EXPLOSION CUTS WATER LINE OF BETHLEHEM FACTORY

MYSTERY BLAST CAUSES CLOSING OF STEEL PLANT

Johnstown Scene of Newest Disorders; Strikers Disclaim Action

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 29 (UP)—Two mysterious explosions in the mountains which rim strike-torn Johnstown cut off the major water supply of the Bethlehem Steel corporation today and forced the company temporarily to suspend operations at its Cambria plant, scene of a strike called by the committee for industrial organization.

Regular shifts entered the plant, however, and it was reported the company would attempt to resume work.

The first explosion, which occurred shortly before midnight, cut a 36-inch line from the border dam. The second blast, the 86-inch Quaker line which carries water into the Franklin mill, one of the largest divisions of the Cambria works, where 15,000 steelworkers are employed.

The water pressure in the plant reportedly dropped to zero and maintenance men began working on the broken lines.

The open hearths, the blooming mills and the rolling mills, where operations slowly had been getting up as employees flocked back to work Saturday and yesterday, went down.

Incident "Deplorable"

The steel workers organizing committee, which called the strike against Bethlehem to force the company to sign a union contract, today issued a statement in which it said that it was "deplorable" that it does not know who is responsible. But it hopes that the strikers did not do it.

FINGERPRINTS ON BODIES DEFINITE

'Babes of Ingleswood' Slayer Sought Following Finding Of Three Dead Girls

search, first noticed three smudges of color on the ground that he thought might be the girls' clothes. He asked the investigator to look at the ground and the boys, led by Richard Vogt, 17, made the discovery.

The boys were so shocked that they took only a glance and returned for elder members of the posse.

Lay in Ravine
The remains of a campfire lay in the ravine. Beside it, the three girls' shoes were orderly arranged in a row. The investigator found a body of Jeanette Stephens. Her clothing was torn to shreds. The underclothing having been ripped off, was badly soiled and stained. One glance at her features showed she had died of strangulation and he noted the marks of a hand which he had been assaulted intimately.

Twenty-five yards beyond lay the body of another girl, which was in better array. Her clothing was beyond, about 25 yards, lay Madeline's sister, Melba. Her clothes had been torn away.

All three girls' faces were covered by their arms. They were garbled and two faces, including one which were left looped about the necks.

Smeared With Blood
The bodies were smeared with blood. Bruises on the bodies showed that the girls had struggled for their lives.

Autopsy Burgen A. F. Wagner said all three had been strangled after they were assaulted. They had been together since Saturday night, doctors said.

"I believe the murderer had been at an hyper market near the girls," said Eugene Williams, chief investigator of the Los Angeles county district attorney's office, after being taken into the ravine he built the campfire, perhaps promising to roast the rabbits he said they would hunt.

"After killing one girl, he went back for another. He took her only 100 feet from the campfire so she did not see the first killing girl's body. There were no marks on the ground. Then he went back for the third girl. She was found closer to the fire."

The girls never had a chance. He choked their screams and whatever cries they were able to make could not be heard by the others around the camp.

The man, known as "Eddie" who loitered about the Centinella park playground was reported to have been molesting children for several days, trying to lure them with him for a "jackrabbit hunt."

Police Permission
The three girls asked their parents' permission to go hunting with him Saturday noon and it was refused. The parents told the girls that the three girls left with "Eddie" in spite of the parents' objection.

The parents, families of moderate means, did not become alarmed until the girls failed to return home Saturday evening in time for their favorite radio program. They asked police to look for them, and until late Sunday police believed they had merely strayed into the hills that adjoin Ingleswood, and were lost.

Several small boys also reported they had been invited to go "rabbit hunting" with "Eddie."

1929 or 1930 Ford roadster with fenders, running boards and top except two styli. It carried a California license.

Officer McCracken and Zimmerman said the car they saw early this morning answered the description "perfectly," even to the California license.

Three in Car
In the car were three youths described by the officers and service station attendants as being "around 12 years old."

