ONE ANGLE SETTLED
It is to be deplored that the execution of Hauptmann apparently will not put an end to the Lindbergh baby murder case.

But there was no getting around the fact that, with Bruno convicted of the crime after all the evidence pointed to him, the infliction of the death penalty was inevitable if the American standards of justice were to be maintained.

Even those who feel that Hauptmann could not have been entirely responsible for what has come to be the greatest crime in history, it is manifest that he was connected with it, despite his claims to innocence.

And if he had just one little bit to do with it, justice demanded that he be made an example of.

There are various reactions to the entire case on the part of the press and individuals throughout the country, but the thing to remember is that Hauptmann was found guilty by courts and a jury whose business it was to determine all the facts and to free him if a doubt as to his guilt had been raised.

The result should settle the Hauptmann angle of the case, even if it does not settle in the minds of many the identity of any others who might have been involved, whether or not they shall ever be apprehended, and what all the circumstances were surrounding the sensational case.

CAPITALISM NEEDS POPULAR RULE
If your memory is long enough to go back three or four years, you doubtless can recall that there was a time when well-to-do American were fond of saying that what this country needed was a Mussolini.

It was more or less natural that some people should say this. When a large and steadily increasing part of the populace has no work and sees no earthly chance of getting work, and when an equally large and steadily increasing part of industry has no dividends and sees no chance of getting them, the institution of private property itself is in danger.

A strong man who could step in and take hold, start the wheels turning, disregard all the rest of law and tradition, and bush in the head of anyone who objected, well, such a man was bound to look more or less attractive.

As of today, however, the picture is different. Signor Mussolini right now seems bent on making all the Americans who talked that way wish they had said something else.

By scrapping the last vestige of democracy in Italy, and disposing of the owners of private industry, he has shown all of us, in an unforgettable way, just what you let yourself in for when you turn to a dictator for help.

For dictatorship in the modern manner does not exist for the preservation of private property. It is as heedless of that as it is of democracy. It serves its own end and follows its own course, and it is as hostile to individualism in the realm of trade as in the realm of politics.

And that brings us to a point that defenders of the existing order of things in America too often overlook, that private capitalism and democracy go hand in hand. They are Siamese twins. If one dies, the other cannot long survive.

During the last half decade or so, we have had plenty of opportunity to learn that both private capitalism and democracy, as practiced in America, have grave defects. Capitalism often is selfish and blind; democracy often is inefficient and stupid. But if we remember that the two go together, we may be able to muster the patience to make the reforms which both need.

The urgent left-wing liberal who wants political freedom made broader and more secure should be a sloward friend of capitalism; and similarly the capitalist, moved by a human desire to protect his own, should be one of the most vehement upholders of democracy.

It is some years since the Russians showed us that, when you put out to abolish capitalism, you have to abolish democracy as well. Now Mussolini is demonstrating that, when you abolish democracy, you wind up by doing away with capitalism.

Our job, as a capitalist democracy, is to retain both and to make, in each, the reforms and the necessary improvements if they are to work as they should.

ARMY DAY
This is the nineteenth anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the World war, and is commemorated nationally as Army Day.

It is significant that the birthday of the declaration of war by this country upon Germany has been chosen by the Army to celebrate its existence, but to many the importance of the date in history flows more from the fact that it marked the commencement of a period that these nearly seven years have failed to erase.

Calling this Army day may help the American people to observe the event with some of the importance it merits, and to remember that it was the day when the United States entered the World war.

A European judge decided that, just because he tried on hats for nine hours straight, a woman need not necessarily become, but then he didn't see the hats.

THE THIRD ROW
The other night a crooner sang, "Let's Face the Music," which seemed ironic, coming from him.

WITH
The Gentleman in the Third Row

First you think she's wonderful.
You keep her in a haze.
You think she's beautiful and trim,
She keeps you in a daze.

You fall quite hopelessly in love,
You tumble then and there.
You realize that she's the one,
You give her every care.

But came a time you look again
And find some imperfections.
Your high opinion quickly has
Serious defections.

Complexion's spotty now, you find,
Her nose is slightly bent.
Her voice harsher than you thought
When you were so intent.

You keep her in a haze.
You think she's beautiful and trim,
She keeps you in a daze.

You fall quite hopelessly in love,
You tumble then and there.
You realize that she's the one,
You give her every care.

But came a time you look again
And find some imperfections.
Your high opinion quickly has
Serious defections.

