BY ANDY HAMMER
CHAMPION KNOCKER OF IDAHO

Pres. of the Peasants' Union; Vice Pres. of the Idaho Distiller; Club; Secy. of the Husband's Protective Assn.; Treas. of the Calamity Howlers' Society; Woe-Jag Specialist

These tooth chattering days would try the patience of Job & his mother-in-law! Everything goes wrong. Frost on the windows, wind in the cracks, steam on your glasses, sap on your nose, pigs squealing, calves bawling, kittens mewling & about every critter on the place trying to find a warm spot.

Ma Hammer is about the only piece of furniture on our place that cold weather don't seem to get a rise out of.

These cold windy mornings she gets up at 4:30 & builds the fires & does her outside chores before she gets breakfast. Long before daylight she carries 4 big candy buckets of warm-separated milk to the hogs. I can tell the minute she feeds them for they stop squealing long enough for me to get 2 sleep again.

Unless Ma gets careless & lets a door slam or rattles the dishes-2-much-1-manage-2-sleep-then-until she calls me for breakfast & I jump right up so as not to interfere with her program of work. She always rather keep busy winter or summer but I do most of my hard work in the summer time & ease up a bit when the weather gets nippy.

Late Goodnight stopped in 2 chatter awhile as he went by yesterday & he said that some pigeon-toed mugwumps were figuring on putting water on the Murtaugh tract east of Hansen.

Well, that bit of frost-bitten information took all the slack out of my suspenders for that day.

The wise bird that said "there's a fool born every minute" forgot 2 add that as long-as it is against the law 2 kill 'em that we will have 2 put up with their insane notions.

Surely folks will wake-up & knock that fool project in the head because there's 2 much improved land for folks 2 pay taxes on now! The more taxes the county collects the more there is 2 spend.

The only way 2 prevent farm folks from getting 2 prosperous is 2 cultivate less land & raise the tax rate.

Can't the poor fools see that the more cultivated land there is in the county the lower it makes each one's taxes?

Taxes were invented 2 keep hayseeds from having enough surplus cash on hand 2 give them town notions.

I've notified lately that when the first little spasm of prosperity hits a farm house that about the first thing they do is 2 turn up their nose at the family tooth brush & 2 blow their noses on a handkerchief.

Digest of Proceedings of National Grange

The 61st annual session of the National Grange, just held at Cleveland, Ohio, attracted the attention of the entire nation and was unquestionably the largest convention of farm people ever held in the United States. It was marked by great enthusiasm, and reports of the rising tide of Grange growth and accomplishment were brought from every state while the delegates of the Grange session of many stirring plenary questions was followed by ringing declarations of Grange policy which instantly challenge national attention.

Twenty-eight Grange states were represented at the Cleveland session by voting delegates, including those from the Pacific coast and the Atlantic seaboard, and the great farm states of the Central West, and although each delegate brought his local viewpoint on public questions, the Cleveland session of 10 days was characterized by remarkable harmony and agreement throughout, and nearly every declaration of Grange policy—though often reached only after long and thorough discussion—was enthusiastically passed by well-nigh unanimous vote. The program thus adopted at Cleveland will now be carried out at the Grange station, and be worked out in the 8000 subordinates which comprise this great leadership, and has expressed itself in clear and plain language that there will be much interest to know where the Grange stands on the live questions of the day. The following summary tells the story at a glance:

Principle Grange Declaration: "The National Grange reaffirms its advocacy of the exact fulfillment plan for practical farm relief, as effective, workable and without the necessity for setting up costly administrative machinery; the plan being capable of independent application or in combination with other sound remedies; and the Grange declares its readiness to cooperate with any other group or organization in bringing about immediate relief."

1. The National Grange declares that the time has come when tax relief for an overburdened people must be found, especially for the farm and home owners of the United States; a portion of income and inheritance taxes, to be distributed for educational and other sound purposes; opposes reduction in income taxes at the present time; and county and local expenditures until such taxes are materially lowered.