Had local authorities been informed sooner that the man and a car of that description was wanted, it would have been an easy matter to have arrested the trio and held them in the local jail, officers said.

Chief Gillette and Sheriff E. F. Prater declared that the presence of three youths instead of one was not important, since the suspect in the degenerate assaulting of the Ingleswood children might have picked up two hitch-hikers.

5 DAYS GRANTED ON DUNN BRIEFS

Attorney for Four Named in Contempt Will Submit Legal Argument

Attorneys for four members of the Dunn family accused of contempt of court had been given five days today to prepare briefs connected with the legal and jurisdictional questions of the contempt case.

Judge Charles F. Koelsch, Boise, presiding at the contempt hearing, granted the five days to J. R. Echwell, of Bothwell and Fovey, counsel for three sons and one daughter of Samuel Grandall Dunn in the contempt proceedings. Chapman and Chapman, attorneys for Willard E. Dunn, defendant in the original case, from which the contempt action arose, will be given an additional five days if desired after submission of Judge Bothwell's brief.

The elder Dunn, 83-year-old pioneer Three Creek cattleman, delivered a quit-claim deed to the Walters ranch to the four members of his family facing contempt. It was brought out at the hearing in district court yesterday. He protested a court restraining order which prohibits the action. The order was issued after the former case in which Judge T. Bailey Lee upheld the partnership between the elder Dunn and Willard E. Dunn, and ordered other sons and daughters of the cattleman to relinquish all interests and to remove themselves.

How Bogeyman Boris Changed Into Kindly Old Man!

Treatises on "How to Stay Young" are a dime a dozen. "How to Grow Old"—to add 20 years in 90 minutes—well, that's something. And, Boris Karloff, film bogeyman, shows you how it's done. He enters Jack Pierce's make-up studio.

Mr. Karloff seated, while Makeup Expert Pierce makes his client ready for the transformation. As his bib is adjusted, filmland's foremost purveyor of eerie characters smiles sardonically; he knows the surprise in store for you.

Grease base, in shades of flesh and gray, is first applied; the darker shade about the eyes and in the hollows of cheek and chin to imitate sagging muscles. It's plain to see that old age already is creeping up on Mr. Karloff. But you haven't seen anything!

Then powder is applied with a reckless flourish, to unify the grease-paint patchwork. And, even though Mr. Karloff's hair was artificially grayed before he began work on the picture, the puff is applied to his wavy locks, too.

Now comes the hair-raising part! To apply a mustache, fluff on each hair with spirit gum, then shaping and coloring the soap-strainer, takes 45 minutes. The trick should intrigue youths whose fancies turn to thoughts of lip fur.

Presto! One hour and a half after Mr. Karloff entered the makeup studio with springy, youthful step, this old, half-blind inventor totters out. Not the usual horror purveyor this time, though, as his latest is a sympathetic role.

1ST SHIPMENT OF POTATOES TODAY

Caldwell to Be Scene of Car Loading of 1937 Spud Crop

BOISE, Idaho, June 29 (AP)—Movement of the first car of Idaho new potatoes from freight yards at Caldwell today will mark the opening of Idaho's spud season. Shipments of new potatoes from southwestern and south central Idaho will not reach a peak until about the middle of July, according to L. G. Schultz, federal inspector with the state department of agriculture. It was believed that more than 3,000 cars of new potatoes would be shipped before late spud digging begins in September.

Declining market prices menace the Idaho crop. It was said, because of heavy shipments from southern states and California.

PLANS SET FOR STATE BUILDING

Tentative Program Calls For Structure to House 150 To 160 at Orofino

BOISE, Idaho, June 29 (AP)—Tentative plans for construction at Orofino's mental asylum of a concrete and brick building housing 120 to 150 patients today had approval of Lewis Williams, director of state charitable institutions.

The plans must have approval of Governor Barzilla Clark before they can be finally drawn.

The building would cost approximately $100,000. A bond issue providing funds for construction at Orofino totaled $100,000.

