European jump racing. Three games in the Six Nations rugby tournament have also been postponed.

"Betting shop customers generally are a pretty resilient bunch," said Andy Clifton, a spokesman for the bookmaking chain Ladbrokes. "If they want to have a bet, they're going to find something to bet on."

Idaho Power offers energy usage seminar

TWIN FALLS – To help building owners and operators conserve energy, Idaho Power Co. and the Northwest Building Operators Association are offering a free seminar, "Optimizing Energy Usage," from 1 to 4 p.m. Tuesday at Idaho Power Division Offices, 133 Third St. N. in Twin Falls.

Registration is free. But NWBOA asks those who plan to attend to call 345-3072 or send e-mail to nwboa@rmci.net.

The seminar will offer information on strategies for energy savings, preparing for an outage, energy accounting and other conservation techniques for commercial and public buildings.

NWBOA said it has been offering certification courses in building management and seminars for facility managers and building operators for 10 years. Its research, it said, indicates graduates of its certification courses have saved an average of 55,000 kilowatt hours in their buildings each year.

More MV employers adopt drug-free policies

TWIN FALLS – Two more employers have adopted employee drug-screening policies to join the growing number of local businesses in the Magic Valley Drug Free Workplace Project.

That brings the total to 60 local businesses and organizations that have taken a stand against drugs in the workplace by signing onto the project, a valleywide effort to recognize companies that have drug-free workplaces meeting criteria established by the U.S. Department of Labor's "Employer's Guide to Dealing with Substance Abuse."

To be eligible, a business must have a clear, comprehensive policy and provide training for supervisors; educate employees about the program and provide employee assistance; and use a policy that includes pre-employment, post-accident and reasonable-cause testing.

In addition, the business must be willing to be recognized publicly and talk to media about its program and submit its drug-free-workplace policy for review. For information, call Lisa Buddecke at 733-1300.

Potlatch lumber mill to reopen next week

LEWISTON – Potlatch Corp.'s Clearwater Lumber Mill will reopen Monday after being shut down for three weeks.

Company officials said they decided to reopen to serve customer needs even though market conditions and high energy and log costs have not improved.

About 320 people will go back to work at the mill.

Exceptionally poor markets for lumber products continue to plague the industry, and operating costs have been boosted by higher costs for electricity, natural gas and oil, Potlatch officials said.

The Lewiston mill produces boards, dimension lumber and cedar specialties. All operations, including the log yard, sawmill, surfacing department, cedar specializing and the shipping department, will open.

Zale Corp. crafts new strategy for recovery

IRVING, Texas – Zale Corp., which has had disappointing sales since the holidays, will spend the next several months tweaking its strategy and clearing inventory that doesn't fit the new plan, the company's new chief executive said.

Robert DiNicola said Zale's focus had drifted in recent months from its core bridal business toward promotions and fashion jewelry.

Zale's same-store sales dropped 2.3 percent in the second quarter and are down 7.4 percent in the current quarter, which ends in April. The company has a jewelry store in the Magic Valley Mall.

"We will write down inventory, lower growth expectations, get our expense structure back in line, improve the quality of our products – especially in the diamond categories – clearly differentiate our brand, and position Zale as the industry leader once again," DiNicola said.

The jewelry retailer said it earned $71.5 million, or $2.07 a share, in its second quarter, which ended Jan. 31. Excluding a one-time charge, it earned $87 million, or $2.52 a share, in the quarter.

That compared with $83.9 million, or $2.33 a share, a year earlier.

Rent-to-own chain comes to Twin Falls

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – A Texas rent-to-own chain that helps folks acquire televisions, sofas and the like without debt is on its way to town.

Rent-A-Center Inc., which aims to have 4,000 stores by 2005, hopes to open one of them in Twin Falls about May 1, said Mark Keeney, the company's Boise-based market manager for southern Idaho.

"We would like to have already been there," Keeney said.

One way or another, Rent-A-Center will come to Twin Falls, he said. He hopes it will be through a successful ending – perhaps by the middle of next week – to lease negotiations for a 4,200-square-foot retail building that Salt Lake City-based Woodbury Corp. erected at 1503 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

If it gets a lease, Keeney said, Rent-A-Center will start construction to finish the shell building to its own tastes.

"We like to have a real nice-looking store, really professional," he said.

