Study the following comparisons and draw your own conclusions. How long has it been since you shipped a car of cattle from Caldwell or Nampa, Portland, Oregon, you will have to pay a freight rate of 100 cents per hundred of 470 lbs. But from Idaho, Montana, to Portland, 965 miles, you will pay only 114.00. More than a 100 per cent longer haul for less than 20 per cent more freight.

Haga Condemns Program of Highway Construction Here

Challenge of the wisdom of the program of highway building for the year 1927 were over $1,250,000,000 of recent years was made by Oliver H. Haga, Boise, past district governor in an address at the Utah-Idaho district convention of the Kiwanis clubs at Ogden, Friday. Mr. Haga's contention was that the most attention should be paid to the opening of market roads over which farmers can move their products, and that less should be spent on motorizing and scenic highways.

Hagerman

"An improved road from the farm to the market, incidentally, returns to the farmer," said Mr. Haga. "It reduces the cost of hauling one ton of product of farm produce, and it reduces the wear and tear on the farm truck. It is an essential part of any program to relieve the depression in agriculture."

Of scenic and motorizing roads, he said: "No one has as yet been able to think of better country roads than the tourist's dollar actually reaches the man on the farm. Not until roads being built now for the purpose of relieving the depression in agriculture, the sportman and the tourist."

"Are we not overlooking the importance of better country roads in the development of our agricultural resources, the background and main support of most of our cities?"

"I suggest the thought that roads are being constructed and constructed with too little consideration to their economic value and their importance in the development of the state. In what line of public activity—open public funds being spent in such large amounts by a few men, with such unrestricted and unlimited discretion as to how, when and where the money shall be spent?"

"We have come in a few years from the old road district, extremely local in its management and simple in its plans and projects, to a statewide system with millions spent under the direction of a few generations of engineers and experts, employed because of their knowledge of the materials that should be used in road construction."

"Speedier roads are generally promoted by the sportman and lovers of mountain scenery, who see in the construction of such roads added pleasure and enjoyment during leisure hours. It is claimed that such roads also serve to improve the state and that they have a value wholly independent of what little use may be made of them for commercial purposes. It is anyone who is at all competent to judge of such matters appraised the value of that class of spending on the part of the state, the judge of how much a state can afford to spend, or should spend, on roads that kind of advertising."

"The building of highways for motorizing or public purposes is, in the least, a doubtful investment in the spending of public funds, as well as in the field of advertising."

Mr. Haga advised that the publicity of any railroad building he studied. "Railroads follow business," he said, "and are not to be constructed where they are to be profit or pleasure seeker for profit on the investment. Cannot be applied to the principles be applied in the protection and construction of highways by public funds?"

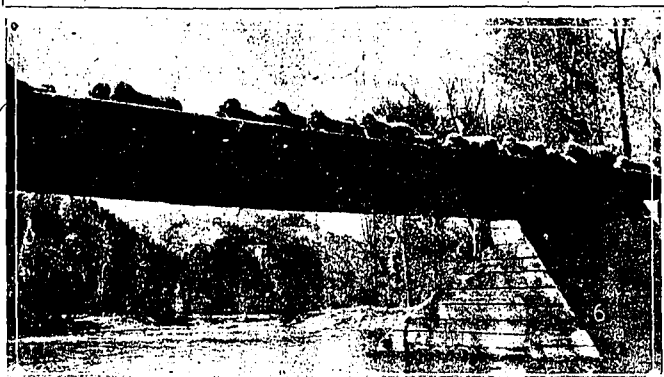

Mr. Haga said, "those who are voted with the taxing power should not only be concerned with the equalization of the tax burden between taxpayers who are here today so that each class may pay his share of this year's expenses, but they should be equally concerned with the equalization of the payment for public improvements between the taxpayers of today and the taxpayers of tomorrow."

"When the 'pay you go' policy is sound in private business, he said, it is unsound when applied to public improvements. From which more than one generation of taxpayers receive benefits. Speaking of the cost of road building, Mr. Haga said: "The increase in expenditures for roads so rapidly and with such tremendous volume that the figures must challenge the attention of those who take any interest in public affairs. By way of illustration, sixteen of the southern states spent during 1924 for highways and road construction, approximately $12,000,000, while in 1925 the same states spent nearly that one year $477,000,000, or over thirty-five times more than was spent in 1924."

