Democrats Give Pledge to Restore Nation's Morale; Republicans Accept Offer

PARTY LEADERS MOVE TO AVOID POSSIBLE CHAOS

Bourbons Have No Desire to Aggravate Business Conditions by Causing a Deadlock in Congress at Washington

WASHINGTON—Leaders of the Democratic party nationally have joined in pledging the party to a cooperative effort in a legislative effort to bring about a peace of mind in the nation.

The statement in full follows: "A remarkable victory has come to the Democratic party. We, however, regard it as a political triumph, rather than as a great opportunity for constructive service."

"For a year and a half the Democratic party has been engaged in a campaign as they could, not to destroy the administration, not to weaken it, but to bring about a political figure, not to resist and to correct a situation that had become intolerable."

CITIZENS HONOR HEROES OF WAR AT SERVICE HERE

Fitting Tribute Paid Men Who Fought in Conflict That Ended 12 Years Ago With Signing of Armistice

At a stillness fraught with memories of that first Armistice day, 12 years ago, when the order to "Come Home" brought an almost ghastly silence to battlefields long harassed by terrifically noisy detonations, Twin Falls paused at 11 a. m. Tuesday morning, while veterans, legionnaires and those who fought on this side stood with bared and bent heads to do honor to those who knew their all in the greatest conflict of nations the world has ever known.

Tuesday morning was devoted to exercises in celebration of the Armistice which ended the war, and in honor of those who died at 11:30 a. m. members of the American Legion paraded to the Twin Falls high school auditorium.

The ceremony was presided over by Mayor Beaumont, who delivered a large address to the veterans and students.

At 11 o'clock the Legion held memorial services at the monument erected by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Major Beaumont Tells How World War Ended

Major Beaumont is shown here holding the order to "Come Home" which he transmitted on Nov. 11, 1918. He plans to place it in the Stanford University museum.

By Dan Thomas, NEA Service Writer. SIOUX FALLS, S.D., Nov. 11.—The man who aided the thunder of the guns of America's greatest army on Nov. 11, 1918, and formally brought America's part in the conflict to a close, is celebrating the 12th anniversary of that great occasion here by calmly going about his regular day's work as a watchman at the gates of a moving picture studio.

He is Major George D. Beaumont, veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, who received from General Dyer, August 7, 1919, the honor of being the first American legionnaire to set foot on Nov. 11, the order to notify all American legionnaires of the cessation of hostilities.

London Naval Treaty Hailed As Milestone On Road to Harmony

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (UP)—The text in part of President Hoover's Armistice Day address delivered today at Washington follows:

"Upon this day all thoughts must turn to our heroic dead whose lives were given in defense of the liberties and ideals of our country. Their contribution to these priceless heritages was made without reservation; they gave the full measure of their intelligence, energy and enthusiasm and life itself, forfeiting their portion of further happiness—all that we and our children might live on more safely; more happily, and more assuredly, and of the precious blessings of security and peace."

A solemn obligation lies upon us to press forward in our pursuit of these things for which they died. Our duty is to seek ever new and widening opportunities for the world against the forces of evil."

This year 1930 has been rendered, and notable in peace annals, by the achievement of the London naval treaty. That has disposed of one of the great naval powers—the great naval powers—that is, in competition in naval construction with the United States. There is no longer a race in the reduction of warships.

The promotion of peace and war, however, can rest upon the accomplishment of any one year. The outlook for peace, is brighter than for half a century. Yet we can not overlook the fact that nations in many ways are at war. There are still too many nations that are not only the accumulated age-old enmities and ambitions which are alive with prejudice, emotion, and passion, but they will be assured that there will always be an increasing crop of controversies between nations.

GIBSON PROMISES U. S. COOPERATION

GENEVA, Nov. 11 (UP)—The admission of the United States to the direct limitation of war materials and land, sea and air weapons, was pledged by Hugh Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium, before the preparatory disarmament committee of the League of Nations today.

