Ross Outlines Plans For Operating Idaho Social Security Help

Maps Set-Up For Aged, Blind And Job Relief

BOISE, Feb. 12 (AP)—Governor C. Ben Ross today had announced his plan of setting up an accounting Idaho's eligible recipients of social security funds.

Word that money was on its way from Washington to finance February allotments prompted immediate taking of applications. Sixty or more requests were sent to the secretary of state since the bill had not been acted upon because of rulings of the national administrator as to the possibility of the program.

Applications will be taken in each county, Ross said. A welfare board of five persons—one county commissioner, the probate judge and three persons appointed by the governor will be selected in each county. Forms and application blanks will be printed by the state and distributed as soon as possible.

Because of the amount of work to be done before committees can be set up for work, the first application receiving dates will probably be Feb. 19 or 20, Ross said.

Federal funds will be combined with the $100,000 state funds authorized by the sales tax to administer the program. The state will give to the state present funds used for indigent relief. The amount of the state will be furnished by the federal government which could not be obtained in each county.

Applicants for old age, blind, dependent children and unemployment benefits will be taken care of by the boards, Ross explained. After the board approves the applications, they will be sent to the state, which will make out checks for the approved amounts and forward to the applicants.

Ross Directs Program

Under the plan, Ross will direct the entire program. Under him will be the Idaho social security agency which will hire investigators and seek to prevent graft.

The department of social security will act independently of the new setup, Ross said. The purpose will be to provide benefits for the aged, blind, dependent children and unemployed.

SOVIET-JAPANESE TENSION WIDENS; INQUIRY ADVISED

Friction Grows, Although No Move Brings Possibility of Border Peace Commission Suggested

Tokyo Claims Mongols Invaded Manchuria With Strong Armed Force

By United Press

Tension between Soviet Russia and Japan increased today although diplomatic developments suggest a possibility of settlement of the long-standing friction along the border of Great Mongolia and Manchuria.

Japanese said 1,000 Mongols with full field equipment had invaded Manchuria in a bold north of Lake Balun, and clashed with Japanese-Manchurian troops.

Suggests Commission

Main body of settlement came from Moscow where the Japanese ambassador today suggested a frontier commission composed of Mongols, Manchurians, Russians and Japanese to investigate recent border incidents.

The quarrel between Japan and Russia, rooted in their conflicting Asiatic interests, recently has been coming to a head in recent weeks with a succession of border and diplomatic disputes.

One of these, on Jan. 30, was the cause for the Japanese suggestion of a commission in this case, at Grodekov, west of Vladivostok, a Manchou detachment mutilated, killed and captured the Japanese.

Penetration Alleged

The next incident was that Vladivostok and other cities in Manchuria and Mongolia allegedly penetrated six miles into Outer Mongolia, driving a Manchou border guard before them.

Reinforced, turned on the invaders and drove them out, killing eight.

More and more peremptory diplomatic protests, again asserted the Japanese, were being received at Moscow yesterday.

Another border incident occurred today when a Japanese soldier was shot by a border guard.

SENATE PASSES FARM PROGRAM REPLACING AAA

Soil Conservation Benefits Provided

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (AP)—The Senate today passed the administration farm bill, designed to replace the AAA, by a soil conservation program.

The measure, which precipitated extended debate, was the first to be passed by the Senate since the inauguration of the new administration.

The bill will provide benefits to farmers who cooperate in national plans for soil conservation. It sets up machinery which ultimately will place the program on a permanent basis.

Cost of the new program is estimated at $500,000,000, substantially the same as the AAA.

The administration is expected to call Congress to provide taxes to finance the farm program, but the exact method of taxation has not been decided.

Plans All Ready

The department of agriculture is prepared to put the program into effect as soon as the bill is passed and finally signed by President Roosevelt.

Senate approved the bill after 12 days of debate. It was a 70-20 vote.

Under the bill, no contract is prepared to put the program into effect as soon as the bill is passed and finally signed by President Roosevelt.

