John D. Rockefeller, Jr. tells Fisk University students that merely going to a doctor is not necessarily mean getting an education. It may mean only learning unwarranted sense of superiority, or becoming dissatisfied with your conditions and environment in which one's lot is cast.

Mr. Rockefeller's definition of what education goes NOT to do, may be stated in a few words. It should not to crum the neck with false, exaggerated, produce already, money seeking lawyers, turn out doctors that will succeed in making possible men for a business life that is sharp, slick, shady.

The mechanical man, or "talking robot," has been financed by the millions. He is a classic uttering certain words, handing out cigarettes, etc.

You may say, "But he cannot THINK, how can he be a sales man?" He is that kind of a salesman, and he is a numerous kind.

Some farmers think they need a low tariff, but don't. Tariff protection makes possible high wages, and high wages make it possible for American workers to buy farm products.

STATE POTATO GROUP DECIDES TO INCORPORATE

Pro and Con of Advertising in Outing of Potatoes Meeting Saturday

Need of true facts in advertising potatoes is the main reason for the meeting of the Idaho potato growers at the University of Idaho on Saturday at Anner hall. The meeting was held to discuss the advertising of potatoes in the state.

W. H. Horley of Seattle, who has been active in the advertising campaign of large extent, addressed the meeting on the various phases of the proposed program.

Considerable controversy arose over the question of advertising. Some were present opposed the proposition, stating that they felt it was not needed.

Under the articles of incorporation, the organization stands for the promotion of advertising and publicity of potatoes in the state.

Recipe Book Produced by L. D. S. Group

Twin Falls Relief society has just published a 72-page book of recipes that is being offered at sale at a reasonable price by the ladies of the organization, of which Mrs. L. G. Kirkman is the president.

The cook book contains about 100 recipes, each submitted by its contributor, the contributors including well-known women from all over the county with reputations in the culinary art.

The publishers of the book take no little pride in the fact that Mrs. Calvin Coulidge is among the contributors to the book, she having responded to the request of the society with a doughnut recipe.

The society acknowledges a debt of gratitude to the 42 advertisers who carry space in the publication, assuring its success from a financial standpoint.

In addition to the large number of recipes the book includes such information as hints for about planning, food facts and a long list of suggested salad and lunch combinations.

By departments the book supplies recipes for the following: breads, cocktails, croquettes, cakes, cookies, candies and ice cream, eggs, soups, puddings, pies, relishes and pickles, soups, salad dressings, vegetables and waffles.

The book was exhibited by the printing department of The Idaho Star.

The Latest Word In Spring Styles From Paris

"My dear, we have ceased to be fashionable and have become demure young ladies. The new season's clothes are responsible (top backs, bows and flares are facts made of fabric) from the whole over here." The fashion designer for Paris, she explains a thrill of glee, "is not looking for it as a combination of the features that Paris considers most. The straight cape look which used to be held in vogue at the front and the waist-blouse knotted-in front are the new fashion note that is so chic this spring. The silencing of the skirt at the hips gives a soft falliness that is creeping with the whole force. Made of plain or printed with crepe, crepe de Chine, or georgette, the dress is charming for any occasion. With long sleeves, it is suitable for visiting Viceroy friends.

Boys and Girls Clubs Set Pace for World

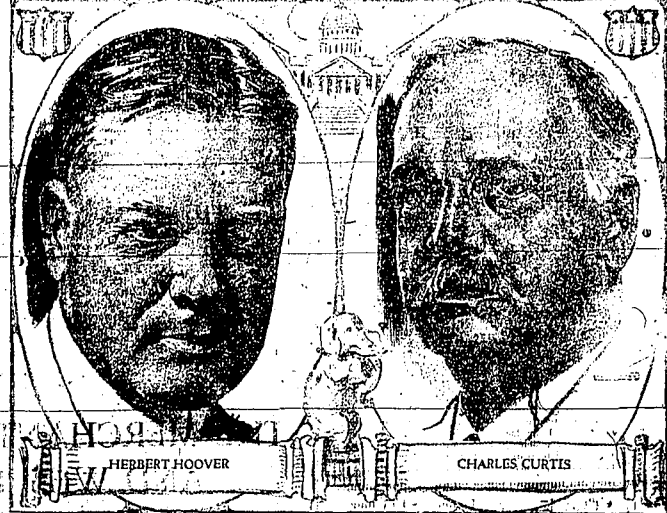

Members of boys and girls clubs in America have the right to prize themselves in setting the pace in club work for the rest of the world. Dean E. J. Hedges of the University of Idaho college of agriculture told 250 boys and girls assembled at the university for the sixth annual Junior's course last week. On a recent tour to study agricultural methods and conditions in other countries the Idaho club showed that all countries were shaping their club programs along American lines. England and Scotland, which have more than 40,000,000 people, have only 4000 club workers while the state of Idaho, with a population of only half a million, has a club enrollment of nearly 2500.

Attendance at the short course this year was by far the largest in the six years the university has conducted the short summer training period for club workers.

