COURT'S DECISION MAY HALT FEDERAL RELIEF IN IDAHO

LACK OF STATE'S COOPERATION CAN STOP ASSISTANCE

BOISE, Dec. 2 (AP)—Doubt as to further availability of federal funds for Idaho's public assistance department has arisen through a recent opinion written by the state supreme court which was handed down today.

In order to clarify the relationship between the federal government and Idaho's public assistance department, a conference has been scheduled with the national social security board in Washington the week of Dec. 5.

Gov. Barzell Clark, authorized William Child, chief of the division of statistics and research for the state department of public assistance, to attend.

Prohibits Payments

The supreme court opinion in question prohibited the state industrial accident board from making payments out of the unemployed compensation fund without first securing approval of the state board of examiners.

This ruling, in effect, held that federal funds granted to the state for the purpose of financing the state industrial accident board, would be considered as state funds under the federal act disallowing such payments.

The court ruled that under the state constitution, claims against federal funds granted to the state are essentially claims against the state.

This ruling, extended to federal funds other than the unemployment compensation fund, would make necessary approval by the state board of examiners of all claims through the public assistance department.

The federal government has hitherto considered the state industrial accident board as a separate entity for relief and assistance purposes to be trust funds in which the state has no proprietary interest.

Direct contravention of this argument by the supreme court endangers federal participation in the financing and administration of public assistance funds sent into Idaho on the matching program.

The opinion apparently makes necessary from the state department of public assistance further approval or disapproval of relief claims.

The national social security board fears that the board of examiners would become the "appellate court" for relief claims, with the decision of the board of examiners final.

May Withdraw Aid

Unless some step can be taken to secure continued federal participation in the payment of relief claims against the cooperative social security fund, the government may withdraw its aid, the regional office at Boise stated.

A possible permanent solution of the problem would be for the next regular session of the legislature to amend the constitution so that the state constitution relinquishing control by the board of examiners over such cooperative funds.

CO-OP PROGRESS SEEN FARM AID

Idaho's cooperative credit "over the top" in keeping their pledge to raise $1,500 as the state's share in financing the American Institute of Cooperation held at Pullman, Wash., and Moscow one week last summer. Roy D. Smith, Jerome, told delegates in his financial report on the convention.

Above this amount, state cooperatives and regional cooperative agencies that do business in Idaho have sufficient funds to pay $400 in incidental expenses necessary to stage the meetings, he added.

Financing of the American Institute of Cooperation has been a major problem with the state council.

Vital to Farmers

"Farmers should be as interested in disposing of their crops and livestock as in producing," Sylvester Broadbent, the I.A.C. cooperative director, declared in a short talk.

"When you farm or grow livestock for a living, nothing you can do will bring better results than cooperation," he said.

Explanation of a government soil erosion program, to help farmers in various watersheds, was given by George C. Peterson, the state educational expert in the field.

Dunning said that an enabling act would be introduced in the next legislative session to help farmers to organize and take advantage of a federal act-up to save soil and tillable land through soil erosion work.

President Frank named Frank Woodward, Preston, to replace William Schulberg, Preston, on the resolution of the convention. Woodward was unable to attend because of illness in his family.

Oliver O. Hagan, Boise, chairman of the special committee on uniform agricultural cooperative association acts of the American Bar association explained results of a detailed study of the act as the session convened this afternoon and delegates moved into a discussion on the subject.

Reports of the resolutions committee and election of officers are scheduled for late this afternoon.

DEATH TOLL 23 IN BUS TRAGEDY

(From Page One)

The caboose of the 62-car freight had rebounded the crossing before it stopped. The bus, caught squarely across the cow-catcher, had been dragged along, scattering children's bodies and parts of their bodies, school books, sandwiches, apples and band instruments along the right-of-way.

No One at Fault

Preliminary investigation of authorities indicated that no human element entered into the cause of the tragedy. The bus driver, Harold Silcox, was dead and could not tell his story, but his surviving passengers said it had stopped the crossing as it is required by state law, tried to look up and down the right-of-way through the swirling snow, then continued on.

