LAMBS PRODUCE BIGGEST PROFIT FOR SHEEP MEN

Surveys Made in Four Western States Show Wool Is Giving Way to Mutton As Money Maker.

A survey conducted by the Idaho Wool Growers' association and the University of Idaho extension division shows that the profit on each sheep in 42 flocks studied was 24 cents for 1927. There were 182,000 sheep included. The income per ewe was $10.58 and the loss of wool was $10.24. An interesting feature of this study is that only one cent was credited to wool profits, the other 23 cents being profit on lamb sales.

This is compared with the 1928 survey when 58 flocks comprising 202,000 ewes were included. The profit per ewe was $23.63, while in 1925, a total of 148,000 ewes were represented by 47 flocks with a profit of $16.29 per ewe. In 1924 there were 13 flocks with 123,000 ewes, each of which made their owners 47 cents profit.

Similar surveys were made in Wyoming, Utah and California. The latter two states showed a smaller cost of operation and the smaller income from the ewes, with varying proportions of profit. In Wyoming, operation cost and amount of income were about the same as in Idaho. Utah reports a less difference in the proportion of income from lambs and wool. The latter brought $4.84 out of a total income per ewe of $7.95, the wool earning $3.41 per ewe. In the other three states, the lambs brought the growers considerably more profit than the wool did.

Up to about fifty years ago sheepmen depended entirely on wool for their profit on sheep. But lambs have been gradually gaining in value until now they are the most profitable portion of the industry. In some sections more than two-thirds of a sheepman's income is from lambs.

The passing of the cheap range has caused the difference. The mounting cost of feeding and shelter induced the sheepmen's associations and the sheepmen's associations to make surveys in order to determine the relative costs and sources of income. These surveys are becoming more common in the West which produces 70 per cent of the nation's wool clip.

WATERWORKS BONDS FOUND

In regular meeting Monday night the Twin Falls city council was informed that the $10,000 waterworks bonds which had been missing were in the possession of a Denver party. The information came from the fiscal agent, Denver, who asked that interest on the bonds during the year 1928 be paid, together with interest for the last six months of 1927.

Since the bonds came due January 1, 1928, the council refused to pay interest for the last year, and accordingly another telegram came from Denver Tuesday saying the bonds would be delivered on payment of interest for the six months to 1927. This amounts to $300, according to City Clerk G. M. Hall.

The council refused a claim for $1,380 damages asked by J. H. Casey whose son, Giles Casey, was injured in an automobile accident with a city-owned car.

W. Cleg Smith, city electrical inspector, was assured that all ordinances relating to inspection of electrical work in the city had not been repealed as some electricians in town think. Only those provisions requiring examination and licensing of electrical contractors were repealed some time ago, and other provisions of this law remain.

BOY COMMITTED

The first case handled by the juvenile court since 1929 officers were sworn in occurred Tuesday when LeRoy Allison, 17-year-old Rogers youth, was taken from his mother's custody and sent to the industrial school at St. Anthony. He is said to have committed some mischief in various ways since he was given into his mother's care last month.

Two Weeks

TO LIVE LONG, EAT LITTLE.
A SMALL PIECE OF LAND.
NO PEACE PRIZE.
TWO COOLIDGE VIRTUES.

Reasonable expectation of life is now limited to fifty-five years the average. Formerly, when open sewers ran through streets, when cowards on hillside draining into wells below, life averaged less than twenty years. Science says we may have sufficient medical knowledge to make life's expectation forty years longer, but we don't use what we know.

The big problem is extending life for the middle class. The middle class is not understood, prolonging life is not complicated. It is a very simple and health properly and living to misery will not be difficult. Failure is costly and important. We are what we eat.

Laura Corbett died when, at forty years of age, doctors told him his case was hopeless.

Reynolds, a well known writer of solid food, with fifteen ounces of light white per day, wrote an interesting book when he was ninety. He lived past one hundred and wrote a book about it. He said, "I mounted my horse without difficulty and had to live fast about to realize that the world is here to be lived, and the past one hundred years of the Corbett's life, as do other ancient writers."

