CONGRESS APPROVES NEW RELIEF MEASURE

VETERANS' SIEGE IS STRENGTHENED BY OREGON FORCE

Several Hundred Men Arrive From West to Help In Bonus Campaign

SOLDIERS' ARMY ON SHORT RATIONS

Urban Ledoux Reports Shipment of Beans From New York

WASHINGTON (UP) — The siege of the United States capitol by veterans determined to divert back on the Capital Bromides until Congress adjourns was strengthened today by reinforcements from the main camp of the bonus expeditionary force.

Several hundred veterans from Oregon headed by a bugle and drum corps and marching briskly, moved into the Capitol area as a player treasurer of weak coffee and and "hot dogs" was loaded out to the 700 men who had spent the night on the pavements and lawn about the capitol building.

Vets Married

The capitol's sprinkling system was put in operation early and the men who had slept on the lawn were forced to retire to the terraces of the office buildings of the Capitol and the library of congress. The veterans were warned in advance so none of them was drenched as the sprinklers watered the broad lawn in the rear of the capitol.

The breakfast, which appeared in the form of the quantities necessary to feed twelve men on the capitol grounds was brought up from the downtown camp of the California contingent. It was handed out on the men stood quietly in line. More food was due later for the Oregon men.

Beans En Route

Urban Ledoux, the famous "Mr. Zero" of Manhattan broadlines, told the veterans he had obtained 17,000 pounds of beans and that 100,000 pounds additional had been arranged for and were on the way from New York by truck, accompanied by a guard of Michigan vets was due to keep them from being mocked by our enemies."

Standing coatless on the basis of an unauthorized "off" condition, shirt by his long gray hair and mounting his florid face, "Mr. Zero" implored the men to stay in their capital camp.

"Success is just about here," he shouted. "You felt it in the grass last night and you felt it in the close steps yesterday. Keep it up and you'll get your bonus."

Roy Fairin, president of the remaining units of the Bonus division, which joined the California army yesterday, and relinked today after a night at the Indiana Avenue camp, said:

"Our idea is a peaceful rebellion

MERCURY SOARS AS HEAT WAVE VISITS CHICAGO

CHICAGO (UP) — Soaring temperatures today menaced heat records for this date in Chicago and the subcontinent area to the south.

The weather forecaster predicted the mercury would go to 95 in Chicago, which would equal the all-time record for July 13, established in 1880, and said it might go higher.

A hot wind from the southwest abetted a boiling sun in bringing discomfort. Thousands flocked to beaches and parks.

Relief was promised for tonight or tomorrow. Temperatures have dropped in the Dakotas and the weather is getting cooler in northern Wisconsin and northern Michigan. From Chicago southward, however, the hottest weather of the year was in prospect.

DIVORCE DENIED WIFE OF RECTOR

'Spiritual Perfection' Case Climaxed By Decision of Circuit Court

JACKSON, Tenn., (UP) — Mrs. Ethel M. Noe, of Memphis, who charged her husband, Dean Israel H. Noe, Episcopal rector, had physically abandoned her whom he had reached such a state of spiritual perfection that he no longer cared for earthly pursuits, was denied a divorce today.

The circuit court of appeals here refused to grant a separation. Mrs. Noe had taken the case to appeals court after Chancellor A. C. Ketchum, of Memphis, dismissed the divorce bill in chancery several months ago.

When the case first came up for trial in Memphis several months ago, it attracted nation-wide attention.

The Intimate Details

The intimate details of the married life of the Noes were bared.

In answer to the charges of Mrs. Noe, that her husband no longer cared for earthly pursuits, after he had reached a high stage of spiritual perfection, the rector of St. Mary's Episcopal cathedral, Memphis, pleaded he loved his wife and was living according to the dictates of the Episcopal church.

Mrs. Noe did not say today whether she will carry her fight to a higher court, if necessary.

In handing down its decision today, the court of appeals said Mrs. Noe had not established sufficient proof to substantiate her claims for a divorce.

She had claimed the two lived as strangers since October, 1928, and for that reason she doubted his love for her.

EXPERTS PREDICT 'AUTOMATIC' GAIN IN BIG INDUSTRIES

Production Far Below Actual Needs On Basis Of Past Ten Years

BUILDING AND STEEL SUFFER HEAVY LOSS

Economists Claim Upturn Near If Americans Maintain New 'Necessities'

By RICHARD L. GRIDLEY
United Press Financial Writer
(Copyright, 1932, by United Press)

NEW YORK, (UP) — Production in many of America's leading industries has dropped to such a low level, the experts predict, automatically that the increase to meet the demand for necessities.

Production in some industries is far below the actual needs of the American people as computed on the basis of consumption over the past ten years.

If Americans hold their recently acquired "necessities,"—the family automobile, the electrical refrigerator and the radio—economists insist that the upturn in business cannot be far away.

Sociologists are equally insistent that the people will maintain those articles that were once classified as "luxuries."

Sharp Decline

A measure of the "overdone" business depression of the past three years is shown in the following percentage figures on decrease in activity from the record-breaking first half of 1929 to the corresponding period of the current year. These industries alone account for about a quarter of the country's employment:

Industry	Pc. drop
Building (contracts)	84
Steel (ingots in tons)	83
Automobile (output, cars)	68
Railroad (cars loaded)	41
Electric power (output)	11

Activity in all these major industries in the first half of the year was well below what was necessary to keep the American people supplied with essentials in the preceding two-year period.

Greater recessions were forced in some smaller industries, notably radio and railroad equipment. Electrical refrigeration, food, cosmetics and tobacco suffered less than the average. The important

REVOLT BREAKS OUT IN ECUADOR

General Lends Uprising and Proclaims Colonel Alba Dictator

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, (UP) — An armed revolt against the government broke out here today. At Loja, General Cordova rebelled with his battalion and proclaimed Colonel Lorenzo Alba dictator. Colonel Alba is Vascones, chief of the military zone of Cuenca. Left third today for Loja to put down the movement.

In Quito, Colonel Larrea Alba, alleged leader of the movement, Commander Beltran Valdivieso Alvarez and other officers were arrested. The movement apparently had no representation in other places.

Larrea Alba formerly was acting president of the Republic.

Teacher Receives Endorsement of Humorist Rogers

OKLAHOMA CITY, (UP) — William Carlos Larrabee, 73, small-town schoolmaster today had the endorsement of Will Rogers, the humorist, in his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for congressman-at-large from Oklahoma.

