PAPER COMPANY MAKES FIGHT FOR CLEAR LAKE SITE

Least Suit Filed in Gooding County is New Chapter in Litigation Over Hazzard Property on Snake River.

Another chapter in the history of a long legal battle over the ownership of the Clear Lakes power site was recorded with the filing in district court this week of a suit by the Idaho Paper Company...

In effect, the action filed in court this week is simply the continuation by the power company of a fight being waged by the Syster for title to the site upon the grounds of public claim and superior right.

It seems that in 1912 Hazzard applied to the state for permission to appropriate water from certain unnamed spring tributary to Clear Lake and Snake river...

NEWS GATHERERS GET CLOSE-UP OF CHAS. LINDBERGH

Citizen Representative One of Eight Persons to Interview Intrepid Aviator on His Visit to Idaho Sunday at Boise.

"We don't desire much." This is what Col. Charles A. Lindbergh told representatives of the press at a conference in his suite in the Quwaye hotel last Sunday afternoon.

He had just been asked if in going to Butte, Mont., from Boise over the Sawtooth mountains, he expected to take a straight line.

It was the only time during the interview he used the now famous word "Wit" in designating his ship, the "Spirit of St. Louis," and himself.

Just how close Lindbergh looks how he acts, how tall he is, what are his mannerisms, how does his voice sound? These and a hundred other questions were asked by many persons.

Summed up, here is one person's conception of the most famous person in the world today...

News Gatherers Get Close-up of Chas. Lindbergh

hit bored with all the hullabaloo that accompanies most everything he does.

He is a mechanic. He is unassuming in public speaking, not feigning, serious. In many ways he is not what you want a hero to be; yet you would not change a single characteristic if you could, for herein lies his charm. He is a type. One could venture the opinion that there are thousands of young men all over the world who are just like him; just an ordinary appearing young man suddenly elevated to a pinnacle by a public craving to bestow upon him their admiration.

Throng Gathers

Due to misinformation regarding Mountain and Pacific time, he was an hour late arriving in Boise. His arrival was heralded by his pilot plane, bearing his mechanic and a representative of the department of commerce together with a pilot in a biplane.

Both the ships came in from the east over the foothills. After the pilot ship arrived the sky in the east was watched intently until a small black speck was noted. It was Lindy. Ten thousand persons had been standing two hours at dawn in the forest to witness his arrival at the Boise river and close to the Boise river.

Lindbergh descended to fly over the forest to the right of the Boise river in the extreme northeast part of the city. How he knew where to go is not explained, but he made a landing for the biplane. His gliding silver plane, the "Spirit of St. Louis," was majestic in the air as he circled the hospital and dipped over it.

Then he approached the airport, swooped down low to its entire length and rose again. He came down a second time, this time to land.

The crowd roared in welcome. Lindbergh was safe in Idaho.

Royal Greeting

He had permitted his plane to go to the far end of the runway. He had stepped down in the sand, staring at the ground. Fruitlessly he tried to turn the ship around and come back down the front to the landing field. He had climbed, lifted the tail of the biplane around, and again assuming his position at the throttle, taxied up the runway. He had landed in the order by the aid of a wife friend and a troop of national guardsmen. He was greeted by the highest officials in the state—the governor, the mayor and others. It was hot and the air was still, but the crowd of onlookers, thousands striving to get a closer view of him, posed mechanically for photographers.

Then he was hurried into a waiting machine. He took his big rubber aviation coat and carried a pair of gauntlet gloves. He was hatless and his hair was askew. His face was treated from exposure and he looked tired out. Ahead of him lay a three-mile course to the county fairgrounds on the west of the city. It was lined with 15,000 persons on both sides of the avenue, through which the open car proceeded slowly.

Lindy sat on the turned back-top with his feet on the back seat, with his big, mechanically all along the route.

Speaks at Fairgrounds

He addressed another 10,000 persons at the fairgrounds, being introduced by the governor. This time he was hurried back to the U. S. Veterans' hospital, so the soldier boy could view the great aviator. From here he was driven to his hotel to match his rest.