2. The National Grange declares the preservation of the cooperative features of the Federal provision for long-time investment for permanent development projects by farm cooperatives.

3. The National Grange demands a vigorous enforcement of the Edictum Amendment and the Volstead Act; pledges its entire energies in behalf of such enforcement measures at the present situation; and favors strict enforcement for all violators in narcotics.

4. The National Grange declares its continued support of the direct primary and will vigorously resist the efforts now being made in various sections of the country to introduce a long-time amendment.

5. The National Grange votes to further expenditure of Federal funds for irrigation—and reclamation projects so long as the agricultural products necessary to depress the selling price of farm products.

ARCHIE answered slowly, "I don't know much about your understanding of potash. You're probably quite ignorant in that particular. That's news to you, isn't it?"
"Most astonishing news!"
"And now I'll prepare you a little for what I prefer you should hear from Isabel—I got it from Ruth. You're not quite finished with that potato-bush-in-the-Condage house. It seems to be reboring round the world!"

of teaching them that these potatoes were different from the ordinary thing; that they were the finest they had ever seen; that they were the best they had ever seen; that they were the best they had ever seen. The Governor moved toward her quickly. Archie saw her lift her head suddenly, and her lips parted as though she was about to make an outburst. Then the Governor looked at her, and she said, "I have a very dear friend who I must introduce to you. Oh, Isabel!"
Following her gaze he was glad of the slight pressure of her hand on his arm. There at last was something tangible in a world that looked toward chaos. For it was Isabel Perry who came at the sound of Ruth's voice.

Archie answered slowly, "I don't know much about your understanding of potash. You're probably quite ignorant in that particular. That's news to you, isn't it?"
"Most astonishing news!"
"And now I'll prepare you a little for what I prefer you should hear from Isabel—I got it from Ruth. You're not quite finished with that potato-bush-in-the-Condage house. It seems to be reboring round the world!"

E. E. CALVIN

This is the age of modern business system and super-efficiency. The great industrial machinery moves confidently and safely forward handling a volume of business running into billions based upon information accurately assembled and instantly available.

Mammoth organizations invest millions in equipment and operating expenses based upon cross-section data from the files of expert statisticians.

At the noon luncheon of the Central Western Advisory Board in Twin Falls last week, E. E. Calvin, vice-president of the Union Pacific Railroad system, was one of the principal speakers.

His remarks were couched in well chosen, simple language. His hearing was that of a man confident of his ground, based upon personal knowledge of the subject in hand. His attitude was that of a man with his hand upon the shoulder of a friend talking in personal confidence of intimate matters.

The veteran railroad executive gave his hearers an entirely new slant on the human factors which govern the affairs of one of the world's greatest railway systems. The speaker gave us a cross-section of the policy of the Union Pacific Railroad company in its Idaho program of development.

Mr. Calvin made two astounding statements. First, that his company had spent a million dollars more in permanent improvements and extension work in Idaho during the last five year period than the system had earned in the state during the same time. Second, that the reason for pursuing such a liberal policy of service and development was because of the fact that the company had no competition and had a complete monopoly of railroad transportation in Southern Idaho.

The swift impact of these two statements was akin to a vicious left swing to the solar plexus followed by a deadly right uppercut to the jaw, administered by Gene Tanney. It simply knocked all the fight out of the 300 dinner guests, as far as the attitude of E. E. Calvin and his great company toward Idaho is concerned.

One's first impulse might have been to question the truth of these two statements. Two things, however, made this impossible. First, the staid integrity of the man who gave utterance to the statements; and second, the fact that the vice president of a great transportation system dare not risk the deadly reception of any such unqualified statements that were not based on easily proven facts.

Mr. Calvin not only gave us a cross-section of the intimate policies of his company, but unconsciously gave his audience a cross-section of his own soul.

The day had been full of speeches of bumper crops, mammoth tonnage, trainload movements and high-powered efficiency. Mr. Calvin, in his time Scotch, gentlemanly style turned his closing remarks from the compilation of millions to a deeper emotion in his soul that claimed his thoughts.

