WIDE EXTENSION OF PREFERENTIAL TARIFF PROPOSED

Prime Minister Bennett Of Canada Opens Empire Economic Meeting

HEAD OF BRITAIN'S DELEGATION SPEAKS

Industries Developed Under Country's System, Leader Declares

By CHARLES McLANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

OTTAWA, Ont., (UP) — Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of Canada opened the British Empire economic conference off to a business start today when he proposed at the outset a system with extension of the Empire preferential tariff system.

Bennett spoke in the House of Commons chamber, an official host to the 275 delegates. Instead of his usual formal speech of welcome he outlined what Canada has to offer in other Empire units and what she expects in return.

Ready to Grant Extension

Stanley Baldwin, head of the British delegation, followed Bennett and announced that Britain, with her tariff system was prepared to grant "wide extension" of tariff preference to the dominions.

Bennett urged a "generous preential tariff, which was offered unsuccessfully at London in 1903," Bennett said.

"We will propose that the United Kingdom shall extend the principle of her present tariff preference to natural products. And our part, we are prepared to make the necessary adjustments in our tariffs to secure the advantage which we believe will come from this arrangement."

Canadian industries which have become fledgelings under the country's tariff system, Bennett said, must be prepared to compete with Britain.

Hundreds of L. A. Police To Guard Olympic Visitors

LOS ANGELES (UP) — Dignitaries who attend the Olympic games and officials of the international sports events will be given protection by twenty-seven men in the Los Angeles police department.

The tens of thousands of visitors will be guarded against pickpockets, bunko artists and other criminals by a picked detail of 75 detectives, cooperating with uniformed officers.

700 Officers On Duty

All members of the police department will work 12-hour shifts during the games, making it possible to have 700 men constantly on duty.

The special squad of Olympic detectives will be in addition to the regular detective squads. All are picked men.

In addition to secret service agents, visiting dignitaries and officials will have a picked group of plain-clothes men who will act as bodyguards.

Speak Foreign Languages

These men have been chosen for experience, personalities, courtesy and personalities and ability to speak foreign languages. Many of them are fluent in German, French, Italian and Spanish. They will be assigned to prominent visitors according to the language spoken.

Athletes and others will be aided by nearly 100 officers of the traffic division, to act as escorts where speed is necessary.

With hundreds of thousands of visitors added to the city's population, most of them heading for automobiles, toward Olympic events, the police face a stagger-ing traffic problem.

AUTHORITIES HUNT UTAH KIDNAPERS

Clearfield Cashier Returns To Home; Wyoming Officers Conduct Search

CLEARFIELD, Utah, (UP) — Henry Brauer, drugged and finally left for dead by his two kidnapers near Tremonton, was Walter Steed, bank cashier of the Clearfield state bank was back home today.

Authorities in Wyoming and Utah were prosecuting a search throughout the western part of the state for the two men who subjected the banker to hours of torture before they finally left him unconscious alongside a Wyoming roadside.

Steed had been missing 36 hours. He returned yesterday.

On Tuesday, the bank cashier picked up two individuals near Layton, Utah. They say he continued to the car and said very near him when he refused to answer questions regarding his financial affairs. They desired to hold him for ransom, he said.

The beatings continued as the kidnapers proceeded eastward into Wyoming. Finally they compelled him to swallow two pills—apparently sleeping powder—and the banker lost consciousness.

Steed regained consciousness to find himself near Evanston. The kidnapers had abandoned his car. It was recovered by Wyoming officers.

The two men took only five dollars in cash from Steed's person.

Youthful Candidate Leading Veteran in Montana Primaries

HELENA, Mont., (UP) — With only a handful rural precincts yet to be heard from, Joseph P. Monaghan, 27, today was leading veteran Congressman John M. Evans in the Democratic nomination for the first district of Montana.

Indications are that the race will be unusually close, and that final determination of the nominee may rest upon the report of the state canvassing board a few weeks hence.

Two years ago the young attorney was defeated for the nomination by 206 votes.

In the second Congressional district Judge Roy E. Ayers of Lewistown seemed certain of the Democratic nomination, having a sustained lead over James O'Connor of Lithoston of more than 6000 votes.

The Republican candidates in each district was unopposed.

GERMANS ATTACK RED ORGANIZATION

Headquarters of Communist Party Raided For Urging Strike

By FREDERICK KUH
United Press Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, (UP)—The Von Papen "Junkers" government, having seized control of Prussia, establishing a military dictatorship and ruthlessly suppressing the Socialists, turned a heavy demand on the Communists today.

The latter, practicing suppression began to form an underground organization. It appeared the government would be confronted with stiff opposition, entirely leaving the military, money and landed interests and Hitler's Fascists in supreme control.

The Communists tried futilely to promote a general strike and their headquarters were promptly raided, which prevented publication of their newspaper. Rote Fahne. Ninety were arrested for distributing Communist leaflets urging the strike.

Cow Averages 97 Pounds of Milk Daily For Year

MINNEAPOLIS, (UP)—A cow that produced 35,635 pounds of milk in one year at an average of 97 pounds a day was discovered when the record of Lady Pride of the Leuwkes was made known yesterday.

In 365 days Lady Pride produced 35,635 pounds of milk, an average daily of 97.5 pounds, or milk or approximately 40 quarts. The animal produced sufficient milk in one day to furnish 1000 pint a day to 100 children.