Following in part federal building recommendations, the new structure would relieve overcrowded conditions at the northern Idaho asylum.

Williams left today for Nampa, to conduct a survey of the state school and colony and plan for new buildings there.

Legislature Has Fun

HONOLULU (AP)—Samuel B. Kemp, attorney general of Hawaii, is convinced that the Hawaiian legislature really enjoyed law making. He has found that in some cases the same bill was passed three times, others failed to appropriate necessary funds and still others contradicted themselves. He is trying to straighten it all out. Two bills for example reduced the marriage license fee from $5 to $2.

ROCKIES' SHRINE OF ROGERS OPEN

Niece of Late Humorist Acts As Representative of Family

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UP)—Mrs. Lucretia Lockett, niece of the late Will Rogers, is acting as hostess and personal representative of the Rogers family at the Will Rogers Shrine of the Sun of Cheyenne mountain this summer.

The shrine was built by Spencer Penrose, Colorado Springs pioneer and friend of the late humorist.

Figures depicting the pictorial history of the West, especially the Pikes Peak region, adorn the tower of the shrine. The murals are the works of Randall Davey. Later this summer a bronze bust of Will Rogers will be placed in one of the four rooms of the shrine. The bust is being completed in Paris by Joe Davidson. Next year paintings showing the highlights of Rogers' life will be made and placed on the walls of the shrine.

Due to the fact that the shrine is filled with valuable works of art, it will be opened only certain hours during the summer and the number of visitors will be limited.

Mrs. Lockett will conduct visitors through the shrine, explain the art work and give information about the shrine, Will Rogers and Spencer Penrose, the builder.

Mrs. Lockett's mother, now dead, was a sister of Will Rogers. A sister of Rogers lives in Chelsea, Mass. Mrs. Tom McSpadden, Mrs. Will Rogers and her two sons, Will, Jr., and James, live in Hills and Mrs. Stanger, Colorado Springs, is his daughter, is an actress.

Many tourists who visit the shrine may discover that their hostess is a familiar figure. Mrs. Lockett was born in Chelsea, Okla., and has lived in Collinsville, Monticello, Okla., Okemuh, Okla., Little Rock, Ark., Garden City, Kan., Pueblo, Colo.; Denver and Colorado Springs.

Although it is the oldest of the national parks and has been seen by more persons than any of the others, Yellowstone still offers an incomparable thrill. Navajo, 88, One of Vanishing Indians Who Was Sold Into Spanish Slavery

ALAMOSA, Colo. (UP)—Francisco Gallego, 88-year-old Navajo who herds a flock of sheep in Alamosa canyon, 30 miles west of here, is one of Colorado's few former Indian slaves now alive.

Gallego was born among a tribe of desperate Indians who raided and plundered Spanish settlements in southern Colorado nearly a century ago. He narrowly escaped death in a pitched battle which his tribe fought with a group of white settlers after changing hands had stolen the white men's horses.

One of the Spanish settlers sighted the Indian baby sitting on the ground crying in the center of the battlefield on which the bodies of his mother and father lay. The settler started to shoot but changed his mind and picked up the infant and returned him to the Spanish settlement where he was sold to Juan de Jesus Gallego for a slave.

He was reared by the Gallego family but was never legally freed. When treaties between the United States and the Indians provided that each give up their slaves, his master agreed to comply with the treaty but did not know—like many others—where and should go. The Indian child had no known relatives and his tribe refused to take him.

Francisco Gallego knows nothing of his own people and is even unable to speak his own language. To him Spanish is his native tongue. He is a crack shot with a rifle and has uncanny success as a hunter.

In the past he has acted as a guide to travelers in the uncharted mountain routes.

His master left his "slave son" a flock of sheep numbering more than 2,000 upon his death. Gallego moved up to the canyon and built the adobe hut where he lives today.

Reports Conflict

Conflicting reports are offered as to what became of Gallego's sheep. Some persons say that scrupulous neighbors stole his sheep and others say that he is now gambling. He herds a few sheep of his own today but a county pension is his chief subsistence.