Everyone in the section is familiar with train schedules, particularly bus and automobile drivers, and, perhaps, the bus driver felt there was no chance of a train passing then because the fast freight of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad had been due to pass two hours before. It had been delayed by the blizzard and was running fast to make up its schedule.

The bus loomed to those in the awaying cab of the speeding locomotive, when it was bearing down on the crossing. The engine whistled for the crossing. The bus came up on the rails from the fireman's side of the cab, and the fireman screamed "Big hole here!"

The engineer closed the throttle and slammed on the air brakes, and a split second later the engine was jarred by its impact with the bus.

Bus In Front

"Big hole here" in the language of railroad men, means to apply the brakes. The bus driver, Engineer E. L. Rehmer said he still was pulling the whistle cord when fireman Alfred Eskin shouted the command to him. He had to drop the cord to obey.

"The next thing I knew part of the bus was in front of the engine," he said. "Then I felt as if I saw we were going to hit the bus which had stopped, then started again. We did everything we could to stop, but after a while, there wasn't much any of us could do."

The 29 boys and girls in the bus were between 12 and 21 years of age. The bus driver had picked them up at their homes scattered over the rural school district and was taking them to the Jordan high school at Midvale, 15 miles south of here.

Marjorie Groves, one of the children, told this story:

"I was sitting in the back seat and then started up again. Two of the kids were shouting, we were skylarking and having a good time. Then suddenly somebody yelled, 'train.' There was a blur in front of the window. I guess it was the train. There was a terrific crash and I don't remember anything else. I was lying in the snow beside the tracks. Another girl helped me into the caboose of the train. They brought us to the hospital."

Waiting for Bus

Three hundred yards away stood June Wynn, 16, waiting for the bus. "I was standing quite a distance away," she said. "It was about 9 o'clock (8:58 a. m.) and I wondered why the bus was late. It was snowing so I figured it might have got stuck."

"Then I saw the bus coming on the other side of the tracks. The fireman was shouting a distance away. The bus stopped a short distance from the crossing. Suddenly it started again as the train came near."

"I thought away the driver intended to come closer to the tracks and then stop again. But he didn't."

SAVE RESOURCES, DALE SAYS HERE

The west should be vitally concerned with the conservation of its raw materials, particularly since this section is becoming more a manufacturing center than in the past, President Harrison Dale of the University of Idaho, Moscow, told members of the Lions club at a luncheon this noon at the Park hotel.

Discussing the various synthetic products which are meeting with success, he told of the experimental work being done at Idaho Falls to produce denatured or industrial alcohol from potatoes.

He told of a sugar derived from the center of trees, which it is hoped can be used by people who are unable to use the regular sugar, and of a plastic now made from sawdust.

H. C. Howell, formerly of the Boise Lions club, and Roy Babel were guests, in addition to President Dale.

DISCUSSES IDAHO

At the high school assembly conducted this morning Dr. Harrison C. Dale, president of the University of Idaho, used "Idaho" as the theme of his talk. Dr. Dale was introduced to the student body by Cecil Jones, student body president.

H. C. Howell, formerly of the Boise Lions club, and Roy Babel were guests, in addition to President Dale.

Wants Investigation

Gov. Henry H. Wood began one investigation. He personally wanted to know the reasons for the tragedy and to have the University of Idaho investigate. Other inquiries were begun by the Jordan school district, owners of the bus, the state public service commission, the highway patrol and insurance division, the federal interstate commerce commission and Salt Lake county.

The various investigations were expected to result in the erection of electric warning signals at all crossings and to speed grade crossing conditions in Utah.

Francis parents rushed to the scene as ambulances, doctors and nurses were arriving from Midvale and Boise. Intelligence, O-district, and a member of the Boise Salt Lake City. Eight were given emergency treatment and then taken to their homes.

The three dying children were Bela and Marjorie Beckstead, cousins, who had internal injuries, and Louise Hardman, whose legs were broken. The other seriously injured children were Anne Webb, broken back and cuts, Manford Osborne, chest injuries, Russell Webb, bruises, Chio Beckstead, cuts, and possibly internal injuries, and Ida Smith, possible internal injuries.

