Idaho Potato and Onion Advertising Bill Passes House, 46-11

MEASURE SEEKS HALF-CENT RATE PER 100 POUNDS

BOISE, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—The Idaho potato and onion advertising bill went through the house today under suspension of rules after a call of the house and one of the hottest debates of the session.

The bill prolongs the life of a state advertising commission that controls the sale of Idaho potatoes and onions. The commission is supported through levying of an excise tax on all onions and potatoes produced in the state of one-half cent per 100 pounds.

The bill now goes to the senate.

Controversial bill B. Penfold, R., Teton county, succeeded in lifting the measure out of committee and bringing it up for consideration after a call of the house and a vote of 46 to 11 for suspension of rules.

"This is one of the most controversial bills of the session," Penfold said. "A compromise was reached in agriculture committee and the bill was amended to cut the excise tax to one-half the former rate."

The advertising commission was in the state supreme court most of the last session and was in jeopardy of being dissolved. The commission, which was created by the legislature, was in jeopardy of being dissolved. The commission, which was created by the legislature, was in jeopardy of being dissolved.

DREAM OF FARM 'LAB' SHATTERED

It was a rosy dream—but it was just a lot of shattered fragments today.

Henry R. Schuch, chairman of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, today said that the four $10,000 farm experimental laboratories have already been allocated, with the western plan to be situated at Albany, Calif., near Berkeley.

That news put an end to a tentative move for a Chamber of Commerce resolution, directed to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, asking that one of the huge experimental plant be located at Twin Falls. The four big laboratories will carry out experiments designed to permit wide use of farm products and farm crop wastes in industry.

The chamber had intended to request a plant here because Twin Falls is the hub of a vast agricultural empire producing many of the crops which may some day be used in making automobile materials, furniture, etc. Location of such a huge plant here would have been a major strike toward farm and business boom.

Outside Madison Square Garden, policemen had had a six-hour struggle with throngs of anti-Nazis who repeatedly charged their lines trying to fight their way inside.

Although there were numerous individual fights, none was seriously injured. The police, including Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, commanded 1,700 policemen, but the police were overwhelmed by the throngs of anti-Nazis who repeatedly charged their lines trying to fight their way inside.

2 Killed During Maneuvers After Gas Supply Fails

PENSACOLA, Fla., Feb. 21 (U.P.)—Eight naval training planes, trapped in the air for five hours by a "pea-soup" ground fog, crashed last night over an area of several hundred square miles after exhausting their gasoline in vainly hunting landing places. Two pilots were killed.

Four planes, the original flight of 12 which took off from the Pensacola training station shortly after dusk for night practice maneuvers, landed safely.

Pilots of six of the eight planes which crashed parachuted safely to earth.

Lieut. G. F. Presser of the Brazilian navy, a "courageous student" at the naval station, attempted to "ride his plane" to earth through the fog, and was killed when the machine crashed and burned.

The body of Lieut. Norman M. Osterberg of Fort Peck, Mont., was found near the wreckage of his plane near McMurdo, Fla., 20 miles north of here. His plane had burned.

With the earth completely fogged, and their motors sputtering as they drifted the final drops of gasoline, six of the pilots went overboard with parachutes. Except for minor bruises and scratches, they were uninjured.

No Joke! This Chicken's Got 4 Drumsticks!

Just imagine a chicken with four "drumsticks!"

There's one in town today. It was hatched yesterday at the Hayes H-Grade hatchery, and, through aid of a special incubator, it's doing fine.

The chick, a barred Plymouth Rock, shows every sign of being a rooster. It is extremely active and is kicking all the time.

Two of the four limbs are apparently useless, although they are alive. The two useless limbs protrude from the body at a point to the rear of the regular legs and are perfectly formed, even to the toe nails. The chicken supports itself on the two normal legs while the extra ones protrude out back.

H. G. Hayes, owner of the hatchery, said this is only the third time a chicken has been born with four legs since he has been in the business. It is estimated that over 2,000,000 eggs have been hatched in that time at his establishment.

