LANDLOCKED SALMON OR OUANANICHE CAUGHT IN ONE OF THE HIGH-LAKES OF THE SAWTOOTH FOREST

The Forest Service initiated an interesting fish-culture project several years ago, landlocked salmon eggs being secured in Maine and hatched at Hay Spur Hatchery. The fingerlings were then transported by truck to Battell Lake and from there to some of the high-lakes in the Sawtooth, notably Toxaway and Twin-Lakes. The planting has been quite successful, fish from the oldest planting now weighing over three pounds.

The Sawtooth supervisor has furnished the Citizen with a supply of bulletins entitled "Fish and Fishing on the Sawtooth National Forest." This pamphlet deals with the fishing waters of the Sawtooth and contains considerable data for identifying fish species. These bulletins may be obtained without charge by applying to the Citizen office.

I will mention just a few animals that may be depended to give you income in most any soil that may be worked at all. They are all of the casted culture and may be seeded right where you want them to bloom and with a little care to see that they get water enough they will bloom abundantly. Here is the list: Purslane, Verbena, Ice Plant, Sweet-Alyssum, Cockroach, Kochia, Nasturtium and Bachelor Buttons.

If your soil is poor the thing to do is to make it better. Most any soil may be improved by adding plenty of leaf mould or compost, and if neither of these is available you may add a liberal supply of pulverized Port Moss. You, you will find that this combination will help your soil. If you are able to obtain some well-rotted barnyard manure it will help the soil wonderfully.

If you have a lot of any size and the soil is poor you may in a period of two years improve it so that you would hardly know it. This may be done with green manuring. Have it plowed early in the spring and then it will grow Penn or Soy Beans; when they are fifteen to eighteen inches high plow them under and plant another crop. Do this constantly for two whole seasons and you will hardly know the soil. You can improve your soil if you really want to.

WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE

Dr. Long is visiting Southley Downes which he has been directed by Ahmad Das, an Oriental. There is a detective friend, Alexander Pierce, had told him to watch, and his son Ernest Southley, Mr. Hayward and Mrs. Villaz, and then Joseph Southley. The rain began to fall on the train, Joseph told him the story of Southley Downes and the story, which is not that of a human being but of a tiger.

Dr. Long has a quarrel with Villaz Hayward over Joseph and the fact that the Hayward have strange authority over the Southley. He is ordered to leave Southley Downes. The rain grows more heavy as once, Dr. Long and Ernest go out on the road in the rain looking for the tracks of a tiger that Ernest says are there.

They find the tracks. Later Ernest and Dr. Long see in the distance the tracks of Southley Downes. This frightens the older Hayward, who also see it. Ernest and the late Ahmad Das is preparing some devilry. Now read on.

In the rain that was its light. They were directed to the base of having difficulty in hearing his way through the storm. It was a matter of minutes before Ahmad Das had reached the garage. Then he saw his auto lights flash on.

They were barely able to make them out, although it was plain that the garage door was open and they were shining directly toward it. Of course the distance was far, and the piercing rays could hardly penetrate the wall of rain. The lightning had entirely ceased. We couldn't hear (the sign of the engine at all). Then we saw, quite plainly, the track of the lights on the car and about the shoulder of the hill.

Perhaps, in all, the walk to the hill. Then Ernest, backed as a syllable of precipitation. "He's riding past the point," he said. "Possibly Hayward" has walked on a few feet." "Impossible!"

The car slowed up and stopped for a single instant, then started on. It was hard to believe that it halted long enough to permit the party form of Hayward to enter. It looked to us as if Ahmad was going to stop and throw a light on the side of the road. Then, to our vast amazement, we saw him turn around.

The car was back, just as slowly, and circled about to the garage.

The servant stopped the car in three minutes for him to drive on again. We only knew he was driving away from the hill. The light of the light, in the downpour. I don't remember that we three men talked at all. Possibly there were some words of wondering remarks as to what was the cause of their delay.

He just kept the dark form of the Mitsu came into the hill. The look of question on his face seemed very real indeed. I remembered it afterward, as did all the rest of us.

"Where," he asked, "is Hayward?" "Sahib is here," Southley answered. "Yes, my name Villaz," Southley asked.

"The older Hayward, whom I was to drive to the station." "For God's sake, Ahmad! Did you see him?" "He was going to meet me in the rain, and was going to meet me at the foot of the peak. Didn't you remember?"

"I looked—but his walk's there. This is Ahmad. I had my hand on his shoulder, and he was there. He wasn't there either."

