Idaho Senate Passes Measure to Assist in Building of Airports

BOISE, Jan. 18 (UP)—Senate passage of a bill to aid in airport construction and introduction of a bill to provide for taxing incomes of state and federal employees today highlighted sessions of the Idaho legislature.

End of the second legislative week found action on administration measures still pending, but house and senate majority leaders declared they would settle down Monday to work on Gov. Chase A. Clark's program of eliminating state commissions.

Both houses met only briefly this morning. The house unanimously approved a senate joint memorial asking the federal government to set up a potato diversion program to relieve an overstocked market, low grade potatoes.

Tax Government Employees
The bill was passed by the senate earlier in the week. Rep. Milton Hooty, R. Caribou, and Allen Newman, D. Nez Perce, introduced a bill to provide that the federal government should be subject to taxation on their incomes. Previously, these officials had been exempted.

The industry and corporations committee brought in a bill regulating the practice and teaching of contortion. The bill defines the construction of students and operation of beauty parlors.

The senate adopted a bill designed especially to expedite the obtaining of more land for a U. S. army base at Boise. The measure, which was introduced by Sen. D. S. C. Adams, authorized bonds of land commencing to lease or sell state lands under suspension of rules.

Need Revisions
Rep. Arthur Peck, D. Bonanza, chairman of the state affairs committee, said some administrative sponsored bills were being held up because of necessary revisions and corrections.

The main bills of the Democratic administration, a measure aimed at destroying the public welfare commission and putting the department under the direct supervision of the governor, met a snag. Gov. Clark said he would be glad to provide for a "merit system" clause. The clause was asked for by federal authorities who wished to cut off federal aid to Idaho if the bill passed without that section.

Gov. Clark said he would be glad to place on the floor for debate Monday, and that if passed, an amendment he had been filed with a new artificial light eye and had ordered five "spares" in preparation for his departure next Thursday for Washington. "I have never, in any way in America, this time will be my last," he said. "I thought I would see my family and my eyes to see me through the years."

Canada Awarded Export Licenses
WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (UP)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull declared today that the United States is permitting the export to Canada of a large number of export materials previously subject to specific export controls.

They covered such important materials as tungsten, aluminum, gasoline, oil, petroleum, electrical, and certain types of machinery tools. Hull's action was the first under an executive order signed this week by President Roosevelt giving him authority to issue general licenses for export of materials not immediately vital to American requirements.

The fact that Canada alone was granted general licensing was interpreted as further aid for Britain. Other countries must get a separate license for each specific shipment.

1 Dead, 12 Hurt In Spokane Fire
SPOKANE, Wash., Jan. 18 (UP)—An unidentified woman was burned to death and 12 persons were injured last night by a fire which destroyed the top three floors of the six-story Fairmont hotel.

The fire started in the kitchen of the top floor and spread to the top three floors and on the roof. Nineteen persons were taken down by ropes when the flames prevented escape from the building.

Fire Chief William P. Payne said the estimated damage at over $1,000,000.

NO CLUES FOUND YET ON MISSING ARMY AIRPLANE

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 18 (UP)—Army planes tracked by gasoline-driven rain and snow, took off again today to search the rugged Skagitway mountains along the California-Oregon line for a lost bomber and seven men.

P. W. Erickson, owner of the Alton mine near the Skagitway, and a power company linesman reported early today they saw a twin-motor plane flying down Nuumoo creek canyon Thursday, with one motor faltering. The twin-motor bomber has not been reported since Thursday morning when it took off from McChord field, Tacoma, for bombing practice in Murdoch dry lake, Calif.

Residents of Yreka, Mt. Shasta, Redwood, Burney, Hornbrook, Scotts Bar and Trinity Center reported having seen a plane resembling the bomber Thursday. While these reports, and the report of Erickson, were not confirmed, they all came from within an 80-mile radius. Most of them placed the plane in the Thursday about the time it should have been passing over the mountains.

Rain and poor visibility prevented a thorough search yesterday and five army planes returned to their bases after a few hours. Commercial planes flying between San Francisco and Washington were unable to detect anything because of fog, rain and snow.

Lacked Food
If the plane managed to land in the mountains—and authorities said it was highly improbable—the seven men faced freezing weather and lack of food. The bomber crew and emergency rations of chocolate.

OGC youths searched in the vicinity of the plane. The Columbia river gorge near Bonneville dam, that some believed might have been started if the plane had crashed into the hills.

