I Idaho Senator Will Be a Candidate Along With Coolidge and Roosevelt, Predicts Senator Blaine, S. Carolina

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 (UPI)— Senator Coleman Livingston Blaine, Dem., S. C., says there will be a third party in 1928 with Franklin D. Roosevelt, Robert M. La Follette, and William E. Borah as candidates for president and vice-president.

"It's Democracy," he said.

A party selected by Blaine as the "wet democracy" he believes the prohibition amendment will comprise a Republican in first place, and a Democratic second.

SOUTH FOR PROHIBITION

"If the Democrats nominate a wet candidate and put an anti-prohibition amendment in the platform, the south will not follow the party."

The south will stand for prohibition whether or not the south has prohibition.

Blaine, who was asked if he believed the prohibition amendment would comprise a Republican in first place, and a Democratic second, said:

"I don't think he will run again."

"For myself," said the retiring senator, "I don't want any appointment. I am going home to practice law and two years hence shall be a candidate for the Senate."

Blaine was asked about President Hoover's nomination of a wet candidate, which was taken in 1928.

"Well," he replied, "President Hoover may win the nomination but I don't think he will run again."

"As far as I know, he will be beaten," he said.

"The next election, I am going to practice law and two years hence shall be a candidate for the Senate."

CHICAGO, Nov. 25 (UPI)—Notre Dame one of the nation's best and most defeated and united teams, and Northwestern, co-champion of the Big Ten, share a majority of the places on the mythical all-western football team selected today by the United Press.

With twelve places on the first team, including all alternate, three of the Big Ten stars were on four of them. Northwestern three, and Michigan, Purdue, Ohio State, Nebraska and Haskell one each.

West Point's Jimmie Davis, who comes close to being the greatest, all-round player of the year in the Big Ten, received the alternate berth on the team. Foster, a halfback played end on defense, and the halfback on offense.

"I feel that Foster is the only one to make the team in the country, but one of the very best backs as well," commented Coach Sam Willman. "He is a great kicker, halfback and end player, a fine blocker and an excellent tactician in general."

Four members of the Big East are candidates for All-American recognition. Frank Cardillo, Notre Dame quarterback, who won All-American laurels last seaon, has placed his hopes on a return to the team after two years without a defeat or tie.

Marchy Schwartz, whose 162 runs have "trained almost every Notre Dame victory," is one of the country's most dangerous runner. He is also a superb passer. Weller, Haskell's fullback, is considered the best running back developed in the Mite era. Vallyer, a

MOSCOW HOOP OUTLOOK POOR

Only Two Lettermen Return to Aid Coach Fox During the Season Ahead

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, Moscow, Nov. 23—Approximately 30 men have answered the first号召 of the season at the University of Idaho basketball team, but only two lettermen are sophomores. Idaho will be represented this winter by a team composed mostly of new men.

Development of a center is the biggest problem facing the team. Ed Hall, who was considered the best bat at the end of last season, failed to play his grade, required for eligibility. Maxine Cullinan, George O'Brien, Smith, Hurley, both sophomores, the late transfer from the Southern Branch at Pocatello, are the leading candidates for the pivot job.

The two lettermen on hand are Stanton Hall, Boise, and Idaho's own John Thomas. Both Hall is a junior and Drummond a senior. Wes Shariff, Pocatello, another good guard, probably will not be played on the home field and a special office force will be provided to answer telephone calls.

Members of the House of Representatives and the Senate are paid bother in the hands of the district school athletic board of control.

The Evening Times will receive two quarterly scores of the final contest to be played before the grades required for eligibility.

FOOTBALL ON THE RADIO

THE football fan no longer needs to be a hardy individual. He no longer needs to shiver in rain-swept bleachers or crouch in upturned coat collar while an inhospitable gale drives across the field—it's the weather is unfavorable—or even if it isn't—he can sit at home, snug in his arm chair, turn on the radio and get the whole game in comfort and ease.

However, he is up against one drawback that does not confront the man who actually goes to the game in the flesh. He has to get his football through the medium of the radio announcer; and in all too many cases this is a severe and soul-racking trial, almost too grievous to be borne.

Football radio announcers, as a general thing, seem to fall into three classes; the deliberate, the excitable and the downright dizzy. Each class, in its own way, leads the football fan to much profanity.

The "deliberate" announcer is a heavy cross to bear. At a crucial moment in a tense game he will describe things somewhat like this:

"McFinnigan gets the ball . . . He goes around right . . . O'Nutt is making interference for him . . . Now Purdy . . . and no . . . (an unusually long pause) . . . no, it's Whorle . . . Whorle, makes the tackle . . . Whorle gets him . . ."

And then, as an afterthought he remarks that the ball carrier gained five yards on the play. Now all of this was happening with the attacking team needing one yard to make a first down on the enemy's 10-yard line, and with two minutes left to play; but the important news comes in last, and a bad last at that, while the anxious fan writhes and twists and nearly has apoplexy waiting for the leisurely announcer to get to the point.

But the excitable announcer is little better. He goes like this:

"There he goes! There he goes! He's going off tackle! Oh! Oh! Look at that boy run! Wow! He's tearing around right end, behind marvelous interference, dodging and fighting his way—he's clear, whew, now they've caught him—a beautiful tackle, simply beautiful! . . . He gained a yard and a half."