Lady pride is owned by F. E. Murphy, publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune, and the record was made at Fremont farms under supervision of the Minnesota college of agriculture.

Vets Ordered to Abandon Camp; Leaders Quarrel

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Superintendent of Police Pelham D. Glassford, today began what is expected to develop into a systematic movement to bring evacuation of Washington by the bonus army. As the first step he ordered that Camp Glassford, a hastily occupied series of buildings and lots between Pennsylvania and Missouri avenues be abandoned within three days by the veterans quartered there, estimated at 1,500 men.

He directed precinct captains to remove in 24 hours unlicensed venders of flowers, soft drinks and other articles which veterans have been selling to image their camp.

Demonstrations Barred

He also requested that the police make all demonstrations by men in the army through the patrol system instead of the department's control of its distribution. He reiterated that no demonstrations against the White House would be permitted.

Glassford, in serving notice to evacuate the camp named after him, acted upon a "Commander Walter" who was the remaining army chieftain, abandoning the camp to take advantage of the government's offer of transportation home. Glassford accepted he said, the number of men.

Leaders Fight

While Glassford was making these moves to get the bonus army out of Washington, Waters and Walter Tomlinson, commander of the dissenting continuation of the army, were embroiled on the question of food. Waters charged Walter with giving Mrs. Roosevelt's food allotment to Robertsons men. Robertson announced that if 300 men were fed by $230 (U. M.) he would turn them on the streets to beg.

MA' HUDSON TO SUE FOR $100,000

Aimee's Mother Outraged By Statement Attributed To Cigar Clerk Husband

LOS ANGELES, (UP) — Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy Hudson, who (even bought hair tonic for the bald spot on her "Mac") today said she will sue Indiana newspaper for $100,000.

Marion P. Berry, her attorney, formerly Idaho resident, announced that papers in the suit, charging defamation of character, would be filed in superior court today.

"What A-Man," say Cigar Clerk Berry, referring to Hudson, of Terre Haute, Ind., "Mac" he when he was quoted as saying she had a "nervous breakdown."

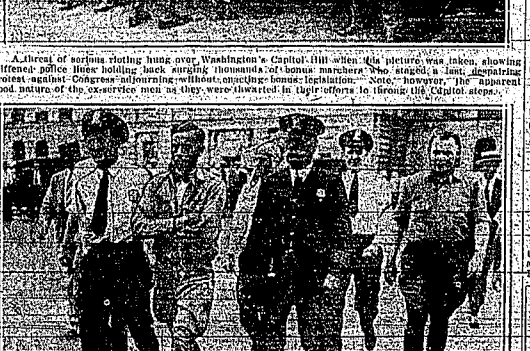
"After all I have done for him too," said "Ma." "The terrible things—oh, the terrible things he has said about me. And I even bought him hair tonic for his bald spot. I had to purchase his razor blades, and tooth paste, too! This talk is just a smoke-screen of publicity to hide his own deficiencies.

"As for the idea of me having another sweetie—a Salvation Army capitale from Buffalo—how absurd!"

Betty said the suit will ask $50,000 in compensatory damages and $50,000 punitive damages for the statements credited to Hudson in newspapers.

Meanwhile, Hudson continued work as a clerk and pool table attendant in a Boulder City recreation parlor. He finally had a job, luck of which, according to "Ma," was the main reason for their separation and her subsequent action for divorce.

Action on Front Line—As B. E. F. "Stormed" Capitol



A threat of serious rioting hung over Washington's Capitol Hill when this picture was taken, showing stiffened police lines holding back surging thousands of bonus marchers who staged a last desperate protest against Congress adjourning without enacting bonus legislation. Note, however, the apparent good nature of the ex-service men as they were thwarted in their efforts to throng the Capitol steps.

Texan May Reply To Bitter Remark By Vice President

SPENCER (Ia.), (UP) — An invitation was extended today to John Nance Garner, some to Spencer and address the Democratic presidential candidate on the occasion of his 64th birthday anniversary.

The invitation was extended to A. J. Lacey, one current legislator whom Garner is said to be affected.

Farmer's Help

It was while Garner was working the farm of Lacey, as an adolescent farm relief worker, an incident in the Civil conflict, in 1864 that the now famous remark was made. Garner, then a boy, was ordered to Speaker of the House Lacey of Uvalde, Texas, to round farmers up and accompany the men across that state to the Confederate army. Garner said he would like to hear Garner's reply.

Democrats tried to profit by the phrase during the last campaign and Livingston's letter apparently meant they intended to use it again during the forthcoming presidential contest.

May Accept

Lou C. Bailey, secretary of the Comm. Fair association, said he had received word from Garner by Farley, thomas at a campaign man meet that the Texan may be expected to Garner.

Great Carlisle Athlete At 45 Voices Desire to Win Back Olympic Fame

Jim Thorpe To Watch Contests With Misty Eye

WRITES HISTORY

By George H. Beale
United Press Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES (UP) -- Jim Thorpe, generally recognized as one of the greatest athletes the world has known, will be looking on with a misty eye when the 1932 Olympic games are run off July 30 to August 14.

He thinks the celebration of the 10th Olympiad will be the best in history and he'd like to be out on the field himself. He'd especially like to be the Thorpe of old and try his luck against the modern decathlon and pentathlon men.

All the applause the great Indian athlete won as the best of all football players and in other lines of sport he would trade for just another such another day as the one climaxing the 1912 Olympic games in Stockholm.