"Good Lord, he's drenched. Goodness, he's drenched and find him!"

"Yes, ah—"

"My eyes were upon Ernest's face, and suddenly his gaze met mine. I think he had the same thought."

"Walk a bit more, Ahmad," he said suddenly. "Then the door shut. Then he turned to his father and son for a long instant as if in thought. "Father, I think that we'd better go home."

We saw the high of Hayward at first. We got down to the driveway and found him waiting all along it. We looked up and down the path. We tried to call in the name of the man who was there.

"Good Lord," Southley cried. "He couldn't have got down into the river and drowned!"

The old man set down in a cushion. He gave no heed to the water-pouring from his clothes. He looked tired and listless.

"The leaves is breaking," he said awestruckly.

Only his son seemed to understand. I looked up from the work I was doing, and saw the water room on the way to the library. We made a silent circle in the dim light.

"What does it mean?" Hayward cried. "Does it mean we'll be drowned?"

He spoke hoarsely, but the announcement pleased me. My hands were material, and could be made. They couldn't follow me behind the curtains.

"Nothing as bad as that," Southley answered. "Of course it means a flood; but by no means a flood that will sweep all the water from the top of the hill which it has flooded the hills, and fill all the low places with water. It will be able to reach the heights across the valley."

Hayward seemed to look toward him. He simply appeared to grow before my eyes. His face grew shuddery, and he took his arm in Southley's. "Get me out of here!" he screamed. "Get me out of this house while there's any light!"

"My wife is in the kitchen," Southley answered.

"Call a car for me at once—hear that? There's still time to make it. I won't stay here. I'll go to your room. Get on your feet; you fool—call a car for me. You'll regret it if you don't."

"There's no car to be had here—but Ahmad, I suddenly arrived—what?"

"And what about your son?"

"My man may be down in his wicker house! Did you say Ahmad?"

"For an instant we saw the battle of two fears in his great eyes. "Get Ahmad here at once, ready as soon as I find a car. Villaz can tend to our business, and he'll communicate with me."

"Southley said he got to his feet. He touched a bell on the table. Only a moment we waited. Then through the door came Ahmad Das, imperious, his Oriental face quiet as a seer's. Nayev was there such depth of shadow as we saw in his eyes.

He came swiftly across the floor with that marvelous feline grace.

"Yes, sahib—"

"The touring car out at once," Southley ordered. "You have to take Sahib Hayward to the station. Don't forget Ahmad Das. The leaves is breaking. It will be broken before you return, so you'll have to leave the car in the station and come in with me. The trail for supplies will be no there—we may be cut off for weeks."

"I'll cut down the walk to the base of the hill," Hayward instructed. "Pick me up there, and we'll have at least a minute."

"The Oriental bowed then slipped away. He went just like a shadow. He found a raincoat in the hall, and in an instant he was out in a flood of rain.

Hayward put on his own overcoat, and started out after him. The rain and the darkness, swallowed them both.

A window had been left just beside the fireplace, and through it we could see the green of the garden. Ernest and I gazed through that window. Ahmad was evidently gazing at the starting of the car and taken four minutes. The trail to the base of the hill, where the postern path met the driveway, took probably two minutes. Hayward had walked swiftly for 20, he would certainly have two minutes to get to the car. The car, however, would see the faint light.

feet north of the crossing until he was about twenty feet from the first rail, or, so the respondent argues, twelve feet from danger, and that then the engine was suddenly cut off by the section house. He had been driving at the rate of ten or twelve miles an hour but had cut down his rate to a few or six miles at about forty feet from the crossing. It is thought that there was an emergency in which, so far as appears, Goodman did all that he could.

"We do not go into further details as to the exact nature of the situation, beyond mentioning that it was daylight and that he was familiar with the crossing, for it appears to us plain that nothing is suggested by the evidence to reflect Goodman from responsibility for his own death. When a man goes upon a railroad track he knows that he goes to a place where he will be killed if a train comes upon him before he is clear of the track. He knows that he must stop for the train, not the train stop for him. In such circumstances it seems to us that if a driver cannot be sure otherwise whether a train is dangerously near, he must stop and get out of his vehicle, although ordinarily he will use only the required to do more than to stop and look. It seems to us that the rules governing the operation of a train and the duty of a driver to be on his guard and to take no further precaution in such a situation as this, if at the last moment Goodman found himself in an emergency, it was his own fault that he did not reduce his speed or come to a stop. It is true as said in Flannery v. DeLewans & Hudson Co., 225 U. S. 527, 535, that the question of negligence is to be determined by the jury. But we are dealing with a standard of conduct, and when the standard is clearly by training constituted, such proportion of the total casualties, and that almost the entire bulk of these are due to human error. The figures given follow:

With 25,125,000 registered automobiles upon our Nation's 3,093,000 miles of highway, it is shown that there will be tragedies at some of the 225,158 railroad-highway crossings.

