CLARENCE DARROW BATTLES TO SAVE CONDEMNED BOY

Noted Criminal Attorney Goes To Aid of Russell McWilliams

YOUTH CONVICTED OF SLAYING MOTORMAN

Chicago Lawyer Criticizes Illinois Statute in Dramatic Plea

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UP)—Dominant figure of many famous criminal trials, Clarence Darrow, 72-year-old defense lawyer, appeared today before the state supreme court in a plea for the life of a 17-year-old slayer.

Darrow was optimistic over his chances to save Russell McWilliams, 17, Rockford, the condemned youth, from the electric chair.

Oral Arguments

The proceedings consisted of oral arguments after which the case, an appeal from the Winnebago county circuit court, Rockford, will be taken under advisement. A decision may be returned shortly before the Christmas holidays.

Darrow donated his services to save McWilliams, a penniless youth who was sentenced to die by Circuit Judge Arthur E. Fisher.

McWilliams, a slim young boy, was convicted a year ago of slaying William S. Sayles, 64, street car motorman, in a holdup. It was termed a brutal killing by the prosecution.

Relearning Ordered

Darrow made eloquent pleas before the state board of pardons and the Supreme court. The Supreme court ordered a rehearing. Judge Fisher again sentenced McWilliams to die.

Darrow planned to utilize the hour of argument allotted him to show court erred thrice because it refused a change of venue, misled counsel by advisement of guilty plea and failed to consider mitigating evidence in fixing sentence.

"The age of the boy must also be considered," said Darrow. "Under Illinois law a child of ten who has killed is tried before the jury as if he were a grown man. This, I think, is wrong."

"If it's all right to enact special laws and construct institutions in connection with certain juvenile crimes then there should be consideration for the juvenile who kills."

LIBBY HOLMAN IS UNLIKELY TO BE PROSECUTED

Reynolds Family Not Desirous of Legal Action Being Taken

INDICTMENTS AGAINST PAIR MAY BE QUASHED

Solicitor to Be Guided Strongly by Wishes of Relatives of Youth

JEFFERSON, N. C. (UP)—Prosecution of Libby Holman, former Broadway torch singer, in the death of her husband, Smith Reynolds, was doubtful today as the prosecutor admitted he would "be strongly guided" by a letter from the Reynolds family suggesting the case be dropped.

State Solicitor Carlisle Higgins issued a statement saying he had not determined whether to move to quash my murder indictments against Libby and Reynolds' best friend, Ab Walker. He indicated he would have an announcement before the date set for trial, probably late in November.

Issues Statement

"I have the letter of W. N. Reynolds in my possession," the statement said, "and as yet have not determined what my course of action shall be. Of course, I will give it every possible consideration and very likely will be more strongly guided by it than by any other source."

The position of the Reynolds family in the death of the heir to part of the vast tobacco fortune was revealed in a letter made public late yesterday. It was signed by W. N. Reynolds, titular head of the tobacco house and was sent to Higgins.

Neither defendant was mentioned by name, nor was it admitted that there was a thought entertained by the family that Smith killed himself. But the letter admitted the evidence had to prove conclusively that Smith was murdered.

After assuring Higgins that it he should see fit to drop the case

MISSING IDAHOAN REPORTED SEEN IN DENVER RECENTLY

Driver of Taxi Declares He Saw Man Resembling Henry Ross

BECOMES EXCITED OVER NEWS STORY

Officers Continue Search for Suspect in Death of Engineer

DENVER, Colo. (UP)—Henry Ross, Caldwell, Idaho, wanted in connection with the slaying of Irwin C. Thompson, electrical engineer, was believed by police today to have visited Denver as late as last Friday.

Three taxi drivers here reported to authorities, a man closely resembling the fugitive hired cab on the day Thompson's mutilated body was found buried in a deserted terrace in south Denver.

The engineer's skull had been crushed with an ax. He was last seen alive walking with Ross last September.

The driver said the man believed to have been Ross appeared to be very excited, especially when newsboys began to spell papers bearing announcements of Thompson's body had been found.

Ross escaped from the Caldwell jail several weeks ago. He and his wife, Stella Williams Ross, had been arrested and held for questioning in connection with an alleged "love triangle" murder. The machine—later—was found—to—have—belonged to Thompson.

After her husband's escape, Mrs. Ross was brought to Denver for questioning in effort to explain the engineer's disappearance.

Information obtained from here by authorities partially enabled them to find Thompson's body.