"Greatest Athlete In the World" -- "That's my fondest memory," he said, speaking of the time when the King of Sweden presented him awards for winning both the decathlon and pentathlon titles, a feat that never has been duplicated.

"The Kid" told me I was the greatest athlete in the world," Thorpe recounted. "It was a beautiful day. There was a lot of sunshine and there were thousands and thousands of people in the stadium. You know, I think I believed that the King said about me."

Thorpe later lost his awards and his records, when, after the games were over, he was declared a professional because he accepted money for playing baseball after he left Carlisle Indian Institute and before the Olympics started.

"I was just a kid," he explained his professionalism, "and I didn't know any better."

One More Chance

"But I'd like my medals back. I'm not supposed to be a loser. I'd have another chance. I'd like to be in the coming games. They'll be the biggest ever. The crowds will be larger and more records will fall than at any other Olympics.

"Coaching and training is improving and it helps the athletes. I'd like to have my 1912 ability and the benefit of modern training and coaching and I'd bet I'd hang up some records for the boys to shoot at."

Thorpe, at 45, still healthy, husky, devotes himself now to work in motion pictures and writing an occasional book. He hopes the sale of his latest book "Jim Thorpe's History of the Olympic Games" will profit under his name and the publicity of the product games.

"Well, I'll see you all at the games," he said as he left. "I'd like to be out there fighting. I bet I could win back my awards."

BROWNS LOSE 13 GAMES IN EAST

Missouri Team Faces Twelfth Straight Defeat In 18 Contests

NEW YORK (UP) — The St. Louis Browns, who came roaring into the east two weeks ago to make a belated bid for the American league pennant, will leave Philadelphia tonight for Missouri, a disheartened, bedraggled team.

If they lose to the Athletics today, they will be slapped with their 12th straight defeat and their 13th loss in 18 games played during their futile eastern invasion.

The Athletics beat the Browns yesterday, 8 to 5, as Lefty Grove registered his 14th victory of the season. Mickey Cochrane homered.

The Yanks made a clean sweep of their five-game series with the Chicago White Sox by winning, 7 to 2.

Washington defeated the Detroit Tigers, 4 to 1. Boston's Red Sox registered their 67th defeat in 85 starts by losing to the Cleveland Indians, 8 to 1.

In the National league the St. Louis Cardinals again replaced Brooklyn in fifth position by overwhelming the Dodgers, 16 to 5.

Chuck Klein made two home runs as his Phillies beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 2. Carl Hubbell turled in his fourth straight win for New York, giving the Giants a 9-to-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs.

The Boston-Cincinnati game was played in a double header, July 17.

Yesterday's Heros

Chuck Klein, who contributed two home runs to the Phillies victory.

38 Girls in Training For Olympic Games

By Ronald Wagoner
United Press Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES (UP) -- Determined to prove that the ancient Greeks made a great mistake when they not only barred women from participation in the early Olympiads, but barred them as spectators, 38 girls are in rigid training here for the 1932 games.

They are the vanguard of 250 women who will participate in the games. While the men are quartered in Olympic village, the women have accommodations at Chapman Park hotel in a section location near athletic field, swimming pools and gymnasiums.

One of these new Amazons is Stella Walsh. After skipping back and forth in registering allegiance to Uncle Sam and Poland, she will participate in the discus event, long jump and 100-meters dash, for the latter—unless she is disqualified. There is some question of her status since she obtained a job with the Polish consulate.

Although they speak different languages and their national costumes vary, the chaperones declare the Chapman House is just as happy, and far more peaceful, than the average college sorority house.

The Japanese girls dress in their native customs and are much in demand as teach girls of other lands the intricate twirling of a fan.

Mlle Yvonne Godard, 24-year old French manicurist considered one of the most beautiful participants, Johanna De Beer, Dutch fencing champion, got her start in a trip through the Hollywood film studios.

Blonde Inge Sörquist, another ranking beauty, is Sweden's only feminine entrant. She would enjoy a look at Greta Garbo, famous Swedish film actress, but accused quite unperturbed by the fact that the mysterious Garbo never sees anyone.

"Responsibility seems to bear heavily over Willa Van Gruden, Holland's shoulder. Wyckoff, old entry in the 100-meter breast stroke swim:

Legion Seeks To Make Boat Races Annual Activity

HAZELTON, (Special) — An innovation in the way of sports for Hazelton and surrounding towns was the Wilson Lake boat races Sunday afternoon under the auspices of Hazelton Post No. 25, American Legion.

Never has an entertainment been more carefully planned and successfully carried out than this, and least people went home happy in the thought that Wilson Lake had at last served a purpose other than utility.

Fully 600 attended the races and an actual count of cars showed 215. E. J. Hitchcock had an able corps of assistants and it was recklessness that courtesy was extended from the grounds patrol and other committees to all guests.

If plans by the American Legion are carried out, Wilson Lake will be the scene of boat races annually and the members plans, with the aid of the city council and civic organizations to build a park at the waters edge.

GOLF By ART KRENZ

Many times when the ball is lying well in the fairway and nearing the green the golfer chooses a stroke to the one to use, hitting the ball squarely. But when the lie is close, or a controlled shot with a wedge is desired, the stroke should approach more nearly that of the iron.

A common mistake of the duffer when using the wood club through the fairway is an attempt to lift the ball by directing the blow upward. Remember what has been said about iron play — to get the ball up, hit down on the shot. This also applies to the wood when the lie is close.