Searching planes also planned to hunt over southwestern Washington. First Lieut. R. M. Krumm, Boise, was pilot of the missing plane.

Explaining the Bean

This being bean week, among other things, Pot Shots has had his research department look up some pertinent facts for you constituents. The research staff is now at work on the potato, with results we hope to announce to you Monday.

As to the bean, our researchers report:

The bean is the highly nutritious seed of certain plants. It is a protuberance of the upper mandible of a—when, that's definition No. 3 in Webster. Cross it out.

The research staff may consider itself rebuked.

In plain English, a bean is the extreme little thing you get by threshing certain plants grown in great abundance by Magic Valley farm lands.

It is either red or white. If it isn't, it's probably some other color.

It is what color they turn out, beans have done more to turn farmers' hair gray than any other single factor.

Unless it's a potato.

We'll compromise by calling it a tuber.

When a lot of little beans get together in a lot of sacks, they can make Magic Valley very happy.

Only then, if it's the upper.

We clean 'em and carry 'em and dress 'em pretty—and what do they do?

They take the hand that feeds them to somebody else.

They refuse to go out and earn any money.

In short, the bean is a very obstinate item of agriculture.

This has given rise to belief that beans are confining strictly to men.

The bean is very tasty eating.

It would be eaten more if this country had fewer lawbreakers who think they're neighbors and can't eat ordinary food.

The bean is versatile, too.

It can play the star role in a lady dish, be baked beans or in a desert pie that puts pumpkin pie to shame.

The bean has certain other qualities. Too, for lack of a better term, we won't go into them all.

WELL, IT MAKES US ALL FEEL BIG!

Dear Pot Shots:

Only then, if it's the upper, tell you they're getting, and to be added together, the total would be more money than there is.

—Eve Lee Too

MERRY CHRISTMAS, JUST A TRIPLE TARIFF!

He finally got it yesterday.

EXTREME!

Pot Shots has just had word from the mountain. It is a condition and a checklist of who are on a stack of Bibles that the "This potato is NOT fattening."

This, we note, will finally sink in to the ladies. And will prevent the heart-breaking spectacle of a tubful of clubbing with a turtur club in the specific incident our death reported leaving behind behind again tomorrow, every one of the ladies probably loses haked potatoes.

Goodwill, Idaho Potato week!

CONSCRIPT'S WIFE

BY BETTY WALLACE

YESTERDAY, Martha's eyes had been prepared to visit Bill, she was in the apartment, apparently intending to tell him she doesn't want him to go, she asks what is wrong. She had promised Bill to look after her, she thought she would before Bill left there were three of them.

PAUL ANSWERS QUESTIONS

CHAPTER X

PAUL ELLIOTT stared down at Martha, speechlessly, as the echo of her words hung in the air. "The three of us," she had cried. And the implications of those words were suddenly filling the room—suddenly so plain, so clear, so hurting—that she wanted to run away from him. She could not bear the look in his eyes, the way a muscle in his lean cheek was twitching.

"Oh, I didn't want to hurt him," Martha thought in dismay. "It is so fine, so worthwhile. Maybe I'm destroying something I'll never find again. I hurt him once. When I married him. He forgave me." She thought of the clean, unselfish friendship—the strong arm, always ready to help her—she experienced a sinking sense of loss.

"I didn't mean to say that," Paul cried quickly. "I didn't mean it—the way it sounds."

"Sit down, Martha," Paul said gently. "Sit down here and let's talk this over."

"But—there's nothing to talk over. Again the panic and the certainty—no, it's her feet were set on a bit of earth that kept sliding out from under her. "I didn't mean it—silly, really. I didn't mean it—silly, really." Her fingers smoothed the maroon hosiery, played with the ornaments on the zipper pull.

PAUL pushed her gently down on the sofa. He sat beside her. "You must be honest with each other. Since this thing has come up—since we've already started discussing it—let's drag it out into the light and examine it. You have been kidding me. Definitely, I couldn't understand why—what you just told me—was so very clear. It's because Bill is not here."

Almost, his voice was like the voice of the Paul who sat in the private office at Air Transport, discussing with the chief engineer the stresses, strains, and examining the evidence to explain the sampling of air in the wing tunnel. "You said 'the three of us.' Meaning, now that there are just two, you and I"—he smiled, but his eyes weren't smiling—"The situation has changed. Either you haven't ever really wanted me about, since you and Bill were married."

"She said, 'Paul! That's not so. I don't see how you can think that.'"