Age has left few marks on Gallego, who is only slightly stooped. His hair is black and plentiful and he can walk 25 miles a day without tiring. Each year his marksmanship accounts for numerous coyotes, mountain lions, bears and deer.

A number of the members of the Chamber of Commerce were entertained at a dinner on Friday at dinner.

SURVEY REVEALS MANY FIND JOBS

Lack of Good Irrigators Seen On Rolls of Employment Service Here

More than 200 men and women have been provided with employment so far this month through facilities of the United States Employment service. It was announced this afternoon by Ray Butler, manager, who said this number included placements and did not include transient persons for whom jobs were found.

In the latter classification, he said, more than 50 persons were listed.

From the number of requests which have been received, Mr. Butler said a lack of good irrigators is needed on the rolls maintained by the local office which serves this entire district. Having hands are also in demand, he pointed out.

"Jobs which have been available to persons registered with us have been exceptionally numerous for June," Butler said, "and are especially good in the type of employment which is being offered. Wages on the whole are better now than they were a year ago."

The employment service is maintained to aid both the employer and employee. No charge is made to either of the two parties concerned.

SCOUTS HAVE GOOD TIME IN TAKING GLIMPSE AT GOTHAM

By PAUL LEIGHTON Evening Times Special Correspondent

NEW YORK CITY, June 29 (By Route to Washington With the Jamboree Troop) — There were five boys that missed out on breakfast this morning because of staying late at Coney Island. Some of the fellows went there, some to Radio City and some to many of the shows.

This morning, right after breakfast, we took the elevated train down to the battery. We visited the aquarium. "Reverend" Boyd Thietten said that he didn't believe the size of some of those fish and that they must have magnifying glass in the panels because they reminded him of the fish in some of his stories.

Headaches

After the aquarium we visited a fire boat. Motion that isn't yet it gives you a headache—that's what happened when we took the boat out to the Statue of Liberty—most of us got a headache.

We couldn't go up into the statue proper as they were working on it and no one was allowed inside.

In the afternoon 25 of us went to Coney Island, the rest went to the big league baseball game. One of the biggest attractions on the island was the cyclone coaster which has a drop of 100 feet. Myself and Thietten was of more of our time talking to a policeman telling us about the Jewish Communists who are going to be in control of America. The policeman's name was Pete O'Rourke.

When Earl Carlson got back to his room he found it decorated with tissue. In fact it was strung on everything. Of course Earl was mad because he had to clean it up. Ray Potter said the only thing he found in his room was a chambermaid and two slightly intoxicated women.

We had dinner about 7 p. m. because they had to feed about 200 Scouts who had just arrived from St. Louis. Our group seems to be about three days ahead of everybody else. After supper most of the fellows went over to the New York News to watch it being printed. We had moved our stuff into a room in the first floor of the Hotel Victoria, where we are staying. Jack Welton did not get his in with ours so he loaded his stuff on his back. He got all twisted up in the bottom rooms. He finally asked the direction even though he thought he tried to give a man a good description of where, the room was staying.

Interment was in Twin Falls cemetery with the White mortuary in charge.

NATIONAL DISTILLERS ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

SPANISH CORRESPONDENT TELLS HIS "SCARE OF THE WAR"

BILBAO ADVANCE GAVE REPORTER BIGGEST THRILL

Reynolds Packard Describes Work of Snipers After Rebel Capture

By REYNOLDS PACKARD
BILBAO, June 22 (AP)—My greatest scare of the entire Spanish civil war occurred recently while Gen. Francisco Franco's troops were occupying the province of Vizcaya a few days before the capture of Bilbao.

Las Arenas is normally a suburban summer resort, on the Nervion river about five miles northeast of Bilbao. The loyalist forces had evacuated the town about two hours ahead of the nationalist advance, but behind them they had left a few "suicide" snipers—desperate men who knew that by remaining they were doomed to die.

