COMPARES 1924 PURCHASES OF IDAHO WITH '27

Steady Progress Is Noted in Idaho's Standard of Living Advance in Gem State, According to Report

(This is the fifth of a series of news articles released through the Pacific Slope News Agency dealing with the economic development in the past few years.)

BOISE — A state's progress is indicated not only by what it produces, but by what it consumes. Purchases made by residents of Idaho in 1927 in comparison with the corresponding purchases in 1924 are of more than ordinary interest.

Structural steel received at cities and towns in eastern Idaho in 1924 amounted to 1924 tons; in 1927 the tonnage was 6486.

Furniture received at those points in 1924 totaled 23,417 tons; in 1927 the tonnage was 21,475.

Flour and mill products received in 1924 totaled 17,940,000 and in 1927 the total was 23,417,000.

Lumber, shingles and lath in 1924 amounted to 48,870 tons and in 1927 to 51,234.

Many people suffer because their energies are frittered away. They have no objective goal. They are doing things they do in a hazy way. They never amount to anything, because there is no big idea behind it.

HOOPER OPENS CAMPAIGN WITH SATURDAY TALK

Exponents Plan for Solving Farm Problem; Praises Hunting-Goatling Regime and Says "Prohibition Must Be Worked Out"

PAULO ALTO, Calif.—Herbert Hoover delivered his Address of Acceptance at Stanford University Saturday.

Nearly one-third of his address was devoted to farm relief, which Hoover termed "the most important economic problem in our nation today."

There are many causes for failure in our agriculture. It is the failure of our production in order to secure lower costs and a more orderly adjustment of the flow of commodities from the consuming areas to the producing areas.

SECRETARY HOOVER'S SPEECH

Following the declarations of Herbert Hoover in his speech at Palo Alto Saturday accepting the Republican nomination for president, interest now centers in what Governor Smith will say in his address to be delivered Wednesday at Albany.

Along with the many praiseworthy paragraphs of the address by the Secretary of Commerce (he still is secretary), outstanding declarations include the stand he has taken on prohibition, which already is being vigorously interpreted; denial that the battle cry of the campaign is a "full dinner pail" as was "previously announced by Chairman Work; and his declaration that the record of Harding-Coolidge administration "constitutes a period of rare courage in leadership and constructive action. . . . Never has a political party been able to look back upon a similar period with more satisfaction."

An Associated Press dispatch Monday from Stanford University said in regard to the Hoover prohibition declaration.

"While some of the political writers, at least, interpreted this as an ultra dry declaration, close friends of the nominee placed a somewhat different construction on the language.

"First, they said that Hoover did not commit himself to the Volstead act, omitting any reference to that statute. They also asserted that the "organized" second time investigation of the facts and causes," proposed by him would go beyond the abuses which have grown up in this country out of the Volstead act; that it would be directed less to the question of the workability of the present law.

"Likewise, these advisers contended, that in the very nature of its working, the nominee's statement that "modification of the enforcement laws which would permit that which the constitution forbids, nullification," left the door open for changes in the present statutes if the investigation showed they were in conflict with the Eighteenth Amendment."

Chairman Work displays rare patience. At the outset of the campaign he declared that the battle cry would be "a full dinner pail," that the campaign would not be carried to the South; that neither the prohibition or religious issues would be used. His decrees have all been upheld by Hoover, who says what is desirable is not a full dinner pail, but "today we demand larger comfort and greater participation in life and leisure."

No acceptance speech in the history of the nation has received such widespread publicity, and likewise no such speech has ever been praised by a political party with such apparent unanimity.

MECHANIZING FOOD

Alarming news comes from chemists meeting in Chicago. They predict the eventual wiping out of agriculture. They say thirty men working in a factory the size of a city block can produce in the form of yeast as much food as 10,000 men tilling 57,000 acres. The time may come, it was said at this meeting, when the pressure of population will create a situation where chemists will convert sunlight and gases of the air into food that will sustain the human body. Such a situation may arise only many, many years from now, the scientists agreed. We are glad.

Picture an existence where eating would be mechanical. Think of having a tablet of concentrated food or a cube of yeast for each meal. Think of the turkey and fixings, the cranberry sauce, and all the other delicious things we have on our table on Thanksgiving Day. Or, for that matter, think of an ordinary square meal. Which would you rather have—the tablet or the meat?

What a sorry thing life will be in that far distant time predicted by the scientists!

It reminds one of a story that Stephen Leacock, Canadian humorist, once wrote, in which he visualized a distant era when all food would be concentrated in tablets. The big family in this story sat about a table, in the center of which was their Thanksgiving Dinner in the form of a tiny pill. Before the father had the chance to divide the pills into tiny pieces for the individual members of the family group, baby grabbed it, and swallowed it. It was a dreadful calamity. Of course Baby died.

But, says Leacock, he had the happy smile on his face of a little boy who had eaten all of a family Thanksgiving Dinner!

At Pine Lake, Michigan, recently a parachute drop took place. The parachute failed to open and the man in it fell 2500 feet to earth making a hole in the hard ground. It was to have been his last aerial stunt.

increase favor to our producers. The domestic market must be protected. Foreign products raised under the aegis of the free trade today competing in our markets. I would use my office and influence to give the farmer the full benefit of our historic tariff policy.

