Autopsy Seeks Cause of Man's Mystery Death

State's Chemist Will Probe Hint Of Poison

W. E. Taylor, who resided in a trailer house near Harmon park and was taken to the county general hospital Sunday afternoon suffering from what attending physicians said at the time "resembled poisoning," died today at 8:05 a. m. The body was immediately taken to White Mortuary where Dr. H. L. Stowe, county coroner, assisted by local physicians held a post mortem. Specimens of the dead man's blood and tissue were sent to the state chemist at Boise for examination to disclose the exact cause of death.

Ultimate cause of death, according to Dr. Stowe, was "probably by pneumonia caused by aspiration of vomitous material into the right lung." Whether or not the death was actually caused from poison will not be known pending word from the Boise findings.

Taylor, 43, was taken to the hospital Sunday unconscious after he and his wife, Mrs. Martha Taylor, 30, were found in their trailer home by Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Kenner, neighbors.

Found by Neighbor
Mrs. Kenner had gone to see why the couple were sleeping so late, and after knocking on the door, was admitted by Mrs. Taylor who collapsed on the floor. Mr. Taylor was in bed unconscious and had done considerable vomiting, investigation showed.

Both were removed to the hospital where authorities said little chance was held for the man to live. Mrs. Taylor was reported today as being "about the same." Her husband never regained consciousness.

The couple left Kansas last June, records show, and moved to Denver and then to Idaho Falls before coming here four months ago.

Sister Coming
A sister of the dead man, Margaret Crist of Hoxie, Kansas, was notified Monday by local police officers and in a long distance telephone conversation the same day informed the police to spare no expense in efforts to save her brother's life. It was understood today, when she was notified of his death, that she would come to Twin Falls as soon as possible.

The marriage of the two was the second for Mrs. Taylor. Little is known at the present time of the whereabouts of her first husband.

Today, it was rumored, a calf which died suddenly in the near vicinity of the Taylor home had been put into cold storage for preservation. At the present time, however, it is said to have no bearing on the case.

The body is being held at the White mortuary pending further arrangements.

Both police and sheriff's officers are continuing an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death.

GENERAL STRIKE ORDER FORESEEN

Car Building Company Asked To Change Policies Immediately

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (UP)—An official of the committee for industrial organization said today a general strike order against the General Motors corporation was "a virtual certainty" unless the automobile company swiftly changed its policies.

"Unless they change their attitude with respect to their unregulated policy there will be nothing left for the workers but to fight for their rights," the official said.

He said the order would be issued by Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, if it is found necessary.

The CIO has announced readiness to back a walkout with all its resources which would supplement the auto unions' war chest.

John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, has no comment to make today on the statement of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., General Motors president, which accepted the challenge by Lewis and the auto union and stated that General Motors would not allow a "labor organization" to "run" its plants.

Insurance Company Files Court Appeal

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5 (AP)—Charging a "flagrant conspiracy to commit" through the courts, with the aid of state agencies, a series of crimes and unlawful acts, briefs were filed in the state supreme court today in support of an appeal from a superior court decision nullifying a reorganization plan for the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company.

SPEAKER WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD

75th CONGRESS OPENS SESSION

BANKHEAD RENAMED SPEAKER

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (UP)—The 75th congress—top body with Democrats in both senate and house—was assembled at 12:02 p. m. today.

With traditional horseplay and confusion in the house and more formal routine and ceremony in the senate, the nation's legislators inaugurated a session expected to adjourn some six months hence after enactment of the framework of President Roosevelt's second New Deal.

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson advised the senate that neutrality legislation will be the first important action in the new session.

First business was the routine of organization. Galleries crowded. Galleries in the upper house were crowded as Vice President John Nance Garner, garbed in ordinary blue business suit, rapped to order the senate, comprising 76 Democrats, 16 Republicans and four minor party members.

In the house fewer spectators than usual watched initial proceedings. Galleries were sparsely filled as the session was called to order by Clerk South Trimble under the glare of movie light lights. Microphones transmitted the proceedings by radio broadcast over the nation.

Bankhead Approved
Principal business of the house was the formality of electing William B. Bankhead as speaker. This was approved quickly on a strict party vote. Membership of the house foreign affairs committee was quickly approved, so that it will be prepared to rush emergency legislation through to guard the country's neutrality in the Spanish civil conflict.

The vote for speakership was announced as:
Bankhead 323.
Snell 81.
Schneider 10.
Fred L. Crawford, R., Mich., 2.

Officers Poised For Seizure of Kidnapers

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 5 (UP)—Federal and local law enforcement agencies poised today for instant action to capture the kidnapers of Charles Mattson as soon as the lad is released.

While ready to launch a giant manhunt, officers are awaiting the actual release of the boy before trying to trap the man or men who kidnaped the boy from his home nine days ago.

Even though the kidnaper is located he will not be seized for fear an accomplice holding the boy at some hideout may kill him and flee, they said. It was recalled in the Weyerhaeuser kidnapping, William Mahan was seen placing signals to lead the boy's father to the place where the $200,000 ransom was to be delivered, but he was not stopped.

Return Awaited
Safe return of the boy is the primary interest of Dr. W. W. Mattson, he declared in a public statement. Show law enforcement officers Monday ceased their open hunt for the kidnaper, Dr. Mattson said he had spent his "most peaceful day."

"If they will only let me alone until I get off this spot," he said. "This has been the most peaceful day I have had yet—no one's interference goes. No one, to my knowledge, has followed me about as they have on previous occasions."

New contact between Dr. Mattson and the kidnaper was believed imminent and exchange of the ransom near if the kidnaper can prove he has the boy alive and well.

ARMY BOMBING PLANE VANISHES

Rescue Armada Leaves Coast Field in Search for Missing Craft

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5 (UP)—Army authorities disclosed today that a Martin bomber with two men aboard disappeared last night after being sighted less than 15 miles from its base in Hamilton field, 25 miles north of here.

Those aboard were Second Lieutenant Herbert E. Knierim, pilot, and Sergeant Hartley Roberts, observer.

Fifteen planes droned away from Hamilton field this morning to search for the missing craft, which was one of a flight of seven bombers which had been maneuvering over the upper San Joaquin valley.

The plane was due back to Hamilton field at 10 o'clock last night. Officers said it was sighted a few minutes previously in the vicinity of Vallejo, less than 15 miles by air line east of Hamilton field.

It was reported raining heavily when the six other planes of the flight landed at Hamilton field. Fellow fliers of Lieutenant Knierim believed he might have been forced down in the marshes of upper San Francisco bay between Vallejo and Hamilton field.

Both were removed to the hospital where authorities said little chance was held for the man to live. Mrs. Taylor was reported today as being "about the same." Her husband never regained consciousness.

ZERO WAVE HITS CENTRAL STATES

Intense Cold Weather Expected End Pneumonia and 'Flu' Epidemics

CHICAGO, Jan. 5 (UP)—Zero cold swept over the midwest and into the east today to end unseasonable weather blamed for a nationwide outbreak of influenza and pneumonia.

Chicago counted 500 dead in two weeks from respiratory infections resulting from warm, wet weather. Denver had 100 deaths, Detroit 48, Pittsburgh 42.

The outbreak probably will stop after the return of normally cold weather, said Dr. Herman N. Bonderson, president of the Chicago board of health. Infections incurred over the week-end probably will continue to develop, however, and full benefits of the cold wave may not be felt for several days.

