Incumbents face strong effort

Dairy, term limits interests back challengers

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Money talks, and this time the tale it's telling is which candidates a couple of interest groups want out of the Statehouse.

Based upon campaign contribution reports filed with the secretary of state, it appears local dairy farmers and a national term limits organization, respectively, are taking aim at a couple of incumbents: Reps. Doug Jones and Sharon Block.

Jones, R-Filer, is being challenged by John Wiggins for the Idaho House in District 23, which takes in western Twin Falls County and all of Owyhee County. Jones, the nine-term representative, has been linked to a bundle of dairy regulations put in place over the past couple of years. When a challenger surfaced near the end of the filing period, Jones became suspicious the dairy legislation could be a problem.

Rep. Doug Jones

Ron Black

Rep. Sharon Block

Wiggins said he's running because most of all he wants to support families, but the $6,250 he reported all came from dairy farmers or business people associated with the industry. A retired dairyman himself, Wiggins said Wednesday he asked the dairy folks for money.

"I approached them. I approach everybody," he said.

Federal, state officials back plan to reduce wildfire risk

U.S. Interior Secretary Gale Norton along with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman will join Western governors today in the Boise National Forest to champion a 10-year wildland fire reduction plan.

Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne will be among the officials backing a plan that describes measures to reduce wildfire risk. The plan focuses on managing fires, reducing fuels, and restoring and rehabilitating ecosystems.

TWIN FALLS – It's time to prepare for wildfire.

Wildland firefighters are training for the 2002 fire season.

The Bureau of Land Management trained engine operators this week. Drivers spent two days in the classroom and on Wednesday maneuvered fire trucks over rough terrain off U.S. Highway 93 just north of the Perrine Bridge.

Engine operator trainees were third-year firefighters like Nathan Higley of Rupert, who does auto body work when he isn't fighting fires. He said he keeps coming back because it's a good way to earn money and he likes the job.

"It gets your adrenaline up. It's never the same thing twice. It's always different," he said.

While no one can say for sure how the fire season will turn out, vegetation and dryness give an indication of the season's potential.

Judging from the amount of vegetation on the range, it looks like potential exists for an average season locally, said Steve Loucks, fire operations supervisor for the BLM in Shoshone.

Last year's tragedy at Thirtymile fire near Winthrop, Wash., is influencing training this year at all levels. Four U.S. Forest Service firefighters died after fire trapped and overran 14 firefighters and two civilians in a steep, narrow canyon.

The BLM's training protocol remains the same, but in June firefighters will see a presentation about the Thirtymile fire.

Firefighter safety and training policies have changed in the Forest Service as a result, said Ed Waldapfel, spokesman for the Sawtooth National Forest. They reflect a heightened emphasis on safety and training, he said.

Conditions on the forest are dry, he said. Several dry years have sapped moisture from the forest. Conditions won't improve without continual moisture throughout the spring and summer, Waldapfel said.

"I think we have the potential for a pretty active season," he said.

With increases in federal fire budgets, the Sawtooth this year was able to add more engine crews that will provide another 25 firefighters for the forest. The forest's Hot Shots crew will be on staff for an extra month in the fall.

Ads spark tiff in race for justice

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Responding Wednesday to what she said are inappropriate campaign advertisements sponsored by her opponent, Idaho Supreme Court Chief Justice Linda Copple Trout said she simply couldn't ignore them.

But her challenger, Coeur d'Alene attorney Starr Kelso, said he had nothing to do with the ads.

"I think if I didn't say anything, you might think I was somehow endorsing them, supporting them or had been some truth in them," Trout told members of the Twin Falls Rotary Club. "There is not a shred of truth in them."

"That's not my campaign. I have nothing to do with them," Kelso said. "I have not even seen the ads. I am not running the ads."

They were talking about recent television and radio ads promoting votes for Kelso in Tuesday's election. Some of the ads have claimed that Trout hasn't protected Idaho's water rights, has pandered to trial lawyers and also described her as "liberal."

Bush pushes terror fight to Europeans

Los Angeles Times

BERLIN – President Bush began a weeklong trip to Europe on Wednesday with a blunt reminder to the allies he will visit that they too are potential targets of terrorists.

His message was aimed at a Europe where, allegiances among officials not withstanding, there is a growing popular wariness about his leadership of the West.

But even as European populations show anxiety that the Bush administration is leading their

Police find Chandra Levy's body in park

Authorities seek clues to her cause of death

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – The remains of Chandra Levy were found in a Washington park Wednesday, ending an agonizing 13-month search for the federal intern whose disappearance riveted the nation and cost a congressman his career.

Police said they still had no idea how Levy died.

A man walking his dog and looking for turtles in Rock Creek Park found a skull and other bones, Police Chief Charles H. Ramsey said. The medical examiner used dental records to confirm the remains were Levy's.

The 1,754-acre park had been scoured by police before, to no avail.

Levy's parents, Dr. Robert and Susan Levy, who throughout the ordeal expressed hope their daughter was still alive, did not immediately comment. Family friend Donna Raley said the Levys "held out so much hope, and they've been so strong. It's just devastating to them."

A Stanislaus County sheriff's deputy delivers flowers to the home of Chandra Levy's parents, Dr. Robert and Susan Levy, Wednesday in Modesto, Calif. Levy, shown in this undated family photograph, disappeared 13 months ago.

Levy's baffling disappearance had gripped the nation for months – until last Sept. 11 – and led to the political demise of her hometown congressman, Rep. Gary Condit, D-Calif.

Condit denied having anything to do with the disappearance but he acknowledged to investigators that he had an affair with her, a police source said. Condit lost the Democratic primary in his district and is in his final months as a congressman.

He said Wednesday in a statement issued by his attorney: "Congressman Gary Condit and his family want to express their heartfelt sorrow and condolences to the Levy family. The Levy family will remain in our prayers."

Mark Geragos, Condit's lawyer, also criticized Washington police.

Kelso said that to the best of his knowledge, the ads were produced by a group called Idaho Citizens for Tax Reform. He said he has no affiliation with that group.

Idahoans For Tax Reform is a Boise-based group headed by conservative activist Laird Maxwell. Maxwell issued a statement saying the ads were an expression of the group's dissatisfaction with the courts' handling of tax- and budget-related matters, although the ads also target water rights.

Trout supporters said they were told that Maxwell's organization was spending as much as $100,000 to broadcast the ad during the final week before Tuesday's judicial election. The campaign finance disclosure statement for Idahoans for Tax Reform filed with the secretary of state showed the group collected less than $23,000 in contributions so far this year. If the financing for the ads was provided after May 12, the committee is not required under state law to disclose the source until late June.

Trout said Wednesday that Kelso also recently tried to file felony charges against her. A complaint calling for the charges – based on allegations that Trout went against the Idaho Constitution and court procedures – was rejected by Ada County Prosecutor Daniel O. Norris, according to court records.

Kelso said the charges were not a campaign stunt or an attempt to discredit Trout. Instead, they were part of his ongoing effort to get the court system to enforce a rule stating that judges must render decisions within 30 days of cases wrapping up, he said.

Kelso said the charges were also part of his effort to pry open the workings of the Idaho Judicial Council. The council has the power to discipline judges but works in total secrecy.

"This process started in 1997," he said.

Trout said there has been talk of opening up at least some of the Judicial Council's procedures and opinions, but such change would ultimately be up to the Legislature and not the court system.

Trout also talked about the state of and possible future of the drug court program during her speech to the Rotarians.

Like other aspects of the court system, the drug court program will see its share of cuts from a recent rollback of about $630,000 in the judicial budget, she said. But the program itself isn't in imminent danger.

Linda Wright, the trial court administrator for the Twin Falls-based 5th Judicial District, said drug courts here shouldn't suffer too much. If cuts do come, they will probably be in administrative and support positions, not the meat of the program, she said.

Drug court is a special program for nonviolent defendants with substance abuse problems. In exchange for pleading guilty to any criminal charges against them, defendants can enter the program – which typically lasts about a year. Defendants are expected to complete addiction counseling and meet other special requirements handed down by the drug court judge. Those who break the rules risk being sentenced and serving time on the charges they pleaded guilty to. Charges against defendants who complete the program and graduate are dismissed.

The program has been in Idaho since 1998 and started last year in the 5th Judicial District.

In Ada County, 120 people have graduated from drug court, and about 90 percent of them have since stayed out of trouble, Trout said.

In addition to curing addiction, the program can save the state money, she said. Drug court programs typically cost $11 per defendant per day, she said. It costs about $43 per day to keep an inmate in the state prison, Trout said.

Participants in the 5th District program must each pay $15 per week, Wright said. There are 60 defendants in the district's drug court program, she said, and about a half-dozen are almost ready for graduation.

nations into a wider war on terrorism, their governments have rarely been more closely aligned with American policy.

"Our alliance must remain tough in the war against global terror," the president said as he left the White House. Singling out each country he will visit, he added: "Even though we've had some initial successes, there's still danger for countries which embrace freedom, countries such as ours or Germany, France, Russia or Italy."

Bush arrived at Tegel International Airport at dusk, reviewed a small military honor guard and was driven to the center of Germany's capital for apple strudel, ice cream and coffee with Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder at a cafe adjacent to the Brandenburg Gate. They planned a formal meeting today.

The president's remarks set the tone for his eighth foreign trip as president and his first to Germany. Among officials on both sides of the Atlantic, there is a new level of cooperation on such pressing issues as arms control and the war in Afghanistan.

But just below the surface, differences percolate over what are seen as protectionist U.S. trade sanctions, nuclear proliferation – in particular Washington's concerns that Russia is not maintaining a tight grip on its nuclear technology – and the Bush administration's rejection of international treaties, among them the Kyoto Protocol against global warming.

In addition, Bush administration officials are privately pressing Germany to do more to block terrorist financial assets.

Wiggins has said if he were starting up a dairy today, he would go to another state because Idaho is too regulated. Since, he has tempered his remarks, saying the current regulations should stand until people can see if they do the job they were supposed to do: resolve odor and waste management problems. He has also said he believes the technology isn't developed yet to support the laws.

Wiggins has been careful not to run anyone down, however, or associate himself with any agenda.

Shots from out of state

Block, who was appointed to the House late in the 2001 session, is being challenged by seasoned politician Ron Black for the eastern Twin Falls County representative seat, position B, of the new District 24. And it looks as if Block's vote to repeal term limits is coming back to haunt her.

Mailings from a Wisconsin organization called "Americans for Termed Limits" are hitting District 24 mailboxes this week. The literature attacks Block for her vote on term limits.

But also, interestingly, the group also attacks her on the specific issues where her challenger, Black, has publicly separated himself from her: on Block's votes regarding annexation and public school funding.

Black said Wednesday he had no knowledge of the mailings.

"Somebody from my staff brought one in to me," he said. "I certainly had no connection to this."

In fact, Black said he was offended by one of the graphics on one of the mailings. It depicted someone pointing a menacing finger while saying "Sit down and shut up!" The implied meaning was an accusation that Block didn't listen to her constituents.

Block said last time her former district voted on the issue, term limits was turned down.

The mailing said Black supports term limits, but he said that is not his position.

"I have said publicly that I have no stand on term limits," Black said. However, he also said he doesn't believe the Legislature has the right to overturn the electorate's vote.

Black took $1,000 from the Idaho organization to "repeal the repeal," and he also signed a pledge promising he would never vote against an initiative.

Freedom of speech?

Ben Ysursa, who has worked in the secretary of state's office for decades and is running for the office in the primaries, said the legality of an out-of-state organization sending literature to support a candidate is cloudy.

The issue, in legal circles, has to do with "express advocacy" vs. "campaign finance." Congress just passed a law that outlaws the practice, but it went straight to the courts.

"It's a First Amendment issue," Ysursa said. "It's a fine line between First Amendment freedoms and disclosing campaign expenditures."

Ysursa said he has run into the Americans for Termed Limits group before. The organization tried to discredit U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, once on the same issue.

He even suggested that the message is so caustic as to backfire on occasion. And he indicated that the practice is a little seedy.

"This outfit is a master at knowing just how much they can get away with," he said.

As for Black, he's keeping his distance.

"I said before, I'm running on the issues. I'm sticking to the facts," he said. "I don't need anybody else fighting my battles for me."

Jury convicts ex-Klansman in bombing

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) – In the final trial stemming from one of the most notorious crimes of the civil rights era, a jury convicted former Ku Klux Klansman Bobby Frank Cherry of first-degree murder Wednesday in a church bombing that killed four black girls in 1963.

The 71-year-old Cherry faces an automatic sentence of life in prison.

Asked by the judge if he had any comment, Cherry stood, pointed at prosecutors and said: "This whole bunch lied all the way through this thing."

"I told the truth," he said. "I don't know why I'm going to jail for nothing."

The jury of nine whites and three blacks deliberated less than a day before returning the verdict after a weeklong trial marked by witnesses with admittedly faded memories and haunting images from the nation's segregationist past.

Cherry was accused of being part of a group of Klansmen who plotted to bomb Sixteenth Street Baptist Church, a downtown rallying spot for protests against racial segregation in the early 1960s.

He is the final suspect to be tried in the blast. In the nearly four decades since the bombing jolted the nation's conscience on a Sunday morning, two other ex-Klansmen were convicted and a fourth died without being charged.

The bomb killed 11-year-old Denise McNair and three 14-year-olds: Addie Mae Collins, Carole Robertson and Cynthia Wesley.

Convicted murderer Bobby Frank Cherry to prosecutors Wednesday in a Birmingham, Ala., courtroom and calls them liars after a jury found him guilty of helping plant a bomb in a church in 1963 that killed four black girls.

Their relatives sat on the front row of the courtroom throughout the trial, and several testified. After the verdict, many hugged the prosecutors.

Eunice Davis, the sister of Cynthia Wesley, walked out of the courtroom in tears, saying, "It's time, it's time."

"We feel like we can go on with our lives now," said another victim's sister, Junie Collins Peevy.

Cherry's family and his lawyers left the courthouse without comment.

The bomb shook the downtown area shortly after 10 a.m. as church members were preparing for a youth-led Sunday worship service on Sept. 15, 1963. The city's public schools had been integrated a few days earlier after a six-year court fight, and tensions had been running high for much of the year.

By killing young girls at church for worship, the blast exposed the chilling depth of racial hatred that black protesters faced in the Deep South and helped bring racial moderates off the sidelines of the civil rights struggle. Within two years, as protests spread in the wake of the bombing, federal civil rights and voting rights laws were passed by Congress.

Denise's mother, Maxine McNair, described for the jury how she was in the church when the bomb exploded. "My first thought was, 'My baby, my baby,'" she said.

Evidence showed Cherry was a suspect within days of the bombing, and he moved his family to Texas in the early 1970s as authorities in Alabama continued questioning him about the bombing. A retired trucker, he most recently lived in the town of Mabank, southeast of Dallas.

Cherry always denied involvement in the bombing both publicly and in a series of interviews with investigators.

But prosecutors reopened the case in 1995 and found five estranged family members and acquaintances who said Cherry boasted of his involvement in the infamous crime, the deadliest single attack in the civil rights era.

"He said he lit the fuse," testified ex-wife Willadean Brogdon.

Added granddaughter Teresa Stacy: "He said he helped blow up a bunch of niggers back in Birmingham."

Prosecutors also presented witnesses and secretly recorded tapes to show that Cherry was associated with ex-Klansmen Thomas Blanton Jr. and Robert "Dynamite Bob" Chambliss, the two men previously convicted in the bombing.

Defense attorneys argued that the links meant nothing. Everyone in the Klan could have been a suspect, they said. Defense attorney Mickey Johnson said those who claimed to have heard Cherry confess were all liars out to get a mentally addled old man.

House clears way for more terrorism funds

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – The House on Wednesday cleared the way for approval of an additional $29 billion for President Bush's anti-terrorism efforts and the military operation in Afghanistan, the latest example of Congress's willingness to open its wallet to respond to the Sept. 11 attacks.

The emergency spending bill was headed toward passage late Wednesday, though the timing of the final vote was uncertain.

The bill cleared its biggest hurdle when Republican leaders thwarted an insurrection over provisions they added to it that have nothing to do with combating terrorism. These included trade concessions to the textile industry and Medicare payment hikes for a handful of hospitals.

There was little dispute about the core provisions of the bill to hike defense and homeland security spending. It provided almost $2 billion more than Bush requested. There was also wide support for provisions to give $200 million in additional aid to Israel and $50 million to the Palestinians.

But GOP leaders had to scramble for enough votes to keep the bill on track because their party was divided over the broad question of how to constrain spending at a time when money seems to be no object. The dispute pitted fiscal conservatives, who inserted in the measure a governmentwide cap on spending, against powerful GOP members of the Appropriations Committee, who threatened to vote to block the bill from coming to the floor because the cap would undercut their power.

Meanwhile, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved a $31-billion version of the bill that also would inject Congress more deeply into oversight of homeland security policy. The measure includes provisions that would require Bush's director of homeland security, Tom Ridge, to be confirmed by the Senate. The job was created by Bush after the Sept. 11 attacks without the conformation requirement.

Report: 10M kids live in poor working families

WASHINGTON (AP) – The number of children living on the threshold of poverty in working families surpassed 10 million in 2000 after increasing throughout the 1990s.

The decade saw an overall improvement in the lives of American children, according to the annual Kids Count report. Being released today, the report compares states with one another and with the nation as a whole in 10 categories including death rates, poverty and education.

Country duo keeps winning

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) – Patriotic themes dominated an Academy of Country Music Awards led by Brooks & Dunn, who took home three trophies, including one for entertainer of the year.

Al Jackson also won three awards, including two for his patriotic anthem "Where Were You (When the World Stopped Turning)."

Brooks & Dunn, who also won for top vocal duo and top video, now have 16 country music awards, breaking the record of 15 previously held by Merle Haggard. "Playing for y'all is reward enough, but this is incredible," Kix Brooks said from the stage. "It's sacrilegious to even compare what we do with Merle Haggard," he added backstage.

Patriotic themes abounded, with an emotional Jackson, who also was honored as top male vocalist, dedicating his awards for best single and song of the year to the victims of Sept. 11.

Martina McBride, named top female vocalist, thanked country veteran Reba McEntire, saying McEntire "set the standard for all of females in country music. I'm taking this home in your honor," she said.

The soundtrack from the Coen Brothers film "O Brother, Where Art Thou?" won album of the year honors.

White House will receive Enron subpoena

WASHINGTON (AP) – Senators voted Wednesday to issue Congress' first subpoenas to the Bush White House, demanding turnover of information about staff contacts with Enron officials.

Lawmakers decided to subpoena President Bush's executive office and the office of Vice President Dick Cheney to compel officials to produce relevant documents by noon June 3.

Levy

"This is not a red-letter day for the D.C. police," Geragos said. "Gary had nothing to do with Chandra's disappearance."

In a late-afternoon news conference, Police Chief Ramsey said simply, "The remains found earlier today are in fact Chandra Levy."

The identification did not end the mystery. Ramsey said the medical examiner was working to determine the manner and cause of Levy's death.

He said the case was now a death investigation but stopped short of calling it a criminal case, pending word about how she died.

Dr. Jonathan Arden, the medical examiner, said he had received all the bones discovered in the park, but declined to describe their condition or say how long it might take to determine when and how Levy died. Arden said a Smithsonian anthropologist to help analyze the bones.

Levy, 24, of Modesto, Calif., disappeared sometime after logging off her computer about 1 p.m. on May 1, 2001. When police searched her apartment they found her wallet, credit card, computer and cell phone. Only her keys were missing.

Police searched intensively as national interest increased but turned up no solid clues. They looked at a variety of theories – murder, suicide or that Levy had gone into hiding or lost her memory.

They questioned Condit several times but repeatedly said the 54-year-old, married lawmaker was not a suspect.

Police had found evidence last year on Levy's laptop computer that she had searched a Web site for the park's Klingle Mansion on the day she vanished.

On Wednesday, bones, a jogging bra, tennis shoes and other items were found about a mile north of the mansion and about four miles away from Levy's apartment. Friends had said she frequented the park, located in northwest Washington.

Levy came to Washington for an internship with the Bureau of Prisons. In late April 2001, her internship was abruptly cut short when supervisors learned she was ineligible to continue because she had finished her college coursework the previous December.

A sociable, earnest student who enjoyed travel abroad with her family and staying fit, Levy was last seen April 30 when she canceled her membership at a health club near her apartment.

She had been preparing to return to California for graduation from the University of Southern California and sent her parents an e-mail on May 1 noting airfares for the trip home.

The Levys called police five days later when they could not reach her, and her father also telephoned Condit asking for his help.

Condit called Levy a good friend and established a reward fund to help find her. In July, he reportedly told police he was having an affair, though publicly he never made such a disclosure, saying only they shared a close relationship.

Condit, abandoned by all but a few Democratic allies, lost the Democratic primary in March to former protege Dennis Cardoza, a state assemblyman.

Within weeks of her arrival in Washington, Levy and a friend visited Condit's office, where they had their photo snapped with the congressman. He also took them to the House gallery to watch him vote. Within months Levy told family members she was having an affair with Condit.

After her disappearance, police searched Condit's apartment with his consent and obtained a DNA sample from him. Condit submitted to a lie detector test arranged by his lawyer, who said the congressman was found to be truthful when denying any knowledge about what happened to Levy.

A grand jury has been reviewing Levy's disappearance and whether Condit or his aides obstructed the investigation. The grand jury subpoenaed documents from Condit last year.

Portland voters: Keep controls on urban growth

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) – The Portland metropolitan area upheld its standing as a national leader in controlling urban sprawl by defeating a property-rights group's attempt to loosen controls on growth.

"This is a big victory, an emphatic rejection of the cookie cutter vision of the future," Randy Tucker, spokesman for 1000 Friends of Oregon, the state's leading advocate for land use planning, said of the Tuesday voting.

"Voters understand that regional planning is good for our air and water, protects farm and forest land, and helps build neighborhoods that are great places to live," said Jonathan Poisner, executive director for the Oregon League of Conservation Voters.

Voters faced two measures:

'Voters understand that regional planning is good for our air and water, protects farm and forest land, and helps build neighborhoods that are great places to live.'

– Jonathan Poisner, Oregon League of Conservation Voters

Measure 26-11, sponsored by the property-rights group Oregonians In Action, would have prohibited the regional agency Metro from setting minimum population density requirements within the urban growth boundary. With 86 percent of the vote counted, it was defeated by 57 percent to 43 percent.

Measure 26-29, a countermeasure from Metro, changes its charter to maintain control over urban density while requiring additional planning to protect the livability of neighborhoods and assure adequate services. It won by 66 percent to 34 percent.

Though its measure was defeated, Oregonians in Action spokesman Larry George said the campaign had revealed strong dissatisfaction with increasing density in urban neighborhoods, setting the stage for future change.

"We're thrilled," said George. "This allows us from this point forward to say to Metro, 'They don't want this kind of density in their neighborhoods.'"

The urban growth boundary first adopted in 1979 has been tested in the last decade by fast expansion, spurred by a growing high technology industry that has since cooled.

Oregonians in Action argued that Metro has been too restrictive in expanding the boundary, resulting in overcrowded neighborhoods, traffic jams and a burden on services.

Metro rallied all 24 mayors in the region behind its countermeasure, warning that easing density restrictions could allow sprawl to move into protected farm and forest land ringing the metropolitan area.

Union hikes fees for political fights

NEW YORK (AP) – Labor leaders voted Wednesday to increase union dues to build the AFL-CIO's campaign war chest by $25 million for November's elections and the next presidential race.

All 66 unions in the federation will be required to pay an increase of 4 cents a month for each of their members through July 2005 to fund political activities. Two unions opposed the hike.

"We recognized that the challenges facing working families have grown bigger and that our responsibility as the only voice for those families has increased 'dramatically,'" AFL-CIO President John Sweeney said at a special meeting of the federation's general board.

The increase is expected to raise more than $6 million a year on top of the 6.5-cent monthly tax per member that unions already pay to fund advertising, get-out-the-vote efforts and member education. The money does not go to candidates or parties.

DRINKING & DRIVING SHATTERS DREAMS

This letter was written by a woman to the husband she lost in an alcohol-related traffic accident. The man who killed him can't take it back! When you drive drunk, you affect more than just yourself.

