

The Bannock Indian War

Immediately close again. I also noticed an unusual number of horses in Mr. Snodgrass's corral. When I had got about half way from Snodgrass's house to Mr. Lane's, I saw a bunch of eight or ten horses coming behind me. A little farther on I looked back and discovered that there were men on these horses. This alarmed me some and I turned off the road to Marsh Lake ranch and went to the house of Colonel Wood who lived about half way between Snodgrass's and Marsh Lake ranch. I found no one at home and I was surrounded right there in front of his house by this bunch of Indians. I had no gun, consequently I did not shoot but I went to the house of Mr. Lane. One man and one woman, "Hah, mahyso Tyho (meaning white man)." "Yes," I said, "It is Tyho, come on and get what you want." Then they all laughed and said, "My-bese Tyho he scared." Then they went back laughing among themselves about how badly they had scared me, knowing from the start that I was not the Indian they were hunting.

The settlers in our section of the country were becoming much exercised over these Indians prowling around the country all winter and had made application to state authorities for arms and ammunition. They and state officials had sent out fifty guns with ammunition. Colonel Wood was elected captain of the company and the guns were sent to him. He was to collect fifty cents from each person that took a gun to pay the freight charges on them from the state to Alibon. It happened to be in Alibon when the Colonel was to distribute the guns among the volunteers of the company. He had written out a receipt for each one to sign for the gun and fifty rounds of ammunition. When I arrived he had not as yet succeeded in getting any one to sign for a gun. He was very disappointed. He had written to the settlers that this receipt was a form of muster-roll and each who signed it could be compelled to go anywhere in the state to fight the Indians and the Colonel went left with fifty muskets and fifty rounds of ammunition without anyone to take them. He said, "You may if you sign this paper and give me one-half dollar," which I gladly did and took my gun.

Then the volunteers began to talk saying that I knew more about these matters than they and if I was not afraid to sign for a gun they would let me sign for one and give me permission to use my corral to catch their horses. Of course I consented and gave them permission to do so. About half an hour later about two hundred Indians with their families came up and camped right near my house and I took the guns. They were one gun short which they asked me to give up. I refused to do so. This gun proved to be quite handy before the Indian war was over.

Some time about the last of May I was all alone at my place on Dry Creek. An Indian ran up and said his people were ready to come to camp and he wanted my permission to use my corral to catch their horses. Of course I consented and gave them permission to do so. About half an hour later about two hundred Indians with their families came up and camped right near my house and I took the guns. They were one gun short which they asked me to give up. I refused to do so. This gun proved to be quite handy before the Indian war was over.

After that incident things went along smoothly until two young Indians from this camp came to the ranch house where George Nesbit and Lou Kensler were camped. The latter were cattlemen who had cattle on Cagnas Prairie. Kensler was out after the horses and had just driven them into the corral. The Indians were in the house with Nesbit and when Kensler had closed the gate to the corral. One of these Indians shot Nesbit through the jaw and the other one rushed out and shot Kensler, just grazing his skull and knocking him down. The two Indians rushed for the corral. They had some trouble in opening the gate and were in getting it open. One of them had had his gun and commenced firing at the Indians. He was somewhat excited I suspect, and could not hit either of them. Just at this time Kensler revived and commenced to shoot and the Indians went over the hill. Kensler for some time killed one but never got any more. These two young Indians had been gambling all the night before at their camp at the City of Rocks and had lost all they had and were trying to make a raise from the cowboys by getting their horses. They succeeded in starting the Bannock Indian War approximately as Buffalo Horn did this time had not fully made his arrangements for his campaign but as long as this had occurred they had to go. So gathering up their people they started.

The first place they came to was the King Hill Stage station. The hostler coming and hearing that it was the Indians on the war-path, jumped onto one of his horses and ran on to Glens Ferry. The Indians took possession of the seven head of horses, cut the harness to pieces and went on their way to Glens Ferry where they took possession of the horse barn, and stayed all night, perhaps two nights. While they were camped there they burned the house of a man who had always befriended them and killed him and his wife.