Government forecasters predicted a "severe cold wave" for the north central states, with temperatures around zero in Nebraska, the Dakotas, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan and Indiana.

"Much colder" weather was predicted for New York, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Only snow in prospect appeared destined for the Great Lakes area. A foot of snow was reported in the Dakotas.

PLUNGE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (UP)—A senate elevator plunged two stories out of control but was halted by safety devices before reaching the capital basement. Eighteen passengers were shaken but uninjured.

Barrymore Wants Wife To Be Home Girl; Quarrel Continues

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 5 (UP)—John Barrymore's old-fashioned belief that a wife's place is in the home, not on the stage or screen, was given as the real cause today for his break with dark-eyed Elaine Barrie, his bride of two months.

"A wife's place is in the home," he stormed in Barrymore's rage. And that was his way in the revival of spots which the couple knew in their courtship days when Miss Barrie chased him across the country in a "love derby."

But Miss Barrie had her place to say in this new episode and she spoke it with all the feeling of a "career vs. marriage" drama.

"I have my life to live also," she spluffed, dabbing at tears. "I want to combine my duties as a wife with those of an actress."

New Measures Threatened

Advocates Changes in Present Idaho Liquor And Gambling Statutes

BIARRITZ, France, Jan. 5 (UP)—The Basque radio today announced that the Spanish government at Valencia had decided to refuse to comply with the German ultimatum on the freighter Palos.

BOISE, Jan. 5 (UP)—Governor Barzilla W. Clark today urged liberalization of state laws pertaining to liquor and gambling, provision for formation of power districts, and some form of transaction tax, among recommendations in his first legislative message.

Speaking before a joint assembly of Idaho's 24th legislature, the newly-inaugurated governor presented his program, commenting on taxation, conservation of resources, liquor control, law enforcement, public health, state institutions and relief.

Opening his message with an attack on monopolistic control, Clark challenged the lawmakers to "submerge partisan feelings in a spirit of patriotism, and put aside personal glory and gain for a cooperative spirit which is paramount to individual achievement."

Face Responsibility
"The overwhelming vote in the recent election has placed an extraordinary responsibility upon governmental executives. This vote must not be construed solely as a personal victory for any individual candidate—it was a vote of approval of genuinely popular government."

Clark recommended leaving the retail liquor business to private operators by proposing that the state control wholesale distribution, and place retailers under heavy bond to carry out rules and regulations covering such points as hours of closing and sale to minors.

Considerable doubt prevails as to whether Clark could prevent Miller from serving his full term, should he desire to do so, since the appointment was for a constitutional term.

Miller, former attorney-general, was appointed commissioner of immigration, labor and statistics by former Governor C. Ben Ross during the last two weeks of his administration. The appointment was to run for two years.

"Lawyer Not My Type of Man For Commissioner," Says Clark

BOISE, Jan. 5 (UP)—Governor B. W. Clark said today that while he has nothing against Bert H. Miller personally, "a lawyer is not my type of man for labor commissioner."

Miller, former attorney-general, was appointed commissioner of immigration, labor and statistics by former Governor C. Ben Ross during the last two weeks of his administration. The appointment was to run for two years.

Considerable doubt prevails as to whether Clark could prevent Miller from serving his full term, should he desire to do so, since the appointment was for a constitutional term.

Leaders Predict ARMS EMBARGO
WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (UP)—Legislative authority for an embargo on arms to Spain by Saturday was the goal of administration leaders today as congress convened. In New York the first shipment of a projected $2,770,000 shipment of American planes and motors was being loaded on a Spanish freighter.

Officials believed both houses would pass through a special resolution granting President Roosevelt specific embargo power in the Spanish civil war with all possible speed.

Oddities From Here And There

MODELS
RICHMOND, Calif., Jan. 5—Police emergency cars and an ambulance clanged to a vacant lot here after a telephone report that two airplanes had crashed in mid-air. Neighborhood boys today repaired their model planes involved in the crash.

MISTAKE
ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 5 (UP)—It was all a mistake, police reported to Iona McDonald when they returned the automobile she believed had been stolen from in front of her home. The bumper of another lady's car, it seems, became caught in that of Miss McDonald's. The latter's car wound up in a parking place six blocks away without the former having been aware of its presence.

JAILED
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5 (UP)—Jonas Staff became so excited when Mrs. Henry Clark screamed for help after she slipped and fell into a bathtub that he ran into the street and fired a revolver to summon aid. Police came in answer. They took Mrs. Clark to a hospital and jailed Clark for discharging a pistol in the street.

ORDINANCE
SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 5 (UP)—Chief of Police Paul Frey admitted he wasn't sure what people call "obscene art" when he was faced with enforcing an ordinance against "indecent, immoral or scandalous literature." "I've seen art," Chief Frey said, "but where do you draw the line? The question has some fine points when you get down to 'gross' tactics." He asked the city attorney for an opinion.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (UP)—Mayor Furey, Jr., LaGuardia disclosed his lyric writing ability yesterday when the fire department's glee club sang several of his songs. They outlined the administration's work. A sample, sung to the child tune of "This Is the Way We Wash Our Clothes":
(Sound effect of running water)
This is the way we wash the streets,
Wash the streets,
Clean the streets;
This is the way we flush the streets,
And keep the bugs a-rollin'.

TRIBUTE
NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (UP)—Twelve hundred persons paid $15 each to attend a dinner in honor of Lucrezia Bori, Metropolitan opera star, Sunday night. The extra attraction was opera and concert songs.

BERLIN, Jan. 5 (UP)—An official communique said today that the commander of the German fleet in Spanish waters had delivered an ultimatum to the Spanish loyalist government demanding release of the cargo and passenger taken from the German steamship Palos.

Unless the Palos' cargo and its passenger are surrendered by 8 a. m. January 8, it was said, the commander of the fleet threatened that the German government would "dispose of" the loyalist steamships Aragon and Marta Junquera, seized by German warships, and put the proceeds to the credit of the Spanish nationalist government.

Should further acts of piracy be committed against German ships, the ultimatum ended, "the German government reserves the right to take new measures."

The communique was issued by the official news agency, the Deutsches Nachrichten Bureau.

Further Seizures Possible
It was assumed that ominous reference to "new measures" might mean either further seizures of loyalist ships or some even sterner action, for the Nazi government seemed determined to get back the cargo and passenger taken from the Palos and thus uphold the right of its ships to play the seas unchallenged.

The Aragon was seized by the battleship Admiral Graf von Spee in southern Spanish waters and the Marta Junquera by the cruiser Koenigsberg off the bay of the Biscay coast.

It was believed that both freighters would be released.

Opposes High Fees
"I do not believe in high license fees or any other plan which will encourage bootlegging," he said. "Our present setup has been largely experimental and our present situation is far from satisfactory. There are many reasons why it is necessary for us to take progressive steps on the temperance question, and by that I mean progress toward temperance."

Turning to law enforcement, Clark said, "At present, the public mind will not accept a prohibition of gambling in all phases of which you are familiar, but I believe it is possible for regulation to be on a basis where the law will be respected rather than evaded or entirely disregarded."

The governor recommended so far as practicable expenditure of tax money in communities where it is levied in order to get a quick return.

Congressmen From Montana, Idaho and Oregon Seek More WPA Money

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (UP)—A demand for the northwest for increased relief funds today threatened a head-on collision with economy plans of congressional and administration leaders.