Dear Jack,

I know this isn't your ordinary holiday letter, but I had to tell you a few of the things that have happened. You've been missed, and you have also missed so much. First, we got a new puppy in April. The kids love it, and I have to admit that he lifts my spirits a lot, too. We got him from the pound. He's cute, playful and getting bigger every day.

Sara graduated from high school in late May, right before Memorial Day. She looked so grown-up in her cap and gown. Wish you could have been there. She needed you. Now she's midway through her first year at the state university. It seems like only yesterday we sent her off to kindergarten!

Megan graduated from eighth grade in early June and is doing well in high school. It's been a bit of a struggle but she seems to be coming around and is keeping her grades up. She loves playing in the school band and even got to march during halftime at the football games. She misses you approving smile.

Chip is the one that needs you most. He has a girlfriend now, and he's starting driving. He took his driving test at the start of the school year and passed with flying colors. He's got a part-time job at the local market and is saving to buy a car. My heart feels numb when I think about it.

These are just a few of the things that have happened during the past year. There have been so many things important and not-so-important, that I have wanted to share with you. Sometimes, I just want to talk to you and hear what you think about this or that. But that's impossible now. All I have are memories.

I know you're never coming back, but I still feel you close by me. Is that so strange, after all the years we spent together and all the things we went through together? I can't help thinking of all our unfulfilled dreams for the future.

Well, I guess I've gone on long enough, but I miss you. You were the love of my life.

Your loving wife,
Lisa

Voters should give a bold thumbs-down to jail idea

After precious little discussion and virtually no planning, the issue of whether to build a regional jail in Twin Falls County will go to voters on Tuesday.

Twin Falls County commissioners' pursuit of the project has unfolded in a remarkably backward fashion. Voters should reject the proposal resoundingly.

There are a number of factors that voters should consider.

They should remember that the driving force behind this plan has not been Twin Falls County leaders, but investors from outside the county. The commissioners themselves have said these investors approached them, not the other way around, to study this county's incarceration needs.

This investment group, which includes an elected official from Blaine County, recommended its own services for constructing the facility on its own property. And even after rejecting the Norco building site, the commissioners keep consulting with these investors – who appear to be the only contractors under consideration to build the jail.

The tail seems to be wagging the dog.

Voters should remember that even if they reject the bond issue, the commissioners may ask a judge to approve the project anyway. This is an affront to every voter who doesn't want Twin Falls to be a mecca for miscreants.

Voters should also consider what Gov. Dirk Kempthorne told this newspaper's editorial board last week. The county's idea is to build a jail with extra cells, which can be rented to the state, the U.S. Border Patrol and other counties. But Kempthorne said any state use of county prisons to house inmates would likely be temporary.

The state is focused on changing the prison culture and cutting into the huge number of repeat prisoners. That will require education classes and rehabilitation programs that only the state can provide. Thus, future state prisoners are likely to serve their time in state – not county – facilities.

Meanwhile, the federal government may grant amnesty to 3 million illegal immigrants, thereby drying up another revenue source for the county.

Our view: Voters should send an emphatic message to local officials and judges that the proposal to build a jail is flawed.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

The commissioners have not formed an advisory committee to gather recommendations from local financial and business leaders. They have done no real independent analysis of the issue.

Nor have they campaigned vigorously for their own bond issue. They haven't made the basic case that bringing more prisoners in is better than sending the county's own inmate overflow elsewhere, as the county does now.

In short, this bond election is bound to fail, and the commissioners know it. The only real question is what they'll do once voters have their say.

Twin Falls County voters should send a message that this building proposal is a flawed idea. Tuesday's vote tally should make an emphatic statement that resonates not only with the commissioners and the sheriff, but also with any judge who might rule on the proposal later.

Despite what the commissioners have indicated, your vote does count. So deliver the message loudly. Vote no.

Carter embarrasses himself and U.S.

As ex-presidents go, Jimmy Carter is a fine home builder. Which is why – no offense meant to construction workers – no one should be surprised Carter embarrassed himself and the United States during his Cuban trip.

But then, there are many worse things one can say about Carter's presidency. At least now what he says doesn't matter except to those Americans – a distinct minority – who think an ex-president criticizing his country while on foreign soil is acceptable.

PETER A. BROWN

It would be a cheap shot not to give Carter credit for his unwillingness to trade on the Oval Office by making big bucks on the speaking circuit, unlike former Presidents Ronald Reagan, George Bush and Bill Clinton.

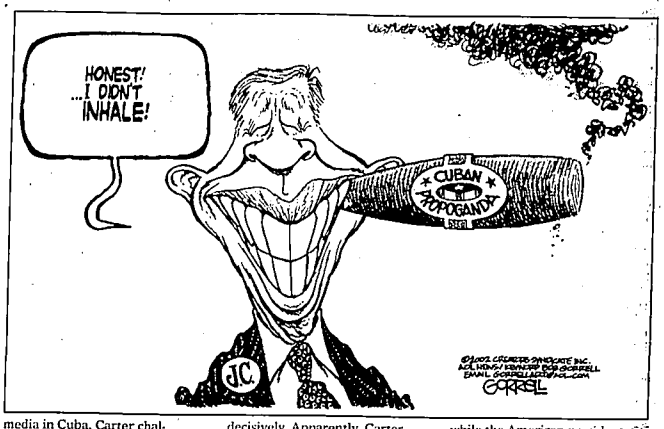
Instead, Carter has set a good example by building houses for the poor with Habitat for Humanity, and becoming a pleader for human rights and free elections.

If only he would confine his role to such causes. But he seems determined to show that the country made a mistake when it turned him out of office. Carter continues to peddle his worldview – which in many matters is at odds with the American people – along with his humanity.

That's why his occasional reemergence into the national consciousness is just political theater. He opens his mouth at the wrong times in the wrong places.

Carter, whose White House foreign and domestic policies were marked by a breathtaking level of political naivete, demonstrated in Cuba that some things never change.

He challenged the word of the U.S. government on intelligence matters while embracing a totalitarian dictator who played him like a fiddle. In comments to the media in Cuba, Carter challenged Bush administration worries that Cuba could be developing biological weapons.



Fidel Castro, looking for a public-relations coup, obviously knew what he was doing when he invited Carter to visit. Castro just had to read the newspapers to see how willing Carter was to undercut President Bush's foreign policy in the past.

Last winter, for instance, Carter sounded more like a former European leader when he derided Bush's characterization of Iran, Iraq and North Korea as "the axis of evil." The comparison is apt because Carter, like most European leaders, appears to believe that the United States should meld its national interests with theirs rather than give priority to our needs.

That was the approach taken by Carter, who, as president, seemingly never met a crisis about which he was unwilling to wring his hands without acting decisively. Apparently, Carter thought Bush sounded too strident in identifying America's enemies and worried about hurting their feelings.

No surprise. Carter offered much the same criticism of Ronald Reagan's solution to the Cold War – challenge the Russians to match America's military might or get out of the superpower business. Reagan's policy was dangerous, Carter said at the time.

Perhaps. However, during Reagan's watch, the United States and the Soviet Union began limiting nuclear arms because of Reagan's "peace through strength" approach, unlike Carter's penchant for whining loudly and seeing problems as beyond the United States' ability to fix.

Instead of provoking a third World War, Reagan's policies led to the unraveling of a Soviet empire that, during Carter's watch, expanded its influence while the American president boldly responded by canceling U.S. participation in the Olympics.

By comparison, let's give Clinton his due. He keeps up contacts with foreign leaders and criticizes Bush on domestic matters, but he is too smart to let himself be used by America's enemies. Maybe Clinton should explain to Carter that, on foreign policy, America speaks with one voice – the current president's – whether or not Carter likes those views.

Clinton was probably pretty steamed himself during his presidency when Carter used the bully media pulpit to criticize Clinton's policies toward Haiti and North Korea.

Although Carter's meddling is bipartisan in a bizarre way, it's detrimental to U.S. interests.

Woman was wrong in letter about wolves

Response to Donna Bettinger of Georgetown, Del., (published May 18):

First, it amazes me when out-of-staters feel compelled to direct Idaho citizens how to run their lives. Why isn't she driving to re-establish wolves in Delaware – surely they used to live there too?

These animals are not even close to extinct; she can import Canadian wolves, as these were – they have plenty. I hope she hasn't smaller indigenous wolves or coyotes in Delaware because wolves rid their new territory of competing carnivores. That also includes your pets and the guard dogs you suggest to guard our domestic herds, since wolves hunt in packs.

When we have worked for years to improve bloodlines and been fighting low prices and meat imports, its even more discouraging to have problems brought in which our taxes also pay for. If you breathe mouth-to-mouth to get a newborn going, money doesn't compensate for your loss. We also enjoyed seeing elk and deer grazing here and wolves made all the easy kills, pushing mothers and young into seclusion. No guests at ranches, none for tourists. A high price is paid by more than people for wolves' presence here. If you think it's all about money, you should be forced to watch a calf or sheep eaten alive – it's not necessary to kill them first since the pack can hold them down.

Your comment that it was "pushing the envelope" to scare people about wolf attacks. But in the same issue of The Times-News printing your letter (on Page C-3) it reported 17 attacks on people have been reported by coyotes in California, and a 3-year-old girl was dragged from her home. Wolves are stronger and larger and been handled to transport, reducing their fear and respect for people, making attacks more likely. I defend your wish to bring wolves into our country if you wish. No. 1 – Do it at your expense, not using our tax money; No. 2 – Import them to your state and you deal with the consequences and risks.

Your recent photo of a mother mowing grass with her two infants on her lap is appalling! You, the paper, should not be glamorizing a catastrophe waiting to happen. Instead, you should have notified the Child Protection Agency and have her investigated for endangerment of an infant.

Children of this age should not even be in the yard while mowing, let alone precariously perched on their mother's lap. I have personally seen two such situations end up with the child losing both legs.

Sharon Block chose wrong in trying to balance budget

Since when did biting the hand that feeds you become the way to balance a budget?

Sharon Block voted to cut funding to the College of Southern Idaho. You don't have to look far to see that CSI has been a strong partner in bringing new industry like Dell into our community. Finally, we start to see some changes from the minimum wage jobs with limited hours and no health insurance, and we can't get our own representative to help us out by standing up for CSI.

I think maybe someone needs to look again at what poor funding does to our community in the lack of job training and preparation. What happened to standing up for your own constituents? My vote will be going to someone who has shown that he cares about his community. I am voting for Ron Black.

Canyon development could be harmful to environment

I have tried to follow the proposals for the development of Quigley Canyon east of Hailey. What deeply concerns me is the damage to wildlife habitat and the ecosystem that this development could potentially cause. This currently uninhabited canyon has the most significant mule deer winter range left in the upper Big Wood drainage.

Winter range is the most critical habitat and determines the survival of the deer. It is essentially the last place to eke out a living when the deep snows and cold weather come. The hills north of the canyon floor (south sun exposure) have the right sun exposure for snow melt in the winter, the right mixture of vegetation such as bitterbrush and significant size to attract more than the 300 mule deer and some years up to 200 elk to winter. This has been winter range for hundreds if not thousands of years. Deer that spread out in the mountains in the summer will perish without viable winter range. These deer migrate to Quigley without ever having to cross a major road and have never been artificially fed. Most significant, winter range can never be replaced and, unlike elk, mule deer can't be maintained with a feed program.

A golf course and luxury homes in this canyon could threaten this winter range. People that I've talked to have told me not to say anything, that it's all about money and there is nothing I can do, but someone has to stand up for the wildlife. The Wood River Valley has a history of developing critical wildlife habitat – isn't it time wildlife got some consideration?

Hempleman would make a good commissioner

Marilyn Hempleman is running for county commissioner in the May 28 primary. The following are some of her concerns and stands. Our small towns and agriculture need good representation. She favors an elected form of county government as opposed to a career county manager.

To save taxes, Marilyn would consolidate services. She favors a new jail to save the $500,000 now used to house prisoners in other places. She wants a location away from housing and recreational sites. To retain sheriff deputies and other county trained employees, she would use the money from the "then-paid-for" landfill for a long-awaited increase in salaries.

Marilyn wants people to vote on issues rather than have issues passed by judicial order. She favors growth in the area but controlled.

Vote for Marilyn Hempleman for a strong commissioner who has the time and energy to study the issues and take action.

Channel has good programs for family audiences

There is a fairly recent addition to the free television channels in the Magic Valley area – Channel 27: KBAX-LP, America One network. It is not one of the cable options in our area.

This network has family oriented programs: children's shows, old black and white movies, westerns, hunting and fishing programs, monster truck-pulling races, go-cart racing, blue grass and western music, non-denominational church programs on Sunday mornings, how to train your horse, cow-cutting shows, some computer programs and other shows of these types.

Channel 27 has neither local advertising nor local news programs. There are one-minute "mini-infomercials" between shows such as "order a video to teach children good manners" or good music compact discs.

I do not watch much television because of the garbage on most of the shows on regular free channels, but as far as I can tell, this station is on 24 hours, seven days a week. There is no mention of where Channel 27 is broadcast from, and a friend at a local Twin Falls television station said he had not heard of Channel 27.

I would urge everyone to watch Channel 27 to see good television programs.

Grocery prices are getting out of control

I am an old, old woman. I raised my family during the '40s and '50s. I used to enjoy grocery shopping, usually taking the kids along.

Not anymore! There are items I just refuse to buy because of the prices. Not that I can't afford them, it's just the principle of it. For instance, all the time my family was with me, cottage cheese was 29 cents for a pound package.

Now I buy it, only when it's on sale. I will not pay $1.89 for it! And to pay $3 for a pound of hard cheese – forget it!

Now potatoes are cheap enough, but are we ever going to be able to buy them without dark ends? Do all the big white spuds go to make french fries?

Thanks, I just wanted to gripe. It's Friday and my day to go to the store!

P.S. I love to read Mr. Crump's gripes!

Donicht does a good job with school district

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank Dr. Donicht for the wonderful job he does for our children in the Twin Falls School District.

I admire him for the tough decisions he has had to make in the last couple of months. I know these were not easy decisions, but he did what was best for the majority of our students. Hopefully, our leaders in Boise will make better choices so funds can be returned to the school districts in our state.

Dr. Donicht, my children have nine more years in the school district. Please stay and continue doing what you are doing.

Vote for Ron Black to stop cuts at CSI

I am amazed that so little has been written about how the budget cuts to the College of Southern Idaho will have an impact on our community. Due to the lack of budget priorities the last several years, spending now exceeds income.

I attend CSI and am grateful for the opportunity it provides me to advance in my educational goals while still living at home. The cuts have not only impacted the school and its programs, but students are also feeling the harsh blow when looking for scholarships, tuition and extracurricular opportunities.

This year's election for state representative will have a significant impact on CSI and its budget. As it comes time to vote, one must remember that the budget received many cuts under the term of Sharon Block. A recent setback in our economy has made it even harder on our beloved school, and something needs to be done to stop more cuts from occurring.

For these reasons, I am casting my vote (and encouraging others to follow suit) for Ron Black and hoping that something will be done to cease the problem. He is someone that, as a legislator, has been very supportive of the College of Southern Idaho over the years.

Moon Wheeler is the right choice for new district

A friend of mine from Burley asked me why I was so insistent that the voters in our newly created legislative district (27) vote for Moon Wheeler to be our candidate for the office of senator in the Idaho State Legislature.

I explained: Moon was first elected to the American Falls City Council 45 years ago. He served very capably in that capacity – and with equal consideration to the people of American Falls when he served as our mayor. He followed his term as mayor as an elected member of the Power County Commission. These three positions gave him a clear understanding of our local problems. They were also the positions where he earned his reputation as being a representative of the people who elected him. His next elective office was that of representative in the Idaho State Legislature and then his most recent service as a senator in Boise. Not only is this his background, but he successfully operated a home-owned pharmacy and has a large wheat ranch in Rockland.

I would sum my reason for speaking for Moon very simply: He is familiar with the operation of every phase of government on a local and state level, which gives him a background that very few Legislature candidates can equal. Moon has a reputation as a man who votes for the best interests of all of us – not just Moon Wheeler. This is a virtue sorely needed.

Is 21 cents a day too much to pay for your family's safety?

The money that is spent to house inmates in other counties could be used to hire more police officers and keep our streets safe.

FACTS:
- Our population has grown 20%.
- The inmate population has grown 80%.
- We have no room in our jail.
- It costs $45 a day to house inmates out of our county.
- It costs only $8 a day to house inmates in our own jail.

It will cost a homeowner with a $50,000 home value about $17.50 a year....or 21 cents a day to build a new jail.

Vote wisely. It's YOUR money.

Health-advice seekers may need to be more skeptical

NEW YORK – Nearly two in three U.S. Internet users go online for health information, and many may not be applying a healthy enough dose of skepticism to the advice they find, a new study shows.

The Pew Internet & American Life Project, in a study released Wednesday, found that only a quarter of Americans who seek health information online always follow recommended procedures for checking its source and timeliness. Eighteen percent of those surveyed said they had used the Internet to diagnose or treat a medical condition without consulting a doctor.

The Medical Library Association, a nonprofit educational organization, recommends Internet users check who sponsors the Web site, when the information was last updated and whether the information is fact or opinion. In addition, users should visit several sites and consult with medical professionals, according to the California HealthCare Foundation.

Priest, others plead guilty to making 'date-rape' drug

DAVENPORT, Iowa – A suspended Roman Catholic priest pleaded guilty Wednesday to conspiracy to manufacture and distribute the "date-rape" drug known as GHB.

The Rev. Jeffery Windy, 31, faces up to 20 years in prison and up to $1 million in fines when he is sentenced Aug. 22. He was allowed to remain under house arrest at his parents' Peru, Ill., home until then.

In a plea agreement, Windy and five others pleaded guilty to conspiracy to manufacture and distribute gamma hydroxybutyric acid, also known as GHB, as well as possession with the intent to distribute the drug.

Officials trace chemical that sickened six to business

YONKERS, N.Y. – A chemical that poisoned six people at a dinner party has been traced to a bag labeled "salt" that instead contained sodium nitrite.

The mislabeled bag apparently came from a meat-curing business. The chemical is often used as a preservative in small amounts.

Commissioner Charles Cola said Tuesday that one of the victims had found and kept the bag when she cleaned out the apartment of a man who had moved back to Egypt. "The bag was factory sealed on the top and looked like it was unopened, but on the bottom it was stapled closed," he said. "These people opened it thinking it was a fresh bag of salt, and meanwhile it was a repackaged bag of sodium nitrite."

Baltimore girls school lifts publication ban on book

BALTIMORE – After a protest from historians and other scholars, a private girls school said it would lift a two-year publication ban on a social history of the school.

In a letter faxed Tuesday to the author, Andrea D. Hamilton, the Bryn Mawr School trustee board placed one condition on publication: a disclaimer that the book is "not an official or sanctioned history."

Some school officials were said to have objected to the way Hamilton depicted the school's role in the history of girls education. Hamilton wrote that although Bryn Mawr was a pioneer in challenging assumptions about womanhood, it had more recently "often perpetuated society's expectations for girls."

Rockwell's Rosie the Riveter painting garners $4.9 million

Norman Rockwell's Rosie the Riveter, the painting that gave an iconic face to the millions of American women who worked in factories during World War II, was sold at auction Wednesday for $4.9 million.

The 1943 painting became a cover of the popular Saturday Evening Post and later was taken around the country to help sell war bonds.

Elliot Yeary Gallery of Aspen, Colo., bought the painting Wednesday on behalf of Ranger Endowments Management of Dallas, an asset management firm. Two bidders vied for the painting in a telephone auction from New York's Sothebys auction house that lasted less than three minutes.

Mary Keefe, now 78 and living in New Hampshire, posed for the painting when she was 19. Rockwell used Keefe's face, but modeled Rosie's body on Michaelangelo's painting of Isaiah from the Sistine Chapel ceiling, Sothebys said.

Baseball teams look to go deep

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

Hungry.

That's the word from area baseball teams as they head off to their respective state tournaments.

With Class 5A Twin Falls and Class 3A Wood River both returning to state, "happy to be there" is no longer an option.

And Burley coach Matt Harr will try to put a book end state championship to the one the Bobcats won back in 1994. Then, it was his first year with the program; now, it's his final season coaching Burley baseball.

State Baseball Tournament

Glenns Ferry, which is ranked first in Class 2A, should also be prepared to go deep into the tournament.

5A

"With the same core of players back again, we are definitely not just content to get here," Twin Falls coach Matt Rasmussen said.

The Bruins (17-9) went out in two games last year at the state tournament but Rasmussen said the exposure to tournament pressure will help his team going into their opener against Eagle at 4:30 p.m. today at Borah High School in Boise.

"We don't feel the same pressure this year," Rasmussen said.

Rasmussen also knows that he is handing the ball to ace Andy Coats, who finished the season 9-1, allowing just one earned run in his lone loss.

"We know that we are giving the ball to a guy who can go out and get the job done for us," Rasmussen said.

Neither Coats nor Eagle ace Steve Alverson started either game in the Mustangs' double-header sweep of the Bruins earlier this year.

The Bruins held a 9-8 lead going into the seventh inning of the first game before dropping a 16-10 loss. But the Bruins committed 12 errors in the two games.

Eagle (21-5) won the second game 18-8 in five innings.

"We know that we can play with them," Rasmussen said.

Softball teams buckle down

State tourneys begin today

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – They've waited 27 games to get a second chance at Randi Cook.

Today, the Twin Falls softball team faces the Eagle pitcher when the teams meet on the Bruins' diamond to open the 5A state softball tournament in Twin Falls.

Cook (16-1) pitched a one-hitter as the 2000 state champion Mustangs (21-3) posted wins of 10-0 and 5-0 against the Bruins (23-6) on March 16. It was the first time the Lady Bruins had been run-ruled in a game since 1999.

They hope to make a better showing at today's state tournament.

"We're really excited to hit off Randi Cook. She is a great pitcher," said JoAnna Swensen, one of Tour seniors on the team. "Our bats have been coming around and we have been hitting the ball. It's going to be a really good game. Our team is a lot more confidence now."

Eagle is one of a trio of favorites at the tournament with defending state champion Lake City of Coeur d'Alene (20-7) and Coeur d'Alene (22-4) the other teams to beat.

State 5A Softball

District Four champion Highland (19-7) faces Idaho Falls (11-17) in the tournament's other opening game at 3 p.m. today with Madison (17-5) facing Coeur d'Alene and tournament newcomer Timberline (15-12) playing Lake City.

"We have no fear," Swensen said. "State is all about trying to stay as relaxed as you possibly can – going through the motions, doing routine plays.

"It's not the teams that make the great plays that win, it's the teams that make the routine ones."

And Twin Falls failed to make the routine plays during last year's state tourney. In their 0-2 showing, the Bruins committed 12 errors, including nine in a 7-2 loss to Lewiston.

"We had so many expectations on us that we didn't live up to them," Swensen said. "This year, we're a lot more relaxed and we have no fear. We don't have anything to prove this year. We're just coming in showing the state what we can do."

And on their home turf no less.

"You have a bigger advantage at your home field. Your fans will be here cheering, you know the fields, it makes us want to show off our stuff in front of our hometown," senior Brytany Schaal said.

Especially for the four seniors.

"We definitely want to go out on a bang, not like last year," pitcher Briana Allen said.

One issue the Bruins have been battling this week has been illness. Pitcher RuthAnna Spooner even missed practice earlier in the week.

"We're not going to use that as a cop-out," Swensen said.

3A

Senior-laden Wood River heads into today's 3A state tournament at Buhl High School ready to pick up where it left off on the season. And that's add to a current six-game winning streak.

To do so, the Wolverines (20-7) will have to get by a pesky and talented Preston (19-9). It'll be the first-ever meeting between the two teams in the high school season.

"They can hit the ball, their pitcher throws hard and their left fielder is outstanding," Wood River coach Chris Cey said. "They're pretty loaded at some key positions."

But so is Wood River and its .384 team batting average, led by senior Ashley Nilsen's .571 hitting clip and 34 runs batted in. Joni Chatterton (.522, 30 RBIs), Ashley Washburn (.500 avg.), BJ Adams (.433) and Laurel Williams (.413) also help bring the lumber.

Everyone's feeling pretty good," Cey said.