ARMISTICE DAY

THE most modern holiday of the year is here. Armistice day, only twelve years old, shall perhaps endure for all time and musty tomes hundreds of years hence will record how the day was celebrated during the lives of the generation in which it had its inception—celebrated in an entirely different manner for instance, from that other day which marks the tribute to the veterans of our own Civil war.

Not only is Armistice Day, as we know it, a modern holiday, but it is observed in the modern manner. Instead of being a day of sorrow and sadness, it is sprightly with the happiness which comes from victory and it is marked by athletic events, by dances, by parties and by jollification generally.

It is significant that in this day of peace and of hopes and plans for doing away with war, that half of our great national holidays in some manner glorify peace—none glorifies war. Independence day, Memorial day and Armistice day, are celebrations of Peace. We do not celebrate the anniversary of the date the United States entered the World war or any other war—that would be abhorrent. We celebrate and observe the days and the events which have to do with the ending of war and honor the men who contributed to those accomplishments.

Armistice day is one of the spontaneous holidays. The boys who in France cannot appreciate the spirit with which America greeted the signing of the Armistice, just as the citizenry at home can little appreciate the attitude of those men who endured the terrible hardships of modern warfare in 1917-18.

But on the occasions of the anniversaries of Armistice, these boys, now mature men, and the citizens of the nation at large, many of them bereft of soldier sons, find a common ground for the expression of their patriotism and for understanding the feelings and emotions of each other in this modern holiday, the anniversary of The Armistice.

The nation will thrill today as it hears the words of the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, the President of the United States, express over the radio the tribute of the nation; and individuals will smother a sob or tingle anew to the dying strains of the bugler's taps in memory of lives which will never come back, but thank God they will be thrills which come from the knowledge of the strength and security of the Nation, joy that it is peace which is being celebrated, and only tears of regret that such sacrifice as was made was necessary, with a prayer on the lips that no additional holidays shall ever need be added to the roster to mark the end of another war.

STATESMANSHIP

THE nation will not be slow to shower its admiration on the patriotic spirit which manifestly prompted the leaders of the two great political parties in their asserted desire to bury the hatchet and unite their forces to help agriculture and business and industry out of the slough of despond.

We have had too much of politics and not enough of statesmanship; too much of adroitness and not enough interest in the nation's welfare. It is not successful political parties which are needed in this country nearly so much as the successful administration of the people's government.

When political parties was fat, governments suffer, for then men become more interested in party power and achievement than in official accomplishment. The overtures made by seven leaders of the national Democratic party over the week-end to which the Republican party forces were quick to respond, smacked more of patriotism and statesmanship than anything that has come to light of late outside the commendable efforts of administration leaders to engage in peace contracts with the nations of the world.

It is the wish of every American that the evidences of high principle actuating the leaders of the two forces will result in all the good that is hoped for and that politics will prove to be meritorious in this particular instance at least, and instead of having to bear the stigma of an evil which, whether justified or not it would be charged with having created, will use its good influences in putting to route those elements which destroy confidence, prosperity, comfort and happiness.

One can appreciate the ire of the Twin Falls man who last week is reputed to have severely punished another for having transgressed on his corns. Many have wished to do worse than that, but few have been able to satisfy their impulse so completely.

Order Called at 5 a. m.

"I received General Legerette's order to come to the front at 7 o'clock in the morning, and started looking it out along the front from front at seven ten," he says. "It was to take effect at 11 o'clock, the hour at which the war was to be officially ended."

"One first thought was to make sure the order was received by every commanding officer, so they were sent out to the front at 11 o'clock. To accomplish this we first telegraphed the order to the five generals commanding the five army corps at the front. They telephoned the order to them. After that I made copies of the message, one of them over to the radio, and sent others by motorcycle messengers to each of the five commanding officers."

Armistice Signed at 5 a. m.

The armistice had been signed at five that morning. On the American front, as it happened, hostilities continued right up to 11, and German soldiers were killed after the armistice had been signed; after the order had been transmitted from general headquarters in fact.

