

Hand of Russia Seen in Wheat Market of U. S.

Subsidiary of the Amtorg Trading Company Said to Be Selling Wheat Short; Hops to Spread Discontent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UP)—Federal Farm Bureau officials and the Russian wheat controversy today when Samuel R. McKeefe, assistant secretary of the board, expressed the opinion there was an "alibi" motive in the alleged Soviet hand in the wheat market. McKeefe said that investigation has shown a subsidiary of the Soviet Amtorg Trading Company is selling wheat short in Chicago.

It is quite evident," McKeefe said, "that the short sales are the regular process in the future market, by that I mean there is no other motive. It is important Canadian wheat through her northern ports and the only wheat her southern ports to Italy and France, and it is cheaper to dispose of the wheat in the United States to transport it by a long rail haul through Chicago."

McKeefe pointed out the Chicago Board of Trade would not attempt to present the Russian speculation but that it was necessary to apply to private traders. He expressed the opinion that one motive of the short sales was to increase discontent among the American farmers.

EXPERTS SELECT STAGG GREATEST FOOTBALL COACH

University of Chicago Mentor Wins First Honors in Unique Poll; Rockets Gets Second Place, Warner Third

BY JOE LICH
(Formerly of State Dames)
Copyright, 1929 by Joe Lich

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 20—(UP)—Alois Alois Stagg of the University of Chicago was named the "All-American coach" in a national poll—the first of its kind ever taken of high ranking football instructors, results of which were announced here today.

Knickerbocker of New Haven, and Glenn Warner of Stanford, received second and third honors. Stagg, football's "grand old man" has most votes in the confidential poll which was made among 15 of the nation's leading college football coaches.

The Chicago coach has taught the game longer than any other man. He started to teach football 40 years ago when Rockne, now dead, was only a baby. Stagg, now 65, is certainly old, but he is a "centennial" young man's name.

The voting was made on the basis of three categories: popularity as a coach, success in his work and his importance as a character builder.

Stagg's fame has been won through his ability to produce winning combinations with material which is usually inferior to that of his rivals.

Higher Education for Dartmouth's Kickers

Probably you've already guessed what they're kicking about. The football season is just around the corner of the calendar, and conditions for Dartmouth College's "Big Green" eleven are pictured here as they hold their final practice at Hanover, New Hampshire. Looks a little like the rehearsal for a chorus, doesn't it? But there's a lot of difference between football and footlights.

The NUT CRACKER JONES HOPES TO WIN 4TH TITLE

The Johns high school eleven, which will meet River at Ellettsville, Ind., on Friday, October 18, and Twin Falls here on October 28, went down in defeat at the hands of a fielding eleven from the Class B school of Paris, Ga. It was Johns' first loss in more than three years. Final score was 7 to 0.

Shoshone, another "Class B" school, surprised the onlookers by leading a 5-0 score at the end of the half into a 12 to 6 victory. Completion of two long forward passes by Sigheane and two touchdowns by Tommie led to the victory.

WHY COVERED BRIDGES WERE COVERED

COVERED bridges, common on country highways in many sections of the United States a generation or two ago, have virtually vanished. Recently the New York World has raised the question, Why were bridges covered? In its zeal to find the answer the World has gone researching, studying museum engineering books and consulting bridge-building experts. Yet it remarks sadly in a recent editorial: "We can't say that our researches have turned up anything very satisfactory in the way of an explanation."

No wonder, thinks the Christian Science Monitor. Its researchers deal with questions of preventing snow from collecting on the structure, of protecting bolts and rods from rusting, and such uninteresting and inconsequential details. We frankly are surprised at the line of investigation followed by the World. Why research? Any country boy can tell you why bridges were covered.

"They kept the thick, cool dust dry so that it was soft on a boy's bare feet and 'squeezed' easily and pleasantly between his toes when he scuffed through it."

By excluding the rain they preserved for more than one season the posters proclaiming the auctions of farms for miles around, the virtues of Pratt's Poultry Food, the attraction of the County Fair, and the wonders of the jungle as revealed in the Great Circus on Earth.

Such bridges afforded the best place to stop and rest the horses when you were riding home on a load of hay.

They were the safest driest and most inviting places for swallows and squirrels to build their nests. On rainy days they made a better place to play than even the haymow. But if you batted the baseball to the end of the bridge you were out.