Senator La Follette Bolts Party; Favors Democratic Nominee

New Political Organization May Be Formed

MADISON, Wis. (UP)—Senator Robert M. La Follette, Jr., leader of the Progressive Republican faction in Wisconsin, announced today his support of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for president.

He announced his bolt of the Republican ticket in a statement commending the "liberal views" of Roosevelt while at the same time declaring that he has "no illusions about either of the two old political parties."

Supports Schmedeman

Young La Follette also announced he would vote for Albert G. Schmedeman, Democratic nominee for governor, and F. Ryan Duffy, the party's nominee for U. S. senator, and added that Progressive Republicans "who were victorious in the recent primary would receive his support."

He hinted in his statement at formation of a new political party.

Progressive Principles

He expressed confidence that "ultimately there will be a new political alignment that will afford a definite party organization for those who believe in the fundamental concepts of democracy."

Offers Comment

Of Roosevelt, he commented:

"Franklin D. Roosevelt has taken a position of some questions with which many Progressives are not in accord. On others, he has not yet declared himself. By and large, however, he expresses in his speeches a liberal point of view upon certain economic issues which, taken together, with his record as governor, makes it desirable for Progressives to support him in this particular campaign."

He warned, however, that if Roosevelt is elected he would feel free to oppose any policies not in accordance with the progressive creed.

Philip F. La Follette, brother of the Progressive senator, two years ago was defeated for renomination by Walter J. Kohler, wealthy manufacturer.

John R. Chapple, young editor, won the Republican nomination for United States senator against another Progressive Republican, Senator John J. Blaine.

The younger brother will be permitted to attend his brother's funeral, sheriff announced.

Wagering Proves Popular Diversion in United States

NEW YORK (UP)—Americans are betting almost a billion dollars a year on their card games, the "big companies."

Here are three figures of the daily treasury balance.

The Chicago dollar and cost price of 37 cents.

The total pay-in-to-the-first fire district of Kansas race track.

In bad times or good they gamble their money in bets from 25 cents to $5,000 (of 500 to 1 down). And they sometimes collect.

The scene of the gambling reads the reflected today in United Press reports from 30 American cities where so-called "number" or policy pools operate in defiance of the anti-gambling laws. In these cities alone the rackets take in from ten to twenty million dollars a week. More often than not the winner insists and build up a permanent clientele.

Occasionally they leave town a few hours before the pay-off and the winner fails to find the "banker" or "writer" in the hole. Not in Memphis where the elite play policy. In New Orleans, where the state-sanctioned Louisiana lottery is hot, entirely dispelled, the drawings are made publicly and daily and ward-politicians take a cut to pay the expenses of the reigning political machine.

Chicago is probably the very spot, especially Negroes, are the best patrons.

The "takes" in the larger cities reaches stupendous totals. In Chicago it is estimated to be $2,000,000 weekly; in San Francisco, where the Chinese lottery is popular, it is estimated at $6,000,000; in New York City (also will total around $1,000,000 weekly).

GOV. ROOSEVELT HURLS CHARGES

Claims G. O. P. Endeavoring To Instill Panic In the Voters

WHEELING, W. Va. (UP)—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt today charged his Republican opponents with "trying to instill panic into the voters."

"You have been told that things might have been worse, and will be worse if I am elected to office," Roosevelt said in his speech here.

"In attempt to instill panic into the electorate at a time such as we must all have courage and a firm belief that the American characteristic of finding ready answers to problems will bring us back on the upward trail, is a method of campaigning which does little credit to leaders still in the trust confidence of the United States."

"Taking up the phrase "things might have been worse," which President Hoover used in his Des Moines and Cleveland speeches, Roosevelt said things might also have been better. Roosevelt said conditions might have been worse but for the functioning of two agencies, the Federal Reserve system and the Reconstruction Finance corporation, both of which he assigned—none of Democratic inspiration.

PARTIAL TEXT OF SPEECH

WHEELING, W. Va. (UP)—Governor Roosevelt's address at Wheeling, West Va., today was as follows in part:

"We are now in the closing stages of an ordinary campaign. We are not faced merely with a choice or a change of administration. We have, now to make a choice between a nation with hope for economic order and individual prosperity on the one hand, or a country allowed to drift under the present temporizing type of administrative leadership.

