Idaho, by the numbers

LISA M. COLLARD/The Times-News

Jeannine and David Barneby, who moved here from Las Vegas to retire, enjoy the country life on their property of almost 40 acres outside of Twin Falls.

Lifestyle, cost of living sparks interest in state

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS – Getting more for their money was just one of the reasons the Barnebys moved their home from Las Vegas to Twin Falls.

"What really brought us here was not so much the economics of it but the atmosphere and the friendliness of the people," Jeannine Barneby said.

Census figures released Tuesday show sharp increases in housing values in rural areas throughout the state.

"We have a lot of folks coming in from California and throughout the West," said Bill Maughan of Soda Springs, who has spent 35 years in real estate and land appraisal in southeastern Idaho. "They came first to hunt and then came back to retire."

David and Jeannine Barneby fit the profile. The family has a cabin in Jarbidge, Nev., and had visited Twin Falls while vacationing in the tiny Nevada town.

A native of Las Vegas, David Barneby watched growth in his hometown explode in the 1990s. When he had a chance to retire early a few years ago, the Twin Falls area was a natural choice.

"The people are friendly, the cost of living is reasonable," said David Barneby, a 57-year-old engineer. "It kind of has everything if you're thinking about a retirement place. It has the services that a much larger town would have because it serves the whole valley."

Census details include wage divide, home heat

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Nearly 8 percent of Idahoans rely mostly on wood heat, more than a quarter of the households in most Magic Valley counties have three or more cars, and men all over the state continue to earn significantly more money than women.

Results from the 2000 U.S. Census released Tuesday add more detail to last year's population count that allowed lawmakers to redraw legislative districts. The new results come from the Census' "long form," a detailed social and financial survey of one in six American households.

While the results offer interesting tidbits about local communities, they more importantly offer demographic information which can help forecast future transportation needs and services, form business plans, pinpoint rural development needs, create adult educational programs, provide a historical record of communities, and more.

Among the details in the newly released results:

- The percentage of Idahoans over 25 who have graduated from high school grew from 80 percent in 1990 to 85 percent in 2000. Twin Falls County saw a similar increase from 75 percent to 81 percent. In Minidoka County, the percentage grew from 69 percent to 74 percent. Contributing factors include a shrinking elderly population that attended school at a time when a 12th-grade education wasn't as common.
- Minidoka, Lincoln, Jerome, Gooding and Blaine counties all have more than

Dairy files remain secret

A.G. decides waste plans constitute trade secrets

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

FILER – How a dairyman copes with cow manure is nobody's business except his and the Idaho Agriculture Department's – at least for now, say the state's lawyers.

It has to do with "trade secrets," said Brian P. Kane, deputy attorney general. Kane wrote a legal opinion for the Ag Department in response to a Times-News request for copies of nutrient management plans for two Filer-area dairies. The plans outline where dairymen are putting the waste from their cows.

Dairy appeal – A5

"Conceivably, a competitor could use some of the information contained with the Nutrient Management Plan to derive independent economic value. Information related to crop rotation, production records, and other agricultural records are subject to reasonable efforts to maintain their secrecy," Kane wrote.

In other words, someone might figure out a dairyman's production by the amount of waste his cows produce, said Marv Patten, the Ag Department's dairy bureau chief.

Panel urges crackdown on priests

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – A panel of Roman Catholic bishops called Tuesday for a zero-tolerance policy against priests who molest children in the future and a two-strikes-you're-out policy for those guilty of past abuse, acknowledging "enormous pain" over scandal in the church.

Clergymen who molested a child once in the past could continue serving a parish under certain conditions, such as if they undergo counseling and agree to public disclosure of their misconduct, the bishops said in a proposed national policy.

All abuse of minors would have to be reported to civil authorities.

The report by the Ad Hoc Committee on Sexual Abuse will be put to a vote when bishops from around the country meet

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON – President Bush acknowledged Tuesday that the FBI and CIA failed to share key information in advance of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks as members of a joint House-Senate panel opened a broad congressional inquiry into the intelligence failure with promises that they wouldn't engage in a partisan witch hunt.

The 37-member panel held its first, closed-door meeting amid a welter of reports of how tips about planning for the attacks were mishandled by the country's intelligence agencies.

At the root of some of those blunders is the long-standing resistance by the FBI and CIA to share information – a matter already shaping up as one of the central issues the intelligence panel will address.

"The turf guarding problem has a penalty that cannot be tolerated," Rep. Porter Goss, R-Fla., a committee co-chairman, declared after emerging from the first session.

addressed the debate about the performance of the intelligence system and expressed confidence that the problems between the CIA and FBI have been solved.

"In terms of whether or not the FBI and the CIA were communicating properly, I think it is clear that they weren't," Bush said. "Now we have addressed that issue. The CIA and the FBI are now in close communication."

Bush said he was concerned that blame-laying between the FBI and the CIA will distract the two agencies from devoting themselves to fighting future terrorist acts.

"In terms of the gossip and the finger pointing, the level-three staffers trying to protect – you know, trying to protect their hide, I don't think that's of concern. That's just typical Washington, D.C.," Bush said. "But I am – what I am concerned about is tying up valuable assets and time and possibly jeopardizing sources of intelligence."

In its opening session, the House-Senate panel worked on the procedures that will govern its largely secret inquiry into the nation's $30 billion intelligence system.

"We have now, I think, laid the foundation," said Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., the other co-chairman, after the meeting ended. Graham noted that this is the first time in 200 years that two congressional committees – the House and Senate intelligence committees – have joined to conduct an inquiry.

Although they said their goal was to find out what went wrong with the intelligence system before Sept. 11 and to correct the problems, committee members said they don't want to be led in their probe by the latest news of an intelligence misstep.

"We will be a fact-driven, witness-driven review inquiry – not driven by outside forces," Goss said.

Priests

June 13-15 in Dallas. Archbishop Harry Flynn, who led the panel, said the proposal would undergo extensive revisions before the June meeting to incorporate opinions from other bishops.

"The committee had its most challenging debate with regard to priests with past acts of sexual abuse," Flynn said. "We are deeply sympathetic to the feelings of victims/survivors who have experienced years of suffering due to sexual abuse, but treatment and the power of Christian conversion (redemption) have made a difference in some cases."

At least 225 of the nation's more than 46,000 Roman Catholic priests have either been dismissed from their duties or resigned since the scandal began in January.

The document did not say the bishops would seek Vatican authorization to make the policy binding on each diocese. However, Flynn said the Holy See would be asked to review the plan and approve whatever changes may be needed in church law specific to the United States.

Fuel-cell car completes cross-U.S. trip

WASHINGTON (AP) – A hydrogen-powered car completed a cross-country trip Tuesday, a first-of-its kind journey that promoters say proves the cleaner-burning fuel can be a viable alternative to gasoline.

Fuel cell vehicles won't be mass produced for at least eight years under optimistic predictions, but DaimlerChrysler says the trip by its NECAR 5 vehicle shows the promise of fuel cell engines.

"I will not tell anybody how much doubt we had when we started 16 days ago," Ferdinand Panik, head of DaimlerChrysler's fuel cell group, said after the car pulled up at the Capitol at the end of its journey. "It runs much, much better than we believed. It's a big, big step for a new idea, trying to look beyond the capability of fossil fuels."

Fuel cells can run on hydrogen or other fuels, such as ethanol, methanol and gasoline, that can be converted into hydrogen. Hydrogen is combined with oxygen from the air in a chemical reaction that produces electricity that powers the vehicle.

Pure hydrogen-fed fuel cells produce only water – no harmful emissions – but hydrogen is a flammable gas that poses safety questions, especially when crashes occur, and engineers continue work on safe onboard storage systems. Those using other fuels pollute less than gasoline engines but have some emissions and produce less power than pure hydrogen.

The NECAR 5 – "New Electric Car, Fifth Generation" – is a subcompact Mercedes-Benz A-Class that ran on methanol converted to hydrogen. Since methanol is not available at the corner gas station but had to be delivered to points along the route of refueling every 300 miles.

The trip began on May 20 at the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco.

"It's like forcing someone to tell the public how much money he makes," Patten said.

But evidently, the decision to keep plans confidential is not set in stone. All the lawyers involved qualified their written opinions by noting their comments were not formal rulings.

"There have been a significant number of opinions," Patten said. "It is very confusing. There has never been anything clear-cut that determines what is required by existing law. From my perspective, we need more legislation that determines what is confidential and what isn't."

During the 1990s about 150,000 cows were added to southern Idaho's bovine population, many in herds numbering in the thousands. Lawmakers began crafting laws to regulate the rapidly expanding industry. Nutrient management plans were first required of all dairymen in July 2001.

Concerned about water quality, odors and flies in his neighborhood, Filer resident Rich Carlson obtained nutrient management plans in 2001 for nearby dairies from the Ag Department. He said he got all the requested information except phone numbers and cow counts. But in April 2002, the Ag Department refused to give him anything further.

Following the denial of Carlson's request, The Times-News asked formally for similar information and received about 150 pages of photocopies. The copies included the nutrient management plans for two controversial dairies: Hank Hafliger's Desert Rose Farms, and Jack Tuls' Dutch Touch Dairy. The documents also included an odor management plan for Desert Rose, generic information on how to write a plan, and legal opinions from two lawyers in the attorney general's office.

All information for the two Filer dairies that related to making money – such as cow numbers, weights of cow waste and crop rotation – were blacked out. The Ag Department also blacked out some information relating to an "Example Dairy" in the plan-writing instructions.

The newspaper is considering its legal options, Managing Editor Clark Walworth said.

Patten said discussions about how much information should be revealed through nutrient management plans have been ongoing since the Legislature passed the requirement.

At the present time, detailed information isn't even available to county officials who might use it in regulating confined animal feeding operations at the local level, said Bill Crafton, Twin Falls County planning and zoning director.

Unhappy with the Ag Department's decision to withhold the information, state Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, has said he's willing to revisit the legislation.

"The fundamental issue is whether the plan is adequate to protect ground and surface water," he said. "And second, the public needs to know if the plans are being followed."

Noh said he believes the public has right to know about waste systems, rates of field application of waste and results of soils tests. The public also has a right to know how the nutrient management plans are monitored and kept in compliance, he added.

Carlson said he was concerned about administrative problems the Ag Department had with the nutrient management plans.

Dairymen submit the plans to the Ag Department, and then the department checks the plans by "ground truthing," or actually going to the fields to make sure the manure is landing where the farmers say it is. The Ag Department had ground truthed only 11 percent of Magic Valley plans by May 2002, 10 months after plans had been initially submitted. In addition, by May 2002, the Ag Department had reviewed only 74 percent of the plans, and it had to return nearly a third of them to be corrected.

Patten explained that the Ag Department was slow on ground truthing Magic Valley dairies because officials had more confidence in Magic Valley dairies than in the rest of the state. The department had focused first on eastern and southwestern Idaho dairies.

Because nutrient management plans are so new for dairymen, it was understandable that many had to be returned to be corrected, Patten said.

He acknowledged the department is hard-pressed to administer new state regulations for Idaho's rapidly expanding dairy industry, during a period of decreased state funding for agencies.

"I think there is a failure of most people to recognize the magnitude of what we're doing within the perimeters of budget constraints," he said. "They're getting one hellacious bang for their buck."

What the records show

Last month, The Times-News asked state officials for copies of various documents, including nutrient management plans for two much-discussed Filer-area dairies: Hank Hafliger's Desert Rose Farms, and Jack Tuls' Dutch Touch Dairy.

The Idaho Agriculture Department released about 150 pages of photocopies in response to that request. (The state charged the newspaper $1 per page.) Though most of the key data has been blacked out, some previously undivulged information does emerge:

- In February 2002, Dutch Touch Dairy owner Jack Tuls was fined $30,000 because of an illegal waste-water discharge into Cedar Draw. He has paid $15,000; the remaining $15,000 is being held in abeyance until he successfully completes a two-year probation period.

Jack Tuls purchased more land in order to have more room for his waste.

- According to the odor management plans for Hank Hafliger's Desert Rose Farms dairy, eight specific areas of the dairy were identified as causing excessive odor. Engineers designed and supervised a three-tiered plan. They now are working through Tier 2 by covering "Pond Seven" with a synthetic material and evaluating and modifying a mechanical separation system through the summer. They also will work on Ponds Two and Three over the summer by changing the design of the ponds and modifying separator systems.

By October, they will determine whether a high-performance ozone generator system is worthwhile in Pond Six.

A story in Tuesday's Times-News mischaracterized June Standlee's of Eden stance on abortion. Standlee said although she considers herself anti-abortion, she doesn't describe herself as an activist.

U.S.: Bin Laden aide planned attack

WASHINGTON (AP) – Investigators believe they have idenfified a Kuwaiti lieutenant of Osama bin Laden as the likely mastermind of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, a senior U.S. counterterrorism official said Tuesday.

Khalid Shaikh Mohammed, designated one of the FBI's most-wanted terrorists, is at large in Afghanistan or nearby, the official told The Associated Press.

U.S. investigators believe Mohammed planned many aspects of the Sept. 11 attacks, turning bin Laden's calls for dead Americans into reality.

"There's lots of links that tie him to 9-11," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "He's the most significant operational player out there right now."

A second U.S. official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said Mohammed played a key role in planning the attacks as did Abu Zubaydah, the al-Qaida leader now in U.S. custody.

Khalid Shaikh Mohammed
On FBI's most-wanted list

Within three months of Sept. 11, according to the official, the FBI learned that Mohammed had moved money that was used to pay for the attacks and since then the United States has gathered other significant evidence pointing to him as the key planner. The official declined to go into detail, citing a need to protect intelligence information.

Mohammed is accused of working with Ramzi Yousef in the first bombing of the World Trade Center, which left six dead in 1993. He and Yousef, hiding in the Philippines, also are accused of plotting in 1995 to hijack and bomb several trans-Pacific airliners heading for the United States. Yousef, now serving a life sentence in the United States, also has been accused of plotting to crash a plane into CIA headquarters.

Mohammed was charged by federal prosecutors in New York in 1996 in connection with the alleged 1995 plot. The FBI describes him as in his mid-thirties, sometimes wearing a beard and glasses, and slightly overweight. His aliases include Ashraf Refaat Nabith Henin, Khalid Abdul Wadood, Salem Ali and Fahd Bin Abdallah Bin Khalid.

U.S. officials have repeatedly said that capturing or killing bin Laden's cadre of lieutenants – men like Mohammed – is a key goal in the war on terrorism. In some ways, they are considered as dangerous as bin Laden: Where al-Qaida's leader serves as an inspiration to his followers, his top aides conduct the nuts-and-bolts planning of attacks.

Child-murder trial begins

SAN DIEGO (AP) – The neighbor accused of kidnapping and murdering 7-year-old Danielle van Dam went on trial Tuesday with prosecutors saying for the first time that the girl's hair and carpet fibers from her house were found in the defendant's motor home.

David Westerfield, 50, is accused of snatching the second-grader in February from her home two doors down from his. He could get the death penalty if convicted.

Prosecutor Jeff Dusek told the jury that investigators found Danielle's hair and carpet fibers from her home in Westerfield' house and 35-foot motor home.

The evidence is in addition to the girl's blood on Westerfield's jacket and her blood and fingerprints in his motor home – evidence that was disclosed earlier in the case.

The defense was expected to give its opening statement later Tuesday.

Former welfare recipients help president promote plan

WASHINGTON (AP) – Work requirements for welfare recipients mean liberation, not punishment, President Bush said Tuesday as he renewed his effort to shape welfare changes now before Congress.

Lawmakers must renew the nation's 6-year-old welfare law this year. The tough rules included in the reforms passed in 1996, along with a booming economy, cut in half the number of people receiving assistance.

Bush has used several appearances over the last month to promote his welfare agenda. Bush wants a new law to push many more people to work many more hours in order to continue getting government checks.

Bush tried to bolster his argument that work requirements should get stricter, saying instead of an increase in poverty, millions of Americans – more than half of them children – escaped poverty between 1996 and 2000.

'...the American people know,' or so says President Bush – over and over

By Dana Milbank
The Washington Post

Analysis

What do the American people think? Ask President Bush.

"The American people know this about me," he said on the subject of pre-Sept. 11 terrorism warnings. "Had I known that the enemy was going to use airplanes to kill on that fateful morning, I would have done everything in my power to protect the American people."

What do the American people think about the war on terrorism? "The American people understand that some days there will be moments of great drama on the TV screens, and sometimes there's going to be kind of a lull in the action," Bush said Monday in Little Rock, invoking the American people three times in one speech. "The American people, much to the chagrin of the enemy and much to the delight of a grateful president, understand that we face a new threat."

How about his handling of Enron and its pension debacle? "The American people know that my administration has acted the right way," Bush affirmed.

The best energy policy? "It's a combination of good conservation and an increase in supplies," and "I think most of the American people understand that," he said.

The American people do not know for sure why the president keeps saying this. But the president and his aides have used some variation of the phrase hundreds of times, to defend the administration's policies on everything from the Middle East to income taxes.

This is no verbal tic. By invoking the American people (not the informal "Americans") when confronted with a thorny issue or a hostile question, Bush and his aides give the impression that the matter is some inside-the-Beltway intrigue that is out of step with public opinion.

"It's an effective shorthand," said Jeff Shesol, a former Clinton speechwriter who taught a course in presidential rhetoric at Princeton University this year. "It's suggesting that in fact you may have an argument but we've got the people." Shesol admits Clinton speechwriters used the phrase, too. "We're not proud of it, but the American people know our heart was in the right place," he said.

But how does a president know what the American people believe? Earlier this spring, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer hinted the source may be opinion polls. "The American people, as shown by all the data, powerfully, continually support the president at record-breaking levels," he said.

This from the president who said he would govern by "principle, not polls" and who mocked the Clinton administration for polling. Yet, according to the new issue of the American Prospect magazine, Federal Election Commission filings show that the Republican National Committee spent $236,000 on Bush's three pollsters in the first quarter, on pace to spend nearly $1 million this year. (The RNC says no more than $150,000 was relevant to the White House.)

"Polls do give you as accurate a reflection as you can get of what the public thinks," Fleischer allows. Besides, he adds, invoking the American people "beats the alternative, which is to say what the people of a foreign country believe."

As Bush deals with issues such as Enron and the terrorism warnings, the phrase has grown more popular. In a single briefing recently, Fleischer, spoke for the American people no fewer than seven times, including:

"The American people will be very leery of any politician who seeks to turn the sorrow of victims into their own political gain. ... The American people know that this president is determined to protect this country. ... The American people know that this administration has a lot of meetings that take place at classified levels. ... I think the American people have a general sense of the process the president uses to obtain the information he needs."

Even when asked about the propriety of the GOP selling a White House photo of Bush on Air Force One on Sept. 11, Fleischer invoked the same authority. "The American people recognize that that photo represented the president doing his job on behalf of the country," he said.

NATION

Small California town ranks as nation's richest

RANCHO SANTA FE, Calif. (AP) – The schools are outstanding, there's almost no crime and the sun shines 320 days a year. Only residents can join the community's world-class golf club.

But only the rich need apply.

Rancho Santa Fe, a town of 5,000 people 30 miles north of San Diego, is the nation's wealthiest community, according to Census figures released Tuesday.

"It's a wonderful place," said Annie Perez, who owns Bolero Mexican cafe in the tiny downtown area and lives nearby. "This is the best life."

The per capita income of more than $113,000 puts Rancho Santa Fe ahead of Atherton and Woodside, both near San Francisco, Palm Beach, Fla., and Bloomfield Hills, Mich., Census figures show. Indian River Shores, Fla., ranked No. 1 in the last Census in 1990, fell to seventh place in the latest survey.

Rancho Santa Fe also was the most expensive place to buy a house in the United States over the past year. The median single-family home price is $1.7 million, according to DataQuick Information Systems of San Diego.

Few residents complain.

"I consider myself lucky," said Albert Plattner, who lives a short walk from his real estate office in Rancho Santa Fe's two-block downtown. "I think it's the greatest place to live in the world."