AIRPLANES PROVE ARCHEOLOGY AID

Aerial Jaunts Help Scientists To Discover Likely Spots For Digging PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Archeologists are using airplanes to discover likely spots for digging. The plane is playing a leading part in archeological explorations or "aerial archaeology." At present, Lewis B. Harrison, the Philadelphia aviator is winging over the rugged mountains and fertile valleys of ancient Peru. Baringer was called into the University of Pennsylvania museum, the Oriental museum of archeology, the Boston museum of natural history and the American institute of Iranian Art and Archeology. Each of these institutions has carried out considerable work in Iran and other eastern countries, but the current adventure here is to air the most extensive ever to have been undertaken. The value of airplane archeology is emphasized by Dr. Eric F. Schmidt, field director of the joint expedition in Iran. With his wife he has returned to Philadelphia for a brief vacation before resuming his duties with the expedition. Although a young man and a scientist, the modern scholar Schmidt has achieved a wide reputation in his field. For the past three years he has been directing scientific projects in re-creating the history of ancient times. In the opinion of archeologists, so vastly conceived a program has the world's scientific community never before. It was only by air-travel that necessary contact with the numerous men in the field could be made. Key to Success "The plane," he said, "is the key to the success of such a complex enterprise as that being conducted in Iran." "In many cases," he continued, "before we started our excavations, we flew over the country we were exploring to get a general view of the terrain and locate aerial photographs. If we saw a mound which might conceivably be an ancient site, we would stop to land and continue our investigation."

STOCKS RISE TO HIGH SINCE 1931

Week's Market Dealings Show 40 Representative Stocks at All-Time Top

By ELMER C. WALZER United Press Financial Editor NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (AP)—Stocks this week made a new high in the average since 1931, 40 representative stocks, a new top for all time, and commodities new highs in United States index. A slight pickup in heavy industries that was reflected in better almost imperceptible but definite rise in commodity prices after a long period of general inactivity was subsiding. Currency inflation prospects seemed more remote, although credit inflation appeared to be gaining headway. Pickup in Loans There was a slight pickup in "brassage" loans which reflected increase in buying by small speculators but the general business of the stock exchange continued to be done by investors who took stock of the dollar. Gold continued to leave the country early in the week but a sudden uptick in the dollar caused further shipments. Some bankers looked for more "troubled times" for the gold market. Electricity output gained and so did most of the other major industries. Automobile production turned up after its recent series of setbacks and Chrysler along with several others of the motor division mounted to new highs. Buick, General Motors and Ford, along with sharp advances in Manhattan borough of New York City where new building plans jumped 101 per cent in January.

WASHINGTON—The snappish exhibit of Congress yesterday, the place of legislative procedure was performed on the pending House-Johnson measure regarding the bill. It was a complete answer to everyone who has been complaining about congressional reform.

Several senators had ever heard of the bill, even by the name of the bill, and found it proposing something vaguely reminiscent of N. R. A. and ready for passage. No one knew exactly how it got up from the floor. "Probably no one will ever find out," said a senator who was discovered to indicate the progress that has lately been made in the House.

SURE SPOT OF U. S. JUSTICE
 Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, returning from an extended study of Scotland Yard and continental police systems, brings the word that our American department of Justice is far superior to the foreign setup, but that our court system falls down in comparison.

The English court system, said Cummings, is based on "speed in dispensing justice, and that's a very sore spot in the United States."

No sure has it become, in fact, that the supreme court now is working on a revision of federal court procedure. This country, with its 48 state legislatures makes revision of legal procedure a difficult problem. It is to be hoped that this new code will stand as a model for the various states.

They in turn will be enabled to modify existing statutes to expedite local law enforcement. America's "G-man" efficiency needs the bolstering of sound criminal court procedure.

DO YOU INCLUDE CROONERS IN THAT, BENNY?
 Pot Shots: I read in the Evening Outlets from here and there that a woman in Chicago is suing her husband for divorce because his "true love" is in the radio. Who would rather listen to a radio than to a woman?

MERITORIOUS MERIT SYSTEM
 Decision of the League of Women Voters to launch a national campaign for extension of the civil service to more federal and local government employees, is a heartful note in the day's news.

Civil service, the principle of governing appointment and job-holding by merit and qualification rather than as a reward of political service, has a sound case: That becomes more important as the functions of government become wider and more complex; as they are, in spite of everything.

A great deal of the success of our form of rule can be traced directly to the principles of civil service, established just 33 years ago. Now on its anniversary, we could do no better than drive for a general, wider adoption of the system.

Government is a profession comparable to law, medicine, journalism, and other fields. There is no justification for naming its departments, be they federal, state or local, with untrained, incompetent workers, whose chief qualification is party fidelity.