"Spectre of Fear"

"Only a year and a half before you the spectre of fear of the Republican candidate and the Republican speakers. You have been told that things might have been worse, and will be worse if I am elected to office. But I say to you: Yes, things might have been worse; indeed we might all of us

SEASON NEARS PEAK

Several important football contests are scheduled for members of the Idaho Big Ten and other schools during the coming week end. The season is nearing its hottest period and Friday will see American Falls tangling with Idaho Falls, Rupert with Blackfoot and Twin Falls with Burley. Saturday's feature will be the Filer Wildcats game with the Boise Braves. The Wildcats have been remarkably successful in their games with the capital city boys and hope to emerge victorious this year. Boise has been riding rough shod over all opponents and pile up a lopsided score against Filer. However, Filer teams have shown plenty of fight and it will be a scrappy bunch of Wildcats who take the field Saturday afternoon.

American Falls will likely need all their strength to carry back the powerful Idaho Falls aggregation. The eastern Idaho eleven has displayed plenty of punch this season and will be hard to stop.

Blackfoot, which has already lost one Big Ten contest to Burley will quite probably be on the short end of the score in their battle with the Rupert Pirates. Rupert has one conference win, defeating Pocatello, and is expected to lower the colors of their opponents.

The Burley-Twin Falls game Friday should be a corker from start to finish. Burley leads the Big Ten conference with three victories and no set backs while Twin Falls trounced the Pocatello Bannocks in the Bruins only conference game.

As to the strongest team in the state there is considerable speculation. The answer to this question must await later contests. Many surprises can and do happen in football.

Relative to the non-conference games this week the fast-going Gooding squad smashes into Shoshone, leader of Class B teams. Shoshone to date has four wins and no reverses. The Kimberly-Wendell mix should be worth going miles to see while plenty of fireworks are promised when Oakley engages Jerome.

FOOTBALL SKETCHES

Here are two Michigan plays that had much to do with the defeat of Northwestern. Michigan is well schooled in this type of offensive play, completing four passes for a total yardage of 78 against the Wildcats.

Diag. No. 1 shows a Michigan short kick formation and a forward pass to No. 2 back, who has gone around the end. Meanwhile the ends play the left end and No. 4 back start straight down the field and but to the right. The right end goes down and deep to his left. No. 1 back drops back after receiving the ball from center and starts a short run toward the left, then passes to the No. 2 back who is well down the field. The left guard and No. 2 back protect the passer.

Diag. No. 2 shows a special pass formation, with a balanced line and the ends out about eight yards from the tackles. Nos. 3 and 4 backs take their position one yard back of their respective ends. The passer is 10 yards back.

The right end goes diagonally and deep to his right. The left end also goes deep and hooks to his left. With the No. 4 back hooking in short behind the defensive line. No. 3 back goes straight down over center.

The pass is optional, but in this case No. 3 is the receiver. The guards and No. 2 back protect the passer.

Stilted and Bustled ....OR.... Full Powered and Full Sized

WHICH DO YOU WANT?

It's easy to build a cheap battery. One way is to raise the bridges or stilts that the plates rest on. Another is to pad the plates with heavy buttes. Both help to make the battery look big—but reduce its power and life.

There's no economy in gambling with a cheap battery. The cost of just one service call will pay the difference between it and a full-powered, full-sized Firestone Battery. Come in, examine these Firestone batteries and see for yourself why they give you the greatest value your money can buy. We accept your old battery in trade and give you a liberal allowance for it.

Firestone BATTERIES

FULL POWERED . . . FULL SIZED

1. High overlapped or full height plates are used in Firestone batteries—No high stilts—no bustles.
2. Safety Vent Oxford Cedar Separators which withstand chemical action longer.
3. Special design rubber bushing which prevents electrolyte leaks and absorbs road shocks.
4. Thick heavy reinforced covers protect battery terminals against shock and vibrations.
5. Extra strong hard rubber cases which are not affected by grease and acid.
6. Ample capacity at all temperatures—always dependable.

BORAH DEVOTING TIME TO THOMAS

Idahoan Turns His Back on National Candidates During Campaign

BOISE, (UP)—Senator William E. Borah, for whom support for President Hoover and Governor Franklin Roosevelt have futilely and hard, has turned his back on the national campaign and is devoting considerable time to the reelection of his sole colleague, Senator John Thomas, Republican.

By Borah's silence, broken only by an informal endorsement of Roosevelt and by his confirmation of President Hoover and the Republican platform—just before adjournment of Congress—Idaho Democratic leaders have concluded the Progressive leader has turned "thumbs" down on both national candidates.

The Idaho senior has studiously avoided comment on the national campaign. He has remained quite modest, little heard from. Now and then he emerges to make a swift, speaking tour throughout the state.

Silence would complicate matters for the Democrats, who have agreed not to oppose Thomas, colleague—at—illness, which explains the Idaho senior's Trail campaigning against a strong opponent, Mayor Adam Paul of Lewiston.