As it happened there was a number of freight teams going from Kelton to Boise who were camped near the ferry at the time the Indians were crossing. They saw the Indians coming but did not know they were on the war-path, except the hostler. The Indians were a day before the freighter's team. The freighter cut their animals loose and struck back for Payne's Ferry but the Indians took possession of the wagons which were loaded with merchandise of different descriptions. One wagon was loaded with whiskey, one with sugar, some loaded with dry goods, calico, gingham, saddles and other such hardware, pocket knives, and so forth. The Indians got hold of a twenty-five gallon cask of alcohol, pulled it out of the wagon, knocked the head in, got a sack of granulated sugar, got a lot of tin cups and emptied the sugar into the alcohol, stirred it up with a large iron spoon and drank until they were all drunk. Lying there like dead men the whole band of Bannock and Shoshone warriors were described by a Frenchman coming along from Nevada on his way to Yankee fork. He informed us at Rock Creek that there were over two hundred Indians laid out when he came along through the brush. A man with a hatchet could have killed the whole Bannock tribe. He also reported that before he got to the wagons in going down the hill he ran across a wagon which had been going down the hill and crumpled and under it lay a dead man. Another lay stripped naked half way down the hill. He picked up a pocketbook near one of these dead men which was later identified as the pocketbook of John Bascombe by his brother James Bascombe. He described the person as being a man named John Bascombe, later identified as a man by the name of Ferguson had been out on the Brunau to get a horse that had strayed away from them. They had located him and were returning, ignorant of the fact that the Indians were on the war path. They ran right into the brush and both were killed.

At this time at Rock Creek station there had gathered a good many people; freighters, immigrants and settlers, from this part of the country and from around Salmon falls. Jim Bascombe was asking for someone to go with him to get his brother's body. No one seemed inclined to go, so one wanted to go, one did go. "I would like for you to go with me," I consented finally and we struck out that evening for Payne's Ferry where a large number of freighters and immigrants had congregated. After we arrived at Glens Ferry a company of volunteers went to the wagon from which to escort the teams with their goods under command of a man by the name of James Bush. Bascombe asked Bush to take his company and go over with him to where his brother and Ferguson had been killed and offered him a thousand dollars if he would go, but he refused to go.

There had been scouts from this congregation at Payne's Ferry out towards where the massacre had occurred and they came back reporting that they had seen Indians. Finally Bascombe said, "I must go and find my brother. Will you go with me?" We found the bodies, as was described by the Frenchman who had been carried. They were decomposed and I do not know how far they would have gotten them off the hill on to the river bottom to bury them had it not been for an outfit of prospectors who came along at that time from Snake river going to Yankee Fork, there being a mine excavation at Yankee Fork that year. The scene around this one of a freight wagon was somewhat comical to look at. The Indians had taken bottles of calico, gingham and silk goods, all kinds of dress materials, found an end and by riding their horses in a zig-zag fashion strewn the material along through the brush. There was about one third of the keg of alcohol left with about four or five inches of sugar in the bottom. Pocket knives, razors and all kinds of cutlery were scattered all through the brush.

When the Indians got sober enough to travel they went on to Brunau and killed several horses. They were then they went over the South Mountains. The people of Silver City and the South Mountains and other mining camps had raised a company and had a battle with the Indians over east of the South Mountains a short distance, in which Buffalo Horn, his father, was killed. The rest of the campaign I do not know much about. However, as I said in the beginning, the musket I got from Colonel Wood proved to be quite useful. Harrington, my partner, and I were alone on the ranch and from the top of my stable I saw the Indians on the hill in front of the City of Rocks to Reservoir Park long before they got to Dry Creek. As the trail came close to the river we noticed the idea of going down and getting a shot at some of these runners coming from the camp to Fort Hill and we would not shoot but we made for Fort. We could slip down to the river (no Indians on our side of the river) and take a shot at them with our 50-caliber Springfield. We do not know that we killed any of them but we do know that their ponies ran away without any riders!

