TRAFFIC PATROL

OUT OUR WAY

By Williams

CUTS ACCIDENTS

TRAFFIC patrol system is a strong factor in reducing fatalities on state highways of the country. In 1928 E. L. Lusk, secretary of state, in commenting on the fatality report of the Travelers Insurance company of Hartford, Conn., covering the first nine months of 1929 in comparison with 1928:

"Idaho where a traffic patrol is in effect fatalities were reduced 50 per cent for nine months of 1929 in comparison with the same nine months of 1928. This showing is especially encouraging, as it is the first time since 1910 that gasoline consumption in Idaho has increased 17 per cent. In the first nine months of 1929, increased gasoline consumption means increased travel and automobile deaths had increased in proportion to travel. Idaho would be credited with about 82 deaths for the three quarters of 1928. As a matter of fact the death toll stands at 62."

Many states have traffic patrol and in a great many of these highway deaths have either decreased, the report shows, or increased but slightly. In states with no patrol systems the increase varies from 15 per cent to 35 per cent. California, which has shown a steadily mounting death toll on highways, has just started a patrol system. Mr. Lusk says, and the increase for nine months of 1929 over 1928 is but 5 1/2 per cent. Pennsylvania has a patrol system and there is a reduction in this state.

Instruments Stolen

TWELVE, October 30 (Special).—Dubois entered the Twin Hotel Tuesday morning. He brought some means and helped himself to the musical instruments in the room. He stole a clarinet, a two 11-ft clarinet, and the case. The two horns and cello valued at $250, were resting on top of several other instruments in a small compartment near the room. In both the members of the orchestra were staying.

It is thought that the instruments were taken by an occupant or occupants of the cheaper rooms located nearby, at about five o'clock Tuesday morning. The instruments from which the two were picked are valued at the between $1200 and $1400.

Selby Joins New

Business Agency

MURLEY, Oct. 30 (Special).—C. E. Selby at the Keefe Department store, has secured his reputation with the firm, after nearly five years' membership, in so many businesses for himself.

Mr. Selby has purchased the American meat market, at the corner of Overland and Third, and with a stock of groceries added to the meat stock, will establish himself there. Mrs. Keefe is here from Twin Falls, and is making plans as to the future of the Keefe Department store, but has not announced as yet just what they are to be, or the future management of the establishment.

The cooking school conducted at the Modern Housekeeping school on Overland avenue Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, with Mrs. Mary Standand of San Francisco demonstrating, has been largely attended by a number of women who are interested in new dishes for the menu. Making pastries, bread, and meat and cooking vegetable is part of the lesson given, and every one attending took home new ideas, very worth while to review the menu for home follow-up.

A MOVE TO THE COUNTRY

The outskirts of American cities are generally curious places. There are usually two or three suburban neighborhoods with large houses, well-kept lawns and trees, where the lesser folk live. Then, succeeding these, and straggling out into the country, are more or less haphazard, undesigned regions where houses of no particular style of architecture are tossed in one and two-acre plots of ground, surrounded by vegetable gardens and set off by tumbledown garages.

These are the places that lie between the suburbs and the open country. They are occupied by city folk, generally by workmen, but they partake of the rural; their vegetable gardens are usually flourishing, and there is ordinarily a swarm of children about each one, generally a dog and often a rather commodious chicken coop.

Here is the way one of these homes comes into existence:

A workman buys the land—an acre or low-priced ground, probably—on a land contract. First of all, he builds a garage on it. Usually it is a two-car garage, although he has but one car; and he and his family move in and set up housekeeping beside the family car.

There follows a year or two or three of this. Then, the land paid for, a house is built. Sometimes the occupant is a carpenter or a mason by trade, in which case he builds the house himself. Otherwise, he has it done in the usual way. Eventually—say five years after he first took over the land—he has his place all fixed, with a house, a garage, an acre of ground, and a neat garden. He drives to and from work in the city, his family lives in the open country and all hands are well satisfied.

This is something that the automobile has made possible. It couldn't be done in the old days. The workman had to stick within street car distance of his job, and dismal were the city slums into which he cramped himself. Now, however, if he has energy and courage, he can get away and work out his own salvation.

Now in diagnosing the future we usually assume that it will follow the recent past—that cities will grow larger and larger as the years go by. But is it not quite as reasonable to suppose that this new trend outward will take the place of the old trend inward? And isn't that, on the whole, a better prospect?

Great cities are not, after all, very good places for people to live. This dawning movement to the open country is a good sign. It means a better life, and a measure of real independence for the people who take part in it. Let us hope that it continues.

THE PRICE OF AN "OPEN TOWN"

A DISPATCH remarks that a certain Illinois city is "putting on the lid" because of the future following the murder by gunmen of a gambler's wife. This city, it develops, has been an "open town" for two decades; but this murder indicated the development of formidable, lawless underworld gangs and city officials found a shut-down in order.

Thus, once more, illustrated the curious dilemma of American city officials. If they govern a city where popular sentiment favors an "open town"—and there are many such cities—they court the growth of a dangerous underworld organization, which fattens on the revenues from gambling and booze joints. If they close the town up to choke off the gangsters the voters, deprived of their amusements, are apt to rebel and put in a new regime. All in all, it is a peculiar, and somewhat discouraging sign of the times.

The man up by the creek tree is all the cork they're trying to sell. "Well, sonny, you got right here!" That is a silly question, answered Carpe, with a grin. "It's a cork tree, in a bottle. You still have to learn a thing or two. Why, you've seen cork of some sort in most every place we've been." The cork man then said, "Come on, let's go. I have a load of cork waiting for you. I'll take this cork to other men. 'If you're an' strong like me, you can cut cork faster than I can.' 'Aw, anyone gets tired and you don't know what it's all about.' 'Well, sure you can,' the man continued. 'If you think I'm a cork tree, you can ride atop one of the trees.' 'This made Carpe laugh and he said, 'Well, you're a cork tree, but I'll let you know that I can do it, but I'll just watch you, instead.' 'Soak Cappy said, 'If what you

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (UP)—Six hundred bars of 220 gold pieces, having a total value of $15,000,000, arrived today on the Sueno from Western World from Mexico and Brazil. CLAIMS RIGHT TO SHARE OF ESTATE

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 30 (UP)—Memphis, Tennessee, today had a claimant for a $25,000 prize, half the estate of the late William E. Emery of Hamilton, N. J. He is George Smith Bruce and he's No. 3 in the list of men who claim to be the missing son of Francis F. Emery and his wife, the former Florence Emery, daughter of William E. Emery. The Emerys had placed their five children in the care of one Sophie Landgraf. There is no known record of that son since. When Emery died he left $500,000 to the two grandsons, half to the known grandson, Vivian Emery, of Memphis, Tennessee, and half to the unknown grandson, missing son of the Emerys. It's up to John H. Barker to pick the missing grandson from the growing list of claimants. Today he finished hearing witnesses for James E. Nicholson of Baltimore and Alfred Childers of Los Angeles who presented his claims.

POST STORY DRAMATIZED
"FOR THE TALKING SCREEN" "Spanish Acres" is the popular novel by Hal G. Evans which appeared recently in the Saturday Evening Post. It has been dramatized with compelling effect on the talking screen under the title of "The Santa Fe Trail" and will be presented at the Idaho Theater Friday and Saturday. A vivid and picturesque romance of the Arizona frontier, the picture emerges as first rate entertainment, maintaining its suspense and adventure from the opening scene to the final climax. In every way it is a picture combining to best advantage the elements of adventure and romance.