No place should sheer competency count more than in public business.

A VERY POISONOUS TALE
 Pot Shots: I used to own a place nine down in Nevada, and one fall I was hauling my winter wood from the place 20 miles away. On one trip with my team and wagon about half way to the place, the horse jumped and almost threw me out of the wagon. After it was over, I was called in the center of the road. It struck at the horse's chest. After it quit swelling I cut four cord of wood from the tongue and had enough wood to last me all winter.

PAIDON needed a job. It looked as if you had been abandoned, and that was the only way to get out of it. "As far as I'm concerned," said Julia, "it amounts to that. I don't want to go with you. I don't want to go with you. I don't want to go with you."

Julia smiled Woodford's guests. "You see, I didn't want to come here to the first place. I thought they were out for only a week-end trip—but then they came up here, and I'm afraid they're going to stay here."

WASHINGTON—The snappish exhibit of Congress yesterday, the place of legislative procedure was performed on the pending House-Johnson measure regarding the bill. It was a complete answer to everyone who has been complaining about congressional reform.

Several senators had ever heard of the bill, even by the name of the bill, and found it proposing something vaguely reminiscent of N. R. A. and ready for passage. No one knew exactly how it got up from the floor. "Probably no one will ever find out," said a senator who was discovered to indicate the progress that has lately been made in the House.

AMERICA REACHES MIDDLE AGE
 If you can't find anything else about which to worry these days—and you probably can't, very easily—you might start worrying about your Uncle Sam's decline in population growth.

The census bureau officially has figured the country's population today as 127,521,000—a gain of 31 per cent over last year, and a rise of 4 per cent since 1930.

During the last six years, the population has been recording a net annual growth of approximately 900,000. This is only a little more than half the average annual gain for the 1920-30 decade.

If the rate of growth continues to decline in this way, it won't be long before we have a stable population—or even, possibly, a decreasing one.

MY HENRY
 You say that's the little for you, dear reader, you are wrong. I now take up my rusty pen and write a song of the lovely hen.

Every week I feel it cannot fail to sound more like a mournful wail. O, chickie, please do say!

Every week to town I dash And come home loaded with Oyster shell, and wheat and corn, Green, and they lay from out the barn.

What all this would mean to our social and economic organization is obvious—and distressing. It would mean an end to the era of expansion which has lasted since our country's birth. Cities no longer would increase in size; or, if they did, would make their gains at the expense of other cities or of rural areas.

Every commercial venture from agriculture to real estate subdividing would feel the effects.

Beyond that, there is the depressing feeling that America's youthful vitality has been played out; that we have passed as a nation from young manhood to middle age, and that the era of slow decline is not far away.

Now we could, if we chose, meet this development in the manner of Mussolini and Hitler. We could start taxing heavily, awarding government subsidies to the parents of large families, and pushing out propaganda about the benefits of parenthood and the citizen's duty to the state. But it is hard to imagine such a campaign accomplishing much in the United States. In the first place, it is even harder to imagine an American government trying it. Besides, there is a much simpler way to accomplish the same end.

NO, THAT ALWAYS ARRIVES AFTER MARRIAGE!
 Dear Pot-Shots: I hear that the question asked frequently at the New York public library is "Can I borrow a book?" Men usually answer: "No, that always arrives after marriage!"

YES, AND BLOODSHOT
 Dear Gent in Row 2nd: Some intelligent guy (inventor) has written a book that says that science has turned the electric eye on the trail of the common cold.

TELEPHONE VOTING
 The doubters became even more dubious when they heard a bill was voted out of the senate judiciary committee. At that particular committee meeting only two senators were present. You know how busy legislators always are.

During our long period of growth—there was a hopeful, expectant air to America; a feeling that the country progressively would be a better place for people to live, a conviction that each generation would find life a little bit easier and happier than the one which preceded it.

During the last few years that feeling has vanished. In its place, there has been helpless resentment and dull despondency. Many people have feared that their children would grow up in less favorable surroundings instead of in better ones.

Once we abolish that feeling of discouragement—and abolish it in the only lasting way, by removing the conditions that caused it, the old air of hope and confidence will return. Then, in all probability, we shall see the rate of growth again increase. For those statistics simply reflect the average American's feeling about his country's future.