The city already issued a building permit in late February for Rent-A-Center to remodel the Woodbury structure, listing a $27,000 value for the improvements.

Woodbury's small retail building was the final piece – at least in the current plan – of a major north Twin Falls development.

Woodbury was the developer for all of the Breckenridge Farms project between Cheney Drive and Pole Line Road, project manager Craig Crandall said in November, including the Target and WinCo Foods stores and the Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar and Jack in the Box restaurants, as well as the PETsMART Inc. store expected to open soon.

CONTINENTAL CAFÉ

The Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany – Europe is the last frontier for one of America's greatest commercial icons.

But can Starbucks Coffee Co. make it in the homeland of the leisurely street cafe? Is it even possible to sell Italians more double-shot espressos or make the French drink skim milk cafe au lait out of a paper cup?

After building a caffeine empire that stretches from Seattle to Shanghai to Dubai, Starbucks finally waded into continental Europe on Thursday, opening a shop in Zurich, Switzerland, the first of 650 stores Starbucks says it will open in six neighboring countries by 2003.

Until now, Starbucks has cashed in on bringing Seattle-style coffee culture to countries where coffeehouses were seen as exotic, even European, imports – the United States, Japan, Britain and even Thailand and Saudi Arabia.

But Europe itself is new territory for the Seattle-based retailer. And even chairman Howard Schultz admits hawking coffee on the continent can butt heads with Europe's proud coffee heritage, fussy tastes and aversion to U.S. commercialism.

"Before we came to the continent, we had to understand how the brand would coexist with the very strong coffee culture," Schultz said Thursday in a telephone interview from Hamburg, where he was speaking at a culinary convention and checking out the German market.

"The Europeans, in particular, are quite pleasantly surprised when they taste Starbucks for the first time, because American coffee has had a bad reputation for so long," he added.

So far, the signs look good, said Karin Vogt, spokeswoman for the new Zurich Starbucks, which is near the main train station and the university.

Starbucks has 665 stores outside North America and 3,302 in its domestic market.

Over the next year, Schultz said he hopes to have 10 more stores in Switzerland, which is considered a good test market for Europe because it mixes German, French and Italian culture.

Then Starbucks plans to focus on the rest of the continent, which has some of the highest rates of coffee drinking in the world.

Schultz declined to say how much Starbucks was investing in the new push, but said most of the new stores would be 50-50 joint ventures with local companies.

Retail sales disappoint once again

The Times-News
and combined wire reports

NEW YORK – The outlook for a strong spring grew dimmer for the nation's big retailers Thursday as they reported generally disappointing results for February.

While many value-oriented retailers and some clothing stores such as Talbots did well, other merchants, most notably department stores and apparel retailers including Gap, languished amid slowing consumer spending.

Analysts said it was clear that consumers, who have been spending cautiously since last June, continue to retrench.

"This is the new reality that we are going to most likely see going forward," said Michael P. Niemera, vice president of Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi Ltd. He added this was the most stores he has seen reporting declines since July 1996.

February is not a major contributor to retailers' profits, but it does indicate consumer psyche. Stock market volatility and high energy prices continue to plague Americans, and their confidence as measured by The Conference Board fell in February to its lowest level in more than four years.

While some analysts believe there will be a turnaround starting at midyear, Niemera is more pessimistic. He believes the climate will deteriorate further this year.

"This is the year of transition for slower consumer demand," he said. "Retailers are focusing on getting their costs back in line, waiting for the consumer cycle to turn around."

Meanwhile, the Labor Department reported Thursday that new claims for state unemployment insurance fell last week but are still at a level suggesting that demand for workers has eased. The government said initial applications for jobless benefits declined by 4,000 to a seasonally adjusted 370,000 for the week ending March 3.

With more people looking for work, consumers are less likely to be spending freely.

Department stores in general had disappointing results last month, with Federated Department Stores, May Department Stores Co., Nordstrom and Dillard's falling short of Wall Street expectations.

Sales at many discounters and warehouse clubs were in line with or beat forecasts as consumers sought lower prices. Kmart Corp. said sales at stores open at least a year, known as same-store sales, gained 3.3 percent, while total sales were up 1.4 percent.