At The Theaters

"HOOFER" SHAKES FEET BUT NOT DANCE ROLES

One of the strong aversions of Lee Tracy, who plays the principal male role in Columbia's production, "The Night Mayor," showing at Joe's Roxy theatre, is dancing. Yet, for his part of Roy Lane, the "hoofer" in the great New York stage hit, "Broadway," he portrayal, as famous as that of Jeanne Eagels in "Rain." Tracy was required to dance. Moreover, he did it so well that the report persisted that he had really been a hoofer in his latest picture. "The Night Mayor," he argues, obliged to dance—this time an impromptu step which, in the story, he shows to Evelyn Knapp, the leading lady.

The special added attraction is Bing Crosby comedy, "I Surrender Dear."

Sharks prefer white meat. That is why native swimmers are less in danger than tourists.

SEED GROWERS WILL ASSEMBLE

Two Day Program Planned For Show at Pocatello Next Month

Entries are already being made for the 22nd annual Idaho State Seed show which is being held in Pocatello, Nov. 16-17, says an announcement today.

Spence, Jr., Secretary, Idaho State Seed improvement association, who should be in the hands of the Secretary by Nov. 1, and samples should be in Pocatello by Nov. 7 so the judging may be completed before the show opens.

A two day program is being planned which will be of interest to all seed growers. This will afford a splendid opportunity for growers and dealers to get together and discuss their problems.

The programs will be divided into sections, each of which will be given over to discussions dealing with some particular phase of the seed industry—potatoes, small seeds or grain and corn.

Talks show will bring together samples of the finest grains and small seeds grown in Idaho. Over $1,000 is being offered in premiums and awards. The prize winning samples at this show will be sent to the International Grain and Hay Show, held in Chicago in December.

REVERENCE IN ROCKERS

A good many Americans, very likely, will feel a deep understanding for the parishioners of the church at Haines City, Fla., which has installed 300 hickory rocking chairs in its auditorium in place of the ordinary straight-backed pews.

It started, it seems, when an influential member of the congregation complained that he had "never yet been comfortable in church"; and while a rocking chair might seem to offer undue temptation to the man who has a tendency to go to sleep during the sermon, the idea nevertheless looks rather attractive.

Who has not suffered the extreme of physical discomfort in the old-fashioned pews? Who hasn't longed for a chance to be at ease during a sermon? Won't a minister whose flock is thoroughly comfortable and physically relaxed be able to get his message across better than one whose hearers are not?

IN TRIBUTE

The tragic death of two of Idaho's educators Saturday near Pocatello came as a blow to thousands of persons in all walks, for the reason that both the accident victims during their careers in this state had come in close contact with so many young people in our educational institutions.

In both instances their places will be difficult to fill. President C. E. Bocock of the Albion state normal school was a fixture at that institution and had practically given his life to it. The state board of education will have a task in choosing his successor.

Miss Retta Martin, who was the Democratic nominee for state superintendent of public instruction was credited with having all the qualifications, and more, for the high position she sought, and when she might have so eminently filled had she been the choice of Idaho voters next month.

In this critical period in the history of every institution, whether it be in the field of education, of politics, or whatnot, Idaho can ill-afford to lose such leaders of thought, whose influences were so beneficial to sound citizenship.

At the funerals of these two educators Wednesday, there will be many more sorrowers present in spirit than there will be in person, regardless of the number of visible mourners, for both President Bocock and Miss Martin were loved and adhered by countless friends, associates and students.

These dead will be sorely missed in Idaho and their places will be difficult to fill.

MUST UNCLE SAM STAND ALONE?

Within a month, the United States and the members of the League of Nations must confer about the crisis in the far east. The Lytton report on Japanese aggression in Manchuria presents an issue that must be settled once and for all.

In advance of the conference it might be a good thing for American citizens to get a few facts definitely in mind.

Three international treaties cover the Manchurian situation.

The nine-power treaty guarantees the integrity of China. The Kellogg-pact pledges signatory nations not to resort to war as an instrument of national policy. The covenant of the league binds its members to go to the aid of any member which is a victim of aggression.

Of these treaties, the first two bind the United States. All three bind the leading nations of Europe.

Now it is common knowledge that the only great power which has steadfastly and effectively opposed Japan's ambitious moves in Manchuria is the United States. England and France, the most important members of the league, have gone through the motions of making a protest but that is all. Furthermore, it is commonly reported that England and France plan to let Uncle Sam continue as the one serious obstacle to Japanese aggression.

Remembering all of these facts, you might let your memory go back to 1914.