A bloc of senators and representatives from Washington, Idaho, Oregon, Montana and other states began organizing a drive to prevent reduction of WPA rolls and to win increases needed to care for an influx of families from drought stricken areas.

Drought Causes Influx
Around 10,000 families were estimated to have entered the four states since the midwestern drought of last summer. Most of them are destitute.

Sen. James Pope, D., Idaho, contacted congressmen from states in that area in connection with a proposed appeal to the President. He has received a dozen favorable replies, and the situation probably will be presented to administration officials within a week.

WPA Seeks Cut
In each of the states, as well as California which has sought to ban destitute immigrants, the situation has been much the same. Thousands of families, ruined by drought, have packed their belongings in automobiles, trucks and trailers and headed west—many of them without a definite destination. At the same time, WPA has sought to cut down its relief rolls. Thus the states have been caught with an increase in relief cases and a reduction in WPA funds, according to the congressional reports.

Statistics of the interior department showed the following migrations:
To Washington, 2,320 families; to Idaho, 4,550 families; to Oregon, 1,930 families; to California, 27,800 persons.

Sugar Plant Factor
Outgoing shipments in 1936 totaled 4,997 cars, Haensch reported. The 1935 mark was 4,495. Incoming carloads reached 8,570 cars as compared with 5,445. Chief factor in the increased shipments forwarded from the city was the operation of the sugar plant.

Congress Asked To Lift Rail Surtax
WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (UP)—The interstate commerce commission today asked congress to consider relieving railroads of burdens imposed by a surtax on undistributed profits under the revenue act of 1936.

BORDER CLASH
TOKYO, Jan. 5 (UP)—A clash on the Manchukuo-Russian frontier between Japanese-Manchukuan troops and unknown Russians was reported today by the official Domei Agency in a dispatch from Harbin.

A group of suspicious persons illegally crossed the border from Soviet territory near Tungking, in eastern Manchukuo, the dispatch reported. "Troops proceeded to the scene. The suspicious persons opened fire. The Manchukuan and Japanese returned the fire. Casualties were not reported."

LOYALIST FLEET PATROLS COAST

Vessels Ordered To Protect Shipping In Bay of Biscay

PARIS, Jan. 5 (UP)—A Spanish loyalist fleet of 20 armed trawlers and converted freight steamships patrolled the Bay of Biscay coast today with orders to defend loyalist and neutral shipping against any attacks, dispatches from the frontier said.

It was asserted the ship had orders to fire on any craft that threatened attack, and that the fleet was backed by long range coast guns newly installed in the Santander-Bilbao area where the German cruiser Koenigsberg has been active.

Has Small Guns
The emergency fleet has been equipped with small guns mounted in front of wheel-houses, the dispatches said.

According to the reports, the ships are not only to patrol within the three-mile limit of Spanish territorial waters but to accompany coastal shipping outside the limit.

To the east of this fleet, a nationalist war fleet patrolled the San Sebastian-Pamplona stretch of coast to protect nationalist shipping.

Both German and British ships were patrolling outside the three-mile limit.

Situation Tense
Dispatches indicated a tense situation along the Biscay coast as the Spanish loyalist government, backing Basque province authorities, refused Germany's demand to restore the cargo of the freighter.

SHIPMENTS SOAR TO HIGH LEVELS

Business and Farm Activity Climbed Here in 1936, Report Shows

Booming business and agricultural activities in this area for 1936 were emphasized today as outgoing and incoming carload shipments were revealed as substantially higher last year than in 1935.

Figures released this afternoon by Frank Haensch, Union Pacific agent in Twin Falls, showed an increase of 502 cars shipped out of here in the past 12 months. The gains came entirely in farm, dairy and livestock products. Incoming shipments, reflecting highly improved buying power here, advanced 3,125 carloads over the 1935 mark.

Sugar Plant Factor
Outgoing shipments in 1936 totaled 4,997 cars, Haensch reported. The 1935 mark was 4,495. Incoming carloads reached 8,570 cars as compared with 5,445. Chief factor in the increased shipments forwarded from the city was the operation of the sugar plant.

CLARK ASKS LAWS BE LIBERALIZED

New Governor Speaks Before Joint Assembly of 24th Legislature

and continuous turnover of funds. This is one of the reasons why an ad valorem tax, which is collectible twice a year on real property, is not as desirable as some other forms of taxation which revolve faster.

"The income tax is probably our most desirable tax—except for the fact that it is collected only once a year. It needs to be used in conjunction with some form of 'transaction tax'."

He urged, however, application of the ad valorem tax to property producing a profitable revenue, particularly in the monopolistic field, but with gradual reduction on non-producing properties such as farms and small homes.

Automatically Conditioned

"If I want to have put undue stress on people of small means, remember that when old people, children and the average laboring men are in comfortable circumstances and spending money, the higher financial brackets are automatically a liability well-conditioned," Clark declared.

"We must recognize the need for continuing legislation for public relief, and I would urge upon the legislature the necessity for maintaining as in the past the veterans' welfare commission," he said.

Power Reburden

The executive drew upon his experience with public ownership as mayor of Idaho Falls in outlining detailed procedure for public development of power resources.

Along with legislation to provide for formation of power districts themselves, he suggested a compulsory provision for cancellation of filings on power sites held undeveloped for private speculation.

He proposed a "requirement of an ample indemnity bond by any individual or corporation which may attempt to harness and delay a community in its program for utilization of water in the public interest, and elimination of self-liquidating enterprises from consideration in arriving at the municipal bond limit."

Irrigation Needs First

"However, irrigation is the prime economic use for water in Idaho," the governor said. "When power development interferes with irrigation, such development should be condemned with appraisals at actual value of installation and equipment."

A sly dig at the legislators came while Clark was talking on liquor control. He said, "If the members of this legislature leave a high record for discretion and sobriety, I venture to say that such a record will be more effective than any laws you might pass to regulate the liquor traffic—at least in this community."

Gradual Build-Up

The arguments for prohibition sound reasonable, the governor said. "But we have proved that man-made laws do not build up individual character. A dependable civilization must be gradually built up through agencies like homes, schools and churches and under the standards laid down in the scriptures."

He recommended legislation directed toward development of the state's deposits of phosphates for the interest of the people. "In our state there is 75 or 80 per cent of the known deposits of phosphate in the United States and about 80 per cent of the known deposits in the world. A great amount of this is on state lands."

Britain Deeply Concerned

LONDON, Jan. 5 (AP)—Great Britain, expressing a "grave view" of the sending of foreign volunteers into Spain, telegraphed to Berlin and Rome today, asking replies before the week-end, at the latest, to the Anglo-French appeal against the continued dispatch of such volunteers.

Britain regarded the situation as all the more serious since neither Germany nor Italy so far has responded to the British representations concerning volunteers on Dec. 23.

Spain's Situation

Britain apparently was anxious for a showdown. There was a feeling that this country, in its anxiety to avert a European conflict, might be more inclined to see a rebel triumph in Spain if the other powers persist in intervening.

Today's Picture Story

Though King Edward VIII has become the Duke of Windsor and a voluntary exile, new developments and revelations keep abdication principals in the spotlight. New intimate snapshots of Edward and Mrs. Wallis Simpson, like that above just received in America, add fuel to the controversy raging around them.

Prime instigators of the abdication, at the moment of victory the minds of the Archbishops of Canterbury (left) and York (right) soothed with the denunciatory phrases they later loosed against exiled Edward. They go above to swear in the new ruler.