Complexion's spotty now, you find,

Her voice harsher than you thought

TEXAS TO MASS AT BATTLE SITE

More Than 100,000 Will Join
San Jacinto Field for Ceremonies

HOUSTON, Tex. (U.P.)—San Jacinto battleground, the rolling, lowland shrine of Texas independence, will be the gathering place on April 21 for 100,000 state patriots.

On that date 100 years ago, a desperate band of pioneer Texans under command of Gen. Sam Houston defeated a superior army of Mexicans and captured their chief, Gen. Santa Anna.

The defeat of the Mexican tyrant and perpetrator of the historic slaughter of 100 Texans at the Alamo gave rise to the republic of Texas with General Houston as the first president.

The celebration of the famous battle will be one of the biggest during the Texas centennial year.

The celebration of the famous battle will be one of the biggest during the Texas centennial year.

Artillery Unit Called

Tramping of 1,000 soldiers' feet and the rolling of military drums will echo on the battlegrounds of the entire coast artillery unit of Fort Crockett, Galveston, participating in a Catholic military field mass to be conducted by the Most Rev. C. E. Byrne, bishop of Galveston.

Adjutant General Carl Negblitt, Texas national guard, announced a large complement of guardsmen also would take part in the celebration.

Gov. James V. Alfred of Texas will make the only address of the day. Other honor guests of the celebration, including state officials, judges of the state supreme court and court of civil appeals, J. Y. Bennett, president of the University of Texas, will be introduced by District Judge Charles W. Ash, who has charge of program arrangements.

Children to March

Marching in a huge parade to the battle site will be the coast artillery—national guard units; reserve officers; American Legion posts; Sons and Daughters of the Republic of Texas; Boy Scouts; school children from all sections of South Texas; and other civic and patriotic organizations.

W. E. Kendall, vice president of the San Jacinto chapter, Sons of the Republic of Texas, will read General Houston's famous report on the battle.

Widow Leads

Crews of the state highway department were put to work several weeks ago, widening the road to the battleground to 40 feet to care for heavy traffic on San Jacinto day.

General program arrangements and preparation for the celebration was in charge of John C. Rownes, president of the San Jacinto Centennial association.

U. S. SEEKS TO CONQUER DESERT

Reclamation of a vast man-made desert, a section of which is shown in the upper photo, is the aim of the U. S. forest service and the progress it has made in seeking satisfactory trees and shrubs that will help restore lost fertility to the land is indicated in the lower photo. The area of 5,000 acres, known as the Shetler town basin, in the heart of the richly forested Southern Appalachians in western North Carolina and eastern Tennessee, was denuded by lumbering operations and grass from copper smelters, which also have affected to a lesser degree nearly 50,000 acres adjoining the basin.

BRITISHERS USE ROMAN CISTERNS

Excavation of Old Structures
Helps Water Supply in Desert Regions

CAIRO (U.P.)—The problems of water supply in the western desert of Egypt are being solved by the British on lines laid down by the Roman armies.

Roman legions dug a labyrinth of cisterns underground, ranged in a series of galleries like those in a mine and extending two or three miles. From these cisterns a year-round supply of sweet water can be taken.

Main Source

Excavation of these cisterns is going forward daily, and they are now one of the main sources of supply. These cisterns were known to the Egyptian government, and in 1902 it was suggested that they be extended to increase the population of Matruh as a resort. Some work has been done in the intervening years, so that the British had maps and a good start toward excavation when they began, extension work last autumn.

It is supposed that these reservoirs were used to store fresh water in rainless years of the early Christian era, when, according to the story, the region was the granary of Rome.

Filled by Rain

The Arabs are able to cultivate barley and other grains, and there is sparse grazing for goats. There has been no appreciable rain for three years. But when rain comes, these underground cisterns are filled with water by seepage through their wet sandstone walls. The sweet water lies over a layer of sea-water which has oozed in, but can be pumped off without mixing. Thousands of gallons daily can be taken, apparently without appreciably reducing the supply of sweet water.

Since 1923, 24,000 miles of roads have been constructed in the United States.

TOLEDO TO CURB GANGS' HIGHWAY

Plans Action to Put Halt to Use of City as Hideout
for Criminals

TOLEDO (U.P.)—Police believe Toledo is the criminals' main highway across the country, and officials say they are going to do something about it.