A teacher for 47 years, Mr. Larrabee is a candidate on the platform of the Jeffersonian democrats.

Rogers, who spoke on the platform at Muskogee, Okla., on the night of June 16 during primary election campaign, said the girl, Miss Myrtle Spiers, was children's teacher.

Our opponent projected teacher Rogers had joked the veteran, but the state supreme court refused to let the decision stand.

When supreme court justices noticed the real Will Rogers at Muskogee, Oklahoma, they immediately reversed themselves and ordered a new election.

Mr. Larrabee without resorting to slinging mud, or resorting to sharp practice, defeated McCullough.

'Joker' in Economy Law Aids Relatives Of U. S. Congressmen

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1932, By United Press)

WASHINGTON, (UP)—A joker has been discovered which serves to protect Congressmen's wives, daughters, sons and other relatives from the full force of the new economy and pay reduction law.

The entire House membership is revising its payroll in accordance with the new economy act. But Congressmen fixed the law so they could deal gently with relatives.

One middle western Congressman has even increased his wife's salary.

An eastern Congressman has taken off one relative and substituted another at higher pay.

Few Relatives Dropped

Comparatively few wives and other relatives are being dropped, though the law frowns on double family employment in other departments. Full details of these changes will be reported later.

Despite the storm aroused by recent United Press publication of details concerning the way the family payroll racket operates in Congress, most of the 100 or more members indulging in the practice are sitting tight, apparently waiting for the excitement to blow over.

In spite the opening of the payroll records to inspection by House resolution, despite the defeat of Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, partly because his foe Dr. Brookharts were on the federal payroll, and despite floods of indignant letters from poverty stricken constituents, a majority

Officers Probe Mystery of Death-Gun as Libby Holman Returns to Childhood Home

By MORRIS DE HAVEN TRACY
United Press Staff Correspondent

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., (UP) — Investigators tried to learn today why three persons who searched the room in which Smith Reynolds was shot failed to find the death gun until five hours after what one of the three stepped on the weapon—lying in front of the door.

That is one of several important facts revealed in secret testimony in the investigation as obtained today by the United Press. Inquiry developed that officers who fixed the investigators and the coroner's jury which ruled that the youthful heir to millions died at the hands of a person or persons unknown, were chosen.

Why were Mrs. Reynolds' bedroom slippers beside the bed of her husband's young friend, Albert Walker, and her sweater in his bathroom?

Bloody Trail

How could there be blood in the right of the bed, near the door, while the cartridge was found on the opposite side of the bed?

How could the bullet raise slightly downward through Smith Reynolds' home, go far, right through to home, his car, and yet pass through a door screen six

Why was there no bloody trail from the spot where Smith was shot to the place where he was placed in the automobile for the trip to the hospital where he died in one room as his exotic wife and his friend, Walker, sat in another?

There are possible explanations to the last two questions not developed in the secret testimony revealed to the United Press.

Under Influence of Liquor

The Smith Reynolds home was the foot of the bed in the room where he was shot. Hitted, the gun to his right temple as his head dropped slightly forward, the bullet would have coursed through his head and the screen door in accordance with the evidence.

Testimony was to the effect that Walker and Libby Holman Reynolds, both under influence of liquor, carried the wounded youth

Condition of Evangelist Serious; Investigation of Angelus Temple Ordered

LOS ANGELES, (UP) — Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton was in a serious condition today following a relapse occasioned by her physician, Dr. Edward Huntington Williams.

Hitched to her heart, lungs and kidneys, the evangelist of Angelus Temple, suffered two severe nasal hemorrhages and lapsed into a coma last night, the physician said.

Her condition was attributed to striking her head when she fainted Saturday upon being informed Mrs. Myrtle Spiers had obtained a $6,000 decree of promise verdict against her husband, David L. Hutton.

Dr. Williams said she was not in apparent danger today, but that she would be confined to her bed for two or three more weeks.

Mrs. Hutton suffered a severe concussion when she swooned last Saturday, said Dr. Williams, and her "nerves were directly attributed to the illness."

The evangelist's condition was generally "very worry over the laughable decree against her husband," which she is the head.

Reported irreconcilable mismanagement of the Temple temporarily left attention to expand the Angelus Temple institution by the city social service commission. Friends said, she was directing a thorough reorganization of Temple affairs.

Among the charges of mismanagement, Attorney Leo Gallagher said, was an account that collection for the charitable organization were forbidden to be diverted to the pay and comfort of the

LEADERS OF DRY FORCES PLANNING TO BLOCK REPEAL

Outline Campaign Strategy In Battle to Defeat Efforts of Anti-Prohibitionists

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE DIRECTORS GATHER

Dr. F. Scott McBride Declares President's Program 'Not 100 Per Cent'

WASHINGTON, (UP) — Generals of the prohibition forces today were planning campaign strategy which they confidently believe will block the increasing efforts to change or repeal the 18th amendment.

Heads of the Anti-Saloon league agreed to concentrate during the campaign or election of days of men against every office from president to sanitation. The league directors met here preliminary to conference Thursday and Friday of representatives of the "drys" in which all dry organizations are represented.

There were indications that the organized drys would openly throw their support to President Hoover, although they say they have no illusion of making prohibition a party issue. Whether they do this or not, their choice for the presidency is clear.

Not Expecting Support

"As between the candidates," Dr. F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the anti-saloon league, told the United Press, it is not necessary for us to endorse either. It is easy to see that a candidate who is 100 per cent for repeal and also for beer, he is Governor Roosevelt, has no claim. He's not expecting our support. He frankly says that by his stand.

He contrast Hoover's declarations down to date have been satisfactory. His program of enforcement has not been 100 per cent, but has been effective.

"Because of our non-partisan attitude we are going to work for dry representatives, for senators, members of legislature, dry enforcement officials from President to constable."

FAILURES DECREASE

NEW YORK, (UP) — Business failures in June were the smallest since last December, totaling 2,688 against 2,788 defaults in May, R. G. Dun & Co., reported.

SENATOR BLOCKS REPEAL PROPOSAL

Glass, Former 'Dry,' Introduces Resolution For Sale of Intoxicants

WASHINGTON, (UP) — Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, today introduced a resolution calling for repeal of the 18th amendment and substituting a plan whereby the sale of intoxicants in saloons would be permitted in defiance of federal and other laws and under supervision of federal control placed in the hands of the states.