The following is quoted from a dispatch sent to the New York Times on Armistice Day of 1918 by Adolphe L. Johnson, The Times' correspondent with the A. E. F.:

"On this front the section north-east of Verdun we attacked this morning at 2:30 o'clock, after heavy artillery preparation. Reaching the front this morning, expecting to find quiet following in view of the humbleness of the cessation of hostilities, I found the attack in full swing with every gun in the line at full speed and roaring in a glorious chorus, singing the away song of Prussians. It was a glorious chorus drowning the din of German shells. We were attacking."

"Picture, if you will, that scene at 10:30 this morning. Back in the rear everyone knew that the war was to stop at 11 o'clock, but in the front line nobody knew except the officers. The doughboys knew nothing except that their orders were to keep going. They had heard rumors, but at 10:30 they were chasing the Germans back from their last hold on the hills east of the Meuse. At 10:40 at 10:50, a 10:55 they were fighting on. What could be more dramatic than when at 11 a. m. the platoon leaders in the front line sharply called the order, 'Cease Fire!' and explained that hostilities had been called off."

But to get back to Major Beaumont: he says, with good reason, that he will never forget that first Armistice day. "That really was the greatest day of the war," he says. "We had been under fire continuously for 48 days and nights, and the nerves of all the men were completely shattered. Things were just the reverse over there from what they were in this country on that day. Over here a sudden broke loose when the news was received, while over there we had quiet for the first time in 40 days."

Hearty Cheers Celebrated
"Of course, there was plenty of celebrating around headquarters. We all were yelling like boys. I mean, but that was also dead silence as compared to the booming of the guns we had heard for so long. Although we knew the guns were to stop firing, it was quite a shock when they did. For a few minutes we all just looked at it all over, and wondered why we were left when we had seen so many of our buddies shot down. Then the drinking started. The French had a lot of champagne carried away, and it all appeared as if by magic."

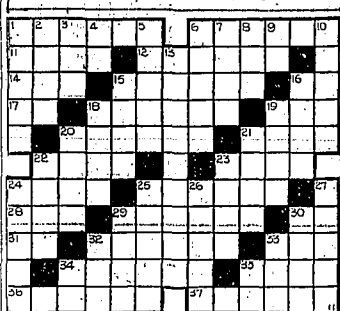

Major Beaumont is not going to keep the earliest copy of the "Cease Fire" order much longer. Many newspapers have sought it but he has loaned it to the museum of Diamond University.

BANDIT QUARTET
LOOTS HOSTELRY

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Nov. 11 (UP)—Four bandits early today robbed the Maritain Hot Springs hotel of $2500 and escaped after temporarily kidnapping three employees of the hotel.

According to reports to the local sheriff's office, the bandits placed the night clerk, the watchman and the bookkeeper under arrest. They then forced the bookkeeper to open the safe.

After they took the money four armed men ordered the three hotel employees to enter the bandits' automobile. They drove them to a point near Shiloh Slide in Santa Ana canyon where the prisoners were liberated.

The men who were held up reported to the sheriff's office as men as they reached a telephone. The night clerk gave his name as Alvin Kessler and the watchman as Fred Jones. The sheriff's office said it failed to learn the bookkeeper's name.

COMMUNISTS BANNED
PARIS, Nov. 11 (UP)—The radical Socialist newspaper, the public said today that, despite vigorous censorship of events in French industry, it had learned that 1,000 natives in Annam had been killed since September. Revolutionary uprisings have been reported from Indo-China recently, officials blaming the war on Communist activities.

Diamond Broker
Loses His Gems

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 11 (UP)—Morris Feiberg, Los Angeles diamond broker, stopped from a train here today into a crowd on the platform.

A man jostled him and picked the broker's pocket, emptying a wallet containing diamonds valued at $40,000 and undervalued. Feiberg did not discover his loss until he had eaten breakfast in the station lunchroom and went to have his ticket validated. The pickpocket missed another wallet which contained stones valued at $20,000.