Homer Sawyer, a Latah county club worker with seven years experience in calf and pig clubs, was elected state 4-H president for the coming year. Marjorie Jones, also of Latah county, was elected vice president. Einar Swindland, Kootenai county, a member of potato and sheep clubs, for seven years, was elected secretary. Nathaniel Stevens, Watahcher, a potato club member, was chosen treasurer.

WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE
 Dr. Long's killing Southley Down, to which he is conducted by Ahmad Das, an Oriental. There he meets Mr. Southley, whom he identifies as the man who had been found in the hall of the Southley Down, when he had been found on the floor. Josephine tells him the story of Southley Down and his ghost being that of a tiger.

Dr. Long has a quarrel with Ahmad Das, who is a Greek. He finds that the Haywards have a strange authority over the Southley. He is ordered to leave Southley Down. The rain prevents him leaving at once. Dr. Long and Ernest go out on the road in the effort to find the tracks of a tiger that Ernest says are there.

They find the tracks. Later Ernest and Dr. Long see a prowling creature in the hall of Southley Down. This frightens the elder Hayward, who also sees it. Ernest believes that Ahmad Das is perpetrating some devilry. The elder Hayward is later found dead, his neck broken as if by a giant's blow.

The coroner and police arrive in order to investigate. Because of the murder, Dr. Long must remain at Southley Down. All the persons there are questioned by Inspector Freeman.

"You knew of this influence. The fact that Southley let his guest, strike you before his face."

"It seemed to me that they were the closest of friends."

"And where were you just before the bell rang, when Southley told you to get out of the car?"

"In the kitchen."

"How long?"

"At least an hour before."

"And he told him what had been going to prove it."

Ernest corroborated my story perfectly.

"And what did you think of the elder Hayward?" he was asked.

"I didn't like him."

"And why not?"

"I didn't like his attitude with my father; he was so arrogant, and demanded more than a guest should. His manners were often laughable. Nor did I like the way he threw his son with my sister."

"I believe that was your sister's part to object—not yours."

"Perhaps it is."

"And she made no objection?"

"Never. Of course I don't know so very well."

"The detective and I looked at him in amazement."

"And what do you mean by that unusual speech?" the former asked, "for you don't know your sister's name?"

"Because we went to different schools."

"Some of us," the detective said, "the detective referred to Josephine."

"And what light have you thrown on this matter, Miss Southley?" he asked.

"I am behind me and the Republic."

"And where were you, after the scene in the den?"

"I went straight to bed. My maid helped me undress."

"And the Haywards must have been so unpopular with you as with your brother and Ahmad?"

"I was with both of them a great deal."

"And I think you took Vilis's part against Dr. Long."

"Her voice lowered."

"Because I couldn't do anything else under the circumstances."

"You evidently didn't like Dr. Long."

"I did like Dr. Long. But his relation with me was greatly different from that of Vilis."

She looked squarely into his eyes to the talk. The room faded except for her. The faces of the watching circle became a mist. I don't know why each answer she made seemed to so deeply into me—each word—and infection of voice an ineffable imprint in my memory. I couldn't turn my eyes from her white face.

"I hardly heard the detective's questions when he turned to Southley. They came from some where far off."

"Please tell me, Southley, just what were the relations between you and the Haywards?"

"The elder Hayward and I were the oldest friends," the old man answered. He spoke haltingly in the hesitant way of old age.

"They had been here almost 20 years."

"How long did you ask them for?"

"His voice changed ever so slightly."

"As long as they would remain."

"You were in the den, in the scene between Dr. Long and the younger Hayward?"

"Yes."

"You—stayed in with Vilis Hayward?"

"Yes."

"Did you think he was in the right?"

"I didn't know—for a moment."

"Then why did you take the stand you did?"

His answer called me from my preoccupation. It rang in the quiet room. He spoke it softly, hesitatingly, yet all other sounds became as nothing.

"Because, Inspector Freeman," he said simply, "I couldn't do any other thing with wisdom. Because Vilis Hayward is going to marry my daughter, Josephine."

After dinner I went—Inspector Freeman in the hall. He called me to one side. Perhaps he was a little more intent, a little more nervous and quiet of motion than in the afternoon.

"I'm in need of your help," he told me.

"And I'm ready to give it."

"Look in the kitchen and see where Ahmad Das is, and what he is doing."

I obeyed, on a plausible excuse. Ahmad Das was pulling the silver, came back to report.

"The coast is clear, then," the inspector exclaimed. "Long, I want you to come with me and search Ahmad's room. I can trust you. I think, when I say that I haven't any further question but that the Hindu is the murderer."

"Then you must have discovered something new."

"No; but he was the one man who went out of the house with Hayward—the one man in striking range. I don't believe the Southleys were implicated; and knowing you as I do by reputation, it is absurd to think that you were. That leaves Ahmad. We know he had hidden his gun, and he had a motive. But the Hindu's a funny duck, isn't he?"

"Did you ever see a man cross the room with such a funny, cat-like stride? He walks as if he had dead cushions on his feet."