A group was gathered in the hotel lobby to see him approach. This is what he did: he stalked in, preceded by one of his party who apparently was attempting to run interference. When Lindy got to the door he was slowed. The crowd clapped and cheered, and he was frankly embarrassed, looking into the eyes of strangers who were staring at him. He felt for the elevator button, but with a start for the lift, he opened by winding stairway, and quick as a flash mounted the steps and was gone. One of the bellboys said he used the stairs to his suite of rooms on the third floor.

The newspaper folk followed him up and waited in the hall. Outside the word from Leo J. Falk, head of the welcoming committee, to say when they might enter. There was a representative of the Capital News, and a New York newspaper, both within the balance were men: two from the Statesman, and one from the Register, and the Pacific Slope News Agency, the Silver City Aviator, The Fair Record and The Citizen.

Col. Lindbergh and his three aides occupied a suite of five rooms on the third floor of the hotel. Outside the hand war playing. Mr. Keyser, representing the department of commerce, answered the door and Mr. Falk said in the hotel lobby.

Sandwiches and Milk
"Got to get him some sandwiches,"

"Will he eat them," said one. But just then they were told that Col. Lindbergh would see them for 10 minutes.

They were ushered into the reception room and greeted by Keyser, who said the colonel would be in 10 minutes. There a throng of newsmen appeared; but no Lindbergh. He was in an adjoining room, just completing his dressing. He could be seen rummaging through his suitcase for his tie, perhaps, then he had to paste down his hair some more. Mr. Keyser had asked the newspaper people to be seated in the reception room and there were when a smiling boy opened the door and immediately started shaking hands all around.

He was offered the easiest chair, but declined it, saying "Keep your seats, I'll stand," which he did through the entire conference, leaning back against a cushion with his arms akimbo. He wore a plain dark gray suit, soft shirt and collar, making no pretense at being "dressed up."

Colonel Lindbergh waited, and a lieutenant reported spoke up, "Well, there was a big crowd here today, but suppose it appears small compared with that at Paris?"

"Yes, there were quite a few people there, all right," he smiled, and immediately he had his small audience over.

and following him was Justice T. Bailey Lee. The chairman previously had announced the program would conclude promptly at 10. When Lindbergh was introduced to the crowd, he was given an ovation, the assembly rising to its feet.

The youthful officer entered immediately into the subject of aviation and "never deviated from that topic during the course of his remarks which lasted perhaps 12 minutes. He stood behind his chair, holding onto it with his hands which moved nervously as the young man urged public patronage of air mail, support for landing fields and the stimulation of aviation generally.

As the conclusion of his talk, he shook hands with those nearest him, vanded through the crowd which closed in quickly, and entering private elevators, he was gone.

Buick for 1928 introduces a higher standard of beauty and luxury than the world has ever known. Buick interiors are as modish as exquisite drawing-rooms—as harmoniously colored—and as comfortable. Buick's new Fisher bodies are low-swinging without any loss of head-room or road-clearance.

And so, down to the smallest detail of construction, wherever refinements could be made, Buick made them. Again Buick has improved upon Buick. Again the standard for the year is set.

SEED GROWERS PLAN TO EXHIBIT

Three Big Shows to Take Place Late This Year, of Interest to Idaho.

Idaho seed growers are already looking ahead to the season's three big shows: the Pacific International at Portland, October 29 to November 6; the International Grain and Hay show at Chicago on November 23 to 25; and the state seed show at Malad, December 14 to 16.

Gen. state seed has in the past played prominent parts in the two national shows and this year's premium output of alfalfa, clover, potato, grains and other seed is being produced with the best of care. It will attract more of the spotlight than ever before.

"With the crop prospects what they are, Idaho growers should make the best showing that has ever been made," declares C. H. Ahnes, Idaho state seed commissioner.

Growers have begun to select their prize seed and prepare their exhibits early this year, according to Mr. Ahnes. Seed dealers and county agents are cooperating in the work. Dealers and members of the university extension staff have been asked to do the best cooperation in an effort to make this year's display the best ever, and the most complete representative of Idaho's seed sections.