The loft of the club, plus the backspin imparted to the ball by the downward blow, plus speed will give the ball its rise.

Of course the stroke should not be as abrupt as that used in playing a mashie or mashie-niblick. The mashie and mashie-niblick shot only strips the grass from the rod, beginning at a point slightly ahead of the ball.

Ahern Describes Monument Valley

BY GENE AHERN.

"I wish that I could impress on the readers of these little travel trips, just how grand and inspiring a sight Monument valley is to one who gets his first glimpse of it as one comes into it from the north. You can see those pinnacles and turrets for a distance of 50 miles or more. To one not expecting a sight as this, it must be as though you were in a dream. It is so different than anything I have ever seen.

"I am going to use the description that my friend Mr. Hofman Birney gave of this valley in his book, 'Roads to Roam.' He tells of the grandeur of it better than any of the Harvey Boosters have in their folders for the Santa Fe. It is. He says in part:

"In the main, however, the road is merely a way through less rough than the sandy desolation of salt weed, turpentine brush, and stunted sage that lies on either side. A dirty running rim lost to one who has defined to love the desert best of all the visible forms. It is a trip that is simply marvelously beautiful.

"Three hundred miles that road leads, that for grandeur of coloring, for unusual, and distorted stratification, and spectacularly wierd erosions can nowhere be surpassed. The famous Garden of the Gods; that much-advertised 'spot' could be dropped in one corner of Monument Valley and lost; lost for all time among the infinitely grander and more wonderful of erosion and stone that has given the valley its name.

Water-Carved Towers

"Through that sand there rears a thousand mighty towers and buttes and pinnacles of water-carved, wind-polished stone, hundred of feet high, more slender than cathedral spires, defying every law of gravity, and resistless to the mechanics of material. Some as chastely severe as Washington Monument, like unto the Cathedral of Milan, and the Gothic-styled Cathedral of Notre Dame.

"Monument Valley, a valley of monuments to the capabilities of Nature when she is in a mood of whimsy."

These are a few lines Mr. Birney used in telling of his visit in the valley for those who are interested in travel like myself I wish you would get his book at your library and read it. It is the best of its kind I know of, for it takes you away from the beaten path of the other writers of our scenic west.

We passed through this sand-covered valley of sundown, and you can imagine the feeling that came over us as we drove and tried to see all that we could with the road corkscrewing in and around the sand and the sand that had blown into the trail. What a sight, away down there away from the crowded highways and humanity. As long as I live I never will forget this day in Southern Utah and Northern Arizona. And this is the country we are going back unto to on our next trip. We will make our drives from Kayenta, where we were entertained by the Wetherills and Mr. Gorman and when I say entertained, that is just what we were. They own the "guest ranch" at Kayenta, the last outpost of civilization. This homey feeling that "was recorded us that evening will long be remembered. One of the oldest and closely guarded fireplaces was the "Guest Book", we register. Folks I wish you could see some of the names in that book. People that have visited this ranch and packed out into the desert and to the isolated the drawings that were in the book, etchings, verses, etc. Mrs. Wetherill told us she valued the book more than anything on the place.

Such people as, Swinerton, Hurrian, (King Kat Cartoons) and many other cartoonists besides the artist that go into the southwest for copy, have made this ranch the most well known of all. I would like to have some of the drawings and would have them framed, believe me, some of these etchings were masterpieces.

After a delightful night here we started again into the sand for another two miles heading for Cameron, the crossing over the Colorado river and west to the Grand Canyon. The road from here out wasn't so hard to follow but you still had to fight the overflowing sand. We drove down through a valley studded with short trees and brush across here's gulies, washed out by "what I don't know" for there never seemed to be any water high enough to wash a shirt in.

We stopped at Cow Springs and Mr. and Mrs. Lake Smith who showed us a nice collection of Indian bracelets and belts that were in "Hock" after eight years of "prosperity and home brew" by the present party in power at Washington. Smith told us that all the trading post owners were going to try and get a loan on these things from the government, as they just started the Indians to what they had to have to maintain the spark of life, in their dark colored frame. If there isn't something done about the present situation, we will all have to wear our belts and go naked like the "noble red man." Americans while the "foreign bootlegger" and "political grafters" wear diamonds.

To Rainbow Bridge

At Cow Springs the road turns north to go to Rainbow Bridge, where the price is $25 a day for wine to the Indian Navajo mountains and Navajos accompany. This includes pack horses, etc. Cow Springs and Red lake are the only places to obtain gas again for a hundred miles.

Red lake. What a road out of this place! Right straight up a hill and what luck, we certainly did have it here. We couldn't see the track through the sand at this place until we got over the top, but we hit it right, gave the little "chev." the gun, and over we went, right up the hill to the top. Priceless, I hope you will get the idea, that we were in good for the last two days, I believe I mentioned it. We were still alive.

We stopped at Tuba City, an Indian school located here. This is the first town out of Grand Canyon country you hit on the road east as we were making for the 'south trip of the Grand Canyon for the night. We didn't stop at Tuba City, but there is quite a bit to see here. It lies not far from the Colorado river. I mean the Little Colorado. West of here a few miles is the junction of the highway coming down from Flagstaff and Lees Ferry.

