Grecian Government Battles Peasant Uprising

7,000 Soldiers, Sailors Work to Halt Revolution

ATHENS, Greece, July 29 (AP)—Seven thousand government soldiers, sailors and gendarmes landed at Canea, Crete, today to suppress an outbreak of armed peasants who seized control of the city. Twenty-five airplanes co-operated with the landing force.

Martial law was imposed in the Canea area as the troops and auxiliaries landed. Government advisers reported that a nephew of the late Eleutherios Venizelos and a former mayor of Canea led the revolt.

Army airplanes flew over Crete, dropping pamphlets which urged the peasants not to join the 'failing' revolt. Government advisers said that as the troops moved to the attack the rebels began surrendering or escaping to the countryside to escape encirclement.

Georges Melaxas, director of troops, airplanes and ships in government battles against the rebels in Crete.

Islanders Seize City. Four hundred armed islanders seized control of Canea this morning, according to government reports under Aristomachos Mitsotakis, nephew of Venizelos and a former minister of national economy and former Mayor of Canea. The islanders who took port were peasants, it was said. They marched on Canea this morning and seized control.

The rebels took advantage of the absence of most troops of the normal garrison, who were sent to the northern frontier of Greece to reinforce the frontier guard, as is usual in summer.

In Canea Area. Government authorities reported that the uprising was confined to Canea, and that the rest of the island of Crete, and Greece itself, were quiet.

The government, transferred the capital of Crete from Canea to Hieracium, otherwise known as Candia, which is the capital of the department of Hieracium.

The population of Crete is 400,000 and that of Canea department 70,000. The three departments of Hieracium, Rethymno and Lassithio, were reported still loyal to the government.

RIVAL OF TAYLOR RAPS TOLL COST

If elected as attorney general, Ralph Litton, Fremont county's energetic prosecutor, will vote to remove the toll from the Twin Falls-Jerome intercounty bridge, he said here today.

Litton seeks the Democratic nomination against J. W. Taylor, whose vote with Ira Masters on the board of examiners has blocked state acquisition of the bridge.

"I am unalterably opposed to toll bridges and toll roads," Litton said, "especially on federal highways in this state. If I am nominated and elected as attorney general of Idaho, I will use my full influence and the influence of my office to remove the tolls from the intercounty bridge, which is located on one of the state's most important federal highways."

Litton said significantly that he would apply his lifelong policy to the attorney general's office. "When I make a promise either to an individual or to the state at large, it will be performed if humanly possible."

He Gave Children an Opportunity The public playground is so common a feature of the modern city that it is hard to realize that it is still a fairly youthful institution. It is actually only a little more than one generation since the first playgrounds were established.

Joseph Lee was a wealthy Bostonian, the son of an aristocratic banker. Graduating from Harvard in the 1880's, he decided that he had all the money he would ever need and that he would devote his life and his fortune to the promotion of play and recreation. He came to this decision in an odd way. He read in his paper, one day, about a group of Boston boys being arrested for playing in the streets.

It would be a great exaggeration, of course, to say that Joseph Lee was solely responsible for the development of the public playground. But it is indisputable that he was responsible in a very large part, and that a great many thousands of children have had decent room to play in which they would not have had if Joseph Lee had not lived.

We don't build monuments to men like that, or devote whole chapters of our history books to them. It might be a good thing if we did. For Joseph Lee's capacity for getting indignant over wrongs which were done—not to himself, but to other people—is one of the finest and most valuable traits the human race develops.

The industrial city of the late nineteenth century, with few parks and no playgrounds, with mile on mile of congested housing, inflicted a very great wrong on millions of people. It wasn't, directly, any of Joseph Lee's business; but because he had that priceless capacity for getting mad over somebody else's troubles, he made it his business—and did a great deal to right the wrong.

There are still, heaven knows, plenty of similar wrongs to be righted. They will get righted only as we develop and exercise that same capacity for selfless indignation.

The Picture Completed Something was lacking for a long time in the news scene this summer—something a man couldn't quite put his finger on but somehow missed in a vague, uneasy sort of way.

What it was, a wire dispatch has just recently revealed, was the really polished hoopla story from the hand of the circus press agent. It's got a certain indefinable something that no other kind of story manages to attain, and without its occasional appearance in various forms between the months of May and September the seasonal scene just doesn't seem quite natural.

What brought the matter to mind was the great flea news that burned the wires from coast to coast. Two trained fleas, called Sam and Sadie, were rushed by plane—like radium—from New York to Hollywood to appear in a scene with Claudette Colbert. You learned that they were awarded contracts, insured for $5,000, and transported across the continent in an air-conditioned container. One was to do the actual acting, and the other was to serve as a stand-in. They were to appear in closer-ups of a portion of the actress' person.