A feature of the state's showings will be an educational exhibit of grades of Idaho products. The exhibit, which is to be prepared by the state's service, will be sent both to Portland and Chicago and then shown at Malad.

Premium lists for the three shows featuring seeds may be obtained from the office of the seed commissioner in Boise.

Idaho Is Seventh State in Wool Clip

Idaho again ranks seventh among the 42 western sheep states in volume of wool products, it is indicated by the 1927 summary of production of states just issued by the department of agriculture. With her stock sheep population at the beginning of the year about 1,000,000 in excess of that at the first of 1926, Idaho was in a favorable position to climb higher in the ranking of states, but a serious drop in average fleece weight for 1927 minimized the possible contribution of the increased sheep numbers.

This year Idaho produced 14,202,000 pounds of wool at 16.00 cents 8.5 pounds per fleece. Last year the state's wool clip amounted to 14,607,000 pounds, an average of 8.0 pounds per fleece. The state lost this year seven-tenths of a pound of wool from each of the 1,865,000 stock sheep reported for the first of the year. Last year Idaho entered the season with a stock sheep totaling 1,720,000 head.

At the beginning of 1927, breeding ewes in Idaho totaled 1,414,000 head, or 78.8 per cent of all stock sheep. At the corresponding period in 1926 breeding ewes numbered 1,415,000 head or 82.3 per cent of stock sheep.

Idaho suffered the heaviest decline in sheep numbers of any western wool producing state. All states but Texas, Arizona and California showed declines in average fleece weight, due to unfavorable conditions during early spring and summer.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8.—A feeling has grown in the past few months that a shortage in the cattle supply throughout the country is imminent. It is true that during the next several months the prospects are very favorable to the industry but surveys do not bear out that any acute shortage is going to be experienced and the department of agriculture gives the opinion that any expansion is not justified any expansion in breeding herds.

The receipts of cattle and calves this fall are anticipated to be less than in the past several years, as the number of cattle throughout the country has decreased some ten million head of late years. However, the curtailment of the marketing of cattle during the next few months may be attributed, in part at least, to the holding back of considerable breeding stock to replenish the herds in the range states.

cedure of marketing temporarily as it has caused a rush of the country to fill cattle requirements, a tendency on the part of the buyers which of course, does not serve to stabilize marketing conditions.

The situation will iron itself out and if the cattle movement is allowed to proceed through its natural outlets there would appear to be nothing but a healthy condition in the industry with an adequate supply to fill the demand which, of course, is a satisfactory situation both from the standpoint of the packer, producer and consumer.

TWIN FALLS COUNTY FAIR

Nothing but praise is being heard for the annual Twin Falls County fair in session this week at Filer.

The exhibits in each department are all up to standard and in many instances excel those of any previous year; the attendance to date has been exceedingly gratifying and the exposition as a whole is one of merit and deserving of liberal patronage on the part of all residents of southern Idaho, if not in the state.

The fact is: the Twin Falls County fair is now the leading agricultural show in the Gem state, and as such has a responsibility and an obligation to keep it so.

That it is fulfilling this sphere is due in a large measure to the fact that the management has been able to secure a commendable spirit of cooperation from the various interests in the county and outside it.

It is not only a pleasure but an inspiration and education to go to the fair. If you are too busy to go in the day time, you should go in the evening and help swell the attendance, for after all the thing that makes a fair is "people."

FARM RELIEF WILL COME

In the long haul farm relief possibly will come from, what a few years ago would have been considered an unexpected source: "The coming congress may pass a farm relief bill and the president may sign it, thus giving agriculture the federal aid so long sought. However, there has been another federal factor at work since 1914 when the Smith-Lever act went through, from which we are just now beginning to obtain results.

In fact, the Smith-Lever act made possible a demonstration of the Bible truism, "a little child shall lead them." The Smith-Lever act gave power to the department of agriculture to put into effect extension work in agriculture and home economics on farms by cooperating with state agriculture colleges.

