BORAH, GOOD AMERICAN GROW YOUR OWN FUR COATS
 EINSTEIN'S DISCOVERY PUBLISHERS, CHEER UP

Senator Borah, good American, fears that if we build cruisers with our machine armaments facing west to Britain we shall have a "shipbuilding race with England." If necessary, he says, we have to attack Britain first. The British, while they could dominate the world, the United States of America would be the only nation to which they could not attack.

The British, while they could dominate the world, the United States of America would be the only nation to which they could not attack.

It is Uncle Sam's turn now. Airplanes, submarines, fast cruisers will now carry any question any other nation, and this country should lay the answer ready.

Some year ago, for fear of losing the Union Valley of the Agricultural Department, that the machine armaments facing west to Britain we shall have a "shipbuilding race with England." If necessary, he says, we have to attack Britain first.

Walter Dyer, official tester for the Pioneer Co. testing association which has several dairy farmers of the first accreditation as members, as well as the Twin Falls county territory, announced that Donald Adams has the honor of having his herd average in herd ranking from ten to twenty cows for the month of January. The 15 registered Holstein cows owned by Mr. Adams averaged 1128 pounds of milk and 29 lbs. of butterfat for the month. Adams had a registered Holstein on the honor roll for the month with a record of 192 lbs. of milk and 27 pounds of butterfat for January. Floyd Brown had a grade Jersey cow that made the honor roll producing 200 1/2 lbs. of milk and 25 lbs. of butterfat. Mr. Brown has just completed his testing in this vicinity for the month and the above figures are his official record.

PRAYER A suggestion of the university of prayer is found in the "Psalms" on the amount of both the amount of prayer to be made and the amount of prayer to be made.

The disciples asked Jesus to teach them how to pray and the model called the Lord's Prayer is the answer. While we are to follow the general content of the Lord's Prayer, we must not copy it as a prayer, however, rather than a form of meditation.

The prayer is by a formal recognition of being and an admission concerning Him. It is in this manner of prayer that we should pray for ourselves and for others. In this manner of prayer we should pray for ourselves and for others.

WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE
Palermo to the scene. There an avowed, handsome and charming man for love of Adrienne Car-tueto, who sprang him. He meets an Englishman, Lord St. Maurice, who falls in love with Adrienne on sight. Leonardo sees his sister Margaritha, who tells him to arrange for Adrienne a hopeless. But he pleads with her to arrange an accidental meeting, to say farewell, between Adrienne and him. She consents. That night the Englishman is informed of an attempt being made to carry off Signora Carueto and Margaritha, who are walking, by brigands employed by a rejected suitor, on a lonely road. He rushes to the scene and proves able to rescue the ladies.

"In England, Signor, your first objection is valid; here, it is strictly so. As to the latter, Monsieur le Count seems not to be perfectly competent. I am on the contrary, Lord St. Maurice, who I must crass, your name if you persist in your refusal."
"I don't care two straws about your name," Lord St. Maurice answered carelessly. "As for the duel, I decline it, now and for all. The Englishman has a real honor of our race, and it is more to us than the custom of the countries which we chance to visit. I wish you good-night gentlemen."

Then, the Sicilian leaped forward and struck the Englishman moment he changed his mind, and with a contemptuous gesture set him sprawling in the midst of them, breathless and chiding.
"You can send your second as soon as you like," he said shortly. "Good-evening, gentlemen."
They fell back before him like sheep leaving a broad way right into the hotel, through which he passed, stern and self-possessed. The Sicilian watched him coolly, with twitching lips.
"There goes a brave man," whispered one of the Palermoans

Inflamed by the failure of his scheme, Leonardo sees Margaritha who shows him she knows that he was instigator of the attempted attack. The Englishman now sees Adrienne after. The latter is sitting in the hotel, finds a dagger at his feet. Looking up, he sees the Sicilian, and scents trouble. "We are not here," she says to Leonardo. Lord St. Maurice nods.

Suddenly, with the witness of a tiger-ent, the Sicilian leaped forward and struck the Englishman on the cheek.
They fell back, impressed in the spirit of themselves by the coolness and haughtiness of his words, and with the witness of a tiger-ent on the cheek.
The Sicilian struggled, but he was like a child in the Englishman's arms.
He had caught him up in a vice-like grasp, and held him high over the heads of the astonished on-lookers. For a moment he seemed as though he were going to throw him right out of the restaurant on to the Marina, but at the last moment he explained to the Englishman.

Two men stood facing one another on an narrow belt of sand, clapped in the shirt and with their hands. Once the Sicilian, Leonardo di Marioni, the other the Englishman, Lord St. Maurice. Their attitude suited for itself. They were about to fight for each other's life.

