HOOVER FRIENDS RECITE DEEDS OF

Those Close to Administration
Lauder Claim He Has Achieved Large Proportion Of The Things He Desires

WASHINGTON, July 23 (UP)—
Happy days are here for President Hoover. Congress has just adjustured after nearly 18 months of almost continuous session. It was often turbulent and it threw more bricks than flowers at the White House.

Now for the first time in the administration, the President holds the floor at Washington alone. He is free to push ahead unhindered by criticism of congress.

His friends believe that for the first time Mr. Hoover will be respected by the opposition. In the past, there are counting majorities
upon his western vacation
trip to emphasize a human side of him which many feel has been hidden.

Clonus Neefe has promised to abstain to any particular side in the coming session. He is expected to be a stauncher supporter of the President's policy.

His friends believe that for the first time Mr. Hoover will be respected by the opposition. In the past, there are counting majorities
upon his western vacation
trip to emphasize a human side
of him which many feel has been hidden.

To Appoint Legal Counsel.
A preliminary hearing for William Baraby on his plea of guilty to charges of kidnaping

this morning at 10 o'clock.

Officers have received little concerning their questioning of Baraby last Sunday regarding the June 28 arrival of a woman in Salt Lake City December 31, 1928. Baraby stuck to his story that he was working in a restaurant in the city at that time.

On the other hand, Mr. Hoover made a long list of specific requests in his letter to the President last December, practically all of which were executed as follows:
Foreign debts—French, Austrian and German debt agreements approved.

BERG-CHOCOLATE

FIGHT ATTRACTS FANS' INTEREST

Al Singer Promises to Meet Winner; Little Action Is Due in Heavyweight Class; Striving to Battle Scott.

NEW YORK, July 23. (UP)—With Peter Cornaro definitely scheduled for a return trip to Europe, Max Schmeling keeps his words, championship safe in Germany and Phil Sostor and Willie Stribling billed to do their art in London, American boxing fans today looked forward to a "heavyweight" fight marquee.

The heavyweight program of recent months has produced such a plethora of foils and unimpressive endings that Madison Square Garden officials doubt the desirability of staging another heavyweight attraction this season, and they are making plans for a program which will eliminate the marquee.

There is only one heavyweight attraction which would alter their program—a contest between Jack Sharkey and Vitorio Campolo, in which the Garden has a financial interest. At present Sharkey is holding out for a $100,000 guarantee. Unless he comes in terms shortly and agrees to accept a percentage, the Garden's program for the balance of the summer will be:

Sept. 11—Young Jack Thompson vs. Jimmy McLarin for the world's welterweight championship.
Sept. 24—Al Singer vs. the winner of the Berg-Chocolate match, for the world's lightweight championship.
Berg holds the Junior-welterweight champion's title and Chocolate is recognized as unrecaptured king of the featherweights. They

Thursday will be spent mainly in practice. The remaining three days of the registered events program will be held. The city of practice will be allowed to give the contestants from outside states a chance to become acclimated to conditions, according to Sam Sharnan, in charge of the tournament.

Utah, Idaho, Arizona, California, Washington, Oregon, and Colorado have entered in the tournament, and many are expected to enter. Among the early participants to register were: Guy Chiseman, champion of Idaho; E. W. Hegro; Tom Schultz, Frank Knight and Otto Schultz of Montana and Carl Sebosa, of Wyoming.

Commission Meets

Adoption of a "no foul" rule and decision to discontinue his practice of making cash and merchandise awards to high schools, winning district and state football, basketball and track championships, were the chief accomplishments of the meeting here Tuesday.

TIME TO TAKE THOUGHT

As long as times were booming, our current industry and economic system seemed fairly easy to understand. Life was just one long process of expansion. Some new miracle had made the sky the limit for practically everything. Wages were always going to rise, sales records were always going to go higher, and business generally was always going to be better, each year, than it had been the year before.

It was beautifully simple, and it bred in most of us an optimism that was one of the prodigies of the age.

When things aren't quite so nice, this optimism gives way to a pessimism equally excessive. Sackcloth and ashes have their day. The industrial system that formerly looked so simple now seems complex beyond human understanding.

A good deal of the trouble, perhaps, grows out of the fact that our mechanical processes went ahead faster than our intellectual activities. We had never bothered to try to understand this queer combination of financial and mechanical puzzles which brought prosperity. Now we are being forced to think about them; it is no longer possible simply to take the result for granted.

