Charging the Nazis with full responsibility for Finland's loss of independence, the prime minister explained to the house of commons how Sweden and Norway had been forced by German threats to block allied plans to send 100,000 men and as many more as necessary to aid Finland. And he added this warning:

"Nothing will or can save the neutral countries but a determination to defend themselves and join with others who are ready to aid them in their defense."

WHY Finnish Purpose

The 71-year-old prime minister—challenged by a series of German diplomatic feints and under severe fire on the home political front—struck back with all of his strength at both the nation's foe and his own critics.

Chairman Mary T. Norton said the committee, "by a close vote," turned down a proposal to abolish the current board and reconstitute a three-member board. This proposal, backed by a majority of the members, was also defeated.

the board, would permit the President to get rid of some present members.

Under the approved amendment, the President could appoint two additional members, who could side with Dr. William M. LeVelson, to form a new majority. LeVelson has been critical of many policies of the present board and often has voted against decisions of chairman Warren J. Madden and member Edwin R. Smith.

WHITE HOUSE SEES NO GROUND FOR WAR-END RUMOR

11-POINT PEACE CLAIMS MISSING IN U. S. REPORTS

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP)—The White House said today official communications from Europe make peace headlines seem very empty and indicated U. S. official information showed little basis for reports Germany has composed an 11-point peace program.

White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said the reports which President Roosevelt has received and analyzed fail to indicate ground either for hoping or despairing that peace will be achieved.

"On the basis of all authoritative reports received by this government and carefully read and analyzed by President Roosevelt," Early said, "there seems to be no basis in fact for reports published in London, Rome, Berlin, Paris and other capitals that an authoritative basis for peace or that the publication of these reports should change the opinion of newspapers and other countries or other countries by giving them either hope for peace or causing them to despair for peace."

"It is true that on the basis of authoritative reports received by this government, especially from Europe, peace headlines would seem to be very empty."

Early indicated on the basis of reports forwarded to the White House the government saw nothing which would close the door to progress toward peace but on the other hand saw no positive, specific proposals which might improve prospects of a settlement of the war.

JOB

SALT LAKE CITY, March 19 (AP)—Herman Kaumans, 35, recently put to work as night watchman in an auto wrecking company, proved to his employer last night that he is on the job—but at a painful cost.

When a police crowd came answered a neighbor's call of pounding going on in the plant, officers were forced to scale a fence to get inside. Kauman shined his light on the uniformed officers, told them to put up their hands and shot wildly at them. The police returned fire—putting a bullet in the night watchman's gun hand before disarming him.

KOEHLER RESIGNS AS CAMP BACKER

Resignation as volunteer sponsor of the McCloskey youth camp improvement project at Bull had been submitted today by Mayor Joe Koehler, Twin Falls.

The mayor said that chief reason for severing his relationship with the McCloskey activities is that part of the money he was instrumental in raising for the WPA improvement project was incorporated into the camp's regular fund.

"Bull lumber concerns filed a lien against the camp," he said, "and I personally guaranteed them that the bills for lumber used in the improvements would be paid."

Friends of the mayor said that he and Mrs. Koehler have given more than $500 of their own funds to the camp in the past eight years.

One of Legion's Organizers Gives Speech at Wells

WELLS, March 19 (Special)—A program having as its theme "Americanism" was held Friday in the high school gymnasium. The program was a part of the celebration of the 21st birthday of the American Legion.

A 30-second silence was held in memory of departed comrades of the Legionnaires' invocation was offered by Bishop Edward M. White of the L. D. S. church.

Principal speaker was Col. Thomas Miller, Reno, Colorado. Miller took part in the organization of the American Legion in Paris, France, 21 years ago. His subject was "Keep America Out of the War." He compared the favorable conditions of American youth to the unfortunate ones of the youth of war-torn countries.

Rev. Norman Riedel, Wells Community church, delivered an address on "Americanism." He told the large assembly of grade and high school students and townpeople that democracy depended upon religion.

The Wells high school band made its first appearance in new uniforms. The uniforms purchased by the aid of local business men, are dark blue with gold trimmings. These musical numbers were rendered by the band. Robert Dean, music director, was commended on the excellence of the band's performance.