Or else this announcer simply blows up and emits a wild whoop, indicating that something sensational has happened—and does not get down to earth, to let the radio listeners know just what it was, for a whole minute.

Under the heading, "downright dizzy" come the most obnoxious of all. This classification includes, first of all, men who know nothing whatever about football but who valiantly describe the game anyway. It includes announcers who are smitten with their own alleged capacity for humor, and give the fan his football through a ponderous web of fourth-rate wisecracks and smug guffaws. It includes the men who describe the scenery, and the "colorful spectacle" and miasma. It includes men who seem to think that the best broadcast is the worst.

Most of them fall into one of these three classifications. There are exceptions of course; but they are few. It is a tough break for the fan.

SAFETY IN THE AIR

FIGURES issued by the Commerce Department shed interesting light on aviation accidents during the first six months of 1930.

They show that flying on regularly-scheduled commercial air lines is safer than ever before—safer, by 200 per cent, than last year, with only one fatal accident for every 3,000,000 miles flown. Yet in other types of flying, crashes are increasing at an alarming rate.

The country is fairly full of young men who have just gained their wings; and these young men, apparently, are hitting the ground more frequently than might be desired. The lesson for the average man seems to be clear: do not go up in any plane except one operated by an established company on a regular route, with veteran pilots. Shun the barnstormer, and don't let your friends entice you into going up with them.

INTOXICATION

A FLORIDA police court judge seems to have hit upon the solution to a question that has puzzled some of our best minds for a long time—namely, how to tell whether a man is drunk or just pleasantly stimulated.

Before this judge were brought four men who had been picked up by the police the night before. The men protested that they had been gay but not drunk. They had been standing, it seemed on a street corner, singing. The judge asked them what song they had been singing, and they told him, "Sweet Adeline." Immediately, without asking any more questions, the judge found them guilty and fined them $10 a piece.

This seems like an eminently satisfactory solution. Who, indeed, sings "Sweet Adeline" but the inebriated?

RED CROSS DRIVE

"LILLION" COMES TOMORROW

At the Imagineers charm and laugher, "Lillian," the girl play of a cartoon character who evoked wainness, "Lillian," has been artistically transformed into a motion picture screen and will be presented to the public in the theatre. Starting off at 1:30 p.m. with the "Can Can" matinee.

"Lillian" is set in a miniature world of its own, and is as much as it can be.

The story deals with the love of "Lillian" for a boy, never once saying "I love you" but always saying "I like you." The boy, a little girl who really knew how much she loved him, was a good boy, but he was a real rascal, and after a series of trials and tribulations, "Lillian" got him.

VISITOR TO TWIN FALLS TELLS OF ODD EXPERIENCE

Jacques D'Armand Used an Auto Headlight to Signal Grounded Vessel and Get Interview for United Press

How Jacques D'Armand, a recent Twin Falls visitor, signaled dots and dashes in international code by means of his automobile headlight and received an answer in flashes from a pocket torch, to get a United Press interview which may appear in the "Illustrated Hutchinson" when that issue is released (5 miles south of San Francisco), is told in the current issue of Editor & Publisher.

Mr. D'Armand, when in Twin Falls, this summer on a visit to The Evening Times office, told of his most extraordinary adventure. From correspondence in the Mexican papers and revealed that he had made an early visit to Twin Falls by horseback, coming from the west via Durkee about 20 years ago.

His latest adventure is told in the following words:

"The ship's passengers had radio equipment and could talk in darkness and without means of radio communication after the departure of an SOS. A message hunted about in SOS was, 'We are lost.' Mr. D'Armand with the headlights repeated in a good news story and enabled the ship's captain to learn where they were. The captain, Mr. D'Armand stayed through the night. Every 30 minutes signals were exchanged from ship to shore."

Following his return to the SOS ship at San Francisco, Frank H. Bartholomew, Pacific Division manager of the United Press, wired him to come to the office at Pizzetti Point in hope of locating the tank.

"All we just by luck that we located the ship," Mr. Bartholomew stated. "We happened to notice flares and headed off the highway and across the field until we came to the ship." When we arrived, several persons were attempting to climb the ship, but they could do little to help because they could not yet spank when we reached the deck of the wreck.

"I used a peculiar type of headlight on my car so I could turn one to turn the lights off and on quickly. If producing dots and dash like, Mr. Wolfe Jacques was received as a hero. Captain Art Taylor of the San Francisco News tried to measure the ship's right side to the last centimeter. All right, but he had to fall for him to receive. When Jacques returned, he tried using the lamp with such success that Captain Art, who had been standing by, asked him to stand by, so we remained all night."

This is the second time that Mr. D'Armand has been stranded in the middle of the ocean, having been unable to find a landing station. During the Santa Barbara earthquake of 1925 he arrived on the coast only to find that there was no port available. The Morse telegraph, So. Mr. Bartholomew raised up an emergency power station by using his auto storage battery, which was unable to send out a signal.

Mr. D'Armand learned the international code when he was 10 years old while attending school in a small town in California. He was a student for the Southern California Edison Company working on the search for the Morse telegraph. This region was so inaccessible that the men were sent on communication purposes and he became well acquainted with the code.

Members of the staff of all San Francisco new papers were on the scene of the wreck by dawn of Nov. 25. Photo copies were stretched across the newsroom equipment from several film companies including International Newsreel, Inc., and the Associated Press, making the burial ground of many ships become a scene of great activity.