The other two lived only a few hours, but were kept for a while. More than 24 hours and shows every indication of continuing to live.

When I saw this one yesterday I couldn't help but think how nice it would be if a chicken with four drumsticks could be developed for the four-person family. That would be something," Hayes said.

Girl Saves Trio OAKLEY BLAZE

OAKLEY, Feb. 21 (Special)—Verna Corrigan, age 10, eldest child of Mr. Mildred Corrigan, was Oakley's heroine today.

Guardian of her three younger brothers while her mother was attending an M. I. A. meeting, she guided them to safety when fire broke out in their four-room home last night at 9 p. m.

The house was destroyed, and when one had been killed by heavy smoke drifting into the room in which she had been asleep, she investigated, discovering that a clothes closet was on fire. A defective fuse was believed to have started the blaze.

When her small brothers saw her hurried them out of the house and across the street to the home of a family named Bell. Members of the family then rushed to the house on the remarkable compass with which she had effected the rescue of the children.

She simultaneously with the exit of the children, the shooting flames attracted neighbors, and a volunteer fire-fighting company was organized.

All of the household effects were rescued from the building, and even part of the clothing and jewelry was retrieved from the closet.

Failure to locate a hose directed the amateur fire-fighters for a time, but the fire was finally brought under control by the professional fire department.

The blaze, which was caused by a defective fuse, was believed to have started the blaze.

MOUNTAIN AREA'S BUSINESS GAINS

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—The combined reports of nearly 100 Utah, Idaho, Wyoming and Nevada retail stores to the U. S. bureau of foreign and domestic commerce today showed general increases in business compared with that of January, 1938.

The public is invited to all of these services, Rev. Butler announced.

There will be a weekly Lenten service for Trinity Episcopal church, Buhi, every Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. at the homes in Buhi, he added.

Lenten services will begin next Sunday at 8 p. m. at Immanuel Lutheran church, and will continue each Sunday thereafter throughout Lent, Rev. M. E. Zager announced.

This week, preaching Easter Sunday, will be observed extensively in Protestant churches of the city.

Rev. Mark O. Cronenberg, in his message Sunday to the congregation of the Christian church, offered this thought on the Lenten season:

"We are in need of developing our sense of appreciation of the victory of Easter. If we as a church spend the period from now until Easter in pursuit of spiritual food, by prayer and actually laying aside of worldly pleasures, Easter will be a great victory and a most joyous occasion. Otherwise the day will be observed in the usual manner and we will not be growing in appreciation."

LATIN-AMERICA DOMINATION PLANNED, PITTMAN CLAIMS

SOLON CHARGES ITALY, GERMANY, JAPAN IN PACT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 (AP)—Chairman Key Pittman, D. Nev., of the senate foreign relations committee defended the President's foreign policy last night in a radio address, and charged that Germany, Italy and Japan were preparing for domination of Latin America as well as of all Europe and Asia.

"Americans are not afraid to die for Christianity, morality, justice and liberty," he said.

"The intent of the dictator nations to dominate the world is evident to any unbiased thinking person," he said, urging "whole-hearted" support of Mr. Roosevelt's program to aid the democracies against the dictators.

Pittman's speech was one of the most bitter attacks he has made against dictatorships. He denounced the policy of "appeasement and surrender" adopted by Great Britain and France at Munich as not only "unsuccessful and ultimately destructive" but also as "immoral."

He said it is far better to die a few days earlier for Christianity, justice and liberty than to live a little longer in cowardice and degeneration.

Pittman asserted that Americans were not terrified by threats of military force.

"A mistake has been made in the past by not letting the dictator governments know that at the start," he said, "they probably never would have moved. That we will do, however, for those things we consider worth more than life, we know. And possibly we will win peace by telling people who do not understand these things what we intend to do and will do."

U. S. mail, express and less than carload freight service. It will deliver 8 mail from Salt Lake City, Butte, Boise and east at all stations at an early hour, and returning will handle outbound mail at 8 a. m. after a later hour than has been furnished for the past several years.