In that year Germany invaded Belgium, violating an international treaty. England sprang to arms at once. English and French leaders were horrified at the notion that a treaty could be "a scrap of paper."

It was, they insisted, the solemn duty of signatory nations to defend such a treaty to the limit.

But it appears that there is a difference between a treaty guaranteeing Belgium's integrity and one guaranteeing China's—or else the nations of Europe have lost their noble regard for a treaty's sacredness.

If that exalted talk of 1914 was more than empty words, England and France will side with the United States on the issue of making the Lytton report effective. If they don't—well, Uncle Sam's education will have progressed another notch.

The Republicans delight in classing Governor Roosevelt as a "gentleman farmer"—that is one who does not run his farm at a profit. If that is the requisite of being a "gentleman farmer", the woods have been full of them the last few years.

President Hoover pronounces economics correctly, with a long "e," says Christopher Morley. If this election hangs upon pronunciation, maybe Hoover will get it.

CALL of the WEST

By R. G. MONTGOMERY

© 1932, NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGINNING TODAY

STAN DALL accuses ASPER DELO, leader of a crooked practice and of having once shot who try to check up on his activities. Dall says he is making a clean sweep in the West and he will personally prevent it. Upon leaving Dolly's office Dall saves DONA, a lovely girl, from a lecherous slipping away when he finds who she is, telling her his name is STANLEY BLACK.

DEBILEY WINTERS, in love with Dona, sees with her in the Hills in a parade Dolly in which she the fight with Dall. He tries to get her to marry him as the way as a means of getting Dolly to give up his plans. Dona recently escapes doing this by meeting Dall on his way to the timber camp. They find Dall accused of killing a ranger. Asper is wounded in from ambush but escapes in the to bed. Dona tells him she has lost married Dudley to keep him out of the hunt.

Dall comes in for supplies and is captured by SWIRGIN. Dolly big timber baron. He escapes after Dolly tells him her father-in-law is Dudley's uncle. Dudley insists on real marriage but Dona holds back, she rides out to see if she can find Stanley Black, who, she thinks, is Dall's tool. She meets him on the trail, not knowing he is Dall. He promises to get the ranger of Stan Dall. On the way to camp Dona drops in at a cabin and sees a glove she thinks belongs to Black's in a Spanish girl's room.

Valuable records are stolen from the office and the clerk says Dall stole them. Asper Delo is furious and refuses to leave with Dona and Dudley. A posse gets on Dall's trail and it is reported he is captured. Dona rides out with Black.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

ASPER DELO was bending forward eagerly as Dona came to a stop in his table beside his chair on the porch.

"Did they get him?" he demanded.

"They have him surrounded and expect to capture him at any minute. The man who brought in the word says they expect a finish fight up at the branch of the Blind River trail."

Dona patted his hand reassuringly. "They'll capture him."

Asper chewed viciously on his cigar. He had not been allowed to smoke for days and now was making the best of the black single the doctor had given him. "I hope they bring him in," he gritted.

"I'm going to ride up a little way and see if I can learn anything more." Dona tried to speak unconcernedly.

"Be careful, D. There is danger with men using high-powered rifles." Asper was eager to have her bring news yet he was cautious.

Dona arranged his chair and blanket and gave him a hurried kiss on the cheek. Then she ran toward the corrals.

The men seemed to know where she wanted to go. He struck out toward the saddle that overlooked Blind River at a swinging gallop. His slender rider let him have his head until they reached the Blind River trail, then she headed him south, straight up the mountain. She remembered a high point overlooking the slope from which she could check the movements of the posse.

Why she rode out to watch the hunt was not clear to her mind. She could not get back to camp with news as soon as the men would get in. Something led her to take her stand and watch. It might have been morbid curiosity or feminine instinct. Whatever it was Dona obeyed it and pulled her mount to a halt on a jutting ledge that overlooked the slopes below.

A little meadow hedged in by heavy scrub growth lay at her feet. Farther down the slope she could see men riding around a heavy patch of timber. The ground was rocky and tangled with thick growth and connected with the timber directly below her. Men with rifles crawled from bush to bush while the mounted men rode in an ever closing circle around the rocky ambush.

• • •

DONA loosened her rifle so that she could get at it handily. She was not sure what she would do with it if Dall broke out of the connecting timber and tried to cross the meadow but she intended to be ready. Several rifle shots rang out from below as excited men caught glimpses of what they thought was the bandit.

Dona settled back to wait. Suddenly a black horse burst from the timber just below her. Its rider was bending low over the saddle and the horse was taking the rough ground at a graceful lope. Dona reached down and jerked her rifle loose. The rider was too far away to be hailed but he was within easy rifle range. Suddenly she remembered the roan's fear of a gun. She slid from her horse and dropped to one knee.