When Pain Comes
 Two hours after eating

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach juices have been over-stimulated, and food wastes are accumulated. They all which neutralize acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medicine is the "PAIN-KILLER" which has remained the standard for 40 years.

One spoonful of this harmless, non-toxic, water-soluble material, by justifying many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get your little bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for the relief of indigestion, excess acidity, and all other ailments of the stomach and bowels.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

"An Evening in Hawaii" Presented by Vierra's Hawaiian

A spark-throwing, smoke-blowing, volcano is to be a feature of the fourth day chautauqua attraction.

The Buffalo Morning Express: "Vierra's Hawaiians are in a class by themselves."

Cumberland Times-Herald: "For real entertainment, Vierra's Hawaiians are unequalled."

Nation, Daily Independent: "Without a doubt the greatest and most pleasing Hawaiian company we have ever seen."

Hullington Herald: "Dispatch: 'Mr. Vierra and his company are old favorites here and the passage of time only serves to perfect them in each art in which they already excel.'"

George W. Vierra, the director and producer of the company was among the first to introduce Hawaiian music into the United States. He has done more than any other artist to popularize the music of his native country here. The company members are also past masters at playing the latest popular music. They give to the melody of the day the touch of the subtle harmony of Hawaii.

Vierra's Hawaiians have been a featured attraction on the Swarthmore Chautauqua to the east and have the headlines of the Hollywood Hornet seven-day circuit last season. During the winter they have been the feature of the North vaudeville circuit, the Paramount Theatre, and the Universal chain of theatres.

THE IDAHO CITIZEN

SEMI-WEEKLY PER YEAR, $2.00
A semi-weekly newspaper published on Tuesday and Friday of each week at Twin Falls, Idaho, by the Citizen Publishing Company.

AN ISSUE, PLEASE?

That rick-rabbed G. O. P. organ, the Idaho Daily Statesman wants a lot of good space the other day lamenting that the Democrats will be unable to find an issue in this campaign!

The Statesman says "The corruption issue is no good—party leaders have made it plain they won't make prohibition an issue—there isn't enough unemployment to make unemployment an issue—the tariff offers no hope—only extreme pacifists could quarrel with the administration's foreign policy—what issue, then, will the Democrats find? They probably won't find any."

The Statesman outdoes itself with political optimism. It means to say that it trusts the Democrats will not find an issue.

The facts are: issues will not have to be "found"; they are already present—they are so manifest that one wonders just how the G. O. P. will be able to combat them.

But that will not wipe out memories of Fall and Daugherty, of Denby and Hays, of Harding himself, and of Teapot dome.

It does not make the voters forget about Vane and Smith, or of the present political enforcement under Mellon.

It does not explain the silence of Messrs Coolidge, Hoover et al on the most rotten looking of the government ever exposed.

Neither does it explain the apparent utter lack of sympathy on the part of the administration with farm relief as promised in the 1924 platform of that party.

Friends of the present administration "in urging four more years of Coolidge tell us that he is really serving, but one term of his own and that the other three of his seven years in office were a part of the Harding administration; but in the next breath they say as did the Statesman "The American public is too intelligent not to realize that efforts to make an issue of transactions with which the present administration or its members were not even remotely connected are insincere, and do not even constitute good politics."

If memory serves, the present administration is made up for the most part with the same forces as was the Harding administration, the principal exceptions being the absence of cabinet members who were involved in scandal and were forced out by the Walsh exposures. Members of the Harding administration it recalled, included Coolidge, Mellon, New and Hoover.

Opinions will differ, too, as to whether or not the effort of the national scandals is "good politics" but an effort to "drive the rascals out" most all will agree, is the honest thing to do in the interest of good government, regardless of whom such actions benefit, or who suffers. If these be not "issues", they are at least convincing arguments for a return to Jeffersonian principles in governmental affairs; honesty may not be an "issue" but it is a most good moral precept and there is a considerable number of voters left in these old United States who still have faith in this old-fashioned doctrine.