I entered Las Arenas with the advance of Franco's forces. We started marching down an avenue lined with poplars, leading toward the beach. It was like a parade—until invisible snipers began buzzing around my head.

At the first sound of firing the captain ordered the troops to scatter and he down. I didn't need any orders. I flopped down behind the first shelter I saw—a fat pig which was sleeping against a tree. Bullets continued to buzz through the air from at least three directions. I had never thought that I'd embrace a pig with such affection until the moment when death was slipping past my ears.

But I must have snuggled too closely for the pig's comfort, because suddenly he turned up, grunted, and started to waddle away. I grabbed at the pig's tail, caught it, and held on as tight as I could. For a moment I thought I was still comparatively safe, but an instant later the tail slipped out of my hands and my snipers began buzzing against the snipers went squeaking away.

Townsend Legion Responds to Leader's Plea for Cash Help

Members of the Townsend Legion in Twin Falls—distinct from the Townsend clubs—have contributed $2,000 to assist Dr. F. S. Townsend, founder of the $200 monthly pension plan, to "meet an emergency" caused by national enemies of the movement, local leaders in the organization said this afternoon.

Dr. Townsend's appeal, sent to Townsend Legionnaires and outlining the action taken by the assembly of enemies of the pension program, asked for $1 each or as much more as possible.

See Crisis
The pension leader's message to Twin Falls members of his Legion said in part: "A great crisis now confronts all Townsend members. An emergency exists caused by national enemies of our movement. We are nearer to victory than many realize or our enemies would not be so desperate to obtain control."

"I have been willfully misrepresented, wrongly abused, my motives impugned, and all kinds of betrayals and legal obstacles thrown in my path in order to destroy our solidarity, but I think to a Supreme Power—we are not broken nor crushed to earth. We live and the Townsend must not be cancelled through our enemies are and our own strong friends are coming to our support."

Denies 3rd Party
Denying that he has intention of forming a third major political party, Dr. Townsend outlined to

Twin Falls and southern Idaho Townsend Legions, Townsend clubs and the general public his statement of principles in his program. The principles are—The Townsend plan is based on a universal transaction plan embracing all sales and services of whatever character.

Principle No. 2—We must restore to the government, where it legally and constitutionally belongs, credit and circulation of money. Only by a sound money and national credit system controlled by the government, can the many millions of young people and unemployed have to have restored their opportunity of home ownership, property rights, and a higher standard of living. Let us stop for all time the ownership of national money and credit by private interests.

Principle No. 3—We demand immediate drastic immigration laws, excluding competition from unutilized foreigners with American labor.

Principle No. 4—Buy American. Stop importing products that America can manufacture and produce in sufficient amounts to supply our needs.

Principle No. 5—Homes and farms must not be confiscated through erroneous theories and methods of valuation and unjust taxation.

Principle No. 6—We demand a minimum standard of wages for labor equivalent at all times to the retirement annuity for the aged as proposed under the Townsend plan.

TAXICAB DRIVERS RETURN TO WORK

Salt Lake City Gets Normal Service Following 10-Day Strike

SALT LAKE CITY, June 22 (AP)—Taxicab service in Salt Lake City returned to normal today following a 10-day strike of cab drivers. It was reported that a settlement had been effected in connection with demands of the men for wage increases, shorter hours, union recognition and a closed shop. Terms of the settlement were not announced, however, and negotiations still were under way.

Major issue during the strike was the closed shop. Operators previously had offered the drivers wage increases and shorter hours. When they refused to recognize the drivers' A. P. of L. union on June 18 the drivers voted for a strike.

Representatives of both sides met late yesterday and agreed they would be more advantageous to operate the city's cabs and sightseeing buses while negotiations continue.

The strike affected 82 taxicabs and several sight-seeing buses. The train, a rich one according to Johnston, was so confident that

White Man at Fault in Massacre At Almo Creek, Pioneer Reveals

Blame for a massacre in 1861 which claimed the lives of more than 300 white persons on Almo Creek, east of Oakley and over the mountains, today was placed on the members of the wagon train and not the Indians who previously have been blamed as instigating one of the most horrible chapters of western history.