9 P. M. Closing on Saturdays Voted for Spring and Summer

Spring and summer schedule of 9 p. m. Saturday closing in downtown Twin Falls stores will take effect this week-end. It had been decided today by the merchants' bureau of the Chamber of Commerce.

The vote to inaugurate the 9 p. m. Saturday closing—after approximately two months of closing at 8 p. m. came at the bureau's semi-monthly session in the Rogers hotel yesterday. Considerable discussion preceded the action, with most grocers especially indicating they desire the later shutdown for the heavy Saturday night trade.

It is Mr. Kinsale, as a one-man committee, reported on the desires of the grocery proprietors.

Approval of the measure was proposed by the Junior Chamber of Commerce through its president, Robert H. Warner, that the Jaycees stage a special trade day in Twin Falls. The bureau voted to cooperate with the Junior Chamber, which will make its own choice of day. At the Jaycees general meeting last Friday the younger businessmen voted in favor of sponsoring a trade event as a gesture of assistance to the merchants' group.

Chairman E. J. Vallon announced that the bureau will stage "straw hat day" in May, with W. I. McFarland as chairman of plans.

The resolutions committee under Ralph W. Carpenter, was authorized to send Gov. C. A. Bolles a notation of thanks for the chief executive's cooperation in withholding formal legislation for the observance of Idaho's 50th anniversary of statehood, the governor will not make it a legal holiday.

Business Interests throughout Idaho had opposed a holiday shutdown of trade, since the next day will be independence day, on which all mercantile and professional activities will stop.

Chairman Vallon presented a letter from the Burley merchants' bureau commending the Twin Falls group for its action in connection with the July 3 move to keep business operating. The Cassia organization offered to meet with the Twin Falls bureau at any time for discussion of mutual problems.

Mr. Vallon commended Claude H. Detweiler for contacting the governor and clarifying the July 3 situation.

Lowering of Legal Age Gets Opposition

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, March 19 (Special)—College students throughout the country are opposed to lowering the legal age limit to 18 years instead of the present 21 years, according to results of a poll conducted by the Student Opinion Surveys of America.

Eleven per cent of the college students favored the plan to allow voting when 18 years of age. The survey showed that among students less than 21, the opposition to lowering the legal age limit was stronger than in the older group.

POT SHOTS

WITH
The Gentleman in the Third Row

To find the answer to the farm problem, you've got to go back to the early 1900s. It was then and during the World war that the basis for most of the modern dilemma was laid.

For one thing, the domestic market expanded at a rate that was almost unprecedented. Between 1900 and 1914, the number of persons to be fed increased by 21 per cent. Meanwhile, world markets were wide open and farmers discovered they could sell everything they could raise at a handsome price.

Under the circumstances, it was natural for them to want to raise more. Every additional acre they had under cultivation meant additional income. It was a simple and incontrovertible equation in those days. When the war came along, the situation was heightened. Up to 1920 it didn't appear that there would ever be a decline. Between 1910 and 1920, the farm mortgage debt of the country increased by 137 per cent, according to the New York Trust company.

And then, suddenly, things began to happen. Immigration dropped off, and the demand for products fell accordingly. World markets were curtailed by collapse of credit and by the expansion of farm production in other countries, such as Argentina, Canada and Australia. The subsequent wave of nationalism and the trend toward self-sufficiency further influenced the economic lot of the American farmer.

Added to this were the introduction of synthetic fibers, the development of machines which not only made it possible to farm more land but actually made more acreage available, inasmuch as millions of acres formerly used for feed crops were released for other purposes.

Confused, unable to believe that prosperity could slip so easily through his hands, the American farmer was left trying to figure out how he could pay off the debts he had incurred.

During the past seven years, the government has spent billions of dollars in an effort to rehabilitate the agricultural economy. Farmers themselves have sought to find the way by reducing cost of cultivation as far as possible and by co-operating in attempts to solve their problem.

Whatever system of salvation is finally evolved, it must be based on the premise that further changes will occur. The alteration in farm life during the post-war period was not definitive. New technical developments will appear, and new trends of urban life will cast their influence over the farms.

What is most necessary is a farm-program that will do not only for today but one that will be flexible, insofar as it is possible to make it so, in anticipation of new problems that will inevitably present themselves in the future.