What's luring the wealthiest Americans? For one thing, privacy.

Wealthiest cities

The 10 wealthiest communities of 1,000 households or more in the United States, their average per capita income and the number of households there, according to figures released Tuesday by the U.S. Census Bureau:

Community	Income	Households
Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.	$113,132	1,200
Atherton, Calif.	$112,408	2,385
Palm Beach, Fla.	$109,219	5,697
Bloomfield Hills, Mich.	$104,920	1,523
Belle Meade, Tenn.	$104,908	1,058
Woodside, Calif.	$104,667	1,905
Indian River Shores, Fla.	$102,511	1,759
North Hills, N.Y.	$100,093	1,814
Cherry Hills Village, Colo.	$99,996	1,980
Portola Valley, Calif.	$99,621	1,653

Rancho Santa Fe's rural feel has been zealously guarded for 74 years by a strict set of rules, called the Protective Convenant. Most properties are a minimum two acres. All the traditionally styled Spanish, Mediterranean or ranch style homes must meet standards set by a design board that calls itself the Art Jury, which strives to ensure even 18,000 square-foot buildings blend into the landscape.

double the state average of foreign-born residents. Ten percent or more of the population in these counties is foreign-born, and half or more of them say they moved to the area during the 1990s. Nationwide, the percentage of foreign-born population is the highest it has been since 1930, the Census Bureau says.

• Lincoln County residents travel farther than most Idahoans to work. The statewide mean commute time is 20 minutes compared with 30 minutes in Lincoln County. That is up from a mean Lincoln County commute time of 23 minutes in 1990.

• More than half the homes in Gooding and Jerome counties rely on electricity as their main source of heat compared with a state average of 34 percent. Forty or more percent of Twin Falls, Elmore and Blaine county households use natural gas. Most area counties have fewer households than the state average of 8 percent using wood as a main heating source, but in Camas County the number is 32 percent. Generally throughout the valley, less than 11 percent of homes rely on heating oil. Less than 1 percent use solar energy as their main heat source.

• Statewide, the median income of full-time working males is nearly $10,000 more than that of full-time working females. Median earnings were $32,603 for men in 2000 compared with $22,939 for women. The widest local divides were seen in Twin Falls and Cassia counties where the earning gaps amounted to about $9,200.

• A quarter or more of the households in most Magic Valley counties have three or more vehicles. Just as many homes have one vehicle. Most have two. Five percent of Idaho's households don't have access to a vehicle.

• As expected, Blaine County boasts the region's highest median household income at $50,496. That compares with a state average of $37,572.

have played a part in fueling the increase in median home values in rural counties. In Twin Falls County, the median home value was $50,7000 in 1990. By the end of the decade the median value grew 85 percent to $93,800.

The result can be a tough housing market for residents who have spent much of their lives in rural Idaho and have no plans to leave.

"It creates a problem because with values going up it pushes housing out of the reach of many," said Louis Mendoza, the part-time mayor of the small community of Franklin. The town of 640 is in Franklin County on the Utah border.

Idaho was the fifth-fastest growing state in the 1990s. Its population increased 28.5 percent. But while median income was rising 48 percent, the median monthly mortgage rose 58 percent on homes, which increased 83 percent in value.

Economic realities for young families also can be seen in the makeup of the work force. Statewide, in 58 percent of the families with kids under 6, both parents were working, and 59 percent of women over 16 were in the labor force. That was up from 56 percent 10 years earlier.

"We're certainly moving into a time where it takes two wage earners, two workers, to support a family," University of Idaho economist Joel Hamilton said. "Part of what's happening is that a lot of women who were essentially unpaid workers on the farm have found it necessary to move into being an employee of a commercial enterprise."

The trend was the same in urban counties though not as stark, and it was encouraged by housing costs and mortgages. Thirty percent of homeowners statewide were paying more than a quarter of their income for housing and nearly half of that group more than a third.

More than 20 percent were paying more than a third of their income for housing in Kootenai County and in the resort areas of Blaine, Bonner and Valley counties.

Jury in beating trial calls it a day

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) – Michael Skakel's fate went to the jury Tuesday as deliberations began on whether the Kennedy family cousin beat his 15-year-old neighbor to death with a golf club in 1975.

The jury ended for the day after about six hours of deliberations. Defense attorney Michael Sherman, normally relaxed and quick with a quip, paced the courthouse hall.

"Michael's spending most of his time trying to calm me down," Sherman said.

Deliberations began the morning after prosecutors closed their case by displaying a projected photo of a smiling Martha Moxley that dissolved into a grim crime scene photo.

Skakel, 41, is accused of killing Moxley when they were 15-year-olds living in a wealthy gated community in Greenwich. The golf club was matched to a set owned by Skakel's mother. Skakel is a nephew of Ethel Kennedy, widow of Robert F. Kennedy.

White House turns Enron documents to Senate panel

WASHINGTON – The White House gave a Senate committee Tuesday more than 2,100 pages of documents under subpoena related to contacts with Enron officials while protesting their handling by the panel's Democratic chairman.

The chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., promised to protect the documents by imposing "extraordinary security precautions" – including keeping them in a locked room equipped with an alarm.

Under an agreement with the White House, only a limited number of committee staff will have access to the room and those who do must sign confidentiality agreements, Lieberman said.

The documents, filling one box and one accordion folder, were transferred to the committee in the early evening, after the panel's noon deadline had passed.

White House officials said the documents comprised an initial response to the two subpoenas the committee issued on May 22, one to President Bush's office, the other to the office of Vice President Dick Cheney. The offices of Bush and Cheney said they were still receiving documents from employees.

States see drop in individual income tax revenues

WASHINGTON – States saw their individual income tax revenues shrink by almost 15 percent over the first four months this year, according to a national survey of the states that suggests the budget crunch they've wrestled with over the last year is far from over.

"It's a double whammy – not only did you not have the money you thought you had for last fiscal year, but you now have to revise dramatically downward your revenues for the coming year," said Ray Scheppach, executive director of the National Governors' Association.

Nearly every state has experienced such a decline, and the drop-off often exceeds 25 percent, according to a report released Tuesday by the National Governors Association. The amount of income tax revenues lost by the states totals $14.5 billion, and is one of several areas of revenue that have been declining.

Forecast again looks bad for scheduled Endeavor launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. – The forecast was deteriorating for today's launch of space shuttle Endeavour to the international space station, nearly a week late because of stormy weather and a leaky valve.

Shuttle weather officer Kathy Winters said Tuesday that there is only a 40 percent chance that nature will cooperate. There is a greater likelihood Wednesday for thick clouds, as well as thunderstorms and maybe even high wind, she said.

As part of anti-terrorist measures, NASA was keeping the exact launch time a secret until about 24 hours in advance, saying only that liftoff would occur somewhere between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Laura Bush library foundation raises $5 million in first year

WASHINGTON – One year after launching a foundation to buy books for America's libraries, first lady Laura Bush said Tuesday that she's off to a $5 million start – with $50,000 in help from her mother-in-law.

Nation in brief

Former first lady Barbara Bush joined the current first lady in the White House East Room for three hours of presentations by librarians, education researchers and school administrators highlighting how good local libraries can improve student performance and test scores.

The elder Mrs. Bush, in her trademark pearls and bright red shoes, left the talking to her daughter-in-law, a former teacher and librarian who called Monday's White House conference "fulfillment of a dream."

Last summer, she founded The Laura Bush Foundation for America's Libraries, which has since raised $5 million to stock the shelves of inner-city and rural libraries around the country.

Library, City Park should remain key gathering spots

Silent libraries and slam dunks may not be the right mix for a spring weekend. Which is why last week's Western Days 3-on-3 basketball tournament was moved to the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Moving the hoopsters away from the bookworms may have been a wise choice when you consider how the tournament's popularity has grown over the years. But library patrons shouldn't be afraid of sharing downtown public space with community events that bring some commotion.

Western Days has become one of Twin Falls County's most popular celebrations, attracting community members as well as visitors. Some inconveniences come with any big hoedown, usually in the form of thick pedestrian traffic and road closures. And it's those aggravations that have put some library patrons in a huff about proximity to the library.

Those who don't like the library being near all the hubbub should realize that the library is public property, and it's located at the very heart of community activity.

That doesn't mean it should be Grand Central Station. But it's not a mausoleum, either. The library needs to be an accessible, inviting and involved facet of community life.

Some library patrons and neighboring businesses objected to the crowds and parking restrictions that come with having the basketball tournament near the library. Those concerns may be valid. But complaints about participants using the library's restrooms and drinking fountains have a snobbish tone.

Our view: Celebrations in Twin Falls City Park shouldn't be relocated just to preserve the serenity of the city library.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Putting the tournament at CSI gives players and spectators more space to expand the competition and to enjoy the athletic ambience. The campus could work out for the best, making this wildly popular tournament even more successful in years to come.

But city leaders should resist any urge to push more community events out of City Park in order to protect the library's serenity. The park has long been a key community gathering point. The park and the library are vital resources for maintaining the vibrancy of the downtown area.

It's important that the library remain a downtown attraction that welcomes young and old – white collar, blue collar or no collar at all. In an age when the Internet is challenging public libraries' monopoly on research resources, and when books must compete with video games and digital cable for young people's attention, the Twin Falls library needs to be open to all.

Custer appreciates votes in commissioner race

To the citizens of Twin Falls County:

Thank you for your support and assistance in my effort to gain the Republican nomination for Twin Falls County Commissioner, District 2. Your vote was encouraging and very much appreciated.

We have a great place to live, and we want to keep it that way.

I write you concerning the front-page picture in The Times-News on May 15. The center-piece picture that caught my attention was in color and titled "Mowin' with mom." That front-page picture not only is eye-catching to the average parent but also indirectly encourages an adult riding on a potentially extremely dangerous piece of machinery. The pictured situation is certainly "an accident waiting to happen."

I encourage you to retract your implied statement that riding on machinery with children is acceptable. Further information on childhood safety is readily available at Magic Valley Safe Kids or any of the pediatricians at Physician Center.

We will win World Cup, one day

ROBERT J. SAMUELSON

I have bad news for everyone else: the United States will win the World Cup. Maybe not this year, but the triumph is closer than the rest of the world thinks. We are becoming a soccer-playing and, to a lesser extent, soccer-loving country. We may not convert others to our vocabulary – our soccer is their "football" – but we're going to beat them at their own game.

This will be shocking. It is one thing for us to flaunt our military and economic power, to spread McDonald's and Madonna around the world. It's quite another to trespass on everyone else's special preserve: After religion – or before it – soccer is the world's passion and obsession. In 1998, about 1 billion people watched the World Cup final. For all 64 games, viewership was reckoned at 33 billion.

Here Americans (supposedly) indifferent and incompetent. The trouble is that we're already defying stereotypes. From 1954 to 1986, the United States didn't qualify for the World Cup. Since 1990, we've consistently qualified. On the eve of this Cup; the United States was ranked 13th in the world, just after Germany and England.

Better is to come. I recall exactly when I knew the United States would win the World Cup. It was a clear fall morning in the mid-1990s. We were taking our younger son, then 6, to join the local league. We drove to Julius West Middle School, a few miles from our home. There, on the school's grounds, were several dozen small soccer fields (20 yards by 40 yards). Teams played four vs. four. They came and went all day. It was kickball without bases – chaotic and charming.

Not much skill. But there were lots of bodies. At Julius West, I realized that arithmetic favored American soccer power. Six-year-olds were starting soccer by the thousands. Soccer is now the second most popular team sport among 6- to 17-year-olds. In 2001, there were 7.7 million players, says a survey by the Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association. Only basketball at 11.3 million was higher. (Both sports were judged by playing time of at least 25 days a year.) Street-skating was third at 7.5 million and baseball a distant fourth at 4.7 million.

Three decades ago, soccer was so far outside the mainstream that it wasn't even a trickle. "I came here in 1967 from England as a 21-year old," says Graham Ramsay, now director of education and training for the Maryland State Youth Soccer Association. "The game here was then very much an ethnic game – you'd meet Germans, Italians, the whole bit."

No more. Soccer is now so American that "soccer Moms" are pop sociology. Before long, Americans will forget that there ever was a time without soccer and claim to have invented the game. And it's more than numbers. Our younger son long ago ditched soccer for hockey. But the older, 15, remains an avid player. When he was 10, I asked him to name his favorite sport. I thought I knew the answer: basketball. "Soccer," he said.

Ditto for many of his teammates. They love the game. These are athletic kids. Some are big, muscular and speedy. I have long expected a couple of football coaches to interrupt one of our games, handcuff the biggest players and read them their rights:

"Son, this is the United States of America. At your weight and speed, you may not play soccer. The Constitution requires you to play football."

Until that happens, American soccer must improve. It's being fed by more players, more talent and more commitment – as well as more immigrants who mix their soccer traditions with ours.

To think the United States can win the World Cup is widely viewed as a lunatic notion. The soccer expert in our family – the 15-year-old – says: "Dad, you don't know what you're talking about. ... In most countries, they take (promising) boys when they're 12 or 13 and breed them for (professional) soccer like thoroughbreds." They're put under contract and trained.

Ramsay is more diplomatic. Despite gains, America isn't yet a soccer culture, he says. In Brazil and elsewhere, pickup games are common; here, they're rare. Soccer elsewhere is a "passion"; here, it's more a "hobby."

I am undaunted. It's true that the U.S. team sometimes looks bleak; it finished last in the 1998 Cup. It's also true that most Americans aren't fans. In 2001, attendance at Major League Soccer games averaged 14,638 – down 16 percent from 1996.

But games aren't won or lost in the bleachers. Regardless of whether the United States does well or poorly this year, we've attained a critical mass in players and enthusiasm. We will intrude increasingly on everyone else's game and, sooner or later, take the Cup. Just wait.

Killers don't feel the pain victims suffer

STANLEY CROUCH

While all manner of symbolic gestures might be made to attempt to reduce the grief of those who lost family or beloved friends Sept. 11, I doubt that such gestures will lead to closure or help those grieving get on with their lives.

I say this because it seems to me that mass murderers are far better at putting things behind them – of getting perspective – than those who suffer the response of grief to those killings. The great villains are as good as people can get at having closure or getting on with their lives.

In the winter of 1864, a U.S. Army officer, one Maj. Chivington, who was dedicated to the extermination of Indians, led his troops to slaughter a few hundred who were peacefully camped at Sand Creek, Colo. Two-thirds of the murdered were women and children. When the bloody scalps of the dead were put on poles and brought from the wings onto the stage of the Apollo Theater in Denver, the audience stood, clapping, cheering and whistling.

Geronimo, an Apache who butchered with great determination and glee, never expressed any contrition about the bloodstains on his reputation. Take a look at those Nazis during the Nuremberg trials that followed World War II and the discoveries of the death factories in which millions of Jews had been gassed and incinerated. The charges of crimes against humanity seem to concern them less than what their chances might be of slipping the noose.

Of course you must recall Osama bin Laden and his boys, laughing and giggling about how good God had been to them by delivering so much more than they ever expected was possible Sept. 11.

The Indians who survived Sand Creek, the Jews who lost so many to what the Nazis termed the final solution, the Russians who made it through Stalin's purges, those Cambodians whose gloomy books we now read have much in common with those grieving for lives lost Sept. 11.

They suffered the kinds of losses that ceremony will not remove the memory of or make sense of or be able to reduce to the silent condition of a scar that one always forgets having until seeing it in the mirror.

As a people always trying to deepen our civilized understanding of others, we must support them in almost anything that is rational. But we should never forget that when those murders have slipped out of our minds, there will be thousands in whom the horror remains as real as it was the day it happened.

Stanley Crouch is a columnist for the New York Daily News.

Finding our maturity in the wreckage

We knew the day would come – that day when what once was the World Trade Center, because of the dedication of the volunteers who sought to find the remains of the dead, would become The Pile.

We knew that we'd face the day when we would have to admit that hundreds of people have not been found and are still missing and that what was once the World Trade Center is now a burial ground in the mode of the City Hall area, Washington Square Park and Central Park.

Yet, it's too soon to do what our most recent rituals try to prepare us to do: move on.

E.R. SHIPP

The Pit is no longer a recovery site, but a construction site that will in some fashion honor those who died there Sept. 11 – after we duke it out over the appropriate manner to memorialize the dead and inspire the living.

"I guess I'm glad it's coming to an end," one construction worker who'd been there since the beginning said the other day. "We have to move on. We have to grow up."

And you know what? We actually have grown up as a nation.

Except for troglodytes impervious to change, we know who we are. No longer should it be easy to think of Americans as white folks with roots in England and Scotland and Ireland and Germany – and to consider everybody else, no matter if they were here first, as "the others."

When you saw who died at the World Trade Center, you know – unless you are that troglodyte – that we can't be labeled with the N-word or any of the other ugly racial, ethnic or sexual slurs that were once a regular part of everyday conversations.

We are Americans.

Everybody died that day. And everybody came to the rescue.

But that doesn't mean that everyone was a hero, a word we have made almost trite by using it so much since then.

The firefighters who rushed into the towers, the guards who were on the job, the folks who stayed behind to help those who could not get out – those qualify as heroes. Everybody else was just there. They may be called victims, but not heroes.

We've learned a lot about ourselves in these days. Out of determination – American determination, if you will – nearly 2 million tons of tower debris and human remains were removed much sooner and at less cost than originally estimated.

This, by the way, in a city known for bilking – and where the bilked wear it as a badge of New Yorkness.

We've created ritual – the stuff the British have had a thousand years to work out.

The procession the other day of pipers and drummers and of people carrying photographs of the dead, the symbolic removal of the missing from the site on a flag-draped stretcher carried by pallbearers from the rescue and recovery teams, the playing of taps, the helicopter flyover, the applause as the last of The Pile's workers emerged – that's our new, and hopefully never to be seen again, American funeral.

And we've forged a united state of Americans, where that which divides us amounts to absolutely nothing in this new real world, that world where we are compelled to put on the uniforms of cops and firefighters and stockbrokers and teachers and maids and chefs and ironworkers.

That's what makes it so easy to now mean it when we sing "God Bless America."

E.R. Shipp is a columnist for the New York Daily News. She won the Pulitzer Prize for commentary in 1996.

Leader won't renounce use of nukes

ALMATY, Kazakhstan (AP) – Pakistani President Gen. Pervez Musharraf refused Tuesday to renounce first use of nuclear weapons, as efforts to bring him together with his Indian counterpart to defuse tensions over Kashmir appeared to fail.

In New Delhi, a senior Indian government official told The Associated Press on Tuesday that India was paying close attention to diplomatic pressure being applied by Washington and other capitals. The Americans had persuaded India's government to show restraint, at least for now, the official said on condition of anonymity.

Secretary of State Colin Powell pledged "a full-court diplomatic press" on the two nations.

"It would be absolutely horrible in the year 2002 for any nation to use nuclear weapons in a situation such as this," Powell said Tuesday while attending an international conference in Barbados.

Trying to keep diplomatic efforts alive and avoid full-blown war between nuclear-armed neighbors, Russian President Vladimir Putin and other world leaders met separately with Musharraf and Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee at an Asian summit in Kazakhstan and, according to Musharraf, invited them to Moscow for possible talks.

Musharraf accepted the invitation, but the timing of the proposed meeting was vague, and the Kremlin said Vajpayee was not invited. Putin will visit India late this year.

Tuesday morning, the two leaders angrily blamed each other for more than five decades of conflict as they sat across a table while their troops fired at each other in the disputed Kashmir region.

Arafat presents reform plan to CIA chief

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) – Responding to growing U.S. pressure to fight terror, Yasser Arafat on Tuesday presented CIA Director George Tenet with a plan for restructuring the unwieldy Palestinian security apparatus. Israel called the proposals "worthless."

The Palestinian leader appointed a 73-year-old general to head the new security array, but Israel said the proposed changes are largely cosmetic because Arafat, who has done little to rein in militants in the past, remains in charge. Some Palestinians also were skeptical, because the reform would still leave six different security branches.