Glass has been known as a dry, but recently stated that he would vote for modification of the amendment to permit the sale of beer and nonintoxicating alcoholic content have the prohibition question submitted to the people.

Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, prevented action on the Glass resolution. Glass had asked unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

"I can hardly understand," Norris said, "how anyone could desire to amend the constitution of the United States in a manninous consent, therefore I object."

UTAHN SENTENCED TO LIFE IN PRISON

Draper Highly Emotional As Judge Announces Punishment

MANTI, Utah, (UP) — Mendon Draper, 26-year-old laborer was today sentenced to serve the rest of his natural life in the state penitentiary. Draper was convicted July 3 of the murder of murdering Andrew K. Sorensen, aged and prominent Ephraim banker.

Mrs. Iradell Jensen, 26, Sorensen's daughter and now on trial on a charge of murdering the banker, was in the court room when Draper heard Judge Dilworth Worley pronounce sentence.

The comely divorcee, mother of four children, but not even suspect of the man who was convicted of slaying her father and who had sought her hand in marriage. Nor did Draper look at her. The woman merely gazed at the floor, weeping silently.

Draper was highly emotional in receiving the sentence. He was being sentenced for a crime of which he was innocent.

Reduced Program of Building Included In Revised Plan

RELY ON LOANS

WASHINGTON, (UP) —The new draft of the $2,122,000,000 unemployment relief bill was passed by the House today with record breaking legislative speed.

The House vote was 296 to 46.

The Senate passed a similar measure late last night and speedy compromise was expected. This will produce a measure acceptable to President Hoover, who vetoed the original bill.

The new bill relies on Reconstruction Finance corporation loans to bolster employment to relieve distress in industry, a step recommended by President Hoover. A reduced federal building program is included.

The bill differs in some respects from the one passed last week by the Senate and must, therefore, be compromised to iron out differences. This process, usually a matter of days, is expected to be telescoped into a few hours to expedite adjournment of Congress.

In brief the new bill provides:

1—A $800,000,000 Reconstruction Finance fund for loans to states to relieve distress.

2—An additional $1,500,000,000 corporation fund to extend loans for self-liquidating construction work.

3—A $322,000,000 appropriation for a government construction program. This building work will, however, only be undertaken with the consent of the secretary of the treasury.

No provision is carried in the House draft for the Glass-Steagall bill, a measure, a key provision of the Senate measure.

CLAIMS STAKED AT LAKE RESORT

TRUCKEE, Cal., (UP) — The gold rush of '49 was being recollected near Lake Tahoe today following reports that gold had been found on the Chambers resort property which tested $20 a ton.

Two hundred claims had been staked out today in the stampede. Lake Tahoe resort claimants, deputy sheriffs were on duty to protect the property.

Inasmuch as the resort company owns the claims, it appeared likely that most of the claim stakers would be forced to withdraw.

AMELIA EARHART SPANS CONTINENT

Famous Aviatrix Fails To Set Record When Forced To Land in Ohio

NEWARK, N. J., (UP) — Amelia Earhart Putnam, who soared off across the Pacific ocean in 1928, D. E. D. T., yesterday, spanned the continent successfully by plane and left Newark airport at 12:11 P. M. EDT today.

She had been forced to alight at Columbus, Ohio, this morning to get more fuel, thereby shattering her hope for a non-stop trip.

The elapsed time was 19 hours and 6 minutes, she thereby falling to set a new record for the coast to coast journey.

She soared over the airport at 12:17 A. M. EDT, 6 minutes later. Frank Hawks had made the coast to coast journey in 17 hours, 38 minutes and 15 second, non-stop, while Capt. Jimmy Doolittle, with refueling stops, had made it in 11 hours, 16 minutes and 10 seconds.

Thus she failed to beat the Hawks record at which end was shooting, but nevertheless made a brilliant effort.

Upon landing Miss Earhart said she had never intended breaking the record.

"I did not want to make the flight nonstop, she said, "but as long as I had left Newark 18 hours ago I thought Hoover Field would be nearer. A stopper flight within 19 hours. That was just a practice flight."

She said that the gas line from a rear tank clogged, necessitating the one landing at Columbus.

Miss Earhart said she encountered the most trouble flying over the Rockies at 10,000 feet.

"Ice began to form on my wing and stay there," she said.

The woman flier will return to Los Angeles by airplane in a few days. Her plane will fly back to Los Angeles with several friends.

TWIN FALLS BOUND PLANE DISAPPEARS

Salt Lake Airport Officials Attempting To Locate California Man

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, (UP) —Salt Lake airport officials today were attempting to locate a second trace of a Fresno, Cal., plane piloted by a man identified only as Mr. Hedrick, who had been expected at Twin Falls, Ida., at 2:45 A. M. for Salt Lake.

Office plane was believed to be a Travelair, registered to Fresno insurance man named Hedrick, by his secretary. Gust Simpson, of the California city, for Salt Lake City, Twin Falls and Pocatello.

Airport officials admitted the plane either crashed or crashed a forced landing in the Nevada desert. Nevada is the only state in the Union not allotted airport protection and notification.

Twin Falls reported the plane flew over the city at 2:45 A. M. Thunder showers and a dense atmosphere prevailed over the Twin Falls valley at the time, according to Weather Observer Wallace.

A closer trace of the plane was reported at Wendover, Utah, Wednesday, failing to confirm information that the plane was forced to land in the desert.

Hedrick, who was expected at Twin Falls, Idaho, Wednesday, failing to arrive, was reported to have left Fresno at 8 P. M. Tuesday.

Swetonic of the Pirates and Betts of the Braves are still tied for first place among the National flingers, each sporting 10 victories with two defeats.

Swetonic's excellent work has moved up the Pirates and given them a confidence, manifest yesterday even though Steve wasn't on the mound, when they beat Brooklyn, 8 to 7, after a 12-inning struggle.

Paul and Lloyd Waner and Pie Traynor were on the sidelines with injuries. It was Pittsburgh's third straight victory over Brooklyn and enabled the Pirates to protect their first-place lead.

The Cubs made it three out of four in their series with the Braves, beating them, 4 to 3. Pat Malone won his own game when he scored in the ninth on a single by Footsie Taylor. New York's Giants rose to seventh place, dropping the Reds back into the cellar with a 4-to-3 defeat.