Hollywood has fixed things. It seems more like summer now. Portugal recently became the 27th nation to recognize Italian sovereignty over Ethiopia. Late reports are that the Ethiopians are still holding out.

The acrobatic Princess Baba says that she and her husband are going to Hollywood to "show mama and papa what we can do." Don't mama and papa ever look at the pictures in the papers?

POT SHOTS WITH The Gentleman in the Third Row

MEDITATION The pine tree waves a silent howdy To this stranger from afar. Come my friend for you are welcome. Says the twinkling Western star. No more still in the coral fence As the evening sun sinks low, but it certainly does the business. Why you can haul a dozen people in this thing, with all their baggage.

HE kept up a cheerful, noisy conversation all the 15 miles to the ranch, telling Nikki and Steve about the improvements and some of the good things about the business. Uncle Jim and Steve listened in his conversation with a casual wave of his hand and a turn of his head.

THAT LAST HAD A BIT TO DO WITH BOYS, TOO! Dear Sir: Out of the depths of my worldly wisdom, it occurs to me that the reason infant boys cry is that they're ashamed of being dressed in the same clothes as their fathers. I can't think of any reason infant girls cry, however, unless it may be—the Republicans say—it's time for a change.

SERIAL STORY MYSTERY AT THE LAZY R BY CLARKE NEWLON

Bancroft and Sarto were standing not more than 20 feet away.

CHAPTER III WHEN the train pulled into the little station Aunt Amy was at the bottom of the steps to wrap Nikki in a thoroughgoing embrace that left them both breathless and laughing. Yesterday, the stranger introduced himself as Bancroft and said that he was going to go to Wyoming, too, for a vacation.

UNCLE Jim pointed out the cabin to her. There were six of them. "Four we built just to accommodate two people each," he said. "The other two will hold as many as six. They're for the family group. All with hot and cold running water." He said grandly, Nikki learned that the new wing held several private rooms and a big dining hall.

Nikki breathed deeply and turned her eyes to the purple fringes of mountains to the west. She felt her face grow hot. Nothing very long could happen in such a setting. "I've just time to change and get ready for the night," she said to Steve. "I'll beat you up, if you're dressed, Rance, may we have a couple of horses?"

STORY RETURNED from an hour's ride ravenous and after dinner Steve suggested a walk. The sun had just set, a huge orange circle in the sky.

The local board requires operators to produce their city or town beer license, and if that has been granted by municipal authority, the commissioners grant a county license.

'Thirty Dollars Every Thursday' Plan Rides Mighty Big Wave in California

Planning the Campaign

"Thirty Dollars Every Thursday" is the gospel being successfully preached to a million southern Californians by Sherman L. Hainzler, shown above in the office of the California Pension plan, new retirement scheme which threatens to supplant the Townsend plan in the affections of millions of elderly folk. A recently broken leg does not stop Hainzler, for since last October the plan has achieved 150,000 active employes and an income of perhaps $1,200 a week in contributions. Hundreds of thousands of adherents cheer at mass meetings, and hang over radios for frequent broadcasts.

Piling Up 'Ham and Eggs'

"Ham and Eggs for Californians" is the title of the key booklet expounding the new pension plan for retirement at $9 an $10 a week. Hundreds of thousands of copies have been distributed for a small price. Attractive young ladies are shown here piling up some 30,000 copies awaiting mailing. A business-looking plate of 'Baked ham, golden eggs, French-fried potatoes—and parsley—bedecked the cover and guaranteed enthusiastic reading. A million people have signed petitions to place the new pension plan on the California ballot in November as the new movement continues to grow rapidly.

Counting the 'Offering'

About $20,000 was contributed to the plan last month. Here L. R. Reynolds, treasurer, and Fred R. Lenhart, his assistant, count some of the day's receipts. The plan is simple. Every person over 50 would get each Thursday 20 scrip warrants worth $1 in trade. Each week a United States stamp for cash from the state would have to be affixed to the back of each warrant. At the end of the year $164 in cash would have been paid for stamps. One dollar would go to redeem the warrant and four cents to meet administrative expenses. Rapid circulation of the pension money would be thus encouraged.

Reading the 'Gospel'

While eating one plate of ham and eggs, paid for by hard-earned money, it is pleasant to contemplate vistas of endless and automatic ham and eggs in the future, and that is what D. H. Rathbone is doing in the above picture. Rathbone, a member of the California Pension plan since its inception, wears a label-bringing in new members to the organization, whose membership, spurred by frequent mass meetings and a continual radio barrage, is sweeping southern California, drawing many of the same people who have been backing Dr. Townsend's plan.