Strategically located from the gangsters' point of view on a line between New York and Kansas City, Toledo has made a good hideout for fugitive criminals. Harry-Manson, city detective on special assignment, points out, John Dillinger and his machine gunner lived in Toledo for three weeks in January, 1935, Manson said he has learned.

At various times in pre-rep days, Detroit's Purple Gang, the Touhy mob of Chicago and Al Capone's henchmen slipped into Toledo's hideouts, Manson said.

Antiquated System

The police system, not the police, are to blame for Toledo's reputation as an underworld hideout, police officials here agree. Here are antiquated, they said, and local patrolmen are not provided photographs of criminals.

Between New York and Kansas City, Manson said, are five stations along the "main highway" of crime: Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Chicago and St. Louis. Although criminals consider Detroit too hot, Manson said, that city and Chicago offers a stepping-off place into Canada.

Route Seldom Changed

Criminals seldom vary from this beaten path, Manson said, department of justice records reveal. These stations offer rich fields for investigation in these cities crime have friends.

TOLEDO'S main chief of police, Ray Allen, has indicated a determination to cancel all "stop-over" main highway tickets of voyaging criminals. He means of a teletype system, has picked up failed cooperation been suggested by Manson—as with the county prosecutor's office-stop toward closer surveillance of investigating criminals and anti-criminals interstate movements.

EXPERIMENT

A human race composed entirely of females was the theoretical possibility seen by biologists after Dr. Gregory Pincus (above) announced that he had successfully fertilized an egg with a female rabbit entirely by physical and chemical means. The egg was removed from one female, synthetically fertilized, and then transplanted to another "mother," where it appeared to develop normally.

PARIS EMPLOYS WATER TASTERS

Considerable Staff Always on Job to Sip for Traces of Chemical Taint

PARIS (UP)—There are many unusual workers on the payroll of Paris. Take, for instance, the profession of water-taster.

Paris employs a considerable staff of water-tasters, and they work on a 24-hour basis. Night and day their job is to taste the water to make sure that the chloride used to purify it hasn't left any sign of its passage.

They do their tasting not at the main Montmartre reservoir, but at the Porte d'Arcueil, where all the Paris aqueducts come together before being emptied into the common reservoir. Each separate aqueduct is tasted once every hour, and if the taster detects any suspicious taste or odor, he telephones the chemical bureau, and the aqueduct is cut off while the chemists analyze a sample of the water.

They also analyze samples even when there is no foreign taste, for each time the water-taster performs his duty, he takes a sample and sends it to the laboratory, which thus keeps a check on the purity of the human source of taste.

In the case of water-tasters, that sense is nearly infallible. They don't get the job until extensive tests, in some of which the chemists have prepared traps for the taster, have demonstrated that their palate for water is of the delicatest.

Because the queer fish employed by the city, also to detect the presence of chloride in the water, are what the water department calls "trout-tomatoes"—the wildest trout. The city water passes through their aquarium, and as trout are particularly sensitive to chloride, they serve, often at the cost of their own lives, as a check on the water-tasters.

But if they risk death in the municipal service, they are compensated for the risk by good food and easy living. The water department tells them from the Tuesday aquarium when they are young and frisky, and feeds them so generously that they quickly become large. When they reach that stage, they are shipped back. The department doesn't want them too strong. They resist chloride too well.

If over-hauling and thus useless trout get too numerous, the city might ungratefully make use of them to provide dinner for another variety of animal city employee—the official cat-catching cats. These cats, carefully selected as "kiss-kissers" out of the official buildings, are kept with rats.

Back Yard GARDENING on a Budget

By FRED H. A. COX
Extension Service Agent,
New Jersey College of Agriculture
and Experiment Station,
Hudson, N. J.

Unless your ground is excavated soil or subsoil, it should, with care, support a thriving lawn. Plant systems seldom are too acid soil, and if lime has not been applied for some years, soil acidity may be at the bottom of your lawn troubles. Application of from 25 to 50 pounds of a liming material to 1000 square feet of lawn once every four years is a good practice. Such application, evenly made, should correct unfavorable acid soil condition.

Early spring and late summer applications of fertilizer assure plentiful supply of plant food. A mixed or complete fertilizer having a 6-6-6, 8-10-4, or 12-7-7 analysis, when applied evenly and at the rate of 15 to 20 pounds to 1000 square feet, should make an average lawn good and a good lawn better.