George Watkins' home run in the ninth inning, scoring a mate, enabled the Cardinals to come from behind and beat the Phillies, 7 to 6.

Grove Loses Game

In the American league, a two-run rally in the ninth gave the Indians their third successive victory over the Athletics, 7 to 6. Lefty Grove yielded 18 hits.

The Yankees defeated the Browns, 5 to 2, aided by Ben Chapman's home run in the sixth with Lazzeri aboard. Washington's Senators overcame a 3-0 lead and managed out a 13-to-12 win over the White Sox in 10 innings. The Boston Red Sox moved on the Tigers, 3 to 2, registering their 17th victory in 79 starts.

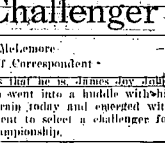
James J. Johnson Plans Elimination To Pick Challenger

By Henry McLemore
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP) — Genius that he is, James Joy Johnston of Madison Square Garden went into a huddle with his free-wheeling, floating power brain today and emerged with an idea—a elimination tournament to select a challenger for Jack Sharkey's heavyweight championship.

"The idea, it came to me in a flash," Johnston said. "I didn't hardly have to think at all." The flash probably came as Johnston was thumbing through the "Life and Loves of Lord Byron," a handsome three-bound-volume affair he was proposing Baby Arizmendi, Dado' welched 117, Hernandez 115.



If you will watch any number of good golfers, you will observe that when they lash out for extra distance with the iron they are likely to be off time in the left, in trying to put extra force into the blow, the right hand assumes too much command of the stroke.

If you fail to get the proper distance with your irons, your trouble lies in timing the stroke. The club head should travel at its highest speed as it comes into the ball.

Attempt to attain the maximum speed with the club head an inch or two in front of where ahead lies. This is known as hitting through the ball.

World Records May Fall When Track Stars Meet In Pre-Olympic Contests

Stellar Performers of Nation Clash At Stanford

WYCOFF RACES

By RICHARD C. WILSON
Pulled Press Staff Correspondent

PALO ALTO, Calif., (UP)—There was every indication today that America's track stars may establish several world's records in their battle for places on the American Olympic team here this weekend.

Probably never before has the country been favored with so many stellar performers in the sprints and middle distances. Interest in the field events has been further increased by the rivalry between eastern and western coaches.

Determined to smash the belief, prevalent in this section, that the west will predominate in winners Saturday at Stanford's track and field stadium, eastern coaches are working hard in hand to produce as many winners as possible.

Main Attraction

The race between "Big Ben" Eastman, Stanford's flash, and William Carr, the Pennsylvania titan, in the 400 meter sprint promises to be the meet's biggest attraction. Carr defeated Eastman in the I. C. 4-A championships, but Coach Dink Templeton of Stanford predicts the Pennsylvanian will have to cover the distance in less than 47 seconds (world's record time), to win again Saturday.

The 100-meter dash will bring together the greatest field of American sprinters ever assembled. At least 18 men will strive for the crown "world's fastest human." Seven of them will be chosen for the Olympic team, according to Dean Cromwell, coach of the American team.

Wykoff Favorite

Willis Frank Wykoff, University of Southern California's flash, rules the favorite, due to his consistent record-equalling performances this season. He will face the stiffest competition of his career in the tryouts.

Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette's sensation Negro star, is rated Wykoff's most formidable foe. Metcalfe has been having trouble with his starting and may have to compete himself with winning the 200-meters, in which he is a decided favorite. He was twice unofficially beaten the 200-meters record, 20.4 seconds, this season.

With a selected team of 28 men, including several national champions, the New York athletic club arrived yesterday, accompanied by the veteran coach, Bernie Wefers. They will contend in tryouts for athletes to win the team championship because of the array of stars assembled under their colors for the field events.

Studies Eastman Problem

Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic games committee, was due to arrive today. The first business with he is to approve the list of officials for the trials, and then he will probably take up the knotty case of Eastman's arbitrary selection for the 800-meters.

Eastman and his coach have insisted that the Stanford runner will tryout only for the 400-meters. Brundage has insisted that he must qualify in the 800-meters, or Eastman cannot race in the 400-meters.

The Stanford stadium promises to hold the largest throng ever assembled in the west for a track meet, judging from early ticket sales. The stadium has a seating capacity of 90,000, and Stanford officials expect it will be more than one-third full for the finals Friday and Saturday.

COMPANY WARNS CANAL SWIMMERS OF NEW RULING

Crop Loss Caused by Shutdown Results In Board's Ultimatum

Water in the Twin Falls Canal system was expected to be back to normal flow Wednesday, following a 24-hour shut-down while search was instituted for the bodies of two drowning victims Monday night and Tuesday morning. It was stated by John W. Hope, company manager.

The board of directors in regular monthly session Tuesday discussed the matter of turning the water out of the system during such emergencies as that presented the first of the week and deplored the necessity for the action.

Water Demand Great

Just how much loss is suffered by crops, is problematical. It was agreed, but at this period of the season when all crops require water, and the demand being exceedingly great, the directors issued an ultimatum, especially directed against swimmers in the canals. Despite a resolution forbidding swimming, the practice continues to be indulged in illegally, it was pointed out.

"The board continues against the practice," said Hope today, "and warns parents and others that in the future during the irrigation season when water is in such great demand it will be impossible to interfere with accidents by diverting the flow because of any disturbance which might come to swimmers making illegal use of the canal system.

"While the ruling might appear harsh, there is no alternative, for thousands of dollars of damage to crops results."

Estimates $30,000 Loss

One director estimated that the loss entailed by cutting off the water this week would approximate $30,000. Others put the loss at a lower figure, but all agreed it would run into several thousands of dollars. This week, before the water was turned out of the system, the management consulted the directors, before ordering the gates closed.

At the Tuesday meeting only routine business was transacted otherwise. One hundred per cent delivery of water is being made and prospects for the balance of the season indicate a continuance of this flow, Hope states.

GOOD VACATION NEWS

It is currently reported that the summer of 1932 will see only a very small reduction in the amount of vacation traveling done in the United States; and it is pointed out that tourist expenditures in 1931 and 1930 were not very far below the average.

Regardless of what this fact may mean about business conditions generally, however, it is good news for two reasons. For one thing, it means that the millions of dollars invested in summer resorts, hotels and the like will get a fair chance to make a decent return this year; for another, it means that a great many Americans are going to get the physical and mental rejuvenation which a vacation trip always brings.