The dead were:

Silcox, the driver, Robert Ebert, William Glezer, George Hunt, Lois Johnson, Ross Larson, Bayard Larson, Elmer Lloyd, Earl Miller, Virginia Nelson, Elaine Plue, Kenneth Peterson, Ole Peterson, Dwayne Parkinson, Harold Sandstrom, Viola Sandquist, Carol Stevenson, Dean Winward, Helen Young, Naomi and Wilbert Webb, Naomi Lewis, Neal Deffert, one child unidentified.

Identification of the bodies was difficult. One hospital ward was filled with the injured. Mothers and fathers wept. Several became hysterical from fainting spells.

The parents who passed through the ward without finding their children knew that they lay in the room beyond the door of the bodies.

One mother said that one of her two boys, Jack, stayed home because of a toothache. But Carl had gone.

"Find out if his body could be Carl's," she said. It was.

George Hunt's body was identified by his father, Robert. Naomi Webb's body was identified by her 12-year-old hair.

"The bus had been inspected by state highway patrol officers Dept. 64, and found to be in good condition. All school buses are inspected regularly. It, Whitney Groo, superintendent of the patrol, said.

LICENSE INCOME SLUMPS $7,000

Motor vehicle license receipts in Twin Falls county were approximately $7,000 behind those of a year ago after completion of 11 months of 1938. County Assessor J. D. Barnhart announced this afternoon.

Fees collected for the first 11 months of this year, his report showed, were $139,065.05. The total for the same period a year ago was $146,065.05.

Only three classifications of license fees show an increase this year over the all-time record high of 1937. Those are private trucks, with 1,013 against 828; commercial trucks, 161 against 175; and private trailers, 1,881 against 1,682.

CO-OP DELEGATE HURT BY CRASH

An ugly black and blue bump over the right eye of L. T. Gucker, Pocatello, which bled through a necessitated continual drying, drew curious questions from the members of the Idaho Cooperative credit who gathered at the I.O.O.F. hall here today.

After Gucker had explained that he was at an auto accident while en route to the gathering, he was allowed to seek a Twin Falls physician for treatment.

Gucker was the chairman of the board of directors of the Portneuf cooperative association at Pocatello, said that he and his wife were passengers in the car. Yet Houton, Pocatello, manager of the Portneuf unit, when their car left the road west of Hazelton.

Two inches of snow on the road were blamed by Gucker for the accident. He said the car slipped off a four-foot embankment and rolled over. He intended to rest in an upside down position.

Mrs. Gucker received an injured hip. Mr. Gucker escaped with a head bruise but attended the morning session, while Van Houten, with only minor scratches, accompanied a wrecker to the scene of the accident. He returned his automobile for repairs.

Trial Stage Set For Federal Men

been introduced and will tell of their findings when the examinations were made in Washington, D. C.

Defense Harkley
Barclay was questioned at length during cross examination this morning by E. V. Larson, one of Johnston's attorneys. He was still undergoing cross examination at the noon recess. Larson especially questioned the police officer regarding his movements at the Johnston store, who had tried to gain entrance, whom he had allowed to enter the store and such matters. Barclay testified that he had been placed at the store by Gillette to watch the property.

Tells of Money
Under cross examination Barclay said that from $250 to $300 was found in the cash register and the safe and that this money was turned over to R. P. Parry, representing Johnston in business at that time. Parry is a local attorney. Barclay told Larson in answer to a specific question that $100 of this amount was in $5 bills but that he "couldn't remember in what denominations the balance was."

Regarding the two cash books which Barclay, under questioning of Babcock, said he found in the store, Barclay under cross examination said that the book with the leaves torn out was found on the sidewalk and that it appeared not to be hidden but rather was just up there. The other cash book was found in the safe.

Under questioning of Larson the officer said that the book with the leaves torn out was in two different places. He said that he had seen the book with the leaves intact was in one hand, Barclay testified he didn't know whose handwriting it was.

Linked to $700?
The state is expected to use these two cash books, and also a cash register tape covering the same period, "in an effort to prove that Johnston never paid Olson the more than $700 which he produced a receipt for."

Evidently in an effort to show that such a large payment could not be recorded on Johnston's register all by one sum, Larson asked Barclay how much could be recorded on the register at one time. The witness answered, after looking at a photo of the register, that he believed the greatest amount which could be registered at one time on that particular machine was $500.