In another development, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon gave in to pressure to prevent suicide bombings and approved construction of a fence between part of the West Bank and Israel, defying supporters who fear it would lead to Israel's giving up most of the territory.

Court: Children caused fatal fire

BUHL – Evidence shows that children playing with a lighter, not faulty electrical wiring, caused a Buhl fire in which two children were killed, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

On Dec. 18, 1996, LaDonna Seeley's Buhl home caught fire, just months after she had moved in and hired Philips Electric to install new wiring, according to the Supreme Court ruling.

Seeley had been living with her daughter Stacie Carnell; Stacie's two children, Cambria Carnell and Morgan McCarthy; Seeley's son Jerry Carnell; Jerry's four minor children, including Brittiny Carnell; and Seeley's son Shane Carnell.

Cambria Carnell and Brittiny Carnell died in the fire. Jerry Carnell's son, Gerald, was injured.

Stacie Carnell, Jerry Carnell and Gerald Carnell's mother, Cindy, filed wrongful death and personal injury claims against Seeley; Ralph and Betty Smith, who sold the house to Seeley; Jim Barker, the Smiths' Realtor; Philips Electric; and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. Health and Welfare had placed Jerry Carnell's children in Seeley's care.

The plaintiffs claimed that faulty electrical wires caused the fire, but 5th District Judge Roger Burdick granted summary judgment to the defendants. The Supreme Court upheld Burdick's decision Tuesday.

Delegation asks agencies to fight Mormon crickets

BOISE – Idaho's four congressmen asked federal agencies on Tuesday to eradicate Mormon crickets in southern Idaho.

In a letter send to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, the Forest Service and the Fish and Wildlife Service, the delegation said the cricket invasion is 100 times worse than normal this year and will harm wildlife, soil and water if nothing is done to check the infestation.

"Any delay will result in a missed opportunity to control the current and future devastation wrought by this insect," the delegation wrote.

The crickets are consuming thousands of acres of rangeland. Millions of dead bugs have coated highways.

Billingsley Creek park planning session is set

HAGERMAN – The public is invited to discuss management strategies next week for the new Billingsley Creek State Park.

The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Senior Center in Hagerman. The Idaho Department of Fish and Game, the University of Idaho Aqua Culture Research Center and area legislators will be on hand to answer questions.

Parks Department staff and park legislative sponsor Sen. John Sandy, R-Hagerman, will give short presentations outlining the background and objectives for the new park. A question-and-answer session will follow and will include the opportunity for the public to voice comments or concerns about the park.

"Now that we know we are in a long-term management position at Billingsley Creek we are looking forward to not only sharing with the residents in the Hagerman Valley our short term management strategies for the newly acquired properties, but to open a discussion on long-term planning goals for public use, resource management and promotion of all the significant sites along the Thousand Springs Scenic Byway," said Rick Collignon, Parks Department director.

Old Towne neighbors clash

Business owner complains about grain mill's dust

By Julie Pence
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – The chaff floating around from a neighboring grain mill was so thick one day that businessman Dave Woodhead thought it was snowing.

Woodhead owns The Lamphouse Theater, a business that specializes in showing unusual movies. He's been in the old warehouse district now called Old Towne for about seven years. Woodhead's theater was one of the first businesses, but now there are several thriving enterprises in the rejuvenated section of Twin Falls.

Once zoned for heavy industrial use, now the area is actually zoned "Old Towne." It's a special kind of commercial zone, because it has specific requirements in terms of signs and building design, for example.

It might seem odd that a commercial area would have problems with grain dust, but one industrial business remains operational from the old days, before the advent of Old Towne. The building in which Northwest Feed Manufacturing Inc. is located has been used for grain milling for some 75 years. The business continues to operate in the new commercial zone because it was grandfathered to be industrial.

But the aging facility is causing problems, its new neighbors say. One business owner, Carol Allred, told the City Council earlier this week that she has tried every agency she can think of to force Northwest Feed to stop spreading chaff all over the district. Woodhead said Wednesday that he and everyone around him are fed up, too.

They also say new businesses of the same type will not be attracted to the area because of the voluminous amounts of grain residue.

"I realize this is an older feed mill," said Gordon Bennett, who is the foreman of Northwest Feed. "When it was built, it was state-of-the-art. But you have to remember what we do here is

Court throws out challenge to judge

The Associated Press

BOISE – The state Supreme Court on Tuesday dismissed the challenge of the Nez Perce Tribe to former Snake River Water Rights Adjudication Judge Barry Wood because Wood is no longer presiding over the case.

But the high court said there were considerable issues in the claims lodged by the Nez Perce over the water rights claims of Wood and members of his family.

Judge Barry Wood

"The issues that have been raised in this case concerning the interests of Judge Wood and his family have alerted judges to the concerns of the Nez Perce Tribe and other litigants," Justice Gerald Schroeder wrote for the court.

"Steps have been taken to make full disclosure of interests that might influence a decision," he wrote.

Two years ago, the tribe asked Wood to disqualify himself from considering its 1,886 claims for half the natural flow of springs and fountains on former reservation lands ceded in a 1863 treaty. The claims were consolidated and delegated to Special Master Terrence A. Dolan, but the adjudication judge still has administrative responsibility.

The tribe contended that Wood and two family members had water rights claims in the adjudication that were in direct conflict with its claims.

But Wood refused to step aside, arguing that the claims in question had already been decreed or were uncontested.

The tribe appealed, but it became meaningless 17 months ago, when the Supreme Court removed Wood for unrelated reasons from the adjudication and assigned the case to Judge Roger Burdick.

The adjudication of 150,000 water rights claims in 38 of the 44 counties is nearing the end of its second decade and has already cost $56 million.

The high court replaced Wood after Wood's brother-in-law, Daniel Eismann, was elected to the Supreme Court. Had Wood continued presiding over the adjudication, Eismann would have had to disqualify himself from every appeal, and the adjudication and water rights were among Eismann's primary election campaign issues.

Wood, who is now a 5th District Court judge in Gooding County, is currently on medical leave.

Buhl man faces second sentencing in battery case

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – A Buhl man who was sentenced to up to 50 years in prison in connection with the 1999 kidnapping and battery of a woman will face another sentencing Friday.

That's because the Idaho Supreme Court refused to hear arguments against an appeals court decision to overturn aggravated battery convictions against William Henry Brazil, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs.

Investigators claimed that in May 1999, Brazil hit and bit his girlfriend, Wanda Vulgamore, before shooting her twice in the knuckles of her left index finger, according to reports. Brazil also handcuffed her wrists and ankles and carried her to a car, but she later escaped, according to investigator's reports.

A jury later convicted Brazil on a charge of kidnapping and two counts of aggravated battery.

District Judge Nathan Higer handed down a 20- to 50-year sentence, broken down as five to 25 years on the kidnapping conviction and a consecutive sentence of 15 to 25 years on one aggravated battery charge. On the second aggravated battery charge, Higer ordered a 5- to 15-year sentence to run concurrently with the other sentences.

But the Idaho Court of Appeals later overturned the battery convictions on the grounds that jury instructions given during the trial were too vague.

Council hears about sewer rate plan

By Shelley Ridenour
Times-News writer

BURLEY – The City Council heard a few suggestions of things to consider during Tuesday's public hearing on the city's plan to raise sewer rates.

The plan is to implement a flat $27.50 a month fee for all residential and small business customers in Burley. That replaces the current $8 a month base fee plus 60 cents per 1,000 gallons of metered water now charged those accounts.

Large commercial customers would not see a change in their rates of $10 a month, plus $1.30 per 1,000 gallons of metered water.

People who live outside the city limits, but who are connected to the city's sewer system, would pay double the in-city rate, keeping with the current council policy, City Administrator Mark Mitton said.

Of the $27.50 a month, it's estimated $12.12 will be needed to pay for operation and maintenance of the plant and $15.38 will go toward capitalization costs – to pay for another new sewer plant in 25 years or whenever it's needed, Rick Knowles of Forsgren Associates said.

Gerald Egan, who lives outside the city but is connected to city sewer, asked the council to consider freezing the rates charged customers in his classification. He now pays $44 a month, but said he has to maintain his sewer system, as do his neighbors.

"It's time to consider that a little bit," Egan said of the doubling of rates for out-of-city customers.

John Klink of Merle's Repair asked the council to consider offering some sort of break to customers such as himself who have already taken steps to reduce the amount of waste they discharge into the city's sewer system.

Knowles said Klink deserved to be commended for stepping up to the plate regarding pretreatment matters earlier than other businesses have. Those other businesses will have to do so later, Knowles said.

And Mitton said that although Klink spent money installing such a system, it will save him money in the long run.

Mark Armstrong, manager of the Norman Manor Apartments, asked for consideration for large apartment complexes, such as the 48-unit site he manages.

Armstrong is worried apartment owners might consider closing apartments because of the possibility of 900 jobs being lost in the community related to the closing of the J.R. Simplot Co. potato processing plant. Coupled with an increase in sewer rates, the owners might react in that fashion, or take such action as raising rent by $100 a month, Armstrong said.

Some discussion also occurred about the future of the existing sewer plant and lagoon site.

The existing building at the sewer plant would continue to be used as part of the new plant, but it might require some expansion or modification, Knowles said.

Part of that firm's evaluation of Burley's needs included a look at the existing operation to see how much of the facility which is now in place can continue to be used, Knowles said. Essentially, no equipment can be used in the new plant, but the building might be.

Wendell wants to destroy school itself, keep job local

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL – The city of Wendell wants to demolish the old middle school itself in order to keep those project dollars in town.

With construction of a new Wendell Middle School under way, the school district has budgeted $200,000 for demolition of the old school building. Mayor Paul Isaacson wants to keep as much of that $200,000 in Wendell as possible.

"Why send that money out of town when we can do the work ourselves," he said.

The city of Wendell is also hoping to gain office space. The city is proposing a plan that would let city crews demolish the condemned middle school building in return for acquisition of the middle school's annex building, into which the city could move City Hall, the library and the police department.

City officials presented the plan to about 30 to 35 city and school district residents in a town meeting this week. Most of the residents in attendance indicated they thought the proposal was a good idea.

The city will be discussing the plan further and will hold public hearings before any decision is made.

The plan also proposes that the old gymnasium be refurbished and converted into a community center. The school district also wants to retain the agriculture building on campus, and the rented portable classrooms would be either moved to other campuses or returned to the rental companies.

If the city and school district agree to exchange the building for the demolition work, part of that $200,000 could be saved and put to other uses in the school district. However, part of that $200,000 would have to be used for the asbestos removal already under way, because city crews aren't trained to remove asbestos.

City Hall and the middle school were built within two years of one another by the

Gambling foes take challenge to high court

BOISE (AP) – Gambling foes asked the Idaho Supreme Court to throw off the November ballot a tribal initiative that would legalize electronic gambling machines.

The petition was filed by "Straight Talk: Gambling in Idaho" just minutes before the Supreme Court Clerk's office closed Tuesday. It contends the initiative attempts to overturn the constitutional ban on slot machines.

Leaving it on the ballot, the petition said, would deceive voters into believing they could approve an unenforceable law.

Tuesday's petition was filed under a 1997 revision to the state initiative law that gave opponents of ballot propositions the opportunity to challenge their validity before the Supreme Court prior to the general election.

Rob Smith, an attorney for the Nez Perce Tribe, said the action had no merit.

"This action is a shameful attempt by a small Idaho special interest group to prevent Idaho citizens from exercising their fundamental right to vote," Smith said. "This is especially clear after over 70,000 Idahoans signed the petitions to put the initiative on the ballot."

Although state law authorizes the petition for Supreme Court review prior to the election, the high court held in 1986 that initiatives are no different than bills in the Legislature and are not ready for court review until they are enacted.

That case, Smith said, "is still good law and that alone will prevent the petitioners from succeeding in this case."

The Nez Perce and Coeur d'Alene tribes have already committed more than $1 million to the campaign to win voter approval for the law they believe will end the debate over the legality of the machines that have made their reservation casinos lucrative. They said they could spend up to $3 million on the campaign, which would make it the most expensive issue campaign in state history.

For a decade, the state and tribes have been at odds over the machines.

The state has maintained they are illegal slot machines under the state constitution. The tribes contend the machines are just electronic versions of the state lottery and legal under federal law.

The initiative would clearly legalize 3,000 electronic gambling machines already in use on the reservations, restrict the increase in machines over the next decade and earmark 5 percent of profits for state activities off the reservation.

Former Republican Gov. Phil Batt opposed the machines when he took office in 1995 but embraced compromise after seeing how the casino revenues helped depressed reservation economies.

Mount Hood rescue will cost millions

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) – First there were three lives lost, the heaviest cost of all. Then came the injuries. Now come the millions.

Financial costs are piling up from last week's climbing tragedy on the snowy slopes of Mount Hood, although the final price tag may never be known.

A Pave Hawk HH-60 helicopter that crashed while trying to pluck injured climbers from near the summit of the 11,240-foot mountain was valued at about $9.3 million.

The cost of investigating what caused the Air Force Reserve helicopter to crash and of what it will ultimately cost to remove it from the side of the mountain have not been calculated.

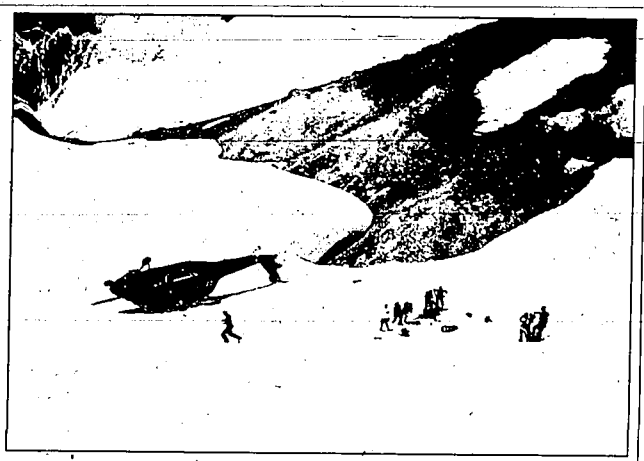
Four helicopters from the Oregon National Guard were also deployed. They were in the air for 14.5 hours – at a cost of about $23,000.

At least 12 agencies, businesses and organizations were involved in last Thursday's rescue of six injured climbers, six injured crew members of the crashed helicopter and the retrieval of three dead climbers from Mount Hood.

Much of the rescue effort was from volunteers.

American Medical Response, an ambulance company, had 11 people on the scene at a cost of about $8,000. But they were volunteers with the company's Reach and Treat team which AMT operates as a community service, said spokeswoman Amanda Olsen.

Portland Mountain Rescue, a group of volunteers who led the effort, had 18 of it 30 members on the mountain.



AP photo

Rescuers work around the upside down Pave Hawk helicopter after it crashed on Mount Hood, Ore., Thursday during the rescue attempt of climbers that had fallen into a crevasse. Costs are piling up from the rescue and while much of the effort was from volunteers, it was still hands-down the most expensive rescue ever in Oregon. Three climbers were killed in the accident and all crew members of the Air Force Reserve helicopter survived the crash.

The cost? "That's a tough one. You could slice it any way," said PMR's Mike Rollins. "I would say not much. We're a lean, mean volunteer rescue group and we don't get government funding.

"We exist on public donations and an endowment we created. All other costs, gas, mileage, time off from work, are borne by the individual members," he said.

Because of an Oregon law, survivors of the tragedy probably won't have to reimburse any of the money that was spent to rescue them.

Oregon allows recovery of up to $500 per person from climbers and hikers who have to be rescued, but only if they did not exercise reasonable care or if they broke laws. That apparently was not the case on Mount Hood.

Council moves forward with license hearing

By Shari Chaney
Times-News writer

RUPERT – Restaurant owner Juan Garza will have a time to show why his bar should retain its beer-and-wine-licenses on June 18.

The Rupert City Council voted Tuesday to hold the hearing on June 18 when Juan Garza, owner of J's Bar and Grill in Rupert, can talk with the council about the possible revocation of his beer and wine licenses.

Garza is currently on vacation in Mexico and is not expected back until next week, City Administrator Roger Bagley said.

The item on Tuesday's meeting agenda was just a council vote to move forward with the hearing, City Attorney Rick Bollar said.

Garza's son, Juan Garza Jr., was at Tuesday's council meeting and said the hearing date would most likely work with his father's schedule.

Bollar said there has never previously been a license revocation, but additional criteria are often implemented to make licensees more compliant with the law. Examples would be extra security or extra lighting at an establishment.

Rupert Police Chief Ken Fedders spoke to the council about the alleged violations at J's Bar and Grill. Fedders said there has been one instance of serving alcohol to a minor and two instances of serving alcohol after hours.

"I hate to see a business taken out of Rupert, but they need to abide by the rules," Fedders said.

Other council business included:

• Substation purchase – The council approved moving ahead with purchasing a portion of the Roe's electric substation on the Acequia highway.

The Bonneville Power Administration is selling the substation with a price tag of $950,000; a group of four entities – the city of Rupert, United Electric Co-op, East End Electric Co-op and Riverside Electric Co-op – would share the cost.

Bagley said Rupert's share would be just more than $253,000. Rupert, United Electric and East End will each pay for and own 26 percent; Riverside would pay for and own 20 percent.

There was one small "fly in the ointment" about the sale, Bagley said. He thought there was close to $1 million in carryover for the electric fund, however that number was closer to $460,000.

Money for the substation would need to be paid in full, but would not come through until the sale was complete, which could be this fiscal year or next, Bagley said. That would be a risk for the city.

Colleen Severson, city financial officer, said money collected through the month of May puts the electric department at a $938,000 profit and the city should be fine to proceed with the sale.

Return on Rupert's investment is expected in three to five years, Bagley said.

The boards of United, East End and Riverside have already approved the purchase, Bagley said.

• Firework permits – The council approved fireworks permits. The fire chief recommended approval, Bagley said.

• Sewer rates – The work session to discuss sewer rates was moved from June 6 to June 10 at 7 p.m.

Councilman Layne Rutschke said he had received a comment from an out-of-city resident about the sewer rates. The resident said the proposed 50 percent increase for out-of-city residents was too high.

Utah says it can prosecute polygamist child-rape case

NEPHI, Utah (AP) – Prosecutors on Tuesday said it doesn't matter exactly where polygamist Tom Green impregnated his teen-age wife, because all the planning for his illegal sexual activity occurred in Utah.

And that, they said, means Utah has jurisdiction over Green's first-degree felony child rape charge.

The jurisdiction hearing, continued from last month, concluded Tuesday. Fourth District Judge Donald Eyre said he would rule by June 17. Green's trial was scheduled for June 24.

Green, who has five wives and 30 children, is serving a five-year sentence for bigamy and criminal nonsupport. He was convicted a year ago. He is accused of having sexual intercourse with Linda Kunz in 1986, when she was 13.

At that time, Green was already married to Kunz's mother, Beth Cook Green, who with Green planned Linda's betrothal and subsequent marriage.

Defense testimony on Tuesday continued to focus on where Linda Kunz Green actually was impregnated. Defense attorney John Bucher argued that because Linda Green got pregnant in Mexico and the Greens lived in other states in 1985 and 1986, Utah has no jurisdiction over any alleged crime during that period.

Juab County Attorney David Leavitt has tried to prove Green was in the United States when the alleged crime occurred. But he maintains that if Green was in Mexico, he was still a Utah resident and therefore subject to state laws.

But Leavitt's arguments Tuesday were less concerned with geography than conspiracy. The prosecution highlighted the planning beforehand, which prosecutors argued constituted a conspiracy to commit the felony.

"Everything they (the defense) said today proves our case," said prosecutor Monte Stewart, an assistant county attorney.

Rates

ing rates as one component to generate enough money to build a new sewer plant. The existing facility must be replaced, city officials and their consulting engineers say, because it is deteriorating and has fallen out of compliance with regulatory agencies that permit the facility.

Plans call for construction of the new facility to begin in July 2004.

