62 MEN TRAPPED AS U. S. SUBMARINE SINKS

Stock Growers Launch Stiff Battle on Rustlers

Speakers Rap 'Soft' Handling of Cattle Stealing Prisoners

Members of the Idaho Cattle and Horse Growers association, meeting here in 25th annual session, this morning again launched a determined fight to protect cattle growers against the "alarming activities" of cattle rustlers within the state.

The association, during the last legislative session, would have stopped such practice but both were vetoed by the governor. One would have provided $20,000 to fight the rustlers.

The renewed effort to fight rustlers came before the two-day convention this morning during the discussion period. Various members of the group took the floor and as a result the state pardon board was played for its "soft" handling of cattle rustling cases after the men have been convicted and when they appear for parole or parole.

INDIAN SQUAWS GREET ROYALTY EN ROUTE WEST

ABOARD ROYAL PILLER TRAIN, WHITE RIVER, Ont., May 23 (U.P.)—Indian squaws with purposeful smiles in their arms greeted King George and Queen Elizabeth today in a scenic woodland setting.

The meeting took place at White River, a village of 400 which turned out its entire population and a blue and white crowd band to greet the royal couple in their historic tour across Canada.

It was snowing lightly when the royal train passed at White River, reputedly the coldest spot in Canada where temperatures dropped to 72 below zero last winter and often less.

The small band, dressed in blue cloaks and white trousers, trumpeted the arrival of the royal train.

Crowd at Platform
The crowd on the small station platform greeted the Indian mothers and their babies cheering in the cheering crowd.

From White River the royal train proceeded westward through some of the most scenic spots of the trip across lower Ontario province, en route to the twin industrial cities of Port Arthur and Fort William.

STEEL COMPANY ASKS $7,500,000 FROM CIO UNION

CLEVELAND, May 23 (U.P.)—Republic Steel corporation announced today that it was filing a $7,500,000 damage suit against the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, John L. Lewis, Philip Murray and others as a result of the "little steel strike of 1937."

The company charged that its loss of business and extraordinary expenses resulting from the strike had cost it $2,500,000. It asked threefold damages as provided by the Clayton anti-trust act.

It named almost 700 individual strikers and union officers as defendants. Youngstown, Warren, Niles, Canton and Massillon, all in Ohio, as defendants.

Filed in District Court
The suit was filed in federal district court here. It said that "unlawful acts of force, intimidation, threats, violence, destruction of property, injury to persons and obstruction of commerce to and from the plants were part of a conspiracy to compel the company to sign a proposed collective bargaining contract with the S. W. O. C."

A precedent for such a suit has been established in Philadelphia where a federal district court jury awarded the Apex Hosiery company $711,424, representing threefold damages against the American Federation of Hosiery workers for damages and loss of business suffered in seven weeks at-down strike in 1937.

Forced Closings
Republic Steel corporation based its claim on the fact that it was forced to close its plants at Youngstown, Canton and Massillon, the alleged abnormal cost of operating under forced closings at Warren, Niles and some Canton plants, the cost of protecting property and workers during the strike, the loss of business resulting from the blockading of plants.

Republic's plants were scenes of riotous disorders the day after the strike, according to the complaint. Two persons were killed near its Chicago plant during a battle between policemen and demonstrators.

All Members of Crew Alive Yet, Commander Says

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 23 (U.P.)—Sixty-two men were trapped 240 feet below the surface of the Atlantic ocean today when the U. S. navy submarine Squalus, making a routine dive, settled on the ocean floor off Portsmouth and was unable to rise because of a jammed valve.

The commander, Lieut. Commander Oliver Naquin, reported by telephone that all aboard were alive and well. He said there was sufficient air to last for at least another 48 hours.

Although there was water in several of the after compartments, Naquin said the rest of the craft had been kept dry by closing water doors.

Communication was broken during Naquin's conversation with the submarine Squalus, which had picked up the last of the Squalus and about five miles south of White Island.

The Squalus, completed May 1 at Portsmouth, has been making daily training trips from the navy yard here. At 6 a. m. (EDT) today, the Squalus, skippered by Naquin, left the navy yard. She was due back at 9:40 a. m. (EDT) and when she failed to appear, the submarine rescue party was sent to search for her.

One Convict Still Loose In Mountain

GARDEN VALLEY, Ida., May 23 (U.P.)—Lonnie Walling, 31-year-old escaped convict, reported the densely wooded mountain country near here today while a posse of nearly 200 men aided by bloodhounds sought to capture him.

Walling promised to meet his three fellow fugitives when he left them a short time before deputies captured them without a struggle in a deserted cabin near the general store here last night. They told captors they had a rendezvous with Walling at an "appointed place."

Deputies were keeping a special watch on this "place" in the hope Walling had not learned of the capture of his companions and would keep the appointment.

High Powered Rifles
National guard sharpshooters equipped with high powered rifles added the hunt for the fugitive. One bloodhound was missing and the deputies believed his throat was cut by Walling to his hearing.