In 1927 there were 6540 accidents at railroad crossings, with 2371 persons killed, and 40413 persons injured. Automobiles were involved in 89 per cent of these accidents. Over 1100 instances occurred in which automobiles "collided" with lists of trains.

Passage over railroad crossings is undoubtedly accomplished every million times daily, with 16,000 accidents, resulting in 4.6 persons killed and 18 persons injured. Recoverable from these accidents are the prevention of railroad crossing accidents. It is by no means

If You're Bored with the Manners Of Ordinary Cars

If You Want Speed and Life and Youth

If you are bored with trying to speed claims, "doo-dads," drive plate, of price alone—

If you're seeking dash, speed, life, and youth in a motor car—

If you believe that getting somewhere is very important business, yet don't care to pay a fortune for the privilege—

Reo builds the Wolverine for you.

Paints it different colors, as the rest do. Gives it the "doo-dads" the rest have.

Adds four wheels and bumpers in accord with custom.

But underneath Reo puts an automobile—an automobile that gets somewhere with speed and dispatch—an automobile that leaves much more expensive cars blushing self-consciously in the rear.

That's the Wolverine which Reo builds for $1195 and $1295 at Lansing, plus tax. See it in any Reo showroom. Drive over any roads. Parade it through any company. You'll be surprised.

Commission To Regulate Zoning

The following are the rules governing zoning as outlined by the commission:

The zoning commission recommends the division of the city of Twin Falls into four districts, as indicated by the "geographical map":

1. In the first residence district there may be only single family dwellings, school, churches, libraries.

2. In the second residence district there may be only use permitted in the first residence district, also flats, apartment houses, boarding houses, hotels, hospitals.

3. In the business district there may be all uses permitted in the two districts above mentioned, also stores, offices, banks, restaurants, service stations, police or fire stations, printing establishments, movie, telephone exchanges, and telegraph offices, theatres, dance halls, skating rinks, garages, laundry, clothes cleaning establishments, undertaking establishments, manufacturing clearly incidental to a retail business conducted on the premises.

4. In the manufacturing and industrial district buildings may be used for any purpose not in contravention of other laws and not objectionable by reason of the omission of unwholesome gases or fumes.

In the first residence district the building line shall be 25 feet from the front of the lot, and the yard on each side not less than 10 feet; in the second residence district the building line shall be 10 feet from the front of the lot, and the yard on each side 5 feet; in the business and industrial district the building may occupy the entire lot.

JAMES E. WATSON

James E. Watson was born at Winchester, Ind., on November 2, 1864. He was educated at Winchester University and DePauw University. He married Flora Miller in 1892, and their union was blessed with four children: Edwin G., James E., Catherine, and Joseph C. Watson.

He was admitted to the bar in 1886 and began practice with his father. He moved to Hahsville, Ind., in 1893. He was a member of the 54th and 56th to 60th Congresses from the 6th Indiana District.

He was the Republican nominee for Governor of Indiana in 1908. He was the United States Senator for the unexpired term (1916-1921) of Benjamin F. Shively, deceased. He was re-elected and has since been representing Indiana in the Senate.

He was Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions of the Republican Convention of 1920. Senator Watson is said to be one of the most gifted debaters in the Senate. He is a strong advocate of farm relief, has fought for the McNary-Haugen bill, and is a champion of the protective tariff.

For forty years Senator Watson has been devoted to the principles of the Republican party, and it is said he has made perhaps more Republican speeches and more tariff speeches than any other living man. He has taken an active and conspicuous part in every Republican campaign. He is one of the most popular orators in the Republican party.

THE IMPORTANCE OF MUSIC

Nothing rivals music in importance as a cultural factor. The Playground and Recreation Association of America, recognizing this, are doing some splendid work in extending music in rural America.

The association plans to promote music education and community music activities in small towns, with the cooperation of school authorities. It plans to put music teachers into the rural schools.

One half of the population of the United States lives in towns of less than 2,500. Many of these towns are in a state of musical isolation.

The endeavor to bring music into the lives of these small towns is a worthy one.

The National Music Week Committee is also doing wonderful work in the direction of bringing music to the ears of all who care to hear. Of course the great agency that brings music within everyone's reach is the radio.

