Agricultural FeatureCANADA HOLDS
BUFFALO ROUND UP ONCE A YEAR

Wainwright, Alberta, is the scene of unique event: herd increases rapidly during the past two decades.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—The last, snarled, and noble North American animal threatened with extermination until 10 years ago is now assuredly on the "come-back trail."

Canada has succeeded in protecting these creatures from the guns of hunters until now a species survival law for their protection is not large enough to care for their growing number.

Once a year a round-up is held to "test" on these animals that annual roundup is now on at Wainwright, Alberta, where more than 4000 of the animals are quartered. The "test" is a round-up, consisting of western gunners, stirring up dense clouds of dust as they plod on their way to warden enclosures.

The round-up was an innovation which the herd at Wainwright became too large for their 100,000 acre pasture. Now every autumn the gunners come to the young, being separated from the old, calves branded with a "W" and the last two or three year-olds with a "B." The 100,000 square miles of Wild Buffalo park that has been picked for them at the boundary of the National Parks and the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Herd Grows Fast

The present herd grew from an original lot of 231 head introduced 20 years ago. Now it is so large that it requires guarding by cow-punchers, rangers and mounted police.

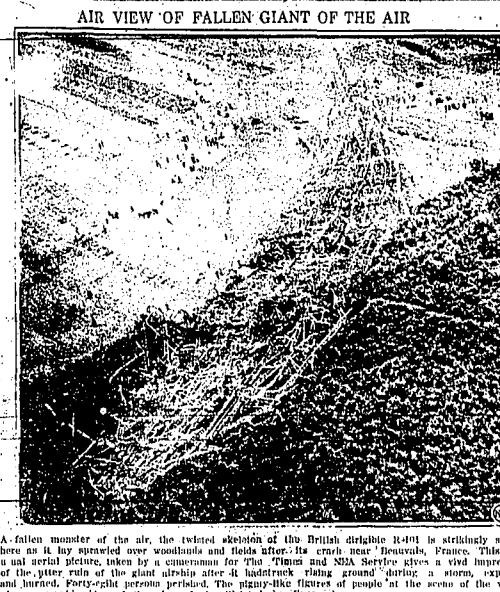

For some years the government has been shipping north and eastern tissues to Europe. These year-old bison, and slaughtered about 1000 more for research purposes on the continent, but the market is still small.

Sixty-eight bison were taken in 1929, and 100 last year, and 100 are anticipated to be taken after an absence of several years.

In shipping the animals out of Canada, Indians at Wainwright park, that is, the Indians of Eastern Park, who have given up their hunting grounds, make a wonderful show.

The last season can be pronounced a success. The Indians of Eastern Park, that is, the Indians of Eastern Park, who have given up their hunting grounds, make a wonderful show.

It is the desire of Eastern Park, that is, the Indians of Eastern Park, who have given up their hunting grounds, make a wonderful show.

WEATHER

SOUTHERN IDAHO is being favored with a brand of weather this month that is adding thousands of dollars to the agricultural pay roll. Good weather during the fall here is welcomed by that vast number of farmers laboring to harvest and thresh crops, getting them under cover or to market without damage from rain, from wind, or from cold snaps.

This fall has been remarkable from the standpoint of suitable weather for harvest, a fact which is greatly appreciated by every resident of south central Idaho, who trusts it will continue for an additional short period until the big crops of this section are safely laid away.

ONE A WEEK

THARP escaped from Eagle Island state penitentiary farm a couple of weeks ago; last week one Lualani "absconded" from the farm, but was captured after a few days, much to the satisfaction of prison authorities who were chafing under the embarrassment of having comparatively "new" honor men get away with such apparent ease.

Things were just quieting down when Monday afternoon confusion was added to the mess with the escape of a third "honor man," Leo Kelley, received at the pen a year ago and sentenced to from one to fifteen years for first degree burglary. The usual $50 reward is offered for Kelley's capture.

Verily, the record of one escape a week must haunt Warden Wheeler!

TIME-CLOCKS FOR CO-EDS

THE dean of women at the University of Minnesota proposes that a sort of time clock be installed at sorority houses and rooming houses for all co-eds who go out on parties. Each girl would be obliged, before going out, to mark down on a card the hour she was going and the name of her escort. On her return the hour would be marked down as well.

The problems of a dean of women in a big university are knotty ones, heaven knows; yet it is a little hard to work up any great amount of admiration for this particular scheme. Offhand, one could say that if a girl of college age must be card-indexed as closely as all that, she belongs at home with her mother instead of at college.

OCTOBER AND THE AUTO

OCTOBER is a peculiar month for the motorist. It is of all the months in the year, the best for driving through the open country; yet there is something in the air that makes one feel out of place behind a steering wheel. In October, the automobile is an anachronism.

In October, in fact, is by way of being an old-fashioned month. It calls back the flavor of forgotten days and outworn customs. Its forests turn to flame on the hills; and a thin blue haze drifts over farms and river bottom valleys; and the old days send out ghosts, to come back and cock amused and satiric eyes at the ways of the moderns. A dreamy stage takes possession of things—and the speedy, active automobile does not fit the scene at all.

