Grover and Wife Return from Trip, Cheered by Midwest Acceptance

"Highly pleased with the acceptance accorded in the midwest to Idaho fruit and especially to the dried and canned fruit marketed by himself," Harry Heller, accompanied by Mrs. Heller, has returned from an extensive three weeks' trip which took him first to Kansas City.

Idaho was represented there by the largest delegation from any of the western states, it was stated, the number totalled 35.

Visited Market

The Hellers visited markets and also brokers in Oklahoma and Texas, going into the latter state by auto with F. H. Hogue, Payette. They went to the Rio Grande, Marfa, indulged in some deep water fishing with what Mrs. Heller describes as "indifferent success."

On their return trips into Old Mexico and while at San Antonio witnessed a dedication ceremony of the historic Alamo, with Admiral Byrd in attendance.

They were in a motor car which Mr. Hogue had shipped overland for convenience.

The trip home was made by the Hellers by train through Denver.

ICKES, TALMADGE VARY ON LINCOLN

Both Point to Emancipator in Defending, Attacking New Deal Policies

(Continued from Page One) pose of taxing its people to the point where they were either slaves or slaves.

Lincoln knew that patronage was the greatest enemy of all government.

"Lincoln knew that every citizen's government."

Talmadge was the first southern governor to speak at a Lincoln anniversary in this country where Lincoln spent his youth and young manhood.

Ickes pointed to the parallel of newspaper criticism of Lincoln and President Roosevelt.

After quoting criticisms of Lincoln in the Salem, Ill., Advocate of 1862, Ickes said:

"I cannot find at this point to whom it appears to have been Abraham Lincoln who scuttled the American constitution, set up a dictatorship, threw the entire nation into a financial crisis and declared a moratorium on congress." In fact, Gov. George E. McMillan ran against him for President in 1864 on a Save the Constitution platform.

Toddy old and young joined in pilgrimage to the tomb of Lincoln.

Pilgrimage By Veterans

First there was a pilgrimage of veterans to the tomb of Lincoln and the World War. It was sponsored by the American Legion and other veterans' organizations. J. Ray Murphy, national Legion commander, spoke at the tomb.

President Roosevelt sent a floral wreath to lay on the sarcophagus—beneath which Lincoln lies—in the crypt of the Lincoln crypt block. The basket was sealed to thwart ghosts who in 1865 planned to steal the body.

The studio removed him from the payroll and reported Fred Macrae, studio manager, to the board of directors.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

On this day is honored the name of Abraham Lincoln, born 127 years ago and destined to become one of the immortals of the nation.

Despite the high pedestal upon which he has been set, it is well to realize that he went through the same kind of mortal crucible which has proved the strengthening influence for mankind in general, and this is what helped to make him great.

Lincoln endured in silence vilification not rivaling that heaped upon our presidents. While he was being a statesman, he also had to be a politician, with a politician's obligation to his party, and subjected to the criticism of the selfish and self-seeking.

We forget that he could in more foresee the future than any other man, and that he knew long hours of agonizing doubt and indecision. When Lee and Jackson marched into Maryland in the summer of '62, for instance, Lincoln might well have believed that he was on the verge of becoming the discredited leader of a movement which led to the breakup of the Union.

When he signed the Emancipation Proclamation after those great "soldiers" of the south had been checked at Antietam, he took a step which, for all he knew, might well mean his defeat at the next election—and which, incidentally, was directly counter to the Constitution he was fighting to uphold. And in the summer of '63 Lincoln had resigned himself to defeat.

All this is worth recalling, as his birthday celebration arrives once more. Thinking of him as a giant, as a superman, we overlook the fact that he was a human being like all other presidents, subject to the same doubts, mistakes and criticism that they all experienced.

And when we think of him in that way we miss the very thing that made him great—the fact that somewhere, in the depths of his own patriotic heart, he could find the resources, the strength, the courage to carry on along the line he had chosen, to rise superior to himself and the troubles which assailed him, and bring the nation through in spite of this great task which destiny had laid down for it.

Letter addressed to "Madame Queen," Washington, reached Secretary Perkins, May 16 AAA mail, if any, should be checked for letters to Amos and Amy.

NEED FOR PIONEER SPIRIT

Justice John Burke of the North Dakota supreme court struck a significant note recently when he told a mid-year graduating class at the University of North Dakota that a fuller value of "the sacrifices of pioneers in creating modern institutions" could be realized if "pioneering" continued.