With a rash of layoffs and uncertainty about the economy, shoppers were clearly looking for bargains. Discount giant Wal-Mart posted a same-store sales increase of 4.3 percent, with total

Aegon shares fall despite record results

BridgeNews

THE HAGUE, Netherlands – Aegon NV, one of the world's largest listed insurers, saw its 2000 net income rise 23 percent to a record $1.908 billion, helped by the stronger dollar and the acquisitions of Transamerica in the United States and Guardian Royal Exchange in the U.K., and beat its own forecast of 22 percent growth.

However, analysts said the announcement of Aegon's $1.3 billion takeover of U.S. retail giant J.C. Penney Co. Inc.'s direct marketing services had surprised the market, and likely caused its share price to decline.

"The acquisition fits well with Aegon's business, but this isn't the mega-deal many investors have been waiting for," said ING Barings analyst Margot van der Velden.

"Aegon shares are probably falling as the market expected the company to make a larger buy," said Effectenbank Stroeve analyst Albert Ploegh. He noted the investment community expects a life insurance buy in the United Kingdom.

The deal, which will make Aegon USA the largest direct marketing operation of life and supplemental health products in the United States, is expected to have a positive impact on earnings in 2001 and later.

The deal calls for Aegon and J.C. Penney – which has a couple of Magic Valley stores – to enter into a 15-year strategic marketing alliance in which both companies will combine to offer financial services products.

Aegon will issue new shares this year to finance the acquisition, representing about 3 percent of the insurer's total outstanding share capital.

Metal prices tarnish mine's future

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) – Plagued by poor precious-metals prices, Hecla Mining Co. is considering the future of its venerable Lucky Friday Mine near Mullan.

The silver mine is coming due for a $12 million to $15 million expansion to reach the next level of ore.

"At some point, we need to start on that development. However, it is difficult to justify at today's metal prices," said Vicki Veltkamp, Coeur d'Alene-based Hecla's vice president of investor relations.

The Lucky Friday has a two- to three-year supply of ore in the area currently being mined 4,900 feet below the surface. The expansion would extend the life of the mine by developing a deeper drift.

Hecla does not have much cash these days. The company Tuesday announced a $92 million loss for 2000 – its 10th straight year without a profit.

The Lucky Friday employs about 200 people in economically depressed Shoshone County, which lost one of its largest private employers last month when the Sunshine Mine closed.

Hecla has time before it has to decide whether to pursue the expansion, which would take about a year to complete, Veltkamp said.

"We've told the workers that our aim is to keep the mine operating as long as we can," she said.

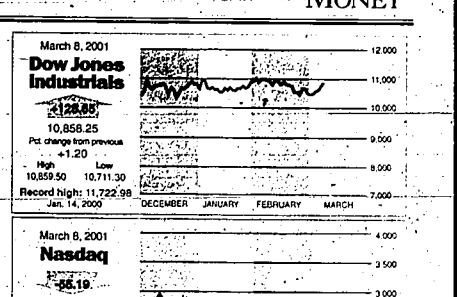
The Lucky Friday produced a near-record 5 million ounces of silver last year. It is the company's best hope for capitalizing on a long-anticipated increase in silver prices, Veltkamp said.

Chairman Art Brown said Hecla is looking for ways to improve its financial picture, including the possibility of a merger or sale. The mining industry is in a period of consolidation.

"It would help us grow, give us more resources and help out our shareholders," Veltkamp said.

Hecla's board may also ask shareholders to approve a reverse stock split to bolster share prices.

Hecla's shares have been trading below $1, which puts the company in jeopardy of being dropped from the New York Stock Exchange. A reverse stock split decreases the number of shares, in an effort to increase the price.



Blue chips soar, tech stocks slump on earnings warnings

NEW YORK (AP) – The Dow Jones industrials surged to their best close in three weeks Thursday as investors, nervous about the high-tech sector, added to their holdings of food, energy and other stocks perceived as low-risk.

The market's caution proved to be well-founded – after the close of trading, Intel became the latest big high-tech company to issue an earnings warning. The announcement pulled Intel and other tech stocks lower in extended-hours trading.

"I think people are still being more conservative and you really have to show earnings in this market to attract new money," said Robert Harrington, head of listed equity trading at UBS Warburg. "Technology just isn't doing that right now."

The Dow closed up 128.65 at 10,858.25, its highest close since Feb. 15 and its fifth straight advance.