The upshot probably will be that we shall get back on the highway to prosperity with a much clearer idea of what the whole business is about, and consequently a much-better chance of getting there, than was the case before.

For the present, however, the whole thing is very perplexing.

The chief trouble in nearly every line of business from agriculture to the manufacture of automobiles, seems to be overproduction. We have brought forth more wheat, more automobiles, more bricks, more suits of clothes, than can be sold. The result—idle farm lands, and factories which are working on a part-time basis, if at all.

But what is the remedy? A strict curtailment of production all around? This means that many farm lands and many factories must remain idle permanently. More serious than that, it also means that many laborers must do the same. Is that the only way out? If so, we are indeed in a bad fix.

The optimism that carried us along during the last half dozen years that there is a better solution and persuade us that there is a better solution. Somewhere there is a way by which we can rise to the utmost our amazing facilities for producing things, without, at the same time, clogging the channels of trade with a surplus. It is up to us to find this way.

OUR CLIMATE

NOT many sections of the United States are able to boast the sultry climate of southern Idaho. There are hot days here and there are cold ones to be sure, but little extremes of temperature. Press accounts of oppressive heat in the east and middle west can only be imagined by Gem State folk who sleep under blankets, enjoy wonderfully cool mornings, moderately warm afternoons and ideal evenings.

Then too, mild weather has other advantages besides the comfort it brings to man and beast: it is worth untold thousands of dollars to agriculture. Take away the elements of danger which comes from the prospect of flood, or scorching sun, or tornado and of bitter cold, and all agriculture prospers in the certainty of production.

Idaho does not claim to have the very finest climate in the world, nor is it given to boasting on the subject, but those who live here, find sweet satisfaction in its benefits, oftentimes unappreciated.

HOPE IN DISASTER

PRAGMATIC as it may seem there is a ray of hope in the loss of the grain crops in the middle west through excessive heat.

It is all very simple; destroy millions of bushels of wheat through disaster, the supply is lessened, the price goes up.

This old Supply and Demand business holds the answer every time. Very often it beats legislation, subsidies and other devices, apparently superior in soundness and organization.

HIGH IRON DEMAND FOR MIDDLE IDAHO REGION

SAMARIA, U. S. R. (CP)—and other minerals. Research in iron deposits estimated at continuing and already plans a $2,000,000,000 have been in the region for exploiting the rich iron deposits in the Middle Idaho region.

STORM DAMAGED MOUNTAINOUS REGION

one of the most important in the world. The storm caused an average of 50 feet of rain and 100 feet of snow in the mountainous region.

TIMBS WANT ADS GET RESULTS

About 20 kilometers from the iron deposits have been found.

The program submitted by the judicial council, after many months of careful preparation, hinges on three main propositions: (1) That the state be divided into four districts with more than four districts with a presiding judge in each district, and that the presiding judge and chief justice of the supreme court constitute a judicial administrative board for the state.

(2) That the probate courts be abolished and their work transferred to the district courts.

(3) That the judiciary be elected out of politics by providing non-partisan methods of nomination and election.

As an accompaniment of these methods of nomination and election, the council proposes that clerks of courts be appointed by the judges and that the savings effected through abolition of the probate courts be applied to increasing the salaries of the district judges, to attract the most capable jurists to the bench.

Instead of approving the council's plan for nonpartisan nomination of judges, the association voted to continue itself the nominating body. It is doubtful that such a plan would give a far more capable bench than is afforded by popular nomination. The Tribune recognizes that if this task is to be left in the hands of any one group of men, the lawyers are best fitted to select those who should provide to the courts. But even so, the bar association proposal takes the power of nomination so far out of the hands of the people that popular opposition to it is inevitable. It would be far more democratic to have the judges appointed by the governor or any other elective official.

After viewing the chaotic conditions in which the bar association has left the judicial reform program, it is difficult for the layman to understand why the majority of the Idaho lawyers are not interested in the reform of law and procedure. It arouses the unpleasant thought that perhaps some of these lawyers thrive best when laws are in a state of confusion and when defective procedure multiplies litigation and legal delay defeat justice.

Many members of the bar have respect for the traditions and feel a fair obligation to simplify law and judicial procedure so as to reduce litigation, needless public expense and delay speedily and efficiently. Unfortunately, too few lawyers are actively interested in legal and judicial reform and are content when they fail to receive support from their counterparts of the bar.