Will me try and describe any of our stay in the Canyon to a friend many of you have seen it, so should. We stayed there two days and nights, and I would like to tell all about it. The author was very wonderful. On our way back we made a few notes at Lees Ferry, comparing it with our canyon back home, but we have a concern of our own up here. But folks don't think we have the edge on canyons by any means, and nothing else but them in southern Utah. We stopped at Bryce, and Cedar Breaks, but we were getting tired of roads and sights, so we just headed the little car for the home port and was glad to get back, running in to snow-storm after all this trip right at our own door.

I hope some of you have enjoyed these little trips with us, and if you are interested in seeing any of the views we have, come in and look them over and also our pottery. But what I would like to have all people that is go into this country, is go to the library and get this book 'Roads to Roam', by Mr. Birney, and you will doubly enjoy your trip as you will know what to look for.

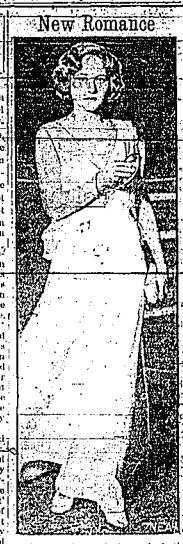
New Romance



High society circles of both coasts were stirred by news that Adolph M. Spreckels of San Francisco, youthful heir to the Spreckels sugar millions, and Mrs. Lois Dunham, daughter of the late Cyrus Dunham, New York divorcee, above, signed a marriage license application at San Francisco. Mrs. Dunham was divorced in Reno a few weeks ago. Both Spreckels and Mrs. De Ruyter are 21.

The Whole Trend is toward a Milder Cigarette

Do you remember the days when you first started to smoke?

ALL CIGARETTES tasted somewhat alike to you, but after a while you noticed that some cigarettes were decidedly stronger than others . . . Remember?

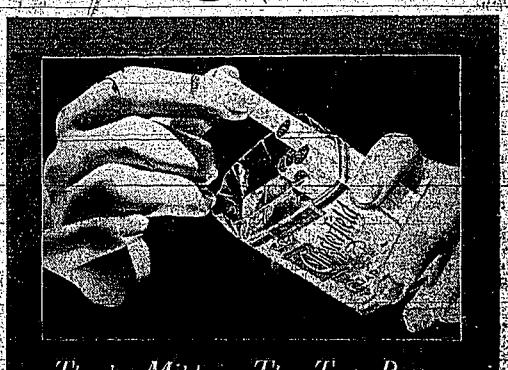
As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. There is no argument about that. Their mildness is a feature as distinctive as their package or their trade mark.

Their tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still.

Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—but not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

In this nerve-racking time, smokers—men and women—are showing a decided preference for milder cigarettes.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."



They're Milder—They Taste Better

A HUNDRED YEARS

Twin Falls community takes reflected pride and pleasure in the arrival of the one hundred and fourth milestone in the long life of Horace Hart.

When one has reached this almost incredible age and still enjoys health and well-being, he is worthy of special honor and congratulation. Such is the record of this veneraable veteran to whom the community pays reverence. Man's alloted span is four score years and ten; his average age half that, a figure which is constantly increasing, due apparently, to the advances made in hygiene, medicine, surgery, physical culture, temperance, health treatment, exercise, recreation and safety factors.

Maybe one day the hundred-year span of life will not be so remarkable as it now is. Such a period is to be hoped for and sought for. That it is attainable is unquestionable. Animals ordinarily live five times as long as is required to reach maturity. Thus the elephant, which matures at 20, lives an average life of one hundred years. Man matures at twenty, and he too, should live a century.

Elbert Hubbard, the sage of East Aurora, used to say that every man should live to be a hundred; that sickness and disease are akin to criminality, resulting only from the violation of Nature's Laws; that there were only two honorable ways to die: either from ripe old age, or by accident beyond one's power to control. It is significant that Hubbard's father, died at 96 of senility; while Elbert Hubbard and Mrs. Hubbard went down on the Titanic.

There are many who read about Mr. Hart who will envy his longevity. He is an example of what is possible in this world, and has demonstrated that a century of living and breathing is within reach of the most humble. How rich must be his memories and what satisfaction must be his in the self-mastery which certainly must be the first requisite to guiding one's life-ship through the storms and vicissitudes of a hundred years or more.

To those who do not yet realize the meaning of long life; who do not know how infinitely valuable and precious are man's few allotted years on earth, let him ponder well these words of the sage:

Young man, dost thou love life?
Then do not squander Time, for Time's the stuff Life's made of.

Ponder them well, for one is without assurance that he shall have a hundred years to spend among men, as has been the remarkable privilege of Horace Hart, Twin Falls' Grand Old Man.

TOURIST "TRADE"

As Idahoans complain about the coolness of the summer, literally hundreds are actually dying of prostration in the middlewest and east.

No one can sympathize with the residents of those sections, who has not lived there and endured the warm days, the hot nights, the breathless air and the danger of sun-stroke.

Among the many other things Idahoans have to be thankful for is an equitable climate, sleepful nights, cool mountains, and a control over the water to feed crops.

As more and more persons visit this section, as they are doing each year, the more will be their longing to live in the higher altitudes and enjoy the open spaces of the West.

That is why every encouragement should be given tourist travel to this section. People learn the good points of a country through auto travel, much better than by train. In motor vehicles roadsides and farms may be visited, towns seen from in front as well as behind and there are a myriad other advantages not possible when trains with their night as well as day travel are resorted to.