As the session opened this morning Art Parker, deputy sheriff, returned to the stand for further examination. Identifying the gun, two rings and two car keys, the latter on a key ring with chain attached, as the articles he had found under a broken section of the sidewalk in the basement, he testified that he, Gillette and Robert C. Winterholler, a patrolman, had tried the keys in Olson's car and that they "fit perfectly."

The state then attempted to introduce the car keys as evidence but the defense objected and the judge sustained the objection "at this time."

Police Found Nothing
Under cross examination Parker testified that Gillette had told him the broken area had previously been examined by police but that nothing had been found. Parker said he found the articles which he identified "within half a minute" after he started his search. It was also brought out by the state's questioning that he (Parker) had not aided in the case previous to that and that he was not called in to aid further.

Only after the state called this morning by the prosecution was O. W. Pollard, employee of the Kaufman Jewellers in Boise, questioned by Babcock. He said he had known Johnston for seven years and that Olson visited Bobo the evening of the Thursday prior to the time he was supposed to have been called.

He identified the two keys, the key ring and chain as the property of Olson, saying that he remembered them because he worked for him that night in Boise and had retained possession of the car and keys until the next morning.

He was cross examined only briefly by the defense. Principal witnesses for the state this afternoon were expected to be Lee McCracken and Chief Gillette.

Active Cross Fire
Yesterday afternoon's session was marked by the cross examination of state witnesses by the defense attorneys, especially E. L. Rayburn. Active cross examination got underway when the state had concluded questioning Robert Winterholler, local patrolman. Babcock had led the questioning of the officer. He had told again the story of how he was accompanied by Chief Gillette and Sherman Wright, former local radio technician, during a visit to the basement of the Driveller building, to which Johnston had access, the visit being made on June 1, 1938, at about 1:15 a. m. He told how the ground had been swept for "hot spots" to install a dictaphone and how, in looking for such a spot, he lifted Mr. Wright up in an apparent double flooring space where Wright discovered the cache of nearly 600 rings, valued at $15,000 retail.

Blunt Query
On cross examination Rayburn bluntly asked Winterholler if he "didn't know where to look for the stuff" when he went down in the basement.

"Didn't you receive a letter from one Mr. Mills telling exactly where the stuff would be found?" Rayburn asked.

"I had not," Winterholler said. "Didn't the chief of police show you such a letter?" Rayburn asked emphatically.

"Absolutely not," Winterholler answered. "That how, as you testified, did you happen to go into the basement and walk right over to the spot where the cache was and then lift Wright up and find it?" Rayburn continued.

Fingerprints
"I told you we were looking for a place to install a dictaphone and I figured that would be a good place," Winterholler continued.

PICTURES

Call it a coincidence if you want to, but three pictures hanging on the wall of the district court room, where the Duncan McD. Johnston murder trial is now in session, have more than a passing connection with the case.

The three pictures are among others which hang there—all former district judges who once sat on the bench in that court. But the three having more than passing connection are those of the late Adam B. Barclay, W. A. Babcock and James R. Bothwell, both the latter being engaged in the practice of law in Twin Falls.

The picture of the late Judge Barclay will look down on his son, Kenneth, now a local police officer, and one of the witnesses for the prosecution in the Johnston case. That of former Judge Babcock looks down on his son, Edward, now county prosecuting attorney and the man leading the case against Johnston. Before the trial is concluded that picture of former Judge Bothwell will look down on the former judge himself, attorney for the accused Johnston during the first preliminary of the case and now listed as a witness who will be called by the prosecution.

Thus two former judges, through their sons, have an "active" part in the Johnston case while the third former judge will himself take an active role.

ly by both the defense and prosecution in pointing out the location of various items and also in pointing out where officers were placed and in which sections things took place.

Merritt also produced a drawing of Johnston's watch board (where watches are hung while being repaired) which is located at the front of the store. The defense brought out that the drawing had been made after the store was occupied by another firm and that, according to Rayburn, "the thing might have been changed."