WHEAT PURCHASE ORDER EXPANDED

BOISE, July 29 (Special)—The agricultural adjustment administration has advised Gov. Barzilla W. Clark that the federal surplus commodities has been authorized to make additional purchases, which will involve the equivalent of approximately 4,500,000 bushels of wheat. The federal surplus commodities corporation will mail out, probably within the next few days, new forms on which millers may make efforts to sell up to 1,000,000 bushels of wheat flour for distribution to the states for relief use.

Buddhists and Moslems Kill 41 in Religious Squabbles

RANGOON, Burma, July 29 (AP)—Troops received orders to fire on rioters when necessary today as Burmese Buddhists and Indian Moslems fought savagely in the city's eastern and western suburbs. An urgent call was sent for British troop reinforcements. Police and soldiers already had failed to suppress the riots. Gangs of men, mad with hate, ran through the streets armed with knives, bludgeons and knives seeking battle. Residents barricaded themselves in their homes.

RELIGIOUS IN UTAH TRACE DIM ERA

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Relics of an early civilization, hidden for generations in a mountain cave in central Utah, have been unearthed and added to the Brigham Young university museum. Indian fighting weapons, scrap-iron implements and the bones of animals extinct for many years in this section were included in the cavern find, which university officials said was the most important discovery of its kind in Utah in many years.

NEGROES EXPAND LITTLE THEATER

CLEVELAND (UP)—This city has not America's foremost, and perhaps best, Negro "little theater," called Karamu, the playhouse was built up to a first class and excellent reputation in theatrical circles by a young couple, Russell W. and Mrs. Jeffitte—who started with nothing but their home, and a trailer house part payment, 631 Ash St. Ph. 1183.

The Jeffitts left school in 1915 and looked around for "an opening." They decided finally on Cleveland because of the "look-alike" "looked promising." Mass immigration of Negroes had increased the population from 15,000 in 1915 to 30,000 in 1927.

Idea Took Root. And the association was the beginning of the Karamu theater which was started when six young Negroes visited the Jeffitts cottage and suggested to the couple the formation of a dramatic group.

The theater now is housed in what at one time was a pool parlor. The buildings exterior is unimproved, but the interior, after upon stepping inside the dilapidated structure, the visitor discovers a gaudy bit of Africa.

The interior walls are decorated with red and gray stripes, and the glass in the door is etched with scribbings which resemble the African art of the E. Palmer method of penmanship.

In the theater proper, the wainscoting is striped with black, red, yellow, gray and gold. The upper part of the walls is scrawled with some more African lagoon. The grey wooden ceiling has a huge sunburst in the center with black radiations running out to the gray walls. Doors all are striped in the African manner—black, red, yellow and grey.

Spears in Corners. Shades for the indirect lighting are carved wooden bowls. Painted, cemented, made less from the wall, Paddle-blade spears stand in dark corners.

"The tattered" all chosen for the beauty, were brilliantly striped, colorful, McCoy fabrics, direct from Africa—and they are looking a little shabby, but they are being refreshed for the audience.

Karamu—which, incidentally is the Spanish word for recreation and entertainment—operates on a season budget of about $2,000. However, many plays shown there are given for the benefit of various crowds—the theater holds only 185 persons that hundreds have been turned away.

Russian Officials Flee 'Purge' Fear

Resumption of strained relations between Russia and Japan in eastern Asia finds two of the Soviet's leading Siberian officials in Japanese custody after they fled what they feared was death in the latest "purge," General Genluch Lucikov (left), GPU secret police chief for the Far East, was detained at Hunchung, Manchuria. Major Franly-anal Frankovich, one of Russia's outstanding artillery experts, who commanding and instructing artillery in outer Mongolia, crossed the line into Inner Mongolia and was detained.

Little House Behind the Big House Remains After Battle

LOS ANGELES, July 29 (UP)—Yesterday, at the expiration of the 47th period, the big little house behind the big one in the Little Musick's life in, remained standing today, despite efforts of the county health department to raise it or modernize it for the sake of sanitation.

The Musicks felt that the health department overstepped its authority in condemning the little structure. Typical of the fight made famous by James Whitcomb Riley in his poem "The Passing of the Old Back House," and by Chas. Sale the humorist whose discourses on rural plumbing have gained wide circulation.