Especially pitcher Amanda Engel and Nilsen. Both seniors missed last year after suffering season-ending knee injuries. Engel tore her ACL and meniscus in her right knee during basketball and Nilsen went down with the same injuries in her left knee.

Engel said the two players want to make up for lost time last season.

"The only thing that kept us going was each other," Engel said. "We pushed each other. It's great because last year we were really close (to making state) and knowing that we're going it's just awesome."

After working out all summer and winter pitching, Engel said she wouldn't be back without the support of Cey and assistant coach Dale Martin and her teammates.

Red Wings nip Avs for 2-1 series lead

The Associated Press

DENVER (AP) – Fredrik Olausson scored his first playoff goal in 10 years at 12:44 of overtime as the Detroit Red Wings beat the Colorado Avalanche 2-1 Wednesday night to take a 2-1 lead in the Western Conference finals.

Olausson beat Colorado goalie Patrick Roy from just inside the blue line on a shot that appeared to hit Colorado defenseman Martin Skoula in the leg.

Dominik Hasek, who made 20 saves, set up the goal by clearing a loose puck to Steve Yzerman at center ice. Yzerman hit Olausson,

Cubs pitcher Ks 10, allows just two runs

CHICAGO – Mark Prior was worth the hype.

The No. 2 pick in last year's draft struck out 10 and allowed only two runs in his major league debut Wednesday night, pitching the Chicago Cubs to a 7-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Sammy Sosa gave him some help with a solo homer, and Fred McGriff drove in two runs.

Prior scattered four hits over six innings, walking two and hitting one batter. He gave up a solo homer to Brian Giles and an RBI single to Pokey Reese.

Prior became only the 14th Cubs starter since 1920 to win his big league debut – something not even Greg Maddux or Kerry Wood accomplished. And the Wrigley Field crowd of 40,138 – the largest since opening day – loved it. The fans cheered his every strike, hanging "K" signs from the left-field fence and a rooftop

M.V.'s 30 best shots at gold medals

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

As usual, the Magic Valley is expected to bring home more than its fair share of medals at the 2002 Idaho high school track and field championships, which begin today and run through Saturday at Bronco Stadium in Boise.

Last year, four girls teams: Minico, Jerome, Declo, and Raft River along with the Filer boys all came away with team state championships as Magic Valley teams won five of the 10 available state titles.

Here are 30 Times-News picks as the Magic Valley's best shots at gold.

Jerome senior Melissa McLimore runs in the girls 200-meter dash at the 4A District Four-Five-Six finals in Jerome on Friday. McLimore won four golds over the two-day meet, helping the Jerome girls to the district title.

5A

1. Twin Falls girls – The Bruins easily won regionals and boast a deep team that may sneak up on people. Malia Paulani (discus, shot put and hurdles), Orla Walsh (sprints), Kim Strunk (hurdles) and a host of other talented athletes all have good shots at placing and pushing the Bruins toward the top.

2. Monica Jensen (Minico) – The junior brings the best time in the 300 hurdles (46.60 seconds) and the best distances in the long (17 feet, 9.25 inches) and triple jumps (37-8.25) coming into the 5A meet. She has the third best time in the 100 hurdles. She won both hurdles events and the triple jump last year.

3. Chuck Fleming (Minico) – The senior burner has the best time in the 200 (21.80) and his 10.92-second run 100 should put him right in the thick of things starting today.

4. Jacob Maughn (Minico) – Maughn has the best throw in the shot but faces a tough field. His toss of of 51-6.25 is better than his next competitor by a little more than an inch.

5. Twin Falls boys 4x200 relay – The Bruins have clocked a best-in-the-field time of 1:31.40, which is best by three-tenths of a second.

4A

6. Jerome girls team – The Tigers have dominated the entire year and should defend their team title from a year ago.

7. Melissa McLimore (Jerome) – How many gold medals is a much better question than how likely with this Tiger. Her time of 58.17 in the 400 is the only sub-minute time in the field. She also has the best time in the 100 (12.3) and 200 (25.77) in Class 4A. She has gone back and forth with reigning state champion Tiffany Anderson of Burley in the 100 all year. Anderson is registered at 12.52.

8. Jennifer Pond (Jerome) – Pond brings the second best throw in Class 4A to the meet with an effort of 39-10 while Mountain Home's Jennifer Donatelli has thrown 42-1.5. But Pond is also armed with experience after winning the event a year ago as a sophomore.

9. Lindsay Abo (Burley) – Abo has gone 16-11 in the long jump, which is five inches longer than her nearest competition.

10. Jerome girls medley relay – The Tigers bring the best time in the state in this event, having clocked 1:51.26.

3A

11. Ashley Howe (Wood River) – The Wolverine's time of 59.10 in the 400 is one of just two under a minute. Buhl's Annie McCauley (59.50) has the other and should provide Howe with her best competition. McCauley beat Howe in a photo-finish last year.

12. Carin Patterson (Gooding) – This Senator senior swept the distance events last year. But this year it is the 800 that she is leading the state in with a time of 2:23.10. She should also be in contention in the 1,600 and 3,200.

13. Danny Prigmore (Filer) – Prigmore is dominant in both hurdles races, clocking a 15.30 in the 110s and 40.50 in the 300s.

14. Josh Villaro (Buhl) – Villaro's leap of 21-3 leads the state field.

15. Josh Boehler (Declo) – The Hornet senior has a state-best effort of 44-11.75 in the triple jump and the human jumping jack also leads the field in the high jump with 6-2.

16. Filer boys relay teams – The Wildcats have the best time in the state in the 4x100 (44.20) and 4x200 (1:30.80). The next best time in the 4x200 isn't under 1:33.

17. Wood River girls medley relay – The Wolverines have the best time coming in at 1:55.60, with Gooding breathing down their neck.

2A

18. Jaynie Goodbody (Wendell) – The precocious freshman owns the best times in the state in the 100 (12.40) and 200 (25.70), where she will go head to head with Nampa Christian's Danielle Pridgen in what may be one of the more exciting races at the meet.

19. Skylar Stevenson (Wendell) – Stevenson is one of just two sprinters in the field with a time below 11 seconds in the 100. Teammate Jysen Lancaster is the other. Stevenson has a time of 10.70 and Lancaster registers a 10.90. Stevenson should also win the 200 to add to his collection of gold medals, which now stands at three.

20. Sherman King (Wendell) – The affable King has a nearly two-foot advantage over any opponent in the field in the shot put with a throw of 53-7.

21. Raft River girls track team – This may not be the strongest Trojan team but Raft River has won five straight. They are the queens of the track until proven otherwise.

22. Shamee Norman (Dietrich) – The reigning state champion comes in with the best time in the field with a time of 12.80 but a pair of Magic Valley competitors lurk right behind. Oakley's Ali Cranney and Murtaugh's Jillian Cutler both have registered times of 12.90. They are the only three runners under 13 seconds in the field.

23. Ginger Bingham (Carey) – Bingham leads the field with a time of 16.70.

24. Christi Edwards (Raft River) – Edwards is the only competitor in the field with a time under 50 seconds. She has registered a time of 49.10.

25. Jillian Cutler (Murtaugh) – The Red Devil sophomore leads the state in the long jump with an effort of 16-3 and in the 200 with a time of 27.0. She should also be in the hunt in the 100 and triple jump.

26. Lacey Perkins (Murtaugh) – Perkins' effort of 34-0 in the triple jump is the best coming into the state meet.

27. Teresa Owsley (Hagerman) – The Hagerman Pirate senior is the best pole vaulter in the state coming into the final meet of the season. She has gone 9-6.

28. Laci Thomas (Raft River) – Thomas is nearly two feet better than the rest of the field in the discus, having throw the disc 105-2. She should also be right in the middle of things in the shot put.

29. Brandon Blodgett (Camas County) – The senior Musher has gone 41-5.75 in the triple jump, which is the best in the field.

30. Oakley boys 4x200 relay team – The Hornets' time of 1:35.00 is the best there is coming into the state meet.

Third baseman Jake Asher leads the Twin Falls offense, hitting .468 with a .949 slugging percentage and seven home runs.

Second baseman Derrick Tenney is hitting .345 but is about .500 the last three weeks of the season, Rasmussen said. And Brandon Salinas is hitting .418 with plenty of power.

Defense remains the only question mark for the Bruins, who have been plagued with errors all year.

Potential second-round opponents Lewiston (22-4) and Borah (17-10) both loom large.

Lewiston won the AA American Legion tourney and is the reigning state champion baseball team after Coeur d'Alene was stripped of its title after the tournament last year. Lewiston may have the best player in the state in senior Julius Smith, who is deadly in the batter's box and on the mound.

In games at Storey Park in Meridian, Capital (19-8) faces Hillcrest (10-12) at 4:30 p.m. and Idaho Falls (19-4) plays Pocatello (10-10) at 7 p.m.

4A

Both the Burley Bobcats and the Jerome Tigers are hoping history will repeat itself as they enter the wide-open Class 4A tournament at Rodeo Park in Nampa.

The Bobcats (8-15) face Bishop Kelly in the first round at 4 p.m. and Jerome (9-16) plays Mountain Home (15-12) at 10 a.m.

The Bobcats' task is a familiar one as many of Burley's players beat the Knights in the first round of the state basketball tournament with Harr as coach.

The most prominent of those basketball players is Jacob Kay, who is 4-5 with a 5.10 earned run average.

"Jacob just needs to throw strikes," Harr said. "He's good enough and throws hard enough with good curveball that he can throw one down the middle of the plate occasionally."

Harr said it is also imperative that Burley hitters make the Knight pitchers throw strikes.

After scouting Bishop Kelly (11-11), Harr said the Knights pitchers were erratic.

"They are a very beatable team," Harr said. "We just have to maintain focus and make the routine plays."

The history Jerome is looking to is the recent past since the Tigers have been riding a hot streak going into the tourney.

"If I was the coach of a 21-5 team, I would be scared of a team like us," Jerome coach Jay Ostler said. "I think any coach would tell you they want their team to come in hot."

Leading the resurgent Tigers' turnaround is senior Kiel Thibault.

Thibault is still recovering from a broken collarbone and will most likely be used just as a designated hitter in the tourney.

"His numbers and stats obviously go without saying," Tiger coach Jay Ostler said. "But his leadership has really made the difference. He's a guy you look up to."

He has also been red hot of late.

The Tigers will go with Matt Tilley (1-1) on the mound against Mountain Home.

Ostler said that Tilley leads a staff of J.D. Lott, Kyle Roberts, Jed Seamons and Kenny May that doesn't have a dominant No. 1 but has plenty of depth.

In other games: Sandpoint (6-17) meets Skyview (13-15) of Nampa and tournament favorite Vallivue (23-3) takes on Kuna (12-16) at 7 p.m.

3A

Wood River, which lost its first game at the state tournament last year before winning its next two in the consolation bracket, comes into the tournament ranked No. 1 by Idahosports.com and brimming with confidence.

"In the past, I don't know if we've been devastated not to win it," Wolverine coach Lars Hovey said. "This team, I think, will be if we don't at least make it to the championship game."

The Wolverines (22-5) open with Bear Lake (12-8), which put them in the loser's bracket in a 9-8 game in the state opener last year. The game is at Treasure Valley Community College in Ontario, Ore., at 4 p.m.

"I think that we have to go in and play our game and not worry about what the other teams are doing," Hovey said.

Other first-round games include St. Maries (22-1) facing Shelley (17-7) at 11:30 a.m.; American Falls (19-4) plays Bonners Ferry (16-8) at 1:30 p.m. and last year's state runner-up Teton (13-7) takes on Fruitland (19-6) at 6:30 p.m.

2A

The Glenns Ferry Pilots will continue to try to ride the pitching and hitting of Zach Simons.

The junior standout not only doubled in the winning run in the Pilots 2-1 state-clinching victory over Wendell but he also threw 150 pitches in the victory just two days after throwing 116 in a previous victory over Wendell.

Simons also struck out 30 batters in 15 innings in the two wins.

The Pilots (21-6) open with New Plymouth (17-4) at 9 a.m. at Orofino High School.

New Plymouth is ranked second in the Idahosports.com poll.

Also playing are Kendrick (19-4) vs. Nampa Christian (20-8), Firth (13-4) facing Prairie (13-4) and Melba (19-7) meeting Orofino (16-9).

who scored his first playoff goal since April 18, 1992, for Winnipeg against Vancouver.

Hasek made consecutive saves early in the overtime, stopping Riku Hahl from the left circle with his blocker and Joe Sakic from the same spot less than a minute later.

Roy, who stopped 40 shots, made a tough kick save nine minutes into the overtime after Sergei Fedorov circled around to the slot, then stopped Kirk Maltby from close range after he slipped around Adam Foote.

It was the second straight overtime game in the series. Colorado won Game 2 on a goal by Chris Drury at 2:17 of overtime Monday night.

Game 4 is Saturday in Denver.

The series was touted as a showdown between the league's two best goalies, but it was far from that in the first two games as the teams combined for 15 goals.

Game 3 was more of what everyone expected, with Roy and Hasek trading spectacular saves.

Hasek faced 21 fewer shots than Roy (42-21), but was still solid after allowing seven goals in the first two games.

He made a skate save after Drury slipped up the middle of Detroit's defense early in the first, then stopped Milan Hejduk with his pads late in the second on a 2-on-1.

Hasek also fought off Hejduk to make a save on a hard shot by Rob Blake in the third, and made a kick save with just over a minute left after Sakic streaked down the right side.

Blake opened the scoring with 4:06 left in the first, redirecting a shot from Sakic on a power play.

It was Blake's sixth goal of the playoffs and his first since Game 4 against San Jose.

Luc Robitaille tied it 5:20 into the third after a rebound bounced off his skate.

Janet Guthrie, the first woman driver in an Indianapolis 500, waits in the cockpit while the pit crew works on her car in this May 29, 1977 file photo.

One to remember

1977 Indy 500 saw race's first woman driver

By Mike Marot
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS – From a vantage point 25 years later, the memory of the 1977 Indianapolis 500 seems so neat and tidy to Janet Guthrie.

People accept her now for what she was – a race-car driver first, a woman second. As Guthrie strolls the grounds of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, she can see the impact she's made on auto racing.

"I got Sarah Fisher's autograph," Guthrie said, smiling while visiting the garage area. "I've never asked for an autograph in my life, but I wanted Sarah's and I'm thrilled to meet her."

Fisher signed her autograph, "To Janet, my idol."

Twenty-five years ago, none of it seemed possible – until Guthrie became a trendsetter in perhaps the most historically significant Indy 500 ever.

Her presence in the field that year forced tradition-bound Tony Hulman, then president of the speedway, to change the words that had become the best-known in the sport.

After several admittedly agonizing days of contemplation, Hulman stood in front of the usual race day crowd of 400,000 and intoned: "Those in the company of the first woman driver in the Indianapolis 500, start your engines."

It was certainly a race to remember.

Besides Guthrie, the 33-car field that May included Tom Sneva, who had turned the first 200 mph qualifying laps at the historic Brickyard. The race ended with A.J. Foyt becoming the track's fist four-time winner.

Foyt, who ran his first race herein 1958, is now a team owner with two cars in the lineup for Sunday's 86th Indy, with the fastest field ever.

"Whoever thought speeds would be over 200 mph when I started coming here?" he said. "I'm glad to say I was here to see them."

Foyt also earned his last Indy victory in 1977 in a duel with two-time Indy winner Gordon Johncock.

Both led in the last 50 laps, but Foyt trailed Johncock by 32 seconds before he started closing the gap. Sixteen laps from the end of the 200-lap event, Johncock's crankshaft broke and Foyt took the lead.

Afterward, Foyt invited long-time friend Hulman to take a victory lap with him in the pace car. It was a cherished moment for Hulman, who died in October of that year.

"Anytime you're the first at something, you're put on a pedestal," Foyt said, reflecting on becoming the first of a trio of four-time Indy winners. "But it was a real honor because there are so many great drivers from all over the world that raced here."

Guthrie joined that club one year after Foyt gave her a chance to take a car around the 2 1/2-mile oval in practice. In nine laps, Guthrie got the car up to speed, although she didn't get a chance to qualify that year.

When she returned in '77, Guthrie wasted little time. On the first day of practice, she turned the fastest lap at 185.607 – 3 mph faster than veteran speedster Danny Ongais.

"I think drivers came to see what I was," she said. "I was just another driver. But there's nothing like blowing someone's doors off to change attitudes."

While Guthrie tried to dismiss the gender issue, she couldn't escape the spotlight.

In a field with three multiple race winners – Foyt, Al Unser and Bobby Unser – Guthrie attracted the most media attention and created the biggest controversy.

Some believed she was an anomaly; others a curiosity. Fan reaction was mixed.

"When we moved on pit lane, everyone moved with us, and when we went out on the track, everyone cheered," said Rolla Vollstedt, Guthrie's car owner.

Added Guthrie: "But surely, Rolla, you remember that there were at least as many boos as there were cheers."

"My team was behind me all the way," she said. "Last year I felt like I let the team down. We have the tools we just need to put them together."

Tournament favorite and defending class champion Lakeland (20-1) of Rathdrum comes in on a 12-game winning streak and faces Middleton (18-5). South Fremont (17-10) opens with Bear Lake (20-9) and Weiser (16-7) meets Timberlake (14-9) of Spirit Lake at Buhl High School.

Glenns Ferry coach Kelli McHone said her team spent much of this week relearning how to bunt.

They'll need to when they open with Parma (19-5) today at the 2A state tournament at Ward Park in Pocatello.

"They've got some pretty good pitchers," McHone said. "We'll bunt a lot. We're not as fast pitching, but we'll be able to do some things. Our girls are quick."

Jessica Simons, Gisela Arevalo and Dorys Gutierrez lead the Lady Pilots (13-11) back into the state tournament.

In other games, New Plymouth (23-0) faces Prairie (18-5), Orofino (23-0) meets West Jefferson and Malad (16-7) takes on Grangeville (17-7).

balcony.

As the Cubs shook hands on the field after the game, the fans chanted "Prior! Prior!" He acknowledged them by pumping his fist as he disappeared into the dugout.

Touted as one of the best college pitchers ever after going 15-1 with a 1.69 ERA last year at Southern California, Prior has had a meteroic rise with the Cubs. He came to spring training not having pitched since the College World Series, yet dazzled the Cubs and their opponents with his potential.

Starting the season in Double-A West Tenn, he tore through the minor leagues. He went 5-2 with a 2.29 ERA in nine games at Double- and Triple-A, striking out 79 while walking only 18.

"I've had this anticipation since probably the first time I watched him throw in spring training," Cubs manager Don Baylor said before the game.

Ali testifies at hearing; McCain proposes reform

WASHINGTON (AP) – Muhammad Ali upstaged a senator's speech with a right hook. Light heavyweight champ Roy Jones Jr. came out swinging against bad judging, cable television and Don King.

So began the third round of Sen. John McCain's campaign to reform boxing.

Muhammad Ali

Concerned that, two recent boxing reform laws haven't done enough, McCain introduced a bill Wednesday that would establish what he has long resisted – a federal body to regulate boxing, headed by a presidentially appointed "boxing czar."

"The sport still has a lot of problems," the Arizona Republican, a lifelong boxing fan, told a hearing of the Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee.

McCain's Professional Boxing Amendments Act of 2002, similar to a bill introduced last year by Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., would create a U.S. Boxing Administration within the Labor Department. It would oversee the licensing of boxers, managers, promoters and sanctioning bodies and help set a national standard for a sport whose rules differ from state to state.

McCain said his "personal dislike of government bureaucracies" kept him from making this proposal for years, but the lack of progress seen from the Professional Boxing Safety Act of 1996 and the Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000 has changed his mind.

"Professional boxing is the only major sport in the United States that does not have a strong, centralized association or league to establish and enforce uniform rules and practices," McCain said.

The hearing's star witness was Ali, who suffers from Parkinson's disease. The former heavyweight champion was so moved by Reid's testimony that he rose from his seat behind Reid's chair and feigned a right hook to show his support.

"Sen. Reid, you didn't see it, but just a moment ago the champ almost took you out," said Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D.

Ali's testimony was read by his wife, Lonnie. She listed five proposals from her husband, all focused on the need for uniformity and capped by a call for a "national oversight body."

"Those of us who love boxing believe that it can and should be saved," Lonnie Ali said.

Muhammad Ali spoke just once, after McCain thanked the former champ for lending his name to the reform act two years ago.

"Write me a check," Ali said with a chuckle.

Jones, one of the few active boxers who campaigns actively against the current system, railed against recent questionable judges' decisions and said that HBO and Showtime have too much power over who fights whom, when and for how much.

"They seem to have a monopoly on the sport," Jones said. "The networks are calling the shots, along with the promoters."

King declined an invitation to testify.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Clear Lake ladies report latest weekly play

BUHL – Rose Black was the latest winner with a 56 during the Clear Lake Ladies Association play May 16.

Black's score was computed throwing out two holes and subtracting her handicap. Tying for second at 60 were Neola Weaver and Louise Smith.

Gobbles were won by Black, Madeline Harvey, and Weaver. Fewest putts went to Ginger Rogers with 28 and Dona Pierce with 29.

Former college athletes face charges in Sabathia robbery

CLEVELAND – Two former Cleveland State basketball players were charged Wednesday in the armed robbery of Cleveland Indians pitcher C.C. Sabathia.

Damon Stringer and Jamaal Harris were being held in the city jail following their arrests on aggravated robbery charges in the holdup last week at a downtown hotel, police Sgt. Donna Bell

Weaver nearly no-hits Indians

DETROIT (AP) – Jeff Weaver took a no-hit bid into the eighth inning and finished with a one-hitter to lead Detroit to its sixth straight win.

Weaver held Cleveland hitless until Chris Magruder, making his debut with the Indians, doubled off the right-field wall past a lunging Craig Paquette with two outs in the eighth. Paquette was starting in the outfield for the first time this year after playing mostly at third base.

Weaver (4-5) struck out a season-high 11, walked two and hit two batters in his second complete game of the season. The 25-year-old right-hander had never given up fewer than three hits in a game.

Chuck Finley (2-6) gave up two runs on six hits over eight innings.

Blue Jays 8, Yankees 3

NEW YORK – Carlos Delgado's bases-loaded double drove in three runs and Eric Hinske and Raul Mondesi hit home runs as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated New York 8-3 on Wednesday, ending the Yankees' six-game winning streak.

Roy Halladay (5-1) allowed nine hits in 6 1-3 innings with seven strikeouts and one walk. He and three relievers held the Yankees without a home run, ending a streak of 13 games in which they had hit at least one. New York, leading the majors with 74 homers, had hit 16 during its six-game winning streak.

Adrian Hernandez (0-1), called up late Tuesday when Orlando Hernandez went on the disabled list, took the loss.

Rangers 6, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS – Mike Lamb, a late addition to the lineup, hit a three-run homer and scored three times to help Texas snap a five-game losing streak.

Kenny Rogers pitched seven innings for Texas, which had lost six of its first seven on a 12-game roadtrip. Rogers (5-2) finished strong, retiring 10 of the last 11 batters he faced. He gave up six hits, three runs, two walks and struck out two.

Twins starter Kyle Lohse (3-3) allowed four runs and seven hits in six innings. He walked one and struck out five.

Athletics 7, Orioles 6

OAKLAND, Calif. – Larry Sutton, playing in just his second game with Oakland, hit a three-run homer off Calvin Maduro (2-4) as the Athletics snapped a four-game losing streak.

Sutton started for the A's in left field after the team traded Jeremy Giambi to the Philadelphia Phillies for utility man John Mabry. Sutton was called up from Triple-A Sacramento the day before as the A's try to snap out of a slide with just four wins in 18 games.

Mike Fyhrie (2-3) earned his second career win with 2 1-3 innings of scoreless relief. Billy Koch pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

White Sox 2, Red Sox 0

BOSTON – Jon Garland allowed just one baserunner over the first eight innings and Keith Foulke rescued him in the ninth to lead Chicago past Boston.

Garland (5-3) retired the first 10 Boston batters before Johnny Damon doubled with one out in the fourth. Garland then retired 14 straight before pinch-hitters Carlos Baerga and Jose Offerman singled to lead off the ninth.

Foulke came in and retired Nomar Garciaparra, Damon and Shea Hillenbrand for his seventh save.

Frank Castillo (2-5) gave up two runs and seven hits in eight innings.