He remembered the old friend of more than a quarter of a century whose vision made possible the birth and development of the Twinland Empire.

The eyes of the speaker were dimmed a bit and there was an added accent of pathos in his voice as he told of the time in the far-zone yesterdays when Bert Perrine stood with him on the banks of the Snake river, where the present Milner dam is located and pointed out across the barren sage brush desert the course of canals and ditches that could transform the gringing waste into an undulating oasis of habitation and productivity.

Mr. Calvin with characteristic Scotch precaution pondered the matter but the vision and faith of the man at his side prevailed. Together they fled in the water that has crossed the habitation of minkies and coyotes into the richest area of agricultural production on the American continent.

The grind of the years with its gripping problems of vast construction, the juggling with steel, tunnels, cuts and fills and attendant financing problems had not hardened the soul of the master builder. The cross-section of the humanity of the man out-climaxed the cross-section of one of earth's greatest transportation corporations.

The sturdy Scotch railroad executive while recounting the exploits of his great corporation and telling of the enormous tonnage records of 1927 did not forget to pay tribute to the brother man and friend, I. B. Perrine, the father of the Twinland Empire, whose vision redeemed a barren waste.

How refreshing in these days of urge and superachievement to get a glimpse of the souls of men who direct the destiny of great industrial agencies.

The Union Pacific can make no greater inroad upon public confidence than to keep men like E. E. Calvin at the helm.

The author, Rupert Hughes, is still "digging up the dirt" on George Washington—which no doubt is exactly what he would actually be doing if George were alive.

County Agent Annual Report Contains Valuable Statistics

Poultry Husbandry
Better management of poultry flocks is essential if poultry are to be successful. Two poultry schools were held in the county and one turkey specialist, went into detail of all the phases of poultry work. 364 pounds of turkey were sold. Not only were better methods of feeding used as a result of this work but over 300 hundred broods were raised and many laying flocks reformed or newly built according to the plans authorized by the Extension specialists.

Breeding
The seal here was to build up the flocks of the county through the selection of breeds. It is a point that the busy chick requirements of the county could be taken care of from accredited stock, free from bacillary white diarrhea.

Fifty-three flocks, comprising over 700 birds, were finally selected and accredited, each bird having been subjected to the blood test. This work was done by John T. MacIntyre, Ass't Extension Poultryman.

At each place many neighbors were invited to watch the work and learn the methods of culling, mating and blood-testing so that a regular demonstration developed.

The county now boasts some of the best flocks of chickens in the country, being of excellent strain, strong, vigorous birds with no disease.
Marketing
Membership in this district of the Idaho Egg Producers Association has grown steadily since the cannelling-station and processing plant was located at Twin Falls. The local Chamber of Commerce offered a grant for one year as an inducement for so locating the plant here. The low price of eggs sold on the outside of the association always did bring me members into it.

The local branch of the Turkey Growers Marketing Association also increased from 36 to 61 in 1927. Over 32,000 pounds of turkey were handled during the holidays at an estimated saving of $40,000.

Dairy Husbandry
The Twin Falls County Dairyman's association, with which the agent still has contact, grew from a membership of 400 in 1926 to over 600 in 1927. 735,644 pounds of butterfat were delivered to the Cooperative Creamery at Jerome by the patrons from this side. Much credit is due Mr. Harry Nelson, field man, for his increase in the association's business. From funds recently gathered by Mr. Nelson the association will save something like $21,000 on the amount of product handled this year.

Production Records
The Pioneer Caw Testing Association was reorganized an August last. Mr. H. Four, field dairyman, was present at the annual meeting. The following officers were elected: John Goff, president; J. B. Crawford, vice-president; L. J. Tenacknick, secretary-treasurer; C. E. McClain and A. J. Joseph, directors.

This is the oldest cow testing association in the state and operates very smoothly and efficiently.

Excursions and Schools
The county has some of the best herds of cattle in the northwest and the breeders are very keen men so that many rather deep discussions occurred.