Mr. Rockefeller will use part of the property for a new Opera House, to be built in a fashionable neighborhood, to be named the Rockefeller.

An association organized in honor of the late President Woodrow Wilson, will give a dinner at the Grand Hotel on Friday night.

President Coolidge deserves two prizes, for continuing to mind his business of the United States, and for continuing to mind his business of the United States.

Perhaps the Woodrow Wilson committee did it to honor any Republican. The colored lady whose apartment was invaded by a brigadier, while a Bryan parade was being held in the city, screamed, she put her head out of the window and cried, "I didn't want folks to think I was listening."

County Agent R. E. Brown has outlined a program to be given when D. H. Fox, field director of state university agricultural department, and Assistant Animal Husbandman John T. Montgomery, visit Twin Falls county next week.

A meeting will be held in Buhl Monday, the 28th and at Kimberly, Tuesday, January 29. No meeting will be held at Twin Falls because an assembly of a similar nature will be conducted soon by students taking Sixth-Grade work in the high school.

Subjects to be discussed at the dairy school at these meetings will be "The Dairy Situation"; "Breeding for High Production"; "Feeding Dairy Cattle, Winter and Summer"; Care and Management of Dairy Buildings."

The program for the winter portion of the meeting will concern feeding and management of dairy cattle. This will be in the nature of a school the same as the dairy school last year.

Another school in farm forestry will be conducted here next month, one meeting at Buhl February 13 and the second at Twin Falls February 14. This will be in charge of A. M. Sawyer of the state university forestry department. The school will concern the planting of farm forests will be illustrated with motion pictures and lectures.

Mr. Broadhead has a demonstration in potato culture tentatively planned for some date during the next few weeks.

NATIONAL FARM OFFICERS STATE GRANGE PLANS

James C. Farmer, National Lecturer, Addresses Seventy-five Grange Men at First Western Tour.

The four-point plan of the National Farm Grange for the year 1929 was outlined on three occasions in Twin Falls county last week by James C. Farmer, national grange lecturer of South New York.

Mr. Farmer is spending his first visit west of Kansas and his next will be in Idaho and Oregon. He spoke at Buhl and Kimberly Saturday with Mrs. Walter Johnson of Kuna, state grange lecturer for the Northwest.

He spoke at Buhl and Kimberly on Sunday at the grange meeting at Jerome station and on Monday at the grange meeting at Mayfield. He will also speak at Boise, Gooding and then to Boise.

The first of the four plans Mr. Farmer outlined was the four-point plan of the National Farm Grange for the year 1929.

The second of the four points concerns the farm relief act, which provides for the devaluation of farm mortgages.

The third proposal of the grange is the creation of a cooperative marketing system for the products of agriculture.

The fourth point involves reclamation projects. Since agricultural lands are being reclaimed, it is practical to start reclamation projects.

The committee in charge of the boxing card is being conducted by the Twin Falls Amateur Athletic Association.

The examination scheduled for February 8, the date of the examination will be held at the residence of the carrier and will be held on the premises of the carrier.

Mr. Broadhead has a demonstration in potato culture tentatively planned for some date during the next few weeks.

HIGHER FARM TARIFF ASKED

The committee appointed at the tariff conference in Buhl early this month has drawn up a draft of the demands of agriculture for increased protection. The draft will be sent to congress for consideration along with recommendations for a higher sugar tariff.

The recommendations embraced in this draft cover the suggestion of a number of farm organizations in the state and include about two score products.

These recommendations are very similar to those made by the American Farm Bureau. Orchardists urged by the tax conference that the tariff on apples be authorized by congress.

The Utah legislature has already authorized the state to have having been adopted several days ago.

Members of the Idaho Turkey Growers' association received a million dollars for their 1928 crop.

Prices for No. 1 turkeys were 41 cents for the Thanksgiving pool and 37 cents for the January pool.

Lawmakers Are Kept Busy Now Considering New Bills As They Are Introduced.

Although the busy season for bills will not be reached for a week or two yet, a considerable number were introduced in the Idaho legislature last week.

One of local interest is a bill of County Assessor Clark Ewalt which he took with him to Boise Monday and intended to have introduced by one of the county's representatives while he is there.