The front bead of her rifle steadied and she pressed the trigger. She was not uncertain for a second of the identity of the man escaping from the circling posse. He had slipped through their lines and was well on his way to freedom. Her rifle cracked viciously. The rider straightened, then pitched over the side of his horse. He rolled over twice, lay still. The black horse ran on and halted under cover of the timber.

Slowly Dona got to her feet. She felt dizzy and sick. She had shot a man! The report of her gun would not attract attention because of the occasional firing from below. With heavy feet she began to descend to the meadow. She had to go to the man she had just killed.

Thirty-five yards down to where he lay seemed miles and she moved uncertainly. Dona clung to her rifle and plodded on. Now she could see his face through the tall grass. One leg was pulled up in a twisted manner and his arms were flung wide. She almost ran the remaining few steps to where he lay.

Dona bent over the prostrate form and her eyes were wide. She was gazing on the face of Stanley Black! Suddenly the dead man came to life. With a lightning sweep he had her rifle, then faced her. A grim smile drew his lips tight.

"You are a poor shot," he murmured.

"Are you hurt?" Dona's face revealed more than she knew of horror and disillusionment.

STAN DALL's eyes hardened and his mouth became a tight line. "And you are my prisoner. I'll have to get you out of here right now!"

"I won't go!" Dona flashed angrily.

"Oh yes you will go! My worthless life depends on it." His eyes were hard and he was not smiling.

"You're wanted for killing." Dona had not fully recovered from her first shock.

"Just which killing do you refer to? I'm wanted for several." His tone was mocking. "Move toward my horse!" he ordered sharply.

Dona went, with his rifle at her back. She knew he was in desperate straights and that he had nothing to win by sparing her should she shout or try to run.

Under cover Stan faced her grimly. "The hounds are so close that I'll have to take you with me. You have discovered my secret trail." With little effort she swung her up to front of his saddle, then leaped up behind her. He tossed aside his rifle as a useless hindrance.

Dona shrank from his lean arms but he held her close and the black mare headed through the timber at a speed showing she was familiar with the trail. Dona bit her lower lip to keep from crying. She would be as strong as he was and as hard! She would watch her chance and shoot him! They rode on through the timber until they were high under the rim of Polly Mountain. Then Stan let her get down beside a spring to rest.

The pool of water was cool and Dona drank deeply. When she straightened she found Stan's eyes on her face. He was watching her gravely, his gray eyes deep and impenetrable.

"I suppose you think you can get away with this just as you have gotten away with the rest of your crooked work." Dona returned his gaze with a cold stare.

"It makes little difference to me but I have one score to settle before I let them close in on me." Stan Dall's lips formed a straight line as they closed on the last word and his eyes darkened.

"I should think you would collect all you have done enough!" Dona jerked her booted feet up under her.

"I have done only what I was forced to do. Now I'm going to do something because I want to." Stan produced a sack of tobacco and a packet of crimpled papers. Carefully he made and lighted a cigaret.

THE girl watched the lean strength of his face. Its hard lines and its soft lines seemed to blend. Hill's gray eyes should have been humorous but they were hard as steel.

"You keep your promises just as you do many other things!" She aimed this thrust, keeping her eyes on him while she spoke.

"I'm going to keep that promise got me into this jam," he snapped.

"I didn't expect you to give alibis," Dona continued her attack. "Have I offered any excuses?"

"Nor explanations!"

"Why make explanations when they will be termed excuses?" Stan Dall got up. "Time for us to move on."

Dona sat still and looked him in the eye defiantly. With a quick stride she was at her side. He caught her up and swung her up before his saddle. Dona did not struggle against his iron arms but she could feel his lips on her hair. He leaped up behind her and headed the black mare up the slope.

They traveled for perhaps an hour. Then the black ducked her head and entered a tangle of vines and bushes. Dona took note of the trail carefully. They were entering a narrow cleft of rock barely wide enough for the horse to pass through. The cleft opened a few yards farther on into a rim shelter formed by erosion and wind deposits on a shelf of rock. Stan leaped to the ground.

"Welcome to your new home," he said with mock ceremony.

The History of Twin Falls City and County

AS GLEANED FROM FILES OF THE TIMES

15 Years Ago

A. N. Sprague of this city has received word by cable from Rome that his brother, Dr. F. M. Sprague, had been promoted to the position of major in the aviation corps, and a letter from another brother, Dr. Charles H. Sprague, stationed at Fort Riley, Kans., that he had received a captaincy.