We mounted to the third flight; then turned into Ahmad's room; my admiration for Freeman increased mightily when I saw him in action. It was impossible to imagine a more complete search.

"If there's a murderer," there's a bound to be blood," he said.

"Nothing is so convincing to a court as a garment with blood on it. He's been kept pretty busy since the murder, and I don't believe he'd have time to dispose of his things. That's the chance I'm playing for."

But evidently Ahmad Das had foreseen this contingency. The twenty minutes' search of the room while the heads of perspiration from his lean face.

"It's no use," he said. "No clues worth finding."

He started toward the door.

"There's one place you haven't searched at all, I told him."

"Where?" He turned in amazement.

"That drawer full of linen," I pointed to a drawer in the dress-drawer.

"I glanced into it. He wouldn't put it in such an obvious place as that. Even Ahmad Das wouldn't be that much of a fool."

"Perhaps, Inspector Freeman, you have never heard of M. Dupin?"

Inspector Freeman stopped to consider.

"His name's slipped my mind," he confessed.

"M. Dupin was a very famous detective—a Frenchman. A very great American wrote about him long ago."

"Oh, you mean a story-book detective," Freeman scorned. "I'm afraid you've never wanted my time reading such trash. None of 'em were ever practical. Practical men are the go nowadays. The time they wasted in theories and talk—"

"I don't sometimes their theories came out right. Mr. Dupin would have been the first to tell you that for the very reason that you would think that drawer too obvious a place for a man to hide a garment, it would be the very place an astute criminal would hide it. He would know in advance that you wouldn't look there, and therefore it would be a good place. He proved it with the story of a thief who turned into Ahmad's room; after letters, hidden among a packet of other letters, in plain sight."

"It's all right in books; but it doesn't work out in life," Freeman commented.

"Of course I knew that as a

Tiger Trail

Robbie, I believe you call him. There was an answer worth noting.

The Florida darkness is always watching. It comes so gently, so like a dark mist that the blind man says, "You hear the sounds of wild life that the storm of the previous night had stirred."

A flat track raked from the hillside about 75 yards from the scene of the murder he said, "at twilight he had walked near it and had noticed a queer absorption of the stains. It was evidently clotted blood, he thought, and what looked like fragments of flesh."

"You don't mean—human flesh?" Freeman asked. His eyes narrowed, ever so slightly. He was the only one of the colored men who was terrified almost beyond power of speech.

"We didn't waste any more time in the tenacity of my health. Although the slight had fallen, the darkness was nothing of the in-frore as he walked ten paces from me. I could detect the shadows that were the rindles and narrow, and the necker of the shirt was the tenacity of my health."

Full Day of Fun Here July 4 for Those Who Love Contests

The Twin Falls 4th of July Sports Committee composed of T. F. Wilcox, Fred W. Meach, D. D. Accord and Joe Kaehler have arranged, along with all the other interesting events of the day, for an assortment of sports and contests which will interest not only the boys and girls but the grown-ups as well including both men and women and with special interest to the farmers often known as "stray-golf" but in reality the good old game of putting horseshoes.

A Busy Day
The program of contests will begin at 10:00 a. m. in the morning at the Twin Falls city park, which will be immediately followed by the baseball game between Falls-Johnson Bridge scheduled for 10:30 a. m. The Salt Lake-Twin Falls ball game will begin at 10:30 a. m.

The bicycle race will be held at 11:00 a. m.

Horse Shoe Pitching
This event is one of the leading contests of Twin Falls celebration each year. There are men who participate who are experienced tossers and would undoubtedly qualify in tournaments of larger cities. The event is held in the city park, to anyone who wishes to enter the contest. The horse shoe for the event will be an hand and carried by the Committee. This "hard yard" event will be staged in the open lots just north of the city park and will begin with the eliminations at 10:00 a. m.

Races for Boys and Girls
Beginning at 10:00 a. m. in the Twin Falls city park on the green lawn immediately following the patriotic ceremonies and address by Hon. R. D. Leeper, Post Commander of the Idaho State American Legion, boys and girls will have their opportunity for fun in the form of an assortment of races of all kinds including sack races and three-legged races.

Special Contests for Men and Women
At the same time in the City Park at 2:00 p. m. while the boys and girls contests are on there will be staged some sports for men and women in the form of women's ball driving contest, and women's race and fat men's race.

Climbing Pole Climb
The Committee arranged something attractive this year for the boys particularly who are required to wear overalls or old clothes. This event, Climbing a pole, has been a great hit in history for hundreds of years past and is an experience which every boy wants to undertake at least once in his life time. A great big new five dollar bill will be waiting at the top of the pole for the first boy who can reach it.

Many Other Attractions
All of these sports will be grouped around Twin Falls city park and will be arranged in a most interesting manner. For more than a hundred years, it is claimed that the events will be completed in plenty of time for the afternoon Utah-Idaho League baseball and the buckarooing contest. The other sports of the evening including horseshoe, balloon ascension, fireworks and other stunts will proceed in order, but everyone may see all of the interesting events of the day without losing out on any of the events.