The bill deals with the water rights of the state and is intended to provide for the water rights of the state.

Another bill introduced by Senator Barrett of Gooding county is one which will provide for the water rights of the state.

THE DESIRABLE LOVER

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

ILLUSTRATED BY FRANK BARRIEN

Palermo is like a night bloom which opens only with the first breath of evening. By day it is parched and sleepy and stupid—by night, it is alive and joyous—the place itself becomes an all-frasco paradise.

By day, those who can, sleep; by night, they awake and don their finest clothing, and Palermo is gay.

The terrace of the Hotel de l'Europe extends to the very verge of the promenade, and, night by night, is crowded with men of all conditions and nations, who sit before little marble tables facing the sea. At one of these, so close to the promenade that the breeze of the passers-by almost touched them, two men were seated.

One was of an order and race easily to be distinguished in any quarter of the globe—an English gentleman. He was tall and handsome, and young enough not to have outlived enthusiasm, for he was looking out upon the gay scene with keen interest. His features were well cut, his eyes were blue, and his bronzed face was smooth, save for a slight, well formed mustache. He wore a brown tweed coat and waistcoat, flannel trousers, a straw hat tilted over his eyes, and he was smoking a long pipe.

His companion was of a different type. He was of medium height, only, and his hair—his complexion was sallow, and his eyes and hair were black. His features, though not altogether pleasing, were regular and most classical in outline. His clothes displayed him to the worst possible advantage. He wore black trousers and a dark frock coat, tightly fitting, which accentuated the narrowness of his shoulders. The only relief to the somberness of his attire consisted in a white flower, carefully fastened in his buttonhole.

They were only acquaintances, these two men; they had never brought them together for some evil purpose of her own. They had become for a while companions, about a year ago.

The Englishman was in far too good a humor with himself, the place, and his surroundings, to hold his peace for long. He changed his pipe for a Havana, and commenced to talk.

"I tell you, my friend, I don't know, I've quite forgotten your name for the moment. I remember my cousin, Sir Davenport, introducing us at Rome, and I know you again directly I saw. But I'm hanged if I can think of your name. I always had a precious bad memory."

The Sicilian looked none too well pleased at the implied remark.

"I do not mind telling you my name," he said in a low tone, sunk almost to a whisper, "but you will punish me if I do not tell you what which may appear somewhat singular to you. I do not wish you to address me by it here, or to mention it. To be frank there are two reasons for wishing my presence in this neighborhood not to be known. You are a gentleman and you will understand."

"Oh, perfectly," the Englishman answered him, in a tone of blank bewilderment.

"My name is Leonardo di Marloni!"

"By Jove! of course it is!" the Englishman exclaimed, "I should have thought of it in a moment."

"You will not forget my request, and if you have occasion to address me, perhaps you will be so good as to do so by the name of 'Cortesi.' It is the name by which I am known here, and to which I have some right."

The Englishman nodded.

"All right, I'll remember. By the by, if you want on, I had the pleasure of meeting your sister in Naples, I believe. She is engaged to marry Martin Brisco, isn't she?"

The Sicilian's face shone brightly into a glow; the thin lips were tightly compressed, and his eyes flashed with angry light.

"I was not aware of it," he answered haughtily.

There was a brief lull in the stream of conversation.

The Englishman looked into the eyes of the most beautiful woman he had ever seen. A flood of silver moonlight lay upon the Marloni's inexpressible delicateness, as though they were indeed emblematic of the spotless purity of that fair young being. Was it the chastened light, or was there indeed something spiritual, something more than humanly beautiful, perfect in its outline, perfect in its faint coloring and stately poise? She was walking slowly, her every movement full of a distinct and deliberate grace, and they heard a little upturned, as though her thought were far away among the softly burning stars, rather than concerned with the fashionable and picturesque crowd which thronged around her.

A remark from her companion, a girl of somewhat slighter stature and dark complexion, caused her to lower her eyes, and in doing so they fell upon the eager, impassioned gaze of the young Englishman.