If the soil has a fair stand of the desirable lawn grasses and clovers, there is no need for reseed. With proper water and fertilizer treatment, and with proper mowing and watering during the growing season, the grass should replace itself.

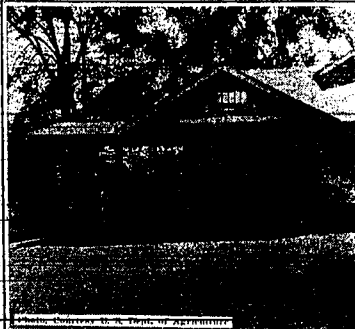

However, it is well to reseed any bare patches in a lawn. Loosening the soil with a grub hoe, breaking up the clods, and then raking the surface, will produce a firm and fine-seeded. Scatter the seed, rake in very lightly, and then roll or tamp to make firm the surface. Sometimes the cultivated grasses are so thin the general reseed is desirable. The simplest procedure then is to scatter the seed, rake the surface lightly with a fine tooth garden rake, and roll.

Better results, however, will be had, however, by first scattering a top dressing of good soil to a depth of one inch, and then watering it down. This is a dressing of a just amount of similar soil to the surface.

On the excellent seed, grass seed is then sown, raked in lightly, and rolled. When the young seedlings are becoming established, water them lightly during dry periods with a fine, mist-like spray.

Fertilizing and reseed are done to best advantage in very early spring, just as the lawn starts turning green. Late spring fertilizing is apt to stimulate crabgrass and lawn weeds more than it does the cultivated grasses. Postpone the first spring mowing until the grass is at least two inches high. After that, the lawn may be mowed as frequently as desired, but never so often as to cut the grass to less than one inch in length.

During dry periods you need not water. An occasional thorough soaking of the soil to a depth of three or four inches will tend to make the grass more vigorous.

A well-kept lawn adds to the attractiveness of any home.

Too bad you can't see underground, to tell how your lawn is growing. Specimen at left shows how deeply rooted becomes grass that has been well watered and properly cut, as against grass, at right, that was cut too close and insufficiently watered.

Help Kidneys

It is a well-known fact that the kidneys are the most important organs in the body. They filter out the waste products of the body and keep the blood pure. If the kidneys are weak, the blood becomes impure and the body suffers. It is important to keep the kidneys strong and healthy. There are many ways to do this, but the most important is to keep the kidneys clean. This can be done by drinking plenty of water and eating a healthy diet. It is also important to exercise regularly and to get plenty of rest.

"HIGH-POWERED" POLITICIANS

Editor Evening Times:—Dear Sir:—On Feb. 20 it seemed from the President's talk over the radio he was much perplexed as to what to do with the 1,700,000 students that will soon be released. "What I want," said the President, "is a group of high-powered politicians who would be more appropriate name. I don't feel that I am broad enough to advise a President of the United States though I might suggest some names. I would like to have him put them to building logging roads for the younger generation and the rest of the lumber trust. . . . What we need in Idaho is more men . . . idiots . . . idiots . . . and more money to shoot and destroy the last bit of wild life in our state. Idaho we don't happen to have any young married couples that would be glad to herd sheep or build roads in order to get a few dollars to buy their little home, and if we had the young men in our state who would be a governor . . . and a senate and house of representatives will come to Idaho to look for Idaho people by taking over our natural resources and develop them for our people of Idaho so that we could all share and share alike. . . . I think we have a group of high-powered politicians that cater to the money trust of Wall Street; with them it is to let the rest of the people—so I swim, let the rest sink. My advice to the people of Idaho is to forget party politics and elect men and women like this fellow. A. H. GIBBS, Jr., Wendell, Idaho.

POLITICAL PARADE

By LYLE C. WILSON
WASHINGTON—It was in New York the other day and within the hour the three-hour parade on the streets of New York City was the most important men in the United States. Both were headed for presidential nomination. On the 14th floor of the Waldorf Astoria hotel I found Herbert C. Hoover, a more solid and less huffed man than during the four dark years of his presidential administration. Alfred E. Smith sat on the 22nd floor of the Empire State building. He was about to go out in the rain to review a parade.

Belief that Mr. Hoover does not expect to be nominated for President increases with every meeting. The former President talks politics freely. He is working at it, in fact, with his series of anti-New Deal speeches. A weekly 1936-1937 issue was the last one that he delivered April 4 at Port Wayne, Ind. There are invitations for others but Hoover will not go.