THE BUDGET CUT

The federal government seems to have met its budget-balancing problem fairly successfully. It is a little early to tell whether or not the new taxes will yield all they are supposed to yield, but it is probably that early estimates will not be very far off. At any rate, the problem raised by the deficit was met and met decisively.

There remains, however, one point on which the taxpayer is entitled to feel a bit of a grudge. The deficit was met largely by increasing taxation and not by decreasing expenditures. The economy bill shaved hardly more than $160,000,000 from the costs of the federal government.

Perhaps it is a little late to cry over spilt milk. Nevertheless, the next Congress would be well advised if it insisted on a far more drastic cut in government expenditures than the current bill calls for.

SOUTH AND WEST IN THE SADDLE

It is never easy to analyze a great historical movement while it is in progress. It has to be seen in perspective, usually, to be gauged properly. Nevertheless, it is fairly evident that some far-reaching shift is now taking place in the political alignments of the Democratic party.

Traditionally, the party was a party of farmers and the people of the small towns. Its strength lay in the south and west; it distrusted industrialism, big business, high finance, it was ready to embrace such panaceas as the free silver movement, it tried to fit antique Jeffersonianism to an industrialized democracy.

In recent years, however, it has included another wing, the proletariat, so to speak, of the big cities. Since the close of the Wilson administration it has been torn by a conflict between its two groups, with the south and west allied against the industrial east.

In 1920, 1924 and 1928 the industrial east triumphed. Cox went into the 1920 campaign with the approval of Tammany. Davis, in 1924, was highly acceptable to the east. Smith, in 1928, was the very prototype of the city man, the darling of the eastern sidewalks.

Now the pendulum has swung the other way. Roosevelt rises to power through the support of the opposite wing. Tammany is out in the cold. The men whom the eastern wing most wanted are in the same position. The west and south are in the saddle again.

It would be interesting to know whether this new ascendancy is to be permanent. Probably only the seventh son of a seventh son could say. Meanwhile, however, it is just possible that a lasting realignment of forces is beginning that will include both parties in its effect.

For one party cannot change its complexion without causing a similar shift in the other party. The Republicans have their rural and industrial wings just as the Democrats have. Will there, eventually, be a fusion that makes the division between the two parties far sharper and clearer than it has been during the past decade?

It is too early to tell, just now. The coming campaign probably will give at least part of the answer. The vote in November will help decide.

Another good old American custom has gone by the boards. With several colleges announcing that they will not permit football broadcasts this fall, it will become impossible to sit around the radio on Saturday afternoons and wonder what is actually happening on the gridiron.

Maybe it had no real significance, but the price of hogs went up just as soon as the "pork" measures showed signs of passing.

Kidnaping has been made a federal offense, but here's hoping it doesn't become as popular as some other federal offenses.

If Congress really wants to get the bonus army to go home, it might try setting the ex-soldiers a good example.

Roosevelt made a good impression on his appearance at Chicago.

Carpenters were called in to fix the speakers' stand when it was learned he was coming. They built two hand rails on either side of the stand. The candidate did not need them. He rested his hands on the speaking platform and stood erect.

He is a powerful man from the waist up. His shoulders are as large as those of a wrestler. He has relied chiefly on them and having about with the end of two canes.

Republican politicians believe it would be unwise to start any whispering about the Democratic candidate. His opponents in the pre-convention campaign avoided the matter entirely. They figured it was a two-edged sword which would cut more deeply for Roosevelt than against him.

LINEUP

The understanding whereby Roosevelt and Garner comprised the presidential ticket sewn up at Democratic headquarters started ten days before the Democratic convention.

On June 21 this column said:

"Behind the scenes, from the Democratic punch and judy show in Chicago have been quietly working the inside for a harmony deal.

"The basis upon which the deal is being linked is:

"Roosevelt for President.

"Garner for Vice President.

"Al Smith for the senate in Garner's place.

"If Smith has been holding out against it more strongly than the others, he is constitutionally opposed to compromises."

Smith did hold out. Wagner has returned in the good graces of Tammany and Democrats for the first time in history have dealt with each other like Republicans.

BOLTING

Those forecasting progressive Republicans strong enough to conduct his own show in the coming convention

They had held a series of secret conferences recently. The idea was to form an organization bolting the Republican ticket for Roosevelt. From seven to ten are definitely anti-Hoover in their personal feelings.

They decided they could do better if each went on his own. Each will handle his own state separately. The local political situation will be the guiding factor in the course each follows.

Some will announce for Roosevelt openly as the times seem fit. A larger number will sit on the fence and poke fun at the Hoover ticket without endorsing Roosevelt. The rest will keep their mouths shut.

They cover they will all be for Roosevelt.

That course may not be very impressive to observers, but it is expedient from a practical aspect. There are only man bolting whom they could organize as a unit would be Senator Borah. He does not appear lead such a movement. Two of the group are candidates for reelection on the Republican ticket—Blaine in Wisconsin and Nye in North Dakota. Bolting would endanger them some personal conflagrations.

Shouldered individually the group may prove more effective than open espousal of the Roosevelt cause. It will give Mr. Hoover a maneuvers a problem in western states, and may cause him some sleepless nights.

REPRIAL

The drys are trading on Borah's name. They know he does NOT intend to affiliate with a third party. He is too conservative—primarily to confine their activities to the election of dry Senators and Representatives so the Eighteenth amendment can be repealed. No matter how the presidential candidates stand.

That is what they will do in the end.

LAUSANNE

Wednesday, July 11, is liberal day in France, commemorating the beginning of the siege of the state prison and citadel of Paris in 1789, marking the commencement of the French Revolution.

Wednesday, July 11, is liberal day in Lausanne, commemorating the beginning of the end of the reparations conference.

Nobody knows how efficient or inefficient the conference was. It is officially "very happy indeed" to hear of the Lausanne settlement. Mr. Hoover was as happy as he called off his press conference that day, and said nothing.

Actually, it was nothing, but it was such a political break for him to have to face the debt problem at the start of the campaign as it was for the Democrats to run into the silver issue prematurely in Congress.

Whether the debt issue can be sidetracked, until after the election now the question.

Inside indications are that will be the tendency of our policy from here on in. We will take up the debt question with each nation separately when they request it. We know we are not going to get a settlement but we will see the best bargain possible.

