

Idaho Is Good Enough for Me

Many Brigas Syster of Clear Lakes Resort in Snake River Canyon, North of Buhl, Contributes to Idaho Citizen Readers This Bit of Interesting Local History

Praise for Perrine and Others

During the time of the survey of the south side, I met Mr. Perrine, Mr. Milner, P. S. A. Bickel, Mr. Hulletter, and many other men of note from local note during the time of the establishment of the Twin Falls tract. I distinctly recollect the earnestness with which each and every one of them acted his part.

I believe the public has never known of the stupendous load which they labored, or have the knowledge of half the honor due Mr. Perrine in the wonderful work which he has accomplished through sheer conviction, pluck, indefatigability, and unswerving purpose. Without since belief in the country such as has displayed unswerving, without his zeal, and energy, certainly the great work of claiming this part of Idaho's desert could not have been accomplished so quickly—perhaps not to this day. I have come to think of him as the father of the survey act, that law which means so much for the desert, and which means the Twin Falls tract in particular, and its best example.

It was because of my personal faith in Idaho that I came to Clear Lakes. Although we have had many ups and downs during its possession, we are still sticking, still believing in it one of the finest and most beautiful of its wonderful state, still hoping to make it a haven for tired people who may come here and enjoy a restful day within the shade of its 100-foot-high poplars, or the crystal pure waters of the lake.

Mr. Syster has cattle and sheep upon the place for a great many years—sometimes, more than could be properly cared for, but, at such times, he sells them off and begins to re-build his herds. At present, he has a small herd of purebred shorthorns and is looking forward to the time when the demand for purebred stock may be greater and the price better.

The Change Time Has Wrought

As I sit here alone writing these lines, I cannot avoid contrasting the present care-free days with those others—my first days in the Snake River valley. What a change time has wrought! Then, there was scarcely anything for the eye but the blue haze of Heaven above, the brown earth below, the rims of the canyon north and south, and a vista of the river east and west, a vast jumble of lava all around. Nothing for the ear but the murmur of the river, which, at high water, would burst into a roaring crescendo-diminishing in intoning to the murmur of the rapids. Nothing in the way of bird life but carrion birds—no song birds of any kind until after the trees were planted and had attained a considerable growth. Instead, there was the steady droning of the locust beetle, the shrill rasping of the red cricket in the evenings as he made preparation to pass his Great Divide, the alarm cry of the lizard, the rustling retreat of the horned toad, the buzz of the rattlesnake, the occasional scream of a cat or an eagle.

Now, the eye is greeted by a beautiful vista of groves scattered over the tract as far as the eye can see. You may hear the notes of wrens, meadow larks, thrushes, orioles, Olive backed warblers, and a dozen other kinds, bees and humming birds fill from one profusion of limes flowers to another, splendid crops have taken the place of lava rock and sage brush, the choicest stock has replaced the wild animals, and, last but not least, the Indian and his wigwag has given place to the white man and his modern farm-house. Indeed a most wonderful change has been brought about through and by the working of dreaming minds.

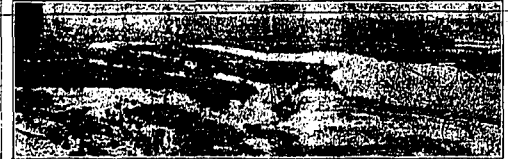

There is a little bird whose name I do not know, whose chirp will always put the old timer to the alert, thinking it a warning against the approach of an Indian, only to remember that those days are past.

Indians and Deer Abound

Thousands of Indians congregate in the hills in those early days and we lived in constant dread of them. Big Springs, below Clear Lakes, was an old-time Indian burying ground, and many a skull, jaw bone, and other bones have I found that had been but partially buried or had been disturbed by some unwary Indian. Many of their camps were plainly evident many years after I took Clear Lake and many a fire have I built from the poles of their deserted wigwags.

Deer abounded in the hills between Clear Lakes and the present site of Buhl. It was considered no feat at all to take a rifle and walk a mile beyond the river, and bring in a fine deer any time. Remember the antelope that once roamed the same hills. Salmon were plentiful in the Snake River at the time we took up our residence in the valley. The Indians would catch and dry thousands upon thousands of them every year. The Indians that I remember coming to the Snake for fish, camped upon the opposite side upon a narrow flat at the foot of the steep hill. One morning, as they were preparing to leave, something went wrong with a pony which had been hitched to a travois, or Indian sled.

A travois was composed of two long poles which acted as thills, slightly spread behind the pony which drew it.

PANORAMA OF CLEAR LAKES in Snake River Canyon North of Buhl—Fire Roads lead the tourist to this haunt and a new grade has just been completed out of the canyon to the north and connected by a rude platform of boulders, or a buffalo skin net or pouch which was laced to the poles upon each side. When the connecting part happened to be a buffalo or a bear skin, the pouch thus formed was usually crammed full of paposes.

Well, something went wrong with this pony and she ran away with her cargo of paposes which had been carefully packed into the net to save the mothers the burden of carrying them. You would have thought that was to be the last of those youngsters and so, evidently, did the mothers, for they yelled and screamed in every note of the scale, running after the run-away pony in a panic of fear. Finally the pony ran itself down. The Indians gathered around the wreck and held a pow-wow of some sort, whether their solemn deliberations resulted in commendatory to the pony's reputation or commendatory to the hardness of the youngsters, we never learned.

Twenty-five years ago, we were obliged to go to the Auto Transportation Changes Outlook shone for our provisions, requiring three days for the trip, allowing one day for our shopping. Now, the same ground, going and coming, can be covered in three hours. Mr. Syster and myself were the first ones to drive a car into Jerome and the second ones to drive a car into Buhl. We owned the three first cars I ever saw. They were not very much cars as compared with the present day conveniences, but very good for that time. When we went to Buhl, after that town had been established, we made a day of it, although but six miles intervened. Now, we can cover the same ground in thirty-five or forty minutes and think nothing of it excepting those frequent times when the mind reverts to times past.

California is all right—Oregon, Washington, and Tijuana, but Idaho is good enough for me!

The land of alfalfa and copper, The cradle of sapphires and gold; O, take me back to Idaho, From where I die when I'm old.

Back to the "light on the mountains," For that is what Idaho means;— Let me quaff at the "Clear Lakes fountains," Or sample a pot of her beans.