Afterwards he was never ashamed to confess that the moment brought with it a peculiar lingering sweetness which never altogether died away. It was the line, glancing away across the dark blue of the bay, and the soft dazzling light greatly touched her hair, and gleamed in her dark, sweet eyes. She was tall, and clad in white flaring draperies clinging softly around her slim, girlish figure, and giving her appearance birth of a new sentiment, the most refinement of all sensations, his all-asking, all-giving. "I fear that I do not quite understand you," he said quietly, although his voice and limbs were trembling with passion; "to whom do you allude?"

"The girl in white who passed just now. You know her? Tell me her name."

"Why should I?"

"I wish to know it."

"Possibly. But that it no reason why I should tell it to you. That lady is a friend of mine, certainly, but it is not the custom in my country, however it may be in yours, to family a lady's name about a public place."

The State We Live In

By BYRON DEFENBACH
State Treasurer

"Listen, old timer, one minute to me. As I sing of the Cruise of the Sho-shone."

—Captain John Atkins, Lewis and Clark.

The mouth of the Boise River, at the foot of Baker near the present town of Parma, home of Governor Blairbridge. A big stern wheeler was launched there in 1840, since which time the governor of Idaho has always been commander-in-chief of its army and navy.

The Sho-shone was built of mountain pine, whipsawed and hewed in the nearby hills; it's unfinished iron came to by pack train. Currently in construction, this boat operated profitably until it got out of business by the Kellon, Utah, stage line to Boise. Then the state's treasury for Huntington to Lewiston, under command of Captain Cy Smith. Suddenly confronted with the horrors of the line canyon, Cy set his emergency. "Looks to me like suicide," sighed Cy. He moored her to one of the Seven Devils and walked home.

In March, 1870, Captain Ben Miller and Engineer Duchanan of Portland under orders to bring that long-dormant dead or alive. Their supplies consisted mostly of a variegated assortment of things, including a few live animals, a wagon, boat, on horseback, afoot, they reached the stranded steamer with a crew of five men and a lot of supplies running backward, she began to shoot the rapids. Reversing the engine, she ran up the English shore, one might say.

Down into one of the world's great gorges, into much of which the sun never looks. The Copper River, sometimes raised suddenly ahead. On their right, a vertical wall of 7,000 feet, the tips of the Devils going on up to 9,000. This side of the wall had fallen a mile in the last five minutes, slammed into the main channel, the Walrus raised their snow-crowned crests 10,000 feet. Down went the boat's bow, 8 feet of it torn off by projecting rocks. Up went the great stern wheel, clear of the water. Its paddles ripping off in the main "speed." In this mad stream of noise, language must be imagined. The captain, seeing the flying propeller above and behind him, yelled at the engineer, perhaps asking, "What the—? Why he thought he was, anyhow." Lind-never lessened. It lasted forever. For some men it is not impossible to give up to the worship of a pure woman; stiffness forbids it. But this young Englishman who sat there spellbound, absorbed in the consciousness of this new and sweet emotion, was not one of these.

Suddenly she withdrew her eyes with a faint, conscious blush, and as she did so she saw for the first time the Sicilian. Her whole aspect quickly changed. A terrific shudder swept across her features, and her lips parted with fear.

"Who is she?" the Englishman asked abruptly.

"I fear that I do not quite understand you," he said quietly, although his voice and limbs were trembling with passion; "to whom do you allude?"

"The girl in white who passed just now. You know her? Tell me her name."

"Why should I?"

"I wish to know it."

"Possibly. But that it no reason why I should tell it to you. That lady is a friend of mine, certainly, but it is not the custom in my country, however it may be in yours, to family a lady's name about a public place."

The pilot house buckled under the strain until the bell played the same chorus; the engineer, blaming the tactics of the confounding signals, respectively addressed him in unamalgamable language. The jack-staff fell off and a few minutes later floated into Umatilla, 250 miles down the river, there to be taken as evidence that all was lost. Sinking the whirl pool at the bottom, they out turned completely around, three times. All that in the earlier and cooler stages of the trip; later on there was real trouble.