In other words—it made possible our boy and girl farm clubs. This year there are 510,365 young people enrolled in federally controlled farm club work. It is needless to state here how these club members function. We all know of the pig, cow, poultry, garden, forestry, cooking, sanitation and health club members and their activities. We all know that our boys and girls can enter this clubwork and competition only under the direction of trained local federal agents. We know that they are taught to do all things agriculturally by newest and most scientific methods.

Age limitations for farm club entry is 10 to 18 years. Therefore, every year now a new class is graduating into active scientific work and the standard of our agriculture effort becomes higher and higher. Within the lapse of 10 years our agricultural leaders will mostly be graduates of this intensive vocational training system. They will have "learned by doing." They will know how to figure costs. Agriculture will be on a business basis and making money, as it should have been through all the years.

YOUR WEIGHT—BEWARE.

Beware of the tables of "normal weight," says Dr. Leonard Williams of New York. Those tables tell you that a man of certain height weighs normally 147 pounds at twenty-five, and at fifty, 162 pounds. It is a dangerous falsehood. A man should always weigh less at fifty than at twenty-five. If he does not, he will die sooner than he must die.

One pound or two pounds added to the weight on a horse's back will make him lose a race. Imagine the handicapper put on an old heavy, old tuxedo and old kidneys, by adding twenty or twenty-five pounds of fat at fifty. Dr. Williams says you find out what your so-called "normal weight" is, then reduce twenty pounds below it. Weight is fat, displacing muscle, which connects on the heart as well as at the abdomen.

Men old in years and great in intellectual power, Voltaire, Pope Leo, Von Moltke, were almost living skeletons, all at least twenty to thirty per cent below what would be called "normal weight." Every one of us could live well and longer on half of what he eats now.

CHAMPIONS

In Iowa a farmer had recently won a corn-husking championship, husking more than 28 bushels of corn in 80 minutes, beating his nearest competitor by more than two bushels. At Eureka, Kans., Joe Loebel was declared champion mail distributor, making a record of 99.8 in a possible-100. Mr. Loebel "threw 502-pounds" of mail, making-but-one-mistake. And the mistake was due to bad writing.

But you will never interest the public in labor championships as you do in prize fighting, baseball and running championships. Athletic achievement is in the blood of the race, inherited from our ancestors through hundreds of thousands of years. We run, did hunt because we like to. We husk corn, distribute letters, dig ditches because we must. There is a big difference.

September is "the month" when the "saturation" point is reached in bathing suits.

If religion could be put on the automobile basis—with a new model every fall—the evolutionists might be quieted.

Your Uncle Sam is glad that cold stormy weather is coming on—which will put a stop to these Atlantic and Pacific air hops.

It cost New York $50,000 to welcome Lindbergh home. We'll bet Lindy would have settled for 25 cents on the dollar—and called it a good bargain.

THESE PIONEERS (Shoshone Journal).

Next week at Albion, Idaho, there will be held another of the annual reunions of the pioneer settlers of this part of Idaho. The oldest settlers are new-timers, who came in to settle an unknown and untried region, will compile and trade bits of bygone romance and live, not exciting, yet unburied days of old.

These pioneer events will always be kept up, for pioneering is a thing associated with all progress such as has been made in Idaho since its birth and such will continue to be made. The settlers who came into the never irrigated projects will one day be pioneers, and in the light of the better conditions of 40 years hence will be entitled to receive honors from those about them.

But the first pioneers are becoming few in number and there can not be many more reunions of the men who made the first wagon trails through the brush and turned the first soil and built the first little dams in the creeks for irrigation. Their annual reunions are important to Idaho history. They tend to revive and keep alive the true and picturesque stories of the building of a wonderful empire. The stories they now tell will be taken up and carried on by the apprentice pioneers who will stage the pioneer gatherings to come. It is to be hoped that some of the original pioneers are putting down the stories of their experiences in written form.

It is often stated complainingly that these real discoverers and leaders of the way to the fertile plains have no proper recognition. They have passed on to the next world and their names are forgotten. Yet one of the things that the pioneers of Idaho have done is to put down the stories of their experiences in written form.