Out of England's most critical episode of modern times there emerged the Gibraltar-like figure of King George VI (below, on way to take oath of allegiance). The climax of the tense days when king and ministers flattered over Edward's desire to marry is represented by the four signatures (above), on the abdication papers.

With a feeling of relief after the tense four-day period, King George VI (above) proclaimed Edward VIII King of England and Emperor of India. Meanwhile Edward journeyed into exile.

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine Everybody should know by now that children are not born equal either mentally or physically. Most of them are the sum of their ancestors. Many a parent himself is not as smart as he would like his child to be.

The first duty of a parent is to find out the limit of the child's intellectual capacity, and not to endeavor to drive the child beyond that capacity. The child who cannot think well, remember well or learn normally should have the advantage of what science can offer to make the most out of the capacity that it has.

Once it is discovered that a child is mentally slow and that it cannot keep up with other children, the parents must decide what they are to do about its education. But first they must determine by a physical examination that the physical condition of the child is as good as it can possibly be made.

Out of 400 delinquent children studied in a mental hygiene clinic was found that a considerable percentage suffered from early corrected teeth. One-third had bad teeth, and large adenoids and tonsils.

Many of the children had parents who were handicapped, by physical illness—the father being unable to work and the mother being compelled to earn the family living. Many of them had parents who were themselves distinctly neurotic.

There is, of course, some relationship between diseases and intelligence. There are many conditions which do not lessen intelligence, but seem instead to sharpen the mind. Thus, it has been shown that children who are especially sensitive to various food substances are likely to be more alert than are other children.

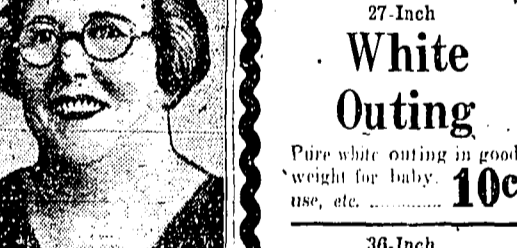

Out of 1077 children examined in Glasgow, those suffering from chronic rheumatism or kidney disorders were found to be just as intelligent as their brothers and sisters.

On the other hand, those suffering from real disorders of the glands, and with either an excess or deficiency of internal secretions, were found occasionally to

"I had horribly sluggish kidneys and my system filled with so much impurity from this sluggishness that I began to have rheumatic pains in my arms and legs, and my ankles would swell clear out of my shoe tops due to the horribly contaminated condition of my system. WAR IS NOT INEVITABLE

If you believe the prophets—including many statesmen of great sagacity and many military authorities of reputedly great sagacity—war in Europe is apparently inevitable. It will probably come, they say, in 1937. Almost certainly, they insist, by 1938.

The prophecies look almost fool-proof. But as we go into the new year and pause to take stock of the situation, we do not need to strain our eyes to find at least a few indications that this "inevitable" war about which we have been hearing so much may fail to materialize, after all.

A good case in point can be examined in the record of 1936.

The year opened with the Italians thrusting deep into Ethiopia. We were assured from all sides that this made a clash between England and Italy almost certain. There was just bound to be trouble.

But somehow there wasn't. Then there was Spain. Here was another starting point for that "inevitable" war.

Now the danger in that spot isn't over yet, by any means; and yet there is at least a fair reason to hope that Europe will get peace out of it, and not war.

And the point of all this is that things do have a way of working out a solution when, logically, they shouldn't. We aren't doomed to chaos and destruction, in spite of the gloomy prophets.

A COOK COMES INTO HIS OWN

Any man who ever had any part in a military organization must have read with interest of the passing of Kokomo Jones, who held the distinction of having been the oldest enlisted man in the A. E. F.

Kokomo Jones died at the Iowa Soldiers' home the other day at the age of 77, and was buried in Corning, Ia. To his funeral came brass hats and political big-wigs, to say nothing of former buck privates of high and low degree. The affair drew a good deal of attention.

For Kokomo Jones, who served in the Spanish-American war and on the Mexican border, as well as in France, was a cook—one of the vast, unsung tribe of army cooks who get reviled and cursed by whole generations of soldiers, but who, when they are good, must certainly go to one of the most comfortable corners of the heaven that awaits good soldiers.

Jones wheeled his rolling soup kitchen after a certain Company K of the Rainbow division, through Champagne, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel and the Argonne. He won no decorations, no citations, and no mentions in dispatches, but he supplied the chow when it was needed most, and he got it there hot.

Once in a great while the army cook comes into his own. Kokomo Jones did; they made a big affair out of his funeral, and after "Taps" had sounded over his grave, the bugler remarked that "we couldn't have done any more if he'd been a general."

And this is as it should be. Generals come and go, and they are much of a usefulness. Cooks—good ones, who'll be there, with a bowl of beans when you need it most—are beyond price.

NEUTRALITY BOOMERANG

Idahoans, interested primarily in agriculture and merchandising and very much against foreign political entanglements that might have repercussion on these two things, see a very pronounced danger facing the revision of U. S. neutrality laws.

That danger is the fact that the revised law may be worded to permit placing of embargoes against one warring party and not against the other.

Ostensibly such an action might be thought an incentive to peace. It might deter nations from entering war because one and not the other could secure arms and foodstuffs from mighty America. And it might end a war quickly for the same reason.

The truth of the matter, however, is that any such proviso in the amended law would not work for peace. It would inevitably involve the United States in war.

About the time the law comes up for battle in congress, you can expect skilled European diplomats to unleash a subtle barrage aimed at our shores and stressing the peace possibilities of making the embargoes discretionary against one side or the other.

It's to be hoped that congress tucks cotton in its ears when that propaganda starts in force.

This country should decree absolute embargoes against both sides in any war.

Gosh, thought I, it's a hangover and the strongest drink I ever touch is orangeade.

Then I discovered they were taking down those Christmas decorations.

So I know I wasn't cuckoo after all. Believe it or not.

FAMOUS LAST LINE

... And now for a slogan of legislation!

THE GENTLEMAN IN THE THIRD ROW

The HOLIDAY MYSTERY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The galaxy of the Christmas party at "Thunder Mesa," the de Forest hacienda in New Mexico, has a tragic ending when PEARL JOHN DE FOREST, oldest of three brothers, is found dead with a knife in his throat.

Each of the de Forest brothers has the first name of "Pearl." PEARL JOHN is the youngest, PEARL PIERRE next. Others at the house are TANTE JOSEPHINE, and an invalid, MERTY WELCH, serving company (company) RAMON VASQUEZ and ANGELIQUE ABREYTA, guests at the party; PROFESSOR SHAW, archeologist; and BOB GRAHAM, fire antismen who stopped at the hacienda when his car broke down.

Pearl Pierre, now head of the family, has his brother's body removed to the house chapel. The entire group assembles there for funeral services and is shocked to find that the body has disappeared. That night Bob sees two figures moving away from the house, and he follows them. He tries to find out who they are, learns that all of the men, except himself, are away from the house.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XI

ONE by one, the men drifted back to the house. If any of them had met on the mesa or were aware of the others' missions, they did not mention the fact. Only Pearl Pierre made any remark about why he had been outside.