Sheep Flocks
The farmers in the county are getting more farm flocks of sheep than ever before. This has been urged by the Extension Service, as heretofore great amounts of feed has gone to waste, not only in the fields but along ditch banks and coulees that otherwise could be utilized by sheep with profit to the farmer. A definite means of marketing the lambs presented itself before this year. Each farmer with only a few lambs had to depend upon the local buyer to dispose of his surplus.

county agent, was called upon to explain this method of shipping at county. Mr. Lincoln, Extension Agent, Hoffer Bull and Kull. Thirty farmers signed up their lambs at these meetings and the place was put in operation. Six carloads of sheep comprising 1640 head were shipped—from these points with an estimated saving of $22,000 over what could be obtained locally. The demonstration proved very successful and from the enquiries coming to the office every one seems to have heard about it. It is planned to form a county wide livestock shipping association this winter.

The Livestock Situation

Pertinent Farm Facts for Twinland Empire Breeders

BEEF INDUSTRY WINS
At last, the beef cattle industry is "up dog." After six years of depressed prices and liquidation of herds, prosperity has arrived for these fortunate enough to stay in the business.

The common denominator of prosperity in any branch of agriculture is price. The present Chicago top of $18.06 for prime steers, the highest in seven years. That figure compares with the top of $14.35 in 1926, with $12.50 in 1921, when the depression was at its worst, and with $21.60 in 1919, the peak for all time.

The price of good native beef steers averaged $13.60 in October, 1927, compared with $9.40 a year ago, and $8.30 in October, 1921. A broader index of prices is afforded by the average price paid to producers throughout the country for beef cattle, including all grades, losses and reserves. The last year of the depression period was 1922, in December, 1921, when the average price for native beef was $7.56 in October, 1921, an advance of 63 per cent.

With the exception of the last month or two, it is not easy to produce evidence of a marked decline in the supply of beef. The average for the month of December of the rise in prices compared with a few years ago. In the first eight months of 1927 the quantity of beef from cattle slaughtered under federal inspection was five per cent less than last year, but was equal to the average in the last three years. In September the number of head slaughtered was 15 per cent less than a year previous and similar or will show a decrease occurred in October. In

In addition to the decline in numbers, weights were lighter and the total supply of beef in these two months may have been as much as 20 per cent less than in 1926.

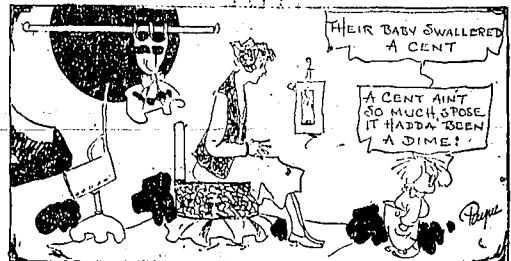

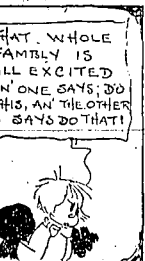

Up to the end of October, the quantity of beef from cattle slaughtered in any branch of agriculture probably was eight per cent less than last year. But last year's inspected output was the largest since 1918 and inspected and inspected slaughter combined was the largest on record.

A decline in market receipts of cattle was an inevitable consequence of the over-marketing of the last few years. The question was just when it would appear and how drastic it would be. For several years, more cattle have been marketed than had previously been produced. We have been slaughtering 14 to 15 million head and retailing only 12 to 13 million head.

In the last few years, the cattle population has declined about 10 million head. Since the number of head marketed has remained unchanged, it is a logical inference that the shrinkage was in cattle kept primarily for beef.

Looking ahead into 1928, the market supply of beef is almost sure to be less than in 1927. The number of head marketed in the first several months, forecasting monthly receipts of fed cattle in the next six months, is indicating a continuation on a high level, with western producers are likely to recover their losses and again bring young cattle and calves resulting in a diminished supply during the 1928 grass cattle season. Total slaughter is similar or will show a decrease occurred in October. In