Not Regular Speaker
It is not likely that Mr. Hoover will be a regular speaker during the post-convention campaign. In the first place it is possible that the Republicans might name a candidate whom Mr. Hoover would not support. In the second, the Republican nominee may be drawn from that group which considers Hoover to be a "political liability" because Americans, business went bad during his administration. Perhaps more pertinent to the former President's post-convention plans—whatever they may be—is the fact that he believes the speeches of one or two new men will matter after the convention adjourns. These two men will be the Republican and Democratic candidates. Mr. Hoover sees a presidential campaign as a debate between nominees and he probably will figure it is up to him to be nominated and few persons expect him to be named. Coming away from the well-attended memorial of a man who is enjoying life and who one no longer believes the world could for him when the boom collapsed in 1929.

Not Talking Politics
Miss Mary C. Cullen, who is in Smith's office and in 10 minutes of questions and sharp answers you learn the governor is not talking politics today. But he will point out and identify all the skyscrapers and landmarks around about and you will go with the parade. He is shortly will review. When Smith's swinging finger levels at a big-topped building down on the left, he says: "That is the headquarters of the New York Life Insurance company, and it is the spot where the old Madison Square Garden once stood. That's where we had the big fight of 1924." The governor remarks: "Where you were?" I was and recalled that collision between Smith and William McKelvin. It died under the Democratic National convention 12 years ago and led finally to nomination of John W. Davis, who was counsel for J. P. Morgan and Co. After many years of political crises, McKelvin came back as United States senator from California, a usually reliable New Dealer. Smith and Davis are members of the American Liberty League, high command and bolters from the Roosevelt New Deal.

Reverend P. H. Ream, who is in Smith's office remembering a great, yawning, tiger run and a man who doesn't intend to say just now what are his political plans. It is a good bet that the former senator is convinced that Mr. Roosevelt will be renominated. The chances probably are even that Smith will or will not go to the Democratic national convention. It will be elected a Tammany delegate without New Deal opposition, but rumors persist he will not appear there. His friends say Smith is not going to the convention, and he feels some good may be accomplished by his appearance. Assuming he believes Mr. Roosevelt will be renominated, Smith might go in an effort to aid Sen. Alford E. Tieding and other influential Democrats who want to write some conservative or traditional democracy into the 1936 platform. Or, he might go to Philadelphia to give physical and spectacular evidence of his bolt. He said in his American Liberty League address that if Mr. Roosevelt were renominated he probably would "take a walk." If Al arises in Philadelphia, he will walk out of the Tammany hall for another convention and a third party. That might depend on the number of Tammany braves and others who walk with him.

CAMPAGN SONG HONORS LANDON
TUPICA, Kan., April 5.—A campaign song for Gov. Alford M. Landon of Kansas, Republican presidential candidate, entitled, "This is the Man of the Hour," will be published soon.

The song was composed by Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Hauff of Tupica and the music arranged by Harry L. Alford, Chicago. Hauff is an educator and his wife a singer.

Alford has arranged the words for several well-known songs, including "Carrie Jacobs Bond's 'A Perfect Day' Love You Truly," "The 'Dixie' You Remembered," and "Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland."

Fleets on Great Lakes Find Grasp Of Depression Gone and Boom Near

(By N.E.A. Service)
DULUTH, Minn.—Another giant is slowly rousing himself from the paralysis of depression. That is the shipping, the vast transport industry which carries the grain, ore, and limestone of the northwest down into the east, and gets coal in return. In 1932 this great inland merchant marine, which totals 324 cargo steamers, was practically dead. Its shipments, which had totaled 138,574,441 tons in boom days of 1929, had fallen away to a trickle of 41,672,761 tons. The long freighters rusted at their deserted docks.

Coal Slacks Depleted
But this spring lake authorities are united in predicting something like a boom in the lake fleets. A severe winter has depleted coal stocks for this winter and the winter in the north-west to the point where shipping men believe that from 27 to 40 million tons of coal will be needed here to fill the need.

The wheat lands of the northwest will be shipping more grain to eastern elevators than they did the drought years.

And the furnaces which line the lake border states from Chicago to Buffalo are calling for iron ore as their steel mills nearer to capacity production—59 per cent at Detroit, 75 per cent at Cleveland and expanding production in the Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Buffalo districts.

Old Jobs Open Up
Scores of vessel masters and ship's officers who for several seasons have been awaiting their pride and taking just any thing until the lakes open up again are getting ready to go back to their old ships. For lake traffic has been increasing steadily since it touched the bottom in 1932, and the evidences of recovery this spring indicate a sizeable increase.