Yet the boat survived, reached and passed Lewiston, going too fast to stop more than a couple of days. Went on over the Dalles, steamed proudly into the water; in 1874, she sank at Salmon. Later she was raised, her wooden machinery salvaged, her wooden hull sold to a farmer. She became a hircop on the banks of the Willamette; in that eternal rain she rotted into oblivion.

Such loose ends do the best of us sometimes come.

Laws Coming

almost certain to cause a "race" argument.

Representative Keating of Kootenai county proposes an appropriation of $35,000 for construction of a governor's mansion, this being an increase of $15,000 on an appropriation already proposed for this purpose.

Another bill proposes to grant titles of the first class the privilege of exempting from the tax, even though they had to be outside the county in which such city property is located, for the assessments for maintenance.

An act to repeal the laws against carnivals shows, labor contracts for Idaho, for the maintenance of forestry tracts and allowing county districts to institute proceedings for county division, has been introduced. These measures are said to be obsolete, the "shimmy" dance of the carnival shows being no more in vogue, the trusts having ceased to offend and other measures be of little value unnecessary.

This bill was introduced in the legislature in 1927, but has not been expected to come in this year.

A proposal to increase the wage hunting to ten cents per acre is expected to be adopted, the extra funds to be used for carrying on fish planting. Various sportsmen's organizations have approved this measure.

Who Pays For Advertising?

WHO PAYS for the advertising carried by your firm? That is, who eventually pays? Does your firm really pay for it—or is it the buying public? The truth is that neither your firm nor the public pays for your advertising. If you will reason it out, you will find that it is—who thinks he can get along with very little, if any, advertising, who really pays for your advertising. What your firm wins in sales volume, your competitor loses, doesn't he? Therefore, he is the one who eventually pays.

Some ill-informed dealers think that advertising takes part of their profit. Too many persons put advertising down as an expense. Advertising, if rightly placed where it will reach those whom it is desired to reach, is an excellent investment which is sure to bring returns. But a firm must be a constant advertiser to get results. Little can be expected if hit-and-miss methods are employed. Advertising must be planned in terms of a definite and complete campaign. The amount of money to be used, the length of time of the campaign, the methods, all have to be carefully decided, and the final results will depend largely on the strict adherence to the original plan.

The Idaho Citizen is one of the very best advertising mediums of the Twinland Empire. It goes into the homes of people who have money to spend for the things they want or need—your advertising appeal will be read by these thousands of prosperous people and will materially aid you in building a larger business. Well written and properly displayed advertising is the motive power of modern business. Without it there can be little progress. This is recognized by the successful business man as a truth.

THE PRESIDENT CAN ENFORCE THE LAW

By GIFFORD PINCHOT.

We have laws enough, regulations enough, money enough, and men enough to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment—if they had a strong purpose to enforce behind them. Only determination is lacking.

There is but one man who can supply the will to enforce a Nation-wide scale. That is the President of the United States.

Enforcement is hamstrung by politics. The President alone is strong enough to break the alliance between corrupt politics and the organized business of bootlegging.

Through its permit system, the Government exercises exclusive jurisdiction over the manufacture, storage, distribution, and sale of alcohol in any form. Here is the heart of the problem. Only the president can dominate it.

The Constitution is under attack at the point of the Eighteenth Amendment. The President has taken oath to "preserve, protect, and defend" it. The laws are disregarded. "It is his Constitutional duty to 'take care that the laws be faithfully executed.'" Is it unreasonable to expect him to do so?

The President can begin to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act up to the level of other laws by declaring publicly his determination to do so; by announcing that he will refuse to offer an appointment to his Cabinet or to any other office to any one who is not a good enough American to obey the Constitution; by giving public notice that so long as he is President violation of the 18th Amendment by any public servant will carry with it immediate dismissal; and by announcing that federal enforcement will be wholly divorced from politics.

Having thus notified the people that the Government takes the Constitution seriously, let the President proceed to:

Call together in the White House, the heads of the Bureau of Prohibition and other Federal enforcement services, and notify them in open meeting that they and their subordinates must not only be dry but efficient, and that unless they begin to produce results within three months better men will take their places.