Encouraged by the capture of the three convicts, native mountaineers in increasing numbers joined the search for Walling. Every bridge, road and trail was blocked. Forest lookout stations kept an eye out for the fugitive.

He dare not start a warning fire in below freezing weather or cook any food. A light rain fell intermittently to his discomfort.

"Yellow Ray"
"Walling is a yellow ray without the courage of the three convicts we captured," a deputy said. "But that might make him even more dangerous."

The searchers believed Walling would head northwest toward the Canadian border if he failed to keep the appointment. The other three headed southeast. He is more experienced in woodcraft, and is used to outdoor life. The area is (Continued on Page 3, Column 2)

Election Winds Up Convention For Business Women of Idaho

BULLETIN
Miss M. Ietta McCoy, Twin Falls, was elected this afternoon as state president of the Idaho Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs.

Count of the ballots, completed at 2:30 p. m., showed Miss McCoy had attained a majority over Julia Steele, Coeur d'Alene, the other candidate for the presidency.

By JEAN DINKELACKER
Bringing the 19th annual convention of the Idaho Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs to a successful conclusion, delegates were leaving by car, bus and train for all sections of the state today, returning to their homes, or continuing on vacation trips, the first days of which had been spent in Twin Falls.

Major items of business, including the biennial election of officers, were to conclude by late afternoon.

Candidates, as announced by the nominating committee, were: President, M. Ietta McCoy, Twin Falls; first vice-president, Minnie Davenport, Caldwell; and second vice-president, Leona Neff, Idaho Falls; and May E. Eakin, Salmon; corresponding secretary, Bettie T. T. Twin Falls; and Emma Walton, Coeur d'Alene; recording secretary, Emma Aankel, Nampa; and Nanna Barker, Boise; treasurer, Anna Hill, Blackfoot; only candidate.

Amelia needs the railroad just as much today, even more, than in the days of the inception of the Union Pacific, according to H. G. Hild, Salt Lake City, general manager of the south-central district, Union Pacific railroad, at the final luncheon meeting of the convention this afternoon.

"The Union Pacific and Idaho are mutually interdependent with common problems that can be solved only through mutual helpfulness. The backbone of American transportation is the railroad, which has and does handle every sort of goods, from all sections. In all sections, for an average revenue of about one cent for hauling a ton of freight one mile," he told the audience.

"One of the most important parts of merchandising is advertising. The Union Pacific advertising appropriation is approximately $1,000,000 annually, of which about 60 per cent is for newspaper and national advertising medium of proven value," he added.

"Whether you ad or don't ad, you will admit that the spreading of the name and fame of Big Valley, Idaho, has been of unlimited publicity to Idaho."

RUSIA AND JAPAN HOLD KEYS IN WORLD POWER LINE-UPS

SOVIE EXPECTED TO JOIN BRITISH, FRENCH IN PACT

By JOE ALER MORRIS
United Press Foreign News Editor
Soviet Russia and Japan remained unknown quantities today in the alignment of totalitarian and anti-aggression powers, but there were persistent predictions that both would soon adhere to European military alliances.

In London and Paris, the eventual adherence of Russia to the anti-aggression front was taken for granted, despite difficulties still blocking negotiations between London and Moscow. The British cabinet yesterday said it was not possible to say how far it can go toward a military alliance with the Soviets.

In Rome and Berlin, there were confident predictions that Japan would join the totalitarian military pact signed by Italy and Germany in Berlin yesterday. If Britain joins a full fledged alliance with Soviet Russia.

Whether the Fascists and Nazis, who were understood to have agreed on secret clauses to their treaty between Europe and Japan, will spheres of influence, were too optimistic regarding the Japanese response to be determined.

The Tokyo government has gone to great lengths to make it clear to Europe that Japan wants to join an alliance directed against Russia, but wants to avoid any act which would antagonize Britain, France and the United States. It has sought to bargain with the so-called western democracies for a free hand to carry out her course of China, indirectly warning London that if Britain joins up with the Soviets the Japanese will be forced into adherence to the totalitarian military pact to protect her own interests in the Orient.

Efforts to End Wanted
Great Britain, however, has been trying to work out the formula to fit both Japanese and Soviet points without losing the advantage of either. Due to Moscow's position, the British find it almost necessary to join up with the Soviets to make effective on the battlefield as well as on paper. Their European allies, however, are not so sure. The same time the governments of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain still hope to work out an understanding with Germany that will be forced into an alliance with the German-Italian military front.

It is said that this pact may be that the British-Soviet-French alliance, if completed, will apply only to Europe and will not affect a Japanese-Soviet pact which would enable the most conservative factions in Japan to state that they are not in a position to make an alliance with the Soviet totalitarianism.

POT SHOTS

WITH

The Gentleman in the Third Row

NO HALF-CROCKED LAD CAN SAY "APOPTROPHE"

Pots Peller:
Heard a pretty good one the other day.
Fellow about half-crocked trying to spell "APOPTROPHE."
"A-I-n-possibly-I."