'Talking Books' For the Blind

A progressive step in educating the blind has been announced by Robert B. Irwin, executive director of the American Foundation for the Blind, Inc. To supplement their Braille studies, blind youngsters will be taught through the medium of "audible picture books."

The idea is to paint for the sightless child a word picture so vivid that an exact image of a scene or a situation will form in his mind. The talking books are supplemented with tests, to be administered by the teacher. On the basis of such tests, the powers of "observation" and retentive ability of the blind can be compared on a "fair basis" with those of normal children.

A great deal has been done in recent years to make life more pleasant for the blind. This latest step, aimed at sightless youngsters, will help to establish their lives on a basis more nearly equal to that of their more fortunate playmates and will speed up the educational process.

The Sallies Carry on

The Salvation Army is now quietly observing a series of nationwide celebrations to mark the 60th anniversary of the landing of the first small "Army" contingent in New York.

Always in the foreground when help is needed during emergencies and after major catastrophes, the Salvation Army distinguished itself particularly for its successful efforts to be of service to soldiers during the last war.

The Salvation Army has amply proved its merit during its 60 years in this country. It deserves to be supported in its ceaseless campaign in behalf of the unfortunate.

Spinning wheels are coming back, but there is difficulty in finding people who can run them. Life would be happier if progress didn't make those quick tops and start sliding downhill every so often.

SERIAL STORY

$15 A WEEK

BY LOUISE HOLMES

CHAPTER XXII

It was during that rocky week that Clara confided her wedding plans.

Ann made a dress for her, and a cunning little hat. Knowing that she must find another room, she let her plans ride, waiting until she should see Paul again.

That next meeting might mean anything.

She saw him on Thursday night and the story was no more.

He seemed almost to dislike her. He informed her, quite coldly, that he had been transferred to Boise, that he was leaving within a few days.

Ann couldn't know of his sleepless nights, that, in desperation, he had gone to the manager and asked he be transferred. The kid in the park had done it. "I can't keep myself any longer," was the way Paul had put it to himself.

Ann felt that a dot, through which she had glimpsed happiness, had been rudely slammed in her face. She almost felt that Paul had slapped her. Even then she was standing on the steps of the rooming house, waiting for him. He had stated his convictions fairly and squarely at their second meeting and she had promised to abide by them. It was her own fault if she had taken a casual kiss too seriously. She managed to put up a brave front.

"Does it mean a promotion for you, Paul?" she asked, ignoring the real issue, the personal lack.

"Maybe a little—it isn't sure."

"You're again back on the steps of the rooming house, waiting for him. He had stated his convictions fairly and squarely at their second meeting and she had promised to abide by them. It was her own fault if she had taken a casual kiss too seriously. She managed to put up a brave front."

"I don't like the look of those fellows better to say."

"Oh, yes, the fellows they're up to no good."

Ann agreed absently. It was hard going. After a moment, Ann said, "Will I see you again?"

"I'll try to make it. Pretty busy—getting packed and everything."

"I suppose you are."

"Well—He took a step away from her."

Ann bit her lip, hard. "Best of luck, Paul."

"Thank you. And you, Ann—things have got to break for you. You're the tops—you've got what it takes to make it."

"Will they—I know they will."

"Will they?" she asked childishly.

"They've got to." He held out his hand. "Goodbye, Ann."

She put her hand in it and quickly drew it away. "Goodbye, Paul."

FRIDAY and Saturday were uneventful days. Clara announced that she was leaving for Boise. It was all over.

On Sunday Ann's troubles were pushed aside by the newspaper headlines. A man named Clancy, had been murdered in an apartment hotel. Florabelle had been arrested for the crime. Clancy was a well known flying from Omaha.

The girls gathered in the hall, looking with fearful eyes at the closed door of Florabelle's apartment. Even Neddy and Teddy were serious. Clara cried, Ann felt sick. Mrs. Follet went through the second floor hall, muttering to herself that she always knew Florabelle would come to the girls, that she kept a respectable house and she shouldn't put up with such a fellow.

The girls bickered and crouched in a corner, her eyes big and hunted.

It was a strange day in the rooming house. Florabelle sat for clothes and Ann packed a bag. She would never forget that few minutes with Florabelle in the city jail. Locked doors, barred windows, guards—horrible.