"I think the road up the canyon will be passable tomorrow," he announced. "It has stopped snowing. The men from Santa Fe may have found they could not get through and turned back." He looked at the assembled company as though expecting contradiction, but when no one answered, he walked away. Soon the others went to their rooms. They were all more tired than they cared to admit.

The next morning Ramon Vasquez sought out Professor Shaw and invited him into his room. "I've been wondering, Professor, about your archeological work here on the mesa," Ramon said when he had seated the older man comfortably.

His manner was conciliatory. There was now none of the brusque suspicion he had displayed so recently toward the professor. "You may not have guessed that from what I said yesterday, but my nerves were pretty well shot. Please forget about that."

"It never did disturb me, young man," replied the archeologist coolly. "As a man of science, I recognize, of course, the near hysteria everyone in this household has been feeling. But about the work on the old pueblos—"

"I suppose not," Ramon agreed, with a smile.

THE professor rose. "Have I answered any of the things you wanted to know? I'm sure I haven't told you a thing any of the family would not have been willing to tell you, if they didn't have so much on their minds just now."

"That's just it," Ramon answered quickly. "You see, as a guest in the house, it would put me in rather a bad light to go inquiring about things I'm not supposed to have any interest in. But ever since I came, I've wondered about this place, and in view of what's happened, I'm not so sure the whole thing isn't knit together in some way. Tell you what, Professor—suppose we work together."

For a moment the professor seemed to be turning this over in his mind. Then he nodded. "I can't see that it would do any harm to anyone," he said. "Certainly the museum is only interested in the artifact, not in solving a murder mystery. We may owe it to ourselves and the other innocent people who are all housed here with a maniac, likely to go into action again any minute."

"You think, then, that it was some member of the household and not one of the outside guests?" Ramon asked.

"Not the slightest doubt about it." The professor's tone was positive. "No one could live here with the family, as I have, for any length of time and not be convinced that anyone of them had sufficient cause to drive him to murder if a little extra pressure were brought. It's the most interesting group of people I ever came in contact with. A group whose naturally strange dispositions are accentuated by isolation. If the young man could get away, he probably would be quite normal but, kept here with these eccentrics a few years more, I imagine he will be just like the others."

RAMON agreed, remarking that Pearl John seemed rather a decent sort of chap. Then he asked if the professor had seen the obnoxious knife since the murder.

"But I suppose it has been returned to the safe where it was kept," the professor said. "I didn't want to mention such a painful subject to either of the brothers, but I have worried about the artifact myself. In the excitement it might so easily be mislaid or cast aside with a feeling of repugnance."

"Since you're so keen about the knife, Professor, let's hope it has been kept safely," answered the younger man, holding the door open for the archeologist.

Ramon watched the professor walk down the hall, then shut the door, and, lighting a pipe, sat down to think over what he had heard.

are you interested as most of the tourists are or does research really mean something to you?"

"It interests me so much, Professor Shaw, that I've put in several months excavating in this neighborhood—and when Pearl John de Forest told me, in Santa Fe, about Thunder Mesa, I wangled an invitation out of him to come up."

"Ah!" The professor glanced at him sharply, and Ramon could not be sure whether he was pleased or not. "Then you're not just a dabbler—a collector of arrowheads?"

"YES," answered Ramon. "I was glad to come here, though, of course, I didn't expect I'd be stepping into a murder mystery. But that obsidian knife caught my attention. I was interested when you said it probably had some religious significance. Have you found any signs of old Indian pueblos on this mesa?"

"Oh, yes," answered the professor. "At one time, there must have been a great many people living here in what was probably a very extensive pueblo. Of course, you know the Indians liked to build on high places, especially an elevation like Thunder Mesa which has only one trail down to the plains below."

"Protection against enemies and all that," Ramon offered the professor a cigar. "And there's plenty of water here, apparently."

"Yes. This house is built on the foundations of the main pueblo, and the hacienda well is the same one the Indians used. But I've been unable to make any first hand examination of the ground plan of the pueblo, for the house basement seems to have been constructed right over it, and the present owners are not at all interested in tearing up the floor of their cellar to further archeological knowledge. That perhaps is not astonishing when you come to think about it."

"I suppose not," Ramon agreed, with a smile.

"I haven't told you a thing any of the family would not have been willing to tell you, if they didn't have so much on their minds just now."

"That's just it," Ramon answered quickly. "You see, as a guest in the house, it would put me in rather a bad light to go inquiring about things I'm not supposed to have any interest in. But ever since I came, I've wondered about this place, and in view of what's happened, I'm not so sure the whole thing isn't knit together in some way. Tell you what, Professor—suppose we work together."

For a moment the professor seemed to be turning this over in his mind. Then he nodded. "I can't see that it would do any harm to anyone," he said. "Certainly the museum is only interested in the artifact, not in solving a murder mystery. We may owe it to ourselves and the other innocent people who are all housed here with a maniac, likely to go into action again any minute."

"You think, then, that it was some member of the household and not one of the outside guests?" Ramon asked.

"Not the slightest doubt about it." The professor's tone was positive. "No one could live here with the family, as I have, for any length of time and not be convinced that anyone of them had sufficient cause to drive him to murder if a little extra pressure were brought. It's the most interesting group of people I ever came in contact with. A group whose naturally strange dispositions are accentuated by isolation. If the young man could get away, he probably would be quite normal but, kept here with these eccentrics a few years more, I imagine he will be just like the others."

RAMON agreed, remarking that Pearl John seemed rather a decent sort of chap. Then he asked if the professor had seen the obnoxious knife since the murder.

"But I suppose it has been returned to the safe where it was kept," the professor said. "I didn't want to mention such a painful subject to either of the brothers, but I have worried about the artifact myself. In the excitement it might so easily be mislaid or cast aside with a feeling of repugnance."

"Since you're so keen about the knife, Professor, let's hope it has been kept safely," answered the younger man, holding the door open for the archeologist.

Ramon watched the professor walk down the hall, then shut the door, and, lighting a pipe, sat down to think over what he had heard.

HISTORY of Twin Falls City & County

As Gleaned from Files of The Times

15 YEARS AGO—

Jan. 5, 1922

Great interest prevails in the city over the announcement that the service men will circulate petitions giving a chance to the voters to hold an election on the city manager plan of government. This was the sole, clearly defined issue put up by the City Manager Plan ticket last spring at the election with a promise to administer the city government otherwise honestly and conscientiously if elected.

The City Manager Plan ticket elected all the city officers except two members of the city council, who were named by the Citizens' ticket.

Should the voters who cast ballots for the Citizens' candidate divide in proportion to the relative votes of the other two parties or break even the plan would carry.

27 YEARS AGO—

Jan. 5, 1910

With the resumption of school after the Christmas holidays, Supt. Elliot transferred two grades to the new building which has proved to be more comfortable during the cold weather than the older and more substantial structure.

Supt. Elliot wishes to announce through the Times that beginning classes will be formed for children who are six years of age or those who will be six on or before March first of this year. One class will be formed in each building and children entering prior to February first will be cared for.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

"I am trying to train Billy out of his inferiority complex," says Mrs. Smith to the lady who has just lectured. "I read all the books I can get on the subject. And my daughter has a habit of sulking. So I am concentrating on her also."

The speaker congratulates her and Mrs. Smith goes home. She scans the notes she has made on the talk and decides that Billy needs more praise than he is getting and Betty needs to be kept busier.