The lawyers of Idaho need to take seriously the criticisms and recommendations of those far-seeing and patient advocates of legal reform. Government reform measures are being proposed that demand a new conception of our common law civilization. The bewilderment of courts in Idaho is a built-in part of the work caused by the complexity and need of simplification. Legal delays, defective procedure and lawyers and judges lacking in knowledge and integrity are the chief obstacles to state progress.

Idaho is rapidly moving forward in its economic development and it is imperative that all governmental agencies, be more efficient, each in its particular sort of work. The state has a right to demand a more efficient, a more economical, a more progressive and a more modern judiciary. The 1930 meeting of the bar association can take the first step toward the solution of this all-important problem.

WHEAT QUEEN OF KANSAS EXPECTS PRICE INCREASE

Fair Return for Grain in 90 Days Foreseen by Mrs. Ida Watkins, Who Cultivates Five Thousand Acres.

SUBLETTE, Kan., July 23.—The "wheat queen" of the world, Mrs. Ida Watkins, who cultivates 5000 acres of this grain in the state, has no farm depression for wheat appears in Kansas. Despite the general pessimism prevalent in the southeast due to low prices of wheat, Mrs. Watkins says prices will go up soon, due to the holding up of wheat crops by farmers in this territory.

Out here where wheat is grown on a large scale and living expenses are comparatively low, farmers can afford to hold up their wheat crop until prices rise, Mrs. Watkins believes. But this is not applicable to the east where land values are high and where it is but a small portion of the crop grown.

Pausing in the job of harvesting her 5000 acres, Mrs. Watkins says:

"I leave wheat to West's." "Farmers in the hard wheat belt are holding most of their crop. They have made up their minds to hold the wheat until they get a fair price, and have arranged things so as to be able to wait. This southern country is the big wheat producer of the world. If it decides to hold for a higher price, the higher price will come."

"Let them grow other crop back east," she continues, "where land is high and combines impractical and where other crops will pay as high as wheat returns. Wheat is our crop out here. It's the only crop we can grow on much of this land. And we can raise it anywhere where there is any soil."

Mrs. Watkins, who formerly was owner of a ranch inherited from her father, has a large acreage of wheat. She says she has yielded $50,000 bushels of wheat so far this year.

So has a 25000-bushel crop. It is the greatest yield of wheat which includes some land which she has in addition to the wheat in farm, and she says she has a large amount of wheat stored almost as much as she can on the ground, where in this climate it suffers only a small loss in order to hold her crop at a higher price.

"I haven't decided what price I'm holding for," she says, "but I know the price is going to be high and I'm sure it will be a fair price in 90 days."

The grain of Mrs. Watkins' territory that she markets is lower, than the situation warrants, and can be forced up by farmers holding their wheat in this section of the state this year over the southwest, the "breadbasket of the world."

"I estimate that this section of wheat will average only about a third normal crop," she says, "and wheat is averaging only 10 bushels to the acre or slightly better, and it is not as good as the best wheat in the territory this year. Last year, on the other hand, we averaged 30 bushels to the acre. It was a very good year."

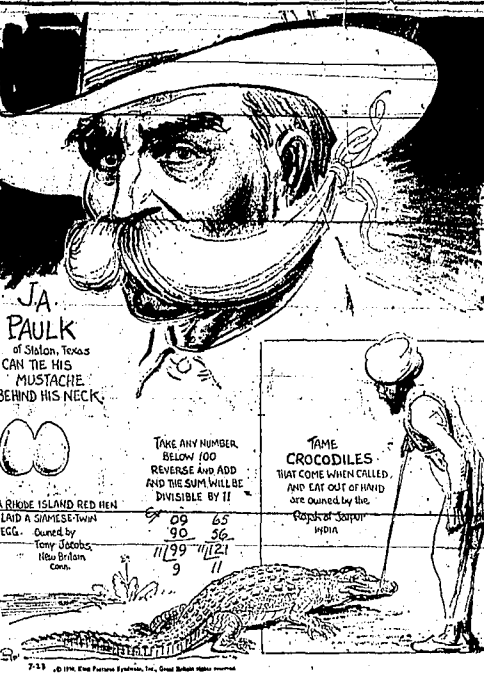

Mrs. Watkins points out that crop forecasts have been unduly loaded by the big rush of early harvest grain caused by the fact that wheat cutting this year was up to two weeks ahead of the usual date, and by the fact that the wheat from the south, which allowed harvest to go ahead without delay.