Two Glimpses of The Same Man

Mr. I'd like to present to you an original drama, not yet presented on Broadway but destined, I'm sure, to win the Pulitzer prize for the American drama most true to life.

This drama came in two scenes. The setting is the same—a restaurant and a pretty waitress.

Scene the first:
Man, about 35, comes merrily into the restaurant. He calls to the waitress: "Hi, sweetheart." He sits down with her as she orders his meal. When she brings the meal he says: "Babe, you're beautiful today."

Scene the second:
Some man comes sedately into the restaurant, accompanied by a lady with wedding ring on finger. He says: "How do you do, babe?" When the waitress reaches table, he never looks at her while ordering and while waiting for his wife to order. When she leaves he tells waitress politely: "An excellent meal."

The point, of course, is—well, the point.

—George Bernard Shaw

WHAT! NO ROAST LAMB?

Mr. Just in case nobody slipped you a copy of the menu for tonight's banquet of the cattle and horse gentry, here are a few of the items listed thereon:

Cactus cocktail.
Saddle blanket soup.
Rustled beef.
Dove melowed beef.
Jerked milk.
Square berry pie.
There are, I might add, some others.

—Sheep Roaster

QUICK, BOYS, NAB THOSE FEMALE!

Dear Pot Shola:
Maybe I'm just an old man, but I wouldn't think the cops would have very far to look for those missing girls.

Some P. W. conventioners copped them to take home as souvenirs to prove to the other gals that "We met a man, and here's his card."

—Haydn Reed

PARENTS HAVE FUNNY IDEAS

Parents are pretty swell as a rule. They're probably lots better than sons ever know.

But damn it, those parents have awful habits. In hopes I can cure 'em I'm going to blab it.

When a fellow takes his girl to visit with the folks why do parents think it's the funniest joke?

To get the family's album And show the One Girl How money looked while wearing A forehead curl?

OR PURCHASE REFERRING ENTIRE CITY

Dear Pots:
I notice in the classified ad page this little item:

"T&M work wanted, Pn. 0481-83."

Could this by any chance have something to do with the Cowboyst?

CHAPTER II

UNLESS you belonged to the initiated you might think the Duke's night club was just another brownstone front on a quiet block. But if you happened to be on East 53d Street this stormy night, you could see even through the misty rain, that the house was playing a new role. Every window gleamed with lights. A footman, dressed in expensive livery, balanced himself at the curb, bracing his body against the wind and alert while he directed a long line of cars as they paused to deposit customers.

Admission was by card only. Tuckie Thompson had secured the Duke's list well. The crowd looked like a first night at the Opera. But there was no similarity in the entertainment.

At the end of the silver hall on the ground floor, nudged the Tap Room. Here, behind closed doors, society could get plastered if it so chose.

The main restaurant on the second floor, decorated in black and white, was jammed. A all-mouthed pianist, huddled on a grand piano. Near him stood a girl in scarlet singing rhapsodic songs. Her voice was husky and deep. There was a pounding table. Straining against a red velvet rope which had been swung across the entrance were more people.

The Duke presided at a table close to the dance floor. Nick hovered near the entrance while Tuckie flattered among people, gurgling whenever she saw a familiar face.

"This is a party," said Tuckie to a friend. "This is too marvelous!" she twittered up to an oldish, bald-headed person.

But Tuckie's sentence was never to be finished. With the rest of the crowd she had turned toward the door to see who had the power to force Pasquale to let down the bars.

A DARK-HAIRED girl walked slowly in. She had splendid brown eyes, short, curly brown hair and a red mouth that quirked up humorously. Her white dress was close-fitting and in her hair was a pink rose.

"Who is that?" the couple with the Duke had been sitting was curious. "Pretty, isn't she?"

The Duke smiled. "That's her front. Nothing shy about her when she's working. She's the woman who runs the New York. Has the low-down on everybody here. How's that for a build-up, Miss Franklin?"

"You always say the right thing, Mr. Martin."

He bowed her to a table, overtly polite to this woman of position and positive power. When she sat, Tuckie was right there in his club. "Another bottle of champagne," he called to a waiter.

"But when you came to know her you were surprised to learn how determined she could be. Born with a head on her shoulders. New York as a child, gone to a fashionable school and traveled abroad. This came to an abrupt end when her father died. Her style caught the attention of an editor. He gave her a job on the Gazette. Three years later she was Society Editor. Now with an unlimited acquaintance and a gift for ferreting out difficult news, she was a person to be feared."

"Mary, dear!" Tuckie rushed up. "You're the only one in New York who knows Pasquale well. Lead down the velvet rope. Worked weeks over this list. I'm a wreck!" Tuckie sank in a chair. "Everybody in the world who matters is here!"

"Including Janice French?"

"Why she must be."

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
Evening Times Washington

WASHINGTON, May 22—By the time the anti-trust division of the department of justice gets through with its investigation of the building industry, the general public ought to have a much clearer idea why it costs so much to build a house.

Most of the explanations so far offered are all right as far as they go except that they are incomplete, as justice department officials see it.