Other council business included:

• Golf discounts – The council agreed to implement a weekend late-night reduced fee at the Burley Municipal Golf Course. After 4 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays people can play a round of golf for $15, which includes a cart rental.

The council also agreed to a reduced rate of half price to play 18 holes Mondays through Fridays from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. and to add two more weeks to the half-season pass period.

• Stop signs – The council agreed to install stop signs at West Third and North Burton, Burton and West Fourth North, West 26th and Overland, and West Third Street and Overland, as requested and recommended by the mayor and city engineer.

• Chip sealing – The council heard from City Engineer Leon Bedke that chip sealing of city streets will begin in two weeks.

• Town meeting – Councilwoman Adria Masoner reminded the audience that the town meeting on the future of Burley is set for 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, June 22, in the Little Theater at Burley High School.

• Fireworks permits – The council approved three fireworks permits for American Promotional at Smith's, Dairy Queen and Wal-Mart and two fireworks permits for Brenda Pollard at Pickett Equipment and John's.

Western Shoshone vote approves cash settlement for treaty dispute

ELKO, Nev. (AP) – Western Shoshone members in Nevada have overwhelmingly voted to accept a cash payment of more than $138 million in a decades-old dispute over a 139-year-old treaty.

The unofficial tally of Monday's vote approved the disbursement by an 8-1 margin, 1,703-230.

"The Western Shoshone people have spoken. This is their vote. This is it. There is nothing else," Te-Moak Tribal Chairman Felix Ike said on Tuesday. "The Western Shoshone people said, 'We want our distribution.'"

All ballot boxes from the Western Shoshone polling places scattered throughout the state were driven to the Te-Moak Tribal administration building in Elko on Tuesday after informal counts at each site.

While the formal tally was set for Tuesday night, Ike said the decision was foregone.

"Give or take even a hundred, it's not going to make a difference. All they're going to be doing tonight is certifying those are the numbers," he said.

Ike said Te-Moak Tribe members from Elko, South Fork, Battle Mountain and Wells favored distribution 910-200.

In Fallon, Nancy Stewart said the vote was 176-1 with another 99-8 margin by members of other Western Shoshone tribes who voted in Fallon to keep from having to drive home.

She and Ike said the settlement was favored 142-9 in Ely, 72-2 by the Yomba Tribe, 152-9 by the Duck Valley Reservation in Owyhee and 148-1 at Duckwater.

At issue is whether Western Shoshone want the cash, which could amount to roughly $20,000 per person, or should hold out for a different plan for the cash distribution or should refuse the money all together.

Task force on T.F. area homelessness will meet

TWIN FALLS – An ad hoc task force on area homelessness is meeting monthly through July.

Several issues are being studied, including making meals available on weekends for homeless and low-income people. The group is also studying the possible need for, and feasibility of, starting a homeless/emergency shelter facility for men. Current community shelter and temporary lodging facilities are mainly targeted toward women and families.

The next meeting of the Homelessness Task Force is slated for 10 a.m. Thursday in the conference room of the First Christian Church, at the corner of Shoshone Street and Sixth Avenue North. People should enter through the first door, past the church proper, on the Sixth Avenue side.

There will be a presentation by Laurie LaFollette, executive director of the St. Vincent DePaul Society of Boise.

For more information, call Phyllis Berg at 735-8787.

Anyone interested in homelessness issues is invited.

Magic Valley in brief

Industrialist provides $500,000 in scholarships

TWIN FALLS – Some Magic Valley graduates are eligible for one of 100 $5,000 scholarships being offered by an eastern Idaho native.

Idaho State University President Richard Bowen expected Utah industrialist Jon Huntsman to notify the crowd at the commencement ceremonies that he was establishing just 50 such scholarships.

When the announcement came at the end of Huntsman's speech on May 18, it was for twice that.

"Mr. president, I doubled it," Bowen said the honorary doctoral degree recipient told him as he walked off the stage.

Huntsman and Bowen said the scholarships are aimed at attracting candidates whose backgrounds are not far from Huntsman's own.

Each candidate has to live in southeastern Idaho, with Twin Falls as the western boundary. Applicants should have at least a 3.0 grade point average and must demonstrate financial need.

"We want to make these as free from limitations as possible," Huntsman said. "You don't have to be a genius – honest, hardworking people can apply."

Huntsman, a native of Blackfoot whose father taught at Pocatello High School, spent time on the university campus as a youngster.

turn big particles of grain into small particles of grain."

He also said that though the owner has been making improvements during the five years that he has owned it, he can't do everything at once.

"You have to go with the cash flow," Bennett said.

Owner Dave Hamby, who lives in Vancouver, Wash., said Wednesday that since Allred started complaining about three years ago, he has been visited by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency several times.

"We have complied with everything," he said. That includes installing a better filtration system, closing the doors during times when the dust peaks and performing certain housekeeping duties.

Hamby said a couple of times when the mill had severe equipment breakdowns, the grain dust was so bad that he made sure the cars parked at Allred's publishing business and some of the carpets inside her 75-year-old building were cleaned.

He pointed out that the entire warehouse district still has a lot of exposed dirt that blows around, too. But the remark is not meant to be taken negatively.

"I look at this area as a place of opportunity," he said.

Hamby just bought the old Globe Feed and Seed building and took over the feed and garden business. He said he has doubled sales in the business from last spring.

"We're beginning to renovate the feed and garden store and bring it up to the level that Old Towne will enjoy," Hamby said.

The mill has been an excellent investment, too. Hamby said he does a million dollars a year in sales to dairymen and farmers in the Twin Falls, Jerome and Wendell areas.

Councilman Trip Craig said he has bought feed grain from Northwest Feed and been happy with the service. He said people have to expect grain dust with a grain milling business.

"Besides, what do you want to them to do? Shut down and go away? It sure isn't going to do anyone any good to have that building sitting empty," Craig said.

writing for the court, said Higer told the jurors they needed only find that Brazil caused Vulgamore some unspecified great bodily harm, while the criminal charges against him specifically said he harmed her by shooting her twice in the finger.

The kidnapping conviction and his sentence for it stood, and Brazil was still in prison Monday, Loebs said.

Loebs said he filed a petition to appeal the three-judge appeals courts' ruling to the five justices of the Supreme Court. But the high court refused to hear the case and did not offer an explanation for rejecting it, Loebs said.

Instead, battery cases against Brazil were ordered back down to the District Court level for another trial, Loebs said. But Brazil agreed to instead plead guilty to the charges and take the case directly to a second sentencing before Higer, he said.

Idaho Clerk of the Supreme Court Fred Lyon said it's standard procedure for the high court to reject petitions without offering an explanation.

All the justices read each petition sent to the court, but unless at least three vote to hear a case, it will be rejected, Lyon said. About only 5 percent of the petitions filed pass muster and blossom into hearings before the justices, he said.

same contractor, around 1937. City Hall is in bad shape: It is not handicapped accessible; the mortar between the bricks is deteriorating; and the building needs to be replaced. If the city has to build a new City Hall, it will have to float a bond issue, Isaacson said.

City Councilman Don Bunn said that not having City Hall handicapped-accessible could cost the city grants and revenue-sharing funds.

Chris Jackson, Wendell Gem Community president, said the old gym could be refurbished and made into a community center. The city could get grants to renovate an existing building into a civic center but not to build a new center, Jackson said.

Rob Haystrom with J-U-B Engineers said he didn't know if a feasibility study had been done concerning fixing up the old gymnasium. However, the gym had not been condemned and is a separate structure from the middle school building.

If the exchange is adopted, construction work must wait until summer 2003. The school will be using the annex building and the ag building until that time. Once asbestos is removed and the city can get in to do the demolition work, the building will be down within a month, Isaacson said.

Residents await news of homes in fire's path

CANON CITY, Colo. – (AP) – Anxious residents huddled in a school cafeteria Tuesday, some waiting for news and others resigned to the fact that their homes were among at least 80 destroyed by a wildfire.

Hundreds of firefighters made some progress on containing the blaze as morning rain fell amid thunder and lightning. Rain slowed in the afternoon, but clouds remained, shrouding the mountain peaks and preventing aircraft from dropping fire retardant.

The fire was about 10 percent to 20 percent contained, officials said. Authorities said Monday the fire was up to 40 percent contained, but revised the figure Tuesday after obtaining more accurate estimates.

At Cotopaxi High School near here, Cecil and Jan Freeman prepared for the worst after two acquaintances told them their home had been destroyed.

"In bed last night, I was laying there thinking maybe it's still there," said Jan Freeman, who left her wedding ring behind in the haste to evacuate.

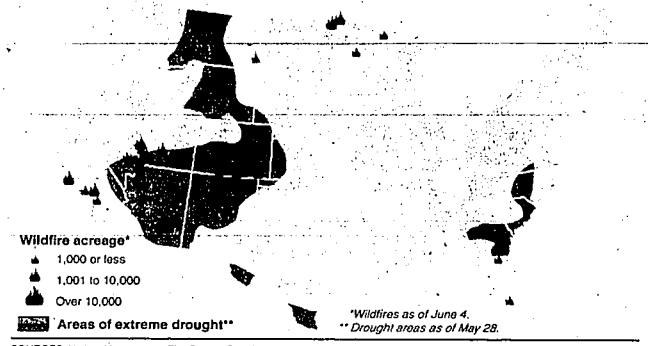
The couple moved into the area in December, buying a $160,000 two-story home with a view of Pikes Peak and elk grazing nearby. They plan to rebuild.

"We've always wanted to move to the mountains," said Cecil Freeman, who works at a federal prison in nearby Florence.

One of several burning throughout the West, the fire broke out Sunday, forcing hundreds of people out of their homes. A general store, 83 homes and several other buildings were destroyed. Royal Gorge Park closed temporarily but reopened Tuesday.

Drought provides fuel for the fires

Wildfire activity continues across the country with over 1.2 million acres burned already this year, nearly twice the 10-year average. The majority of active wildfires are in the Southwest, where persistent drought conditions have made firefighting difficult.



SOURCES: National Interagency Fire Center; GeoMac Web site; National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration AP

Fremont County Sheriff Ivan Middlemiss said the blaze may have been started by an outdoor barbecue grill. There were no suspects.

The fire broke out in a foothills area where modest homes and mobile houses are scattered on small lots among stands of fir and pine. Homeowners are a mix of full- and part-time residents.

Some chimneys remained standing amid the rubble of the destroyed homes. In one spot stood the shell of a burned-out bus. Blackened trees littered the landscape.

On a message board at the high school, authorities posted a list of destroyed homes, identified by street name but not house number.

Evacuees sat at tables, chatting. A man and two children watched cartoons on a television in the gym. Some called insurance companies or tried to line up temporary housing. Many chose to stay at motels or with friends.

The fire was the most devastating in Colorado in several years. Two fires in 2000 destroyed about 75 homes combined. In 1989, a fire destroyed 44 homes.

In Las Animas County, bordering New Mexico, a 4,800-acre fire damaged at least one home and forced the evacuation of 11 ranches and three other homes near Trinidad.

A separate fire of about 15,000 acres in the same area threatened three communities and had burned across some methane-gas fields, fire information officer Alan Hoffmeister said. The gas wells were shut down and the pipelines were drained.

Valley County approves permit to build resort

CASCADE (AP) – The Valley County commissioners on Monday unanimously approved WestRock Lake Cascade's conditional-use permit to build a four-season resort.

It came following the county Planning and Zoning Commission's unanimous approval of the project on May 8 and the state Land Board's May 14 decision to lease 2,124 acres of state land above the reservoir for the project's ski hill.

Monday's decision is the final permitting step for the first American destination resort with skiing in the last 20 years, but it still faces an environmental challenge in federal court.

"Valley County officials have worked very hard to understand the entire picture presented by WestRock, and we deeply appreciate how warmly they endorsed our project today," said Jean-Pierre Boespflug, WestRock chief executive officer.

Company officials said construction on the $1.2 billion resort will begin this summer and will be carried out over three phases of about five years each, with completion expected in about 16 years.

WestRock owns about 1,500 acres adjacent to the state lease.

Opponents of WestRock earlier sued the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, accusing it of illegally permitting WestRock.

The Citizens for Valley County group asked a federal judge to throw out WestRock's permit and order the Corps to fully comply with the federal Clean Water Act.

They also request a court order to block construction at the proposed resort, which would result in the draining or filling of wetlands.

Official: IP inflated energy prices

BOISE (AP) – Idaho Power Co. is one of eight utilities the California attorney general accuses of price gouging while his state suffered through its energy crisis.

Attorney General Bill Lockyer on May 30 filed a civil complaint against Idaho Power and seven other companies in San Francisco Superior Court. It alleges Idaho Power's rates for power sold in the California markets were, "unjust, unreasonable and therefore illegal."

The complaint does not give specific examples, but claims the company charged unfair rates on thousands of occasions in 2000 and 2001.

Idaho Power is accused of violating the state's Unfair Competition Act, which can exact a $2,500 penalty for each violation.

Idaho Power is named in the complaint because at the time of those transactions, IDACORP Energy had not yet obtained its own trading license and was doing business as part of Idaho Power Co., the regulated subsidiary of parent company IDACORP.

"We believe we were in full compliance with the rules, regulations and laws in place at that time," IDACORP spokesman Jeff Beaman said Monday.

The civil filings came just one day after the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission rejected a complaint by Lockyer alleging that power traders were failing to meet their sale-reporting obligations under the Federal Power Act.

Lockyer filed the complaint in March, calling for up to $2.8 billion in refunds from the companies. The commission said it lacked merit.

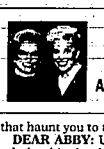
Adopted daughter finds birth mother who always loved her



DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: I was adopted at birth, 34 years ago. My adoptive parents always told me I was adopted. They also told me that I was lucky they took me because nobody else wanted me, and "that girl" who gave birth to me abandoned me at the hospital.

All my life they made sure I knew I was no catch; and my father told me as a child that if anyone else had adopted me, they would have given me back as soon as it turned daylight.

Then last year a miracle happened. My birth mother found me. We talked on the phone, and she came for a visit. Abby, she is the sweetest woman I have ever met. She was only 15 when she gave birth to me, and she placed me for adoption in the hope that I would have a better life than the one she could offer.

The closer my birth mother and I become, the larger the rift has become between me and my adoptive parents. They continue to say terrible things about her. I haven't introduced them because I'm afraid they would say or do something to either embarrass me or hurt my birth mother's feelings. They still refuse to call her by name.

It's getting to the point that I don't even want them around. My husband says if they bother me that much, I should tell them not to come over any more. I won't have a problem with that, as I have very few feelings left for them. I'm glad I finally found the mother I always wanted – and the one who always wanted me.

– BIRTH MOTHER'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: You are no longer a child. At 34 years of age, your childhood is behind you. If your birth mother is the mother you always wanted, then cherish your newfound relationship.

Your adoptive parents may call you ungrateful, but please remember that they are the ones who should have been grateful to have you – and they had no right to make the hurtful comments that haunt you to this day.

DEAR ABBY: Upon entering a relationship that has the possibility of becoming a lifetime involvement, when should a senior widower disclose to his potential future mate that, due to medical reasons, he'll be unable to fulfill any "bedroom responsibilities"?

Should discreet disclosure be offered before any close feelings develop, or should the subject wait – however long – until intimacy becomes the obvious natural progression?

– SPOKESMAN FOR MANY UNSURE GUYS IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR UNSURE: There is a difference between clearing the air early and making a premature announcement. Wait until you know the lady well enough to discuss the subject of sex without embarrassment to either of you. According to my mail, although many women are interested in a sexual relationship, not all are.

P.S. I don't know how long it has been since you discussed this subject with your doctor, but you should know that in recent years there have been many advances made in the area of male sexuality.

Another school slashes programs to deal with reduced budget

MORELAND (AP) – Another school district has felt the sharp blade of legislative budget-cutters.

The Snake River School Board ended months of discussion this week by voting to close an elementary school and eliminate at least eight extracurricular activities and the high school tutoring program next year.

"They were hard decisions to make, every one," Superintendent Wayne Kroll said, reflecting the feeling of school administrators statewide.

The district is losing about $185,000 as a result of the cut lawmakers and Gov. Dirk Kempthorne made to public schools for the 2002-2003 school year. That reduction will be compounded by a further reduction in state support because of declining enrollment.

The district typically maintains a reserve of $200,000 to $400,000 to handle problems like declining enrollment, which has plagued many rural districts in recent years. But it depleted the reserve to offset cuts in state support lawmakers and Kempthorne imposed for the 2001-2002 school year.

Overall, the state slashed support for public education by $23 million for the just-concluded school year and then restored just $7 million of that for the 2002-2003 school year. Budget analysts for both the Republican-dominated Legislature and the GOP governor have been assessing other budget-balancing alternatives in the wake of tax collections falling drastically short this spring.

And among those options is another 1 percent reduction in state support for public education.

The Democratic minority has argued that the record 2001 tax cut should be rolled back so public, higher and vocational-technical education can be financed adequately. But the GOP has insistently defended preserving the tax cut, claiming the current economic downturn would have been even worse without it.

In the Snake River School District next year, children in Pingree will attend the elementary school in Rockland. The Pingree School will be relegated to storage and five teaching jobs and a school resource officer will be cut.

Being eliminated along with high school tutoring are athletic programs including baseball, softball, soccer, the pep band and seventh-grade volleyball, basketball, wrestling and track. Building budgets and custodial hours will also be cut back.

Era ends at Mountain Home with exit of bombers, tankers

MOUNTAIN HOME AIR FORCE BASE (AP) – Airmen bid farewell to the base's bomber and tanker squadrons Monday, ending the era of composite wings.

The KC-135 tankers of the 22nd Air Refueling Squadron were activated at Mountain Home a decade ago and served in Kosovo and Afghanistan.

The base's 34th Bomber Squadron was the lead B-1 bomber squadron in Operation Enduring Freedom. It will move to Ellsworth Air Force Base in South Dakota. The tankers will be sent to other units.

The highlight of the Monday departure ceremony, which included warrior songs by the Shoshone-Paiute Tribes, was the last flyover of a formation representing all five aircraft of the base's 366th Wing.

A B-1 bomber attached to the boom of a KC-135 refueling tanker passed over, flanked by F-15E, F-15C and F-16CJ fighter jets.

The squadrons' departure leaves the Air Force without a true composite wing, one with all the planes and personnel needed for an air war, stationed at one base and prepared to deploy on short notice.

"A piece of us goes away with our big aircraft," said Col. William Andrews, the 366th's operations group commander. "They've given bomber groups a chance to learn about fighter groups and fighter groups to learn about bomber groups. It's sad to see them go."

Cause of fatal Moscow fire appears to be smoking-related

MOSCOW (AP) – A house fire in which the body of a 69-year-old woman was found appears to be the result of a lit cigarette, police said.

The body of Kathryn P. Konen was discovered early Monday when firefighters arrived.

Konen was the only one in the house when it caught fire, said police Capt. Don Lanpher, who added Konen's death is still under investigation. Her husband, James, was out for his morning coffee at the time.

"It looks at this point as though the fire was smoking-related," Fire Marshal Ed Button said.

Three things that give particular pleasure to most women, it's said, are: 1. Companionship. 2. Competition. And 3. Dexterous use of their hands. If true, it may explain why so many are so fond of the game of Bridge.

Said Napoleon Bonaparte: "The best way to keep one's word is not to give it."

An option offered with the Packard of 1902 was an ammonia gun to discourage dogs that liked to bite tires.

Q. The American Indian war dances with all that whooping and hollering – weren't they an invention of Hollywood?

A. Not at all. In the writings of John Quincy Adams is a report that 16 Indians, "part of them all but naked," performed a loud war dance in the White House for the entertainment of President James Monroe and guests.

Said business giant Andrew Carnegie: "The first man gets the oyster, the second man gets the shell."