Glavine, Braves blank Montreal

MONTREAL (AP) – Tom Glavine pitched a four-hitter for his 22nd career shutout to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 2-0 win over the Montreal Expos on Wednesday night.

Glavine (7-2), whose last complete game was a seven-hit shutout here Sept. 3, lowered his ERA from 1.89 to an NL-leading 1.67 as he pitched his 51st career complete game.

Phillies 5, Mets 2

PHILADELPHIA – Terry Adams pitched six strong innings and Pat Burrell drove in two runs, leading Philadelphia past New York.

The Phillies have won three straight after losing six in a row during a road trip. The Mets have lost three consecutive games following a five-game winning streak.

Burrell, who hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning of Tuesday's 4-0 victory, gave the Phillies a 2-0 lead in the first with a two-run double off Al Leiter (5-3).

Adams (2-3) allowed two runs and nine hits. Jose Mesa got the final three outs for his 14th save.

Reds 6, Marlins 2

CINCINNATI – Todd Walker hit his first career grand slam, Cincinnati's second in two games, and added a solo homer to lead the Reds past Florida.

Walker hit his slam in the fifth against Ryan Dempster (2-5) – the same inning as Austin Kearns' the previous night – as the NL Central leaders once again used one swing to deflate the struggling Marlins.

The Reds have four grand slams in May, a franchise record for one month. They've hit a slam in each of their last three games at Cinergy Field.

Elmer Dessens (3-3) gave up five hits in six innings and improved to 3-0 in three career starts against the Marlins, who hadn't scored off him in 17 innings previously.

Cardinals 3, Astros 2

ST. LOUIS – J.D. Drew snapped a 1-for-17 slump with a leadoff homer in the ninth inning off Ricky Stone (2-2) as St. Louis won for the 11th time in 13 games.

The Cardinals are 8-1 on their homestand with one game to go, the series finale Thursday.

Dave Veres (3-3) pitched two scoreless innings as the Cardinals came from behind to win for the 17th time this season.

St. Louis tied it at 2 in the eighth on Albert Pujols' RBI single after the Houston bullpen took over for Roy Oswalt, who allowed one run and five hits in seven innings.

Julio Lugo hit his first home run and scored twice for the Astros, who have lost three in a row after winning seven straight.

Dodgers 1, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE – Hideo Nomo threw six shutout innings, and Shawn Green tripled home the only run for Los Angeles.

Nomo (4-5) allowed four hits, walked three and struck out seven. Omar Daal, Paul Quantrill and Eric Gagne completed the six-hitter. Gagne pitched the ninth for his 15th save in 18 chances.

Green also threw out a runner at the plate from right field.

Ben Sheets (3-4) scattered six hits in 7 1-3 innings for the Brewers.

Ailing Bryant visits doctor; Sacramento waits for Stoyakovic

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) – Kobe Bryant vomited several times and left practice Wednesday to see the Los Angeles Lakers' team doctor, two days after nearly missing a playoff game because of what was believed to be food poisoning.

Fortunately for Bryant and the Lakers, Game 3 of the Western Conference finals against the Sacramento Kings isn't until Friday night at Staples Center.

Bryant was stricken early Monday, but scored 22 points in 40 minutes that night in a 96-90 loss at Sacramento that evened the best-of-seven series 1-1.

It wasn't a typical Bryant performance. But he seemed fine, albeit weak, after the game, and was upbeat on the plane flight home, coach Phil Jackson said Tuesday.

It was a different story Wednesday.

Team spokesman John Black said Bryant left practice several times to vomit, and finally went to see Dr. John Moe.

"The tests came back pretty much normal," Black said. "The doctor still thinks it's from the food poisoning. There is a very, very slim chance it's a bacterial infection, they weren't able to eliminate that possibility 100 percent."

As a precaution, Black said, Byrant was put on antibiotics, and also will take medication for his stomach cramping.

Black said he didn't know if Bryant would practice Thursday, saying he was "day-to-day."

Bryant's illness in Sacramento was blamed on the bacon cheeseburger and slice of cheesecake he ordered late Sunday night from room service.

Black said he didn't know what Bryant ate Tuesday.

Bryant's teammates said they weren't concerned, save Shaquille O'Neal, who didn't speak with reporters Wednesday.

"I'd be concerned if we had to play tonight, or even tomorrow," Rick Fox said. "I know he'll be fine by Friday.

Said Robert Horry: "We've got until Friday. He's a warrior. He'll be all right."

Sacramento's victory in Game 2 snapped the Lakers' 12-game road winning streak in the playoffs – believed to be a record in any major sport. Now, Los Angeles will try to hand the Kings their first playoff loss on the road after four wins this spring.

Jackson said nearly three months ago that the Kings hadn't proven they could win on the road.

Immediately thereafter, that's exactly what happened.

The Kings have won 16 of their last 18 away games, with one of the two losses a 109-95 setback to the Lakers in the regular-season finale – after they had clinched homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs.

Three key players, Chris Webber, Bobby Jackson and Hedo Turkoglu, didn't play because of minor injuries.

"They proved they can win on the road," Phil Jackson said. "They did it through some really good team play and some situations where they didn't have some starters."

Peja Stojakovic, sidelined with a sprained ankle and doubtful for Games 3 and 4, missed five of the late-season road wins with a strained right hamstring.

"We like to go into a hostile environment because that brings us together as a team," Bobby Jackson said. "We didn't have as much success on the road earlier in the season, but as we got more together as a team, we figured out some things about playing on the road, and now we're one of the best road teams out there."

As well as the Kings have played on the road, the Lakers have been even better at home, winning 19 of their last 20 games at Staples Center during the last three months and 15 of their last 17 home playoff games.

The Kings played well in Los Angeles in last year's playoffs, but came up short, losing to the Lakers 108-105 and 96-90.

The Kings are 1-10 against the Lakers at Staples Center since the building opened before the 1999-00 season.

T.F. invites Centennial song submissions

TWIN FALLS – Songwriters still have a little more time to get their entries in to the Magic Valley Arts Council for a Twin Falls centennial song to help commemorate the city's 100th birthday in 2004.

Composers from Twin Falls and those who used to live in Twin Falls are welcome to submit their compositions to the Magic Valley Arts Council before May 31. The winner of the contest will receive a $500 cash prize.

The Arts Council asks that all entries be recorded on a standard audio cassette tape with a separate sheet of written lyrics included.

The winner will be determined by a panel of judges appointed by the Magic Valley Arts Council. Two other top finalists will receive special recognition. All winners will be announced in early July.

Application forms can be picked up at the Magic Valley Arts Council office at 132 Main Ave. S. in Twin Falls or can be requested by calling 734-ARTS. The mailing address for entries is: Magic Valley Arts Council, P.O. Box 1158, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303. For more information, contact Ruth Turner at 733-0149.

Wendell incumbent, Gooding newcomer win

WENDELL – Incumbent Doyle Hope prevailed over challenger Cheryl Koopman, 37-14, in Tuesday's Wendell School Board election, retaining his Zone 3 seat.

Zone 4 incumbent Paul Kroeger was unchallenged.

In Gooding, Dale Thomas won the Zone 2 seat over write-in challenger Mary Kren. The seat is being vacated by Patty Waugh. In Zone 3, write-in Kathleen Goicoechia won over fellow write-in Becky Tanner. Both seats are for three-year terms.

Naturalist discusses butterflies at museum

KETCHUM – Ketchum naturalist Ann Christensen will discuss "The Monarch's Plight" and suggest ways of identifying local butterflies during a free lecture at 7 p.m. today. The lecture will be held at the Ketchum/Sun Valley Ski and Heritage Museum, located at Washington Avenue and First Street.

The program is sponsored by the Sawtooth Science Institute.

Dietrich receives state grant money for school

DIETRICH – The Dietrich School district has been awarded about $209,000 in state grants.

The State Department of Education awarded the grants for school repair and renovation; laptop computers for special education students with wireless connection to the district network; multimedia classroom equipment for the special education classroom; and software for compiling and analyzing student assessments and grades.

Other school board business this week included:

- The Summer School Reading and Math Academy will serve students in grades 1-4 who need extra help in reaching the new State Academic Standards.
- A group of community volunteers, led by Shawna Porter, will help install a sprinkler system for the baseball field. The field could then be planted in the fall.
- Principal Shon Hocker has obtained an after-school recreation grant for students in grades 4, 5 and 6. The program will be initiated next fall.
- Wayne Dill was selected as the boys varsity basketball coach and Teresa Smith was selected as girls junior varsity basketball coach, replacing Angie Clark, who resigned.
- Board members approved putting out for bid the Lincoln County Consortium of Schools 2000 grant to create a wireless link between Dietrich, Shoshone and Richfield schools for video-conferencing and internet access.
- Fred Hill was sworn in as the new Zone 1 board member. He was appointed to a one-year term to replace Donna Power, who moved out of the zone.
- The board received a letter from the Richfield School Board proposing that Dietrich and Richfield share a superintendent. The Dietrich School Board said it is not interested in the proposal at this time.

Candidates compare views

TWIN FALLS – When the candidates running for statewide office faced off Wednesday at a chamber of commerce forum, one issue dominated the rhetoric: Idaho's lousy economy.

Democratic candidates for U.S. Senate Alan Blinken and Dave Sneddon promised jobs. Blinken said he would use his investment expertise from 33 years on Wall Street to liven things up in his newly adopted state. Sneddon repeated his promise to capture grant money for economic development in rural communities.

Sneddon toned down his earlier portrayal of Blinken as a snobby carpetbagger with ties to the Clinton administration. In fact, there seemed to be no animosity between the two.

Elections around Magic Valley

Blinken is a former Belgium ambassador and Wall Street banker. Sneddon is a real estate agent who focuses on low-income housing.

Governor Dirk Kempthorne and his likely challenger in November – Democrat Jerry Brady – delivered a no-show for their debates with Republican challengers Milt Erhart and Walter Bayes and Democrat Rue T. Sears.

But when the six Republican candidates for lt. governor took their seats at the table to spar, the sparks began to fly.

"We've spent a lot of time together," Magic Valley candidate Celia Gould said. "It's been a bonding experience."

Wednesday was their last appearance after more than 50 performances.

Jim Risch referred to the group as the "eclectic six." The Boise attorney had it right: If voters pay attention to what the candidates for the second-in-line office are saying, they'll have plenty of choice. Though each candidate stressed economic development, each offers different philosophies and different styles.

By constitutional definition, the lt. governor is elected separately from the governor. That's not the case in every state. In Idaho, the lt. governor is to make decisions for the governor when the governor is out of the state, and he or she also enforces the rules of the Senate while it is in session. He or she does not debate or go into caucus.

But traditionally, Idaho lt. governors also have defined their roles pretty much as they see fit. The current lt. governor, Jack Riggs, is working on resolving a 20-year-old children's mental health lawsuit against the state that he said bureaucrats can't seem to work out. He also wrote a bioterrorism plan for the governor.

Fish lab seeks awareness from public

HAGERMAN – Tucked away under the bluffs of the Snake River Canyon in Hagerman, sits a laboratory that is quietly gaining national attention.

The University of Idaho Fish Culture Experiment Station has brought together scientists both of local and national prominence in an atmosphere that serves as a model of federal dollars helping solve local problems.

Outfitted with some of the latest research equipment, the center approaches such issues as helping to determine the listing of animals on the endangered species list, checking levels of toxicity in fish for the mining industry and reducing levels of contaminants in the river.

"We're not just doing academic research," said Ronald Hardy, director of the experiment station. "We apply research to practical problems that have impact on people's lives."

TWIN FALLS – The last of the county candidates have turned in their campaign financial disclosure forms.

Candidate financial disclosure reports were due Tuesday – seven days before the primary election. Candidates had to itemize all contributions of $50 or more and expenditures of $25 or more.

County Commission District 2 Republican candidate Marilyn Hempleman supporters gave $3,165 to her campaign. Her husband, Marvin, who will retire from the District 2 seat in January, was her biggest supporter, donating $2,400. Chris Harriman and Emmett Harrison, both of Twin Falls, each gave $75. The remaining $615 came from contributions of $50 or less. Hempleman spent $3,008.67 on her campaign, according to her financial statement.

District 2 Republican candidate Leon Mills reported $1,230 in contributions to his campaign, including $740 he and wife Sheri gave to the effort. His largest contributors were his in-laws, Bob and Dorothy Parr of Twin Falls, who gave $300 to his campaign, Robert and Colleen Leitch of Buhl gave $150, and he received one $40 contribution that did not need to be itemized. Mills spent $1,218.66 on his primary campaign.

Disabled S.V. skier prepares for summit attempt on Mount Shasta

The Associated Press

PARK CITY, Utah – The last time disabled skier Muffy Davis made headlines, she was lighting the cauldron during the opening ceremonies and later winning three silver medals at the Salt Lake Paralympics.

Now, Davis is among four paraplegics who will try to scale 14,162-foot Mount Shasta in California using an innovative climbing contraption. The Snowpod is a cross between a bicycle, a tank and a wheelchair.

The handcranked machine should open up mountaineering to the disabled.

"The neat thing about the Snowpod is that it makes mountaineering more like wheelchair tennis or hand-cycling," said Davis, the Sun Valley resident who also has skydived, kayaked and taken a river-rafting trip through the Grand Canyon.

"Someday, I can use this device to go out climbing with my friends. Or I can go hiking and have a picnic with my dad," she said.

The attempt begins Sunday and is expected to continue through Thursday.

The 4.5-mile route covers about 7,000 vertical feet.

Gooding commissioners debate CAFO moratorium

By Aimee New
Times-News correspondent

GOODING – They have approved a new ordinance governing confined animal feeding operations, but Gooding County commissioners aren't necessarily ready to lift a moratorium on new CAFOs.

Commissioners are schedule to meet again Friday at 3:30 p.m. to consider a moratorium due to expire May 31.

After voting 2-1 in favor of the new CAFO ordinance Tuesday night, commissioners said it was in their best interest to seek legal advice before deciding whether to enact an emergency moratorium so existing dairies can fix any problems they have, such as odor issues and lagoon problems, yet prevent new dairy construction. Wording of the moratorium is also in question.

On Tuesday, Commissioner Rob Sauer moved to accept the CAFO ordinance, and Tom Faulkner seconded the motion. Commissioner Carolyn Elexpuru said she could not accept the ordinance, as she felt it still contained loopholes.

Faulkner said he felt secure in accepting the ordinance so that something would be in place in case the moratorium is lifted on May 31.

Elexpuru said the county must get a handle on enforcing ordinances. She also said many water wells in Gooding County are above safe nitrate levels.

Dairy owners questioned if the nitrate levels are due to cow waste or chemical fertilizers.

"Either way, our water is being impacted," Faulkner said.

Wendell resident George Benson asked commissioners why they have laws if they don't enforce them.

Another Wendell resident, Warren Devries, told commissioners that if dairies leave the county, people had better prepare for something else because Gooding County will wither away.

Former Planning and Zoning Commission member Don Cogger said the ordinance doesn't warrant lifting the moratorium. He said more studies need to be done on the ordinance with more public input, not just Planning and Zoning.

The issue of methane digesters was brought up in reference to odor problems, but the cost of the digesters is high, and the dairymen would more than likely lose money.

"A million and a half dollars, and I'll have a methane digester in tomorrow," said dairyman

Lynn S. Urie

Lynn S. Urie, 86, of Twin Falls died Tuesday, May 21, 2002, at Sunbridge Care & Rehabilitation Center in Twin Falls.

Lynn was born on January 31, 1916, in Twin Falls, Idaho, the son of Tom and Elsie Mae Baum Urie. He grew up and attended schools in Twin Falls before he entered the U.S. Navy in 1940. He served his country proudly for over twenty one years. He received his Purple Heart from injuries sustained in the battle of Midway on USS Hornet, he also served on USS New Orleans, USS Prince William, USS Delta and many others in his naval career. He was Honorably Discharged in 1962. Lynn met his wife, Marie LaMonica in Philadelphia in 1946, and they were married on June 15, 1946, in Elkton, Maryland. They were married for 47 years before she died on March 4, 1993. Following his discharge from the Navy, he went to work for the Twin Falls School District working as a janitor for Washington and Lincoln Elementary Schools. Lynn enjoyed visiting with the children and all the teachers. He retired in 1980 after twelve years of service.

Lynn was a beloved father, grandfather, brother and uncle. He was a fisherman at heart, and an animal lover. His cat of over 16 years died the very same day. Lynn loved to go to Addison West Restaurant for breakfast every Sunday morning, doing crossword puzzles, loved to go on long walks and was very helpful to others.

Lynn is survived by his daughters, Arlene (John) Sommer of Twin Falls, Sherry Grabowski of Boise, and Juanita Franklin of Idaho Falls, one sister, Arlene (Richard) Wagner of Twin Falls. Also surviving are his grandchildren, Brandee and Rob Grabowski, Eric (Stacy), Becky and Ben Sommer, Sarah, Mark and Jacob Franklin.

He was preceded in death by his parents, his wife, Marie, one brother, Elmer (Virginia) and one sister, Gertrude (Harry) Hanke.

A Celebration of Lynn's Life will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, May 24, 2002, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel with Pastor Jim Sommer officiating. Inurnment will follow at Sunset Memorial Park. Military rites performed by Area Veterans & Auxiliary. At Lynn's request there will be no visitation and cremation is under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel, Twin Falls.

The family suggest memorials be given to the Alzheimer's Association. Memorials may be given to funeral chapel staff or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, P.O. Box 1142, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

BLISS

John Edward Kelso

John Edward Kelso, 57, a resident of Bliss, died Sunday, May 19, 2002, at the Gooding County Memorial Hospital in Gooding.

John was born on February 27, 1945, in Gooding, Idaho, the son of Bryan and Hilma Kelso. He was raised and educated in Bliss. He was drafted into the service in 1966 and served one tour in Vietnam. John then went on to continue his education in college at Pocatello where he completed his electrical studies.

John married Sherry Adamson in 1964 and they were later divorced in 1988.

John was an avid hunter, he loved horses and the outdoors. Those who knew him will remember a good electrician and a kind soul.

He is survived by his son, Steven Kelso of Ellingham, Illinois; his daughter, Shannon Valentine of La Mirada, California; his brothers, Lee Kelso and Joe Kelso (his twin brother), both of Bliss; his sisters, Tilly Slane of Bliss, Mary Bruno of Albany, Oregon, Peggy Exon of Enterprise, Oregon, Margie Miller of Vancouver, Washington, and DeDe Harwood of Pocatello, and his two grandchildren, Paige and Rachel Valentine of La Mirada, California.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Bryan and Hilma Kelso; and a sister, Blanch Harder of King Hill.

Memorial services will be held on Friday, May 24, 2002, at 11 a.m. at Demaray's Gooding Chapel. Inurnment will be in the Bellevue Cemetery in Bellevue on Friday at 3:30 p.m. with Military Honors by Elmer Miller Post #19 of the American Legion.

Family members and friends may call on Thursday from 1-7 p.m. at Demaray's Gooding Chapel. Funeral arrangements and cremation are under the direction of Demaray's Gooding Chapel.

RUPERT

Lela Lovina Plocher

Lela Lovina Plocher, 85 year old Rupert resident, went to be with her Lord and Savior on May 21, 2002.

Lela was born on August 1, 1916 in Bull Canyon near Rockland, Idaho, the daughter of Willard and Clementine Lish Firkins. When she was young the family moved to Rupert in a horse-drawn wagon.

Saturday night was always movie night. After meeting a young man named Albert Plocher it was also know as date night. Lela and Albert were married on October 28, 1934 by Pastor L.M. Westerkamp.

Lela is survived by five children: Leyon Plocher, Lueddean (Marvin) Reichert, Diane (Don) Allen, Wayne (Glenda) Plocher and Gary (Suzanne) Plocher. She has 13 grandchildren, 21 great-grandchildren, 4 great-great-grandchildren, and one sister, Velda Patrick, of Magna, Utah.

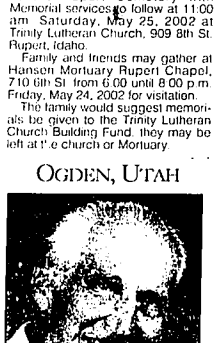
Preceding Lela in death was her Sweetheart of 60 years, Albert, her parents, a brother and 2 sisters. She was also preceded in death by 1 granddaughter and 1 great-granddaughter.

Graveside services will be held 10:00 am Saturday, May 25, 2002, at the Rupert Cemetery with Memorial services to follow at 11:00 am Saturday, May 25, 2002 at Trinity Lutheran Church, 909 8th St. Rupert, Idaho.

Family and friends may gather at Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel, 710 6th St. from 6:00 until 8:00 p.m. Friday, May 24, 2002 for visitation.

The family would suggest memorials be given to the Trinity Lutheran Church Building Fund, they may be left at the church or Mortuary.

OGDEN, UTAH



Austin Wallace

Austin Wallace, 87, husband of Maxine Lange Wallace, died Sunday, May 19, 2002. He tried hard to be with his wife for June 15th, which was to be their 60th Wedding Anniversary, but that was not to be.

Austin was a loving husband and father who gave generously of his time to his family. He and Maxine had two sons, James and Kurt, who brought two very special daughters-in-law into the family circle. These marriages gave them three beautiful granddaughters and suddenly Austin, who had no sisters, was surrounded by girls. With two great-granddaughters and one great-grandson, the joy and laughter was complete.

Austin especially loved the Sawtooth Mountains of Idaho and spent many vacations at the family cabin on Spruce Creek. Those were times of family games, long conversations and a lot of good fishing in Big Wood River.

He was a man who believed in giving some of his time to the community where he lived. He did this through several service organizations and lifelong membership in the Presbyterian Church. The friends he found in these organizations, on the golf course, bowling, at the bridge table, and as far back as high school and college, were a valued and steadfast part of his life.

A service in celebration of his life will be held Friday at 10 a.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, 880 - 28th Street with the Reverend Dr. Rick Minnich officiating.

In lieu of flowers, if friends wish, Austin wanted Hospice of Utah or the building fund at the First Presbyterian Church, 880 - 28th Street, Ogden, Utah, to be considered.

Cremation under the direction of Lindquist's Crematory. Funeral directors, Lindquist's Ogden Mortuary. Email condolences to the family at: tom@lindquistmortuary.com

Reno fund-raiser planned for Utah family in I-80 crash

RENO, Nev. (AP) – A special fund-raiser in Nevada has been organized for the Utah family that lost five members in a tragic crash on Interstate 80 east of Reno.

The $20-a-plate spaghetti dinner will be held at the Siena Spa Hotel-Casino May 29, from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Proceeds will go to Fernando Meza-Arriaga, 31, who lost his three children, a sister and a niece in the crash. His wife remains in critical condition at Washoe Medical Center in Reno.

The family's van was hit head on by an alleged drunken driver going the wrong way on the interstate near Fernley on May 13.

"The management and staff at Siena feel deeply for this man's tragic loss of his family" said Barney Ng, owner of the Siena. "I felt anything we could do to help needs to be done. I just wish we could do more, but at least we want to let Meza-Arriaga know we all care."

Stephen Scharosch, 51, of Grass Valley, Calif., has been charged with five counts of driving under the influence causing death and two counts of DUI causing substantial bodily harm. Each count carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

He's being held on $500,000 bail at the Washoe County jail. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for May 30.

Are you using your I-R-A monies to buy real estate?

According to the Investment Company Institute Research, "there are approximately two trillion dollars invested in IRAs." Baby boomers and other wealthy people own a big bulk of this money. Most of these people have large estates, therefore have other assets to live on, and they will end up passing their IRAs to their family members down the road. Their family members will pay as much as 70 cents on each dollar they inherit between the estate tax and income tax on these IRAs. Can this happen to you?

Most of these people do not know they can use their IRAs to purchase real estate. It can be done 2 different ways. Real estate can be owned within an IRA Plan, but there are restrictions, and ultimately income and estate taxes will need to be paid. However, there is a better way to use your IRA money to purchase real estate and own it outright (outside of an IRA plan). You can buy a commercial building, land, second home, rental property, etc. This approach takes a design (blueprint) that can save you thousands upon thousands of dollars in taxes and/or depreciation and other write-offs throughout your lifetime.