The high price of building materials is partly responsible—but only partly so. The same is true of the high cost of labor. The same is true of various other factors that are occasionally cited.

And the whole investigation is something in the nature of a test case for a theory currently held by the department that the way to restore competition and flexible price structures to any given industry is not by reaching out and beating down the heads of some single group of wrongdoers, but by making a concerted, all-around-the-board effort that will take all factors into account and strive to apply correctives to all simultaneously.

FOUR-FRONT CAMPAIGN

At least four fronts in the industry are under scrutiny.

First, there are materials. The federal trade commission is just now completing a case alleging a price-fixing agreement in cement.

A year ago made a similar study in respect to plate glass. Restraint of trade to keep material prices up was the charge.

Next comes distribution. The federal trade commission has devoted considerable time to the field, also. Agreements to confine trade to established channels are frequently uncovered.

A manufacturer, for instance, may want to sell materials direct to large buyers. A local dealer's group may object that this will cut out the local group will establish a list of recognized dealers, and bring pressure on any manufacturer who trades through any others.

There is also the question of labor. The federal trade commission is just now completing a case alleging a price-fixing agreement in cement.

LEADER DEMANDS CONTINUATION OF TAXING POLICIES

By LYLE G. WILSON
WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt's fighting speech before the National Taxpayers' Association, which he delivered last night, was a surprise to many observers. The speech, which was broadcast over the radio, was a surprise to many observers. The speech, which was broadcast over the radio, was a surprise to many observers.

Mr. Roosevelt revealed he has abandoned hope of a balanced budget in the second administration and told the retailers that he and the New Dealers were the true conservatives while opposition groups were the radicals, gamblers with the nation's safety.

Partisans, he said, were scaring well-to-do parents with warnings that their grandchildren would have to pay the increased national debt and he charged that the Republicans were merchandising horror stories in their effort to make this "national debt week."

Not Alarming
"Certainly, as alarming as anything," Mr. Roosevelt said, "as telling parents who are already starving that an untrammelled business system will provide their grandchildren with food in 1945. Yet this is what the radicals gambled on practice and politics might have to say if they put their theories into practice next year. A reasonable internal debt will not impoverish our children."

That reference to the 1945 presidential election coupled with the break challenge to conservative plans for tax revision and economy raised immediate speculation whether the President had determined in his own mind that a compromise had been reached with the Democrats. Democratic 1940 candidate would not.

Under those circumstances, many political observers believe, it would be unwise for Mr. Roosevelt to seek re-nomination himself because of the general doubt that he could dictate the nomination of any of the New Dealers to the White House political circle.

City Ponders Plans for Better Lighting System

City officials today had under consideration a plan whereby street lighting facilities, especially those in the downtown sections and the business district, would be "stepped up" in the interests of providing better illumination to aid in curbing the traffic and crime problem.

Two plans along this line were explained in detail to the city council last night by John D. Orr, assistant general manager of the Idaho Power company. The council will, in all probability, accept one of them, technically known as "plan number two."

During his discussion of the lighting situation Mr. Orr referred to huge replicas of the system as it is today and as it would be under the new arrangement. The replicas were prepared by Idaho Power company workmen and were lighted for display while the council chamber was darkened last night.

Out of Date
In presenting the plans, Orr pointed out that the present system is practically the same as it was 20 or 25 years ago with exception of additional power and then as circumstances demanded.

"Plan two, which the city will in all probability adopt," he said, "provides for more illumination for a 6.5 per cent increase in cost of approximately $144 a year under new rates, and the main traveled arteries surrounding the city."

Assures Maintenance
Orr stressed the point that if the plan is adopted the Idaho Power company would assume the responsibility, under a 10-year agreement, of maintaining and repairing broken lamps and would even paint the standards in addition to washing the outer globes five or six times a year.

Decision of the council as to whether or not the proposed plan would be adopted and observers said that it would be made by members before or on next Monday night.

Decision on the busy season last night, which lasted two and one-half hours, also heard the plea of Paul Houghton, Portland, official of the farm security administration for water for the new "village" which will be constructed by the government on acreage near the south park. Paul particulars concerning the migratory "farm family" setup were printed recently in the Evening Times.

DISASTER STUDY PLANS ARRANGED

Because no one can tell when or where disaster might strike, the Red Cross disaster preparedness institute for south central Idaho, planned for Friday, May 26 at the Twin Falls hotel, is intended especially for state, county and municipal officials, medical societies, hospital groups, nurses, ex-soldiers, social workers, public utility units and representatives of business life.

This was the announcement today by Twin Falls chapter officials as final plans were completed for the disaster session.

Scholar Direct
The institute will be under the personal direction of A. L. Schaefer, manager in the Pacific area, who was formerly national director of disaster relief. He will be assisted by Mrs. Edith H. McAllister, case work supervisor on the disaster staff, and Forrest Stewart, Idaho field representative.

At the morning session, opening at 10 a. m., Mr. Schaefer will speak on "Red Cross Preparedness for Disaster" and then the institute will be under the personal direction of A. L. Schaefer, manager in the Pacific area, who was formerly national director of disaster relief.