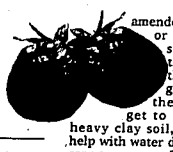
Local soil makes life hard for strawberries

By Becca Tatsoka
Times-News correspondent



Many Magic Valley gardeners have attempted to grow strawberries and gotten mixed results. One of the reasons might be soil condition.

"Strawberries like acidic soil, more acidic than we can offer," said Laura Rambo, of Kimberly Nurseries. "Here in Twin Falls, the soil pH might be above 8, which is too high" and too alkaline for strawberries.

The strawberries won't be as hardy if the soil doesn't get amended with peat moss or compost, Rambo said. Wherever there is clay soil, the nutrients can get bound up on the soil and never get to the plants. For heavy clay soil, peat moss will help with water drainage, a necessary component for healthy strawberry roots.

Strawberries also need fertilizer, but not the kind you might think. Rambo suggested folks remember the rule of thumb for fertilizing: Nitrogen for vegetative – that's for healthy, green leaves – and phosphorous for fruit.

"People add nitrogen and get nice, healthy-looking plants, but very little fruit," said Rambo. "The phosphorous will help the plants produce the fruit."

Like most fruit, strawberries like full sun, good drainage and frequent moisture. The amount of water depends on both weather and soil conditions.

Connie Raugust, of Raugust Strawberry Farms in Jerome, works with a different soil than the heavy clay in Twin Falls. She has found that strawberries grow pretty easily in her neck of the woods.

"It's what my father-in-law used to say – strawberries do not go everywhere," she explained. "It's a matter of trial and error."

Raugust said she doesn't use any particular varieties of strawberry plants. Since her farm is a commercial operation, she acquires roots from a supplier in California and uses a variety not available to the small gardener.

"But it's trial and error ... Keep a (gardening) journal so you know what works and what doesn't," suggested Raugust.

With the soil in Jerome being different from the soil in Twin Falls, Raugust said, she doesn't amend her soil or use fertilizers; and she generally uses an organic approach to growing healthy strawberries.

"We don't use herbicides, and we don't have bug problems," she

SALAD RECIPES

PECAN CHICKEN SALAD

2 cups (11 ounces) cooked chicken, chopped 1/2-inch thick (works great with rotisserie chicken from the grocery)
1 1/2 cups seedless red, green or black grapes, rinsed and cut in half
1/2 cup celery, diced 1/4-inch thick
1 cup pecans, toasted and coarsely chopped
2 tablespoons basil, fresh and chopped
1/2 cup green onions, thinly sliced
1 cup mayonnaise
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper, ground
1 tablespoon lemon juice, fresh
12 slices bread or 6 rolls
6 lettuce leaves

Combine all salad ingredients in bowl and mix well. To make sandwiches, use about 3/4 cup salad per sandwich, and layer between bread with lettuce.

ARUGULA BREAD SALAD

Dressing:
3 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper, ground

Salad:
1 medium red onion, peeled and sliced into half moons (2 cups sliced)
1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil
1 garlic clove, fresh and minced
3 or 4 slices rustic bread (day-old works great)
4 cups loosely packed arugula, washed and dried
1 fennel bulb, cored and thinly sliced (about 1 cup)
1/2 cup roasted red bell pepper, cut into 1/4-inch thick strips
1/4 cup pinenuts, toasted
1 1/2 cups seedless green or red grapes, picked from stem and rinsed
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese, shaved or grated

In a small bowl, whisk together dressing ingredients. Place red onions in baking dish lined with foil. Drizzle with 2 tablespoons of prepared dressing and toss well. Cover tightly with foil and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Remove from oven and cool. Mix the 1 tablespoon olive oil with crushed garlic. Brush onto bread slices. Broil or grill bread for 1 to 2 minutes on each side until toasted. Cut bread into strips about 1/2-inch wide. Place bread, roasted onions, arugula, fennel, bell pepper, pinenuts and grapes in large bowl. Toss with remaining vinaigrette. Sprinkle with Parmesan and serve.

Soil alkalinity causes plants to grow weak

GREEN THUMBPRINTS
Cathy Walworth

The other day, somebody asked me what he could do about alkaline soil. The short answer is: Nothing fast.

"Acid" and "alkaline" are two descriptive terms to describe the pH of soil. Most blooming plants prefer something in the 6.0 to 6.5 range. Ours is typically around 8.0 and 8.5. About the same pH as baking soda. Plants object by turning their leaves lime green. Sometimes plants are sick enough to die from the condition.

The yellow-green leaves telling the tale of soil alkalinity are marked with bright green veins. When that happens, we know that the plant is not getting enough iron. The term for that is "iron chlorosis." So most folks naturally think if they add iron to the soil, the plant will be cured.

Not really.

Sometimes you can spray a liquid-soluble iron product on plant leaves and green them up, but it's only temporary. In fact, some less-than-reputable lawn service companies do just that, telling you that they're fertilizing. If you hire a service, ask them what chemicals they use.

There's usually plenty of iron in the soil. But because of chemical hocus-pocus, plants can't "reach" it – because of the high alkalinity. That's why you probably won't get great results from adding iron. The real answer is to add acid to the soil. Sometimes it works; most times it takes time.

If the petunias are showing chlorotic leaves, adding sulfur and iron is a good solution. Petunias are short-lived, shallow-rooted plants that react well to the combination.

If the maple tree is sickly pale, adding sulfur and iron is a good idea – but don't expect miracles this year. The maple tree just isn't going to respond quickly. It uses a lot more soil to get its job done.

Make it a habit to add organic materials to all your beds. Throwing the dried coffee grounds and chopped-up orange rinds out to the flower beds year round makes for better soil. In the spring and fall, add iron and sulfur. The stuff you added to the soil last fall will show results this spring. Make soil building a habit and you'll see results year after year.

Try this yummy shrimp

The Seattle Times

SHRIMP WITH A VEGETABLE GLAZE

4 servings
1 pound medium shrimp
1 tablespoon very finely minced fresh gingerroot
1 tablespoon honey
3 tablespoons bottled plum sauce
2 teaspoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons bottled oyster sauce
2 tablespoons dry sherry
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon water
1 medium carrot, peeled and finely grated
1 medium white potato, peeled and finely grated
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
2 teaspoons sesame seeds

Peel and devein the shrimp. Place on a paper-towel-lined plate to absorb excess moisture. Refrigerate about 15 minutes. In a small bowl, combine the ginger, honey, plum sauce and soy sauce; set aside. Remove the paper towel from the bowl of shrimp. Add the plum-sauce mixture and stir to coat. Combine the oyster sauce, sherry, lemon juice and water; set aside. Just before cooking the shrimp, grate the carrot and potato. Heat a large (10-to-12-inch skillet) over medium heat; adding the oil. Scrape the shrimp and vegetables into the hot pan and saute about 5 to 7 minutes, until the shrimp are pink and cooked through and the vegetables are tender-crisp. Remove the shrimp and vegetables from the pan. Turn the heat to medium-high and pour the oyster-sauce mixture into the pan. Boil for about 30 seconds to thicken and pour over the shrimp. Sprinkle with sesame seeds and serve.

said. "It's a very disciplined thing. We have to hoe every day. Just put in the work, and don't let weeds get ahead of you."

Another way the Raugusts keep their strawberries healthy is by rotating the crop with alfalfa and other crops every year, and not going back to the same field until seven years later.

"We rotate the (producing) field every year," explained Raugust. "We tried to keep them going for several years, but we discovered that the yields weren't as good after that first year."

In a small garden, replacing the plants every year might not be necessary. But strawberry plants do get old and tired after about three years. Rambo said it might be helpful to replace older plants with runners or new root stock.

Dan Skousen, of Spanish Fork, Utah, wrote a tip for www.jamm.com/strawberry/facts that might work in our climate: "I have been able to get a fine crop of strawberries each year by making certain that my plants are all first-year plants, i.e. they have only gone through one winter. No, I don't go out each year and buy new plants. Instead, each spring I clear a 2- to 3-foot square patch in the middle of my berries and, 'alternatingly' leave another 2- to 3-foot patch alone. The ending result looks like a checkerboard."

Skousen said this is also a good time to mulch and prepare the bared soil.

He explained, "Over the summer, the plants will send out new shoots to the bare spots, and become established. I don't usually get many good berries off of these new ones that season (growing season is rather short here in Spanish Fork, Utah), but next year, what a crop! Big berries that are plump, sweet, and juicy! Of course, next year I clear the opposite patches that I had cleared last spring. The result is a constant supply of young, healthy plants that produce fantastic berries."

Several Web sites gave cautionary advice: Never plant where potatoes, peppers or tomatoes have been, since there might be carry-over diseases in the soil. And, for the actual planting of strawberry roots, start with healthy root stock, which may be trickier than it seems.

"If the roots were ever allowed to dry out, they aren't viable," explained Rambo. "And they shouldn't be rotting by being kept overly wet."

With "fruit-bearing plants," she added, "pinch off the blooms (for the first crop) for the plant to properly establish."

There is some debate about fall planting in the area. The Raugusts said plants have not had time to establish for a fall planting, but some home gardeners have had luck with this. Janet Hunt, who lives near the river in the Heyburn area, planted some shoots last fall that she got from her daughter-in-law.

"I'd heard that you could get some great strawberries from fall planting," she said. "I'm hoping for a great yield!"

Gardeners need to protect their fruit from critters and birds. Raugust suggested putting up chicken wire to keep out rabbits if you live near the desert, and Rambo suggested using garden netting to keep out the birds.

Keep cool and build healthy bones with freezer pops.

DILLED SHRIMP AND GRAPE SALAD from C1

Dressing:
1/4 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup sour cream
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper, ground
1/4 cup olive oil
2 tablespoons dill, fresh and chopped

Salad:
6 cups baby lettuce mix, loosely packed
1 cucumber, seeded and sliced into half moons
1 cup seedless green grapes, picked from stem and rinsed
8 ounces salad shrimp
1/4 cup sliced almonds, toasted

In a small bowl, whisk together dressing ingredients until smooth. Place lettuce, cucumber, grapes and shrimp in bowl. Drizzle with dressing. Sprinkle with toasted almonds.

Hasty doesn't mean you must give up on tasty

By Carol J.G. Ward
Knight Ridder News Service

Sometimes circumstances conspire against us. If you're caught between overtime and dinnertime, use these tips from readers.

Somewhere along the way, "convenience" came to have a bad connotation when referring to food. All cooks aspire to prepare tasty, creative homemade meals, but sometimes circumstances conspire against us. If you're caught between overtime and dinnertime, use these tips from readers.

• Use the crockpot. Cheap stew beef tastes great after all day in the crockpot. Serve with rice and rolls. Roasts, stews or spaghetti sauces also can cook all day in a crockpot.

• The microwave does an excellent job of cooking many foods, like vegetables and rice.

• Opt for fast-cooking methods – broiling, grilling and steaming.

• Depend on lightly seasoned fresh or frozen vegetables, prepared salad mixes or stir-fries. A pound of roasted asparagus can be eaten cold over a few days, or a few seconds in the microwave will take the chill off.

• Clean as you go. Or use paper plates.

• Choose simple recipes or look for ways to cut steps in long recipes. Substitute a jar of spaghetti sauce for homemade in lasagna or use canned beans.

• Avoid mess when dredging meat in flour by placing both in a zip-top bag. Then dump meat into a colander and tap to remove excess flour.

• Instead of waiting for butter or margarine to soften, grate it.

• Stir-fry chicken breast bites with a little salt, pepper and garlic. Fill a pita with salad, add stir-fried chicken, a little Parmesan cheese and Italian dressing for a one-dish meal.

• When measuring sticky ingredients such as honey or molasses, coat the measuring spoon or cup with cooking spray.

• Instead of rolling up individual tortillas for enchiladas, layer tortillas and filling in a casserole dish. Bake and serve as you would lasagna.

• Measure by "eye." Exact measurements aren't crucial except for baking.

• Whenever possible, add fresh ingredients to canned, dehydrated or frozen products.

• Doctor up convenience items, such as boxed macaroni and cheese or flavored rice mixes, with add-ins, such as chicken or vegetables to create easy supper casseroles.

• Make a tasty beef pot pie by sauteeing onion in a casserole dish in the microwave. Add canned beef stew. Cut store-bought pie crust into strips and lattice over the pie. Bake at 375 until crust is brown.

• Instead of chopping pickles for salads, use sweet or dill relish.

• Easy-to-prepare mixes are available at the store, online or from home-based businesses.

• To keep recipes simple but flavorful, use assertive ingredients such as feta cheese, sun-dried tomatoes, seasoning blends or extra-virgin olive oil.

EXPRESS LANE RECIPE

CHICKEN MEDITERRANEAN

2 tablespoons olive oil
3/4 pound skinned and boned chicken breast halves, cut into large chunks
4 garlic cloves, minced
1 (14.5-ounce) can diced tomatoes, undrained
1/2 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
1/2 teaspoon dried basil
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
1/3 cup crumbled reduced-fat feta cheese
1/4 cup kalamata olives, chopped

Cook chicken and garlic in oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat, 8 minutes or until chicken is done. Add tomatoes and next three ingredients to skillet. Reduce heat; simmer, stirring often, for a few minutes. Sprinkle with feta cheese and olives; remove from heat. Cover; let stand 5 minutes. Serves 4.

–Southern Living magazine (adapted)

Short cuts: Substitute precooked chicken from the meat or freezer section for fresh. Use jarred minced garlic. For the tomatoes and spices, substitute already seasoned diced tomatoes, available in a variety of flavors.

The Best Home Addition Is Peace of Mind
By Daniel Aspell

We all have a dozen great ideas for improving our home, from new furniture to whole new wings. While any one of them may make your family happy, there are few that will make them safer, and give you a better night's sleep. When considering home-improvements this spring, think about giving your family the gift of a home security system.

In the past, security systems consisted of either large dogs, a drive-by service or an expensive system requiring extensive wiring and power sources. But wireless technology has changed all of that, and the proliferation of home security systems has made prices affordable for practically every homeowner. Just about all of them are easy to install and don't require a degree in electrical engineering.

Some basic models cover your driveway or walkway, emitting an alarm tone and/or flashing lights to alert you to visitors. For covering a larger area, Magnavox makes a great system that includes motion sensors as well as door and window sensors – all wireless. Another dandy system is the Visonic PowerMax, which will actually talk you through its own set-up. It covers a full 30 zones, certainly enough for the average home.

If you're going to improve your home's security this spring, don't forget about the danger of fire. Spring is a fine time to replace smoke detector batteries, or upgrade your smoke detection system (review the escape routes with family members, too). If your house is equipped with fire extinguishers, make sure that they're up to date. It's wise to have an extinguisher in the kitchen, laundry room, basement, garage and workshop.

So when spring rolls around, don't be afraid to expand your home improvement ideas to include home safety.

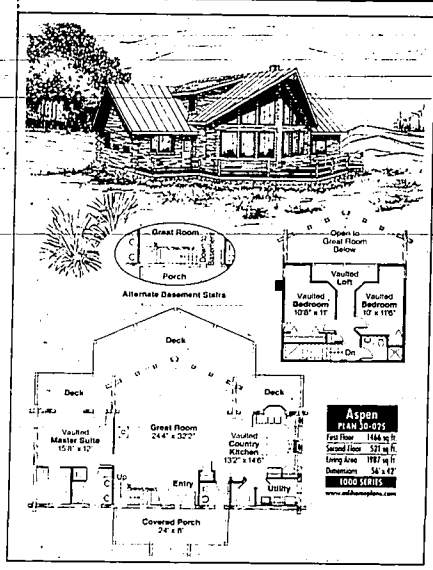
FOOD & HOME



Log exterior gives the Aspen rustic appearance

Rustic logs frame the Aspen, a spacious vacation retreat designed to maximize appreciation of the outdoors. Windows, stacked two high, open most of the rear elevation to the view – and a wide deck spans that entire side of the home. Rain and snow slide easily off the long-lasting metal roof.

Log homes endure. Some built early in our country's history are still in use, with updated interiors. This one has a bright great room at center, warmed by a free-standing woodstove. The ceiling at the rear rises to two stories high near the windows. Two good-sized bedrooms and a bathroom are on the second floor, along with a wide, railed loft that overlooks the great room.

You could actually live in this house year-round. It boasts close to 2,000 square feet of interior living area, and the roomy deck adds hundreds more square feet of living area when days are warm. It has three bathrooms, one upstairs and two on the main floor.

The kitchen has plenty of cupboard and counter space, along with a work island and large walk-in pantry. The length of work island that faces the great room serves as an eating and conversation bar. Potted plants flourish in the small window bay in front of the sink, and a door to the deck makes it easy to move meals outside.

Utilities are nearby, in a full-sized laundry room complete with overhead cabinets and a deep sink.

The Aspen's master suite has a full-size walk-in closet, and private bathroom with dual vanity, tub and linen storage.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Drive, Department W, Eugene, OR 97402. Please specify the Aspen 30-025 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring more than 350 home plans is available for $15. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Vegetables grill well, too

By Liz Atwood
The Baltimore Sun

FIRE UP THE GRILL: Grilling more than the usual? Although hamburgers, hot dogs and chicken breasts remain the most common barbecue fare, don't forget vegetables.

Corn, baked beans and coleslaw are common accompaniments to the outdoor barbecue, but you can also get your daily dose of vegetables with spreads, sauces and dips, says the American Institute for Cancer Research. And remember, fruit and vegetables can be grilled, too.

Concrete-framed houses have many good points

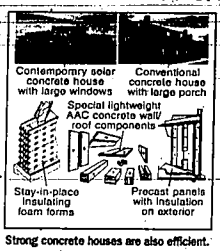
DEAR JIM: We are planning to build an efficient new house. We are considering one made primarily of concrete for its strength against tornadoes and fire. Does this make sense and what are our options?

–SAM W.

DEAR SAM: Building a concrete-framed house makes a lot of sense for many reasons. The final structure is extremely strong and can withstand tornadoes and hurricanes. Using concrete construction also gives your architect more flexibility, creating a unique house design in both the exterior and interior. Building a concrete house is environmentally friendly since cement and gravel, the basic components of concrete, are abundant. The thermal mass of the concrete is ideal for passive solar heating and improves air-conditioning comfort during the summer. You may also find lower fire insurance rates.

SENSIBLE HOME
James Dulley

When people think of a "concrete" house, they often think of concrete blocks. There are actually many excellent house construction methods that use concrete as the base material. Once these houses are completed, they look identical to any other conventionally built house. Standard concrete itself is not a good insulator, so most concrete building systems use either foam insulation panels or insert granulated foam into the concrete mixture. Even if the insulation value is not the highest, these houses settle very little, so they stay airtight and efficient.



Strong concrete houses are also efficient.

One construction method, shotcrete, uses concrete sprayed over a thick foam insulation core. It usually consists of cement and sand, but sometimes small pea gravel is added. Completed concrete walls are strong and airtight. The insulation value of them depends on the thickness of the foam core.

Another efficient method, aerated concrete, produces strong, lightweight concrete construction—panels. Some of these panels can be cut with standard woodworking tools. They are made using fine cement and steam to create tiny, insulating bubbles inside the finished concrete panel or blocks.

Using stay-in-place concrete foams is another superefficient construction method. The concrete forms, which are generally wood, are made of rigid foam insulation instead. Flat sheets separated by fasteners or blocks that are stacked can be used. When the concrete sets, the foam stays in place.

A final option is using preinsulated concrete blocks. The blocks may have narrower internal webs or have foam beads mixed into the concrete. Foam inserts can be placed inside the block cavities. Any standard exterior wall treatment - brick, siding, stone, stucco, etc. can be used to finish the exterior of a concrete house.

Stucco is particularly well suited to this type of construction and it is attractive. It requires little maintenance, applies quickly and seals small gaps and air leaks.

Write for Update Bulletin No. 860 – lists of 21 concrete house system manufacturers, detailed descriptions of the various building methods and stucco background basics. Please include $3 and a business-size SASE. Write to James Dulley, 6906 Royalgreen Drive, Cincinnati, OH 45244.