The radio brings music into the homes, but musical education is also necessary, and the effort to place music teachers in every school in the country should be rewarded with success. In a survey several towns were found in which there were not more than a half dozen persons who could read the notes of the scale. This is a condition that must be remedied.

Musical talent in the young must not be allowed to die because of the lack of facilities for training. Music is a real, vital thing that belongs in the life of every community. It is essential, not a luxury!

COST OF CAMPAIGN FOR GOV. SMITH IN STATE OF IDAHO

(Sand Point News)

A few weeks ago Mr. W. Orr Chapman, a prominent lawyer of Twin Falls and a Democratic leader of the state, took occasion to express his disapproval of comments of the News regarding the use of money to further the candidacy of Governor Smith. In the course of a communication, which appeared in these columns, Mr. Chapman said:

"As you are aware, I was selected at the Ogden conference as the vice chairman of the Western States' Smith for President committee for Idaho, and I have been actively in charge of and have conducted the only campaign which was made in this state for the purpose of securing a Smith delegation. In this work I have not received a cent of money or anything else of value from any person, corporation, association, organization or what not, either with or without the state of Idaho, nor has anyone obligated himself to reimburse me for any expenditures which I have made. I have received no communication from Tammany Hall or any one connected with it.

"The cost of the pro-convention campaign on behalf of Governor Smith in Idaho does not exceed $20, and includes only the cost of postage, stationery and telegraphic hire, telegrams and telephone charges, and this amount is not received out of my pocket and the bills are all paid.

"The information contained in the above is the more interesting when compared with the testimony given in the senate committee investigating campaign expenses of presidential candidates.

LET THEM SPEAK OUT

With all political parties up in the air on the liquor issue, and all parties divided as to the best way of handling the problem, the following suggestion put forth by the women's Democratic union is worthy of serious consideration:

"If it is in enforcement, though at present of overshadowing interest and importance, which we have in our hands is not a party issue. The Electrons

A Power county boy, Walter Hencock, made a great showing at a rodeo in San Antonio, Texas, recently, when he conquered King Tut, regarded as one of the most vicious bronchos in Texas. The San Antonio Express gives this account of his feat.

Walter Hencock, a champion "broncho buster" of action, and Shurly Creed, gritty Kansas cowboy, Thursday were heroes in the eyes of 5,000 rodeo fans who saw the two give thrilling and daring performances Wednesday night at the International Exposition and Livestock Show.

Hencock, who came all the way from his home in American Falls, Idaho, to ride King Tut, a black horse that had thrown every boy that attempted to ride him, took every thing that the "champion" had in his possession and had to offer Wednesday night, and conquered. His display of "boremanship" was one of the greatest ever seen in the Texas cattle country, and his skill in staying on the wild horse brought out in the rodeo had spectators on their feet.

Shurly Creed, who came from Liberal, Kansas, for the rodeo, was the victim of his mount, "Sleepy Sid," before he was the conqueror. On his first entrance, Creed's broncho fell with him and rolled over on his rider. Ten cowboys who saw the horse fall plugging Creed beneath, rushed to his rescue and pulled the struggling animal from the half-dazed man.

But the Kansas cowboy was not seriously injured, and coming into the arena again a few minutes later, he subdued "Sleepy Sid" while the spectators cheered his gameness.

Hencock is a son of J. O. Hencock and was reared near the life is widely known throughout Southern Idaho as a daring rider.

CAN IT BE EXPLAINED?

It is to be hoped that Governor Baldrige and the heads of the department of public works will see fit to accept the invitation extended to them by the Barley chamber of commerce to come to Twin Falls Friday evening to confer on the proposed plan to make an "Old Oregon Trail" through the lava rock desert, where no pioneer ever trod on the way to the land of the Webfoot. This proposition, if carried into effect, would not only cost an enormous sum, but would utterly destroy the scenic value of the route if the Barley chamber figures correctly. Since house bill No. 77 was exposed after it had been enacted by congress with the unanimous support of the whole Idaho delegation in both houses, it would seem that no more audacious proposition has ever been suggested. This bill was vetoed when exposed, and the demise of the proposed road routing will follow its exposure in all probability.

However, since the death of the proposed new electrical unit at American Falls and the diverting to the Gooding tract of water supposed to be used on the Northside extension, also, it charged with the full consent of the Idaho delegation, the possibility of the carrying out of the new scheme seems far from remote. It would cut out the entire Barley country, the Twin Falls country, with its wonderful scenery, Buhl and Clear Lakes and the Hagerman valley.