Johnston, at the present time resides a mile south and a quarter mile east of Twin Falls. He will be 80 years old in December. As a boy he crossed the plains with his widowed mother and brother and settled in Ogden in 1832. Here, on their own farm, he met the Indian who was later to reveal to him why the Red Man turned on his white brother and wiped out an entire train bound to California. Only five persons escaped, three women, a child and a scout.

The train, a rich one according to Johnston, was so confident that it couldn't be harmed that it shot Indians at random across the middle west. The Indians became aroused and members of many tribes camped on a bench above the massacre site waiting for the white settlers to come into the valley.

Strike Suddenly
The train camped for the night and was first attacked just as it started its westward trip early the next morning. As the train spread out the Indians swarmed down, not giving the settlers time to form a protecting circle.

"Trenches, the Indian told Johnston, were dug by the pioneers under their wagons and the fighting continued for days. Unable to reach water, the pioneers started to dig a well but water was never reached. "The scout and one woman escaped in the darkness and made their way to Brigham City where they reported the massacre," Johnston said. "A posse was maintained for that purpose and was known as the 'Minute Men'."

"Continuing on the group came upon one of the most awful sights in the history of the west. The bodies of the more than 300 men, women and children littered the ground. All were dead and most had been scalped.

"They were grouped together and buried in the well which they had started in a vain attempt to reach water.

"That Indian told me that it all came about because the white men insisted on shooting them for no apparent reason. The Mormon pioneers, on the other hand, traveled in poorer trains, bartered with the Indians and thus were on friendly terms with them.

Later, my step-brother, Bill Barber and party, made the journey to the massacre site to retrieve iron from the wagons which had been burned. That was the only source of iron in Utah for many years. It was picked up wherever it could be found in such instances," Johnston said.

Son Owns Land
The exact site of the massacre is two miles east of the City of Rocks and about one-half mile north. Charles Johnston, son of Mr. Johnston, owns part of that land at the present time. Johnston himself moved to the site in 1887 and at that time, he said yesterday, evidence of the terrible struggle between the Indians and the whites were still to be found.

Concerning the massacre which was reported at Massacre Rock near American Falls and which is accepted as an historic fact although others doubt its authenticity, Johnston said he didn't know much of the details about that but "I remember that it was talked about as early as 1870 in the region where I lived. I am sure that it happened."

History records that massacre as happening in Aug. 1862. A member of the L. D. S. church, Mr. Johnston heard Brigham Young speak on numerous occasions and knew him personally.

Possessing a keen mind, Mr. Johnston can tell clearly of the early history of Utah and this section of Idaho which he, as a pioneer, helped build.

All Aboard! Amateur Photogs Ride Their Hobby

Today's Picture Story

You're looking at four fellows who're really riding their hobby—just a few out of the hundreds who joined Twin Falls camera excursion out of New York City. While the train rushes them toward picturesque old fishing town of Stonington, Conn., they argue about the merits of cameras, films, filters, and flashlights.

A picture is worth almost any sacrifice—even dignity goes by the boards. This camera fan isn't hiding to conceal his embarrassment. He can see what he's focusing on better if he keeps it in the dark. What are appearances with a picture at stake?

It looks like a little over-exposure here. The young lad in the shorts is on his loss, however, about getting unique waterfront pictures.

All signs point to the fact that the camera fan is blind to everything but his opportunities to get pictures. This chap isn't letting any grass grow under his feet photographically, anyhow, while training his miniature camera on the New England scenery.

A picture is a picture, no matter what angle you look at it. His last few shutter-clicking unphased by the day along the seashore, the avid amateur trains his lenses on a pretty subject on the homeward bound camera train. The luggage rack makes an excellent spot from which to film the crown of the head.