Broader indexes were mixed. The tech-dominated Nasdaq composite index slid 55.19 to 2,168.73, while the Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 2.85 to 1,264.74.

After the markets closed, Intel said its first-quarter revenue will fall short of expectations and that it plans to cut 5,000 jobs, largely through attrition. The chip maker's stock fell $2.25 to $31 in after-hours trading.

The announcement came a day after Yahoo! reduced its own earnings outlook and said it was looking for a new chief executive. The tech selloff Thursday in response to that news ended a three-day winning streak for the Nasdaq.

Rental

If it becomes home to Rent-A-Center, it will house a selection of computers, appliances, electronics and furniture.

The company caters to customers who may not have good credit, or who may not want to be tied down by debt obligation, Keeney said. A customer can terminate a rental agreement at any time without penalty; if he or she comes back later, rental payments applied to the first item can be applied toward eventual purchase of a different one of at least equal value.

Don't confuse the newcomer with Renter Center, a Twin Falls-based family business that rents tools and equipment – such as scissor lifts, skid loaders and forklifts – to homeowners and contractors.

"We get calls on that all the time," said Scott Haskins, sales manager at Renter Center.

Sometime the callers are asking for Rent-A-Center employment verification, trying to rent a refrigerator or, strangely enough, looking for a Rent-A-Center store in the East. "I don't know if they're looking on the Internet, or what," Haskins said.

Sometimes, however, the mistakes result in business for Renter Center, Haskins said.

Rent-A-Center's Twin Falls store will start with five full-time employees – no part-timers, Keeney said that number could grow after the first of the year as the location's business increases.

Employee incentive packages include stock options for all employees. Entry-level starting salary is $27,000 per year plus bonuses. Store managers start at $35,000 per year plus bonuses; their salaries increase as the store's monthly revenue does, he said.

Rent-A-Center opened its second Boise store this month, Keeney said. It has acquired one in Pocatello, plans openings in Twin Falls, Idaho Falls and Nampa and is looking at sites in Caldwell and Ontario, Ore. All eight stores in the region will be completed by the end of the year, he added, "or my name will be mud."

The chain isn't immediately considering any other Magic Valley sites.

Retail

sales gaining 11.8 percent, lifted by purchases for Valentine's Day, including florals and candy. Consumers also concentrated their dollars on health and beauty aids, pet supplies, food and paper products and electronics, Wal-Mart said, at the expense of apparel categories.

Meanwhile, Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s results fell below expectations. The retailer had a same-store sales decline of 2 percent in its domestic business, while total domestic sales were down 1.5 percent.

Alan Lacy, Sears' chairman and chief executive officer, summed up what a lot of retailers have been reporting.

"February proved to be a challenging month with retail sales falling below our expectations as the impact of the slowing economy was felt across both our hardlines and softlines segments," he said.

J.C. Penney Co., which reported same-store sales last week, registered a 2.1 percent decline in its department stores. Total sales were up a slender 0.8 percent.

ShopKo Stores Inc. reported net sales for the four-week period that ended March 3 increased 12.3 percent to $247.7 million. Excluding sales of liquidated merchandise from the 23 ShopKo stores which are scheduled to close at the end of the first quarter, total consolidated comparable store sales decreased 2.3 percent, compared with a 2.9 percent increase from the same period last year, ShopKo said. Including sales from those 23 stores, comparable-store sales increased 6.5 percent, compared with a 2.6 percent increase a year earlier.

Mining town might have to give up city status

The Associated Press

GABBS, Nev. – This tiny mining community 140 miles from anywhere might well be Nevada's version of the town too tough to die.

Gabbs, population 405, came into existence during World War II when the military needed the magnesium that could be mined in the nearby Paradise Mountains.