No Quarrel to Pick. The health officers said they had no quarrel to pick, that they simply considered the structure a menace to the health of the community. They ordered the Musicks to tear it down or connect it to a modern cesspool within 30 days.

Case Continued. At the court, because there was no one from the health department to prosecute, Mrs. Musick was exasperated. Witnesses said that she used strong language in protesting to the court. She was ordered a continuance until tomorrow. She summoned bailiffs and deputies with her fists and other members of the family followed her into the meale.

All four Musicks went to jail. They were booked on charges of disturbing the peace.

Roosevelt's Neighbor Sells Estate to Negro Cult Leader

"Franklin" would like his new neighbor, a distant relative of the late President, to sell his estate in a newspaper argument with him six years ago as to which estate, "the Roosevelt" or the Spencer was entitled to the name "Roosevelt." Since then he has found New Deal policies distasteful and has been an outspoken, though private critic of the President.

"Father Divine is a fine, self-respecting person and his followers are honest people," Spencer said. "He has a policy of not allowing anyone to come into his church who are in debt or who won't work. He won't even allow anyone who they have not the amount he felt to come into the church unless they pay the money back.

"Well, Father Divine came in, paid all the mortgages on my place and took it.

Should Listen to Divine. "Now if Roosevelt will only listen to Divine, he will learn that Divine is doing more for the country than he is. Look at this contrast: Divine won't permit any debts. Roosevelt is running the country with debts. Well I've given up everything for this. I want to see the contrast of Father Divine's people working farm lands and his people working his lands across the river with all the help the government can give him.

He said that his interest was social and experimental rather than financial. A successful importer and heir of a wealthy family, connected by marriage with the Vanderbilts and the Rockefellers, he maintains homes, in addition to his ancestral one here, in New York City, Miami, and Charleston, S. C.

French Worry as Population Diminishes, Italy Gains

GAP BETWEEN 2 NATIONS GROWS LARGER YEARLY

By PETER C. RHODES
 PARIS, July 29 (AP)—The perennial fear of a rapidly falling birth rate and a diminishing population assails the French again, but this time eyes are turned toward Italy. Strained relations in the Mediterranean and the imminent danger of three frontiers to guard instead of one has made a giant out of the normal population problem, and one that is causing great concern to the government and army chiefs.

The alarming situation is portrayed in a current bulletin issued by the French National Alliance against depopulation which treats the Italian problem for the first time since 1916 when Italy was an about-face ally of France. This study backs up the current diplomatic and military strain between the countries with the declining population statistics which reveal that Italy is far in the lead.

41,000,000 Population

Today France has a population of 41,000,000, of whom 1,000,000 are Italian emigrants and 1,500,000 from other countries. To this Italy has a population of 43,000,000 of whom only 150,000 are foreigners, and has in addition large colonies planted in other countries totaling more than 3,000,000.

The disparity in birth rate is even greater. France registers only 1,000,000 births to Italy's 985,000 in 1937. For 1938 it is estimated that Italy's birth rate will pass the million mark while in France it will fall below 600,000.

Repeal Old Axion

Frenchmen today are appealing an old axiom culled from France's history as a growing nation and empire: "No taxing entente is possible when the population of one grows and the other diminishes."

Recognizing the power on an expansionist policy based on the statistics of a growing population, the French openly express the fear that inevitably Italy may begin to look with longing eyes on neighboring regions where there is plenty of room for the surplus population to move. The desire to make such regions Italian are recognized as axioms.

ERROR

LIVINGSTON, Mont., July 29 (AP)—Mrs. Ruth Condon, 24, stopped at a drug store to have a prescription filled. She left in a hurry, stepped into an automobile and disappeared. The drugist looked on a counter, saw that she had not taken her prescription.

A package of poison, prepared for delivery, was gone.

The drugist called state highway patrolmen and the county sheriff's office, warning them that time was vital. They must find the woman before it was too late, he said. All available squad cars were summoned.

Deputy Sheriff Vern Meigs found Mrs. Condon at home. She complained that she had gotten the wrong prescription. She showed Meigs the bottle.

It was a harmless laxative. The poison had been misplaced at the drug store.

Clair King, president of the Young Democrats, and Chuck Stams, chairman of the program committee, have taken an active part in organizing the rally.

GOODING, July 29 (Special)—Gooding's bean and tomato cannery will open the season here Saturday with Harold Leavitt, plant manager last year, in charge again this year. Mr. Leavitt, Ogden, Utah, has had 25 years of practical experience and is familiar with local conditions. He arrived in Gooding Wednesday, and expects to have the cannery going full blast Saturday morning. Most of the plant labor has already been lined up.