THE BIRTH OF AN EMPIRE

The Twinland empire is a beautiful sight to behold at this season. Gone are the signs of winter; summer is there with its green fields everywhere, majestic trees, flowering plants. Twenty-five years ago this was a hot sugar-brush-covered plain; water has made it a veritable Garden of Eden.

While we are celebrating Independence day; Labor day, Thanksgiving day and numerous birthdays, why can't we squeeze in one more and have an annual celebration in this section commemorating the Birth of the Twin Falls tract of the Twinland empire?

The heroes in this drama of empire-building should be properly venerated and their achievements extolled. The history of this great irrigation enterprise should be retold and the oncoming generations should be made familiar with the facts concerning the inception and development of the tract, as well as the transformation that has taken place in a comparatively few number of years.

It is only with a knowledge of the background of this great section that one can fully appreciate the panorama that can be witnessed now from any vantage point on or near the tract.

Big Bill Hayward died the other day in Russia. He was one of the principals of the famous Meyer, Hayward and Pattibone case which raked Idaho in the early days of this century. He lived an ignoble life, was notorious, not famous and died an ignoble death.

Without appearing to be inquisitive, we rise to inquire what has become of the Borah fund being raised a dollar a head to counterize the Republican campaign fund contributors? As the matter now stands, the charges run by Borah still hold; there has been no retribution.

The Straw Hat Days Are Here

By Albert T. Reid
"Abraham Lincoln, Patrick Henry, and Henry Clay are some of the great men Granville Jones positively respects. He is a connoisseur of striking characteristics; he has the report of one paper after Mr. Jones' lecture.

Yes, Granville Jones, is like no one else. Though he reminds one of Lincoln with his tall, angular body, rich humor, and native eloquence; of Patrick Henry with his fiery oratory; and of Henry Clay, with his courtesy bearing and firm patriotic understanding; he still himself—the "Hill-Billy" Philosopher.

Granville Jones has been on the lecture platform for forty-five years and his "chautauque" platform "forty-five years of the times. He is repeated on the same circuit for consecutive seasons "I have lectured in every state except Rhode Island," Mr. Jones said once, "and I was eating supper when I passed through here."

Mr. Jones' childhood closely parallels that of Lincoln. He was born in a log cabin in the mountain tops of Arkansas, one hundred miles from a railroad, with in his days of horseback transportation some mountain trails might just as well have been five hundred.

Mr. Jones still has his home in the Ozarks. It is a log cabin which he calls "Hill-Billy" place, and it is here he goes to rest between lecture tours.

Great men of the ages have worked in this country. The design here is a splendid suggestion for far and afternoon west. The first here are set on a diagonal line which has a "wonderful effect" in harmony with the "Hill-Billy" character in a so-called plot ending in a row at the left of the house. The full story is handed out at the wickets by small boys. A simple, narrow cabin knitted at one side completely resembling a type of folk which is very becoming to the young girl as well as to the more mature woman. Silk crepe, zephyr, or satin are materials that find themselves utterly to plastic and soft boxes. (Copyright, 1928, by Butterick)

Dr. Frank L. Loveland says: "Granville Jones is one of the rare types of men of the indelible able sort, a human and with all of some knowledge of trees that is at all unattainable, with the look and address still clinging to him but soul to the contrary, a strange mixture of the Aristocrat and the Democrat, a combination of the blood of the dancing Gaiety and the stern Puritan, with a brain and a heart that balance each other with the delicate accuracy of chemist's scales."

"The Wagon Show" Is Late Picture of Ken Maynard

"The Wagon Show" a western picture with a circus background, a story combining the thrills, romance, danger and trick riding of the law. It is Ken Maynard's latest feature, which comes to the Orpheum theatre on Thursday. This unusual departure from the regular western picture follows a long standing opinion of Maynard, for he spent many years as promoter stunt rider with Harlan and Halley, Hitting Brothers' circuses, and ever since he made his entry into pictures he has wanted to make one dealing with the circus and its people. "The Wagon Show" is the result, and so far has it surpassed even Charles H. Rogers, the producer and first National expectations that it has been released as a Ken Maynard Special.