"Much has been given you and much is expected of you," the justice declared.

He emphasized the point most of us need to absorb these days—that our frontiers are still with us. Obviously, not the frontiers of new lands or new cities in the tempo of 50 years ago, but frontiers in terms of better social conditions, better safety, better adjustment to the economic forces of our complex times.

Here is plenty to tax the pioneering spirit of even the most dourious. The challenge should not go unanswered.

CAMPAGNA'S GOOD SIDE

While the fireworks of the presidential campaign sputter around us these days, it is well to take a look at the American system of government in action.

The voter is the target of a barrage of argument and oratory such as has seldom been known in previous campaigns. The press, the radio, and public appearances have been utilized to drive home every point.

Confusing? Yes, very much so. But, there's a good side to it, nevertheless. Democracy is having its full daily exercise on both sides of the fence. Candidates are shouting their lungs out and the public is looking straight in the eyes.

In our system, there is no bouting around the bush. This sharp, though often blatant, battle between the "ins" and the "outs" is the protein of our country's diet. We may get tired of it before next November—but democracy thrives on it.

"SHOOTING WAVE" BURGLARY

Within a month a Cleveland "dynamite" gang has succeeded in looting two large stores with the aid of a police short wave radio.

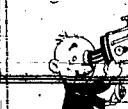

In each instance, the burglars, who blow open safes with dynamite, set up their radio and then, according to night watchmen held under guard, kept one man constantly tuning in for official broadcasts. It made a perfect "loop."

Incidentally, the police admit their complete bewilderment as to how to stop this clever use of the radio.

It is something in which police departments in every city can well turn attention, for other burglars may be protecting themselves in the same fashion. The police are faced with a mandate to devise some sort of code for their short wave set-up. As it works now, it's too handy for the underworld.

Lincoln and the Constitution

Charles A. Beard, Dean of American Historians, Reveals How Emancipator Obeyed Supreme Court, Then Secured Amendment He Felt Was Needed

(At a time when the U. S. constitution may be living up to its original intent, Lincoln's efforts have been forgotten. For Lincoln himself faced a constitutional problem not unlike those of today. What it was and how it was solved is told by Charles A. Beard, dean of American historians and political scientists.)

As the fifth decade of the nineteenth century drew to a close, Abraham Lincoln sprang into fame on a constitutional issue.

The Republican party launched a national campaign on the proposition that slavery should be prohibited by congress in the territories of the United States. The same proposition Lincoln gave his approval.

But the very next year the supreme court of the United States, in the Dred Scott case, declared that congress had no power to prohibit slavery in the territories. This was a staggering blow to the Republican party.

By a single stroke the court had blotted out the principal plank in its platform, had destroyed its chief reason for existence. The Republicans were faced with a Federal government and a profound freedom throughout the territories.

The court had said in effect:

"Under the constitution this action cannot be taken by federal authorities."

Why not amend the constitution?

Not to give Congress the power to prohibit slavery in the territories? That seemed well in theory, but it was impossible in practice.

No amendment can be made without the approval of three-fourths of the states. Given the number of slave states in 1860, an amendment against slavery in the territories had to be out of the question.

For Republicans who accepted the supreme court and the constitution, that was a challenge. It was a "not our business."

Linen Meets Challenge.

Abraham Lincoln dared to pick it up and declare his principles and program. He said "that he would do what he decided he must do, even if his party would never consent to it." In the Dred Scott case. That was an obligation resting on every citizen.

But he added that the supreme court had often reversed itself, and his critics would seek to here it reverse the interpretation made in the Dred Scott case.

In those days judges could be appointed by the president, and the Senate, and a majority obtained for a different view of the constitution. Since an amendment could not be made, the change in the membership of the court was the only way out for the Republicans.

Appeals to Voters.

Teaming with the judiciary, he scarcely horrified Democrats, but Lincoln and the Republicans demanded another interpretation of the constitution, an interpretation which they constituted.

On this point Lincoln was firm as steel.

"Without condoning the supreme court's decision, I nevertheless consider the platform of 1860 declared the doctrine laid down in the opinion to be contrary to the constitution, 'unconstitutional,' the tendency, 'subversive of the peace and harmony of the country.' On this platform Abraham Lincoln was elected President of the United States.

Lincoln and the Republicans probably would have done about this constitutional issue if war had not come, nobody knew or can ever know. What he did do and the war is a matter of record.