Billy comes in from school and his mother greets him brightly. "Well, dear, did you get a better mark in spelling?" Billy hadn't, but she tells him that some people just can't spell very well anyway. To Betty she remarks that if she wants very much to start dancing lessons, she may.

Father Belittled "But as she changes her shoes to get supper, mother sees a run in her stocking. "My last pair," she cries. "I am always down to my last pair. And Johnson's had a sale today, too. I couldn't go in because I had only carfare. My, I do wish your father would ask for a raise. He just seems to think we can get along on nothing."

"Daddy has some money," Billy says. "He'll give you some." "You don't know your father. He is forever harping about things he has to pay." But this was uttered with a mysterious air that left suspicion.

"Daddy didn't bring up enough wood for the living room fire, Bill. You go down and get some," she complains later. "My, I wish that man could keep his wits about him. No wonder he can't get anywhere in the office. Billy, I want you to learn to push yourself a little more than your father does."

Betty says, "Yeah, and I hate him working for Dad's father. Dad likes to look down on me. It makes me furious." "Never mind. Maybe luck will come. But if it does, it won't be his doing. Laziness never got anyone anywhere. If Dad highbats you, cut her back. That's the way to get along. If your father would try those tactics he would be better off."

Ranking in Note And so it went on. In one way or another, Mrs. Smith twisted almost everything that went amiss in the house to the shortcomings of her husband. A deep rankling sense of being mistreated colored her speech to her children. It never occurred to her that right here was one of the causes of the children's unhappiness, which is so often at the roots of complex.

They respected their father, or tried, to cut cutting under their love for him was a growing condition that he was not the person they thought. Anyway, they sensed the trouble between their parents.

Very fine mothers may have this habit in a lesser way. What they mean to be only slight criticism, is taken seriously by the children. Sometimes it reverses itself and the father glories in belittling the mother. The effect is the same. Even when warranted, this daily bickering about another's faults is very bad for family happiness. Parents should try to keep many thoughts to themselves because children can't possibly understand. One of the foundation rocks in building character is a feeling of security and confidence in the home.

PAUL MALLON'S NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS An Exclusive Evening Times Daily Report on the Fast-moving Events in the Nation's Capital By an Expert Interpreter and Commentator. (Copyright, 1935, By Paul Mallon)

WASHINGTON—Those free-flowing state department tears over the Cuse airplane accident came from only one eye. The other was dry and merry.

The anguished side of the departmental face was presented publicly, because diplomats feared the effect abroad from shipping junked airplanes to the Spanish radical government. Expressions of grief were necessary to quiet expected howls from Mussolini and Hitler, who are shipping better planes to the other side.

But a glimpse at the shadowed side of the official profile will disclose that the Cuse case is not so bad. In fact, it is so good, many suspect it was more than a case of Roosevelt luck that such a perfect building for the President's coming neutrality fight with congress occurred within a few days before congress assembled.

COOPERATION? No one is saying Mr. Cuse is a New Dealer in disguise, or that he was acting for anyone except himself, and perhaps the Spanish embassy. At the same time, he could not have demanded a license at a more opportune time from a White House viewpoint, if the White House had arranged his coming.

Furthermore, there are reasons for believing the powers-that-be could have squelched Mr. Cuse's proposal without a word being published if they had chosen to use the whole weight of government threats. They did it several times in the last few months, successfully preventing other exporters from sending war materials to the opposing factions in Spain.

TECHNIQUE The background of President Roosevelt's present neutrality difficulty is this: the hardest fight he had with congress last session was on his very same issue, and he lost. He then wanted complete administrative freedom to institute embargoes as he considered best in any situation that arose. Congressmen, weary of having the President while they were not in session, insisted on what they called mandatory legislation. They were definite limits which restricted the President's action, and they restricted him so much that he had to let little Mr. Cuse, whom nobody knows, ship reconditioned airplanes to the Spanish radicals against his own will, with the will of congress and the world (outside Russia and Valencia).

As one of Mr. Roosevelt's legislative strategists remarked: "There is no better way in which Mr. Roosevelt could have told the congress now assembling to deal with neutrality. I told you so." Likewise, there is also no better way in which the President could rally reluctant congressional support behind the new proposal which he will make, giving himself extensive freedom in dealing with neutrality embargoes.

SUSCEPTIBILITY Neutrality is to be the big subject of discussion during coming weeks, but there is one phase which few will mention. Even the most enthusiastic neutrality legislation proponents rarely doubt that legislation of executive action can be made effective.

An intellectual European authority expresses the idea in these objective words: "You Americans are a sentimental people. If a large nation attacks a smaller one, your sympathies will inevitably be with the smaller one. When the propaganda starts coming in about the little babies' hands being cut off, you

BOISE, Jan. 5 (U.P.)—After several weeks of comparative calm Governor C. Ben Ross...

As Jess Hawley, attorney for Abendroth said, the hearing was "just a bit unique." The "Judge" Governor Ross, assumed the role of inquisitor and was anxious to see the "defendant" cleared.

Some quarters wondered as to the reason Ross had passed up making an investigation of the highway department, charged by incoming Governor Clark with avoiding calling for bids by using "rental" contracts.

Only one look at the annual crop report of the United States department of agriculture, Boise office, is necessary to account for a good share of Idaho's increased farm prosperity during 1936.

The state's most important and, along with Senator Borah, its principal claim to fame—potatoes—brought an average price in 1936 of 48 cents a bushel.

What may be an opening wedge for state civil service appeared last week when the industrial accident board approved a procedure for "selection of employees on a non-partisan, merit basis for its unemployment compensation division.

The division, operating the compulsory job insurance program, set up by the federal social security law, will eventually become one of the largest divisions of state government.

Fat, bulky and in some few cases unbearably dry reports from sundry governmental departments flooded the desks of legislators when they took their seats Monday morning.

Designers Advance Toward Goal Of Low Cost, Foolproof Airplanes

By I. S. KLEIN
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, D. C.—Men and women who drive automobiles today soon may be piloting safe, foolproof, and low-cost airplanes with the same ease and assurance, if tests being conducted by engineers of the U. S. Bureau of Air Commerce's development section prove as successful as they promise to be.

Here, under the keen eyes of the government's engineers and pilots, are tailless airplanes and rudderless planes; planes with detachable wings; and planes with automobile engines; ships with three wheel landing gear that can be converted for highway operation, and even autogiros with wings which can be folded back for the same use.

All are designed for private ownership, and every one is being tested particularly for safety, ease of control and foolproof operation. The aim is to make available means of transportation that should take much of the long-distance traffic off congested highways and place it in the air, at fairly low cost—say, not more than $1000 for the plane, and one cent or less a mile for gas and oil.

Several aeronautical engineers and manufacturers already have advanced far toward this goal. For some years, a small plane that is practically a powered glider has been flying out of Cincinnati to nearly all parts of the United States and Canada. It is the Aeronca, a two-place monoplane weighing only 569 pounds empty and capable of carrying a useful load almost equal to its own weight.

A 40-horsepower, two-cylinder engine furnishes its motive power, and with that plant pilots have been flying the ship as fast as 93 miles an hour, and using an average of three gallons of fuel an hour. Bob Bryant, of Rock Hill, S. C., recently flew an Aeronca 670 miles to Miami, Fla., in nine hours and 41 minutes, at a cost of $8 for fuel and oil.

Several Types Tested
There's low cost operation. But for foolproof safety, in addition, several other ships are being investigated by government engineers.