Rehabilitation Topic
Mrs. McAllister will discuss "Red Cross Family Rehabilitation," with emphasis on procedures in the relief of disaster sufferers from the time they are first registered for relief until rehabilitation is effected.

Delegates from Buhl, Casala, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Minidoka county Red Cross chapters will participate in the disaster preparedness study in Twin Falls.

Capital Flowers into Fluster Over Garden Party for Royalty

By (GERRY DICK
(NKA Service)

WASHINGTON, May 22 — Not since they burned the White House in 1814 have the British caused such a stir in the nation's capital as they are causing in connection with the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

To be strictly accurate, it isn't so much the British that are causing the stir as it is the rather large group of excited Washingtonians who are getting all puffed up about the affair. But the point is that the stir is taking place.

Most of it centers around the big garden party which is to be thrown for their majesties at the British embassy. This thing is being handled with enough formality to fit a coronation, and the acute grief nourished in the bosoms of people who thought they ought to get invitations, but didn't, is a pitiful and saddening thing to behold.

Stiff Shirt Affair

That this would be a formal affair and no fooling became evident back in mid-March, when four or five carefully selected newspaperwomen were invited to the British embassy and there given an advance fill-in on what the program would probably be like.

After being told all of this, the newspaperwomen were informed that, in no circumstances, were they to print any of it, unless and until the embassy officials sanctioned it. That sanction never came through. Instead, about a week before their majesties were due to arrive, the newspaperwomen—plus about a dozen more—were called back to the embassy and given all the dope a second time. This dope included complete details about the way a royal garden party is run.

There'll be some 1,400 guests. Top-notch officialdom will be there, of course: Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes, Admiral and Mrs. Sturt and General and Mrs. Craig (representing navy and army), Speaker and Mrs. Bankhead, Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, Vice-President and Mrs. Garner, chiefs of foreign missions, and so on.

In addition, some 400 "outstanding Americans" from other parts of the country will be present; they're people in whom their majesties have shown some interest, or else they happen to be folks whom Ambassador and Mrs. Lindsay think their majesties would enjoy meeting.

Latecomers Out of Luck

Anyhow, all the guests are told what time to show up, the idea being to get them draped around the grounds before the king and queen put in an appearance. Once their majesties appear, the gates of the embassy will be shut, and latecomers will be turned away.

Arriving at the embassy from the White House, the king and queen will go first to a portico overlooking the garden, while a band plays "God Save the King." Then they come downstairs and stroll about the garden briefly.

Here and there someone will be pulled out of the crowd to come over and be introduced. There'll be no shaking hands, and the queue—no, instructed to form a wide lane for their majesties to pass through. Later, when they have returned to the balcony to have tea, their majesties will receive certain guests at the tea table, such guests being summoned by members of the embassy staff.

If a rain comes up, the guests will just have to take serenades they choose to spend their time studding under a refreshment tent.

Courtesy Not Necessary

Somewhat the idea of this formal-ty got all over town and impressed various folk with the idea that the divinity which doth hedge a king hedges him even when he's visiting the capital of a democracy.

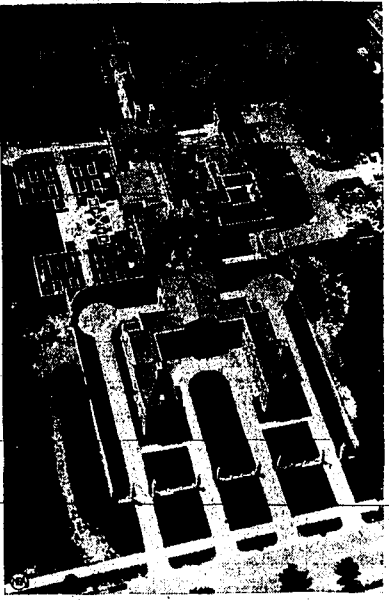

Someone circulated a report that the state department protocol section had drawn up elaborate rules on behavior in the presence of royalty—bowing from the waist, backing out of the room, and all that sort of thing. The protocol section has been denying it ever since, and is pretty sure about it.

At the White House, people will be expected to behave in the presence of the king and queen just about as they would in the presence of the President and his wife. The British embassy is authority for the statement that it's okay to shake hands with royalty instead of bowing and curtseying.

For weeks the special waiting room into which the king and queen will pass when their train reaches Union station here has been undergoing face-lifting. The arrival of President Roosevelt of Nicaragua gave the army and navy a fine chance to dress-rehearse their parade of greeting—an affair so alloy that some senators and congressmen are still muttering about it.

AMA Head

New president of American Medical Association is Dr. Rock, Warm Springs, Wis., who gave at St. Louis, Mo., convention.

Alr view of British embassy at Washington, D. C., where Washington will gather, rain or shine, to fete King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Because they didn't receive one of these fancy invitations to the garden party for the king and queen of England, some Washingtonians are unhappy. NKA's Gerry Dick got hers.