"I didn't do it, Ann," the girl said. She was no longer a girl. Her face was ravaged and old.

"But that's what I get for playing with fire. Keep away from men, kid—men like Clancy."

"They'll find the right one soon, Florabelle. Keep hoping."

"I don't know who did it. Florabelle said she didn't do it."

"It was light—we were all tight—somebody put the gun in my hand."

Ann went away, so depressed that she could scarcely drag herself up the stairs.

The next day passed with no good word but the girls and Ann. Florabelle's prophecy had been well founded. Clancy's murderer was apprehended and Florabelle came home. She was a chastened woman. When Mrs. Follet asked her to leave the respectable rooming house she hadn't a word to say. Three days later the girls heard that she had married the portman. Ann never saw her again.

WHILE all this was going on, Ann had been thinking. Nothing was going to come her way unless she forced it to do so. Her mind darted up and down all sorts of things. There seemed to be no way out. At last she came to a conclusion and talked the matter over with Clara.

"I can't go on like this forever," she said. "I'm absolutely sure to make over hats all my life."

Clara was alarmed. "You'd better hang on to what you've got."

"I will—until I get what I want. Clara, I've put in my name at the school."

"A lot of good that'll do you."

"For a place as parlor maid or companion or something like that."

Clara was horrified. "You mean you want to be somebody's servant?"

"Call it that if you want to. I don't mean general housework. I want to live in a beautiful home and handle nice things even if they don't belong to me. I want to live like a lady."

"What's the matter with the way we live?"

"Nothing—but I want to try it. I can very likely make as much as I do now and have a room and board beside."

Clara said, "I think you're crazy."

Maybe I am—maybe I can't get a job without references—just the same I'm going to try. I have to leave here."

This brought Clara around to her own enthralling affairs and Ann's decision was forgotten. Ann left the rooming house on Friday.

The girls bickered and crouched in a corner, her eyes big and hunted.

This brought Clara around to her own enthralling affairs and Ann's decision was forgotten. Ann left the rooming house on Friday.

The girls bickered and crouched in a corner, her eyes big and hunted.

It was a strange day in the rooming house. Florabelle sat for clothes and Ann packed a bag. She would never forget that few minutes with Florabelle in the city jail. Locked doors, barred windows, guards—horrible.

"I didn't do it, Ann," the girl said. She was no longer a girl. Her face was ravaged and old.

"But that's what I get for playing with fire. Keep away from men, kid—men like Clancy."

"They'll find the right one soon, Florabelle. Keep hoping."

"I don't know who did it. Florabelle said she didn't do it."

"It was light—we were all tight—somebody put the gun in my hand."

Ann went away, so depressed that she could scarcely drag herself up the stairs.

The next day passed with no good word but the girls and Ann. Florabelle's prophecy had been well founded. Clancy's murderer was apprehended and Florabelle came home. She was a chastened woman. When Mrs. Follet asked her to leave the respectable rooming house she hadn't a word to say. Three days later the girls heard that she had married the portman. Ann never saw her again.

WHILE all this was going on, Ann had been thinking. Nothing was going to come her way unless she forced it to do so. Her mind darted up and down all sorts of things. There seemed to be no way out. At last she came to a conclusion and talked the matter over with Clara.

"I can't go on like this forever," she said. "I'm absolutely sure to make over hats all my life."

Clara was alarmed. "You'd better hang on to what you've got."

"I will—until I get what I want. Clara, I've put in my name at the school."

"A lot of good that'll do you."

"For a place as parlor maid or companion or something like that."

Clara was horrified. "You mean you want to be somebody's servant?"

"Call it that if you want to. I don't mean general housework. I want to live in a beautiful home and handle nice things even if they don't belong to me. I want to live like a lady."

"What's the matter with the way we live?"

"Nothing—but I want to try it. I can very likely make as much as I do now and have a room and board beside."

Clara said, "I think you're crazy."

Maybe I am—maybe I can't get a job without references—just the same I'm going to try. I have to leave here."

This brought Clara around to her own enthralling affairs and Ann's decision was forgotten. Ann left the rooming house on Friday.