If you are interested in finding out more about this and if you can qualify, call your local Realtor or James R. Love.*

Minico seniors graduate

By Nate Johnson
Times-News writer

RUPERT – The beach ball only bounced once before it lifted off and, carried by the wind, flew in to the faculty chairs. Red and gold gowns rippled and the seniors held on to their mortarboards, but the wind could not blow away the enthusiasm of the graduating class.

In spontaneous outpourings of emotion, the soon-to-be-graduates of Minico High School cheered together at every opportunity during the ceremony Wednesday evening. This emotion was a mixture of nostalgia for days that would never come again and happiness to be leaving those days behind, but happiness overwhelmed nostalgia, said Chontal Hansen in her valedictorian address.

"There is a bigger part of us that longs for tomorrow and freedom from the world of our oppressive parents," she said.

The desire to move on did not dampen school pride. It is a commencement cliche to say a graduating class is the best a school has ever seen, but Hansen backed up her assertion with examples.

"This class had the best basketball teams, both boys and girls, ever to come through Minico," Hansen said.

The class had demonstrated selflessness and compassion by donating the money that would have gone to decorations for the homecoming dance to the Red Cross, Hansen said. The students directed the organization to use the donation to help people in New York.

While celebrating a job well done, the students paused to listen to some advice from former Minico teacher, Andrew Percifield.

The best days of the graduates' lives have not yet come, Percifield said. But before the students got to the best, they would face greater challenges, he said.

Twin Falls tests ballot-counting machine

TWIN FALLS – The Twin Falls County election department will conduct a public test of the Optec IV at 2 p.m. Friday in the third floor meeting room at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone St. N.

The Optec IV is an optical scan counting machine that will be used Tuesday to count votes and ballots for the primary election. The test and demonstration will last about one hour.

The public is invited to attend, watch and ask questions about the counting procedure. Anyone with questions before the test can call 736-4004.

The Twin Falls County clerk's office will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Memorial Day, to accommodate absentee voters. All other offices in the courthouse will be closed.

Burley City Council reschedules town meeting

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

BURLEY – A town meeting to discuss Burley's future has been postponed.

The meeting is now set for 10 a.m. Saturday, June 22. The location hasn't been determined.

The meeting had originally been scheduled for May 25. But Burley City Councilwoman Adria Masoner said at Tuesday's City Council meeting that organizers didn't realize May 25 was during Memorial Day weekend.

The town meeting is open to everyone, Masoner said. She's hopeful people will come and share ideas about their priorities and goals for the community.

The meeting was prompted by J.R. Simplot Co.'s decision to close is potato processing plant in Heyburn.

Meeting planners want to develop a plan for Burley and to talk about forming committees to deal with such things as the city's centennial, beautification of the downtown and business potential.

Heyburn begins selling electricity to United Electric

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

HEYBURN – Residents of Heyburn will soon be receiving power from United Electric Co-op.

The Heyburn City Council announced Wednesday it has agreed to sell the city's electrical distribution system to United Electric. The council entered into a memorandum of understanding with United on Wednesday as the first step of the sale.

The sale agreement provides for a cash payment of $1.35 million to the city at the closure of the sale and additional payments equal to 3.5 percent of the gross sales of electricity in the former Heyburn service territory for five years.

There was little discussion among the council before approving the memorandum.

City Attorney Steven Tuft said under the current rate schedules for Heyburn and United, Heyburn rates are lower. Heyburn customers will continue to pay the same proportion less than United customers for five years.

That could change if one of four things happen, Tuft said: if the cost of wholesale power from the Bonneville Power Administration increases; if a loss of 25 percent or more of electric load is seen from the J.R. Simplot Co. plant in three consecutive months; if an increase of 25 percent or more of electric load comes from the Simplot plant in three consecutive months; or if something catastrophic happens.

Hansen kindergartners could have all-day classes

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN – There is a possibility Hansen kindergarten students will have the option of all-day classes next fall.

The Hansen School Board discussed on Monday the pros and cons of all-day classes. Elementary school principal Tom Standley said there is much more for kindergartners to learn than when their parents went to school, and students make greater academic gains when exposed to more learning time.

All-day sessions will help some parents with baby-sitting problems. This possible change will be discussed at the board's June meeting.

Also next fall, there will be free lunches for children between ages 1 and 18 during the 28 days the summer school is in session. Adults wanting to eat at the school may do so for $2.50 a plate. The meals are paid for by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Other school board business included:

• Contracts – The board voted to hire all contracted teachers and extend the contacts for the three administrators. The board also accepted the first reading of the proposed policy for credit evaluation. This policy deals with classes students have taken outside the Hansen School District.

• Selections, scholarship winners, awards – Bridget Shanahan has been chosen for the National Youth Leadership Network Conference in Washington, D.C., this summer; Valerie Worden was selected to participate in the Polya Extended Research Project in the University of Idaho summer program to improve the use of technology in small-school math programs; Shawn Dean has been offered an Idaho Promise Category A scholarship for the 2002-03 year (The $3,000 per-year fund is renewable.); Lesley Adams, Chase Funk and Danielle Van Dyk will be attending Idaho Business Week this summer at Boise State University; the junior high band received a No. 1 rating at Festival; and the board awarded Sara Nelson the board of trustees scholarship for next year.

• Upcoming events – Upcoming events include the state track meet Thursday, Friday and Saturday; graduation on Tuesday; elementary school swimming party on Tuesday for students who met their yearly reading goal; awards assembly for grades K-3 at 1 p.m. May 30, and for grades 4-6 at 2:30 p.m.; elementary field day 9:30-11:30 a.m. May 31, barbecue 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. with school dismissed at 1 p.m.; end of the year barbecue for the secondary school at 1 p.m. May 31; [illegible] scramble to support [illegible] athletics will be held [illegible] Valley Golf [illegible] June 4. Other county candidates

• County assessor – Gary Baty, a Democratic candidate for county assessor, received $319 of in-kind contributions from William Assendrup of Buhl and spent $319 on his campaign. Republican incumbent Gerald Bowden listed zero contributions and expenditures.

• County clerk – Republican incumbent Robert Fort listed zero contributions and $37.50 in expenditures. Democrat Oleta Bybee reported zero contributions and expenditures.

• County coroner – Republican incumbent Dennis Chambers, running unopposed, received $1,360 in contributions and spent $1,330.28. His largest contributor was Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, which donated $1,000.

• County treasurer – Republican incumbent Debbie Kauffman, also running unopposed, listed zero contributions and a $39.90 expenditure.

State

Darrell Babbitt and Jim Pratt are the two political outsiders. Babbitt, who worked for the chamber of commerce for decades, said he just wants to represent the people. But mainly, "I want to bolster Idaho's economy." Pratt is running for office as a citizen advocate, he said. "The people seem disenfranchised from government." He said he would use the office as a bully pulpit to tell the Legislature what it should be working on.

Gould pointed out that legislators are elected to work on law-making, not the lt. governor. She said if she gets the job, she'll work as an ombudsman to bring business to Idaho and to also make Idaho businesses work better. For example, she said she would broker deals in Mini-Cassia to bring cheese factories and dairy producers to the area.

Risch defined the job much the same, though his strategy was to repeatedly attack Riggs for not focusing more on cultivating business. Riggs would roll his eyes and when he got a chance, he would point out that the governor has defined his own role as that of economic ambassador.

But Risch insisted there is a lot more to be done in drumming up business for the state.

Larry Eastland, who boasts a Ph.D. in political science and experience in the Ford and Reagan administrations, also spoke about more jobs and higher paying jobs.

But his main issue came out when candidates were asked about term limits. He said he started the initiative in 1990 in Idaho.

"It's a 'we the people' versus 'we who think we know better than the people,'" he said.

Gould, whose husband – House Speaker Bruce Newcomb – headed the repeal in January, came back at Eastland.

"We might have supported something 110 percent four or 10 years ago, but things change. An initiative has the same standing as a law.

"I hate to admit this in my home territory, but sometimes I have made bad votes. The blessing is you can go back the next year and undo what you did the year before," she said.

Gould, Risch and Riggs are considered the front runners in the race.

Fish

impress Idahoans on "the importance of research, how it benefits the state. Thus, it was with gusto that Rep. Maxine Bell, donned a white lab coat and spent most of Wednesday grinding up fish bones for toxicity tests and determining fat levels in fish food.

"I knew it was important but at least now when it becomes a funding issue, I can tell people why research is important," she said. "It's a tremendous asset."

Bell was part of a get-the-legislators-to-worksites initiative designed to raise awareness for issues that come up for legislation.

Noteworthy is the center's work with ornamental fish. More than just offering pretty adornments to homes, the ornamental fish industry is big business and is well suited to the Magic Valley with its abundant geothermal water supply.

Ornamental fish, Zebra fish in particular, are also gradually replacing rabbits and mice as the preferred laboratory animal. With their ability to mature fairly quickly and eggs large enough to manipulate, Zebra fish are well suited for studies in cell biology.

But just five years ago, the facility was left for dead.

The U.S. Department of Fish and Wildlife operated the building for 25 years before closing its doors and liquidating most of its scientific equipment.

It was with the help of the National Science Foundation that the lab not only was revived, but excelled under Hardy's direction.

The science foundation's involvement in Idaho also represents a shift in attention. Since its inception in 1950, the foundation's grants generally made their way to California or to New England and the mid-Atlantic states.

But the foundation developed the Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research to develop "research infrastructure" in all states. The program has sent millions of dollars Idaho's way, helping the state gradually rise in importance in the aquaculture field.

Wednesday's event was attended by Dr. Judith A. Ramaley, the assistant director of education and human resources with the National Science Foundation. She was there to see what was, in her mind, an ideal use of the program's funding.

make the best use of what snow remains atop the peak.

"The Snowpod bogs down in wet, soggy snow," said Pete Rieke, who invented the device and is leading the Mount Shasta expedition.

Davis should be recognizable to anyone who visited Salt Lake City during the 2002 Winter Olympics. She was the only paralympian featured on giant banners of athletes that hung from many downtown buildings.

Other expedition members include:

• Rieke, who in 2000 became the first paraplegic to summit Mount Rainier.

• Mark Wellman, who in 1999 became the first paraplegic to scale El Capitan and Half Dome at Yosemite National Park using only his arms.

• Keegan Reilly, who last year used a custom-built four-wheeled bicycle to summit Mount Elbert, the highest peak in Colorado.

The group will be joined by about 20 able-bodied experienced support climbers, most of whom will coordinate the ascent from a base camp.

"The objective is to keep as many people off the mountain as possible," Rieke said. "The more people you have up there, the more stuff you have to haul."

Rieke chose Mount Shasta for its easy access from roads and relatively straightforward climbing route. Some climbing on the final days will require belay lines, but team members will climb on their own power.

"This is about breaking down stereotypes about people with disabilities," Davis said. "The only limits are the ones in our minds."

Rieke, recognized as a pioneer in disabled mountaineering, said similar climbs before now often relied on an able-bodied climber setting lines to allow the disabled mountaineer to "row" up the rope while sitting on a sled.

"Most people don't climb mountains alone and disabled people don't, either," Rieke said. "But we get a little more sense of accomplishment by ascending on our own with the Snowpod. We have a greater degree of freedom."

Although mountain climbing has inherent risks even for the able-bodied, Rieke is confident organizers have made the expedition safe. The biggest concerns, he said, are altitude sickness or hypothermia.

"I just want to keep everybody safe," Rieke said. "When you get on steep grounds, you use ropes, but on Mount Shasta there's very little danger of falling down crevasses."

CAFO

Gary Coleman.

"But they can build $500,000 homes," responded Wendell resident Vi Benson.

The new ordinance requires all CAFOs operating in the county to be registered or hold siting permits. If an operation wants to increase in size, the owner would have to obtain a new siting permit.

Other provisions of the measure:

• CAFO owners must notify the county within 30 days of ceasing or suspending operations. If an owner doesn't notify the county, and the CAFO is vacant for 10 years, the county can take away the owner's siting permit and grandfather rights.

• CAFOs can be transferred to a new owner if the new owner files a transfer statement within 60 days from the date of purchase. The new owner must sign a form saying the CAFO is in compliance with the Gooding County ordinance and that a nutrient management plan is in place.

• If a CAFO uses potable water to operate, it must hold a permit or license from the Idaho Department of Water Resources. If its water right becomes inadequate or is not in compliance, the owner will have 30 days to come into compliance by either obtaining a new water right or removing animal units.

• New CAFOs will only be able to operate in agricultural zoning districts, with the exception of aquaculture CAFOs, which will be allowed in all zones except residential zones. Siting permits will be required for new CAFOs.

• A waste treatment system shall not be located closer than 1,320 feet from a residence belonging to someone other than the applicant or closer than 300 feet from property lines. No new residence located in an agricultural zone shall be built within 1,320 feet of a waste treatment system. Aquaculture CAFOs are exempt from setbacks except for the storage of solid waste on land.

• No waste treatment system shall be located closer than 500 feet from a domestic well not owned by the CAFO. A domestic well for a new residence which doesn't belong to the CAFO must meet the 500-foot setback from the waste treatment system.

• If a land-applied wastewater plan receives a "severe" rating, the applicant must have a detailed environmental plan showing how the problem will be resolved.

• All new or modified liquid waste systems must be designed by licensed professional engineers and constructed in accordance with regulations.

Violations of the ordinance could result in a misdemeanor and could be punishable by up to six months in jail and up to a $300 fine.

Elmore County Commission candidates

Elections around Magic Valley

MOUNTAIN HOME – Four men have their names on the ballot for Elmore County's District 1 commissioner's seat. This seat is currently held by Craig McCurry, who is not seeking re-election. This is a four-year term that pays an annual salary of $24,000.

Basic information	Goals	Confined animal feeding operations
Name: Ferenc Edes Age: 61 Occupation: Manager of driving range Residence: Mountain Home Years in county: One and a half Political experience: One term as village trustee and one term on the zoning board of appeals in Bowling Brook, Ill.	"I'd like to see controlled growth for the county, mixing residential with commercial. I'd like to see the commission be a little more concerned with the day-to-day things in the community. I'd like to make the commission more responsive to the people that elected them. I'm also for specific term limits. I don't care if it's a little or big community."	"I think that there might be some sort of technological solutions to some of the smell and processing problems that would help CAFO operators deal with some of the byproducts of these CAFO operations. We need to try to see if (we) can get the CAFO operators interested in some type of abatement programs which would then make them not be a burden or nuisance to the community."
Name: Hank Redford Age: Not given Occupation: Semi-retired electrical contractor Residence: Mountain Home Years in county: 27 Political experience: 11 years on Elmore County P&Z Commission	"Maintaining county financial responsibility. For the past five years, Elmore County has reduced the tax levy. And I intend to maintain the same attitude. Also, due to agreements with Idaho waste contract, people here in Elmore County are getting a 50 percent reduction in their pickup fees – I intend to support that."	"I cannot express an opinion (on) the CAFO ordinance at this point in time because if I'm a successful candidate, I may have to sit in on an appeal hearing."
Name: A.O. "Arlie" Shaw Age: 56Occupation: Retired Residence: Mountain Home Years in county: On and off most of his life Political experience: One four-year term on the Grandview Bureau School Board	"I'd like to see more cooperation between the cities and the county. I think everybody in Elmore County needs to be keenly aware of the water situation. I think right now the advisory board within the county that is working with the state's water resource board and they're coming up with some good ideas I think. Before the county goes out to recruit new businesses we have to remember it won't do any good if we don't have the water."	"The CAFO issue is the most important issue right now. The county commissioners recently upheld planning and zoning's decision to not allow the CAFO near King Hill. They have approved some dairies in the county and so far they've been in areas probably where there isn't any conflict. The proposed ordinance is fairly well written, but I think a little more thought should be given to the setbacks."
Name: James Steelsmith Age: 43 Occupation: Self-employed builder Residence: Mountain Home Years in county: 26 Political experience: None	"One of my goals is to have county government more customer-orientated toward voters, the people we work for, and to have emphasis on constant improvement. Get rid of some of the ridiculous rules. There are some interim ordinances that need to be finished. The fact finding needs to be finished. Another huge issue is the declining aquifer. We have to help with the decline of the aquifer. If we don't stop the decline, there won't be a county."	"The current interim is being renewed each year and there is (a) proposed CAFO ordinance that is extremely lax. I think the CAFO ordinance should put a cap period on the number of cattle in the county. Otherwise we'll end up like Gooding and Twin Falls county. We should be able to learn from what other people have done and improve on that. Of course we need to enforce the environmental regulations, we need to get tougher."

Prescribed burns jump lines

BOISE (AP) – Firefighters hope to contain two prescribed burns that blew out of their planned boundaries in southwestern Idaho last weekend. The fires are located about six miles northeast of Garden Valley and do not pose a threat to nearby communities.

The prescribed burns on the Danskin-Gallagher and Anderson-Pyle projects exceeded their limits by about 473 acres last weekend. On Tuesday, about 60 firefighters and a helicopter began putting out spot fires. Officials predicted it should be contained by Friday.

Within the Garden Valley area, 15,412 acres have been designated for prescribed burns to reduce fuel hazards that could feed wildfires this summer.

The prescribed burn plan had been followed, but a combination of strong winds and high temperatures made previously ignited fires more active, Boise National Forest Fire Staff Officer said.

Buhl School Board applies for Even Start program funds

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BUHL – The Buhl School District is applying for a grant that would get the Even Start program up and running.

The district has applied for a $182,852 grant from the State Department of Education under the Bureau of Federal Programs Compensatory Education and has partnered with College of Southern Idaho adult basic education program.

Popplewell Elementary School Principal Helen Brown outlined the Even Start proposal to the School Board on Tuesday.

Even Start provides family-centered education projects to help break the cycle of poverty and illiteracy by improving the educational opportunities of low-income families. The program integrates early childhood education, adult literacy or adult basic education and parenting education into a unified family literacy program.

If the district receives the grant, the program will start in the summer and will require an administrator, two full-time preschool instructors and a home-school coordinator.

The grant is for one year and may be renewed on a yearly basis for six years.

Other school board business included:

• Graduation rehearsals – Rehearsals for graduation exercises are at 10 a.m. Friday morning. Graduation is at 4 p.m. Sunday in the middle school gymnasium.

• New middle school – Superintendent Rick Hill reported on the different methods of floating a bond issue and the amount needed based on 15- and 20-year contracts in order to rebuild and remodel the middle school.

Hill also gave an estimated demolition cost report on the middle school and preliminary costs for a new parking lot.

• Budget hearing – The annual budget hearing has been set for June 18.

• Policy reviews – The board held the first readings of two revised policy reviews concerning the hiring of administrators and personnel employees. The policies add the involvement of school administrators and staff and the school board to the curriculum decision-making at a particular school.

• New board members – Since School Board incumbents for the District 1 and 2 seats did not run for re-election, Ken McDonald will take the District 1 seat while Don Campbell will take over for District 2. The new board members will take office on August 1.

Times-News correspondent Mary Lou Potts can be reached in Buhl at 543-8854.

Consumer office offers services in Spanish

BOISE(AP) – The state Attorney General's office is using grants to help Spanish-speaking residents navigate consumer laws.

The office is providing interpreters to those who call the Consumer Protection Unit and publishing nine educational handouts in Spanish.

"We are now able to offer improved service to Idaho's underserved and growing Spanish speaking population as a result of a consumer protection settlement," Attorney General Al Lance said in a statement.

Jerome grows, thanks to church, business

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME – The city of Jerome grew by 40.7 acres this week, when two parcels of land were annexed into city limits.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints out of Utah requested the city annex 4 acres of land located at 100 S. 50 E. The church plans to build a new meeting house there.

WOW Logistics, a Wisconsin-based company, also requested the city annex 36.7 acres of land located at 100 S. 50 W. The company plans to build a warehouse on its land.

Other council business Tuesday included:

• New zoning – The council voted to give the property on which St. Benedicts Family Medical Center is located a central business district zoning. The land, located at 709 N. Lincoln Ave., had never been zoned previously. The zoning will help designate future land use.

St. Benedicts recently announced plans to build a new facility at Crossroads Ranch near the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and Interstate 84.

A public hearing on the zoning had been held before the planning and zoning commission on April 8. Another public hearing was held before the City Council on April 16.

• New employees – The public works department was given approval to hire five new people at $9.50 per hour, or $1,643 per month, to use as needed as technicians or on the pipe-laying crew. The new employees are: Danny Thrall, Darrell White, Richard Hamlin, Kenneth Vieu and Ron Chepa.

City Engineer Scott Bybee said having a city pipe-laying crew, rather than hiring contractors to do the work, would probably save the city $2 million over the life of pipe laying projects. Bybee said because of rapid growth in the city, projects were lined up for the next several years.

• Surveying contract – The city approved a contract for $11,370 with J-U-B Engineers for surveying the necessary control points for the citywide State Revolving Loan fund water project. The contract will specify that the billing for the work would be held until the loan money is released or until the new budget year, whichever comes first.

City staff can't do this survey work because a land surveyor is required, Bybee said. The staff plans to take aerial photos of the city to use as a base for the mapping. Then the control points will be plugged into the map.

• Heritage Days Festival – City administrator Travis Rothweiler told the council that the first annual Heritage Days Festival went well. The organizers are looking at possibly moving the festival to the third weekend in August to coincide with the antique car show.

• Joint planning group – Councilman Jerry Crozier and Rothweiler volunteered to be the city representatives to the joint city/county planning group.

• Cat overpopulation – Councilwoman Marjorie Schmidt said Jerome Pet Pals was considering a project to control the overpopulation of feral cats in town. The project involves trapping, spaying or neutering the cats, marking the neutered cats for identification, then releasing the cats back into their old neighborhoods. The project is still in the planning stage, Schmidt said.

Jerome seeks grant to accommodate company

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME – A Community Development Block Grant from the Idaho Department of Commerce could help finance sewer and water lines to WOW Logistics.

The Jerome City Council held a public hearing on the block grant application Tuesday. There was no public comment.

Scott Bybee, city engineer, explained the proposed project to the City Council: 5,400 feet of 12-inch and 700 feet of 10-inch gravity-flow water lines, and 4,500 feet of 8-inch gravity-flow sewer lines would be installed from the current termination point on 100 South to WOW Logistics, then extended farther south and connected back onto the city system on 200 South.

A lift station would be built at WOW Logistics, a 232,000-square-foot warehouse and distribution center, and 1,300 feet of pressurized 4-inch sewer line would run from the lift station north to 100 South and hook onto the city sewage system near Jerome Cheese.

The total project is estimated at $1 million. According to the grant proposal, the city will provide $104,000 cash and $440,700 in labor, equipment, materials and other in-kind contributions. The Jerome Urban Renewal Agency will provide $115,100 and if the Idaho Department of Commerce approves the proposal, the block grant will contribute $350,000 to the project.

"Block grants are tied to job creation and economically depressed areas," said Carlene Herring, economic development division manager from Region IV Development Corporation.

Although the south end of the city of Jerome is not economically depressed, the Magic Valley is, overall, economically depressed, Herring said.

One thousand workers in Magic Valley will soon be displaced in Mini-Cassia when the Simplot plant closes, Herring said. Those workers could be recruited to WOW Logistics.

The grant application is due June 17. If the application is approved, the city should have the money sometime in August, Herring said.

A resolution to proceed with the grant application process is planned for the next city council meeting on June 4.

Campaign will refile disclosure document

BOISE (AP) – Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's re-election campaign acknowledged on Wednesday accepting an illegal contribution from a special-interest political action committee and was forced to refile its preprimary financial disclosure report after failing to identify dozens of donors who gave it over $51,000.

Gov. Kempthorne

Kempthorne campaign spokesman Graham Patterson called the illegal contribution from the Western Republican Political Action Committee in Salt Lake City an oversight on his part.

He blamed the failure to include those who contributed to the Governor's Ball last January on a computer software problem.

Patterson said $5,000 of the $15,000 Western Republican PAC contribution would be returned to the group that supports GOP governors and others and $5,000 would be earmarked for use in the general election campaign. State law limits contributions for state offices to $5,000 per election.

But the Kempthorne campaign's attempt to identify the donors of the $51,000 it gained from the Governor's Ball appeared to contradict the state Republican Party's federal campaign finance report by claiming money from donors whose contributions had already been fully claimed by the state party.