Dispelling the Fog

By CHARLES MICHELSON,
Director of Publicity, Democratic National Committee

Generalizations are as easy as they are inaccurate. Just now congress is wrestling with the neutrality problem. Which is another way of saying it is casting about for a means of averting war; if possible, particularly of keeping us out of any war that may eventuate.

It isn't a controversy between peace party and war party, although inflated advocates of one or the other program for achieving the result are not chary in calling each other war-mongers and defeatists, etc. One school of thought, perhaps not uninfluenced by its desire to see that our country has every opportunity to market all its goods, is adhering generally to Senator Key Pittman's "cash and carry" bill—which means that any nation that wants to, in war time as in peace time, can buy anything from baby bottles to bombing planes over here, providing it pays cash for them and carries them away in its own ship, and at its own risk.

The opposition contention is that the British embassy is an alliance with Great Britain and France, and if the big explosion occurs in Europe, for they alone have the ships and the cash to profit by this program, and that therefore the only way to insure peace for America is to forbid all traffic with warring nations.

Other Factors

Of course there are other elements in both programs—such as the prohibition of Americans selling on passenger vessels belonging to belligerents and other limitations, which would prevent our citizens from engaging in business or placing themselves in such situations as might involve us in international controversies.

Out of the comments of these conditions has developed such slogans as this, from Mr. Paul Mallory's column: "The cash and carry plan would make the U. S. a munitions depot of Britain and France in the world, a 'munition depot' for warring nations," usually trading with both sides. American trucks and tractors carried the Japanese into Manchukuo and Missouri mines packed Mt. Rushmore mountain batteries in Ethiopia. It is not too much to say that practically every Latin American revolution was munitioned from our gun factories. Japan and China, years ago, drew their military supplies largely from the United States. The same thing was true of the Russo-Japanese war. Great Britain was a munitions depot for the confederacy in our war between the States. Great Britain, it may also be remembered, paid us some millions of dollars in the matter of the Alabama claims.

Bought from England

It also runs in my mind that in our war with Spain over Cuba, we bought extensively from England and even managed to pick up a cruiser—I think it was the New Orleans—with some surreptitiousness, perhaps, but we got the ship. And yet none of these episodes brought war to the supplying nation.

Now, when we come to the World War, our entry into that conflict was not because we were a munition depot for the allies—though that may have been a contributing factor—but because we had no other place to go when Germany started sinking our merchant ships—regardless of their destination or their cargoes—in her submarine campaign to clear the ocean of carriers.

Kaiser's Bid for Mexico

There was the incident of the Zimmerman note, which Mr. Sullivan so graphically described in his history, perhaps the final straw that put us into war. This note was an order from the German ministry of foreign affairs to the German minister in Mexico. After telling him of the latent in making unrestricted submarine warfare, it went on to this effect:

"We make Mexico a proposal of alliance on the following basis: Make war together, make peace together, generous financial support and an understanding on our part that Mexico is to reconquer her lost territory in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona. The settlement in detail is left to you. You will inform the President (Carranza) of the above most secretly as soon as the outbreak of war with the United States of America is certain."

Only if War Declared

Under Secretary Zimmerman of the German ministry explained that the instructions were only to be carried out after declaration of war by America. Mr. Sullivan added this comment: "An explanation doing much credit to Mr. Zimmerman's legation and morals than to his intelligence."

I have frequently stated by supposed authority that the fact that had the Kaiser realized that the whole might of America would ultimately be thrown into the scale against him, he would never have gone into the World War. It is on this same theory, perhaps, that Herr Hitler may be influenced to abandon his scheme of conquest by the marauding which would shut him off from supplies, while affording opportunity for his potential enemies to get them.

This with—in the background—the huge American war fleet, in being or in process of construction, would be a deterrent of such a program as the Zimmerman note conveyed.

'Straw' Vote Shows Men Like Hats Best in Sports Models

University men, looking for something new in straw headgear to wear with semi-formal evening clothing, found the answer in this brown coconut straw with white pique band.

By PAUL ROSS
(NEA Service)

NEW YORK—The "sportswear trend," as male kind's revolt against sartorial dullness is quaintly called, has caught up with the straw hat. Hay bonnets have gone hay-hay. It is no longer necessary to choose from among: 1. square, 2. parallelogram, 3. leghorn. Now you can pick out one of a dozen new porous, lightweight, colorful straw weaves. And if bodies are snappy, bands are positively insouciant.

The traditional sailor will, of course, remain the favorite for town appearance of well-groomed indifference. A soft Tahitian straw, woven in the South seas, is new, soft and comfortable. The coconut is climbing to greater popularity. Well-dressed collegiates are even donning them for informal evening wear!

For color enthusiasts the designers have brought out multi-colored straws in many fancy weaves. Even panamas have felt the urge for improvement and now appear in lighter weights and new shapes, borrowed from felt hat models. Not to be forgotten are bankos and raffias which have also been streamlined.

What a contrast with the conservative sailor is this gay sport topper of loosely-woven Tahitian braid, in telescope shape. A bright, feather, adds color to the Glen-plaid pique band.