A. D. Thomas and Mrs. Thomas, a daughter of Mrs. William Lumbing, have arrived from San Diego, Calif., where Thomas, an accomplished musician, will preside at the fine pipe organ which is to be in the new Presbyterian church. Mr. Thomas is interested in a practice in the office of the Twin Falls Auto company.

The board of county commissioners in order to secure road through the government at reduced prices has furnished transportation contractors that the bids for the Hansen bridge will not be opened October 20 as advertised.

27 Years Ago

There is more building in progress now than ever before. Business blocks to be constructed of either stone or cement blocks, which will cost over $80,000 are now in course of construction. This does not include a number of frame buildings, nor the $30,000 school building. They are the Alex Black, Lloyd & Perrine, Cravens & Babcock, Tripplett, and Stott buildings. Twenty years hence there will be handsome buildings which would adorn any town in the state.

Bell-V Beck, a Twin Falls carpenter, who recently removed to his land east of Hansen, on the main canal, will put out a 10-acre orchard, which will include a variety of small fruit. Winter apples of hardy varieties will comprise the larger part of his orchard. He purchased the trees from the Davis County nursery, represented here by Fred Silliart.

National Whirligig

The low down on what is going on behind the scenes in Washington and New York—an intimate insight into the inner working of politics, for Evening Times readers every day and everywhere.

By Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON — That smooth job the White House did on the H. R. 12, petitioners was the handiwork of Walter Newton, the political secretary.

The vets came in with blood in their eyes. They carried a resolution of censure against the President. Instead of tear gas, Newton used a pat on the back. He sawed them along until soon they were up to their necks in it, and rewarding speeches were given when Newton invited them to see the President himself. Their belligerent attitude turned immediately to one of cordiality.

The petitioners clearly lost the skirmish.

That minor incident may bring a change of White House policy in handling the coming marches of farmers, B. E. F. or Communists.

The Communists always come up to see the President, never expecting to get in. All they want is to be thrown out so they can raise a hullabaloo and get publicity for their cause. They also like to get their heads thwacked by police. It helps their movement. Hundreds of their spies are around sympathy for them. A great theory think so.

Their purpose is entirely defeated when they are treated like any other petitioners.

OUTLOOK

Best authorities confidentially advise optimistic caution in the existing business situation.

There are certain favorable factors. Federal Reserve indices to be made public within a few days are supposed to show improvement in industrial activity.

This news will be offset by other considerations. The farm situation offers little cheer. Prospects for wheat and cotton prices are good, but not good enough to stimulate farm buying power. Steel business will show continued modest improvement. It is due almost entirely to the energy used by the steel companies in going after small orders. The European situation is foggy.

To get real improvement we will have to promote new capital investments. They will put men back to work. They cannot come until there are more customers in sight. That means less unemployment.

It looks therefore very much as if we would have to hustle along on the present basis. Much of the action is sold on the share-the-work idea.

If any miracles are coming they are still around the corner.

HELP

The Administration is privately toying with a new idea in the farm mortgage situation.

It may recommend consolidation of the Joint Stock Land banks with the Federal Land banks. The idea is that the R. F. C. could then help finance mortgages through the joint system.

Legislation would be required. Nothing can be done about it anyway until Congress reconvenes. Some remedial legislation is sure to be enacted then whether or not along the lines on which the Administration now is groping.

BONUS

Banks are overloaded with cash again.

The fact that the last Treasury short term offering was over-subscribed 18 times was an added spur to bankers interest in safe places to put their money. The demand for the $450,000,000 subscription amounted to nearly eight billion dollars.

This fact is being carefully noted away by those who will shortly undertake agitation for the cash bonus, based on a bond issue.

"Claims Credit.

"I would remind you of two facts. First, things might have been worse if I had not been for the establishment in the Wilson administration of what we call the Federal Reserve system. Had there been no Federal Reserve system, the collapse would indeed have been complete, and that system was the product of a Democratic—Carter Glass—and that system became law only after the most bitter opposition from the Republican leaders—now Mr. Hoover's associates.

"And, secondly, it has been said that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which is as much a Democratic measure as Republican—for it was passed in the spirit of bi-partisan cooperation—another thing which has saved the country. But again, this measure was not due to the creative genius of Republican leadership, for it was during the period of the Democratic administration that there was established the War Finance corporation, and it is essentially the principles of the War Finance corporation which have been reestablished at this new period of crisis."