In October stand city dwellers, who would be lost if you took them half a mile away from the pavement, recall their childhood days in the country. Shocks of corn, regimented on rolling fields like the wigwams of Indian summer, bring back to mind the times when, as a youngster, one played hide and seek among them, burrowed inside of the rustling stalks or furiously made tearful cigarettes of corn silk. One can remember driving in a buggy through the autumn woods, with the wheels sinking quietly in the sandy ruts and the horse amably plodding along at a three-mile-an-hour gait.

There isn't any place in a month like that for the automobile. For the hallmark of October is its sense of leisure, of indolent and unburdened peace; and the automobile is the chosen emblem of an age which has left leisure and indolence far behind it.

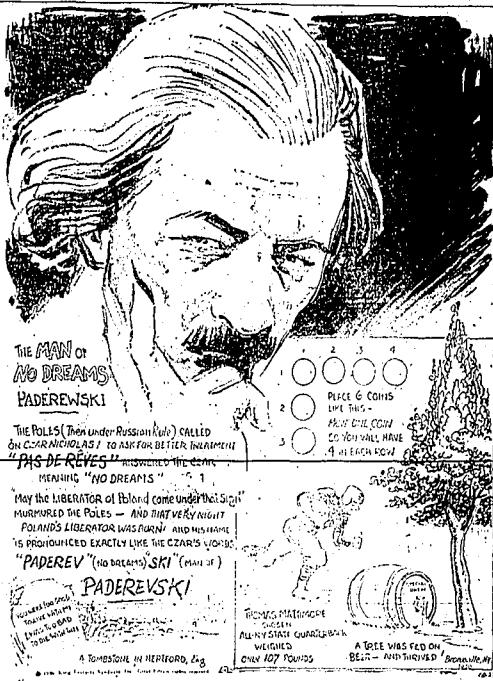

Perhaps that is why the American of 1930, taking a drive through the October country side, feels the time-honored melancholy of autumn so strongly. The brief calm of Indian summer bespeaks a day when people had more time to live than they have now; a day when there were fewer mechanical distractions and less need for them; a day when simplicity had not yet given way to complexity, and human life developed closer to the earth and its old mysteries.

It is not pleasant to be reminded of this; for such a reminder inevitably awakens in a man's mind the dreadful suspicion that he has been bilked somewhere. It puts into his head the notion that all of this progress which he admires so greatly has possibly cost more than it has been worth. He begins to understand how Esau felt after he sold his heritage for a mess of pottage.

The remedy, of course, is clear. Avoid the country highways in October, if you would keep your peace of mind. October, seemingly drowsy and idle, is really deceptive and mocking.

Illustrative of the quick speed of the pony express is the rapidity with which mail arrives at its destination. Sunday at 2 o'clock a letter to Twin Falls resident was sent to Los Angeles. Bruit Club To Meet

The Bruit Club, reserve material of Twin Falls High school, will journey to Shoshone Thursday night, when they will meet the Shoshone eleven in an unseeded contest. The game is admitted being used by Shoshone #26 "Breaker" as their team name. The Bruit Club will meet October 31, when it meets Clarendon. However, the Club is planning to put up a battle that will make Shoshone face another stiff opposition if all goes in its favor.

First Rush of Hunter Season Now Over
Although the first rush of hunters to Shoshone has been for the open season, there will be a second. Tuesday night reports show the district still has a large population of marmots, and many deer are still being brought in by the Twin Falls hunters. The counts will continue until midnight of Friday, October 24. Previous reports of injuries to hunters all point to the fact that the hunters believed none have been hurt, despite the large number seeking deer in a comparatively small area. The hunters are still hunting out-of-the-way places, and a bullet grazed the little finger of his right hand.

BORAH LAUDS

Idaho. He stated that if elected he would do his best to help him in efficiently and painlessly administer the affairs of the state and would welcome the opportunity to work with the people to make this a more desirable Idaho.

In his remarks Senator John Thomas said he was gratified to note only the career of Senator Borah, but the administrations of Idaho's representatives in the lower house were also mentioned.

He hailed Mr. McMurtry as Idaho's "governor-elect," stating the Cassia county man had reached "the top" for the time being.

He asked that the people make Mr. Borah's election unanimous.

Frank Dorch appeared to be in fine fettle and presented a more vivacious appearance, than many of his reason to reason to expect. Contrary to report, Mr. Dorch did not sustain his customary darkness, the voice appears unchanged and his general physical condition is good. He does not lack any of his customary vigor or strength, indicating that the modest campaign he seems to be making for reelection, following indications of a breakdown last summer which sent him to the Maine woods for rest and recreation, is agreed with.

Previous to the night meeting Senator Borah and party were guests at dinner at the Park Hotel, where they dined with Senator Thomas and Sidney Smith Goodine; Horace Rich, Mr. McMurtry, Joel Priest, Justice E. L. Parry, J. H. Hodges, Roy A. Read and S. L. Hodges.

Accompanied by Glad L. Hartman, Elmer Allard, Silas Hartman, Elmer Allard, Perry D. Archie, Ray Allard, Twin Falls, and Miss Ruth Allard, Oden.