"Then, Martha, your remark must mean that you—that you're afraid of me. You must be afraid together with Bill away looks. It doesn't look proper, is that it?"

She shivered uncomfortably. "No, that's not it. I don't believe you, Martha. Once there was a time when I would have sworn that gossip—other people's incorrect opinions—meant nothing to you. But now, especially after what Suzanne was foolish enough to get excited about—"

Martha's little start, the unguarded gasp that escaped her, was enough to betray the fact that she had had a finger in this, too.

"Paul said, sadly, 'So she came to you, too.'"

"She—the only one wanted to warn me," Martha said miserably. "She knew there was nothing in it, but—The memory of her neighbors' whispers—the remark that even the cleaning woman had made, burned in her mind. "She was right, Paul. Besides, it wasn't fair to her, that when you I look her out, I should always be there, like a—like a flywheel."

"Suzanne was intensely emotional. She has an imagination that sees a roaring blaze where other people see not even a wisp of smoke," said Paul, checking his watch carefully. "I'm fond of Suzanne, sorry that she—she spoiled things."

No words came to Martha. She could only sit there, picking at that foolish little zipper ornament. "You'll break it," Paul said. And she was in absolute control of herself. He stood up. "Look here, Martha. Let's be honest to the very end of the thing. We used to be engaged. I thought I was in love with you, and you thought you were in love with me, and it's out into the light and examine it. Your friendship now look queer while your husband's away."

"Martha's lips parted. A great light had seemed to flash across her chest. It hurt to breathe.

Paul said quietly, "But people always say that you're not in love with you now. You're only my best friend's wife, and I want to make his absence less difficult."

YET, even as the words left his lips, Martha saw that tell-tale muscle, twitching there in the hollow of his lean cheek. "I'm not in Five white men have entered Nepal, the mountainous Hindu kingdom lying between India and Tibet. The "Explorers" discovered that the cow was sacred to the Hindus. The Maharajah's permission with the Armed Forces and Lela Roosevelt portrait exhibition a year ago. He was the Mr. Davis found the book as a result, superbly illustrated, "Land of the Eye" (Henry Holt).

It was a beautiful and horrifying, in some of its contents. And he found himself all at once, in a typical story he was told about a man less a person than the Maharajah himself and his unfortunate hunting expeditions.

"I was evening and the Highness thought he was a thing getting ready to change. So he beat it, and he turned out to be a cow, a bovine cow. He had killed it, a cow mind, a thing in the Hindu world. If you don't ever had fallen it could have caused no more harm among the people. There were riots in the streets, and when the troops were called out, the cow was killed. "But the high priest quitted them with a gesture. Then he announced that the Maharajah, in reparation to the gods, would give a length of Pashupattin—a life-sized cow whose body should be made of copper, gilt, horns and tail of silver, feet of lead and underbelly of tin. His eyes studded with rubies and the tip of his tail with pearls. A thousand people sighed with relief and awe.

"So the Maharajah, who had not been consulted at all, was forced by his duty to God and to the jewels all ascertain the value of this marvelous synthetic cow. It was a terrible thing, but he did it, but he quickly turned it over to the temple, thus obviating the vulgar demand by the priests for a statue. The cow was never built, of course, but the sin was expiated."

GERMANY MAY GAIN ITALIAN DOMINANCE AT CONFERENCE

NAZIS HOLD KEY TO ALL IMPORTS FOR DUCE NEEDS

By J. W. T. MASON
Italian reliance upon German commercial and financial support for continuing the war as well as the proportion of foreign trade to be handled by the Italians under post-war conditions.

The fact that 25 delegates will represent the Italian partners at the conference indicates extent of the subjects to be considered.

Need Coordination
If the war becomes a test of economic and financial support...

Germany is certain to play the "hot" role in the gathering.

Italy relies on Germany for coal and for a substantial part of her raw materials.

The Germans have exclusive control of products from the conquered states of the Balkans.

U. S. 83 from Nevada to Ketchikan is good, with exception of the stretches of slippery conditions between the cities of Elmer and U. S. 30 is in good condition although melting snow has intensified the soft condition of the "shoulders."

State highways in the southern Idaho area are generally in good shape and conditions are excellent. Report, Those specifically mentioned are:

Kidho central highway, state 22, Dixie to Hill City not recommended; Fairfield to Halley closed; balance fair but slippery.

Howeville Highway, state 24, good; east of Dietrich open but not recommended.