A Real-Life Underworld Drama

A hold-up in exchange of shots—a woman accomplice kneeling beside a fallen bandit—too, Dr. Joe, you're hurt!—That was the stark underworld drama that an alert photographer recorded in this remarkable picture. While Joseph Carr and Louise Burruss had been robbing a New York clothing store, Patrolman John Montague entered and opened fire. Both men were wounded, but the policeman so slightly that he was able to pursue and capture the woman when she fled with the robbery loot. After being returned to the scene of the shoot-ing, she is shown here, his wounded head cradled in her lap, gazing sadly, quietly for a moment, for, they know it was a last farewell. The bandit then was rushed to a hospital, where he was expected to fear lifelong lameness from the wounds.

WHEAT RISES DUE TO FORD RUMOR

CHICAGO, Oct. 19 (UP)—Report that Henry Ford will buy 75 million bushels of wheat to be sold at cost—together with other news—sent the wheat market up 2 cents a bushel just before the close on the Board of Trade today. Before the late spurt, the market had drifted down to new low range. Corn and oats followed wheat.

Commission houses were on both sides of the market, but hedge pressure was slight. Liverpool cables were higher again, being lifted up by the sharp break in sterling. Argentine crop advices were bullish, although further news of rain.

Interest Groups Offer Development of Talent

Saturday afternoons will not be dull, empty hours for Twin Falls high school Girl Reserves this year. Solution of the problem, "What shall we do on Saturdays?" is found in the interest groups being organized by club leaders and women of the community who are specialists in various subjects being offered. Classes in drama, handicraft, folk dancing, puppets and ukelele playing have found popularity with club girls registering for these courses. Individual groups will meet each Saturday afternoon at the high school at 1:30 o'clock for an hour's study, and will assemble as a unit later in the afternoon for an hour's gymnastics in the school gymnasium. The folk dancing group will meet at 3 o'clock each Saturday. Talent development as well as recreation are the advantages of these groups.

All members of the Girl Reserve clubs, Blue Triangle, with Miss Harriet Throckmorton as leader; J. O. Y., with Miss Josephine Throckmorton in charge, and Philo-Pulo, with Miss Pearl Lease as director, are eligible for the groups. Miss Agnes Schubert is Girl Reserve counselor.

Study of the drama will be under the direction of Mrs. Howard Renwick Cannon, whose knowledge of dramatic production has been evidenced in a number of plays and pageants she has directed for the Presbyterian church during her residence here. Mrs. Harold W. Merritt, former physical education director of the Twin Falls high school, will be in charge of the folk dancing. Mrs. D. R. Taber will direct the class in handicraft. Leaders for the puppets and ukulele groups have not been selected.

The Twin Falls clubs are the only ones in this district which are sponsoring interest groups this year, Miss Schubert believes.

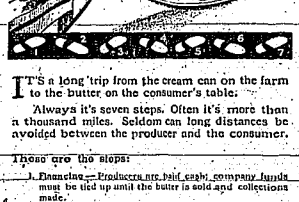
Seven Steps and a Thousand Miles



IT'S a long trip from the cream can on the farm to the butter on the consumer's table.

Always it's seven steps. Often it's more than a thousand miles. Seldom can long distances be avoided between the producer and the consumer.

These are the steps:

1. Financing—Producers are paid cash; company funds must be tied up until the butter is sold and collections made.
2. Assembly and Grading—This is done in about 100 Swift & Company plants.
3. Manufacture—There must be complete sanitation, manufacturing skill, modern machinery and efficient methods.
4. Transportation—A hundred miles or a thousand, the finished product rides the rails to good demand. The freight must be paid by Swift.
5. Refrigeration—Perishable foodstuffs, like butter and dressed poultry and eggs, must be kept constantly under refrigeration.
6. Assumption of Risk—Swift & Company does not know what it will receive next week for butter made today; that butter must be sold while still fresh at a price consumers—through their retailers—can and will pay.
7. Selling—Swift & Company salesmen selling meats and product at the same time cut the costs of selling both.

Most of the Swift produce plants handle poultry and eggs as well as butter. With poultry all seven steps must be taken too. Only six are needed with eggs; the hens do all the manufacturing.

The Swift & Company national market was made by digging up demand wherever it exists in the United States, by advertising the merits of high quality, Swift's Meats, Swift's Premium Milk Fed Chicken, Golden West Fowl, Swift's Brookfield Butter, Eggs, Cheese and many other products.

To operate a national market means much more than mere buying today and selling tomorrow. It means performance of intricate services in the most economical way. Swift & Company in the past year has cut every expense over which it had control. Its service charges are low and profits are small—over a period of years they have averaged less than half a cent a pound of all products sold.