PIONEER OF AREA TAKEN BY DEATH

W. G. Moyes, Early Resident Of Utah, Wyoming and Idaho, Succumbs

William G. Moyes, 76, pioneer of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming and native Scotsman, died yesterday at 4 p. m. at his home at 230 Van Buren street.

Funeral services have been set for Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the L. D. S. tabernacle with Bishop Claude Brown officiating. The body rests at the Payne mortuary.

Born Jan. 10, 1861, in Paisley, Renfrewshire, Scotland, he was married to Edna in 1888. In 1880 he became a member of the L. D. S. church and three years later was married to Miss Sarah Ann Allen, Huntville, Utah.

With Wells Fargo and at that time he was employed by the Wells Fargo Express company and by the railroad in 1887 he moved to Runtville and in 1895 went to Mexico for a year. On his return he spent three years in Utah before going to Lyman, Wyo., where he was a pioneer farmer and cattle raiser. With his sons he cleared hundreds of acres of land there. He was also engaged in office and governmental work as an assessor and veterinarian.

Water Runoffs to Be Below Normal

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho, June 29 (UP)—Runoff from water sheds this year will be below normal. It was reported today by Lynn Orndall, upper Snake river, spokesman. He said it was due to less snow than usual and the ground absorbing more moisture as a result of a long dry spell.

Kimberly Man Says Massacre At Famous Rocks Wasn't Myth

Editor, Idaho Evening Times: In an article appearing on the front page of your paper, issue of June 26, entitled, "Was There a Massacre—Or Did 3 Twin Falls Men Start the Myth on Auto Trip in 1913?" you give the impression that the whole Massacre rocks story is a hoax. On the contrary I believe that the facts are fairly well authenticated.

Your enterprising reporter makes much of his visit to the Twin Falls Public Library and what he found or didn't find in the Idaho history. Any research worker in the subject will tell you that your reporter's so-called "authentic histories" of Idaho are not only incomplete and inaccurate. There is much material available which they have overlooked. Also several of them are uncorroborated by other reliable sources and do not attempt to cover the field.

Many Tragedies Furthermore, I have been a citizen of Twin Falls and Cassia counties since 1905, and I have never understood that Massacre rocks was the scene of a "massacre," as you term it, but the scene of many tragedies occurring over a period of years.

Allow me to call your attention to a few facts which I have gathered in my research. Miles Cannon in his article entitled, "The Snake River History," appearing in the Oregon Historical Quarterly, Vol. XX, 1919, (pp. 12-13) says that in the vicinity of Rock creek (incidentally there is a Rock creek in Power county as well as Twin Falls), a few miles down the river from American Falls, stands a great perpendicular rock, which has been the scene of many tragedies.

In 1851 Miller's company from Virginia was attacked by Indians. Miller's daughter was seriously wounded and a man named Jackson was killed. Hudson Clark, of Illinois, driving some distance in front of his wagon, was set upon by a band of savages. His mother and brother were brutally murdered, and his sister, squawed, dragged from the wagon and attacked. In the same year Harpo's train of 20 wagons was surprised in the same spot, but after a two-hour battle the Indians were repulsed.

August Massacre The Eleventh Biennial Report of the State Historical Society of Idaho is the authority for the massacre of August 1862, which your report or so amply counts. The report says that the company consisted of between 25 and 30 families from Iowa, which were divided into at least two wagon trains. One section, consisting of 11 wagons drawn by ox teams, reached Massacre rocks about Aug. 10.

Here a band of Indians rang out from among the rocks as the wagon train passed through the defile. Nine persons were killed and several wounded. Some of the emigrants escaped, but the stock and supplies were seized and the wagons burned. On the following day the second section of the train reached the spot and ledged of the tragedy. They stopped to bury the dead and pick up the survivors, then resumed their journey on to Oregon.

TUPELO, Miss. (UP)—This small Mississippi city, the first municipality in the nation to use Tennessee Valley Authority electrical power, had a loss of only one-eighth of one per cent on electric power accounts during the year ended June 30, 1936, Mayor J. P. Nannay announced.