One is the tailless "Arrowplane" designed by Waldo D. Waterman, of Santa Monica, Calif. Another is a rudderless plane being developed at Hagerstown, Md., for the Fairchild Aircraft Corporation. A third is a twin-tailed, rear-engine machine produced by Dean B. Hammond, of Ypsilanti, Mich.

And, finally, the odd "autogiro" appears with wings that can be folded back and automotive arrangement that permits the ship to be operated along highways, as well as in the air.

Most of these types are powered by special aeronautical engines. But some aircraft designers are working on plans for planes with ordinary automotive engines in their noses, and the Bureau of Air Commerce is encouraging them in this development.

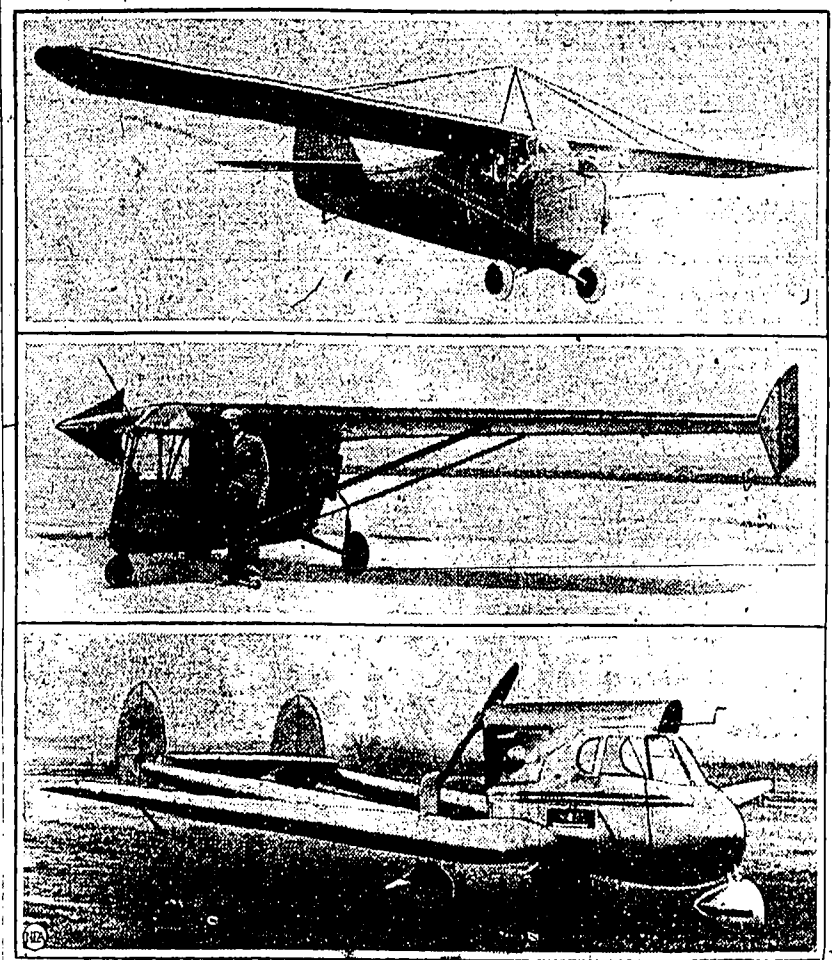

Use Auto Engines
In fact, the bureau's engineers are working on four different projects along this line. One ship uses a popular V-8 automobile engine. Another has a six-cylinder auto engine.

A third is being used as a model for investigation of a belt drive in connection with another six-cylinder automotive engine. And the fourth project here in Washington covers development of a motor designed for use in either an automobile or an airplane.

The Waterman plane, for example, has a three-wheeled landing gear, two in the rear and one in front, that assures its stability and quick braking on landing. Similar landing gear is a feature of the Hammond and other ships.

Waterman has also arranged the wings of his machine so that they can be removed and replaced within three minutes, and a drive connected to the rear wheels. The result is a compact, streamlined, three wheeled automobile.

He estimated 600 families have come in from the "dust bowl" regions. "Mostly destitute," he said, "are very largely destitute. They haven't been here long enough to receive help under our relief set-up, and since they have moved out of their own states, that makes them transients."

Cheap, safe, and foolproof air transportation is the desire of airplane designers, and the nearest to this goal so far are the three little airplanes shown here. The Aeronca, at top, is the type that will fly 670 miles at a total cost of $6. The Waterman tailless plane, below that, and the Hammond, at bottom, are built so that an amateur can fly them without fear of stalling in the air, or nosing over on the ground.

Search For Rare Relics of Indians Occupies Snake River Area Scouts

The finding and preserving of rare Indian relics has become an established task within the ranks of Scouts of the Snake river area council. It is disclosed through the local offices. Scouts of Troop No. 61, of Knoll, have made several hikes during the past year with the purpose of searching for arrowheads and other evidences of Indian craft. They found several rare specimens.

It is expected, by Scout officials, that portions of these and other collections will play important parts in the exhibits and displays taken from this council to Washington, D. C., next summer when Scouts from all over the world will attend the national Jamboree. Western lore proves particularly interesting to eastern Scouts who have not the advantage of studying the relics at close hand, officials point out.

RAIL AND LABOR HEADS TO CONFER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (U.P.)—President Roosevelt today had assurances from both railroad executives and labor representatives that they will confer this month in an attempt to reach a solution to the railroad retirement pension law. J. J. Pelley, head of the Association of American Railroads, and G. M. Harrison, of the Railway Labor Executives association, wrote the President they were completing plans for an early session. The present railroad retirement act was passed as two separate laws to replace original legislation declared unconstitutional by the U. S. supreme court. One granted pensions to railroad employes, the other provided a tax against employes and the roads to finance pensions.

A Dime... what can you buy with it?
Many things can be bought for a dime. Two ice cream cones, for example. They are delicious; they have food value—but they're gone in a few minutes. That same dime spent for electricity, at Idaho Power's low rates, will heat many, many gallons of hot water for the home. Or—a dime will buy a good cigar. But only the ashes remain after thirty minutes of smoking pleasure. Ten cents will keep the family's foods fresh and safe for two or three days in an electric refrigerator. Most of the time a dime is "small change." Invested in electric service, at Idaho Power's low rates, it becomes one of life's greatest bargains.

MCLEMORE REGARDS GOLF CLUB LIMIT AS NO AID TO VETS

YOUTH DECLARED MOST IMPORTANT

Steady Nerves and Not Clubs Decide Matches Says Sports Scribe

By HENRY MCLEMORE DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP)—Now that the state supreme court—in the absence of a boxing commission, I suppose—has stepped in and put a temporary end to this city's 135-pound political elimination tournament, this observer again is able to turn his attention to sports.

In the few days that machine guns, barricaded city halls, sawed-off submachine guns, and rapid fire-wire have engaged my attention, several things have come to pass in sport on which I would like to comment. Now don't rear up and say my comments are valueless, because I know better. Why I could name you a score of enterprising merchants who have cleaned up by putting my comments in neat packages and selling them for a dime a dozen.

Seen as Aid to Vets Now let us consider the new ruling of the United States Golf association which limits players to 14 clubs. I have read no fewer than a hundred comments of this piece of legislation and the consensus of opinion seems to be that it will work wonders for the tournament veterans, and enable them to equal or surpass the youngsters in performance.