As example, he cited the fact that mail forwarded on this train from Twin Falls will be in Salt Lake City or Ogden by 7 a. m., Boise by 7 a. m., make connections with main line trains 25 westbound and train 41 eastbound.

"The system of handling freight of baggage cars and passenger trains is something new, and this line is the first on which it is being operated," he said. "It will furnish 12-hour service on local freight between Salt Lake City and stations in this territory."

Freight Service Continues

The new service, however, "will in no way affect or reduce the present operation of three freight trains in each direction now being operated on this line," the agent said.

Real Names in the Future
A Twin Falls woman has made a reasonable suggestion to the editors of the Idaho Evening Times and Twin Falls News.
She would have all contributors to the Forum departments of these newspapers use their correct names when they endorse, criticize or comment on candidates during political campaigns.
She contends that most contributions of this kind are motivated by selfish reasons, rather than any sincere interest for the general good of the electorate.
We are inclined to agree with her that in many instances, writers make statements anonymously that they might not be willing to make if their identity were known.
Although contributors' real names have been known and kept on file in the past, the authors have been permitted to use pseudonyms if they preferred.
In the future only signed letters bearing correct names will be accepted for publication in the Forum departments.

Penny Wise and Pound Foolish
Idaho already has suffered enough humiliation to realize that our state legislature was penny wise and pound foolish when it refused to provide funds for a Gem state exhibit at the Golden Gate exposition just getting under way at San Francisco.
Thronging visiting the exposition cannot help but notice that Idaho's space is boarded up like something that's gone defunct. And any explanation that might be given cannot help but reflect to the discredit of the state.
Coupled with this glaring exception in the western states' participation in the exposition is the fact that Idaho is showing poor judgment by so treating a state that happens to be one of the principal markets for many Idaho products. California may be broad-minded enough to overlook this thoughtless and inconsiderate affront, but we wonder.
Even when economy is necessary and important, the Idaho legislature should think twice before permitting the state's display to be omitted at San Francisco. The cost of such an exhibit will be repaid many times in the form of valuable advertising.

Everything Gone—but Pride
Jesse Root Grant died of exposure and malnutrition rather than humble the proud name he bore.
He was the son of the brother of the great general, Ulysses Simpson Grant. He was found in a coma in the basement of the cold, barren Chicago house where he and his son had tried in vain to wrest a living from a world that no longer cared.
Once a railroad accountant, he retired some 10 years ago. At 74, he had nothing, could do nothing. Even his son, Ulysses S. Grant, 38, had been unemployed since 1930.
The last of a small legacy had been exhausted. The fire in the furnace had gone out. The only thing in the house was a pewter pitcher which had been kept brightly polished. It had belonged to the general, the surviving Grant said.
Though everything was gone, Jesse Grant had been too proud to ask help of friends, too proud to allow his name to appear on relief funds. All he could do was to keep the pitcher bright, and die.
His pride, like his name, descended to him legitimately. The man who brought fame to the name of Grant was a proud man, too. In his last years, ex-President Grant saw his fortune crumble when a scoundrelly partner decamped with the funds of the firm of Grant and Ward, bankers and brokers.
An old man, he sold everything he had, his houses, his property, to apply on his resulting debts.
To pay the remainder he sat down to write his memoirs. And while torturing cancer gnawed at his throat and death itself hovered over his invalid chair, he wrote and wrote, seeking to pay the debts and clear his name.

"I feel that we are on the eve of a new era, when there is to be great harmony between the Federal and Confederate. I cannot stay to be a living witness of the correctness of this prophecy."
So U. S. Grant wrote in May, 1885, and in July he died, his last energies gone to pay his debt and clear his name.
So Jesse Root Grant died. He was defeated in the battle of life, but proud to the end. And he kept the pitcher bright.
The growth of winter sports here is convincing proof that many people want to "Ski America First."

Former Kaiser Wilhelm, at 80, attributes his long life to saving wood. And a good fast auto ride out of Berlin some 20 years ago.