Too Demanding

KITCHENER, Ont. (UP)—Tramps are becoming a little too demanding around here for the peace of mind of housewives. One woman reported a transient became indignant when she refused his request to spend the night in her house. Another asked if he could take a bath.

HOOPS CONCERN GRANTED RIGHT FOR PASSAGEWAY; FIRM ASSUMES LIABILITY

The permission was granted as a condition precedent to the ordinance which becomes effective 30 days from date of passage and publication.

All damage, liability, loss, costs and expenses must be borne by those named in the ordinance, or their heirs, and they must also defend all suits arising out of the construction or use of the over and underpasses at their own expense.

"Lynching's Too Good for Killer," Says Father of Slain Girls

2 MOTHERS KEPT UNDER SEDATIVES AT COAST HOMES

Other Parent Says That Man 'Should Be Done Away With—Dangerous'

INGLEWOOD, Calif., June 29 (UP)—The father of two of the three slain Inglewood girls today said "lynching's too good" for the killer.

Merle O. Everett, father of Madeline, 7, and Melba Everett, 9, was charged with the slaying.

"Lynching's too good. I would string him up and then tear him to pieces," he said.

"I told the police that if they let me come near him I will kill him. Approached Other Daughter

"He did it for revenge," said Everett. The father said he was convinced the slayer was a man who had approached another of his daughters previously. A week ago he tried to make a date with his other little daughter, Olive, while she was swimming in the park plunge. She wouldn't pay any attention to him.

"He said: 'I'll be back Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.' When she wasn't there Saturday morning, he must have seen my other little girls and asked them to go with him.

"He did it for revenge. If I could get to him, I'd kill him myself."

Everett nodded towards his home where Mrs. Melba O. Everett lay quieted by sedatives, and friends were comforting Perley, 12, and Carl, 6, brothers of the slain girls.

"My wife doesn't know anything yet," he said, "but at least the suspense is over. I don't know how I could have stood it longer. I broke down twice, but I went into the garage where my wife couldn't see me."

Must Be Something Wrong

Floyd Stephens, father of 8-year-old Jeannette Stephens, the other daughter, said he had seen the slayer about his head.

"Lynch him! No. That wouldn't bring Jeannette back. A man like that, there must be something wrong with him. When he is let out of the law take his course. But if I had anything to do with it, I would want him done away with. He's dangerous."

Stephens stood on the porch of the house where Mrs. Marjorie Stephens, too, lay under opiates. The two boys, Carl, 7, and Perley, 5, played on the lawn with a stray dog. They asked their father when Jeannette was coming home.

"They don't know," he said, "and with trembling lips. They're too young to understand."

Fall of the Royal Guard

That horrible, haunting nightmare of the public performer came true for the royal horse guardman in the center of this picture when, in the full panoply of ceremonial, he stumbled and fell headlong, his sword clattering noisily on the cobblestones. The accident took place as the guards were marching into Windsor castle for the service of the most noble Order of the Garter, attended by the king and queen.

AUCTION GROUND MOVE IS SLATED

Hollenbeck Acquires Lots 2 Blocks From Present Site On Shoshone Street

Arrangements were underway here today for the moving of the Hollenbeck auction yards from its present location on Shoshone street and Third avenue west to new land recently purchased at the corner of Second street west and Third avenue west, extending 59 feet from the corner and continuing the entire block to the truck lane.

The grounds at the present time are occupied principally by an old, very stable building which will be remodelled under plans announced by W. J. Hollenbeck, owner. The business will face on Third avenue west at the new location and will have stock pens toward the truck lane.

The matter of moving the yard was discussed at the city council meeting last night after a petition signed by 12 property owners on Third avenue west, had protested the anticipated change in location of the concern.

Councilmen, after consultation with City Attorney Marshall Chapman, decided they could not stop the change in location because the area in which the new grounds are located is in an industrial zone, in favor of the move because it would relieve a traffic congestion which has been noticed on Shoshone street since the yard opened.