Don't overlook apricots this summer

By Liz Atwood
The Baltimore Sun

MORE FRUITS AND VEGGIES: Summer brings an abundance of fresh fruit and vegetables, but what's sometimes overlooked is the little apricot. California growers say they expect to ship 2 million 24-pound boxes of fresh apricots across North America this season, which runs from May to July. Like their cousin the peach, apricots can be baked into pies, made into jam or enjoyed fresh. Colors vary by variety, ranging from deep yellow to golden orange. Although most apricots are either the Castlebrite or Patterson variety, there are about 10 others, some available for only a week or so. Select apricots that are plump and well-formed. To ripen firm fruit, place apricots in a bag with an apple or banana.

Stick with frozen treats to cool off, make healthy bones

By Carol J.G. Ward
Knight Ridder News Service

Sweet, sloppy and portable, frozen treats are all about summer. This summer, skip the scoop and try icy treats on a stick. Freezer pops are the ideal refresher.

Pop (craft) sticks can be found at craft stores and with craft supplies in discount department stores such as Wal-Mart; For frozen pop molds, check kitchenware shops, discount department stores and companies such as Tupperware and Williams-Sonoma; You also can use small paper or plastic cups to make frozen pops. Fill the cups with pop mixture.

To hold sticks in place, cover the cup with foil.

Make a small slit in the foil and insert the stick.

Use whatever fruit you have on hand. If you don't have fresh, used canned or frozen fruit; Freeze the ice pops until they are solid; overnight is best.

To remove pops from the molds, dip the molds into hot water for a few seconds or let them sit at room temperature until the ice pop melts enough to slide out.

FREEZER POP RECIPES

OUTA-SIGHT ORANGE-VANILLA YOGURT FRUIT POPS

8 pops
1 package orange-flavored gelatin
3/4 cup boiling water
1 cup milk
1 carton (8-ounce) vanilla yogurt
8 (3-ounce) paper cups
8 pop sticks

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water in small mixer bowl. Chill until the consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Beat on high speed of mixer until light and fluffy. Beat in milk and yogurt until well blended; Spoon mixture evenly into frozen pop molds or paper cups. If using cups, cover with foil, and insert a pop stick through a slit in the center of each cup. Freeze several hours. (If keeping longer than overnight, wrap individually in plastic wrap. Pops keep well in freezer for as long as one week.) To serve, peel off the cup; Try other flavors such as strawberry, banana, mixed berry, etc.

CREAMY CARMELICIOUS MILKSICLES

6 servings
1/3 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 1/2 cups low-fat milk
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1/3 cup caramel ice cream topping, at room temperature
6 (3-ounce) plastic or paper cups or 6 (2 1/2-ounce) freezer pop molds
6 freezer pop sticks

Combine sugar and cornstarch in a medium saucepan; gradually whisk in milk. Simmer over medium heat about 2 minutes or until thickened, whisking frequently; Remove milk mixture from heat. Stir in vanilla. Transfer mixture to a large shallow bowl; refrigerate for about 40 minutes or until pudding consistency, stirring occasionally; Drop heaping teaspoonfuls of caramel topping over pudding. Gently swirl into pudding. Spoon mixture into plastic cups; place cups in an 8-inch baking pan or pie pan. Place sticks in centers of cups; freeze until firm.

CHOCOLATE-PEANUT BUTTER MILKSICLES

4 servings
1/3 cup sugar
1/4 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 1/2 cups low-fat chocolate milk
1/4 cup reduced-fat creamy peanut butter
4 (6-ounce) plastic or paper cups
4 freezer pop sticks

Combine sugar, cocoa and cornstarch in a medium saucepan; gradually whisk in milk.

Simmer over medium heat about 2 minutes or until thickened, whisking frequently.

Remove milk mixture from heat.

Stir in peanut butter until it melts.

Spoon mixture into cups; place cups in an 8-inch baking pan or pie pan.

Place sticks in centers of cups; freeze until firm.

Deliciously simple three-ingredient dessert

By Larry Bingham
The Baltimore Sun

The thing I like most about Rozanne Gold's new cookbook, "Desserts 1-2-3: Deliciously Simple Three-Ingredient Desserts," is not her knack for tapping into our harried lifestyles and paring down the grocery list. Nor is the thing I like most her skill – and she is brilliant here – at giving her seemingly simple concoctions highfalutin names that mask their humble origins: Melon Tartare With Raspberry Coulis; Pineapple Carpaccio With Roasted Grapes, Cinnamon Jus; Rhubarb Compote With Candied Ginger, Maple Snow.

The thing I like best about this cookbook is its purity, the way it relies on the flavors at the core of its pairings. Take the Fresh Lime Mousse. It has three ingredients: lime, sugar and eggs. The result is a stark tartness that is all but lost in a comparable piece of Key lime pie sunk with a dollop of whipped cream. Pecan-Fudge Terrine is another example. Simplicity is its strongest suit.

PECAN-FUDGE TERRINE

1/2 heaping cup coarsely chopped pecans
2/3 cup sweetened condensed milk
6 ounces semisweet chocolate, chopped

Place pecans in a small nonstick skillet and add a large pinch of salt. (Salt is one of what Gold calls a "free ingredient" – she doesn't count it among her three.) Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until nuts are toasted. Set aside to cool. Put condensed milk in a small saucepan. Heat until it just comes to a boil and add chocolate.

Immediately lower heat and stir until blended.

Continue to cook, over low heat, stirring constantly, about 1 minute, until chocolate has completely melted.

Stir in pecans and cook a few seconds. Pour the warm mixture into a 7-inch-by-7-inch square pan. Or line a 3-inch-by-5-inch loaf pan with plastic wrap so that it hangs over the pan and pour in the mixture. It will not come up to the top of the pan. Fold the plastic wrap over chocolate and press firmly to smooth the top. Refrigerate until cold. Let sit at room temperature 5 to 10 minutes, then cut into squares or slices.

Makes 16 squares or 20 slices

High-velocity floor fan can help eliminate heat

Gene Austin

QUESTION: I have central air conditioning and a well-insulated attic, but my second floor still remains quite warm on hot days. I am thinking of installing a whole-house fan to help ventilate the second floor. I would only run the fan about 20 minutes each night, with upstairs windows open. What do you think?

ANSWER: Your plan to run a whole-house fan periodically should help clear out the hot air from the second floor, although you will probably pull out some of your air-conditioned first-floor air as well. Whole-house fans are generally powerful enough to expel a lot of hot air in a short time. As an alternative, you should be able to exhaust some of the hot second-floor air with a high-velocity floor fan set up near an open window. Open other windows on the second floor so that fresh air can be pulled in. High-velocity floor fans are sold at some home centers at prices starting at about $50.

However, if you decide to install a whole-house fan, you might discover that you don't need to run the air-conditioning except on the hottest days and nights. A whole-house fan, which is normally installed in an opening in the attic floor, pulls cool outside air into the house through partially opened windows and expels stale, warm air out of the house through attic vents. These fans fan be very effective for cooling and ventilating smaller houses. However, as you probably know, whole-house fans are normally used as a substitute for air conditioning, and are not normally used while a central air conditioner is running because they will exhaust expensively cooled air as well as warm air.

A whole-house fan should not be confused with an "attic fan," which I discussed in a recent column. An attic fan is generally installed in the roof or gable of a house and ventilates the attic only; it has no direct connection with the rest of the house. Whole-hooks fans are sold at most home centers at prices starting at about $150. The cost to operate a fan is generally much less than the cost of running an air-conditioner. Most fans include a louvered panel that fits into the ceiling under the fan, and opens automatically when the fan is operating. The fans can generally be installed without cutting any of the attic-floor framing. A remote switch and timer, with easy access, should be installed when wiring the fan.

Most users run whole-house fans at night, when the outside air is coolest. Windows are closed and drapes drawn during the day to keep the cool air inside. The fans won't provide much relief on nights warmer than about 70 degrees. Unlike air conditioners, they also do not dehumidify air. Whole-house fans have a few other negatives. They can be noisy. They open a sizable hole in the attic-floor insulation (some users tape blanket-type fiberglass insulation together and cover their fans in winter). If a fire breaks out in the house, the draft from the fan can cause the fire to spread faster.

In summary, though, whole-house fans have well-earned their nickname as "the poor man's air-conditioner."

Hollywood cookbook 'picnics under the stars'

By Barbara Hansen
Los Angeles Times

Can't decide what to pack for a picnic. Just buy a copy of "The Hollywood Bowl Cookbook: Picnics Under the Stars." The book contains recipes for appetizers that transport easily, cold soups that work well for outdoor dinners and main dishes that can be served hot or cold.

The Los Angeles Philharmonic Affiliates of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Association published the book. Along with their own contributions, members sought recipes from chefs, musicians and Bowl entertainers. These include Esa-Pekka Salonen's gravlax with mustard sauce, Itzhak Perlman's chopped chicken livers, Marilyn Horne's picadillo and Michael Tilson Thomas' Chinese chicken salad.

The late Peggy Lee contributed a picnic extravaganza menu with six recipes, including smoked turkey, wild rice and three-pepper salads.

Proceeds from sales go to a fund for children's music education. Priced at $19.95, the book can be ordered online at www.laphil.com and www.hollywoodbowl.com. To order by mail, send a check for $28.09, which includes tax, postage and handling, to the Los Angeles Philharmonic Affiliates, P.O. Box 1951, Hollywood, CA 90078. Make checks payable to the affiliates.

MARILYN HORNE'S PICADILLO

Mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne says this picadillo can be served cold or at room temperature as well as hot. Ground turkey can be substituted for half the beef.

1/2 cup dried currants
2 tablespoons oil, divided
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
1 cup chopped green bell pepper
2/3 cup stuffed green olives
1 (3-ounce) jar capers, drained
2 1/2 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1 bay leaf
Hot pepper sauce
Salt
2 pounds ground beef
4 cups chopped peeled tomatoes
Hot cooked rice, for serving

Place the currants in a bowl, cover with warm water and let stand 30 minutes. Drain. Meanwhile, heat 1 tablespoon of oil in a skillet over medium heat. Add the onion, garlic and bell pepper and cook until tender, stirring constantly, 4 to 5 minutes. Stir in the olives, capers, vinegar, pepper, cloves, cinnamon, bay leaf, and hot pepper sauce and salt to taste. Cook, stirring frequently, for 10 minutes. Heat the remaining 1 tablespoon of oil in a Dutch oven over high heat. Add the ground beef and cook until browned, stirring to break up the lumps, 5 minutes.

Drain. Stir in the olive mixture, drained currants and tomatoes and mix well.

Cook over medium-low heat, loosely covered, stirring frequently and skimming off the fat as needed, 1 hour.

Remove the bay leaf and discard.

To serve, spoon the picadillo over rice. Makes 6 servings.

ishmongers find ways to ell fresh fish despite distance

By Jill Wendholt Silva
The Kansas City Star

Fishmonger: n. A dealer in fish.

If the truth be told, "Tuna" Tim Williamson can sell anything. He's made his living selling furniture and gourmet coffee, but fish is his forte. Three years ago when he took over as seafood specialist at Cosentino's Price Chopper in Kansas City, Mo., the pickin's in the seafood case were slim – but not necessarily slimming.

He found himself staring at a 10-foot mountain of catfish nuggets – "the seafood equivalent to chicken nuggets" – and pallet after pallet of Louisiana fish fry seasoning mix.

"I thought this is ludicrous. We were killing our customers. Now I like fried food as much as the next guy, but you need moderation," Williamson says.

So the boyishly bespectacled salesman who is fond of quoting motivational business speaker Zig Ziglar took to the aisles. He peddled samples of salmon, tilapia (a sweet, fine-textured whitefish originally from Africa), basa (a type of farm-raised catfish indigenous to Vietnam) and Cape capensis. At first he served it fried so when he moved on to baked, broiled and sauteed, his customers were already hooked.

Whether you shop at an urban city supermarket or an upscale suburban organic market, seafood managers across the city are eager to help landlocked Midwesterners incorporate more fresh fish in their diet.

Williamson is known for his stash of recipes, heart-healthy cooking demonstrations and special events, such as "Gumbo Mania," a 10-day shrimp and crab promotion featuring zydeco music and a different gumbo to sample everyday. His slightly wacky sales pitch soon earned him the title "Tuna" Tim, a nickname he wears proudly on his employee name tag and business card, along with the motto "All fish–All the time."

FRESH FISH RECIPES

TUNA TIM'S OYSTERS CASINO
Makes 4 servings
12 oysters, live in-shell
12 shucked oyster meats
2 slices bacon
1/2 cup green onion, minced
1 tablespoon minced green pepper
1 tablespoon celery, minced
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
4 drops Louisiana Hot Sauce
1 tube Ritz Crackers, crushed
2 pounds food-grade rock salt

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Shuck live oysters and save deep half of the shell. Place 2 meats in each of the deep shell halves. Arrange filled oyster shells on a layer of rock salt in one large baking pan. In a skillet, cook bacon until crisp. Remove from pan and crumble. To the bacon grease, add the onion, green pepper and celery and saute 3minutes over medium heat. Remove from heat, add lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, Louisiana hot sauce and Ritz cracker crumbs. Heap mixture on top of the oysters in the shells and top with crumbled bacon. Bake 10 minutes.

TUESDAY NIGHT SALMON
Makes 2 servings
1 pound salmon fillet
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
3 drops smoke flavoring
Louisiana Cajun Seasoning, to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place salmon fillet on baking dish, skin side down. Mix olive oil and smoke flavoring and brush onto top of salmon fillet. Season with Louisiana Cajun seasoning. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until done. Salmon is done when it easily flakes with fork.

Woman offers tasty tri-tip beef barbecue

By Cathy Thomas
The Orange County Register

Kathy Murphy knows how to herd beef on a barbecue. She nurses her dry-rubbed tri-tip roasts like a calm but cautious mother. She shifts and turns them, building layer upon layer of delectable smoke-scented crust. Perfect fare for a summer picnic.

Her tri-tip barbecues – offered through Ranch Hands Inc., the Santa Ana-based catering company she co-owns – have sated smoke-starved appetites since 1987.

"Tri-tip is so good, it can stand on its own," Murphy said. "They're a delicious cut of meat, nicely marbled with fat, tastier than filet. But you have to slice them right, so they're tender. Cut it wrong and it can be like shoe leather."

Cathy Semler, who sells frozen-in-marinade tri-tips from her booth at the Orange County Marketplace in Costa Mesa, says you can oven-roast tri-tip (whether it's been marinated or not, but it should be defrosted if frozen).

Roast it (fat-side-up) at 500 degrees for 20 minutes; then turn the oven off, and leave it in the oven for 45 minutes.

Tri-tip, sometimes called triangle tip roast, is a 1 1/2- to 2 1/2-pound muscle from the sirloin. Its marbling gives it a rich beefy flavor, and because there's no waste, it will feed four to five hungry guests.

Murphy serves hers with doctored-up black beans or canned baked beans that she transforms by adding smoky barbecue sauce and brown sugar.

MURPHY'S BARBECUED TRI-TIP

Mesquite charcoal
For dry rub:
1 tablespoon salt
2 teaspoons ground black pepper
2 teaspoons garlic powder
2 teaspoons paprika
2 teaspoons dried parsley
For roast:
1 (2- to 2 1/2-pound) tri-tip roast

Start barbecue using generous amount of mesquite charcoal. Kathy Murphy started fire using barbecue chimney (cylinder with handle, sold at barbecue stores) and newspaper. In small bowl, prepare dry rub: Stir together salt, black pepper, garlic powder, paprika and dried parsley. Spoon enough rub onto meat to generously cover. Rub in with hands, but do not contaminate any remaining rub with meat juices. Uncontaminated rub can be reserved for future use. Place meat on grill over very hot fire, fat side down. Flames will probably flare up, but turn meat over and flames will subside. Keep turning meat frequently, using long-handled tongs or meat fork. Move tri-tip over to cooler spot if it seems to be cooking too fast. Don't worry if outside gets lightly charred; very little of crust will end up on a slice. A 2- to 2 1/2-pound tri-tip will take about 45 minutes to cook medium-rare to medium (120 to 130 degrees), which is desirable. Tri-tip is a cut that is tough when rare or well-done. Try to time the cooking so that tri-tip comes off the grill right when you're ready to serve it. If you need to keep it hot, wrap it in aluminum foil until mealtime. Don't slice it until the very last minute. If slicing right from grill, let sit 10-12 minutes before carving. To slice, place on cutting board. Check surface of meat to locate grain. Begin slicing across grain into thin (1/4-inch) uniform slices. Check grain every few slices, because often direction of grain will change and you will need to adjust direction of knife. Yield: 4 to 5 servings

Ranch Hands Beans:
2 (28-ounce) cans Bush's Best Vegetarian Baked Beans, partially drained
1/2 cup smoky-style barbecue sauce
1/4 cup brown sugar

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine ingredients in 2 1/2-quart casserole. Bake, uncovered, in preheated oven until most of liquid has thickened, about 60 minutes. Yield: 10-12 servings

New homes try for 'zero-energy'

By Ken Sheinkopf
The Orlando Sentinel

QUESTION: I recently read about something called a "zero-energy" home. Can you tell me more about this?

ANSWER: The U.S. Department of Energy has been promoting the building of energy-efficient homes that have solar water heating and solar electric systems, a concept called "zero energy." The definition of these homes is still being discussed, but they essentially will use minimal energy because of the efficiency strategies, and they will produce their own energy to meet the rest of the load. The nice thing is that well-designed, energy-efficient homes with renewable energy systems that don't meet the strict definition of not using any utility-supplied energy can still greatly reduce the energy they use. Thus, while you may want to use a number of strategies in your new home, you may not want to spend the money on the products and strategies that will let you reach 100 percent self-sufficiency, but you can still cut your power bill dramatically. You can find out everything you want to know about these homes and the DOE program by visiting www.eren.doe.gov/solar buildings/zero-energy-blds.htm.

Mets draft CSI's Colonel in ninth round

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

The call came about 1:30 Tuesday afternoon.

On the other end, a voice asked: "Do you think we can sign you if we draft you?"

Though he had a lump in his throat he thought might be his heart, Christian Colonel played it cool.

"We can talk about me signing."

Christian Colonel

"I'm extremely excited and overwhelmed," Colonel said. "Coming from American Falls and everything ... a small town, and not knowing too much about the draft, I never even thought of it. I knew I was capable of it after this season. But I never thought of getting drafted. I'm just so happy."

The 6-foot-2-inch, 200-pound Colonel, who was an honorable mention NJCAA All-American, led the Golden Eagles with a .390 batting average, nine home runs and 50 RBIs. He also scored 47 runs and stole 15 bases this past season as a sophomore.

He already has a scholarship to attend Texas Tech University in the fall. He said he'll know more about his future today after meeting with a Mets scout at the Colonel family home.

He could become the second CSI ballplayer to sign with a major league team. Teammate Kody Kirkland opted to sign with the Pittsburgh Pirates on May 27 rather than wait for the draft.

"I'm going to meet with them tomorrow and we're going to talk about a contract and a signing bonus," Colonel said. "I am negotiating it myself."

Colonel said he's going to make sure the offer is fair.

"I don't really have a (dollar) figure. I just want the offer to be more valuable than my Texas Tech scholarship," he said. "If I go to Texas Tech, I could double my value. But there's also the risk of injury. We'll see."