DUCE, HITLER SEEK "MORE JUST" EUROPE, EXPERT CLAIMS

EDITOR OUTLINES BASIS FOR TALK AT BORDER LINE

ROME, March 19 (Special)—Premier Benito Mussolini today told Hitler at Brennero yesterday to discuss construction of a "more just" Europe and to protect Italian interests in the Balkans. The Italian leader, who is close to the foreign office, wrote in the Giornale d'Italia today.

Germany denied Hitler and Mussolini discussed a peace offensive and he ridiculed reports that Duce had a mission of pacification in Europe.

"The Brenner pass talks had two well defined aims," Gayda wrote. "They were:

1. Construction of a more just Europe based on equality of rights.
2. Protection of Italian interests in this new Europe, alongside a safeguarding of German interests."

Gayda said the European war presented itself as a long, difficult and complex conflict full of events which could not be predicted.

"Among the problems of various orders of equilibrium . . . the collaboration of interests which form the spirit and basis of the axis and the Indo-German alliance were affirmed," Gayda wrote.

Claim 11-Point Program

A high Vatican source has reported that an 11-point German peace plan was the inspiration for the conference between Hitler and Mussolini, and for the diplomatic activity here by Sumner Welles, United States under-secretary of state.

As a result of the Brennero conference, the informant said, Hitler now is willing to modify his terms, but there was no indication as to how far he would go or that the terms would be acceptable to the allies.

Controversy Over Power Sites Fades as Proposed Plans Halt

report on their findings as a result of a recent tour of inspection of the locations in question.

See Tax List

At Reading, Wendell publisher, declared that the decision to delay improvement of the sites meant that "Gooding county has been cut out of $25,000 a year in tax returns." In the future, he urged that the "fact be weighed that the minds of someone whether $25,000 a year is a fair price to pay for hunting, fishing, and things of an amateur nature."

In explaining why the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce had decided to take no sides on the issue, with whatever power the state department of reclamation, R. S. Toffinier, Twin Falls publisher, reviewed the various developments which resulted in the controversy.

He explained that in keeping with legal procedure numerous protests had been filed with the reclamation department following the power company's applications, most of the objection being that the time had arrived for the state's natural attractions to be given some consideration, particularly so long as other power sites are available where damage to natural resources would be less serious. He stressed the importance of the new remaining beauty spots as potential tourist attractions and their relation to outdoor recreation generally.

Up to Department

"State law determines how our waters may be put to the greatest beneficial use," he said, "and it is for our recreation department of reclamation to decide which course to follow."

Among other speakers heard during the discussions was Ralph W. Carpenter, Twin Falls division manager of the power company, who explained that the company had no desire to pursue any policy that might meet with disfavor. Also heard were Marshall Chapman, Twin Falls, and A. W. Tingwall of Jerome.

Mr. Tingwall explained that he had no fight with the power company, but he was concerned over the concern on its service. He insisted, however, that southern Idaho should make the most of its scenic attractions and urged that some day a state park might be created in Snake river canyon in this vicinity.

Consider All

"All these things must be taken into consideration," he said, "and we plan accordingly all necessary developments and we will continue without hurrying anyone."

In his communication to the regional chamber of commerce, the power company president wrote as follows:

"As you know, considerable controversy has been developing over the power facilities of Idaho Power company involving our sites at Box Canyon, Crystal Springs and Ring-necked, etc. These things were made in accordance of a policy of constructing one or more small generating plants of sufficient size only to take care of the increasing demands anticipated on our system in the immediate future, thereby reserving our future capacity in favor of the reclamation program which is now receiving the full attention of the people of southern Idaho."

"I am sure we all agree that the welfare and progress of southern Idaho is intimately dependent upon the securing of additional water for our lands, at the lowest possible cost to the farmer. This company is ready and only to cooperate, but actively to assist in such a program, and we are endeavoring to maintain in our system an outlet for such power as may be developed in connection with reclamation projects so that it may enjoy an immediate market and thus reduce the cost of water on the land."