"The big wheat harvest in the territory is about over, for this season, so I think the percentage of production of the Federal Farm Board and the U. S. Department of Agriculture is likely to be a little higher than in previous years."

CROPS LOOK GOOD IN HANSEN REGION Hansen, July 23. (Special)—Grain crops are looking exceptionally well in this vicinity, the barley harvest being about 75 per cent completed, wheat turning in good crops to be harvested in the next few days. The amount of damage caused by the beet and bean beetles is not so serious as it might be. Some fields still look very good, and others very good. On the whole, those who let their crops stand, and those who have done at least as well as those who plowed them up and put to other crops.

LARGE ENTRY OF RAMS FOR SALE

Donations to Plier for August 6 Event Increase; All Shoop Aro Purebreds.

NURLEY, July 23. (Special)—Consignment to the Ninth Annual Shoop Aro Sale, which have been passed on by the committee now total over 100 purebred rams, and will be sold at auction at Plier, Idaho, on August 6.

This is the greatest gathering of purebred rams at one time in the northwest, and it is a sheep show of "real" quality. Breeders who will average only about a third normal crop over the state, and represent the tops of their flocks. Such a large assortment of rams, and all from purebred breeders, in the state makes this an annual event which is looked forward to by hundreds of sheepmen.

Consignors and buyers alike are anxious to get their rams to the buyers as early as possible. The buyers are able to see rams from many breeders and the tops of their flocks assembled at one point, whereas the average sheepman is obliged to search for their quality rams. They also have the advantage of a half rate on the rams, and are able to see the Oregon State fairground and from the sale, which also adds to this economical method of transfer of purebred rams.

RUPERT FARMER MAKES LAND PAY

Paul Rogers Obtains Unusually High Yields From 40 Acres; Uses Best Methods.

RUPERT, July 23. (Special)—Among Mindkino county's many successful and prosperous farmers is Paul Rogers who has produced unusually high yields from his forty acres of irrigated land located one-half mile west and one-half mile north of Rupert, through the situation of carefully planned crop rotation and proper fertilization.

At the time Mr. Rogers began farming, seven years ago, it was in very poor condition, rough, poorly leveled, and the soil in a low state of fertility. The farmer in this vicinity are hopeful for a good harvest. All crops are promising at this time. With slight delay the acreage planted to beans, there is every prospect for a good yield. So far no serious cases of blight have been reported for bean crops.

Sugar beets, while not grown extensively here this year have been fairly free from the ravages of the white fly, and will undoubtedly bring in good returns. Potatoes look good at this time. Hay and grains, while not especially profitable, look good. Sugar beets have already been cut and stacked, and a number of fields of wheat are ripening very rapidly.

Mr. Rogers has worked out a system of crop rotation by careful experimentation which has greatly increased his crop yields. He has increased his yield of potatoes from 100 sacks per acre six years ago to 250 last year. His beets from eight tons to sixteen tons per acre, and barley from thirty to sixty bushels per acre. For three years the land has produced 100-year-old potatoes, and one year in either beets or beans. This year as a means of building up the fertility of one field, he seeded food peas in March and when they were about 18 inches high on the 30th of June, he plowed them under and planted the land to certified seed potatoes for the production of his next year's seed.

He also uses a special broadcast method of sowing which varies as a nurse crop the first year, sweet clover the second year, and the third year, and then to his hayward, and a two-acre tract of permanent pasture. He also grows an acre of alfalfa each year which he uses as a natural fertilizer for his crops.

Mr. Rogers maintains a good herd of about 200 cows and raises all of the feed for them on the farm. This summer he is building a modern up-to-date dairy house, and expects to start a half-glass retail milk route this fall.

The gross income from the forty-acre farm and dairy herd during the year 1929 was $2689. No labor was hired except during harvest.

Mr. Rogers has a comfortable home, surrounded by a well kept lawn and shrubs. In addition to his farm activities he always finds time for country activities. He is a member of the Grand, and leader of a very successful 4-H Club. He has a family of three girls, the oldest of whom is attending the local college.