"In the state of Idaho, the ratio increase is fully as large. Where twenty years ago we made an occasional small appropriation for a bridge or an improvement in a local road, we now are spending through our state highway department between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, and in the last fifteen years we have actually expended through that department over $30,000,000. In Utah the increase is perhaps about the same."

"Discussing road building cost throughout the country, he added: "Recent reports show that ex-

New Bridge to Aid Fair Attendance

The prediction is made by Frank J. Keenan, secretary of the Twin Falls county fair which opens Friday after just two weeks from today, that the total paid admissions this year will reach 25,000. Every effort is being made to attain this total, and if the announced program of entertainment is any criterion, this estimate will be well met, in the opinion of observers.

As the Twin Falls-Jerome Inter-county bridge has been erected there the last fair time when there were 22,700 paid admissions at the fair, it is hoped there will be an even greater attendance this year from all over the Twinland county.

As an indication of the close proximity of the fair, the public is reminded that the closing date for a number of entries is Saturday of next week.

The fall fair season in the state starts with the opening of the Twin Falls county fair, this being the first one in the fall. The fair season will conclude with the Pullman Grand Fair and Cora Festival in Boise in October.

It is interesting to note that cooperative marketing has now achieved that degree of importance that all political parties have included plans favorable to this system in their national platforms.

Apparently recognizing the great value and economic necessity of the cooperative marketing movement, the nation has committed itself, in effect, to an uninterrupted continuation of this program.

Big Men from Small Towns

Nobody needs to be told who John D. Rockefeller is. His name has reached the furthest corners of the globe. And everywhere he is known at one of the richest men of all time and one of the wisest.

John D. Rockefeller

To say "John D." is enough. "John D." stands for Rockefeller, and as "Rocky" stood for Roosevelt. You can't say "John D." without everyone immediately knowing whom you mean.

"John D." has taken such good care of his body that he can still play a spectacular game of golf at 80.

This small town boy who was later to have control over a tremendous fortune started work as a clerk in a forwarding and commission house. At 19 he was a partner in a firm of commission merchants which later engaged in the oil business. Out of this firm developed the gigantic Standard Oil Company. Rockefeller was president of this institution until 1911, when he retired.

The total amount of money given by Mr. Rockefeller for philanthropic charities and causes up to 1911 exceeded $500,000,000.

Never has there been such a generous giver. Thousands and thousands of persons have benefited from his philanthropic work. Rockefeller is a self-made man who dressed all of his success and his generosity to his fellow as expressed in his frequent and beautiful gifts to charity and to organizations for study and research is an inspiration to all mankind.

For many years now, Rockefeller has carried with him bright new dimes which he distributes as souvenirs to persons with whom he comes in contact, particularly children. Often he speaks to children and gives them a few well-chosen words on their way on their way to their homes.

For John D. Rockefeller has a love of mankind that has manifested itself in many ways, particularly in his desire to transmit his own wisdom and habits of thrift to others. While few of us can ever expect to gain the riches of Rockefeller, the example of his life shows us what one boy born in a small town could do; how he has been able to reap great benefits through industry and thrift, and how he has shared his good fortune with the world.

Bible Chautauqua Underway Here

Having outgrown its former location, a Bible Chautauqua is being conducted here by Rev. B. W. Marsh and his co-worker Elton D. Shores, has moved to Chautauqua grounds east of the city park.

The speakers are presenting a series of Bible-astronomical subjects with holy writ as the background of every theme. They expect to continue these meetings for some time.

Rev. Mr. Marsh states that the tabernacle tent is commodious and well-lighted and comfortable and that admission is free. A large number of rare and unusual archeological and astronomical pictures are to be on exhibit, he advises.

DEATHS

REGAN—The many friends of Andrew Regan in this section will be shocked to learn of his death in the county general hospital, Friday. Death resulted from pneumonia which he is presumed to have contracted but a day or two previous. He was 40 years of age.