Commission approves larger generators able to sell power

Idaho rates are low – E4

BOISE (AP) – State regulators have increased the maximum size of independent generating plants that have the right to sell their power to utilities and lengthened the contracts covering those sales.

The Public Utilities Commission approved raising the maximum capacity of so-called cogeneration plants from one megawatt – enough to power 750 homes – to five megawatts and extend the length of contracts from five to 20 years.

All three Idaho investor-owned utilities objected to the changes that the commission said would encourage the development of renewable energy.

"The price spikes that occurred in 2000 and 2001 we are asked to ignore, as if it was merely an anomaly," the commissioners said. "What has not changed, we find, is the utilities' opposition" to the federal cogeneration law and the facilities qualified to take advantage of it."

The energy crisis of the late 1970s prompted Congress to pass the Public Utilities Regulatory Policies Act to promote renewable energy technology as an alternative to fossil fuels and new power plants and required utilities to offer to buy the power generated by these small producers.

N.Y. takes warnings in stride

NEW YORK (AP) – FBI reports of potential terrorist attacks against New York and some of its most popular attractions had law enforcement on high alert, and officials said there was no cause for alarm.

The Brooklyn Bridge was closed for about an hour early Wednesday until police determined that a knapsack found on the road was harmless.

Later, to prevent public fear, police announced that Fleet Week ceremonies Wednesday afternoon were to include the firing of guns and cannons and military flyovers. The annual celebration was expected to draw 6,000 naval personnel to the city through the Memorial Day weekend.

The FBI warned city officials Tuesday it had received uncorroborated information that terrorists have made threats against New York and its landmarks, including the Statue of Liberty, the Brooklyn Bridge and City Hall.

Some New Yorkers seemed to be taking the warnings in stride.

"You can't stop your life, especially in New York," said 30-year-old Queens resident George Guzman, sitting on a bench in busy midtown Manhattan. "You just can't be scared. If that was the case, the streets would be empty."

The warning came about a week before the city plans to end search and recovery work at the site of the World Trade Center, where more than 2,800 people died in the Sept. 11 attacks.

It also came before the start of Fleet Week 2002, which boasts the largest number of U.S. Naval vessels ever sent to New York City by an Atlantic Fleet commander. Sailors, Marines and Coast Guard personnel will be aboard 22 ships, including six warships.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg said he didn't see any reason why people shouldn't enjoy Fleet Week and other activities over the weekend.

"The more people that are out the safer this city will be, and we are used to hosting big events. Fleet Week is just another one," he said. "There are always threats unfortunately, but fortunately, most are hoaxes."

Iran lashes back at U.S. criticism

SHIRAZ, Iran (AP) – The giant rift between Iran and the United States over what defines terrorism is running squarely through Kazem Alavi's modest nut shop.

Washington now considers Iran the world's most active sponsor of terrorism for allegedly boosting aid to Palestinian militants. Alavi sees a vastly different world: Israeli-American treachery seeking to destroy Palestinian freedom fighters.

"The (American) accusations are a big lie," the 45-year-old merchant said Wednesday. "It is insulting, especially as we watch the terrorist activities of the Israeli regime that is strongly backed by America. I really think it's a joke."

Similar protests across Iran greeted the State Department report on global terrorism issued Tuesday.

Sabah Zanganeh, a senior adviser to Iran's foreign minister, called America an oppressor that "cannot sit in the position of judge." Iran's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, criticized any efforts to improve ties with Washington as "treason and stupidity."

Anti-U.S. salvos are a staple of Iran's leadership. But the latest report reverberated far afield at a time when many Iranians are still incensed by President Bush saying four months ago that their nation belonged to an "axis of evil."

In Shiraz, 540 miles south of Tehran, politics is usually taken with a sense of cosmopolitan moderation. The city is a major tourist stop – even for Americans – who come to visit the 2,500-year-old ruins of Persepolis and the lavish tomb of the 14th-century poet Hafez. Before the 1979 Islamic revolution, an English-language university had many U.S. professors and students.

Hard-liners had a difficult time mobilizing marches in Shiraz two years ago when 10 Iranians Jews were tried and convicted of spying for Israel.

But the response to the latest report exposed raw emotions.

"I used to believe the Iranian government was blocking improved relations," said Mehdi Esmaili, 29, a Shiraz University student. "Now it seems to me that the United States is unfair and a bully."

Hossein, a hotel worker who would only give his first name, said Bush leads an "axis of arrogance."

Crew escapes as Navy sub catches fire

SAN DIEGO (AP) – A Navy research submarine caught fire and partially flooded while surfaced off the Pacific Coast, but all 43 people aboard were rescued, military officials said Wednesday.

The USS Dolphin reported the fire and flooding at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday as it was operating about 100 miles off the coast of San Diego.

The crew was evacuated by small boat to the McGaw, another Navy vessel in the vicinity at the time, and will be returned to San Diego.

Two crew members who fell in the water during the rescue were recovered by a Coast Guard helicopter.

Some crew members sustained minor injuries, described by Cmdr. David Koontz as "bumps and bruises."

SOURCES: Associated Press, ESRI AP

The fire and flooding were controlled and the submarine was stabilized early Wednesday, military officials said. The vessel remained at the accident site, assisted by a frigate, the USS Thach, and a submarine support vessel. The Dolphin was expected to arrive in San Diego later Wednesday.

The cause of the accident is under investigation.

The submarine had been on a training mission since Monday, but the Navy would not provide details.

The Dolphin, stationed in San Diego, is the Navy's long diesel-electric research submarine. Commissioned in 1968, the 165-foot-long vessel established a world depth record for operating submarines, with a recorded test depth of more than 3,000 feet.

The Dolphin can carry scientific payloads of more than 12 tons, a considerably greater capacity than any other deep diving research vessel operating today, the Navy says.

Senate clears path for legislation giving Bush more trade authority

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Senate signaled strong bipartisan support for trade legislation on Wednesday, voting to curtail debate on a measure designed to enhance President Bush's negotiating authority while expanding federal aid to American workers hurt by imports.

"Trade is in the interest of our workers, trade is in the interest of job creation, trade is in the interest of developing nations as well as developed nations," Bush said, prodding Congress to act as he left for a trip through three Western European countries and Russia.

In a coincidence of timing, the Senate voted 68-29 a few hours later to limit debate, with final passage expected no later than today.

Judge throws out farmers' suit over debt bailout deals

FARGO, N.D. (AP) – A federal judge has thrown out a lawsuit filed by farmers across the country over the government's attempt to recoup millions of dollars from bailouts written in the late 1980s.

While the bailout contracts are "poorly drafted and confusing," they do say the farmers owe the government at least some of the amount by which their land increased in value since the deals were struck, U.S. District Judge Rodney Webb wrote Tuesday.

The farmers' lawyers will review Webb's decision with their clients before deciding whether to appeal, attorney Courtney Koebele said Wednesday.

The dispute hinges on a 1987 law that restructured or wrote off billions of dollars in farm loans. It has been credited with saving 23,000 farmers from foreclosure during the 1980s.

The lawsuit said the federal Farm Service Agency began asking for a total of $4.3 million from farmers in 1999. The agency asked each farmer for half the amount of money by which that farmer's land increased in value from 1989, the year it agreed to write off loans above the actual value of the land.

The farmers contended they had to share only appreciation money if they sold their land or quit farming within the 10-year term of the contracts; otherwise, the deals would simply expire and they would owe nothing.

The Agriculture Department, which oversees the FSA, said the contracts, called shared appreciation agreements, came due 10 years after they were signed – or sooner, if the farmers left the land.

Kashmiris living along the Line of Control at Chakoti, 58 kilometers from Muzaffarabad capital of Pakistan-held Kashmir carry their livestock and belongings as they fled their hometown Wednesday due to Indian shelling. Tension is high between Pakistan and India over the Kashmir dispute.

India leader: We'll fight terrorism

KUPWARA, India (AP) – India warned rival Pakistan on Wednesday that it's not bluffing about a "decisive battle" against terrorism and told its soldiers on the tense Kashmir border to be ready for sacrifice.

Army officers responded by declaring the troops were primed for war and prepared to die, and India's navy moved five warships nearer to Pakistani waters to bolster its strength in the area.

War fears between the nuclear-armed rivals rose after cross-border shelling killed dozens over the past week. The neighbors have fought two wars over divided Kashmir, a Himalayan region both claim in its entirety.

In Islamabad, Pakistan's top military leaders and Cabinet met Wednesday and issued a statement endorsing efforts to resolve the dispute through negotiations, but warned that Pakistan was ready "to meet any contingency resolutely and with full force."

"The meeting also called on the international community to impress upon India the dangers inherent in the explosive situation created as a result of Indian belligerence and obduracy," the statement said.

India says it is being forced to fight a proxy war with Pakistan, which it accuses of training and arming Islamic militants who have waged a battle for Kashmir's independence or merger with Muslim Pakistan for 12 years. The militants have staged deadly terrorist attacks inside mostly Hindu India.

Islamabad says it has no control over the militants and provides them only moral, not material, support. In September, Pakistan joined the U.S.-led war on terrorism.

In India, hundreds of soldiers in bulletproof vests, many with mine detectors and sniffer dogs, patrolled the roads around the army base where Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee addressed more than 600 soldiers on the cease-fire line that divides Kashmir between India and Pakistan.

Vajpayee asked the soldiers "to be ready for sacrifice. Your goal should be victory. It's time to fight a decisive battle."

The Indian navy said Wednesday it had moved five warships from the eastern command in the Bay of Bengal to the western command off Bombay, in the Arabian Sea, closer to Pakistani waters. The ships are about 500 nautical miles from the Pakistani port of Karachi.

"The deployment of the ships is to increase the operational preparedness of the western sea force," said Cmdr. Rahul Gupta, an Indian navy spokesman.

The warships include a destroyer, a multipurpose frigate and three missile corvettes. India's fleet consists of an aircraft carrier, eight destroyers, 10 frigates and between 17 and 19 submarines.

Sharon coalition teeters

Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM, May 23 – Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon made good Thursday on his threat to drive two ultra-Orthodox parties from his coalition, betting that his rising popularity will keep him in power with a razor-thin parliamentary majority.

Sharon let his dismissal of ministers and deputy ministers from the Shas and United Torah Judaism parties take effect at 12:30 a.m. today, hours after parliament gave preliminary approval to his economic austerity plan, which those parties helped defeat Monday.

Sharon had warned the parties that if they did not vote in favor of the package Wednesday, he would fire them for insubordination. In response, 17 legislators of the Shas Party staged a walkout from the Knesset, or parliament, before the vote.

They were joined by three United Torah Judaism lawmakers. Two other party members voted against the plan to slash about $2.8 billion from the budget, which the ultra-Orthodox say will hurt the poor. The bill passed its first reading by a vote of 65 to 26, with seven abstentions.

"The break with these parties is final. The matter is closed," Sharon told reporters after the vote. As the early-morning deadline drew near, Shas ministers packed their government offices and moved out.

Newspaper editorials praised Sharon for showing leadership in standing up to parties that previous prime ministers had appeased. A public opinion poll conducted by Yediot Aharonot newspaper Tuesday night showed that 70 percent of respondents supported Sharon's decision.

Some analysts said that the dire economic situation left Sharon little choice but to win passage of the emergency measures. The economy, mired in a recession, has seen the value of the shekel erode, unemployment rise and foreign investment evaporate since the Palestinian conflict erupted in September 2000.

Senior economists who met with the prime minister last week "warned Sharon the economy is heading for the abyss with giant steps," economic analyst Motti Bassok wrote in Haaretz newspaper Wednesday. "If he didn't take matters in hand, he could find himself being blamed for its collapse."

Suicide bomber kills two people south of Tel Aviv

RISHON LETZION, Israel (AP) – A suicide bomber blew himself up in a southern city Wednesday night, killing two other people and wounding 27, police and rescue workers said. The suicide blast, the second here in two weeks, followed a series of Israeli attacks that left five Palestinians dead.

Among the Palestinians killed in the attacks was Mahmoud Titi, 30, local leader of the Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigade militia who had said his goal was to build a Palestinian army that would hunt and kill Israeli soldiers and settlers.

In Rishon Letzion, a residential community of 100,000, police spokesman Gil Kleiman said two people and a suicide bomber were killed and 27 wounded, including three in critical condition.

Israel television said the dead were a 15-year-old boy and a 66-year-old man.

The bomber blew himself up under a green canopy at the edge of a small park where immigrants from the former Soviet Union gathered nightly to play cards.

Police spokesman Haim Cohen said the bomber had dyed his hair blond, apparently so that the Russians would not think he was an Arab. "His hair was dyed blonde, short, punk looking," Cohen said. "I'm sure he disguised himself so as not to arouse suspicion at the scene."

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

"There was a loud boom and I just saw body parts," said witness Orin Mahmon. "I saw a guy all black and people with no arms and legs."

United Nations report takes stock of world's environmental woes

LONDON (AP) – A quarter of the world's mammal species – from tigers to rhinos – could face extinction within 30 years, and millions of people could suffer severe water shortages unless firm political action is taken to protect the environment, the United Nations said Wednesday.

In a state-of-the-world report, the U.N. Environment Program said the Earth faces more rapid, dramatic and devastating environmental change over the next three decades.

"The increasing pace of change and degree of interaction between regions and issues has made it more difficult than ever to look into the future with confidence," the organization said in Global Environment Outlook-3.

At a London news conference, U.N. Environment Program executive director Klaus Toepfer said human development "across more and more areas of the planet is not sustainable. Unless we alter our course, we will be left with very little."

Released in advance of the U.N. World Summit on Sustainable Development – to be held Aug. 26-Sept. 4 in Johannesburg, South Africa – the report is based on contributions from more than 1,000 scientists collaborating with the Nairobi, Kenya-based U.N. agency.

It assesses environmental changes over the past 30 years and looks ahead to the next three decades – a period the United Nations says will be critical in determining the future of the planet.

The report says the world's biodiversity is under threat, with 1,130 of the more than 4,000 mammal species and 1,183 of the 10,000 birds regarded as globally threatened – meaning they could become extinct but are not necessarily under immediate threat of extinction.

Among the most threatened are the black rhinoceros of Africa, the Siberian tiger and the Amur leopard of Asia, according to the U.N.'s World Conservation Monitoring Center.

Much of the threat is man-made, with loss of habitat from industry, mining and farming, and the introduction of nonnative species among the chief dangers. Fifteen percent of the world's land has been degraded by human activity such as overgrazing, the report says, while half the world's rivers are seriously depleted or polluted.

The report warns that roads, mining and other infrastructure developments could affect over 70 percent of the world's surface in the next 30 years.

In addition, almost one-third of the world's fish stocks are depleted, overexploited or recovering as a result of overfishing.

Michael Novacek, provost of science at the American Museum of Natural History, said the U.N. figures are in line with projections based on land loss and degradation of oceans "that as much as 30 percent of species diversity will be erased by the middle of this century."

"We have a taste of this in marine ecosystems," he said, citing devastated coral reefs in the Caribbean, loss of fisheries in the Mediterranean and the "hugely threatened" South China Sea, which feeds so many people.

Pope John Paul II listens to Azerbaijan's President Geldar Aliev on Wednesday during the welcoming ceremony at the airport in Baku, Azerbaijan.

Pope pushes ahead with peace call

BAKU, Azerbaijan (AP) – Stooped, slow and unsteady, Pope John Paul II began a visit to this Muslim nation Wednesday, determined to pursue peace "as long as I have breath" but reading just a few lines of his speeches and staying seated most of the time.

The five-day trip to Azerbaijan and Bulgaria was the start of a trying travel period for John Paul, who turned 82 on Saturday and appears increasingly frail.

"It is what you see," said the pope's spokesman, Joaquin Navarro-Valls, when asked about John Paul's health on the flight from Rome. The pope's speech is slurred and his hands tremble – symptoms of Parkinson's disease – and he walks with difficulty because of knee and hip ailments.

As it often has since the Sept. 11 attacks on the United States, the pope's agenda in this former Soviet republic included a condemnation of fundamentalism, calls for religious tolerance and an appeal that violence must never be carried out in the name of religion.

At the presidential palace, the pope spoke in heavily slurred, barely audible Russian before turning over most of the rest of his speech to a priest to read, including a passage underlining his intention to continue his papacy, now in its 24th year.

"I have come to Azerbaijan as an ambassador of peace. As long as I have breath within me I shall cry out: 'Peace, in the name of God,'" the passage said.

Navarro-Valls called it a "reconfirmation" of John Paul's recent affirmations that he is staying on the job.

The spokesman brushed aside questions about John Paul's reaction to statements by two influential cardinals last week that he would consider resigning if his health no longer allowed him to carry out his mission, saying: "He reads the newspapers."

DOT offers orientation to minority biz owners

TWIN FALLS – A U.S. Department of Transportation Disadvantaged Business Enterprise Program Orientation will be held from 8 a.m. to noon June 27 in the Taylor Administration Building at the College of Southern Idaho, 315 Falls Ave.

Female, minority and disadvantaged small-business owners who provide transportation-related services in construction, consulting, supplies and other areas are invited. The program is designed to foster equal opportunity for minority, female and disadvantaged business owners on federal aid transportation projects, and help them improve their business efficiency and flexibility, organizers say.

Participants will learn how the program works, how to qualify and become certified as a disadvantaged business enterprise owner, and what kind of benefits they can get through supportive services. They also will learn about the services available to small businesses through other government agencies.Admission is free. New comers give time to community

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY – Newcomers to the community helped plant a lasting gift in their new homes.

About 30 Newcomer Center students, their parents, staff members and other volunteers planted trees at Freedom Park April 27 to celebrate the National Day of Service.

Beatriz "Betty" Nava with the center coordinated the effort with Brent Winn, Burley city parks and golf course superintendent.

The center, which is located behind the College of Southern Idaho Mini-Cassia Center, offers literacy training, and assistance in integrating immigrants into the community.

It is operated through the Cassia County School District, and serves children from grades kindergarten through the sixth grade.

Nava said she wanted to celebrate the National Day of Service by giving something lasting to the community.

"I think these people were very proud of themselves, and I think the city is grateful, too," Nava said.

When the students and parents arrived, they found circles painted on the grass to indicate planting sites. They pitched in, digging through hard-packed soil and lava rock to nestle two dozen trees in their places. Jacquemonti birch and flowering crab trees were dosed with root stimulant and water before the soil was placed around their roots.

These trees are made possible by an Urban Community Forestry Grant through the Idaho Department of Lands and the Idaho Community Forestry Council, Winn said. The grant provided $472 for trees, on the condition that volunteers provide $1,348 worth of labor. The city of Burley also chipped in approximately $1,240.

"I can't tell you how I, and the city, appreciate these wonderful people donating their time and labor, giving up their Saturday. I just really appreciate it," Winn said.

The volunteers worked from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. At the completion of the work, La Panaderia Michoacana and Smith's Food and Drug donated to the lunch.

"This is a good way to get people into the community," she said. "It looks beautiful."

Leaders agree to improve conditions for female workers

The Associated Press

MONTERREY – President Vicente Fox and industry leaders agreed to improve working conditions for women at foreign-owned factories along the Mexico-U.S. border.

An agreement calls for day-care centers at as many assembly-for-export plants, or maquilas, as possible, and the enforcement of laws prohibiting employers from asking women to take pregnancy tests before being hired. It also urges employers to give working mothers preference for daytime shifts.

Reporte de Mexico

The pact was signed by Fox and the Export Industry Council in Matamoros, across the border from Brownsville, Texas.

Maquilas were started in the 1960s and have grown over the years to become the industrial backbone of Mexico's 2,000-mile border with the United States. More than 3,500 plants, including major U.S. and international heavyweights, employ 1.2 million people.

Women are the majority of workers at these plants. Across Mexico, women on average earn 35 percent less than men in the same positions.

"We cannot be on the cutting edge, as we aim to do, if women continue to be discriminated against, if they are not incorporated into the productive work force with all their rights and their skills, if we do not establish together the conditions to overcome the historic gaps in this area," Fox said while touring Delphi Rimir factory in Matamoros.

The plant, which produces air bags for cars, is owned by Delphi Automotive Systems, the world's largest car components supplier.

Factories have recently taken steps to tend to the needs of female employees. After a series of gruesome rape-murders of workers in the violent border city of Ciudad Juarez, factories came under fire for not providing transportation to female workers who were forced to walk home after getting off shifts at 1 a.m.

Speaking a language that Latinas are eager to hear

By Maria Elena Fernandez
Los Angeles Times

"I am layers of history that speak of beaches and snowflakes, rain forests and tenements, Spanish and English, spicy food and fast food, hip-hop and congas, apple pie and flan."

–Sandra Guzman, "The Latina's Bible" (Three Rivers Press)

As a Jerseyrican – Puerto Rican-born, New Jersey-raised – Sandra Guzman grew up straddling two cultures, always feeling like an oddball who didn't quite fit into either world. At home, her family spoke Spanish, ate Puerto Rican food, watched telenovelas, and were first devout Catholics, then devout Pentecostals. At school, Guzman felt divided, as if another girl's soul took over her body, a girl who embraced American attitudes and fashions, enjoyed rock music and had the "unbecoming gringita habit" of expressing her opinion.

Like most Latinas growing up in two cultures, Guzman found herself in a constant tug-of-war between her heart and mind; her heart beating for her family, her mind yearning for independence and enrichment. Leaving home for college, for example, fired up Guzman's spirit but meant nothing but angustia (anguish) for her protective mother, who fretted over her daughter sleeping among strangers in a dorm.

"Born into a borderland and raised in a cultural middle," Guzman said she grew up feeling frustrated and conflicted, wondering which side of herself she would eventually have to give up: The devoted daughter brought up to marry and have children? Or the woman who dreamed of a career in journalism and living in her own apartment?

What she didn't realize then was that, rather than conforming to one of those molds, she was becoming a new breed of woman, a "nueva Latina" who "owns English," dreams in Spanish and is "not exotic" but rather "a confluence of Pan-Latino consciousness and American influences," as the Emmy award-winning journalist and former editor in chief of Latina magazine writes in her first book, "The Latina's Bible: The Nueva Latina's Guide to Love, Sex, Spirituality, and La Vida" (Three Rivers Press).

Fox calls for agreement on rights of undocumented immigrants

By Alfredo Corchado and Ricardo Sandoval
The Dallas Morning News

In a private talk with Latin American policy experts in New York, Mexican President Vicente Fox challenged the U.S. government to help him deliver on a promise of protecting the rights of millions of undocumented Mexicans in the United States.

Fox said there is a need for an agreement on the migration phenomena that for years has vexed the two countries. He said that advances have been made on the migration issue, but a comprehensive deal to decriminalize the legal status of Mexican workers is the only way to defend them from abusive employers and bring them out from the shadows of American society.

"The only lasting solution is the regularization of millions of undocumented Mexican workers already in this country and the establishment of a secure and orderly legal framework for migrant workers," Fox said. "This will be the test of fire for our (binational) commitment to a new and stronger relationship."

Since he won office in July 2000, Fox has trumpeted the need for a new deal for migrant workers. His foreign minister, Jorge Castaneda, has often demanded a migration pact that gives Mexico "the whole enchilada" – decriminalizing the status of undocumented workers already in the United States and increasing the number of temporary permits offered to Mexican workers.

President Bush has generally agreed, although the current U.S. position on a migration deal calls for a slower approach. Sources close to the negotiations said U.S. migration negotiators will soon propose some interim steps.

Among the possible moves – which won't require congressional approval – might be expanding the number of crossing permits granted to temporary guest workers from Mexico under existing programs.

Migration analysts agreed that a go-slow approach is the most prudent. Experts give Fox poor odds in winning a comprehensive deal that might radically increase the northbound flow of Mexicans. Since the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist strikes in the United States, key factions in the U.S. Congress have hardened their opposition to a liberal migration pact.

MUSICA, MUSICA

Latin favorites release new albums

By The Los Angeles Times

Marc Anthony "Mended" (Columbia)

The salsa-pop star's second English-language collection is what you'd expect from a romance-oriented heartthrob in the post-teen-pop marketplace, but this overblown and undistinguished material does little to showcase whatever gifts the New Yorker may have.

These smooth ballads and dance tunes have a vaguely Latin flavor (mostly in the rhythms and occasional flamenco-like guitar lines). But generally "Mended" is as slick as any Backstreet Boys album, if somewhat more adult-contemporary around the edges.