A basic feature of the speech before the nation was the farmer receives for his products and what the minimum consumer pays is done to the benefit of the farmer. The increase in railway rates has been one of the penalties of the war. These business have been added to the cost of the farmer of reaching a market and farm products are sold therefore in a condition of his prices. The farmers of foreign countries have thus been directly aided in their competition with the American farmer. Nature has endowed us with a great supply of inland waterways. Their modernization will constitute a most substantial contribution to midwest farm life and to the development of the west. These inland waterways are the heart of midwest agriculture to the fact, but also a highway from the great lakes to the Atlantic. These inland waterways would mean no large an increment in farmers' prices as in war years. There is no more vital method of farm relief.

"That we must not stop here. An outstanding proposal of the party program is the wholehearted pledge to undertake the organization of the laboring man upon sounder and more economical lines. We have already contributed greatly to this purpose by our active support of farm cooperatives, the establishment of interlocking credit banks, the creation of stockyards, public exchanges and the expansion of the Department of Agriculture. The platform program to go much further. It pledges the creation of a Federal Farm Board of representatives farmers in its clutch of with authority and authority with which not only to still further aid farmers' cooperatives and public and labor cooperatives in the solution of farm problems, but especially to build up with federal money, farm-owned and farm-controlled stabilization corporations that will protect the farmer from the depression and de-moralization of seasons and periods of depression.

Will Cost Money

"Objection has been made that this program, as laid down by the Party Platform, may require that several hundred millions of dollars of capital be advanced by the Federal Government without obligation upon the individual farmer. With that objection I have little patience. A nation which is spending billions a year can well afford an expenditure of a few hundred millions for a workable program that will give to one-third of its population their fair share of the nation's prosperity. For this proposal put the government into business; except so far as it is called upon to furnish the capital with which to build up the farmer to the control of his own destiny.

"This program adapts itself to the variable conditions of agriculture not only today but which will arise in the future. It does not have that any single human being or any group of human beings can determine in advance the conditions that will arise in so vast and complicated an industry over a term of years. The first step is to create an effective agency directly for the farmer and to give it authority and resources. There are no other countries which have fulfilled by the Republican Party. It is a definite plan of relief. It provides only the intelligent operation of legislation and appropriation to put it into force.

"Purify it to a Secretary of Agriculture. We have already endeavored to build up a system of farm cooperatives, the government has failed to do so. We have endeavored to build up a system of farm cooperatives, the government has failed to do so. We have endeavored to build up a system of farm cooperatives, the government has failed to do so.

"On the subject of prohibition Mr. Hoover repeated his recent declaration: 'I do not favor repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. I stand for efficient enforcement of laws enacted by Congress. Our country has done admirably well in a great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose. It must be worked out constructively.' And he added this: 'Common sense compels us to realize that some nations have accomplished what we are trying to do in this country. They have done so by the use of a more efficient enforcement of laws enacted by Congress. Our country has done admirably well in a great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose. It must be worked out constructively.'

Greater Opportunities

"The working out of agricultural relief constitutes the most important obligation of the next Administration. I stand pledged to these proposals. The subject of our politics is to establish for our farmer an income equal to those of other occupations; for the farmer's wife the same comforts for her home as the farmer's boy and girl the same opportunities in life as other boys and girls. So far as my own efforts may be of service, I dedicate them to help secure prosperity and contentment in other groups; for the farmer boy and girl the same opportunities in life as other boys and girls. So far as my own efforts may be of service, I dedicate them to help secure prosperity and contentment in other groups; for the farmer boy and girl the same opportunities in life as other boys and girls.

"The Republican Party has over the years been the champion of protection to our people from competition from other countries of living abroad. We have always fought for tariff protection from imported goods. We also have enacted restrictions upon immigration for the benefit of our people. We have enacted laws to protect our industry faster than we can absorb them without breaking down our wage levels.

"The Republican principle of an effective control of imported goods and other countries with which we are in competition. There is no selfishness in this defense of our standards of living. It is a definite plan of relief. It provides only the intelligent operation of legislation and appropriation to put it into force.

And he added this: 'Common sense compels us to realize that some nations have accomplished what we are trying to do in this country. How Much Water Should Baby Get?

Daily specialists agree nowadays that during the first six months baby must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. After six months, baby should have four ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast fed baby is less determined by weight than before and after feeding on the whole day and it is easily calculated for the bottle fed baby. Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castor Oil. For three and four year old babies and children such as colic, constipation, diarrhea, gas on stomach, bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., will be relieved by a few drops of Fletcher's Castor Oil. It is purely vegetable, the recipe is on the wrapper and millions of mothers have depended on it for over thirty years of more increasing use. It regulates the bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight and strength. With each package you get a book on children's health which is sent to you. Just a word of caution: look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you will be sure to get the genuine. This formula can be used on children three years of age.

AT THE ORPHEUM THEATRE ON FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

"Coney Island" the 11th drama at Orpheum theatre boasts one of the finest casts that have been seen for some time. Lois Wilson who needs no introduction anywhere, is the leading star and in support are Lucila Stender, late of general successful shows on Broadway, Randolph Hampton, and Eugene Strone. Each one of these artists seen ideally suited for the role in which they are cast. Lucila Stender, daughter of the late president of Venezuela, and a first class dancer who has been playing a role that must have been very easy for her. That of a lightning dancer who finds through her path to happiness is strewn with more than the usual number of thorns.

Lois Wilson is the usual dignified self and Cameron gives what seems to be the finest performance of his career. The direction by that master of the mercophane, Ralph Page, may have something to do with this, for usually "Coney Island" is one of the best directed pictures of the year.

The legislature evidently forgot that this does not always happen—it happens but occasionally. It does not happen this year; for instance, there are only four Tuesdays in August, this year.