SERIAL STORY
WOMEN WANT BEAUTY!
BY LOUISE HOLMES
COPYRIGHT, 1938, NEA SERVICE, INC.
Yesterday, the fates began to work in Harriet's department. She was a beautiful girl, and her beauty was planned. Does it affect beauty?
CHAPTER VII
It was late in September that Susie, still unaware of her cry had been heard and heeded, was gently guided toward her destiny. Afterward she remembered the date and called it birthday because that was the day she began to live.
She was tending her waffle irons, not thinking, Susie seldom thought any more, when two girls came in. One of the girls, Susie had heard her called Dottie, was proudly initiating the other, obviously a newcomer, into the joys of the Waffle Shop.
"Susie's waffles smell just in your mouth," Dottie said. And, to show her familiarity, added, "How do you make them, Susie? I'd like the recipe."
Susie had been asked a hundred times for the recipe and always she gave it up to a certain point. There was a little trick about making waffles that she had learned from her mother. The little trick meant money to Susie. Susie guarded her secret even from the manager. Taking a typewritten slip from the cupboard she handed it to Dottie.
"Don't grease the iron," she said. "Just a little oil. It's just a little. Her recipe was dull, but Dottie thanked her and she and her friend chatted on. The girls did not know, nor did Susie, that she had chosen them for her maidens, that they would move into the radius of Susie's life long enough to change it, then be gone forever, their usefulness ended.
After finishing their waffles the girls turned to scanning a Chicago paper, reading the football line layout. Dottie said, "You're a little man, aren't you?"
Susie was concerned they had already gone. She heard their conversation, but it drifted across her tired, discouraged mind without making any special impression.
TURNING the page Dottie glanced at the Barker masthead advertisement, exclaiming over the smart, cleverly drawn sketches. Suddenly she laughed, pointing to a boxed notice in the center of the layout. Dottie said, "Would you like to be beautiful?" Then both girls laughed. They were both beautiful swans and they knew it.
"We should show this to Florence," Dottie said. "She would certainly use a little beauty."
"Just try it and see how quick your head comes off," her friend returned. Taking a compact from her purse she daintily touched her lips with crimson. "Wouldn't it be terrible to be homely?" she asked, looking complacently into the mirror.
"Terrible," Dottie agreed, without the slightest conception of how terrible it could be. They wandered out of the shop, leaving the paper behind them.
Stated in the counter Susie picked up the paper. About to toss it aside, she hesitated. There it was again, the fates at her elbow. Indifferently she scanned the paper. Several times her eyes passed over the Barker page, always coming back. Gradually the import made a dent in her consciousness and she read the notice through. Barker's wants to prove that any woman can be beautiful, alluring, desirable. If you doubt us please write a letter telling us what you want. It has to be unattractive. Without obligation or expense the writer of the best letter will be beautified by Barker's.
READING the advertisement, Susie's breathing quickened. Silly, of course, no one could be so beautiful. But she wanted to prove her point. She guessed she'd write and tell them that. They didn't want a homely girl, they simply wanted to make pretty girls prettier.
In spite of the argument Susie was a little excited. At last she had noticed the unattractive advertisement. The model, this was—well, this was exciting. All afternoon a letter to Barker's ran through her mind. The idea of winning the contest drew her to her. The letter was to be a flat denial of Barker's claims from one who knew.
Again and again she read the advertisement. The model, she called the girl a model just as in the beauty contests, was to be given advice and treatment by Barker's experienced and physical director would be at her disposal. When the miracle was wrought she would be known by Barker, hailed and courted by Barker. The letters were to be written to John Barker.
By 10 o'clock, when Susie went home, she had not only written her letter, she had made up her mind that she must be the girl.
"No other girl needs it like I do," she thought desperately. "No other girl has suffered so from being homely."
She wrote her letter six times before she was satisfied. It was the best she could do. "You have a comforting theory, but it can't be done. If you could but see me you would know. I am one of those unfortunate individuals who was born an ugly duckling and must remain so." Then she added the line which was to touch John Barker's heart. "I once said that I would give my life for my beauty and all the rest of my life I have been beautiful for one year. I mean it then and now."