Garner is the only man who stood out against the president for the past year. He personally is responsible on the inside for cutting Mr. Hoover's one year moratorium to Europe down to one year.

His House crowd followed him because they thought he had the practical political side of the relief question as usual.

His cloakroom argument was: How can you expect $80,000,000 to the Banks banks and deny loans to individual citizens?

NEW YORK
By James McMillin

LAUSANNE

A high statistical authority says that the agreement should start a wave of foreign buying of American products. Foreign purchasers and their American bankers, their confidence restored, can absorb billions worth of our goods. Fulfillment of this prediction, must mean that the week of the Lausanne agreement marked the bottom of the depression and that the next few weeks may see the beginning of a general upturn based on commodity price advances. American buying will develop as the markets rise.

The Lausanne agreement (forbids reparations payments) was cheered up the rank and file of the financial community. Local advocates of American cancellation are keeping mum but are hoping it will prove the way for a change in our official attitude.

Authorities here consider one of its greatest benefits to be moral. He acknowledges economic gains instead of hiding them in a jungle of political nationalism.

CURRENCY

The total gain of currency in circulation in the past two weeks amounts to 167 million dollars as compared to the same period last year. Since the holiday was also involved in last year's figures it cannot be used as an explanation of the difference.

More than 5 tons has been placed in Chicago lately which accounts for part of it. Some of it is also undoubtedly due to the new tax on checks which places a premium on the use of currency. Just how much this element amounts to cannot be known for another month.

Bankers here do not believe there is much actual new hoarding. They hope to be reassured by the currency figures for the next few weeks.

REAL ESTATE

A large office building in the Grand Central district has had to make further cuts in staff salaries. The building—a 60-per-cent-occupied but is only collecting rent from 60 per cent of the tenants.

Another building in the same district has reduced its basic rent at rate to $1.50 a foot. Three years ago $1.50 a foot would have bought only the cheapest space in the building.

ELECTION

Election bets are very light as yet. A few inter-office wagers have been placed at odds from 3 to 5 or 2 to 1 on Roosevelt. Other Roosevelt adherents are holding out for even money. Most of those who like to bet are waiting to see how the hornes run.

ARMY PLANES STARTED MAIL

NEW YORK (UP) — Eight years ago an army plane converted into a mail-plane took off from San Francisco eastbound. Another plane left New York westbound. These flights marked the inauguration of the first scheduled day and night Coast-to-Coast air mail service, and the observance of the eighth anniversary reveals that, as a development of those flights, the New York-Chicago-San Francisco route has become the busiest air route in the world in point of mail and passengers carried and miles flown. Instead of the two 5-passenger mail plane which flew the route eight years ago, 20 modern transport carrying 12 passengers and 1600 pounds of mail, and the time has been reduced to 27 hours from coast to coast.

OFFICERS PROBE MYSTERY OF DEATH-GUN AS LIBBY HOLMAN RETURNS TO CHILDHOOD HOME

to the automobile. Smith's head rested in the arms of Libby one part of the time, and on Walker's shoulder the remainder of the time. Absence of a bloody trail could be easily explained under such circumstances.

The manuscript of evidence contains the detailed testimony of Walker, who was held under three days as a material witness. Also Blanche Yurka, New York actress, Dr. Fred M. Hanna, Libby Holman, and several employees of the Reynolds estate.

Dr. Hanna expressed the opinion that the shot was fired from eighteen inches or more away from Smith's temple.

The testimony of Walker alone runs some 7,000 words. He described how he and Smith Reynolds spent Sunday night before the shooting, at a Winston-Salem hotel at Reynolds' insistence. Reynolds' wife, Miss Yurka, and others were bye. Walker, who was held as a material witness, testified that when Smith Reynolds left, he said, he had had little interest in it. That night in the hotel they had talked long and Reynolds had confided to him, Walker said, a fear that he was insane.

'JOKER' IN LAW HELPS RELATIVES OF CONGRESSMEN

of Congressmen are taking a courageous stand on this issue. They are standing loyally by their right hand relatives. They took a cut of 10 per cent of their salaries.

Need Campaign Money

In these hard times campaign contributions come slowly. The thrifty members are trying to make their clerk hire allowances, mileage allowances for stationery and other petty site expenses of a seat in the House of Representatives carry this year's election expenses. Many a wife and daughter will have to surrender government pin money to help pay for dad's campaign this year.

Last time they had a close call when the economy bill was being considered. But members framed the law so that their clerks come under a special category. A Congressman had been allowed $5,000 for clerk hire. The law cuts this 8 1-3 per cent, down to $4,...

The joker is contained in the following language: "Such reduced allowances to be apportioned by the representatives, delegate or resident commissioner among his clerks as he may determine."

The clerk of the house officially notified each member that the old top limit of $9,600.59 any one clerk stands without reduction. Within that limitation, the same as always applied, the Congressman may split his $4,583.33 any way he wishes.

Furthermore Congressmen exempted themselves from the provision requiring that in dismissing employes—the first to go must be married persons where both husband and wife are working for the government and that in hiring new employes preference should be given to persons other than those who have husband on the government payroll.

Application of the married worker provision to Congress would have stricken from the payroll the wives of numerous representatives.

EXPERTS PREDICT 'AUTOMATIC' GAIN IN BIG INDUSTRIES

coil industry has not been affected recently.

Extreme Deflation

Among the larger industries in which the deflation has gone to extremes are building and steel. The automobile industry, which secretly hoarded many car models and drained their machines several additional years fusing of junking them. The same is true of the radio industry.

An economist of R. W. Dodge corporation, building analysts, states that costs of home are too high for current incomes and that some revolutionary idea that the home-seeker home might cause a sweeping change in conditions and lead to greater activity in the building industry.

Because conditions in these major industries, steel and building, are so far below normal, economists believe there is reasonable pickup in activity would put millions of men back to work. Such a development for third quarter is strongly expected in allied lines and bolster industry in general by increasing the purchasing power of so many people.

NEW YORK, July 12 (UP) — Fluctuations in the price of copper were small in the copper market today in the absence of any important demand. Domestic producers offered it at 5¾ cents a pound for third quarter shipments but continued to ask 5⅞ cents a pound for deferred delivery.