For a cool head on a hot day, get under the wide-sweeping brim of this rough weave Panama. men. Note the diamond-shaped telescope crown and "half-band" of multi-colored cord.

and business wear. But even these stiff, sensate have been air-vented and lightweight, and now appear draped in bright bands. Alternative for conservative gents is the hand-knitted straw, which grows in importance. It now comes in colors such as green, too, and boasts tyrolean shape and pongee or straw bands.

Progressives will head straight for the madagascar, a loosely woven bonnet which promises to be rather cool. It comes in natural straw colors. College boys will give a new knotted hemp bonnet a big run because of its flexibility and general

Standby of conservatism, the stiff straw sailor is the "classic" of men's summer hats. Smartly-dressed men like them for the trimness with which they top off a business suit in town.

GERMAN JEWS TRAIN FOR NEW JOBS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

15,000 PREPARE FOR HARD LABOR IN OTHER LANDS

By DANA A. SCHMIDT

BERLIN, May 23 (AP)—Necessity is forcing rapid growth among the half million Jews still living in Germany of a process they call " Umschulung," which means occupational readjustment.

About 15,000 Jews thus have retrained themselves preparatory to emigrating at once throughout the old reich since 1933, while countless others have changed their profession by individual efforts. There are 3,800 Jews in training courses in the old reich at present, and 1,600 are learning abroad.

They are trying to do something about the charges perhaps most consistently brought against Jews—that they are merchants, that they tend to concentrate in and dominate intellectual occupations, and that they shun manual labor.

Before 1933 there were only 3,224 German Jews connected with agriculture and 20,000 with handicrafts. Trade Schools Founded

Far-reaching Jews as long as half a century ago, regarding such conditions as unhealthy, founded the ICA farm colonies in Argentina where there are now some 30,000 Jewish farmers, and founded the ORT trade schools aiming at "a healthy occupational structure, restraining of intellectuals and merchants to manual labor and trades."

ORT's slogan characterizes the present movement in Germany, although its work hitherto largely was confined to Russia, Lithuania, Poland and Rumania, the more prosperous Jews of western Europe confining their interest to financial support. Now, German Jews, under constant pressure to emigrate, find that many countries will admit only farm laborers or handicraftsmen, while there are few opportunities for merchants stripped of capital and professional skill, even in the countries which will admit them.

Number Reduced

If they could get in, a far greater number of Jews would enroll in the training courses, whose capacity is limited by lack of money and Nazi discrimination to allot the needed raw materials and farm-land.

Thus the number of Jews being trained in Germany has been reduced from 4,800 before the anti-Jewish riots of last November to 3,800 at present, while 13 out of 31 training farms have had to be abandoned. Some of the metal workers' schools get all their materials from France.

Training Schools Widened

Meanwhile, however, opportunities for recent emigrants to be trained abroad have increased. ORT hopes to have 1,200 learning centers in France before the end of the year. It is understood that the 3,000 men who will start a transit camp at Richborough, Kent, in England, will be offered some kind of training before they continue their migration and that the 400 boys still at a camp near Harwich will get vocational training. Centers are operating in Holland and Sweden.

Two-third of the " Umschulung," as they call themselves in Germany, are on farms, the rest in training trades. Half are youngsters, 15 to 20, learning a vocation for the first time, the rest are learning a new one. Slightly fewer than half are men, the rest are women.

Costs are paid by the Jewish community in a large proportion of cases.

They Like New Work

The head of one training farm said he could make an acceptable farmhand out of a former school teacher in two years, during which time he would have spent two months in each of the 12 divisions. Many, he said, grow deeply attached to their new work and more than 80 per cent of those who emigrate to Palestine and a somewhat smaller percentage of those going elsewhere stick to it. All who enroll for re-training must promise to emigrate somewhere when finished.

Participants in all kinds of training spend part of every day in theoretical study, a large part of which is devoted to English. German Jews everywhere learn English. The role Jewish newspaper devotees a full page to English lessons. A current joke is: "Are you any more or are you learning English?"

Despite all efforts, a great deal of training remains wasted motion. Nazi pressure to utilize every immigration loophole forces many who learned English into Spanish-speaking countries, many would-be farmers into industrial countries, and vice versa. Only Palestine offers Jews a certain future and normal distribution through the occupational structure. But many Jewish leaders are now convinced that Palestine is economically and politically incapable of ever absorbing a significant portion of the world's 15,000,000 Jews. They still talk of Canada, Alaska, Kenya and North Rhodesia.

Hotel Man Has Chance To Be Colonel—For $25

Lynn Stewart, manager of the Hogerson hotel here, had the opportunity the other day of becoming a "Virginia Colonel" at no cost—that is with the exception of $25 which "is asked of each appointee to defray necessary expenses incurred in issuing the commission which is from copper-plate engraving with name inscribed with artistic care."

The "great opportunity" of a lifetime was offered Mr. Stewart by R. G. Barnhill, manager of the Martha Washington Inn at Abingdon, Va.