Call together in the White House all United States District Attorneys, and give them also notice to show results within three months or get out.

The known failure of enforcement in the City of Washington has immensely encouraged lawlessness throughout the country. Let the President give the Commissioners for the District of Columbia notice to begin cleaning up at once, and make and keep the District of Columbia clean under penalty of dismissal.

Having thus notified the enforcement officials that the President will stand for nothing less than real enforcement, let him set over the enforcement services as his personal representative a coordinating officer with large executive experience and a real interest in law enforcement, and direct him to make those agencies work together, and to attack the flow of illegal drink at the source.

Let the President also at various times invite to meet him in the White House, the Governors of the several states, the mayors of the 100 greatest cities, the leaders of the great professions, industries and corporations, and the heads of the churches, the dry organizations, the women's organizations, and others, and ask for their help in enforcement, and in arousing public support for the law.

The methods alone suggested for the President require no action by Congress, and add nothing to the cost of enforcement. They are practical, appropriate, and within the President's Constitutional duty. Every one of them has already in very similar situations been shown to be effective by the test of actual use.

Although the President can enforce the Eighteenth Amendment under the statute law we have, certain improvements in the law and the regulations are doubtless desirable. But these changes, which a President determined to enforce could easily secure, as well as the proposed removal of the Prohibition Bureau to the Department of Justice, are far less important than the firm intention of the President himself that the law shall be enforced.

Still other ways of reaching the situation are open to the President. For example: the free and unlimited importation of liquors by diplomatic representatives is a chief source of the wetness of Washington. If the President, following the far stronger precedent set by the British Government years ago in the matter of slaves, should suggest to all foreign governments that he would regard it as a friendly act if they would instruct their representatives to import no more alcoholic liquors, the attitude of official Washington toward the Eighteenth Amendment would change overnight.

It will be objected that the president is already too heavily burdened to undertake new tasks. The answer is that he has no duty more essential than to defend the Constitution and enforce the law. If something else must wait, then let it wait.

But in fact nothing need wait. For practical experience shows that everything here outlined, and much more, can be done without absorbing five per cent of the President's working time. Once it were known that the President was thoroughly determined to enforce the law the rest would follow almost as a matter of course.

When a President of the United States makes it his personal business to see that the Eighteenth Amendment is enforced, and sticks to it, it will be enforced. And not until then.

RED CLOVER

Farmers throughout the state are extremely enthusiastic about red clover seed production, says C. B. Athol, field agronomist with the University of Idaho agricultural extension division and state seed commissioner. The survey of the clover seed situation, he says, indicates that Idaho farmers profitably can keep red clover in their rotations.

The good prices of recent years have had a tendency to increase the acreage. It is the history of the clover seed industry, like other industries, that high prices stimulate acreage. Practically all sections of southern Idaho are well adapted to the production of red clover seed. The industry also has promising possibilities throughout northern Idaho.

Many farmers will hesitate to purchase clean seed because of the initial cost of seed and often times resort to the planting of cheap seed which invariably it not profitable for a second crop. The resultant crop is likely to be weedy and not command a price equivalent to that of No. 1 grade seed. The planting of inferior seed will not bring profitable returns and the grower will condemn the red clover seed industry when he is at fault.

If the grower cannot afford to plant the recommended amount of 8 or 10 pounds of high quality seed per acre, it would be better to plant less seed of good quality than a surplus amount of inferior seed, which will contaminate the good, clean, well-prepared seed bed.

STEWART HAS NEW BILL FOR LEGISLATURE

County Assessor Proposes Revision of System of Assessing Power Plants.

County Assessor, S. Claud Stewart, today introduced a new bill in the legislature to change the present method of assessing power plants.

The bill provides that Section 1192, Article 5, Chapter 14, of the compiled Idaho statutes should be changed to read as it did prior to 1916 when an amendment was passed providing that the power plant should be assessed on the value of the property in which they are located, with other counties to share in the taxes only according to the mileage of transmission lines from these power plants that will within their boundaries.

Mr. Stewart points out that the railroads and other public utilities are assessed in a different manner. The Oregon law, which is property in the state, for instance, is assessed in its entirety and the taxes from the whole enterprise are divided among the counties according to the number of miles of such railroad within their boundaries.