In the foreign market, Japanese interests were reported offering the equivalent of 5½ cents a pound for new record low level and compared with Copper Exporters, Inc.'s official price of 5½ cents a pound. Sales took place between these figures.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

by Laura Lou Brookman

IT'S LEAP YEAR, AND THE GIRLS ARE ASKING THE BOYS TO DANCE, DINE AND DANCE AGAIN. ALL THE GIRLS, EXCEPT—

DEGIN HERE TODAY

CHERRY BRENTON, attractive 22-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, is engaged to DAN WHITLEY, newspaper reporter, after a quarrel with his mother. Dan, in a fit of temper, marries Cherry.

Dan and Dan move into a cheap apartment over Cherry's, and, after struggling with financial and other embarrassing difficulties, BRANNIN, Cherry's little friend, a boy, and Dan's friendly, Cherry, meets handsome DAN FARRAGUT, a wealthy bachelor, who tries to make love to her. Dan, upset by Cherry's flirtation, and his mother becomes seriously ill. The boy goes to live with his father. Financial aid from Cherry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. BIXON, decline, seeking another climate to improve their mother's health.

BRENDA VAIL, magazine writer, comes to Wellington and Dan meets her. She asks him to collaborate in writing a play. Dan begins to spend most of his evenings with her. Mrs. Brenton, Cherry's little niece to wave Cherry that Dan is "crazy about Brenda," and Dan but Cherry will not listen. Cherry, to avenge herself, tells the story to wealthy bachelor, who asks her if was she trying deliberately telling an untruth.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XL

CHERRY slipped the pie into the oven, closed the door and straightened with a sigh. Her shoulders and ankles ached. She knew she should not have tried to bake on cleaning day. The apple pies would have spoiled if she had not used them. Apple pie was Dan's favorite dessert too.

She looked at the clock and saw that it was almost 6. Time to set the table.

Cherry was wearing her oldest house dress. It was torn and smeared with dust but she did not think of that. Her hair was hidden beneath a towel pinned on for a dust cap and there were black smudges on her cheeks. From floor to ceiling the apartment was in spite and spangorder but Cherry herself had never been less presentable. She had given the apartment a thorough cleaning, shaken the rugs, swept and dusted and washed the windows. It had all taken longer than she had expected.

Cherry opened the table and spread out the cloth. Usually she took pains to make the table attractive but tonight dishes and silver were carelessly thrown on.

She was back in the kitchen sifting the stew made from last night's beef round when Dan's key sounded in the lock. Cherry did not turn but called, "That you, Dan?"

"She heard him toss down his coat and his newspaper. A minute later and he stood in the doorway. "Great Scott!" Dan exclaimed, "what have you been doing to yourself?"

Cherry looked up in surprise. "Why—I—I guess I forgot to take the towel off my head." I've been cleaning house. Everything's done except the bedroom window. Will you wash it for me Dan while I finish getting dinner on the table?"

The young man frowned. "Can't it wait until tomorrow?"

"I promised myself I'd have this work done tonight. If you don't want to do it, I'll do it myself. I'll do it after supper. I didn't think you'd mind doing that little bit. I've scrubbed and slaved until I am literally dead—!"

It was unusual for Cherry to complain—but tonight she was really tired. She had tried to crowd too much work into a single day and every muscle in her body seemed to protest.

"Oh—all right!" Dan crumbled. "I'll do it."

He rolled up his sleeves and Cherry pinned on apron almost limp. She gave him the cleaning powder, a basin of water and clean dusters. Dan disappeared, and Cherry went on with preparations for the meal.

SHE mixed the salad and poured the stew into a serving bowl. Dan didn't like stew but tonight he would have to eat it. Everything was ready except the pie. Cherry glanced into the oven, turned the flame higher.

"Have you finished yet, Dan?" she asked.

He was rubbing the window pane industriously. Cherry stepped forward. "Up there," she pointed. "There's a streak that isn't clean."

Dan's exclamation was smooth. "Why don't you let me come to come and end do this for you?" he demanded. "Don't you think I've done a day's work at the office?"

"I guess you know why I don't hire anyone to help me! It's because I haven't money to pay them."

"And that's because I don't make enough! Is that it? You might as well say it. That's what you're thinking, isn't you?"

"Oh, Dan, how can you accuse me of such things? Do I ever complain about money? Don't I do everything in the world to save? I've worked all day—"

"Worked? What do you think I've been doing? If you really had to do a day's work once in a while, maybe you'd know how it feels to be tired!"

Cherry stared at Dan. Cherry's eyes flashed. Cherry's lips trembled but she was determined Dan should not see them. She could not trust herself to speak.

They had never quarreled so fiercely. There was nothing over which they were disagreeing now. Both were tired and both were suffering from "nerves." Oh, word from either of them just then could have set everything right but neither of them was in the mood for it.

Dan finished polishing the window pane and stepped back. "There," he said grudgingly. "Does that suit you?"

The girl did not reply. The odor of something burning had reached her nostrils. The pie in the oven! Cherry ran to the kitchen and pulled the oven door open. Thick smoke rolled out. Cherry reached for a holder but found none. She ran to the pantry, snatched a towel—and lifted out the pie.

The hot, sugary liquid bubbled over the edge of the crust and burned her hand. Cherry cried out in pain. She dropped the pie on the shelf and held her hand under running water from the tap.

The pie was ruined. The blaze beneath the oven must have been higher than she had thought. The top crust, instead of being a gold brown, was charred almost black. The odor of burning apple juice was offensive.

Dan stood in the doorway and watching her. "Well," he said. "I guess we don't have pie for dinner." He moved to the window and raised the sash.

Cold air swept into the room. It chilled the food that had been placed in the serving dishes. Cherry and Dan shivered but there could be no thought of going ahead with the meal until the smoke was gone. In five minutes the atmosphere cleared.

Cherry disappeared into the dressing room and returned with tell-tale red lines about her eyes. She and Dan sat down at the table and the meal began. Cherry, if she had been her own vivacious self, would have looked attractive in spite of her soiled, torn frock. She could have laughed and Dan would not have noticed the grimy costume. She could have look "attractive" now. Tears had smudged the black marks on her face. Her lips pressed in a hard, tight line to keep from trembling.

DAN spoke once or twice as though trying to make overtures at friendliness but they were not accepted. Cherry answers were polite. Too polite. There was a long interval of silence in which the girl was aware that the meal was hopeless. The stew was cold and the salad contained too much salt. She had counted on the pie to retrieve a meal of left-overs. Cherry was so miserable she would not have noticed what she was eating. It had not been for Dan.