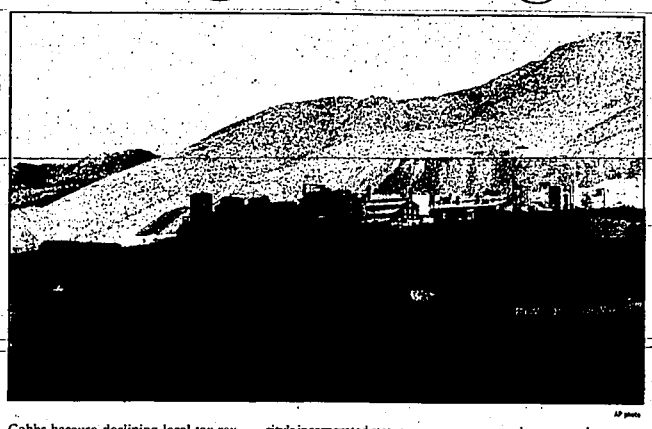
Mayor Ray Dummar

It has grown to as many as 1,000 residents and then dwindled again as the area's mining fortunes have flowed and ebbed over the years.

In a state where rapid population growth is helping create new cities, Gabbs is an anachronism, a quiet town where older homes sell for less than $20,000 and only the occasional tourist stops by on the way to the ghost town of Berlin 16 miles to the east.

But time might finally be running out for the only incorporated town in vast Nye County, 100 miles by road from the county seat of Tonopah and 366 miles from the county's new power base, the booming community of Pahrump.

State officials want to "disincorporate" Gabbs because declining local tax revenues can't support the operation of a city government. A bill is expected soon in the Legislature to do away with the city's incorporated status.



The city of Gabbs, Nev., is shown Tuesday. Gabbs, with a population of 405, could disincorporate soon. People in the tiny Nye County community are torn over the impending loss of cityhood but realize they don't have the tax revenue to support a city government.

Gabbs is on U.S. Highway 361, smack in the middle of a 63-mile-long stretch of road that serves merely as an artery between other routes, essentially going from nowhere to nowhere.

There's a cafe, a gas station, motel, store and bar. Gabbs is also home to the Tarantulas, the mascot of the K-12 school that serves fewer than 100 students.

Most residents are opposed to the impending loss of the town's incorporated status, but 40-year resident and Mayor Ray Dummar said they seem resigned. City Councilwoman Nora Toon said she fears that Gabbs would be just the first of many rural Nevada cities that could lose their incorporated status because of rough times in the mining industry.

"We're the poster child," she said. "We could dry up and blow away for all they care. I'm going to be so sad if we lose our city."

The town incorporated March 29, 1955. But its core business of magnesium – used in photography, pyrotechnics and some construction – was on the decline by the 1970s when cheaper imports became available. The next boom wouldn't come until the mid-1980s when a gold-mining operation set up. It closed for good in 1995.

The city's acute financial troubles began a couple of years ago when mandatory annual financial audits were not performed and bills, including a $40,000 annual payment for a new water system, went unpaid for a time, Dummar said. The city is current on its bills now, but the state Taxation Department continues to oversee the city's financial operations.

IMPORT CENTER

IT'S BACK!

We are sure by now you have seen the news about GM and their reorganization and the eminent demise of their Oldsmobile lineup. The search for a replacement line of automobiles was long and hard. Our goal was to find a line of cars, trucks, and SUVs that would give the people of Magic Valley the best quality and value. We feel we have some of the best quality, value and most competitive prices automobiles on the market today. So we would like to introduce to you the new Randy Hansen Import Center.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Good-or-bad-fortune usually comes to those who have more of the one than the other."
—La Rochefoucauld

Today's interesting duplicate deal brought good fortune to some, bad luck to others. Success or failure rode with how declarer handled his bad breaks.

West led his diamond 10 to East's ace, and East returned the queen. South won his king and tried trumps, East's discard bringing bad news. Added to the horrible trump development was South's heart void. Apparently South had to cope with a trump loser and three minor-suit losers.

Those who relied on hopes of a defensive error were not rewarded. They played four rounds of trumps, giving West his natural trump trick. West led a diamond to East's jack, and East switched to a fourth-best club deuce. Knowing South held seven spades, three diamonds and three clubs, West "saw" South's heart void. And when South ran the trumps, West warned partner to hold clubs by discarding his heart king. Eventually, South conceded a club, sending the game one down.

The successful declarers adopted a legitimate line of play. Instead of continuing in trumps, they conceded a diamond at trick four. East won and shifted to the same club deuce. However, barring a falsecard, this time South had the count. It didn't matter whether East's club deuce was truthful or not — South's only chance rested with West's holding five minor-suit cards. So South cashed his black-suit winners and gave West his trump trick. West had to lead a heart to South's "dead dummy," and South made the best of his luck—both good and bad.