There were 186 freighters of the class of navigation last October. This year there may be the lake fleet in commission at nearly 200, lake-veterans getting back to work.

From the depths of the depression are expectedly awaiting the call of their old jobs.

The Lake Superior Iron Ore association estimates the 1936 demand is as high as 40,000,000 tons will be needed. You can see that that means when you realize that in 1932 this demand was only 10,000,000 tons from the peak of 73 million in 1929. By 1934 it had reached 25 million and in 1935 almost 32 million.

These same authorities estimate that nearly 40 million tons of coal will be needed in the northwest, providing loads for the return voyage of the ore and grain boats. This too would be an increase over the 1935 total of almost 33 million tons.

Grain shipments have risen steadily since 1929, and have not become suddenly very bad, this year.

Another indication of the revival of shipping over America's inland seas is set by F. A. Wilder, director of the division of lands and minerals for the state of Minnesota. Basing his estimates on the state's first freight highway in the world, on iron ore leaves, he predicts an increasing output during the coming summer of 25 per cent over 1935.

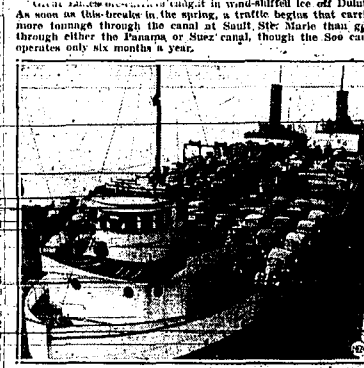

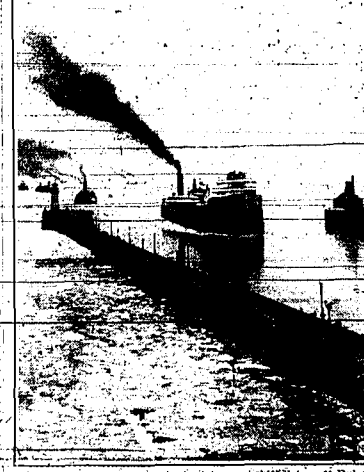

"The mining output for 1935 is very promising," Wilder says. "Royalties paid on leases and ship-ments are increased from 1934. There is a further reason to expect a further increase in 1936."

"First stirrings of the lake season are already being felt. Several boats laden with new automobiles have already pushed their way from Detroit to Cleveland."

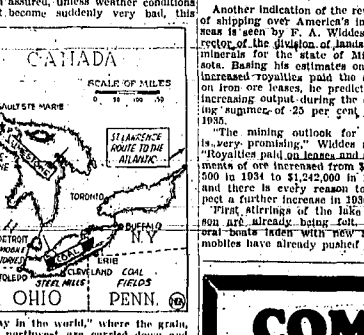

The season in upper Lake Superior does not usually open until April 20 or 25. Shipping men expect a rather late opening this year, for the bitter cold winter has left an ice barrier 30 inches deep, which is just beginning to break.

Prepare for Rush
But every preparation is being made for a rush of business as soon as the ice breaks which will restore the great lake carrier system to its old position as the greatest first freight highway in the world. Lake shipping is even more important as an index of general business conditions than it is in itself, though the lake fleet means 12,000 men to thousands of men. It reflects directly the condition of the steel industry and the steel world, the whole south-of-the-lakes belt. That is why there is a keen and already being felt. Several boats laden with new automobiles have already pushed their way from Detroit to Cleveland."

Used in the primary material of 50 or 60 industrial groups in the United States.

First freighters crossing Lake Erie in the 1936 season were the Coralia and the Crescent, docking at Cleveland with a full load of new autos from Detroit. Not only the holds, but the decks, are crowded with cars in close-packed ranks, forerunners of a busier season.

"The greatest freight highway in the world," where the grain, iron, and limestone of the northwest are carried down and exchanged for the coal and other products of the east. The magnificent inland fleet of 224 vessels that plies the lakes is affording this action.

But every preparation is being made for a rush of business as soon as the ice breaks which will restore the great lake carrier system to its old position as the greatest first freight highway in the world. Lake shipping is even more important as an index of general business conditions than it is in itself, though the lake fleet means 12,000 men to thousands of men. It reflects directly the condition of the steel industry and the steel world, the whole south-of-the-lakes belt. That is why there is a keen and already being felt. BOISE, April 6 (Special).—The price of Idaho farm products for their agricultural commodities on March 15, stood at 101 per cent of the pre-war average. Prices received for all crops advanced two per cent over the preceding month, while prices of livestock products declined seven per cent.