Those who really love their town and community and want to see it prosper and grow and develop, will give heed to the fact that each tourist car bears at least one potential new resident, investor, customer friend.

Idaho has room for many more people. When normal conditions once more prevail, not only will the number of tourists increase, but the number of home-seeking tourists will increase.

And in addition to the courtesy owed visitors in our land, regardless of whether they are ever coming back or not, the money they leave while passing through, especially in normal years, is greater than most persons realize. If you ever wonder why so many tourist parks survive, and why there are so many service stations, you may chalk some of them up to tourists.

This new business has come to such sections as this gradually, over a period of years, as highways have been improved and as more travelers have been routed through southern Idaho.

With Twin Falls the junction of Highways 32 (Oregon Trail) and 91 (Sawtooth) it stands in a strategic position to continue to capitalize on the tourist business in more ways then one.

Headquarters of the A. A. A. for the territory between Boise and Pocatello, this great organization is playing no small part in holding the tourist travel to the most desireable routes, and under this arrangement Idaho cannot help but benefit.

Be kind and considerate and appreciative to the tourist. He may be your benefactor better than you know.

ME AND MY HOSS

I traded my hoss for the mountain trail
I'm the grumpiest old cuss
Now my eyes are dim and my step is slow, and I live in the days of yore;
And my thoughts drift back o'er the wayward track of which the birds have sung,
And I dream of the days when the west was new and me, and my hoss was young.

Two Wives Seek Divorce; Cruelty Charged By Both

Two suits for divorce were filed in district court Thursday, both for separation of marital ties contracted in 1921.

Louise Price charges A. L. Price with infidelity and cruelty since their marriage at Longmont, Colo., February 15, 1921. There are two minor children, ages 8 and 10. She asks that the defendant be required to pay $20 a month for a year for the support of the children, and $2,000 attorney fees.

Ethel Larsen asks for divorce from Paul T. Larsen, alleging cruelty. The couple married, the complaint recites, at Twin Falls, December 21, 1921. There are no children, but they is listed considerable community property. She was induced to marry, Mrs. Larsen states in her complaint, on promises, among other things, of being given a deed to a 40 acre tract in Jerome county. She commenced suit in October 1931 but was induced to drop the action upon promises by the plaintiff to fulfill his original promises, the complaint states. It further says that when married she was the "judge of health" and now, because of having been struck by the defendant in "an affrayed altercation" she is "crippled." She asks $400 alimony and "$2,500 attorney's fees."

O. C. Hall is attorney in both the actions.

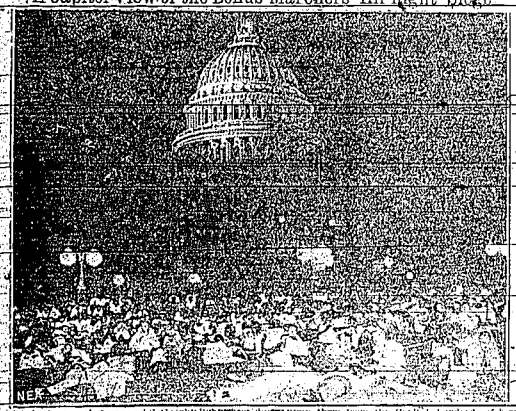
A Capitol View of the Bonus Marchers' All-night 'Siege'



Sprawling on the grass while bright lights beam down upon them from the Capitol, hundreds of bonus marchers—most of them members of the California delegation—conducted this impressive "all-night siege" before the nation's legislative building. Defying police orders against camping on the Capitol grounds, the veterans chose this means of bringing more forcibly to the attention of Congress their demands for immediate payment of the bonus.

THE PACIFIC REGION OF CANADA

A Holiday Land of Variety and Charm

NEW areas have been added to the Pacific section of the Dominion of Canada. The three great divisions—the mountain area, lake district and indented coast-line—have all the individual charm and beauty that has drawn visitors to distant lands. The mass of snow-capped peaks, protected coast-line, forested foothills and land-locked lakes assure a complete holiday for the vacationist in search of sport or recreation.

This area of Canada's Mount Robson Park region is on the crest of the Rocky Mountain range. It is a delightful combination of nature, as a variety of physical features are seldom found in other region can claim. Thousands of visitors return yearly, drawn by the irresistible appeal of Lake Louise, the Hanging Glaciers, Yoho Valley, Maligne Canyon, Mount Robson, and the splendors of the Columbia ice fields. The whole Pacific section is easy of access from the United States by rail or highway, or by comfortable steamer from Pacific coastal ports.

The National Development Bureau, Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada, has prepared for distribution a series of four maps showing the main highways of the United States and Canada, which will prove of service in planning a vacation tour. The district shown is covered by a "Pacific" sheet. The Bureau also issues a number of instructive booklets of interest to the tourist and sportsman. Both the maps and booklets are supplied free of charge. Applications should be as specific as possible as to the particular provinces and districts in which they are interested, in order that other useful information may be supplied.

In Wake of West Virginia Floods

The picture shows a country church undermined by Armstrong Creek in Fayette county. Relief organizations followed the receding waters in desperate attempts to save the lives of more than 1000 persons left without shelter, food or pure drinking water.

President Devoting Much Attention To Dry Law Statement

are using a flat-footed stand on the party platform. It is a difficult and ticklish political problem.

Many members of Congress, and those who aspire to congress, likewise are waiting upon the cyclone executive. Despite the wave of anti-prohibition sentiment which all but engulfed both party conventions, many Congressmen are doubtful of the wisdom of being opposed to any change in prohibition.