It sounds as if he's having a lot more fun with the Spanish version ("Te Tengo Aqui"), which is the most appealing track here.

–Natalie Nichols

Alejandro Escovedo "By the Hand of the Father" (Texas Music Group)

Sometimes a play's musical score works best for those who have seen the source production and can fill in the emotional spaces between the songs. But this collection stands on its own, a moving and absorbing record that faithfully captures the epic sweep of the immigrant story.

The songs are woven together here through short, spoken segments that effectively synthesize the story of a Mexican immigrant who flees revolution to work hard and raise a family in the United States: When the old immigrant laments the end of his marriage in "59 Years" and remembers the promise of young romance in "Inside This Dance," the immigrant experience strikes a universal human chord.

Project has direct effect on people in the community

Thank you seems a little trite compared to all the work that is done to make the Helping Hands project the great success it has been for the past two years. It is the marquee event at Robert Stuart Junior High School. I believe this project has more direct effect on people in the community than any other single community project.

This project would not be possible without the tremendous efforts of our Parent Teacher Organization. Many people were involved in the planning and implementation of Helping Hands Week 2002, including PTO President Marcia Nielson, President-elect Michelle Downard, Secretary Heidi Wasden and Treasurer Cheri Hartley.

Please help me thank them for all their caring and hard work.

Wonderful individuals care deeply about young people

We would like to give a big thanks to those wonderful people in our community who care deeply about our youth. During Scout-A-Rama on April 26-27, the scouting groups representing Junior Leadership Training and Woodbadge had a concession stand to earn money to continue the good works of those programs.

Thanks to the generous donations of Lamb Weston Inc., Larry Roper of Interstate Amusement, Wonder Bread and Independent Meat, this project was a great success. It is wonderful to know that our youth are important to these companies.

Also, thank you to Steve Arrington, Woodbadge staff, JLT staff and all the other youth and leaders that helped to make this a great success.

Thank you very much.

Widow appreciates caring of funeral home

I would like to say a few things about Mike and Cathryn Parks.

I lost my husband six weeks ago and would have been lost about everything I had to do if it hadn't been for the Parks. Mike contacted my insurance companies, sent the information to Social Security. They guided me through things that I didn't even know about. Cathryn wrote the obituary for the paper and saw that it was published. We were to have a graveside service, but because of cold weather, Mike suggested we have it in the chapel; he contacted the pastor and furnished the music I wanted. They also don't forget you after the funeral.

They are there anytime you need them.

We are so lucky in the Magic Valley to have such wonderful and caring people as the Parks and their staff, Bill and Clancy. I feel so blessed to have met them.

Family appreciates care for daughter after accident

Our family would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the wonderful people during Katie's recent accident.

Our supportive employers and co-workers: Idaho Power Co., Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and Shopko – your support and generosity has overwhelmed our family.

Twin Falls School District, Jeff Olson, Wiley Dobbs, high school, junior high school, elementary students and staff: For the outpouring of cards and posters that wallpapered Katie's hospital room with love.

Thanks to MVRMC paramedics, emergency room staff and Life Flight for your quick response and wonderful care.

Special thanks to nurse Mary Hranac for taking time to stop at an accident and help save a life. You are Katie's guardian angel.

Community businesses make Peter Rabbit visit possible

One hundred years ago, Beatrix Potter wrote the story of Peter Rabbit visiting Mr. McGregor's garden. This spring with the help of many community businesses, the Kimberly Elementary School students celebrated Peter Rabbit's 100th birthday party at the Family Reading Night with carrot cake, fresh carrots and a visit from Peter Rabbit.

We'd like to thank all the community businesses that made this Family Night such an enjoyable evening:

Hasting's, Poindexter's, Lynwood Market, Magic Valley Regional Medical Center dietary center, Maxie's, Fast Way 66, Fiesta Ole, Ageless Senior Citizen Center, K N Turf, Harvey's and Office Max.

We'd like to also thank the Kimberly Parent Teacher Student Organization members for their help and all of our staff for all their support.

We appreciate all the parents and their students who participated in our Family Reading Night.

Justin is a hands-on sort of boy

Justin is an active, hands-on sort of boy. He likes to ride bikes, jump on the trampoline, go to the park and play, play, play.

Justin is a social being who likes "doing stuff with other people," said his older brother, Kelly. He also has a sister, Rochelle. Justin would thrive in a family that plays together. Justin would especially like to visit an amusement park – a luxury he's never experienced. He also needs parents who will help him work by engaging him in a reward system for short-term accomplishments.

Family Needs: Rochelle and Justin take medication for Attention Deficit Disorder with Hyperactivity. Their new family should understand the learning challenges involved with the disorder. Prospective parents should plan for a gradual transition to release Kelly from the protective role he's always played in his brother and sister's lives.

Justin is available for adoption through the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. To find out more, call the Idaho CareLine number, 1-800-926-2588.

Man says he killed dogs in the thousands

LILLIAN, Ala. (AP) – The remains of as many as 3,000 greyhounds were found on the property of a former racetrack security guard who said he killed the dogs humanely for profit for four decades.

District Attorney David Whetstone said animal torture charges were being considered against Robert Rhodes, who said he sometimes received $10 for shooting a dog.

"I guess there are laws against it, but I haven't read those books, so I don't know," said Rhodes, 68.

Rhodes said tracks brought him unwanted greyhounds, usually those too slow to win, for the 40 years he has raised and raced the animals.

"I wouldn't condone or use torture at any time," Rhodes said. "It was quick; they didn't feel a thing."

State officials obtained a warrant Tuesday to search 18 acres owned by Rhodes after receiving a tip and looking at satellite images that showed animal bones strewn about the property.

Florida officials were investigating allegations that dogs from Pensacola Greyhound Park, where Rhodes used to work, have been improperly destroyed.

FAST FOOD AT LAST

'Super!' says 94-year-old Katherine Sheppard as she eats her first fast food meal at a McDonald's restaurant in Savannah, Ga., Monday. Sheppard said she missed out on fast-food for the past nine and a half decades because she always cooked for herself. She was treated to a sampler of modern-day staples: a Big Mac, Chicken McNuggets and a Filet-o-Fish.

Cornell experimenters put numerous male and female rats into little treadmills. To learn that female rats, when they so desire, can run much farther and much faster than male rats. Clearly, female rats don't always want to. The researchers concluded that in the real rat race the males do what they can and the females do as they wish.

If testtube reproduction were perfected utterly, a father could produce millions of children, a mother about 400.

Q. Who first said "...from the sublime to the ridiculous..."?

A. Napoleon. In a letter to Josephine. On his way back to Paris from Moscow. His dream to conquer Russia was sublime. The Russians chewed him up and spit him out. That was ridiculous.

Q. How many people are killed in elevator accidents every year?

A. About 25. Mostly those who force open the doors and fall down the shafts.

That tin can – the Americans call it a can, the British call it a tin.

When elephants walk in single file – and that's how they do it when they set out to go somewhere – each steps almost exactly in the tracks of the leader. Hunters who find the tracks can't tell whether there were five for 50.

"Gunny" comes from the Sanskrit "goni" meaning "sack." So if you say "gunny sack," you're saying "sack sack."

Q. Which came first – Christmas cards or birthday cards?

A. Christmas cards. By a few years. In the mid-1800s.

Q. Color of trees is always a little deeper on the western side. Why?

A. More sunlight there.

Q. What's the so-called "Wicked Bible"?

A. An edition with a misprint reading: "Thou shalt commit adultery." Typographical errors have given such names to several editions. The Lions Bible in 1 Kings 8:19 reads "Out of thy lions" instead of loins. The Printers Bible in Psalms 119:161 reads "Printers (instead of Princes) have persecuted me without cause."

At this moment, no doubt medical scientists are trying to figure out how to enable people to hibernate. Hibernating bats, they know, live 20 times longer than other mammals of the same weight. They hope, presumably, to increase human longevity to about 1,400 years. Will let you know if they get it working.

Q. Who was the first dentist in the United States?

A. An Englishman named Woofendale. He came over before this country was a country, in fact. In 1766.

Safety takes back seat in car ads aimed at teens

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: I am a pediatric nurse-practitioner. In the past few years, I have seen more and more car advertisements featuring teen-agers not wearing seat belts. The most blatant was one with four prom-goers standing with their upper bodies sticking out above the sunroof of a limo. I should think the insurance industry would be having a fit that the media could be so irresponsible about a serious safety issue.

Teens do not comprehend their own vulnerability. This makes it almost impossible for parents to get them to wear seat belts when ads like these make it seem glamorous not to. Many parents believe their children "always" wear seat belts, only to discover the truth after a tragic accident.

Motor vehicle accidents are the No. 1 killer of adolescents – not drugs, not suicide or homicide. With spring here, and proms fast approaching, we need to keep stressing the importance of wearing seat belts.

No parent I talked to had seen the prom ad. Public opinion stopped the oversexualizing of underwear ads a few years back. I'd like the same thing to happen with ads that glamorize the non-use of seat belts.

– JOAN BUCHANAN

DEAR JOAN: Yours is a timely letter. Prom and grad nights are again upon us – and it takes only a second to buckle up.

The souvenirs of prom night should consist of dried corsages and boutonnieres – not physical scars, broken bones and shattered lives. And while we're on the subject of responsible advertising, read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am appalled at the number of commercials depicting four-wheel-drive vehicles conquering dangerous terrain – "going where no other car has gone before." The commercials convey the message that you can cross streams, fly through blizzards, dodge carnivorous animals or climb ominous mountain peaks. Some commercials are downright ridiculous.

I have lived in snow country all my life. I am presently the owner of an SUV and have owned other makes depicted in the advertising. They are necessary to my lifestyle. My concern is the message they send to young or inexperienced drivers. This includes the adult driver who is chemically impaired.

The statistics reveal that a high percentage of accidents – many fatal – are caused by the misuse of these four-wheel-drive vehicles. Drivers mistakenly believe they are invincible – driving too fast for the conditions, trying to maneuver in places they shouldn't be, and in general, abandoning common sense.

My son (an experienced teen-age driver) attempted to cross a stream in his Jeep.

The commercial presented it as an easily accomplished feat. His vehicle became stuck, creating a dam of water that entered the air filter and destroyed the engine. He was, however, one of the lucky ones.

Only the vehicle sustained major damage.

Perhaps the automakers should follow their commercials with a list of the deceased or badly injured who attempt these feats and fail. I believe they need to rethink their enticing invitation to test the limits behind the wheel.

– LIZZIE IN MONTROSE, COLO.

DEAR LIZZIE: I agree. Such ads create a false impression and should be toned down in the interest of public safety.

Escape from the ordinary

Tracey Weber hikes the dune crest at the Bruneau Sand Dunes State Park. The reservoirs created behind the dunes are home to many birds, jackrabbits, badgers, snakes and scores of lizards.

State park features breathtaking landscape

By Mark Weber
Times-News correspondent

Hidden in southwestern Idaho's sage covered Snake River Plain lies a strange and foreign landscape. A place that more closely resembles the famed Namib Desert of southern Africa rather than the cultivated spud fields of southern Idaho.

It's a land possessed by an eerie silence where often the only sound is that of the rushing wind and drifting sand. A place where immense dunes tower over an oasis of small lakes that team with wildlife. This region is so isolated from man-made lights that views of the nighttime heavens are unparalleled. This place is the Bruneau Dunes State Park.

Encompassing nearly 5,000 acres, this otherworldly landscape is home to the tallest "single structured" dunes in North America. Rising 470 feet above the small lakes at their base, these mountains of sand are the centerpiece of the park. Unlike most sand dunes which are trapped by a natural barrier or part of large dune complexes, Bruneau's Twin dunes stand alone. The Bruneau Dunes have been here for at least the past 12,000 years, and some geologists speculate closer to 30,000 years.

Bruneau Dunes State Park

Getting There:
Traveling from the east (Twin Falls area), take Interstate 84 to Exit 90 at Hammet and continue on Highway 78. From the west (Boise), take Exit 112 near Mountain Home and follow Highway 51. Allow approximately 1 1/2 hours travel time from Twin Falls and one hour from Boise. Cost is $3 per vehicle

They occupy the center of a colossal semi-circular depression and are shaped by wind and sand scoured from distant locals. As the wind loses velocity over this natural basin, the sand falls from the sky and accumulates as dunes. While most of the world's dunes migrate according to wind direction, the Bruneau Dunes are relatively stationary. This phenomenon is due to the fact that the winds in this region blow nearly equally from both the northwest and southeast.

Although the dunes have resided in this basin for thousands of years, the small lakes at their base are a recent addition. As dams were constructed along the Snake River, the reservoirs that they impounded soon began to raise local water tables. It was during the early 1950s that the small ponds appeared at the dunes' base. The water and vegetation provides an oasis that stands in sharp contrast to the arid dunes and parched surrounding area.

Once the water appeared, it didn't take long before wildlife settled in to occupy the newly formed habitat. While hunting is prohibited, attentive visitors can view an array of creatures. Some of the most common sightings will be of birds, such as red-winged black birds, various water fowl, hawks, owls and even the occasional golden eagle.

More reclusive inhabitants hide in the bushes that grow near the water's edge. Here you'll find black-tailed jackrabbits, badgers, snakes and scores

Two hikers make their way along a section of the Colorado Trail in Jefferson County, Colo. The 468-mile-long trail, running from Denver to Durango, is laid out so walkers can enjoy the best views in this mountainous state.

Colorado Trail puts state on display

DENVER (AP) – Gudy Gaskill's secret is out. The "Colorado Trail" is more than a love song sung by cowboys missing their sweethearts and the warmth of home.

Created on a shoestring for the benefit of Colorado hikers, the 468-mile-long trail is drawing raves from hikers from across the country.

"We never really wanted to make it so public like the Appalachian and Pacific Crest trails," said Gaskill, who was recently inducted into the Colorado Women's Hall of Fame for her work on the trail.

"A priest wrote to say he had finally found God," said Gaskill. "Some others have written to say they no longer feel they need to lead such materialistic lives."

The trail runs from just west of Denver to Durango through seven national forests, six wilderness areas, five major river systems and eight mountain ranges. Its average elevation, once it leaves the Denver area, is 10,000-feet-plus.

Colorado Trail Education Center:
• http://www.coloradotrail.org/Edcenter.htm

Crossing the Continental Divide six times in sight of 14,000-foot-high peaks, hikers are witnesses to Colorado's past and future. It passes through the "Mineral Belt" where fortunes were won and lost in the silver mines and within sight of the Breckenridge and Copper Mountain ski areas.

The trail is not meant to be an endurance feat. Gaskill said the steepest grade is 6 percent, virtually the same as Interstate 70 heading down from the mountains into Denver.

Rising early can increase chances of seeing animals. Dusk and dawn are the best times. Settling down on a log with a flashlight can produce some interesting sights.

June is calving time for deer and elk, and hikers should try to be as quiet as possible.

The trail is divided into 28 segments that average 17 miles. Many segments could be done in a day by those carrying light packs. The longer segments could take many days for those carrying heavy backpacks.

Gaskill says hikers often exchange car keys with friends parked at the other end and swap cars to avoid backtracking. Even using this technique she doubts more than 300 people have hiked the entire length.

"It takes six weeks out of your life," but even those who "go up for only one day are hooked," she said.

Because of its elevation and lingering snow, hikers are urged not to attempt it beyond Kenosha Pass, 50 miles west of Denver, until June 20.

For those planning extended hikes, logistics can be a problem. Most of the towns nearest the trail are too small to support large grocery or sporting goods stores.

The trail recommends that hikers mail supplies general delivery to post offices en route and pick them up or arrange for friends to meet them.

Snow can fall in midsummer, and hikers on exposed ridgelines should expect bitterly cold breezes. Hats, sunglasses, and sunblock are essential. Allergy sufferers also should be prepared.

Heavier footgear is recommended for sections along the divide, and they should be broken in before the hike begins.

Instead of being designed to test skills, "the trail was arranged for the best views," said Gaskill.

Idaho fishing season is here, and so are low water levels – again

By David Cooper
The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – Saturday marks the opening day of Idaho's fishing season, which traditionally comes at the start of the Memorial Day weekend. But it's another opening day tradition that has Idaho Fish and Game officials concerned.

For yet another year, the spring runoff is low enough to keep stocking levels down at local reservoirs and lakes. Waters that were low last year and needed salvage operations later in the season don't look better despite signs of better snowpack last winter.

So Fish and Game authorities are getting the word out to anglers who want to hook the big ones: start casting early.

"From the standpoint of reservoir fishing, the key is to fish early," said Mike Todd, conservation educator at the Magic Valley office of Fish and Game. "Those waters hit by drought last year aren't in much better shape this year. But we went ahead with our spring planting at Magic Reservoir, Blair Trail, Salmon Falls Creek."

If there's good news heading into the opener, it would be for those anglers headed for rivers and streams. Cooler temperatures have delayed strong runoffs thus making the waters clear and narrow.

"It's probably going to be better stream fishing because we have not had the warm weather and heavy run off, unless it warms up real fast," Todd said.

'From the standpoint of reservoir fishing, the key is to fish early. Those waters hit by drought last year aren't in much better shape this year.'

– Mike Todd, conservation educator

Todd said Big Wood River, Big Smokey Creek and Rock Creek will all be stocked and "fishing will probably be pretty good." Stockings at reservoirs are mostly scheduled just once over the season. The numbers of stocked fish are only projections and may be altered by other working factors.

The limit for trout (rainbow, brown, cutthroat) will be six in possession for licensed anglers. The limit for brook trout is 25. The bass limit is also at six. But all bass catches must be over 12 inches, unless there are exemptions like those that apply to family fishing waters.

There are 12 family fishing waters designated in the Magic Valley area: Reservoirs are Little Camas, Magic, Little Wood, Fish Creek, Roseworth, Blair Trail. Other waters are Camas Ponds 1 & 2, Featherville Ponds, Gavers Lagoon, Penny Lake, Dollar Lake, Rock Creek downstream from Highline Canal.

Todd said due to liberalized seasons and simplified regulations the spring opener isn't the event it used to be.

"There's a good chance that a lot of fish will be diverted to Bell Rapids on Snake River, Lake Walcott, and some to Milner Dam," Todd said. "The problem we've run into is that those fish have produced, and when those waters have dried up, we've got to put them somewhere else."

Here's a list of projected stockings at popular fishing spots in the Magic Valley:

Idaho requires hunting license, even for predators

ASK THE OFFICER
Gary Hompland

Question: In a previous article about rock chuck hunting you mentioned the need for a hunting license. I thought a guy could hunt predators and unprotected animals without a license. Please explain the licensing requirements for shooting rock chucks, jack rabbits and coyotes.

Answer: You are correct; I did say a hunting license was required for shooting rock chucks. In some states a hunting license is not required to hunt predatory or unprotected wildlife, but in Idaho a license is required. Idaho law specifically says "No person shall hunt, trap, or fish for or take any wild animal, bird or fish of this state, without first having procured a license."

Landowners or lessees of property may destroy unprotected and predatory animals in order to protect private property without having first obtained a hunting license. However, recreational hunting by landowners and others requires a hunting license.

For nonresidents the Department offers a nongame gun license to accommodate "varmint hunting" and avoid the cost of a nonresident hunting license. This license is available at license vendors after the close of the waterfowl season in January and is valid through August. It is only valid for unprotected and predatory wildlife. The cost is $26.50.

In summary, landowners are allowed to protect their property from predatory and unprotected wildlife without first purchasing a hunting license. Everyone else needs a hunting license.

Reference Idaho Codes 36-401, and 36-1107.

of lizards. During the early morning or late evening, careful observers might even spot a shy mule deer, pronghorn antelope or lone coyote. The lakes are also home to a variety of aquatic life, including a robust fishery of largemouth bass and bluegill. Fishing whether from shore, float tube or canoe is an encouraged activity, although no motorized boats are allowed.

With an elevation above sea level of just over 2,400 feet, the state park experiences a comparatively mild climate for southern Idaho. This means the park can offer one of the longest camping seasons in Idaho, often running from early March until late fall.

Because Bruneau Dunes State Park is located far from the glare of city lights, its dark and often clear skies are the perfect place to view the cosmos. Built in 1998, the Bruneau Dunes Observatory hosts several powerful telescopes, including one of the state's largest open for public viewing, a 22-inch reflector. These optics are capable of bringing visitors an up-close and personal view of not only the moon and planets but also distant celestial objects such as the Trifid Nebula and Andromeda Galaxy.

To round out the park's offerings is a visitor center with interpretive displays, a gift and souvenir shop and guided ranger walks. With all there is to do and see at this unique state park, it's easy to forget to take a few minutes to just relax. Kick off your shoes and take a stroll across the dunes. That soothing caress of the sand between your toes just may be the high point of your visit.

Fish

er low water year, but 10,000 catchable fish were planted in april. Officials expect Magic to drop up again by mid-July.

• Little Camas Reservoir – This area was hit hard last year, but early plantings should have about 7,500 fish added to the waters. Last year had a full salvage operation.

• Thorn Creek, Fish Creek, Roseworth, Lava Lake, Mormon Reservoir all saw about about 10,000 fish stocked in spring planting season.

• Goose Creek (Oakley Dam) – 15,000 catchables were put into the downstream water from Oakley Dam, nearly the same amount as last year.

• Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir – Well stocked with about 25,000 catchables planned by opening day. Still should have good numbers of bass and rainbow trout.

• Hagerman Wildlife Management Area – Already opened in March and was stocked about every two weeks.

• Roseworth Reservoir – 15,000 catchables were put in March. Good rainbow population although it also may run dry by mid-summer.

• Little Wood Reservoir – Because it ran dry last year officials expect this region may go fast in 2002 as well.

• Lake Wolcott – More fish could come into the Minidoka County reservoir, which planted 20,000 catchables around April.

• Anderson Ranch Dam – Currently seeing a low runoff, but there are at least 15,000 catchables projected in stock by opening day.

• Warm Springs Creek and Trail Creek – Areas won't be stocked until June. But Penny and Dollar Lakes have both been planted.

• Fish Creek – 10,000 catchables of rainbow trout planted this spring.

CSI offers wakeboarding class

TWIN FALLS – One of the only wakeboarding courses available in Idaho will begin soon at the College of Southern Idaho.

The class, taught by wakeboarder Derek Pollard, will focus on beginning skills for ages 15 and up but will not be limited to beginners if students with intermediate skills enroll. All necessary equipment will be provided, including wakeboards, bindings, life jackets, wet suits and a rope handle. Participants will provide their own shorts and towels. Students will learn water starts, carving, loading the line, grabs, 180s, single and double wakes, jumps, and handle position. More experienced students also may learn 360s and inverts.

Two sections of the course will be held – May 31 through June 4 or 25 and June 26 through July 22 or 23. The first class in each section will be in a classroom, then each class will meet once a week for two hours with about 25 minutes of water practice for each student. Classes will be held at the Twin Falls Power Plant and the Burley Golf Course Marina. Students can choose which location works best for them, but consideration will be given to students to be able to receive instruction at the site closest to their home.

Cost is $120, which includes all instruction, equipment and transportation. For more information, call the CSI Outdoor Program at 733-9554, Ext. 2697, or Pollard at 735-8676, or email Pollard at luv2board3@hotmail.com.

CSI outdoors program offers host of other courses

Several whitewater instruction classes for are being offered through the College Of Southern Idaho's Outdoor Program.

• Reading Whitewater 101 teaches boaters how to read rapids. The class will give rafters and kayakers confidence and knowledge to scout rapids and know what to do. Class will be held May 31. Hands-on instruction will take place on the banks of the Snake and Malad rivers. The fee is $20.

• A Whitewater Rafting course on May 31 is for beginners or anyone who wants to practice whitewater rafting skills. The class will cover the fundamentals of equipment, set up and river strategies. Students will take at least one trip down the Hagerman stretch of the Snake River. Cost is $80. Transportation will be provided for each class.

• An Introduction to Moving Water will be held June 1. Participants will learn the five fundamental paddle strokes, eddy turns, peel outs, ferrying, and negotiating Class I water. Participants must have their own equipment. Cost is $40.

• An intermediate class for more experienced kayakers also will be held June 1. Participants will practice fundamental paddle strokes, eddy turns, peel outs, ferrying and negotiating Class I water on a two-mile stretch of the Snake River. The fee is $40.