Susie dashed her letter. She had wild thoughts of going to Chicago, of seeing John Barker personally, begging him to try. One moment she was hopeful, the next mercilessly amused at her own impotence.
While Susie waited, thrilled in spite of herself, the letters rolled into John Barker's office, hundreds of them, thousands of them. The job of sorting and reading was turned over to Jeff Bowman and ten helpers.
After a stupor of week 100 letters were placed on John Barker's desk. He and Clifford Kane went through them. Three hours later 85 hope messages had been read, the other five applications were taken under advisement. Kane, none too enthusiastic over the scheme, suggested they choose one of the five blindly and go ahead. He was definitely opposed to Susie whom Barker favored.
Jeff Bowman, changing into the office, settled the matter. "Why not do a blind investigation?" he inquired. "Let's look up all five, then we'll be sure."
"In my mind Susie is our girl," Barker insisted, holding her letter in his hand. "She'd give her life of heaven to be beautiful for one year. Isn't that pathetic? Isn't that terrible? Women are superior to the lowly boys of the chief function in life. This girl realizes that, she suffers—she's terrific, I tell you."
"A beauty contest, Barker?" Jeff agreed. "But I still hold out for an investigation. Naturally we can't fight deformities. Your friend Susie tells us nothing of her background, not even her age. You can't go at this thing blind. You can't send for Susie and then disappoint her."
Kane shrugged wearily at the same little eying Jeff with animosity. The young fool had too much authority, too much influence over the Chief. One of these he'd succeed in getting Jeff fired.
"Go see about tomorrow's copy," he said curtly. "Mr. Barker and I will look this up."
"Stay right where you are," Barker interposed as Jeff started for the door. "You're right about this thing. Do little sleuthing in the background and bring the report to me. After that we'll decide—on Susie." He laughed good-naturally.

W. J. Bryan, the peerless leader, maker of platforms and statements of disheveled and the guest of his nephew, W. B. Milburn of this city, next week and the Democrats have made his expected visit the occasion for a speech which will be given probably next Tuesday evening.
The Shannock school, eight miles southeast of Twin Falls, has a live progressive teacher in the person of Mrs. M. McQuibben. Her study claim the first domestic science class in any of the schools in this county-city or rural. Besides giving her pupils science instruction in preparing and cooking food, she teaches them to prepare a hot lunch and a cold meal, and which is very much to their credit. The county superintendent Potter hopes to have several such schools like this in the near future.

You May Not Know That—

The Family Doctor
By DR. MORRIS FISHEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine
Particularly common as a complication of colds, coughs and other winter diseases is pleurisy, an inflammation of the membranes which line the walls of the chest. Pleurisy is sometimes accompanied by infection. Other complications, however, such as fractured ribs, pneumonia, lung abscess, tumors or injury to the tissues may be complicated by secondary infection and inflammation of this lining membrane.
Typical of pleurisy is the severe pain in the side of the chest, which is usually worse when the patient lies on his back or breathes deeply. Sometimes the pain is felt at the shoulder or to the abdomen. For example, when there is serious pleurisy complicating pneumonia, the patient sometimes feels pain in the area of the appendix. If the infection and inflammation are sufficient to break through the pleural membrane, a general feeling of illness, a fever, and a general feeling of illness.
The doctor determines the presence of pleurisy by using the stethoscope. There are two methods which are traditional. He listens with his stethoscope over the spot where the pain is felt, and if it is pleurisy, he will hear a rubbing and crackling sound, which is typical of this condition. He also asks that there be a change in the breathing sounds and in the sound of the spoken voice that is due to the inflammation. Then when he taps the chest he will hear a change in the note over the area in which there is inflammation and swelling beneath the skin, muscles and bones which constitute the walls of the chest.
Obviously pleurisy is not dangerous as long as it is treated toward recovery, but if the pleurisy is due to tuberculosis or to infection with some germs, it is a serious condition. Even in mild cases, therefore, it is customary to put the patient with pleurisy to bed in order to prevent the spreading of the condition. If the pain is severe, however, it is customary to give the patient a large amount of fluid to keep him comfortable with a sedative to ease the pain.