Mr. Stewart refers to the fact that the Idaho Power company has three power plants in Gooding county and the Shoshone falls plant in the Jerome county side of the river. Twin Falls county gets no benefit from the tax value of these properties although they are a great extent within this county.

Since railroads and other public utilities have their taxes prorated among the counties on the basis of full valuation, why should the power plants not be handled in the same manner?

Mr. Stewart says that under the present law, if a power plant is located in one county, it pays for a different method of distributing tax monies they pay so that the counties which support these plants would get their share of the taxes. If this were done, Twin Falls county would possess approximately a quarter of a million dollars, Idaho Falls, 100,000, and the other counties, 100,000 each.

Western Auto Head Sees More Progress

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 18.—The outlook for 1920 in the automotive industry promises continued success and development, according to George Peppercorn, president of the Western Auto Supply company, said today.

Conditions appear most promising for the year, during the coming year, according to Mr. Peppercorn, who stated that business is sound, all lines of industry are expanding smoothly, crop conditions in the west, as a whole, are excellent and the extended growth of the foreign market is still another factor that will all contribute to the success of the year.

HOOVER OWNS BIG RANCH IN CALIFORNIA

Said to Have Practical Experience.—Working Out Farm Relief.

Herbert Hoover, president-elect of the United States, will not be without practical farming experience when he comes to work out farm relief measures during his term of office. Although little was reported about his recent campaign, he has owned a 1313 acre farm in California since 1920 and he has operated it, not only as a business enterprise, but also as a base for practical agricultural experiments.

Diversified farming is a fundamental part of the Hoover program. Here is how the Hoover farm operations are divided: Vineyards, 435 acres producing 11 varieties of table grapes; a yearly output of about 600,000 pounds; between 60 and 320 acre yielding seven tons to the acre; 200 acres in alfalfa, cut and cured twice a year; 150 acres in potatoes; 120 acres in Spanish onions; 40 to 60 acres in sweet potatoes; 70 acres in apricots.

In addition there are about 2500 laying hens, 200 sows and 150 pigs. As many as 200 employees are at work during peak harvest seasons, and the annual payroll is about $75,000.

Considerable experimental work is done on the farm and a good part of this has been in connection with poultry work. Most recent experimenting on the Hoover farm has to do with the hog-raising industry, the present herd of 200 sows being the nucleus for further expansion and experimentation work.

President-elect Hoover owns this farm jointly with Ralph Merrill. The farm is located about 280 miles south of San Francisco and 100 miles north of Los Angeles, on the main line of the Santa Fe railway. It is three miles south of the Little town of Wasco, and is one of the largest cultivated ranches in that vicinity.

With competition so keen in all branches, the automotive dealer or distributor who can offer the best value and the most efficient service will be rewarded with the business. The public's approval is the surest proof that a business is being conducted along proper lines.

During 1920, motorists of the west may expect that all times Western Auto will strive to render even more efficient service, give the best values possible for the money and continue to work over last year with the positive guarantee of satisfaction.

Edmond Lowe, early day settler near Starbuck Ferry, near the present town of Burley, was born in 1858. He is estimated that 110,720,000 bushels of the holdings in this season are located in the 12 states of the wheat-producing states, which exceeds last year's holdings in three states by 22,000,000 bushels.

Hardware Firm Changes Hands

L. E. Salsaday of the Salsaday Hardware company last week purchased the stock of the firm located in the Columbia basin in order to eliminate as much grange opposition as possible.

Mr. Salsaday was one of the earliest business men in Twin Falls, having established the Twin Falls Hardware company with Fred Williams 25 years ago on January 25. Their association lasted about ten years ago and after a short time Mr. Salsaday established the business bearing its present name.

The faculty of the University of Idaho with special committees are working on President Frederick J. Kelly's plan to have the school divided into senior and junior departments. The contemplated division will be made between the sophomore and junior classes, the lower commencing at a junior college to provide for a general education and the higher classes to be devoted more to specialization of students along definite courses of study.