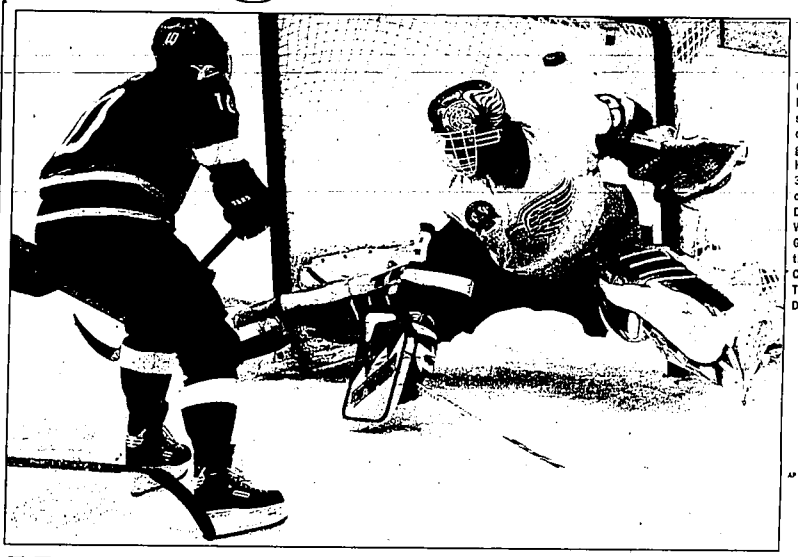
'Mongrels' win in OT



Carolina's Ron Francis scores in overtime to give the Hurricanes a 3-2 victory over the Detroit Red Wings in Game 1 of the Stanley Cup Finals Tuesday in Detroit.

Hurricanes upset Red Wings in Detroit

The Associated Press

DETROIT – Carolina Hurricanes coach Paul Maurice playfully calls them the "mongrels," and they needed just one game of the Stanley Cup Finals to stun Motown.

Ron Francis knocked in Jeff O'Neill's short pass to the top of the crease 58 seconds into overtime, and the Hurricanes shocked the heavily favored Detroit Red Wings 3-2 in the Stanley Cup Finals opener Tuesday night.

Remarkably, it was Carolina's first victory in 13 games in Joe Louis Arena since a game-winning goal by – yes, him again – Francis for the then-Hartford Whalers on Nov. 14, 1989.

Detroit, one of the biggest Stanley Cup Finals favorites ever, should have known better than to let Carolina go into overtime. The Hurricanes are 7-1 in overtime this postseason, the second most overtime playoff wins in NHL history. Montreal had 10 in 1993. The Red Wings are 1-4 in overtime.

Maurice began calling his team the "mongrels" to reflect their underdog status in every series so far.

"We knew we were an underdog," said Maurice, who didn't try to motivate his team by talking about it before the game. "No point in making the mountain any bigger than it was."

O'Neill scored the tying goal late in the second period, then set up the game-winner with a pass from along the right wing boards to Francis, who was inexplicably left unattended in front of the net. Red Wings goalie Dominik Hasek went for the poke check as Francis lifted the puck over him for his sixth playoff goal, and only his second at even strength.

"The puck came out front and it bounced right back to Jeff O'Neill," Francis said. "He made a great pass, and I was able to flip it up over the top of Hasek's pad into the net."

It was the second overtime win in as many games for Carolina, which beat Toronto 2-1 on Martin Gelinas' overtime goal May 28 to win the Eastern Conference finals. Carolina goalie Arturs Irbe is 6-0 in overtime.

"It's been a comfortable position for us through the whole playoffs," Carolina forward Erik Cole said.

The Red Wings opened 1-0 and 2-1 leads, but couldn't hold either as Carolina – held to seven goals in the final four games against Toronto – twice took advantage of Detroit's carelessness.

Up 1-0 early in the second period, the Red Wings were unwisely drawn into taking two penalties in a span of 37 seconds, one on 41-year-old Igor Larionov, the NHL's oldest player, the other on Kris Draper.

Carolina tied it at 3:30 when Sean Hill's knuckleball of a one-timer from the upper edge of the left circle eluded Hasek, who had shut out Colorado in the final two games of the Western Conference Finals.

Detroit had two more power plays to work with after that, only to go ahead again on Kirk Maltby's even-strength goal at 10:39.

But, less than a minute from taking a one-goal lead into the third period, the Red Wings allowed Aaron Ward to get off an up-ice pass to O'Neill, who skated ahead of two defenders to flick a short wrister by a sprawled Hasek at 19:10 of the second.

Detroit ended regulation play on its seventh power play after Cole was called for hooking at 18:19 – at a time when penalties are rarely called in Stanley Cup Finals games – but couldn't score.

"We had a chance to win it with the power play," Detroit coach Scotty Bowman said.

Knight Ridder News Service

LOS ANGELES – They've been the embodiment of NBA ineptitude, a faceless, fumbling, failure of a franchise.

So when Jason Kidd arrived last summer and said the New Jersey Nets could win 40 games, people laughed.

Kidd was way off, of course.

The Nets won 52, doubling their total of a year ago, and have advanced to the Finals for the first time since migrating from the ABA in 1976.

NBA Finals
Tonight's Game 1: at L.A., 7 p.m. (NBC)

And now, their most daunting challenge awaits: beating the two-time defending champion Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA Finals, which open tonight.

"We're the biggest underdog in the history of the Finals, and the guys think that's fantastic," Nets coach Byron Scott Said. "I feel we should win. We're a much better defensive team than Sacramento. We've been proving people wrong all season. Charlotte and Boston were supposed to beat us."

"The Lakers are a beatable team," Nets center Todd MacCulloch insists.

"Hopefully, destiny will overcome the dynasty," Kidd said.

But even a Lakers sweep would not detract from New Jersey's remarkable turnaround.

They were the No. 1 seed and became the first team to miss the playoffs one year and make the Finals the next since the 1977-78 Seattle SuperSonics. New Jersey's three playoff series victories tripled the franchise's previous post-ABA total.

But to credit only Kidd would be shortsighted. There's Kenyon Martin, the erstwhile No. 1 overall draft pick and an emerging defensive enforcer. There's Kerry Kittles, the sweet shooter who nearly retired after four knee operations. There's Keith Van Horn, whose 3-point eruptions compensate for sometimes listless play.

There's a deep and talented bench, led by underrated veterans Aaron Williams and Lucious Harris and versatile rookie Richard Jefferson. And don't forget Scott, who has soothed, cajoled and motivated his men, patterning himself after his former coach, Pat Riley.

The architect has been general manager Rod Thorn, who two years ago left the NBA's front office to take over this luckless, injury-riddled franchise.

Minico dumps M-C rival Burley

By Scott Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT – Reality hit the Burley Bobcats Tuesday at Warburton Field.

In their first contest since winning the Class 4A baseball state tournament, the Bobcats lost another game to cross-river rival Minico in Burley's American Legion opener.

Kody Cole

In Minico's 7-3 victory, the Spartans (2-1) got six strong innings from starting pitcher Cory Warburton and a dominating relief appearance from Kody Cole while scoring a run in every inning but the seventh to down the Bobcats (0-1) in their first game since the high school season ended.

Cole got six strikeouts in three innings of work, including a three-strikeout eighth inning, and backed up a steady offense that was consistent throughout the order.

"(Cole) came in and really challenged people and threw strikes," first-year Minico coach Ben Frank said.

Zane Dietz went 2-for-2 with a pair of RBIs from the No. 9 spot, while Nate Tracy doubled and scored from the lead-off spot in the first inning to set the tone for the Spartans. He finished with a 2-for-4, two-run performance.

Kreg Schow finished 3-for-3 and scored a pair of runs for the Spartans, who were fresh off a doubleheader split with Highland Monday in Pocatello.

"I'm really impressed with the way we're swinging it," Frank said. "We got hits from everyone."

History lesson: U.S. takes '98 losses to task

The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea – Steve Sampson isn't bitter. He just doesn't think he was the cause of the U.S. downfall at the 1998 World Cup.

Four years after advancing to the second round, the Sampson-coached Americans lost to Germany, Iran and Yugoslavia and finished last among the 32 nations. Veterans on the team whined that Sampson pushed them aside, and the team faded amid the squabbling.

It was a step back for the fledgling U.S. soccer program, and Sampson quit four days after his team's final game in France.

The U.S. team hoped for a different experience this year going into Wednesday's opener against Portugal in Suwon. Players repeatedly have referred to learning from 1998, ensuring they would remain cohesive.

"Hopefully, the lessons of France '98 translate into professional behavior this time," Sampson said. "The only thing I should have done differently is not bring players to France who were not completely healthy. A

KIMBERLY – Host Kimberly opened its American Legion season with a 9-2 and 13-3 sweep the Twin Falls 'A' team Tuesday at Kimberly.

John Mason went 3-for-5 with a triple, double and four RBIs and struck out 10 batters for the Game 1 win. Ryan Verwey smashed a solo home run in a four-run second inning and Kris Newberry added a pair of doubles. Alex Hill had three hits and Drew Bernhard and Tim Mealer both went 2-for-3 ot lead Twin Falls.

In a run-rule, six inning night-cap, Kimberly scored five in the second and six in the sixth to complete the sweep.

Jake Williams went 2-for-3 with two doubles and three RBIs and Clifton McKay went 3-for-3 with an RBI. Twin Falls pitchers gave up 13 walks or hit batsmen in Game 2.

"We hit the ball well and jumped ahead early," said Kimberly coach Rich Bishop, who's coaching the team in place of Terry Bohan this summer.

"Jumping out with some good hits and some confidence was the key for us," Bishop said.

Kimberly (2-0) heads to the Wood River Invitational Friday through Sunday. The Bulldogs open Saturday with Marsh Falls at 11:30 a.m. before taking on the hosts at 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Kimberly faces Salmon at 9 a.m. and Blackfoot at 11 a.m.

Milwaukee's Jose Hernandez slides safely into home to score the winning run in the 11th inning Tuesday in Milwaukee as the Brewers beat the Cubs 6-5.

Brewers win fourth straight one-run game

MILWAUKEE (AP) – Alex Sanchez atoned for his ninth-inning baserunning blunder with an RBI single in the 11th off Jeff Fassero as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Chicago Cubs 6-5 Tuesday night.

Jose Hernandez led off the 11th with a single off Fassero (1-4) and was sacrificed to second. After an intentional walk to pinch-hitter Alex Ochoa, Sanchez hit a single off the glove of diving shortstop Alex Gonzalez.

Center fielder Corey Patterson made a good throw to the plate, but Hernandez slid around the tag by Todd Hundley, giving the Brewers a season-high five straight victories.

Luis Vizcaino (4-1) pitched two perfect innings for the victory, Milwaukee's seventh in eight games against the Cubs this season.

The Brewers have won four straight games by one run after beginning the year 2-16 in one-run games.

Cardinals 8, Reds 5

CINCINNATI – Fernando Vina had three hits and Albert Pujols hit a two-run homer Tuesday night, extending the St. Louis Cardinals' dominance over the Cincinnati Reds with an 8-5 victory.

The Cardinals have won 18 of their last 24 games, putting the pressure on first-place Cincinnati in the NL Central.

Ken Griffey Jr. singled in five at-bats, leaving him 4-for-28 since returning from a torn knee tendon.

Marlins 5, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA – Josh Beckett lasted only three innings because of another blister, but five Florida relievers finished a four-hitter.

Beckett allowed one hit, struck out five and walked two before coming out with a blister on his middle finger.

Pirates 5, Expos 2

MONTREAL – Chad Hermansen hit a lead-off home run against Carl Pavano (3-7), and Rob Mackowiak homered twice for Pittsburgh.

Jimmy Anderson (5-7), who gave up 11 earned runs over 8 1-3 innings in his previous two starts, allowed five hits and one run in 6. 1-3 innings.

Mike Williams pitched the ninth for his 18th save in 19 opportunities.

Minnesota pummels pitiful Indians by 21

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) – The Minnesota Twins showed what they can do when their whole lineup is healthy.

Luis Rivas went 4-for-6 with five runs scored and five RBIs in his first game off the disabled list as the Twins posted their most lop-sided win in history, beating the Cleveland Indians 23-2 Tuesday night.

Jacque Jones had four hits and five RBIs, Dustan Mohr was 4-for-6 with a two-run homer and A.J. Pierzynski also was 4-for-6 for the Twins, who set a franchise record with 25 hits and missed their runs record by one.

The Indians allowed more than 20 runs for the second time this season and matched the most lop-sided loss in history. Cleveland's biggest loss was 21-0 to Detroit on Sept. 15, 1901. The most runs Cleveland has allowed in a game is 24 against Boston, on Aug. 21, 1986.

Rick Reed (6-2) gave up three hits, two of them home runs by Jim Thome, in seven innings as the Twins improved to a baseball-best 20-9 at home.

Yankees 13, Orioles 5

NEW YORK – Jason Giambi hit a three-run homer during New York's eight-run sixth inning and the Yankees hit four home runs in a 13-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Tuesday night.

Giambi hit a two-run double in the first and added his 16th home run in the sixth. Alfonso Soriano, Robin Ventura and Rondell White also homered for the Yankees, who lead the majors with 96 homers in 59 games.

Red Sox 10, Tigers 5

DETROIT – Johnny Damon and Shea Hillenbrand had four hits each, and Carlos Baerga drove in four runs as Boston beat Detroit to improve to 23-6 on the road.

John Burkett allowed four runs in the first two innings, but settled down to match teammate Pedro Martinez at 7-0 on the season.

Jose Lima (1-4) took the loss in relief, allowing five runs in 3 1-3 innings.

Blue Jays 3, Devil Rays 1

TORONTO – Eric Hinske homered twice, and fellow rookie Justin Miller pitched seven innings of three-hit ball as Toronto won their season-high fifth straight with a victory over Tampa Bay.

Mystics stop Starzz in WNBA action

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) – Vicky Bullet scored 23 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead the Washington Mystics to a 97-89 victory Tuesday night over the Utah Starzz, despite the absence of All-Star Chamique Holdsclaw.

The Mystics (2-1) broke two-team records by scoring 97 points and hitting 10 3-pointers, two by Bullet.

Holdsclaw missed her second straight game after attending her grandmother's funeral in New York.

It was the most points Utah (2-2) allowed since losing at Houston 107-85 on June 12, 2000.

veteran player has every expectation of playing."

Sampson, the former coach at Santa Clara, was an assistant to Bora Milutinovic on the U.S. team and took over when his boss quit in 1995. His decision to let players move forward, combined with his ability to speak English, was refreshing following Milutinovic's conservative style and obtuse explanations. Following a string of wins, including an upset of Argentina, the U.S. Soccer Federation gave him the job permanently.

The 2-0 loss to Germany in the World Cup opener wasn't shocking. But the Americans expected to dominate Iran and instead lost 2-1 as Brian McBride (twice), Claudio Reyna and David Regis all hit the crossbar or goalpost.

That loss led to Sampson's coaching retirement. He became technical director of the California Youth Soccer Association in January 1999 and in March 2000 turned down an offer to become Costa Rica's coach.

He's at the World Cup as a color commentator for the Futbol de Primera radio network, working alongside Andres Cantor. He's interested in coaching a national team or club, perhaps in Latin America, but for now is content to opine on the air.

And he thinks the United States will achieve its goal of reaching the second round.

"My prediction is we're going to surprise the Portuguese and we're going to tie them," he said. "The crucial match is the match against South Korea. I think we can win that match — and that it will be a tie as well."

The Bobcats committed five errors to help the Spartans' cause but Burley pitchers Andrew McMurray and Matt Michel were able to keep the damage minimal.

Still, Minico continued to pull away throughout the contest, collecting runs in the second and third inning when the Bobcats committed four of their errors in those frames.

Dietz came through with RBI singles in the fourth and sixth innings and Gabe Frank scored his second run of the contest in the fifth when he led off with a double and Cole followed with a double to bring him home.

Bobcat Matt Hope went 1-for-4 with two RBIs and a double.

Colonel

Colonel said getting drafted was actually the easy part. Now the hard decisions have to be made.

"My parents kind of want me to go to school and I kind of want to go to school and finish my education," he said. But I also want to get my professional career going."

He said he did not see the Mets in his immediate future after only a brief conversation with a team scout earlier this year.

"I did not expect to get drafted by them," he said. "I mostly heard from the (Chicago) White Sox, the (Boston) Red Sox, the (Florida) Marlins and Seattle."

CSI assistant coach Mike Federico said Colonel, who had been projected to go as high as the fifth round, certainly deserved to be drafted.

"He's worked extremely hard," Federico said. "He's earned what he's got."

If the Mets' offer is to his liking, Colonel said he didn't know where he'd ship out for a minor league assignment.

"They have a Penn State League in the Northeast and somebody told me maybe Florida, Tennessee or South Carolina," he said. "I'm just jumping for joy."

Colonel wasn't the only player from the Scenic West Athletic Conference to get a call from a major league team on Tuesday. The Mets also drafted right-handed pitcher Matthew Lindstrom from Ricks College with the 297th pick. The Seattle Mariners drafted Ricks' Troy Cate at No. 190.

The St. Louis Cardinals drafted a pair of Dixie State College players in shortstop John Boyer (No. 132, fourth round) and right-handed pitcher Bradley Thompson (No. 492). Pitcher Jason Hammel went to Florida with the 284th pick and shortstop Ezekiel Parraz of the Community College of Southern Nevada was taken by the Cleveland Indians at No. 634.

Ball State pitcher Bryan Bullington was taken by the Pirates with the No. 1 pick overall.

In a draft class that was generally considered lacking in college talent, 14 college players were taken in the first round.

Tampa Bay took B.J. Upton, a good-hitting, slick-fielding shortstop from Greenbrier Christian Academy in Virginia with the second pick.

Chris Gruler, a right-hander from Liberty High School in California with one of the best curveballs in the draft, went to Cincinnati with the third pick.

Adam Loewen, a 6-6 left-hander from Surrey, British Columbia, became the highest-drafted Canadian player when Baltimore took him with the fourth pick.

Jeff Francis, a lefty from the University of British Columbia, was taken ninth by Colorado.

The first round also featured a few players with major league bloodlines.

Prince Fielder, the son of former big league slugger Cecil Fielder, went to Milwaukee with the seventh pick. The 6-foot, 255-pound Fielder, from Eau Gallie High School in Florida, hit 10 homers – including a shot estimated at 500 feet in his final game this year.

Ohio State first baseman Nick Swisher, the son of former major league catcher Steve Swisher – a first-round pick by the Chicago White Sox in 1973 – went to Oakland with the 16th pick. The Swishers joined Tom and Ben Grieve and Jeff and Sean Burroughs as father-son first-rounders.

John Mayberry Jr., the son of former big leaguer John Mayberry, was taken by Seattle with the 28th pick. He showed good power potential and defensive instincts playing first base for Rockhurst High School in Missouri.

Oakland took college players with its four first-round picks: Swisher, Kentucky right-hander Joseph Blanton, Maryland shortstop John McCurdy and Fresno State righty Ben Fritz. The A's got three extra picks as compensation for losing free agents Jason Giambi, Johnny Damon and Jason Isringhausen.

Right-hander Clint Everts and left-hander Scott Kazmir of Cypress Falls High School in Houston became the fourth set of high school teammates to go in the first round. Everts went to Montreal with the fifth pick, and Kazmir to the New York Mets at No. 15.

Other top 10 picks were right-hander Zack Greinke from Apopka High School in Florida, who went to Kansas City with the sixth pick; shortstop Scott Moore from Cypress High School in California, who went to Detroit with the eighth pick; and South Carolina shortstop Drew Meyer, who went 10th to Texas.

The draft runs through Wednesday and can last up to 50 rounds.

South Korea makes history with 2-0 shutout of Poland

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) – South Korea was the biggest star on Asia's biggest day at the World Cup.

Playing in its sixth Cup finals, the co-host won for the first time Tuesday when it beat Poland 2-0 in Busan, South Korea.

In a stadium awash in red and ringing with the chants and cheers of their fans, the Korean players put on a soccer display worthy of the world's powerhouses.

Striker Hwang Sun-hong, playing in his fourth World Cup, opened the scoring and Yoo Sang-chul provided the clincher for the team that now poses a major threat to keep the United States from advancing to the second round.

"We struggled for this and finally made it," defender Hong Myung-bo said. "Until today, we had one aim, to win the game against Poland. We set another aim here, to prepare perfectly for the game against the United States. As we have some time from now, we will scrutinize the U.S. and beat them."

The Americans get started tonight (Wednesday morning MDT) against Portugal, although key players Clint Mathis (sore knee) and Claudio Reyna (strained quadriceps) were uncertain participants.