This applies mostly to the middle-of-the-road Republican stronghold, and to the Dem crats in the south.

If President Hoover would give the perplexed Republican Congressmen some "out" on the platform, their worries would be lessened.

Some Republicans will run on "dryness" during the party platform, because their districts are predominantly dry. But in some districts the tide of sentiment runs so close it is doubtful which way the majority lies.

Some Congressmen from doubtful districts do not know what to do. They are returning home to sound out sentiment. Meanwhile, they will keep very quiet on prohibition.

The sheriff said. "We have reason to be angry before and after the fight." Sheriff Jones said he had to go to county seat to get the men out of the jail because the threatened to burn the place down.

Governor Paul Dever ordered the guard out yesterday after the sheriff had asked for it. The union officials had protested against the use of the guard, saying it was formed of men who were hostile to the miners.

Dever said he had been informed that the sheriff was in danger from the miners, and was joined by the union officials in asking for the guard.

ton in the far southeast and the northwest.

The weather, unbalanced by the heat, caused a heavy mortality among livestock in Nebraska. Because the Platte river in that state is drying up, the state game commission is seining fish from water holes and transplanting them to lakes.

Guests at Nashville, Tenn., hotels are ordering two and three extra sheets. They soak the sheets in ice water and roll up in them.

Members in the Detroit zoo, made jealous by the heat, hit the hands of four children feeding them peanuts.

The Charleston, W. Va., official thermometer was taken down after the chamber of commerce challenged its accuracy in showing Charleston with a temperature of 105.

The midwest placed its hope for relief in showers predicted for tonight and tomorrow.

Typical high temperatures in the last 24 hours were: Inwood, Ia., 103; Wheeling island, W. Va., 102; Richmond, Va., 98, the highest of the season; Columbus, O., 105; Eau Claire, Wis., 102.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

By Laura Lee Brookman

(©1932 NEA SERVICE INC.)

—DISTRIBUTED TODAY BY NEA SERVICE, INC.—

CHERRY DIXON, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, marries DAN PRINGLE, newspaper reporter, after a quarrel with her parents. It is a Leap Year marriage and Cherry asks the proposing.

She and Dan move into a cheap apartment and Cherry's first struggle with housework, cooking and living again—DIXIE SHANNON, movie-crazy girl friend, visits them. Cherry's parents, handsome HAL and HANNA, she of the frown, who rules in make-believe land.

HANNA, a romantic writer, comes to Wellington and Dan tells about her. Cherry is interested in visiting a play, Dan begins to pout and she drops the idea. Later she sees the play herself. When Cherry accuses Dan of getting her for her money, he leaves the apartment and when he returns Cherry is gone.

A week passes in which he sees not her from him.

Dan gives up his job, preparing to go to New York with Brenda, he discovers a story he thinks he can publish in a magazine under Brenda's name. When, twice he tries to publish it, he gets two e-mails, she sold the story, Brenda refused to write for motion pictures and that she threw with him forever. Meanwhile Cherry are riding a man she believes represents the other man in her life, Max Pearson, who has permeated this book to shut up Brenda's true character. He is furious. Dan and Max meet together. Ashamed of his folly and thoroughly repentant, Dan sets out to find Cherry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVII

PEARSON repeated Dan's words.

"You've got to find her? Why—isn't Cherry at home?"

"I haven't seen her for a week," Phillips admitted. "Cherry and I had a row. Oh, it was my fault! My fault altogether! I've got to find her and tell her I know that now."

"But where is she?"

Dan did not answer. They had reached the intersection of two important thoroughfares fan as the traffic lights flashed red. There was a drug store on the opposite corner. Dan touched Pearson's arm.

"Let me out here," he said. "I've got to telephone to Cherry."

"But if you don't know where she is how can you do that?"

"I'm going to call her home—mean her parents' home. That's where she must be." Wonder got her if I can come out and talk to her. Don't you understand, Max? I've got to see Cherry! I've got to tell her a lot of things——"

"Listen, Dan—I'm sorry. All right, he said. "But make it snappy. I'll try to pick up a pack now all day, you know."

Dan disappeared into the drug store. It was several minutes before he emerged and when he did one look at his face was enough to tell Pearson the news had failed.

Pearson cried him expectantly. "Well?" he asked.

Dan ran into the roadster. "She isn't there," he said. "They haven't seen her or heard from her."

"Then where do you think she is?"

"I don't know! I thought all along—my God, Max, I've got to find her!"

"Isn't it rather late to begin thinking about that? —You said Cherry left Saturday. I must say, Dan——"

"Say it! Say anything you want yet I'll admit I deserve all you've been thinking about me. Tell me I've been a damned fool! I don't care what you say if you'll help me find her. She must be here in Wellington. She wouldn't go away——"

"Why not? How about her parents? Maybe she's with them."

Dan shook his head. "I don't think so," he said. "Cherry is proud. I don't think she'd go to her parents and—well, admit that she'd made a mistake. I thought she'd come back or at least send some word. When she didn't I decided she really meant what she said—about being through with me. I thought she wanted a divorce and I was going to give her a chance to get it. Lord, but I've been a fool, Max! I've—oh, if I could only find her. Talk to her! Maybe I could make her understand—maybe she'll give me another chance—!"