In 1860 they pushed through congress and ended in law the bill prohibiting slavery in the territories of the United States and in any that shall hereafter be acquired."

Law in Disarray.

The constitution was unchanged.

The 1860 decision stood. Chief Justice Taney still lived.

It was written in the constitution that congress could not prohibit slavery in the territories. Yet congress and the President prohibited slavery in the territories.

Not content with this defiance of the past, Lincoln decided to strike a mortal blow at slavery in the states.

War Emergency.

Was there an emergency? President Lincoln was commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the Union. And under the constitution the war power Lincoln had more power than emancipated slaves in the states and districts than in the arms against the authority of the United States.

For a skillful stroke of state he could not expect support in the constitution. Yet Lincoln made a broad interpretation to justify his action.

Emancipation Amendment.

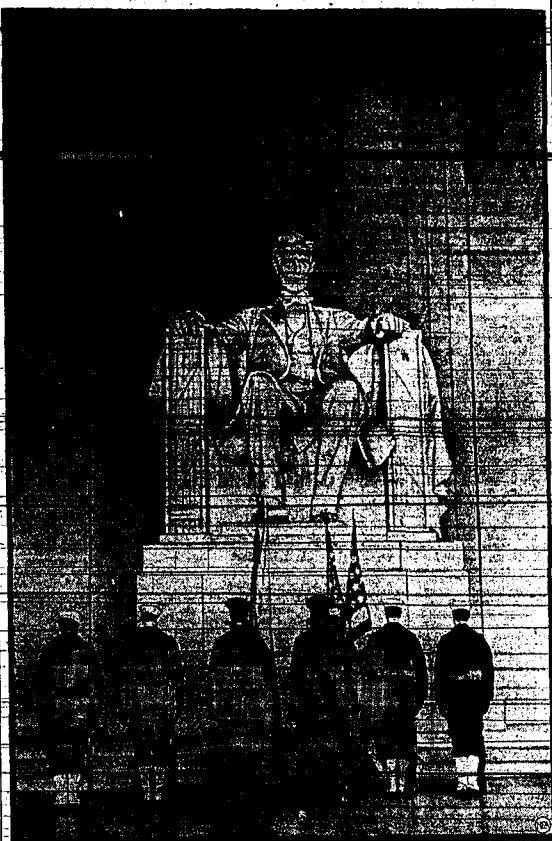

At first this was a "war measure." Could the proclamation of emancipation be considered a return of the "war"? On the constitutional point, there were grave doubts. Besides, slavery was still in effect in the states and districts not in arms against the United States.

After much maneuvering Lincoln and Republicans managed to get it up the constitution.

The constitution was ratified. The constitution was changed.

Other clubs have also postponed their regular meetings until the next regular meeting date.

who had dared to take up the policy which he deemed "dangerous," who dreamed it, who gave his life for it; who turned into a legend, for all times, for all peoples, for all climates, for all humanity.

Those who imagine that the constitution is a mere theme for a political speech, may well ponder and remember the life and labor of Lincoln, the statesman.

LINCOLN'S ORDER FOUND IN HAWAII

Paper Signed by Emancipator
Discovered Unexpectedly
In Island

BAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12 (UPI)—Officials of the Archives of Hawaii have just reported to San Francisco authorities the finding of an original document and its signature of Abraham Lincoln, some 5,000 miles from its place of origin.

The document is in the archives of the Hawaiian State.

Employed is a simple official act, reading as follows:

"I hereby authorize and direct the Postmaster to affix the postage of the United States to my proclamation of this date, and signed by me, and in so doing, shall be his witness."

At the date of the document is Jan. 1, 1863. It corresponds with the date of the Emancipation Proclamation for the freedom of the slaves and is believed to refer to that.

Dr. T. T. Waterman, librarian of the archives, believes the signature to be that of Lincoln, but does not offer any explanation for its presence in the territory's archives.

WRA-AROUND FROCK
PATTERN #785
If you didn't know, you'd never guess it was a wra-around frock, for its cleverly simulated "waistcoat" bodice looks only comfortable, and one that very woman will want to make and own, for it will do much to give her a more trim, fit figure. It makes it slim in a fifty button front, and one that's utterly smart for house work, marketing, errands, shopping, whatever duties the day holds. See how prettily it makes up in a space print, and also how utterly different it is in a solid pattern.

It's elastic through the sleeves if you don't have a pretty cuff. Complete diagrammed Marian Martin Sew-Along pattern.

Pattern #785 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 48. $1.35 each.