Load Increasing

"The company's load for Idaho is increasing at the rate of between 1,000 and 2,000 horsepower a year. In any power system, to insure reliability of service, it is essential to maintain a reserve capacity, over and above the present load, equal approximately to the capacity of its largest power unit. This company has a reserve capacity of 10,000 horsepower, and fortunately we have been able to obtain such capacity by export to Utah. Thus we have not only been able to obtain revenue from power capacity which would otherwise have been lost but at the same time provide the state of Idaho with a sub-

BRIEFS ORDERED IN MALONE CASE

Filing of briefs by attorneys for E. J. Malone and for Mrs. Bula Malone formed the last step remaining today before District Judge J. W. Porter begins final consideration of his decision in the bitterly fought divorce contest.

At conclusion of final argument by Marshall Chapman, defense counsel, Judge Porter called for the plaintiff's brief in 10 days and the brief for the defendant in 10 additional days. He had listened most of Monday to the concluding arguments by J. R. Bohlwell, counsel for the "No-reat-or" rancher, and Mr. Chapman.

Malone filed the divorce suit last July on grounds of cruelty. Mrs. Malone retaliated with a counter-complaint asking for divorce on claim of misconduct between her husband and another woman. The case is now before the court for final decision.

When Judge Porter considers the case in its entirety, he must also decide on the plaintiff's request that in event a divorce is granted to either party, Mrs. Malone be required to use a different name thereafter.

7 MORE BODIES ARE RECOVERED

NEFFS, O., March 19 (AP)—Seven more bodies were taken from the explosion wrecked Willow Grove coal mine today, making 15 dead men on the surface and leaving 60 dead men still buried or entombed. It was possible to retrieve the bodies of the entombed miners were alive, but workers pressed on through the debris-filled tunnels. It was believed by the experts directed operations that all the bodies would not be removed before tomorrow.

The last six bodies were in better condition than the previous ones. They apparently had been killed by the explosion Saturday. If the men at the mine escaped the full force of the explosion, experts said they surely died of the after-damp (carbon monoxide gas) which filled the mine after the explosion. The miners were working in four hour shifts. They were now three and a half miles from the mine entrance. There was no way of calling how far they were from the rest of the bodies.

City Elections

Advantages of a "staggered election" of the city officials were stressed by J. L. Harper, former mayor of Burley. He said that by retaining carry-over, cities could operate more efficiently and economically than when complete changes of city government are made at each election. A committee will be appointed to determine what recommendations for such a change in municipal elections shall be presented to the next session of the legislature.

Legion Omits Meeting Here

Regular meeting of the American Legion post, scheduled Thursday night, has been postponed until some future date. It was announced here this afternoon by Commander J. Edward Warner.

Warner said that the postponement was made because of the "home talent" play, "Mystery at Midnight" will be presented at the D. B. recreation hall Thursday and Friday evenings.

Newspapers announcements will be made before the next post session is set.

BUILDERS SPEED NEW HOME BOOM

Maintaining the recognized position as the "city of homes" has been easy for Twin Falls this month and next. Five of the new homes are to be built by Hamer Adams and the balance by E. A. Moon.

Location of the new homes follows:

Under Contractor Adams: $4,500 at 170 Taylor street; $3,500 at 175 Taylor street; three homes at $3,000 each at 271, 235 and 243 Taylor street.

Under Contractor Moon: $4,500 at 181 Taylor street; $4,000 at 635 Shoup street; $3,000 at 625 Shoup; $4,000 at 605 Shoup; $3,500 at 615 Shoup; three homes at $3,500 each located at 251, 259 and 267 Taylor street.

CHANGES MAPPED FOR GOLF LINKS

Contemplated inauguration of an improvement program at the municipal golf course had been announced today by Councilman Paul Taber.

The announcement was made last night during the regular city council session. Taber said that the golf course architect would probably be hired to prepare a plan for future development. The architect is expected to confer with the councilmen at some future date. At that time the decision as to whether his services are needed will be made.

Jack Curley, former golf "pro" at Caldwell, applied for a similar job here but action on the application was put off until some future date.

Councilmen informed Claude Pratt that he was violating city ordinance by having his coal yard in its present location inasmuch as it is within the designated business zone. The situation was thoroughly discussed and announcement was made that the coal yard would be moved.

Authorization was given the city engineer to make a survey on and near Addison avenue west to clarify boundaries in that section.

JUNIOR HI PLANS EASTER PROGRAM

An Easter program, including a play, "The Christ Child," and appropriate music will be given in Twin Falls junior high school assembly tomorrow afternoon, when by the speech and music departments.