WOOD RIVER VALLEY (Herald Miner). Wood River valley is watching with interest the construction of the Rim-to-Rim bridge over the Snake between Jerome and Twin Falls. It is such a vital link in the Sawtooth highway, destined to be the main artery of auto travel from Idaho to Montana, down through Idaho to Wells, Nevada, and on to the coast. Editor Nims of the News of Jerome, after a visit to the Rim-to-Rim bridge, says that the bridge will give a good idea of the magnitude of this undertaking. The bridge is over 1,400 feet long; it is 476 feet above the water in the river below; the floor of the bridge from center span to 800 feet long from center to center of the towers; 3,000 tons of steel were used in the bridge.

From a distance the bridge looks like a fragile spider web across the mighty chasm. It is a wonderful work connecting two wonderful terraced farming areas. It is in monument to the ingenuity and the indomitable energy of man. It is scheduled to be ready for public travel October 1.

IDAHO'S LATENT RESOURCES (Idaho Falls Times-Register).

A superficial survey of the state by members of the faculty of the state university school of mines and the state geologist, brings attention to the fact that the state is rich in latent resources.

The matter of the mineralized hot water springs of the state is one which will in time bring to the state untold publicity and wealth. The waters of the springs of the state, situated as they are in the midst of scenic attractions and a climatic condition far superior to anything that Europe possesses, will in time prove to be great assets.

The omnipotence of water is represented in these resources and as time goes on and the facts become better understood the millions which now flow Europe, spent by Americans seeking health and recreation, will be invested in Idaho.

The survey develops facts relative to untold wealth in natural resources in minerals, including stores of varying value for building purposes, to the stores of semi-precious value, and untold tons of rock which can be converted into cement and road building material.

The survey develops the fact that there are great possibilities of gas, oil, coal and so far unexplored areas rich possibilities for mineral development in gold, silver, lead, copper and other minerals of a like nature.

It is hardly possible that the Idahoan living today will see the full development of these resources. It will take necessary to make them valuable. The very fact that they are practically inaccessible, far removed from transportation and hard far back in the mountains makes their development a matter for generations to come.

The fact that the lack of demand makes these resources of comparatively little value at the present time, they are present and that time and need will develop them into resources of great value and some of those will be taken from the fact that opportunities and the attractions which are to a certain degree not available today.

Idaho Contributed Big Federal Tax

WASHINGTON.—The state of Idaho contributed $1,717,778 in internal revenue tax the past year to your Uncle Sam.

The total internal revenue tax collected by the United States reached $2,805,050,120, amounting to 4.7 per cent collected on the sale of tobacco, excise taxes in particular, shows a great increase. The increase in the tax on playing cards was the next big item of increase, showing that cigar smoking and card playing are much more a matter of habit among American people than a year ago.

Card playing by women accompanied by cigar smoking is given as one of the reasons for the large increase of taxes on these two items. The state of New York led the nation in the amount of taxes paid with Pennsylvania second and Illinois third. These three states have a heavy urban population.

Carding led in western states with $132,488,418; Oregon paid $2,731,706; Utah, $328,101; Washington $12,864,424; Montana $4,331,690; and Wyoming paid $1,984,707.

Statistics—If all the serial stories were placed end to end in this world, they would have to be contained in the next Kansas City Times.

Lindbergh Circles Over City Sunday and Drops Message

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Sunday afternoon, en route to Boise from Salt Lake City, was prevailed upon to answer from his regular course and fly over Twin Falls. He dropped a message from the air, it falling at the corner of Shoshone street and Main's avenue.
Due to a misunderstanding regarding Mountain and Pacific time, he was late in arriving. This together with the fact that a mail plane flew over at about the time Lindby was scheduled, resulted in some confusion and prevented a large number of persons from viewing the "Spirit of St. Louis."

HERE IS THE MESSAGE
To the City of Twin Falls,
Alford the "Spirit of St. Louis,"
On Tour:
Greetings: Because of the limited time and the extensive itinerary of the tour of the United States now in progress to encourage popular interest in aeronautics it is impossible for the "Spirit of St. Louis" to land in your city.
This message from the air, however, is apt to you to express our sincere appreciation of your interest in the tour and in the promotion of commercial flying.