The cover of the bridge caused its shadow in afternoon to extend far up the stream to the alder bushes and made a cool and accessible retreat for the big suckers which lurked in the dark waters.

But of course nothing constructed by human hands is ever wholly perfect. Even covered bridges had their drawbacks. When evening came, it grew dark earlier and became blacker in that bridge than in any other spot in the known world. If a small boy was late in coming home from driving the cows to pasture, or returning from the village post office, Stygian darkness confronted him. Strangely, too, the bridge was about three times as long as it was in the daytime.

We usually admire the World's erudition and enterprise, but it has stubbed its toe this time in selecting a field of research. The reason covered bridges were covered will not be found in books—they were covered for the especial pleasure of the barefoot boys who played in them in childhood, and who in maturity will still love them long after the iron bridges that have displaced them, have rusted away.

ANDREE'S DIARY IS MADE PUBLIC

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 20 (UP)—The first official story of the tragic end of Solomon August Andree and his two companions in a ballad towards the North Pole, which appeared in the "Dagens Nyheter" newspaper, was made public tonight by the Swedish government.

The story was based on Andree's diary of 142 pages—covering the period from July 11, 1876, to October 2, 1878, of which appeared in the "Dagens Nyheter" newspaper.

With such comrades one should be able to get through under any circumstances.

The diary covered the period from the start at Danes Island (Narsarsuaq) until nearly two months later, when the diary was found in which Andree and his companions, the Swedish and King Frederick, arranged to travel to the trackless Arctic for towards civilization until their futile struggles ceased on lonely Pele Island.

The heroism of the party under the most cruel hardships, was poignantly told in the diary, which, like the diary, was found in the ice.

The diary revealed that on July 12 and 13, 1878, the halibut and cod were found, and that the party was forced to land on the ice. The diary also revealed that on July 11, 1878, the party was forced to land on the ice.

Life of Capone Put Into Print

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (UP)—Among the new fall books which came from the publishers today was the biography of Al Capone, a "self-made" man.

It is a "success" story—the tale of a young man who, battled his way upward against great odds—the big city determined to carve his name. What did you profit when this revealed, the Chicago leader emerged as an Alger-like hero of "Phink and Lacey," "Hanged Dick" and "Sink or Swim."

Capone's career is unfolded in elaborate detail from the time he left the Five Points gang of New York, he journeyed westward to "hook up" in the middle of his basking in the sunshine of his magnificent Florida estate, having the life expectancy of the average man.

PRECEDENT

IDAHO'S governor, so goes the story, is being imperturbed by managers of the Republican national campaign to go east of the Alleghenies and deliver a series of campaign addresses this fall. The story says that the chief executive of the Gem State is giving serious consideration to the proposals. Perhaps the Governor is awaiting manifestation of public sentiment.

Here is one slant on the subject which might well consider. Mr. Baldrige is governor of Idaho first, and a possible G. O. P. campaigner second. He has already gained much of a reputation as an itinerant official and to leave the state and go east on a political mission of no interest to his constituency would not enhance his reputation with Idaho voters, but would delight his adversaries, such as Wilson's trips to France provided his enemies with material for criticism.

The common people are becoming less and less interested in the political prestige of officials and are estimating them much by the same yardsticks as are applied to successful farmers, captains of industry and finance and educators.

It will perhaps make little difference whether Baldrige goes East or not, but to do so sets a bad precedent.

Construction activity in Twin Falls is proceeding apace. On every hand there is evidence of gradual growth, consistent progress, steady advancement. A number of important building projects are underway; new buildings are arising; construction work is being pushed; there is activity in the air. This portends increased business, more employment, increased valuations and all that goes to make for permanence, prosperity and population!

Advertisements are a guide to value

Experts can roughly estimate the value of a product by looking at it. More accurately, by handling and examining it. Its appearance, its texture, the "feel" and the balance of it all mean something to their trained eyes and fingers.

But no one person can be an expert on steel, brass, wood, leather, foodstuffs, fabrics, and all of the materials that make up a list of personal purchases. And even experts are fooled, sometimes, by concealed flaws and imperfections.

There is a surer index value than the senses of sight and touch... knowledge of the maker's name and for what it stands. Here is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship, or the use of shoddy materials.

This is one important reason why it pays to read advertisements and to buy advertised goods. The product that is advertised is worthy of your confidence.

Merchandise must be good or it could not be advertised. Buy advertised goods.