A choir, directed by Miss Lucille Norrell, will sing "Sleepers Wake," by Bach, and "Christ the Redeemer," by Handel. A fifth period speech class will give a choral reading, "That Garden Night."

Characters in the play, which takes place on the first Easter morning in the garden of a wealthy Roman, include Octavia, daughter of wealthy Roman, taken by Herod; Doris, a Greek slave of Octavia's father, Madge Hayward; Martha, Jewish girl, by Noene Ann; Dora, her slave, Colleen Peterson; Elizabeth, daughter of Jairus, Kathleen King; Rebecca, an Assyrian girl, Marjorie Holloway; and Hannah, daughter of Elizabeth, Charlotte Thompson.

These girls are discussing the life of Jesus and his crucifixion, when the news arrives that Mary Magdalen has seen Him arisen.

STUDENT, HIT BY AUTO, RECOVERS

Robert Pence, 17, a Twin Falls high school junior, was recovering today after sustaining a minor concussion when he was knocked to the pavement in a traffic mishap here yesterday afternoon.

Pence, son of Mrs. Reva M. Pence, is said to have run into a car being operated by Roy Fuller, Kimberly, at a point in front of the high school building. Mr. Fuller immediately took him to a physician.

The Kimberly car was "just getting underway again" after discharging passengers, police records show.

Mac Lauds Baseball Players, Owners and Fans After All-Star Exhibition Game

By HENRY MOORE
TAMPA, Fla., March 19 (AP)—The Finnish flag may be at half mast in Helsinki, where the snow is deep, but it flies heavily in Tampa today.

Against a background of palms, and with the sun lighting its way over a field of white, it is a strangely warm salute to those who control baseball, those who play it, and those who love it.

For these three groups combined Sunday to make an outstanding success of the all-star game for the benefit of the Finnish relief fund. One didn't need to be a sentimentalist to get a bang out of the game and its setting, and I'm not speaking of the game itself, even though the greatest stars of baseball played it to the hilt, and gave a performance worthy of a world series.

Grand Gesture

No, the real thrill of it, the part that made the funny little feeling go up your back and made the hackles on your neck, was to be a part of this grand gesture towards the decency and courage of a little nation 4,000 miles away. When the people kept coming in, coming in until they filled all the seats and spilled over into the playing field itself, the game became of secondary importance. The important thing was the fineness of people—people who asked only to be given a chance to answer a call for help. Nearly 15,000 people packed the park, and paid more than $30,000 for the privilege.

That's quite a turnout for a city of around 100,000 population. It is even more remarkable when you remember that the seats were priced at high as $5. And it wasn't a plush crowd like you see at the horse show in Madison Square Garden or the polo matches at Meadow Brook. There were trays of cuffed, cheap suits and run down shoes in abundance. Many a bucket will have to be emptied next week to take care of the money spent to help a country in distress.

No Connection

But that's what made it the game in time. People in Florida haven't the remotest connection with Finland. Geographically they are as far apart as possible. This is a land of sun and warm waters; flowers and light hearts. Bitter cold, snow, and the rigors of the north are all but unknown. But to their everlasting credit the people of Florida responded to the cry of Finland as wholeheartedly as if it were a country just across the bay.

The same goes for the players of the two major leagues. For nothing, absolutely nothing, they played the game as if the championship of the world depended on the outcome.

This Made It Perfect

To make it a perfect day, there came one of those almost unbelievable coincidences. Early in the morning there crept into the port of Tampa a submersible little freighter—a submersible little Finnish freighter. Somebody on the boat could read English and through the morning papers learned of the game. So, just before game time, the captain of the freighter, his mate, and two of the crew, walked up to the ticket window and bought 45 tickets.

It was their first baseball game.

SPORT SOUBIS!

PIONEER LEAGUE ATTENDANCE FIGURES LOOK GOOD WHEN COMPARED WITH OTHER LOOPS OF CLASS B CALIBER IN NATION

With this spring air settling down in our midst, the thoughts of most south central Idaho fans are turning toward baseball and the coming season in the Pioneer League.

Which brings to mind the attendance records of the new loop for 1939 compared with that compiled by other leagues.