He Tossed It Away

The local manager read over the letter and then tossed it in the waste basket. Who took it out of the basket, and how it got to the Evening Times, is a secret.

To start the story off right, here are some excerpts from the letter which Mr. Stewart received:

"You have no doubt seen the feature articles carried in practically all of the leading hotel publications throughout the United States concerning Jack B. Stewart, manager of the George Washington hotel, Arlington, Va., who has been appointed a Virginia colonel. I am glad to say that with the assistance of the Virginia Hotel Association, I am instrumental in securing for Mr. Stewart this deserved recognition which I was able to obtain as chairman of a group of hotel men organized for this purpose."

The article caused so much interest and widespread comment among hotel people in all parts of the country that it has inspired numerous requests that our group endeavor to render a like service to outstanding and worthy hotel men in other states.

Five in Each State

"Consequently we have been authorized to name five persons in each state of the union to receive appointments as Virginia colonels, which is a signal recognition of the part played by hotels in American progress."

You have been recommended and passed on by the committee as one qualified to receive this appointment. I am therefore extending you an invitation to accept the appointment as one of the five representatives from the state of Idaho to be accorded the honor.

Slight Fee

"As this is strictly an honorary commission, there will, of course, be no dues or assessments nor further obligations, other than the initial fee of $25 which is asked of each appointee to defray necessary expenses incurred in issuing the commission which is from copper-plate engraving with name inscribed with artistic care. This is also to cover cost of framing commission, artist fees, secretarial work, etc."

"Should you accept the appointment and are not averse to publicity of this nature, please send me the name of the leading newspaper of your city, also your picture and a geographical sketch to be used as a new item."

Thus Mr. Stewart, along with 239 other hotel men in the United States, was offered the chance to fame, and he threw it in the waste basket.

Nice Total

Should the commissions be accepted over the country, and the five hotel men from each state send in their $25, the amount of funds received would be $125, which, if servers will agree, is a neat little "expense fund."

One observer expressed the opinion that if hotel men decide to make colonies of all hotel men—at $25 a head—all the unemployed of this nature, please send me the name of the leading newspaper of your city, also your picture and a geographical sketch to be used as a new item."

Mr. Stewart, along with 239 other hotel men in the United States, was offered the chance to fame, and he threw it in the waste basket.

The situation in Canada, he said, was graver than in Britain because it lacked the acknowledgment it received overseas, where the danger is recognized and legislation to counteract it is in force.

He said, however, that a move was getting underway in Canada to improve the living standard of the poor.

Every medical and research school I have visited here is doing first class work equal to any being done in the world. What is lacking here is a regulation of the food standard.

Sir John said that the supplying of food to the poor, or putting it in their reach, "is indirectly the route to economic prosperity."

Urged Use of Surpluses

"For if the large mass of underfed starved eating more and better foods, the present surplus of farm products will be removed, agriculture will boom and with it economic stability will return."

"What is the use of paying the farmer to grow more wheat, only to have it stored in elevators? The right way to get at the problem is to attack the consumer end. Better consumption and you clear up the situation."

Sir John said that Great Britain will never be beaten in war because of food.

"We have a considerable store ready and the national food policy provides for immediate increase in production in event of outbreak of hostilities," he explained.

NEBRASKA MAPS CENSUS OF JOBS

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—To draft a building program for its state institutions, Nebraska has begun an exhaustive educational survey so broad that it includes a statewide census endeavoring to determine how Nebraska citizens earn their livelihood.

Survey in that it will be conducted through the schools at a fraction of the cost of a commercial census. The survey seeks to disclose what kinds—and how many of each kind—of jobs are available to Nebraska youth.

The information gathered will be utilized by the state planning board, which was directed by the legislature to recommend to the governor a 10-year building program for the state's educational, penal and hospital institutions.

Affects Colleges Directly

Although the census is primarily intended for use in framing a building and repair schedule for the University of Nebraska and the four state teachers colleges, it is expected to be valuable also for the other institutions.

It was arranged at a conference, called by Gov. R. L. Cochran, of the presidents of the university and teachers colleges; the chairman of the board of regents of those institutions; the state superintendent of public instruction, the state director of vocational education, and a representative of the U. S. commission of education.

This group sought to answer the problem posed by the fact there could not be an accurate determination of buildings necessary without knowing what the teacher-training program should be, and that this required a knowledge of what instructors should teach.

The census was suggested as a means of obtaining data showing the number of industrial, business, agricultural and other vocational positions which will absorb the products of Nebraska schools. Because of eight drought years in Nebraska, it was believed the 1930 federal census figures have been outmoded by economic change.

The survey will be made by distribution of questionnaires to homes by school children. The questionnaires ask each gainfully employed person to list exactly what kind of work he or she is now doing and in 1930.

By obtaining the ages of the present occupational groups, the committee hopes to forecast the vacancies that will occur. With that knowledge, the training to prepare the young—and the physical plants and equipment to train them—can be evolved.

It has been estimated that in the United States there is one filling station for every mile of surfaced highway.