This apparently is based on the belief that the old-timers, who learned the game when six or seven sticks constituted a set, and thus had to make each club perform numerous duties, will feel at home once again. And that the newcomers, who have been accustomed to having a weapon for every job, will be completely lost.

Calls Consensus Looney To come right out and say so I think the consensus is looney. Don't forget that when today's veterans were shooting par and better with seven or eight clubs they weren't veterans, but youngsters. They had youth, and all that goes with it, on their side. Their nerves were steady, because they had no nerves. Their muscles took nine, 18 or 30 holes in stride. They weren't fazed then, and hours of practice was fun, and not the monotonous work it is today.

When the old-timers talk of how they used to break par with six sticks, and wooden sticks, too, they overlook the fact that those were the days before Father Time, using only one club—that curved blade blaster of his—had begun to swing on them.

All Seldom Used There's another angle to be considered, too, and that is that while the tournament youngsters have been carrying 15, 20 and even 25 clubs in their bags, they hardly ever used more than 10 or 12 of them. The new ruling won't cost them any clubs that counted, only an armful of "lucky" putters, left-handed freaks for emergency work beside trees and fences, and faddish variation of standard models.

The new legislation won't rob the youngsters of their putters, and in the final analysis it's right up there on the greens that the veterans kick away their chances to win tournaments.

Backs Handing Now for tennis. Anyone who disagrees with the ranking committee in its placing of Alice Marble above Helen Jacobs gets no sympathy from me. After all, Miss Marble won the national title, and the rankings, unless I am mistaken, go under the name of "national" rankings. The committee wasn't listing a world's first ten.

Bitsy Grant, however, deserved the No. 2 spot. His record for the year is better than that of the mechanical Parker whose grasp of the game is not as sound as his grasp of the racket. Bitsy must not have been surprised by the rankings, however, for he must know by now that the only way he can ever hope to get a fair break from the ice-cream par fathers is to win Wimbledon, Forest Hills, the French hard court, German soft court, Siberian clay court, Bulgarian en-touras, St. Louis covered, and the girls' junior mixed doubles all in one year. Even then, they probably wouldn't make him a Davis-Cupper.

RELATIONS BOARD ACCUSES LEAGUE

Says Propaganda Was Released In Attempt To Defeat Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (U.P.)—The national labor relations board in its first annual report to congress today criticized the American Liberty League and the National Association of Manufacturers.

The board recalled that "floods of expensive propaganda" were released in an effort to defeat the Wagner labor act, creating the NLRB, when it was before congress.

"Most active in the movement was the National Association of Manufacturers," the report said, "which urged opposition to the act in tens of thousands of printed circulars, advising that the law was unconstitutional and stating that aims were inimical to industry."

"In the category of obstructionists may also be placed the Liberty League, an association of advocates for industry, which also took it upon itself to declare the act unconstitutional, and made available a sample brief which later found nationwide use by less experienced lawyers grateful for the technical reinforcement."

The report recorded a campaign against the board through the use of court injunctions and revealed that "in only one case has there been compliance with the board's cease and desist order."

CHICAGO WHEAT

PRICES TUMBLE

CHICAGO, Jan. 5 (U.P.)—Grain prices tumbled sharply behind the lead of wheat futures on the Chicago Board of Trade today as speculators put a large volume of profit-taking sales into the market. Weakness abroad, combined with a shaky technical position as a result of recent heavy buying, was the main influence behind the slump in prices.

Wheat opened with fractional net losses in response to a heavy tone at Liverpool. Selling pressure picked up around mid-day and prices of all deliveries were knocked down for net losses of three cents a bushel.

At the close wheat was 2 1/2 to 3 cents lower, May $1.32 1/2, new corn was 1/4 to 1 1/2 cents lower, May $1.08 1/2, old corn was 1 1/2 to 1 1/4 cents lower, May $1.06 1/2, and oats were 1/4 to 3/8 cent lower, May 82 cents.

THIS OURIOUS WORLD

"COMPSOGNATHUS,"
THE SMALLEST OF ALL KNOWN DINOSAURS, WAS ONLY TWO AND ONE-HALF FEET LONG, AND RAN ERECT!

THE PLANET, URANUS, WAS DISCOVERED ACCIDENTALLY! SIR WM. HERSCHEL RAN ACROSS IT WHILE CASUALLY "STARGAZING" THROUGH HIS TELESCOPE. (1781)

MORE THAN 200 PLANTS HAVE BEEN PATENTED UNDER THE PLANT PATENT LAW, WHICH WAS ENACTED IN 1930.

The astronomer, William Herschel, at first supposed his discovery to be the nucleus of a comet, but its motions soon showed that such was not the case, and that it could be no other object but a planet. For 70 years it was called "Georgian Sidus," in honor of King George III.

FOREST REPORT CITES '36 WORK

Year On Cassia West Sector Was Satisfactory; Ranges Subnormally Dry

From the standpoint of work accomplished, 1936 was a very satisfactory year so far as the Cassia west district of the Minidoka national forest is concerned, Forest Ranger Elmer C. Ross said today.

Few Spot Fires

During the season there were a few "spot" fires, Mr. Ross said. These, he commented, were all man-made through either matches, cigarettes or camp fires.

A census of animal life in the forest shows 16 elk, 2,000 mule deer and 10 bears. Numerous smaller animals and rodents also exist.

Can Take Out 500

It is estimated by Mr. Ross that 500 can be taken out this year in the special hunt held each season.

The report further shows the presence of 22,537 sheep belonging to 25 permittees, an average of approximately 1,000 sheep for each permit issued.

Five-hundred and thirteen free use permits were issued for a total of 5,130 cords of fuel. Fifty-nine timber sales for a total of 295,050 board measure feet were made during the year, the report states.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By William E. McKenney
Secretary, American Bridge League

Today's Contract Problem

South has the contract for six spades. He gets the apparently favorable opening of a low club, eliminating any losers in that suit. Does this lead by West help or hinder him in making his slam?

The bidding, of course, is highly unconventional, but is of a type much favored by some younger players. Whether it all makes sense, North and South, with 11 top cards, no doubt should be playing the hand for a slam.

When the opening lead was made, Raape, who was playing the hand, could count five clubs, three hearts, two spades, and one diamond. Another diamond was possible with a successful finesse, but for some reason that play was discarded.

The spade ace won the first trick, and Raape at once drove out the heart ace. East returned a diamond. Raape then cashed the club ace and the diamond ace, and ran three heart tricks and four more clubs. On the clubs and long heart he discarded all his diamonds.

On the last club East was squeezed, as he could not retain the diamond king and a guard for his spade jack, while North's two last cards were the king and ten of spades, and dummy's two last were the jack of diamonds and the spade seven.

LAW DEPARTMENT GETS COMPLAINTS

'Be Sure Title Is Clear' Warns State Enforcement Office

BOISE, Ida., Jan. 5 (Special)—When buying an automobile brought in to Idaho from another state, take every precaution to be sure you are getting a clear title, the state law enforcement department warns.

Recently a number of complaints have been received that Idahoans had purchased cars from individual owners, supposedly receiving a certificate of title, only to be held later for a finance company lien. One man lost about $800 on such a transaction, it was reported.

In Idaho, a certificate of title carries with it clear ownership. In some other states, however, a title certificate is given merely on a receipt for registration and is no safeguard against liens existing against the machine.

Prospective buyers of cars registered outside of Idaho should consult the department of law enforcement where information regarding title laws in the various states is available, the department advised.