And while speaking of roads, why the unexplained delay in letting a contract to fill the gap to the Nevada state line? There does not seem to be any reason which a mere citizen can understand why this piece of road should not have been let at the same time that the section now being completed was let to contractors. Why this delay and postponement, which will serve to divert travel from Twin Falls through Nevada for another year? There may be good reasons for all this, but they are not visible to the naked eye and require elucidation. If, as is intimated, Nevada is to blame it is certain that its officials are working against their own state's best interests.

Gooding is a fine town and the development of the Gooding tract is deserving, but it should "stand on its own bottom." There is enough merit to that project without falsifying history and routing tourists through an arid section by the course suggested, even though this plan might result in some dubious benefit to the town of Gooding or to the Gooding interests.

THE REAL INVESTIGATOR

The Hearst chain of newspapers is entitled to the thanks of the American people for its publication of the revelations of power-tobey activities into America's public school system—a publication which, most of the great American dailies suppressed. These revelations were exposed in investigations made by the federal trade commission. They showed that a systematic plan of propaganda is on foot by the power trust all over the United States to prejudice the rising generation against public ownership of public utilities—Idaho Progressive.

The real investigator in the power probe was Senator Walsh of Montana, whose determined fight, covering a period of years, forced a reluctant Republican federal trade commission to act. The only interest that Hearst had in the matter was in the Boulder dam. Hearst should have backed Walsh in his California fight for nomination, on this ground if sincere, but he did not.

Hearst has recently boasted Mellon for the presidency, and now that the aluminum trust magnate has declined to run, he backing Herbert Hoover, on the ground that he has the backing of Mellon and Coolidge. The great American dailies, by the way, seem to have carried stories on the subject named without waiting for Hearst to do so.

MARRIAGE IN THE NEW RUSSIA

According to Ivy Lee, whose new edition of "Present-Day Russia" has just appeared, "The Russians have attempted to take God and Religion out of marriage and family life just as they have attempted to take them out of all political relationships."

"According to the Bolshevik theory, marriage is primarily a contractual relationship between a man and a woman. Unless children are involved, the State does not presume to exert any pressure toward maintaining the continuity of that contractual relationship. It is not a matter of interest to the community! Religious sanctions are entirely abandoned, as they are in every other official relationship in Russian life. Solemnization of the marriage contract by the church is of no validity of itself. A marriage is not legal until the parties register it before the proper civil tribunal. Such registration, according to the code, is regarded as 'unquestionable testimony of the existence of the marriage,' and the code specifically states that 'testimony as to the conclusions of a matrimonial agreement according to some religious rite is not valid."

Wendell

WENDELL, Friday, June 8—At a special meeting of the school board last Friday night, Everett Peck of Buckley, Idaho, was employed as the new principal and coach for the Wendell high school. He will fill the position caused by the resignation of Wm. Conner.

Haying is well underway on many of the farms near Wendell. Jack Lyman, manager of the Sand Springs ranch is trying a new experiment. He has long ago purchased a new Farm-all tractor, with a specially built mowing machine. They are using this, and he has a success, so far. He has dug 40 acres of hay a day, replacing five common mowers and ten boys of horses. Mr. Lyman has another tractor pulling 1000 lbs. of delivery racks by a special device that he worked out. He is trying out a new way to pull three rows at the stack at a time, with a tractor, and a team to do the stack to unload the silage. This has not been tried long enough to see if it will be a success or not.

Mr. Max Morehouse who has been managing the town of Sand Springs for the past seven years resigned his position a month ago, and left last week for Kansas City. He will attend the Republican convention, and he and Mrs. Morehouse will visit relatives for a while, before he accepts another position.

The senior blind pupil of the Gooding school spent one afternoon last week at the Idaho Nat. Badles having a good time, the pupils were taught what the Gooding school is doing for the blind. They have a very able instructor this year, who has done much in the line of educational work.

Mr. Huey, who owns the Post service station in Wendell is building in addition to his property. The room will contain a ladies rest room, a three room, and a room large enough for an automobile to change tires.

Gooding county is waging a war on weeds. Lee Veneman of Wendell has been chosen a field man. He will locate the weeds and then the county will do the weeding. The weeds are at the present stage, spreading and will do much damage to the county. Mr. Veneman will be under the supervision of the county agent, O. E. McConnell, and has been tried out successfully last year. The expense will be paid by the farmer, and he is expected to do his part in spraying if he cares to, but if he won't do it, the county will charge it to him.