Returned to Stand
Bracken then said Johnston went back up stairs and returned in about three minutes, during which time Bracken had moved Johnston. Bracken said, turned on two lights and stood on the cement sidewalk studying a spot of what appeared to be water. After about the spot for about half a minute, Johnston then turned around and saw Bracken. Bracken said he had a gun on Johnston when he placed him under arrest, saying: "They put me down here to watch you."

Then took Johnston to the city jail where he was held for a night. Rayburn, in cross examination of Bracken, queried him as to the approximate number of persons having access to the basement. He testified that he questioned him as to Johnston's actions in the basement.

Rayburn: "You don't mean to convey the idea to the jury that Johnston did any more than any other man would have done while in the basement, did you?"
Bracken: "No, I didn't."

Sheriff-elect Testifies
Art Parker, deputy sheriff and now sheriff-elect of Twin Falls county, next took the stand for the prosecution. He was the sixth witness called during the first four days of the trial.

Under questioning by McCullough, Parker told of finding the 25 automatic pistol (which the state will contend was in Olson's possession) as well as Olson's car keys and two rings under a broken section of the cement sidewalk in the basement. The articles were, he said, found June 3. He said the gun and car keys were wrapped in a towel and that the two rings were in a separate envelope which bore an advertisement of the Johnston jewelry store. He said that Chief Gillette and Officer Len McCracken were with him when he removed the articles from under the sidewalk.

Parker was still on the stand as court recessed at 4 p. m. He had not, as yet, been cross examined.

Engineer Offers Diagram
Only other witness called during the session yesterday was Jacob W. Merritt, civil engineer, who drew a diagram of the basement, paying particular attention to the location of entrance stairways and of the broken area in the sidewalk.

The diagram was introduced without protest as testimony and after its introduction was used freely in our former location, 135 Main west.—Adv.

RECREATION UNIT LEASES CHURCH

The WPA recreational division in Twin Falls acquired a new home today. "Orphaned" by the fact that the Chamber of Commerce moved into P. C. Graves realty offices and will also take over the space now occupied there by the recreation unit, the division today had completed lease for the former Church of the Nazarene building, Third street and Third avenue north.

The negotiations were completed yesterday afternoon with Herman Schirger, owner, by Willis Smith, assistant state recreation director, and E. M. Wilson, chief clerk of the WPA education-recreation division for Idaho, according to Miss Virginia Richards, Twin Falls director.

The move will mean that the recreation set-up here has finally achieved the kind of home that will permit widest usefulness to the community," Miss Richards said. The recreation unit will occupy the entire former church building, since the Nazarene congregation is building another structure. Alterations and cleaning will start Monday.

On the main floor will be an activity room of extensive size, including a stage, the director said. The basement will be used for craft rooms and office space.

"We are now planning an extensive program for the winter," she announced. "Numerous parties and activities will be held upstairs plus the craft program for youngsters and adults. Each Saturday will be children's day."

The recreation division will move in about 10 days from today. The federal government will finance the entire cost of the new headquarters except for only 10 per cent. Leaders of the Twin Falls Recreation association have agreed to supply that sum, Miss Richards said.

MINISTER FOUND SHOT
CHILLICOTHE, O., Dec. 2 (U.S.P.)—Dr. Russell H. Bready, Methodist Episcopal minister, was found shot to death at Bainbridge, near here, today. Sheriff Joseph Vincent said Dr. Bready's son, Robert, 29, was being held and questioned. Dr. Bready formerly was mayor of Pontiac, Mich.

