THE SUGAR BEET FORECAST OF 1927

Early in the spring of 1927, it was forecasted that a good beet year was in store for Twin Falls, North Side and Mindoko projects. This forecast was issued by Walter Carter, in charge of the white-fly investigations at Twin Falls, in the form of a circular letter supplemented by addresses to interested groups of farmers.

Since the beet crop is now almost harvested it is possible to check up on this forecast with a view to estimating its success or failure. One or two points may be borne in mind at this time. The first is that the forecast was for a good beet year; the second that isolated cases of damaged beets were to be expected since that had always happened. Both these points have been borne out but fortunately the forecast for a good beet year has been fully substantiated. What little damage occurred this year was in fields very close to the desert edge; this is to be expected, but there are numerous cases of fields close to the abandoned lands where the white-fly breeds that made excellent yields. The reason is to be found in the fact that these fields were planted early and were given excellent care throughout their entire growing period. This matter of early planting and good care has received much support this year. Some fly will appear sometime during the summer every good beet year but the grower who has given his beets a fair chance need not worry about them.

The results this year, indicating as they do, the highest average yield in the Twin Falls tract, fully support the forecast as given out only this spring. This is most encouraging but one or two points should be remembered. One is, that forecasting is simply offered as an aid to the farmer in helping him to decide, whether or not the conditions are favorable for a good beet year. Forecasting is not a substitute for good farming nor is it a control for the insect. No crop will give good results if given poor care, especially at the start, and this is especially true of beets.

Studies on the fly are being continued and the success of the forecast this year encourages the workers on the problem to believe that the studies will still further improve their chances of "hitting to right" so that farmers may be correctly informed as to what the prospects are.

FIFTY-FIFTY

One year from today the 1928 presidential history will be a thing of the past.

If but 50 per cent of our people were enough interested in government to go to the polls in our next national election, may it not be due in large measure to the fact that leadership is grasped by men of babbling tongues rather than by those of functioning brains? It was not always so in America. It has never been so much so as today. And it is due to one of two reasons—to the inability of the leaders to think, or to a moral cowardice which persuades them to conceal their thoughts.

Men are seeking the Presidential nomination—as leaders of you please—on vital issues, possibly referred to lead or to even think aloud. This means an utter lack of essential qualities; for if they have no ideas or plans they are not fit, and if they have ideas they dare not utter they are unfit. They lack either the mental capacity or the moral qualities for which the mass of the people are awaiting and thus far in vain.

Little wonder that 50 per cent of the people are too cynical or indifferent to vote when the issues that vitally concern millions, the success of our institutions and the good of America are utterly ignored by the very men who inspire to the leadership of the Nation.

Let the candidates remove the matters and their rubber heels, and the center of the day when statesmen were leaders and thinkers, speak out and tell us where they stand on the Farm problem, Prohibition, Immigration, Flood Relief, Tariff, etc.

Then will the Presidential campaign mean a real debate to which the public interest will respond.

LISTENING EASY

Sooner or later national organizations will learn that a real grievance or issue cannot be brought into fact. It is almost an impossibility—because, sooner or later it will assert itself here or there—and maybe in a new dress not quite as mild as its original form. All of this has to do with the action of the American Bankers Association records, refusing a place on its convention program for a discussion of the farm problem. It was hardly a wise decision.

There is no more vital or important question before the nation today than our farm problem—and of a financial nature too. Millions of people are being kept in a state of misery, and the most basic of the nation's interests.

What if the spokesmen of the banker group interested in agricultural relief had submitted a few unbiased theories or unjust attacks upon the bankers? Isn't it always better to destroy such reasoning in the arena of open debate than to give them extended life by refusing a hearing.

Over the long haul the Bankers will find that through talking things over with the farmer they will come to understand each other better.

Twin Falls Irrigation Project

A Series of Historical Sketches and Happenings in the Early Days of Idaho

By C. S. WALGMOTT
After the completion of the south side Twin Falls irrigation district and all the land was sold, I. B. Perrine was anxious to go ahead with the Twin Falls north side district.

I returned to Chicago where I met my old friend H. L. Hollister and laid the matter before him. He told me he had strong financial friends in Pittsburgh who owned and controlled the American Water Works & Guarantee Co.

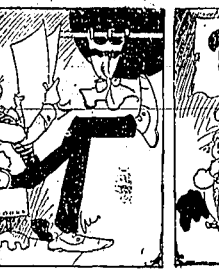

When we went before the state land board of Idaho we found a Mr. King of the Big Wood River Irrigation Company asking for 60,000 acres of land lying south of Gooding and offering to water it under the Carey land act for $40 per acre.

The next day the proposition was laid before the board and quickly adjusted. I'm thinking that the matter stroke had been made. King was allowed 60,000 acres known as the Big Wood River company and the Kuhns were allowed what is known as the North Side Twin Falls Land and Water company, all under the Carey land act.

The public was impatient to procure land on the North Side. Bidders who could not bid sold contracts on the Twin Falls South Side, now saw their mistake and scrambled for North Side contracts.

After construction was under way, there was an opening at Jerome and sold $3,000,000 worth of land during the first three days of the sale.

Then they had to back the government in the North Side Twin Falls Irrigation project.

"Electricity"

The Foe of Drudgery

Says Mrs. John D. Sherman
President General Federation of Women's Clubs
"Electrically equipped homes mean happier and more healthful homes. The cost of electrically operated labor reduction devices is offset many times by the saving, the increased efficiency, the protection to health and the contribution to the general well-being of the family of such devices."

The constructive efforts of the forward-looking electric power companies of the United States have released an ever-increasing number of women from the exacting duties of the household to more congenial and interesting pursuits of life. Every new electrical invention finds an abundance of power ready to serve it. Through the enterprise of these companies, inspired by individual initiative, electric power plants and service facilities are being constructed five years in advance of consumer demand. Since 1900, the capacity of these plants has been doubled every five years. Keenly alert to their social obligations, these electric power companies have not been content to rest on the expansion of their facilities. The most expert, highly skilled and highly trained technical personnel in the whole field of industry is working for the betterment of electrical service and the reduction of its cost. As a result of this sane, steadfastness, the average home today enjoys the comforts and conveniences of electricity at a cost of only a few cents per day. Operating under the American principle of individual initiative, and working in the interests of the public, these specialists in science, engineering, finance and administration constitute one of society's greatest forces in the promotion of a freer, more enlightened and abundant life. In the continued support of this principle lies America's assurance of all that makes for progress, prosperity and cultural opportunity.

Air Hay Deal in Gooding Court

A deal in hay was aired in the first court last week, the case being the First National Bank of Gooding vs. W. Peterson, a Twin Falls sheepman. He made no payment and then, some time ago, he filed a suit against the bank, claiming that the hay was not his and that he was being held liable for it.

WHO'S GUILTY?

True to their policy of presenting something entirely different each time, the Hillman Stock company, on their return to the "Captain Theatre" next Thursday night, will present a play that is a complete departure from anything they have so far offered in their repertoire. It is a study in the character of "Who's Guilty?" The play had a long and successful run in New York City and is being produced by the Hillman company for the first time at fifty cent prices. The members of the cast are especially well suited to their respective parts and the ladies of the company will wear to advantage some beautiful gowns. The story of "Who's Guilty?" is a study in the character of "Who's Guilty?"