"Look here, Cherry," he said, "I'm sorry for those hateful things he had said! Why didn't he cover her hand with his own and say, 'Forgive me, Cherry. I was a fool.' Because I've had a hard day. Forgive me, darling!" Why didn't he say that? Why didn't he ask her to forget those cruel words?

Dan Phillips did none of these things. He ate little of the food. The meal was over almost as soon as it had begun. While Cherry gathered up the dishes Dan sat barricaded behind his newspaper. Cherry felt that he had decided she could stand the silence no longer, that she must speak when Dan got his leg out.

Cherry could not face a quarrel. She said slowly:

"I'm sorry, Dan. Interrupted. I've made other plans."

Anger she could not control flashed in the girl's voice. "It's strange," she said, "but whenever I try to do something it seems we always have other plans! We never go out together any more. You haven't taken me anywhere for a long, long time. Other people—"

"I know!" Dan assured her bitterly. "All you do is stay home and obey. I'm not like the rest of them. I don't do it for you. I'm from having a worthless, good-for-nothing husband. I'm very sorry I'm not more entertaining. I'm role as the worthless husband. I'll have to remind you that I've made other plans for the evening."

He picked up his hat and coat. "Where are you going, Dan?"

He stood with one hand on the doorknob. Dan paused long enough to say his ofo word. "Out!" then disappeared.

Cherry sank into the big chair. The tears had fought back for so long came unchecked. "He's gone!" she sobbed. "He's gone without me! Oh, what will I do? What will I do?"

There was only Pinky the kitten to console her and Pinky was engaged in tearing up a paper sack.

DAN PHILLIPS strode to the window. He stood looking out at the darkness, hands clasped behind his back.

There was a single light in the large room. It came from a lamp near the davenport and it glowed softly beneath the parchment tinted shade. From the shadows across the room a low voice came.

"But you're restless! Brenda Vail said, "is anything wrong, Dan?"

Phillips turned. "There's nothing wrong," he said. "Nothing at all. But, Brenda, I can't come here any more. I've got to stop seeing you."

"You silly boy! What on earth are you talking about?"

The young man moved forward and that face was illuminated by the circle of light. The lines of hollow cheeks were drawn tightly. He was an alabaster of misery. "Don't you know, Brenda, I love you? Don't you know what I mean, Brenda? You know things can't go on as they have been."

"But, Dan, don't mean that!" Brenda Vail had risen. She was dressed in black velvet and out of the shadows her face looked very white. Her eyes had a hurt, reproachful look in them. "Nothing at all. But, Brenda, I can't come here any more. I've got to stop seeing you."

"I haven't the right!" Phillips protested huskily. "I have no right to keep you from your friends. Things can't go on this way. I tell you; I can't stand it!"

The woman's voice dropped to a low whisper. "I know, Dan. Prepared. It's been hard for me, too. Oh, Dan—"

She was in his arms then and Phillips was kissing her over and over.

STOCKS ADVANCE AS BUYING GAINS

NEW YORK, July 12 (UP) — Prospect of early adjournment of congress provided stimulus for a sharp advance on the stock market today. Prices were carried up from five points to more than 2 points with best levels quoted near the close.

After a brief early decline, the day was marked by absence of liquidation and return of investment and speculative buying on a slightly increased volume of transactions.

Rail stocks joined in the movement. Utilities were dragged down by the general market weakness but the list was in more of trading mood than in the day's session.

J. I. Case had a sharp rise on the farm equipment stir. Hitching used production to boost the price of farm products and the preferred to crack a new respective dividend by levels of 22½ to 37½.

GOVERNOR SEEKS LOWER GAS PRICE

Mentions Agitation In Idaho For Operation of State-Owned Stations

BOISE, Governor Ross has taken up the matter of reduced gasoline prices with the major oil companies in Idaho and has requested of them the following telegram:

"In some places here for some time here higher than surrounding states and in addition to the recent tax of 1 cent put into effect June 21 gasoline prices advanced 1½ cents on June 27, making the retail price in Idaho 20½ cents.

"We are primarily an agricultural state and it is out of all proportion to require our farmers to exchange two pounds of butter or three dozen eggs for a gallon of gasoline.

"There is agitation in Idaho for the establishment of state-owned service stations to bring down the price that people feel they are entitled to since the reason for the last advance. Our action will be based on the nature of your reply."

$90,000 a Year—Whether Famous Screen Actress Works or Plays

Colleen Moore Not Worried Over Parts

By DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

HOLLYWOOD—In a large white house in Bel-Air, most exclusive Hollywood residential section, is a little girl who spends most of her time playing tennis and swimming and her spare moments wondering what she is going to do to earn $90,000 during the coming year.

That little girl is Colleen Moore, proud possessor of a new long term film contract which guarantees her $90,000 for the next 12 months, regardless of how many pictures she makes.

Of course, it isn't quite correct to refer to Colleen as a little girl. Already she has been married twice and has been one of the biggest stars in motion picture history.

But when you see her playing in her back yard, where both the tennis court and swimming pool are located, you get that little girl impression. She gets too much kick out of these pastimes for any grownup screen star.

"I'm a changed woman," she told me as she splashed around in the pool lately. "Before I married Al — Al Scott, wealthy young New Yorker, is her present husband — I was a regular hothouse flower. Outdoor pleasures didn't appeal to me at all. Now I'm a tomboy. I can flip-flap back and ride in an open car with the top down in a blizzard. I'm happy, too—happier than I ever thought I could be. I believe in marriage. I'm a firm believer in it. I certainly am in favor of second marriages. Al makes a game out of everything. He let nothing worry him and assumes all the responsibilities for both of us so I have nothing left to worry about. It's great."

Two years ago, Colleen made her last picture. And while she's anxious to get back into the racket again, she isn't letting her return worry her. A few weeks ago she signed a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer calling for a very sizable salary—$90,000 for the first year, and in ascending amounts each succeeding year. Consequently her return now is in the hands of MGM officials and she's going to let them do whatever worrying is done. Of course, there's a reservation. She doesn't have to do any story also.

Colleen Moore, above, is greeted by the gateman as she returns to the studio after an absence of more than five years.

Meanwhile she is having lots of fun playing tennis, swimming and acquiring a tan which rapidly is beginning to rival the present coloring of Joan Crawford, Billie Dove and Evelyn Brent.