The 1939 season was the first for organized baseball in the intermountain area for something over a decade—but attendance in the sport did not suffer any lack of interest in the games. A good comparison was brought to our mind yesterday when Danny Garfield, youthful agent of the Jacobs Brothers, concession firm which handles the hot dogs, etc., at the park, dropped into our office.

Danny worked at the Whinstown stadium club of the Piedmont league last year. The Piedmont loop, as most baseball men know, is the oldest minor league in the nation and its rules and regulations are the ones upon which the rest of the minor leagues are based. It's laws are pretty much the backbone of the baseball world.

Now, Whinstown-Steam, a tobacco town, has a population of something around the 10,000 mark—of which about 5,000 are Negroes. Being one of the biggest cities in one of the oldest leagues in the country, you'd expect big crowds.

"No, our attendance wasn't so big," said Mr. Garfield. "We did about 70,000 last year—but we had a last place club."

Whinstown we could point out the case of the Salt Lake City Bees in a city of the same population. The Bees did well over 100,000 and finished in the second place.

Twin Falls, with a population of 11,000, or one-ninth of Whinstown-Steam, did just about the same business. Of course, our team won the title, but we'll bet Whinstown-Steam never had the weather to back that the Twin Falls Cowboy management ran into last spring.

Yes, we point with pride to that mark and we'll offer the suggestion that with good weather and a first

Diz Dean Signs Contract For $10,000

LOS ANGELES, March 19 (AP)—Jerome (Diz) Dean, star of the Chicago Cubs' payroll today and his salary was halved, but he predicted that this season would be his best.

After reverting ultimatums almost as soon as he spoke them last night, he signed a 1940 contract for $10,000—half of what he received in 1939.

I expected a little more in salary, said Dean. "But I'm not kicking. I'll be back pitching with a good arm this season and I mean pitching. And when I do, I'll just mean that I've been right all along. If I wasn't in good shape, I'd be taking money under false pretenses."

Dizy spent most of last season on the bench after his $185,000 arm faltered.

Ten Vandals Receive Cage Awards

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, March 19 (AP)—Ten basketball awards were voted for Idaho varsity athletes by the A.S.U. executive board last night. A three-year award, an "I" blanket with three stars, was voted to Roy Ramsey, Kendrick, and nine others to other hoopers.

Only one man on the squad besides Ramsey to be lost by graduation is Bill English, ball-hawking guard who made his first letter this year. English is from Wallace.

Two-year awards went to Ronnie Morris, Idaho Falls; Chick Atkinson, Pocatello; Irving Hopkins, Pocatello; and Olin "Rock" Hill, Mena, Ariz. Receiving their first letter were Andy Anderson, Lewiston, Me.; D. Merlyn Anderson, Ada, Minn.; Don Nelson, Moscow, and Kenneth Link, Algona, Ia.

Three Teams Win in Do-Nut Loop Competition

Play in the Class A finals of the do-nut league tournament at Twin Falls high school got under way yesterday with the Holy Trinity winning over the Flashers 22-9. While and while each got six points for the winners, while Bob Schumacher—who whose salary this week caused owner Bill Ulrich to release him—won four points for their respective teams.

Class C play was transcendental down Frying Scotchman 12-6. Tim Pullmer led the winners with six points while Klaworth and Oelvers each connected for three for the losers.

Hopkins, Hoobing Win Letters on Idaho Frosh Squad

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, March 19 (AP)—Vernoy Hopkins and Ray Hoobing, who last year appeared in the Idaho team to the west coast basketball championship and awarded freshman numerals and awardees for participation in the sport were named for the Idaho Frosh Squad.

Hopkins finished the season second high in the scoring list and is rated by Freshman Coach Walt Pullmer as one of the most likely varsity prospects. Hoobing, out most of the season with a bad cold, finished in a few of the Vandal Babes' games.

Others awarded numerals are Cliff Jensen, Troy; Bill Bergeson, Blackfoot; Don Berenson, Boise; Don Duncan, Boise; Bob Hill, Don Thompson, Pocatello; Fred "Whimpy" Guin, Pocatello; Bob Remington, Coeur d'Alene; Frank Hulse, Id.; Hugh Toole, Wallace, and Dick Wallon, Moscow.