Grain and feed crop prices each advanced three per cent, fruit and vegetables declined one per cent, and another crop advanced four per cent. Between Feb. 15 and March 15, dairy products declined 15 per cent although still standing at 120 per cent of the pre-war level. ## WOMEN OVER 30 FORM JOB CLUB

Group in England Organizes to Fight for Work Against Younger Rivals

LONDON (U.P.)—Several hundred "discarded" women who find themselves too old to compete for a "well-paid job with young girls or more alluring looks and figures" have banded together in the Over Thirty Association.

The organization, which will wage a crusade to educate employers on the advantages of experience, has the backing of the London Council for Voluntary Occupations Under Unemployment.

Most of these jobless women who describe their plight as "urgent and dire" are the victims of the post-war period when Britain's sacrifice of a million on the battlefield left thousands of attractive women without decent hopes of marriage.

Missed Romance
Now, they admit, they are older and romances have passed them by. The modern business world puts accent on youth to such an extent, leaders of the Over Thirty association explained, that many women find themselves too old even at 25. They read advertisements for sales people, models, chorus girls, clerks and beauty operators stipulating "under 30."

"It's a bit grim," said Miss Cecile Matheson of the International Council of Women, "when you remember that great artists and writers have said that woman's real beauty isn't attained until she reaches 30."

Miss G. A. Rees, manager of an employment exchange, said growing old for the majority of women means a life of disappointing things.

MAYOR TELLS OF TORNADO DAMAGE

Red Bay, Ala., Official Says Storm Veered to Sweep Path of Death

By J. T. BEASLEY
Mayor of Red Bay, Alabama
(Copyright, 1936, United Press)
RED BAY, Ala., April 6 (U.P.)—The tornado came last night with an awful roaring like a heavy freight train, it didn't strike the town full blast, but four people were killed when it hit near here.

A little while after 9 o'clock there was a dark heavy cloud that came down on the town. There was this heavy roar and a continual flash of lightning.

About half the people in town watched the storm. We thought at first it was going to miss the city entirely, then it turned and hit the north edge, damaging several buildings. Then it veered and we watched it hit where Mr. and Mrs. Frost and the two other people were killed.

While we were watching the storm all the lights went out. We were in complete darkness. I called the chief of police and other men in town and organized searching, rescue parties. We started to look for the injured and clearing away wreckage.

Home, Brown, Way
Mrs. Frost's home, which set up on a hill, had been completely blown away. The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Frost were found about 50 yards away from the house and about 50 yards from each other. The barn had burned. Some of the timber from the house had been blown down hill, and some had been blown backward. The tornado had struck with a twisting motion.

Down at the filling station we found the bodies of Mr. King and the boy. The station was demolished. Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Brooks, who ran the station, were hurt badly. They had managed to crawl out of the wreckage. We sent them to a hospital at Russellville.

Box, Sams
Mr. King and the boy had been crushed in the wreckage. The boy died this morning in the hospital. There are about 12 injured.

There are about 12 injured. We're still looking in the rural districts and bringing the wounded here and caring for the less seriously injured in private homes. The ones hurt real bad are being sent to the hospital.

Children are down all across the roads into the rural districts. There, but there may be a lot of them. There is no way of communicating with them. It will take time to break a way through all the places where the storm might have hit.

Houses Unroofed
About the only damage done by Red Bay's business district was the unroofing of houses. Some residences were torn down on the north edge of town.

It rained a flood all night. The property damage here will run about $200,000 or $300,000. We are just beginning to be able to tell how that daylight has come, how badly we are hurt.

TORNADO LEAVES SWATH OF DESTRUCTION

Leveling buildings in an area three blocks wide and two miles long, last week's tornado that ripped through five southern states, killing at least 40, took its heaviest toll in Cordle, Ga., where about 100 people were killed. The path of destruction cut through part of the city of 7000 inhabitants. At least 18 were known dead in Cordle, with 500 injured and 1000 homeless. Property damage exceeded $1,500,000. Next greatest loss was at Greensboro, N. C., where 12 were killed and property damage passed $1,000,000. Other deaths were reported in South Carolina, Florida, and Alabama.