Japan 2, Belgium 2

SAITAMA, Japan – Japan parlayed its fans' expectations and support into a successful start in the World Cup.

Surrounded by a flowing sea of blue in the stands, Japan earned a scintillating 2-2 tie with Belgium on Tuesday.

The players and coach credited the crowd as much as each other for the tie.

"We had a 12th man behind us," Japan coach Philippe Troussier said. "Even though it was a tie, we ended as winners. Japan ended as winners."

After failing to earn a point in its World Cup debut four years ago in France, things are already looking up for Japan, co-host of the tournament with South Korea.

Japan came from down a goal on Takayuki Suzuki's 59th-minute score, then Junichi Inamoto's superb solo effort in the 67th minute gave the home team a 2-1 lead.

But in the 75th minute, Peter Van Der Heyden escaped his defender on the left side to take a pass and chip in a shot over Japan goalkeeper Seigo Narazaki from the edge of the penalty area.

Costa Rica 2, China 0

GWANGJU, South Korea – The last thing Bora Milutinovic wanted to do was overshadow China's debut in the World Cup. Instead, Costa Rican did.

Ronald Gomez and Mauricio Wright scored second-half goals Tuesday, lifting Costa Rica to a 2-0 win over China and Milutinovic, former coach of the U.S. team.

Gomez scored in the 61st minute and Wright added a goal four minutes later as Costa Rica moved into a tie with Brazil atop Group C.

Rupert CC holds club amateur this weekend

RUPERT – The Rupert Country Club is holding its amateur golf tournament Saturday and Sunday, with both men's and women's divisions. There is a $50 entry fee, which includes lunch Saturday. There is added money and 100 percent payback of entries with gross and net payoffs in all flights.

Entries may be sent to Bob Lantz at P.O. Box 364, Rupert, ID, 83350 or called in to the pro shop at (208) 436-9168.

The club opens its couples league play on Thursday. Couples should register by 5:30 p.m. and play will start at 6 p.m.

The Rupert junior golf camp runs through Friday at a cost of $25 per player.

Juniors under 11 will start at 9:30 a.m., with juniors age 12-17 starting at 10:30 a.m. The program, which is open to all juniors in the area, will concentrate on putting, chipping, pitching, iron play, driving and etiquette. Call the pro shop for more information or to sign up.

Local tennis pro offers free clinics Saturday

TWIN FALLS – Local tennis professional Doug Kaut will hold free youth and adult tennis clinics on Saturday at the College of Southern Idaho tennis courts.

The youth clinic (ages 7-16) will be held from 8-9:30 a.m. with the adult session to follow, concluding at 11 a.m.

Junior golf lessons start today at Gooding CC

GOODING – The Gooding Country Club starts its beginners golf lessons for all junior golfers (ages 6-14) on Wednesday, with sessions continuing through July 17. An advanced class begins June 18.

Each four-lesson session costs $20 with a maximum of 10 students in each class.

The first beginners session will be held Wednesday and Thursday and June 12-13 from 9-9:45 a.m. and 10-10:45 a.m. The next session is June 18, 20, 25 and 27 with the final sessions July 9-10 and 16-17. Classes will be held from 9-9:45 a.m.

USA Softball selects national team members

OKLAHOMA CITY – Pitcher Lisa Fernandez and five other Olympians were among 17 players selected Tuesday to the U.S. softball team that will play in the world championships this summer.

Leah O'Brien-Amico, Laura Berg, Lori Harrigan, Stacey Nuveman and Michele Smith are the other members from the 2000 Sydney Olympic team to be chosen.

They will be joined by Jennie Finch, Amanda Freed, Nicole Giordano, Keira Goerl, Lovie Jung, Lyndsey Klein, Nina Lindenberg, Jessica Mendoza, Tairia Mims, Jenny Topping and Natasha Watley.

The 17 players were chosen from a group of 57 who attended a recent tryout camp in Chula Vista, Calif.

"I think this team is very talented and is a good mix of young and experienced players," coach Mike Candrea said. "I'm very excited to get the opportunity to work with a team that has a combination of power and speed."

The world championships begin July 26 in Saskatoon, Canada. The top five finishers qualify for the 2004 Olympics in Athens, Greece.

M's Chris Snelling suffers injury running bases

OAKLAND, Calif. – Seattle Mariners left fielder Chris Snelling was hurt Tuesday night when he stopped short while rounding third against the Oakland Athletics.

Snelling walked in the second inning, then took off on Desi Relaford's double to right-center off Tim Hudson.

He rounded third, but third-base coach Dave Myers signaled for him to hold up. When he tried to stop, he fell to the ground clutching his right knee.

The Mariners brought up Snelling from Double-A San Antonio on May 25 for his first stint in the majors.

Kidd's deft ball-handling (9.9 assists per game) allowed New Jersey to play a motion offense and overwhelm opponents in transition.

Martin, a second-year forward, drew criticism for a string of flagrant fouls but averaged 14.6 points and defended with verve.

The most inspiring story might be the comeback of Kittles, who missed all of last season with a career-threatening knee injury but returned to average 13.4 points.

The Nets needed 26 years to advance this far after the death of the ABA, where they won two titles.

"This is definitely dreamland," Kittles said. "We're trying to make our franchise known as a winner and not a doormat."

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

The slump in business travel will likely get worse before it gets better, a survey of frequent business fliers says.

About 80 percent of "road warriors" polled last month by the Business Travel Coalition, which represents large corporate purchasers of air travel, said they expect to cut their airline trips nearly 11 percent from already reduced travel this year.

The 403 frequent business fliers surveyed cited high fares and the hassle of getting through airports as the biggest reasons they cut back on flying, said Kevin Mitchell, the group's executive director.

"I'd be concerned very if I was with a major carrier," he said. "The problem is worse than they thought."

Airlines lost a combined $7-billion last year as planes were grounded after the Sept. 11 attacks and passenger loads plummeted.

But many had begun losing money months before the attacks as companies cut back on business travel to cope with the souring economy. Now, major carriers continue to bleed red ink as high-paying business customers stay home and leisure travelers pay less.

Creditors become Hynix's largest shareholder

SEOUL, South Korea – Creditors of Hynix Semiconductor Inc. have assumed control of the debt-ridden company, raising the possibility that efforts to sell the world's third largest chipmaker will be revived.

A spokesman for Micron Technology Inc., whose multibillion-dollar offer for the chip-making operations of the South Korean company was derailed a month ago, declined to speculate.

"We are currently not engaged and can't comment on what may happen," Sean Mahoney said.

Boise-based Micron is the world's second largest memory chip maker and the acquisition would have pushed it past Samsung and its 28 percent share of the global market.

Interest rates fall in Treasury bill auction

WASHINGTON – Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $17 billion in three-month bills at a discount rate of 1.720 percent, down from 1.730 percent last week. An additional $15 billion was sold in six-month bills at a rate of 1.875 percent, down from 1.890 percent.

The three-month rate was the lowest since April 22, when the bills sold for 1.690 percent. The six-month rate was the lowest since May 13, when the rate was 1.870 percent.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors – 1.752 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,956.50 and 1.919 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,905.20.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year constant maturity Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate mortgages, dipped to 2.35 percent last week from 2.38 percent the previous week.

Tyco tycoon pleads innocent to tax charges

NEW YORK – Dennis Kozlowski, the dealmaking titan who built Tyco International into a huge conglomerate, was charged Tuesday with illegally avoiding more than $1 million in sales tax on paintings, including works by Renoir and Monet.

Kozlowski, who resigned as chairman and chief executive Monday amid news of the investigation, pleaded innocent Tuesday and was released on $3 million bail. Neither Kozlowski nor his lawyer would comment outside court.

Kozlowski was charged with sales tax violations, tampering with evidence and falsifying business records on roughly $13 million in paintings.

Prosecutors said Kozlowski and others agreed to create phony invoices and shipping documents to make it appear as if the artwork was to be shipped out of state and was therefore not covered by New York state sales tax.

Justin Moore, head brewer at Jarre Creek Ranch Brewery, stands next to his brewing equipment in Castle Rock, Colo., Monday. The economic prosperity of the 1990s gave a financial boost to Americans who were already doing well, producing fatter paychecks and more college degrees, Census 2000 figures show. The figures released Tuesday also showed many industrial suburbs struggling as residents left to get farther from cities and closer to new jobs in sprawling office parks.

Rich got richer in the '90s; poverty rates dropped a bit

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Incomes rose and poverty rates declined across parts of the South and Midwest during the prosperous 1990s, though vast stretches of rural areas remained among the poorest in the nation.

The 2000 census data released Tuesday also showed some metropolitan areas in the Northeast and California stumbling economically in a decade when paychecks grew fatter and more Americans earned college degrees.

That's the scene painted of prerecession America by the more detailed state-by-state data from long-form census questionnaires. Among the biggest winners: the suburban edges of booming metropolitan areas like Denver, Atlanta, and the northern California communities in the Silicon Valley area.

"I hope they raise the pay and minimum wage," said Takay Johnson, who lives in a homeless shelter for single mothers in the Bronx borough of New York City. While the 2000 census showed the poverty rate declining slightly in the country over the 1990s, it rose from 29 percent to 31 percent in the Bronx.

"I hear a lot of people hearing they are getting ready to move out of the city and move down to the South," said Johnson, who works the night shift at a fast-food restaurant to help support her 1-year-old son.

John Logan, a sociologist at the State University of New York at Albany, said, "The major centers of economic activity are ceding ground to the South and, incredibly, to the Midwest."

By Tuesday, all 50 states received their first wave of detailed data from questions asked on the 2000 census long form, a survey distributed to 20 million American households. The form covered topics from income to education to commuting.

The percentage of Americans living below poverty level decreased slightly from 13.1 percent in 1989 to 12.4 percent in 1999, while the median household income went up from an inflation-adjusted $39,008 to $41,994 during the decade.

The poverty level differs according to the makeup of a household. For instance, in 1999 the poverty threshold for a family of four, including three children, was $16,954. By comparison, that threshold for a three-person household with one child was $13,410.

TWIN FALLS – Low wages, second jobs and multiple-income families are still realities of life in Magic Valley.

Savings are small, and discretionary income isn't abundant, a local economist says.

But new census data indicate the past decade's economic diversification helped parts of the valley narrow the income gap between themselves and the rest of Idaho.

According to just-released Census 2000 figures, inflation-adjusted household income rose faster in half of Magic Valley's eight central counties than it did statewide during the 1990s.

The valley's most-improved players were Jerome and Gooding counties, where dairies and cheese plants have provided year-round, stable income for many formerly seasonal workers, and Blaine County, where mountain resorts and high property values sustain an economy foreign to the rest of Magic Valley.

Our way of life MAGIC VALLEY

Throughout the summer, The Times-News will explore what Census Bureau data reveals about your life in southern Idaho.

Jerome County's median household income – adjusted for inflation – rose 25.4 percent from 1989 to 1999, to reach $34,696 for the year. Gooding's shot up 23.3 percent to $31,888.

"That's the dairy industry. This really marks the decade of the highest growth of the dairy industry in Idaho," said Greg Rogers, the Idaho Department of Labor's regional labor economist for Magic Valley.

Blaine's median household income made a similar gain, jumping 24.1 percent to $50,496. It's the only Magic Valley county whose median income topped the state's 1999 average of $37,572.

That's no surprise to the locals.

Rogers surmises Blaine's growing population represents an influx of new high-income residents. Affordable housing is scarce.

For 1999, the census figures show, 6.3 percent of Blaine County households reported

Chamber hears how art can aid economy

By Loretta Burkhart
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Members of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Tuesday heard some positive remarks Tuesday about ways the arts can influence the economy of a community.

Dan Harpole, executive director of the Idaho Commission on the Arts described ways in which a community can benefit when giving careful consideration to, and being supportive of the arts.

Although it's only one component of the big picture, "the arts contribute to the strength of the local economy and can bring high-yield dividends," to an area, Harpole said.

On a national scale, Harpole pointed out that the role of the arts is a potent force in economic development. According to statistics, the nonprofit industry generates $36.8 billion in annual revenue through earned income and taxes.

"Cultural tourism is big money," Harpole said.

The arts and cultural life of a region is also recognized as a critical factor in determining location for companies and a potential work force, and can be used as a tool to attract and retain businesses, Harpole said.

Citing Micron as an example, Harpole said that the area's cultural assets were a concern for families that needed to make a decision to relocate. And though it is only one of many components that determine what brings life to a community, it's "major."

Young people who grow up with arts in a community have more opportunity, and are less likely to leave a place where they can be engaged in cultural activity, he said.

"Arts encourage creativity, and kids who create don't destroy," he said.

In a study of the effects of arts instruction on learning have found that children who study the arts are:

- Four times more likely to be recognized for academic achievement.
- Elected to class office within their schools three times as often
- Four times more likely to participate in a math and science fair
- Three times more likely to win an award for school attendance
- Four times more likely to win an award for writing an essay or poem.

"We would like to integrate the arts into the community as an encouragement for all people," said Rhonda Schaff, executive director of the Magic Valley Arts Council.

"It's a tool that a community needs," she added.

Shareholders reject plan to limit Qwest execs' salary

The Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ohio – Qwest Communications International Inc. retirees on Tuesday failed to rally shareholders behind two proposals limiting executive compensation.

A proposal requiring shareholder approval of severance packages for top executives got only 27 percent of shareholder support. The other, which said executive bonuses will not be based in part on growth in value of the company's pension fund, got 39 percent support. Both proposals needed at least 51 percent to pass. Ninety-one percent of available votes were cast.

The telecommunications company had recommended rejection of the shareholder-originated proposals at its annual meeting. It income of $200,000 or more. That income category is nearly nonexistent in the rest of Magic Valley. Stock portfolios and other investment income fatten many Blaine residents' wallets.

Lincoln County's inflation-adjusted growth in median household income – 15.1 percent during the 1990s – lagged far behind the Valley's top three performers but still topped the statewide average. Twin Falls County posted growth of 12.5 percent, just shy of Idaho's 14 percent.

On the lower end of the stick were Cassia County, with 9.2 percent growth in inflation-adjusted median household income, Camas County with 7.2 percent and Minidoka County with 5.2 percent. Elmore County, on the fringe of Magic Valley, posted 13.8 percent growth.

Rogers wasn't surprised to see Minidoka and Cassia counties with some of the valley's slowest-growing household incomes.

"There are a lot of young families and large families in those counties, so that would tend to explain some of the low income," he said.

Many experts consider median household income to be a good indicator of the money available to residents. It covers all people living in one dwelling unit and includes such things as wages and salaries, Social Security and retirement income, rents and royalties, farm and business income and public assistance.

There are, of course, other ways to measure income. Per-capita income represents total income for a state or other political entity, divided by the total population. The average real wage is a yardstick that reflects the earnings of employed residents.

The 2000 Census sampled one in six households for the long-form data, including 1999 household income.

During the 1990s, Jerome County rocketed from lagger to leader in Magic Valley. The 1990 Census ranked Magic Valley's counties – from highest median household income to lowest – as Blaine, Camas, Twin Falls, Cassia, Minidoka, Lincoln, Jerome, Gooding.

Ten years later, the ranking had shifted to Blaine, Jerome, Twin Falls, Camas, Cassia, Lincoln, Minidoka, Gooding. Despite its huge growth in income, Gooding County was still stuck in last place.

"In reality, Gooding County has been a major mover," Rogers said. "They've made significant moves due to the dairy industry."

Still, Gooding County had a larger percentage of households in the smallest income range (less than $10,000 yearly) than the statewide average of 8.7 percent in that category. So did Twin Falls County and the chronically high-employment Mini-Cassia area.

"$10,000 or less is definitely a poverty level," Rogers said.

In Gooding County, he said, there are still many migrant seasonal farmworkers whose pay is partly in kind – for example, room and board, half a beef or something else not quantified in income totals.

Across Magic Valley, "what we do see is that we still have significant percentages of households that are still in a low-income or even poverty level," Rogers said.

"It shows that we still have a little bit of work to do as far as wages," he said.

Qwest

was held at the Dublin offices, because the Denver-based company has about 2,000 employees in Ohio.

The Association of U S West Retirees had argued that the meeting was moved to escape angry shareholders who lost tens of thousands or more from pension funds when Qwest stock fell from a high of $64 in March 2000 to its current level of about $5 a share. Qwest acquired U S West in 2000.

Shares were trading slightly down at $5.07 Tuesday morning on the New York Stock Exchange.

Harvey Hoffman, 74, of Denver, was upset that the two proposals did not pass. He said he has occasionally bought Qwest's stock for his granddaughter.

"How would you like to tell a high school-senior that the stock will be of little help to pay for her education," he said. "Is it any wonder that retirees and shareholders are angry and frightened?"

The retirees group had lobbied the top 70 percent of the telecommunications company's shareholders in recent weeks by sending letters.

Both proposals were defeated last year. The pension proposal drew 17 percent approval, the severance proposal 27 percent.

Qwest has said the severance package proposal would limit flexibility in arranging competitive packages for executives and denies that pension credits have been used to inflate income. In materials sent to shareholders, the company said credits are not a major part of determining executive compensation.

Institutional Shareholder Services, an influential provider of proxy voting services, had sent a report recommending approval of the pension credit proposal and rejection of the severance-package proposal.

COMMUNITY EVENTS

CSI Mini-Cassia center offers tatting instruction

BURLEY – The College of Southern Idaho Mini-Cassia enrichment program is offering tatting instruction from 10 a.m. to noon starting Tuesday, June 11 to July 2.

Tatting lace is made with a shuttle. Janette Baker is the instructor.

The cost is $25 plus an $11 supply kit. Class size is limited to the first eight applicants.

To register by phone with a credit card, call 678-1400.

Lincoln County Extension Office offers kids day camp

SHOSHONE – The Lincoln County Extension Office is offering a day camp for children ages 4-8 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 17-21 at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds.

Early registration is $25.50 before Friday. After Friday, the cost is $30.

Students will learn about animals, and participate in a different craft daily. Manners, etiquette and safety will be taught, with visits from policemen, firemen and other professionals.

At the end of the week, parents will attend a Madhatter's Tea Party and stick horse races.

Volunteers are needed for everything from planning to helping with different activities.

For more information, call 886-2107.

PUBLISH: May 22 and June 5, 2002

LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries that continued fishing for chinook salmon in the lower Snake River may leopardize hatchery and natural production goals for listed Grande Ronde River chinook salmon. Hatchery chinook salmon are returning to the Grande Ronde River from a captive propagation program for recovery purposes. The Bureau recommends immediate closure.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6)(A), the Director of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game hereby closes the chinook salmon season in the lower Snake River effective May 28, 2002.

Copies of Order 02-21 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut Avenue, Boise, Idaho 83707.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"What is the use of running when we are not on the right road?"
— German proverb

"Good slam," announced South after he saw dummy. "We have some duplicated values, but our chances are better than 50-50."

"I don't need the morning line," replied North. "Just concentrate on finding the best way to play the slam."

Naturally, South muffed his chance.

South won his heart jack and hurriedly played trumps. Hoping to pick up the entire suit, he cashed his king to guard against a singleton queen. When it failed to drop, he led another trump toward dummy. West's discard brought bad news; East now had two sure trump tricks for one down. Furthermore, since South's distribution was duplicated in hearts and clubs, South still needed a winning diamond finesse to keep from going two down.

In today's layout, since the diamond finesse must be taken regardless of what happens in trumps, the diamond finesse should be taken first. Success or failure in diamonds has a definite effect on the best play in trumps.

If South takes the successful diamond finesse at trick two, he discovers he doesn't need all five trump tricks. He can afford one trump loser.

The safest way to avoid two trump losers is to first cash dummy's trump ace. After crossing to his club ace, South then leads a trump to dummy's jack. If West has Q-10-4-2, all he gets is one trump trick. If it is East with the stack, East can capture dummy's jack, but he cannot win two trump tricks. Dummy wins East's exit, and South takes a marked finesse against East's 10-4.