PEARSON interrupted. "Listen," he said. "I think Cherry's gone to her parents. You'd better try to get in touch with them. The truth is she telephoned me last Saturday. Told me things weren't going very well. That's the reason I planned that movie stunt and tried to get Brenda Vail out of town. I didn't want to see you and Cherry break up."

"Her father and mother are in North Carolina. Did she say she was going there?"

"No, she didn't say so. I just figured it out that way."

"What shall I do, Max?"

"Well, if I were you I'd send a wire. Do you know where to find her parents?"

"They're at some hotel. They've been there a month or more. —Wait a minute—I've got it!"

He named a hotel in the fashionable North Carolina resort.

"Why don't you wire the management? Ask the place? That would be less embarrassing, I imagine, than trying to get in touch with her parents. And if Cherry Phillips—ask it that way, sir, that's the daughter is with them. That's the best way. Can't tell how she might be registered."

"I'll do it! I'm—I'm—said. "Let's go to the office. I'll send the wire from there."

Forty minutes later in the city office of the Wellington News the Phillips issued with R. E. Carson in his hand. It was a terse report that Cherry Phillips was not with her parents.

Silently Dan handed the message to Pearson who read it and said, "Not there, huh?"

Pearson and Phillips were in a corner of the room, oblivious to the world. The day had dragged and only half a dozen of the night men were on hand. The click of a typewriter sounded monotonously from across the room.

Pearson rubbed his head. "We'll have to try again. Who are Cherry's friends, Dan? Who could she think about to go to? Who's her girl friend? Who's her best friend?"

"I've told you a dozen times I can't think of anyone! Dixie Shannon didn't even know she was gone. There isn't anybody——"

"But there must be!" Suddenly Pearson's fist hit the desk. "Look here, Dan, this may be serious! Has it occured to you that Cherry's an heiress? Her father's money—have you thought of that?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean anything may have happened in a week's time! —A beautiful girl—wealthy—has been missing for seven days. Nobody knows what's become of her. Her parents—the servants at her home—not a person who might have been expected to communicate with her heard a word from her. How do you know she hasn't been kidnaped? Maybe there's been an accident! Why, in a week's time——"

PEARSON was on his feet. His dark face had set into a harsh mask.

"What are you going to do, Max?"

"Call the hospitals! You'd better get on another phone and take part of the list. It was early for her this way there's nothing left but the police——"

A telegraph messenger solved the swinging gate that shut the city room from the entrance way and came directly toward Pearson. He held out a colored envelope.

"Your name's Pearson, isn't it?" the boy asked.

Max was tearing the envelope open. Dan sprang to his side and together they read the words: "Sixty-five per week agreeable stop can you report here Saturday?"

The message was signed with the name of the city editor of an eastern newspaper. Pearson crumpled the sheet into his coat pocket. "The boy asked, "Any answer?"

Pearson hesitated an instant. "Not now," he said and was on his way to the telephone booth.

There were no reports from Wellington hospitals of accident cases or patients who could be identified as Cherry Phillips. Dan and Max tried the hotels but the effort was equally unavailing.

Suddenly Dan sprang up. He caught Pearson's shoulder. "I've just thought of something! Wait! Let's go! —Yes—I'll bet that's where she is. Max! Why didn't I think of it before—?"

"Why didn't you think of what?"

"I'll bet she's with Sarah—the woman who used to take care of her when she was a little girl. Sarah O'Fallon—that's her name!"

"Where is this woman? Let's get hold of her."

"I don't know where she is."

"But—!"

Dan's mouth was drawn in a tight, hard line. His face was colorless, his voice sharpened. "I don't know where she is," he said, "but I'll find her. Sarah left when I was Dixon's age. Spent her summer. She's somewhere not far from here. Cherry used to get letters—letters addressed to her care—Sarah's—Cherry's—Max!"

It was a single flight up the street level. Hatless, half-running, the two men reached the street. They sprang into a cab and Dan gave the address of the apartment. It was Dan suddenly who was taking the initiative, he was giving orders and directing the search.

"I don't know what you're going to do!" Max remarked him.

"We're going out to the house to look for Cherry's letters. There must be some from Sarah. They'll give us the address."

"Dan, I think it would be a lot more sensible to go to the chief—"

"Not until I find out whether or not she's with Sarah. Besides, what could the police do? Cherry wouldn't want them interfering. I can't—I won't believe anything's happened to her!"

Max glanced quickly at his companion. Dan might say that he did not believe Cherry could be in danger. He might refuse to face that possibility, fight it off but Max knew it was that possibility that was gripping Dan, that had set his chin in its hard line and turned the gray eyes into blazing pits.

Max said impulsively, "Of course not, Dan. We'll find her somehow. Cherry's all right."

He didn't believe it—neither did Dan. Phillips but Dan was grateful for the words. He needed hope and encouragement that more than he had ever needed them in his life. Hope that Cherry was "all right" that Max had not somehow agreement that he could find her and make her listen to the things he must tell her. Without this hope he was helpless. Without it the helplessness of such an abyss was unthinkable.

The cab halted. Max called "Wait!" as he vaulted over his shoulder to the driver as he followed Dan up the steps. Now they were inside the building hurrying up the long flight.

Dan had whipped his keys from his pocket. He was fumbling in the half-darkness, trying to find the lock, which was something sought his attention. He looked up, almost missed the door jamb in his way to the stairs. Suddenly he exclaimed by spread fingers.