FRENCH PUNITIVE MEASURES LEAD TO STRIKER RIOTS

WORKERS STORM FACTORIES, STONE GUARDS, TRAINS

By RALPH HEINZEN
 PARIS, Dec. 2 (AP)—Labor rallied to severe government punitive measures today with sporadic riots and a wave of strikes.
 Three hundred discharged workers attempted to storm a factory at St. Yvroul. They stoned mobile guards, a passing Paris-Brussels express and five other trains. Two railroad workers, a passenger and 18 mobile guards were injured before the rioters were driven off.
 At St. Lille strikers upset and demolished two street cars and stoned mobile guards. Many strikers were arrested.
 Women, Children Flee
 One of the street cars was filled with women and children returning from school. They fled in panic when the strikers forced the street car to halt.
 At Valenciennes the gendarmier arrested M. Thomas, chief of the metal workers union in the factory which had locked-out workers.
 Thomas was charged with "outrage against authorities" and interfering with the right to work.
 Other arrests were reported from neighboring industrial towns in the Valenciennes region. Workers were locked out in many factories near Nevers, including 1,500 at a national defense mill.
 The strikes and disorders resulted from the labor confederation's decision to urge workers to resist the government's determination to deny work contracts and discharge disobedient civil workers.
 700,000 Jobs
 Some 700,000 strikers and non-strikers in the area temporarily jobless pending the process of winding out workers who obeyed the strike orders and disobeyed the government's regulations.
 More than 200,000 workers in the Paris industrial region were locked out today, but only 30,000 to 40,000 of them had been discharged.
 The rest will be paid for the days lost by the lock-out.
 Embarrassing the non-striker government, hoped to avoid a new general strike or a series of localized strikes such as the labor federation suggested to force rehiring of strikers.

British Set Plans to Meet German Trade Competition

STATESMAN SAYS NAZIS HAVE BEEN CUTTING PRICES

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP)—British export industries plan to raise a great "fighting fund" of many millions of dollars to meet competition of German subsidized goods in world markets, R. E. Hudson, secretary of overseas trade, said today.

One of the most widespread trade wars in history is likely to result unless Germany quickly changes her trade policy, informed persons said after Hudson's statement in the house of commons warning the Nazi state that Britain was prepared for a commercial fight.

Representatives of shipping and coal industries already have consulted with government officials in regard to methods of carrying on competition against the Germans, who have been undercutting other nations by use of government subsidies and bartering systems.

"It must be understood that in commons I referred to southeast Europe only by way of illustration," Hudson said in the limited press. "We must counter German methods in all markets."

GUARD FREEDOM, DWORSHAK SAYS

America's traditional tolerance must be maintained—but its citizens must be on the alert to check subversive alien groups which seek to undermine U. S. institutions, declared Henry Dworshak today.

The new congressman was featured talker at the Twin Falls American night Thursday evening. The session was one of 1,500 similar patriotic gatherings by the B. F. O. E. and Mr. Dworshak urged citizens to carry on with their American program.

U. S. Privileges
The lawmaker-elect compared the advantages and privileges of American citizenship with the restrictions and repression forced upon millions of Europeans. But he pointed out that U. S. privileges must not be abused by alien groups within this nation, and that American tolerances should not extend to allowing aliens to foment trouble here.

Enforcement of Federal Law
He called for enforcement of federal law for deporting of undesirable aliens and said that of the 8,000,000 aliens in the United States at present, some 2,000,000 are in the country illegally.

Balance of Whose
Balance of whose group, Mr. Dworshak said, acts as "balance wheel" in the national life and is a healthy sign unless such minorities become subversive in their aims.

Preservation of America's Freedom
Preservation of America's freedom should cause its citizens to block any sign of dictatorial power, the congressman declared.

More than 200 Elks
More than 200 Elks from Twin Falls and Burley were in attendance at the American event. They were served a hot luncheon after the lodge meeting. Carl Glib, exalted ruler of the Twin Falls lodge, presided.

War Against T. B. Waged With Seals

"Christmas Seals are the ammunition in our fight for health and against tuberculosis," according to Mrs. Catherine R. Athey, of Boise, executive secretary of the Idaho Anti-Tuberculosis association.

"We must advance the battle on all fronts in 1939, or the enemy will prevail. We urge all Idaho citizens to buy and use Christmas Seals, and aid us in winning the victory."

"Christmas seals are being sold in every county in Idaho," the secretary said. "Cooperating agencies are the local Anti-Tuberculosis associations, schools, churches, women's clubs, the Idaho State Medical association and auxiliary; the Parent-Teacher association; American Legion auxiliary; Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Girl Reserves, civic and fraternal organizations, the press, moving picture theaters and radio stations."

Letters containing seals were being delivered in Twin Falls this week. They were sent out by Mrs. H. E. Dallas in charge of that phase of the Twin Falls program.

Many stamp collectors highly prize the various issues of the Christmas seals and some have complete collections of them. This year the National Tuberculosis association issued a special souvenir pane for collectors.