• An Introduction to Rock Climbing course will be held June 6 at the CSI ropes course climbing wall. Participants will learn the fundamentals of safe climbing techniques, signals, knots and belaying skills. The class is for ages 13 and up. Cost is $15.

For more information on these or any upcoming summer activities, call the CSI Outdoor Program director Bill Studebaker at 733-9554, Ext. 2697.

Fish and Game wants info on Idaho organizations

The Magic Valley Regional Fish & Game office tries to keep a current list of all sporting organizations and conservation groups in south central Idaho. This includes both local and nationally affiliated clubs. The office's most current listing is incomplete, as officers change, club mailing addresses change, new organizations arise, or old ones fade away.

To keep the club mailing list up to day, the office asks that a club representative take the time to call the office, Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., at 324-4359.

Please make sure that the group name, current mailing address, phone number for contact, and current e-mail addresses for the club or club officers are all made available.

Redfish Lake Visitor Center opens for summer

Redfish Lake Visitor Center, located in the Sawtooth NRA, with be open on weekends starting with Memorial Day weekend. Hours of operation will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, May 25-27. Weekend operation will continue May 31 to June 2 and June 7-9. Starting June 14, the center will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will continue operation through Labor Day.

The center offers many amenities: a great viewing spot of Redfish Lake, Fishhook Creek Nature Trail, trailhead vehicle parking passes, federal passports (Golden Age, Golden Eagle and Golden Access), national forest maps, Junior Ranger newspapers, and a gift shop. Weekly schedules of activities, evening programs and special events will be available.

For Sawtooth NRA information, please call 208-774-3376.

Mystic Saddle Ranch prepares to open for 2002 season

STANLEY – Mystic Saddle Ranch is gearing up to open for the 2002 summer season.

The Redfish Lake Corrals will begin trailrides on Saturday, May 25. This year a children's discount will be offered. This discount is $5 off of the adult rate for the for the $1.5 hour or half-day guided trailrides. Also, back by popular demand again this year is the 5 o'clock ride, and the full day ride to a high mountain wilderness lake.

Galena Stage Stop Corrals, located near Galena Lodge, on Highway 75 north of Ketchum, opens for its 14th summer on June 15. Horse rides will be offered daily beginning at 8:30 a.m. Guided trailrides range from 1-1/2 hour to a full day in this historic mining area. The children's discount will be available at this location also.

Wagon rides along with dinner, will begin on June 26 and will happen every Thursday evening thereafter, in conjunction with Galena Lodge and the wildflower walk. The wagon, team and driver can also be rented by the hour for special occasions and events. Take your family or a group of friends on a picnic by wagon to one of the wildflower-covered meadows in the Galena area.

Call the Redfish Lake Corrals directly at 208-774-3311, the Galena Stage Stop Corrals directly at 208-726-1735, or for additional information contact Jeff and Deb Bitton, Mystic Saddle Ranch, at 1-888-722-5432 or by e-mail at info@mysticsaddleranch.com.

Silver Creek Preserve will hold open house

The Nature Conservancy's Silver Creek Preserve will hold its annual open house on Memorial Day weekend to celebrate spring and the first day of the fishing season.

Beginning on Saturday, May 25, the Silver Creek Preserve Visitor's Center will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. throughout the summer. Preserve staff will be available to give information about current hatches and discuss the Conservancy's ongoing work in the Silver Creek Valley. Birdwatching opportunities and a self-guided nature trail also await visitors.

Cookies and lemonade will be served on the Visitors Center porch throughout Memorial Day weekend. To reach the preserve, take Highway 20 seven miles east of Highway 75 junction. For more information, call the preserve office at 788-7910.

Henrys Lake will undergo ramp, dock maintenance

Due to low water conditions at Henrys Lake, launching a large boat may be challenging this season at the state park ramp. Ramp and dock work is scheduled for the week of May 20, which may improve conditions somewhat.

Other ramps around the lake should continue to be useable, but if you are planning to camp at Henrys Lake State Park, call first for current conditions regarding the ramp, 208-558-7532.

State parks passes offer variety of deals

Which statewide recreation pass is the best deal for you this summer? That depends on your need.

The $25 Idaho State Parks Annual Passport ($30 for two cars) allows entrance to 26 state parks for day use activities. Meanwhile, the $49 VIP pass covers all those areas, plus more than 60 other federal day use fee area sites across the state, including Craters of the Moon National Monument, and access to select Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management and Bureau of Reclamation day-use areas. The VIP pass will even let you use 13 Park N' Ski areas statewide when winter comes back around and you want to do a little cross-country skiing.

The Idaho State Parks Annual Pass is a window sticker, while the VIP pass is a hangtag that can be moved from car to car.

Both passes are available at Idaho's state parks and IDPR administrative offices in Coeur d'Alene, Meridian, Boise and Idaho Falls. The VIP pass can also be purchased at the Eastern Idaho Visitor Center in Idaho Falls, Craters of the Moon National Monument, online at www.idahorec.org or by calling 1-800-847-4843.

Commission extends salmon fishing on lower Snake

BOISE – The hatchery chinook salmon fishing season on the lower Snake River has been extended by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission.

The original season for that fishery from Lewiston to Heller Bar closed May 19. Biologists proposed the extension because there has been almost no adverse effect on the wild chinook and no reason to halt fishing.

The National Marine Fisheries Service had approved Idaho's request for an extension. Anglers can keep hatchery chinook, but must return wild fish to the river.

The commission on Monday approved extending the season until June 2, although the fisheries service approval covers only Thursday through Memorial Day weekend.

If the federal agency does not approve that extra extension through June 2, the Fish and Game director will end fishing there.

F&G considers permanent feeding

GARDEN VALLEY (AP) – Grass is sprouting around the feeding stations where hundreds of elk and deer clustered during last winter's storms to eat emergency feed from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

The annual complaints from critics who consider the agency's feeding efforts inadequate usually die down until the snow flies again.

But winter range is being gobbled up, and it has the department spending the warm months considering whether permanent feeding may be ahead.

"The amount and quality of winter range is steadily declining due to weeds, heavy use of the land and human encroachment," Fish and [illegible] John [illegible] think [illegible] make [illegible] rath [illegible] if [illegible]

[illegible] Steve [illegible] the providing [illegible] feeding to [illegible] starvation of [illegible] such as elk and deer. [illegible] to change, the commission needs to take responsibility for that, he said.

Commissioner Don Clower of Meridian has proposed that Garden Valley civic clubs hold summer meetings to determine whether they want permanent feeding stations.

Another option is to reduce the herds through hunting.

Last winter wasn't an exceptional year for snow in many areas, though storms hit early and at lower elevations, said Jim Unsworth, Fish and Game big game manager.

Emergency feeding took place in the usual spots, such as Garden Valley and the South Fork of the Boise River near Featherville. Unsworth said the department spent about $600,000 on feed and to protect property such as haystacks from animals.

That is about twice the normal expenditure and the most since 1993, he said. Hunters pay a surcharge on tags to cover the cost.

Citizen advisory committees were formed years ago to determine whether and when game should be fed. The decision depends on snow depth, temperatures and overall weather conditions.

Feeding stations cause animals to congregate, and diseases such as brucellosis can spread more easily, Unsworth said. The animals also quickly become accustomed to the steady chow and return there every year.

"It's economically a bad deal for (sportsmen)," he said. In the South Fork, where elk were fed, the management cost for each elk taken by hunters was $150. In the Middle Fork of the Salmon area where there is no feeding, management ran $10 per elk taken by hunters.

Development is booming in Garden Valley, so many more people spot the game trudging through the snow. Some think Fish and Game is not doing enough to help them survive, and they let the agency know.

But here's the rub: It's all those new cabins that are taking away traditional winter range. Then summer fires burn the grass and shrubs on what is left, and invasive skeleton weed and cheatgrass move in, Unsworth said.

Don Weilmunster has thousands of acres in Garden Valley and has lived there for 40 years. The developer of the proposed four-season WestRock resort at Cascade thinks the elk herd came through the winter in good shape.

"I believe the Fish and Game has looked after this pretty well. With the feeding, the animals depend on it and they don't hustle at all. Nobody wants to see an animal die, but that's the way it is."

In fact, the department figures that 10 to 15 percent mortality is about average for a winter.

Near Stanley at the edge of the Sawtooth Valley, often the Lower 48's coldest place in winter, the wintering elk herd has grown dramatically. Outfitter Ron Gillette, an outspoken critic of the Fish and Game Department, thinks the herd should be fed because it helps the tourism businesses. He and other residents put out bales of weed-free hay for them last winter.

T.F. home values

The average value for new, single-family homes that got building permits in Twin Falls rang in at $95,654 for 2001. That's up 6 percent from the city's $90,062 new home average in 2000.

Last year set a new annual record for single-family home construction.

Twin Falls in 2001 issued permits for 243 new such homes, up 45 percent from the 168 of the year before.

Idahoans pay less for power

Survey finds utility rates are among nation's lowest

The Associated Press

BOISE – Despite record-setting rate hikes last year, Idaho Power Co.'s residential electric rates were among the lowest in the nation and its commercial rates were the lowest.

A national survey of investor-owned utilities ranked Idaho Power's Idaho average retail rates in the lowest 10 percent in the country.

The survey is conducted twice annually – January and July – by the Edison Electric Institute, an industry trade organization. It examines rates paid by residential, commercial and industrial customers in the United States and Canada.

In the January survey, Idaho Power's Idaho residential rates ranked 148 out of 162 utilities surveyed throughout the country. The utility with the highest ranking, 162, had the lowest residential rates. That was Kentucky Utilities Co., which serves Lexington, Ky.

In the West, only Avista and PacifiCorp had lower average residential rates.

Drought combined with an energy crunch 18 months ago left Idaho Power shifting from cheap hydropower, which typically provides two-thirds of its electricity, to an excessively expensive wholesale power market to meet the demands of its customers last year.

Jan Packwood, president of parent company IDACORP, recently told shareholders the rates should decline dramatically next spring.

"The EEI survey reaffirms what we have long believed," said Ric Gale, Idaho Power vice president for regulatory affairs.

"Even though the recent energy crisis in the Northwest resulted in some very painful rate increases, our customers are still paying some of the lowest rates in the nation."

The survey also found that the average rates paid by the commercial customers in Idaho were the lowest. Idaho Power ranked 162.

Idaho Power serves more than 400,000 customers in southern Idaho and eastern Oregon.

Albertson's invests $1B in S. California

BOISE – Albertson's Inc. on Wednesday announced plans to invest $1 billion in remodeling existing stores and building new ones over the next three years in Southern California.

"It is a strategic market of choice that our company is committed to grow and strengthen as we drive to extend our lead as the No. 1 food and drug retailer in the region," said Larry Johnston, chairman of the Idaho-based supermarket chain, which has stores in Burley, Twin Falls and Hailey.

The announcement came a day after Johnston advised investors and analysts that first-quarter profits will be two to five cents a share higher than expected in March. Albertson's is the nation's second largest food and drug retailing chain behind Kroger.

Albertson's operates 268 grocery stores and 304 Sav-On Drugstores in Southern California.

President Peter Lynch said the capital investment will enable the corporation to implement its so-called dual-branding strategy, using the combination Albertson's/Sav-On format across the region.

"Shareowners will benefit as market share grows and return on invested capital accelerates in our largest market," he said.

Albertson's claims it started the combination food and drugstore concept with the Jewel-Osco format in the Chicago area. The company acquired Jewel-Osco as part of its 1999 multibillion-dollar purchase of American Stores.

It extended the concept in pilot projects in Tucson, Ariz., and Reno, Nev., last year by joining Albertson's with Sav-On in Reno and with Osco in Tucson and then moving it to Phoenix and Omaha, Neb.

Judge OKs Peppermill's purchase of two casinos

RENO, Nev. – A federal bankruptcy judge has approved the sale of a pair of financially troubled casinos on the Nevada-Utah border.

The Silver Smith and State Line hotel-casinos in West Wendover would be sold to the Reno-based Peppermill Casinos Inc. for $49.6 million if approved by Nevada gambling regulators.

Judge Gregg Zive approved the sale in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Reno.

Peppermill officials said the deal could close by the end of July. The company already owns two of the five hotel-casinos in the West Wendover area, the Rainbow and the Peppermill.

Michael Devine, president and CEO of the State Line and Silver Smith, said he supports the sale. He estimated it would give the Peppermill control of 95 percent to 98 percent of the gambling market in West Wendover.

The fifth casino there, the Red Garter, holds an insignificant market share.

State Line Hotel Inc. filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in January, blaming slower business and a 1998 renovation that stretched its finances thin.

Zive said numbers from the State Line-Silver Smith show "the property is still hemorrhaging.

"It is not a slow death, but a patient that is terminal," he said.

Devine said his properties had positive cash flow last month, but were still negative for the year.

"The economy hasn't rebounded as much as we would like," he said.

Gap CEO will step down

Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO – Millard Drexler, the legendary figure who built Gap Inc. from a single shop into the United States' largest chain of clothing stores, will step down as chief executive of the struggling company.

Drexler, 57, will leave the San Francisco-based company – which has a Twin Falls Old Navy store – as soon as a replacement as president and CEO is found, Gap Chairman Donald Fisher announced.

Millard Drexler

Drexler is "really what's made the company what it is," said Elizabeth Pierce, an analyst with Wedbush Morgan Securities. "I was as shell-shocked by the announcement as the next person."

Drexler was hired by the Fisher family to run the first GAP store in 1969, and his 19 years built the company into more than 4,200 stores, operating as GAP, Old Navy and Banana Republic stores. Once an icon of the casual crowd, Gap has recently been struggling after what analysts say was too much expansion and an attempt to woo a younger, trendier shopper.

More than two years of declining sales has led to the company losing more than half its stock value. To reverse flagging sales, the company had begun refocusing on the basic apparel that held the Gap in good stead for much of its history, including basic jeans, khakis, white shirts and classic T-shirts.

Analysts describe Drexler, who had been with the company 19 years, as a "brilliant merchant," who was tripped up by an attempt to make Gap apparel more fashionable, an ill-fated strategy that forced the company to compete with a growing number of retailers now targeting the teen market. Worsening matters, as Gap steered off course, discounters such as Target and Wal-Mart became more skilled at offering basic apparel at lower prices.

In a statement, Drexler said the "time is right" for him to move on and for the Gap to hire a new leader.

"I've always loved being close to merchandise, customers and the creative parts of our business," he said. "In a company the

Knight Ridder News Service

MINNEAPOLIS – Target Corp. credited higher sales and lower costs for its first-quarter earnings coming in a little better than expected, but it held a cautious outlook.

The Minneapolis-based retailer with a discount store in Twin Falls said its net income climbed 36 percent to $345 million, or 38 cents a share – beating consensus expectations by 2 cents and the same quarter a year ago by a dime.

Revenue for the period ended May 4, including credit-card fees, increased 15 percent to $9.59 billion.

But Wall Street analysts thought the company's guidance for future quarters was a bit conservative, and those who were waiting for a more bullish forecast were disappointed.

"We were hoping for a little more," said Jessica Caie, who helps manage about 2.3 million Target shares in the $3.2 billion assets at Cohen, Klingenstein & Marks Inc.

So far, May sales for many retailers are sluggish, and Target is no exception, said Lauri Brunner, a securities analyst at RBC Capital Markets. That's one reason retailers, including Target, generally got pounded on Wall Street.

Then there's the dicey economy.

"In the current environment, it's a little early to declare the economy back to full health," said chief financial officer Doug Scovanner.

As a result, second-quarter profit will likely hit 35 cents a share, matching analysts' esti-

Some companies must deal with many locations

NEW YORK (AP) – John Anthony's travel company has offices that are quite far-flung – including locations in Dallas, at Notre Dame University in Indiana and the University of North Carolina. Tracy and John Panase's four Cookies By Design stores are situated much closer together, in and around Philadelphia.

Although they're dealing with varying distances and different kinds of companies, these small business owners have achieved the same goal – managing multiple operations when they can only be in one place at one time.

The idea of expanding a business beyond the first store, branch or office can be daunting for a new company owner, especially in the economy still uncertain. But sometimes an opportunity comes along that's too good to pass up – another business is up for sale, or franchise locations become available.

For Anthony, who started his company in Dallas, the decision to expand came as he won contracts with big schools including Notre Dame and the University of North Carolina. There was no choice but to open distant offices in order to carry out the business.

But he has some advice for owners thinking of opening up a second location: Don't do it too quickly. "Get it right first and then do it," he said.

For many owners, expansion is the natural result of their companies' growth.

Alex Hiam, an author who also runs a management training consultancy under his own name, said, "I sat for 10 years or 12 years at a desk in Amherst, Mass., and realized I was missing a lot of opportunities. I've grown by opening up a second office in San Francisco."

Making far-flung locations work requires several critical factors, starting with managers you can rely on to run an operation for you.

Panase said she doesn't worry about the stores and their 45 employees when she or her husband aren't there. She said of the manager of the couple's oldest store, "she's been there a long time, and is very trustworthy." And, she said of another store manager, "we moved her over because we had a great deal of confidence in her ability."

In picking a managers of new locations, owners need to decide whether to transfer a worker from an existing site, or hire someone new. Panasse said she and her husband decided to keep their veteran employees at the older locations since those stores were already in such capable hands. That also allowed the Panases to focus more of their own attention on the newer stores.

Once you've got good people in place, "communication, like any other relationship in life, becomes absolutely critical," said Anthony, CEO of Anthony Travel Inc. And not just with employees – Anthony surveys customers at his company's different sites to get anecdotal evidence of how the offices are faring.

Elaine Janus, who co-owns three travel agencies in Connecticut, said e-mail is a big part of communication, "but for us, it's also personal contact. We're verbally speaking with the managers on an ongoing basis – and also the agents."

Stocks rally on rumor of capture

NEW YORK (AP) – Stocks fluctuated throughout an uncertain session Wednesday, dropping amid fears of terrorist attacks and then turning mostly higher late in the day on rumors that Osama bin Laden had been captured.

The market, worried about the possibility of more terrorism, was on its way to its third straight decline before the unconfirmed rumors.

"There were some rumblings that the U.S. military may have captured bin Laden. That caused some buying late in the day," said Todd Clark, head of listed equity trading at Wells Fargo Securities. "When you have volume so light, it's not hard for the market to move."

Trading was indeed light amid the uneasiness over warnings from the FBI and Vice President Dick Cheney each of the past three days.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 52.17, or 0.5 percent, at 10,157.88. But the advance was moderate compared with the Dow's 247-point loss over the previous two sessions.

The broader market also managed late gains. The Nasdaq composite index rose 9.27, or 0.6 percent, to 1,673.45, having dropped 77.21 Monday and Tuesday.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index gained 6.14, or 0.6 percent, to 1,086.02.

Wednesday marked the market's first winning day in three sessions, but it was mild compared to the jumps the market enjoyed last week when the Nasdaq gained 8.8 percent for the week and the Dow rose 4.2 percent.

Still, analysts weren't holding much hope that the market would make much, if any, upward progress this week and believed selling could continue to dominate as investors play it safe ahead of the long Memorial Day weekend. Some of the recent terror warnings are pegged to the weekend.

"Emotions are running high. It's a reminder of the disruption that a terrorist strike can cause not only to the public, in loss of life, but its effects on the economy," said Barry Hyman, chief investment strategist at Ehrenkrantz King Nussbaum.

Hyman said the prospect of terrorism is "a reminder of the risk profile that we as investors have to put into a market ... that is not cheap and still has nagging earnings concerns ahead of it."

Ford, advanced 61 cents to $18.19 after Banc of America raised its rating to "buy" from "market perform."

Johnson & Johnson rose $1.36 to $62 after releasing data showing that its new drug-coated stent is effective. Additionally Merrill Lynch reiterated its "strong buy" rating on the Dow stock.

Grocery chain Albertson's advanced $1.91 to $34.06 after raising its first-quarter outlook.

Dell Computer rose 52 cents to $27.40. Although Merrill Lynch reiterated its "strong buy" rating on Dell, shares were lower for most of Wednesday.

Among the biggest losers, Gap dropped $2.45, or 15.3 percent, to $13.55, after president Millard "Mickey" Drexler on Tuesday announced plans to retire as CEO, a move that raised new questions about the future of the troubled retailer. Additionally, Merrill Lynch lowered its near-term rating on Gap shares to "neutral" from "strong buy."

Dow industrial Home Depot fell 65 cents to $44.25, after beating earnings expectations on Tuesday but indicating it is cautious about the future of the home improvement industry.

Advancing issues barely outnumbered decliners on the New York Stock Exchange. Consolidated volume was light at 1.39 billion shares, below Tuesday's 1.47 billion on Tuesday.

The Russell 2000 index, which tracks smaller company stocks, fell 1.55, or 0.3 percent, to 493.91.

Overseas, Japan's Nikkei stock average finished Wednesday up 1.4 percent. In Europe, France's CAC-40 sank 1.7 percent, Britain's FTSE 100 fell 0.9 percent, and Germany's DAX index declined 1.3 percent.

Grads will find shortage of jobs

The Associated Press

How hard will it be for this spring's 1.2 million college graduates to find steady work? Very hard – the odds of finding an entry-level position on one of the four largest Internet job sites are 106 to 1, according to a new analysis by the outplacement firm Challenger, Gray & Christmas Inc.

The Chicago-based firm surveyed four popular online job sites – Monster.com, HotJobs.com, CareerBuilder.com and CollegeGrad.com – and found there were 14,114 entry-level positions available by the end of March.

But because of duplicate job listings – like companies putting up identical help wanted ads on multiple sites – the number of jobs was probably lower. Duplicate listings were estimated at 20 percent, which would reduce the number of actual job openings to 11,291.

size of ours, the broader demands of being CEO have pulled me away from the things I'm most passionate about."

Neither Drexler nor other company executives would comment further.

Drexler became CEO in 1995 and one of the nation's highest paid executives, earning more than $41.9 million in salary, bonuses and options between 1998 to 2000. According to filings, on March 15, he owned 3 percent of the company.

It is far from clear whether Gap will manage to win back the customers it has lost, including many Baby Boomers who had helped build the brand. Customers wanting more classic looks seemed turned off by the Gap's heavy investment in trendy offerings such as hip-huggers.

Target

mates, Scovanner said. The per-share $1.80 median estimate for the year, a cent shy of projections, is reasonable, he said.

But analysts were encouraged with how the new SuperTargets are doing, Brunner said. Many regard the stores, which include a grocery component, as the company's future, she said. How Target handles the challenges of selling groceries, a difficult and competitive arena, is a bellwether for how the company will perform over the coming years.

Scovanner told analysts that the first-year performance of last year's new SuperTargets was better than the first-year performance of SuperTargets opened in previous years.

"That's what we wanted to hear – that the new stores being rolled out are more productive," Brunner said.

Without the credit card division, retail sales were up 14 percent to $9.34 billion. Sales at Target's discount stores were up 19 percent, but fell 0.9 percent at Mervyn's and declined 0.7 percent at Marshall Field's.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"You cannot create experience. You must undergo it."
— Albert Camus

Every player beyond the beginner stage is familiar with the holdup play at no-trump contracts. To isolate a defender's threatening suit, a declarer often executes a holdup play. The same principle may apply to play at suit contracts. Although it is not as common, the holdup can be just as effective.

West leads the top of his diamond sequence, and dummy covers with the 10. If East covers with his jack, should South win, or should he duck?

If South sees no need to hold up, he wins his ace and draws trumps. If he leads his spade jack, hoping to get future discards, West wins his ace and continues with his diamond eight. This gives the defenders two diamonds and two aces for a quick down one.

What if South leads clubs after drawing trumps? The result will be the same, albeit a little slower. East wins his club ace and shifts to a spade. West wins his ace and leads another diamond for the same one down.

How does South shut out the defender's second diamond winner? By executing a simple holdup play—he refuses his ace at trick one.

When East is allowed to win his diamond jack, he cannot continue the suit without giving South a free finesse. Instead, his forced shift gives South time to make the game. South wins the trump shift and draws trumps. Whether he establishes spades or clubs, he will have time to discard a losing diamond from either hand to lose only one diamond trick.

ANSWER: One spade. In some circles, the weak spade suit is not treated as a biddable suit. Those players would respond one no-trump instead.