UNCLE SAM'S Planting Pointers

By H. Victor Lindner, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Shade in the garden is essential if we are to enjoy thoroughly the beauty and rest of such a spot in midsummer. In some gardens trees furnish ample shade. In others trees are lacking, or may still be too small to give much shelter, and a pergola will furnish shade and serve as an architectural addition to the property. Location of a pergola must be considered with the landscape plan of your entire property in mind. One of the best locations for a pergola is at the end of a flower garden to separate it from the vegetable garden. The pergola must be in its logical place so that it does not stand out as a feature isolated from the other elements of the garden plan.

MARINE BATTLE SCULPTOR STILL IS UNSELECTED

French Beaux-Arts Unable To Agree on Artist Who Will Care Memorial and Rejuvenate the Undertaking

DEBATE (Continued) —

The French Beaux-Arts, after looking over a score of projects, that there is not a living sculptor capable of carrying out the monument to perpetuate the great turning point of the early days of the World War, the first Battle of the Marne.

After making for models and studying the submitted designs, the government, through the Beaux-Arts, has decided to postpone for the time being all plans to build the monument, rather than erect one of the classic, an artistic eye, or a monument which falls to capture for future generations the spirit of their people's battle.

There has been much complaint that the Beaux-Arts' status of artist, and the Joffre monument, as well as of the thousands of war monuments erected in almost every French village, lack artistic virtues. The Beaux-Arts felt that the monument on the Marne battle field must be original and rule in conception. The designs submitted were declared to be too similar to the monuments in some cities.

Along the general lines of continuing supporting a monument. One of the artists called for an enormous block of granite, concrete, weighing about 200 tons, without artistic touch or any effort to touch up its unadorned mass. The Beaux-Arts felt that, making short of them were a group of hundreds of bronze or granite statues, figures could convey the impression of military importance of the battle.

Beaux-Arts officials estimate that $600,000 would be required to erect the monument. The work of art.

Made beneficiaries pay Wallace's story is not much different from that of many other towns that see bootleggers making huge profits—and the city getting nothing in return. The same thing happened over at Walla Walla, where two scores of men were convicted recently of conspiring in collecting bootleg money from salaried town employees and paying the city police force.

In each case, the government showed police officials saw to it that money was paid into the treasury. Wallace's corporate limits did not cover quick territory. Outside these limits are big mining properties, employing over 5000 men. The bills, including the town are covered with state police timber. It is just 20 years ago since a disastrous forest fire swept down these hillsides into the town.

The Wallace fire department, therefore, is maintained as a profit and that provides not only protection to the community, but for the

As usual in any big center of transient workers, the liquor trade grew. The city officials found themselves unable to cope with it. But here, they saw a chance for gain—for their city, not themselves.

... people pay no revenue whatever into the public treasury, yet they have the benefit of police, fire department and the bridges and streets they must build, was the thought.

Over at Walla, the matter was handled boldly through a city license ordinance for the first time. However, there was no ordinance. But money was paid by the saloon and resort keepers to the city officials, and they placed in the city treasury. Culver and bridges were built, fire department expansion was provided for, and Wallace residents—their taxes—spread a little more equitably.

This spring, however, federal inspectors came down upon Walla. And in a short time, there were more than 10 indictments, charging conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

At the Theatres

... in the majority members represented as being untruthful in reality one of the most cosmopolitan ever gathered together for one production. Miss Baker is Hungarian, Scaramo is Swedish, Edward G. Robinson, who has the role of the Italian boy, was born in Bucharest, Romania; George Davis is a native of Hologram, Hun China, the soule cook, first saw light of day in Canton, China; Harry Breen, assistant director, is an Englishman; Robert Ames, Lloyd Ingraham, Richard Carl and Anderson Lawler are Americans. The only Italian in the cast is Henry Armetta.

However, there will be no acknowledgment as to the identification of the various nationalities on the screen as the make-up department has each character who is supposed to be Italian of looking exactly that. The settings have been given all the romantic flavor of Southern Italy while a feast given in honor of the marriage of Loni and Tony is said to be a duplicate of similar affairs held in the old country even to the details of songs, dances, costumes and decorations of the house and grounds.

"The Real McCoy" a Charlie Chase comedy and the Paramount Sound News add to the program.

Misopatriotic Unhealthy

Frank, the Arabian name for Mesopotamia, has a curious name—between a name and a place, or the equivalent of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio. The temperature here is not very high in the summer to severe frosts in the winter. The country is unhealthful and the utmost care is required by those living there to escape the plagues which accost the land.

Rabbit Not Water Animal

A rabbit is able to swim naturally, but cannot swim for any great distance, because its feet become weighed down with water and drag it under.