To Lord St. Maurice, the Sicilian's words and gesture seemed only grotesque. He looked at him a little contemptuously—a thin, slender figure, dressed in a simple and seeming all the thinner on account of his slender black attire. What a husband for Adrienne! How had he dared to love so magnificent a creature. The very idea of such a man threatening him seemed absurd. Lord St. Maurice, an athlete of public opinion and college renown, with muscles like iron, and the stature of a giant. He was not a man to be had and he had not a particle of fear, but his stock of patience was getting exhausted.
"How do you go to do the killing?" he asked. "Pardon my ignorance, but it is evidently one of the customs of the country which has not been explained to me. How do you manage it?"
"I should kill you in a duel!" the Sicilian answered. "It would be the same thing."
The Englishman burst out laughing. It was too grotesque, almost like a huge joke.
"You and your sister," he said, looking at her, "are entering over my companion. Look here, Mr. di Marioni, I've listened to a number of lectures, but I've heard enough of you. I don't know whether you understand the slang of a fight, but I do understand what I mean when I tell you that you've been talking 'bull' to me. We may as well let it go. You are not a coward, and no one but a coward would dream of giving a girl up for such a tissue of whistlings. Be a man, sir, and get over it, and look here, none of this sort of business."
He threw the dagger from his breast pocket and patted it. The Sicilian was speechless and livid with rage.
"You are a coward!" he hissed. "You shall fight with me!"
"Think I won't," Lord St. Maurice answered good-naturedly. "Just take my advice. Make up your mind that we both can't have her, and she's always to be come and give you a man, and a man. Think it over, now, before the morning. Good-night!"
The Sicilian glared at him and looked rapidly around. At an adjoining table he recognized two men, touched one on the shoulder.
"Signora!" he cried, "and you, Signor di Capatone, pardon me if I ask you for your hearing for an instant. This gentleman here has insulted me, and declines to give me satisfaction. I have called him a coward and a rascal, and he has spat it! His name is Lord St. Maurice. If he forbids his right to be considered a gentleman, I demand that his name be struck off the visitor's club."
The three men had risen to their feet. Two of them were the men of the neighborhood with whom Lord St. Maurice had been acquainted. The third was a French officer. They looked inquisitively at Lord St. Maurice.
"It is quite true, gentlemen," he said with easy self-possession. He's been calling me all the names under the sun, and I have declined to give him what he calls satisfaction. I haven't the least objection to your knowing it."
The two Palermoans looked at one another doubtfully. The officer, giving his moustache a twist, stepped forward and bowed.
"Might we inquire your reason for declining the duel?" he asked.
The Englishman shrugged his shoulders.
"Certainly," he answered. "In the first place, I am an officer in the service of Her Majesty the Queen, and duelling is strictly forbidden; in the second, Signor di Marioni is so excited to know what he is talking about."

make it illegal to advertise tobacco on sign boards on the ground that it is a temptation to minors. The bill also changes the sign board advertisements as being untrue and misleading. The measure was signed by 25 of the state's 41 senators.
Farm bills have been prominently to the fore this week. The oleomargarine bill is coming up after considerable work on its preparation. It provides for licensing wholesale dealers to the amount of $200 and retail dealers $50. Supporters of this measure refused to make it a provision that it be a license to sell. It has crossed strong opposition and may have to be amended to pass. Opponents declare it is a violation of the constitution. It is of interest and that it would serve only to drive the product into the hands of the chain stores, rather than permitting small dealers to keep it for sale.
Another farm bill provides for registration of all poultry offered for sale as a means of checking thefts. Poultry buyers would be required to keep records of all birds.
Representative Jenkins of Oregon and Budd of Fremont county presented a bill to reappropriation road fund, enabling cities to have 50 per cent of the revenue raised within their borders allocated to their own road development. The other 50 per cent would go for highway construction outside. They contend that farm districts now get 75 per cent of the funds for building city limits, in addition to all the money raised in their districts and that municipalities are entitled to half their own money.

are they seen with a four-row planter in rows 23 inches apart and cultivation follows within four to five days with a four row cultivator set to fit the rows as plants are in. In this way the weeds are kept out of the beans from the very first and under usual weather conditions will be coming up in 10 to 12 days. They can be, and are grown in large fields. Many farmers with 80-acre farms (grow as many as 40 acres of beans and others with larger farms 100 to 200 acres each. Owing to the width of the cultivator this work can be done very fast—15 to 20 acres being the usual day's work.
Harvesting, in early September, is done with the same sort of machinery. Within a few days after harvest beans are threshed by a stationary machine, or on the larger farms by a combine threshing which gathers them from the windrow. After threshing, beans must be run over a fanning mill to remove dirt, bean pods and split or immature beans. Cleaning and sowing plants are conveniently located at all shipping points. From that cleaning all the beans are sacked and neatly even in now 100-pound burlap

"Great Northern beans, in this district, yield from 25 to 35 bushels per acre and 40 bushels is not uncommon. Our growers are getting now $6 per bushel on $1.50 per bushel, making gross returns for in excess of $100 dollars per acre. However, this is an unusually high price owing to a crop shortage over the whole United States as well as in foreign countries. The average price for the farmers for the last five years has been from $2.75 to $3.00 per bushel, making them an income of $15 to a hundred dollars per acre. When they need it, it is not step on the irrigation ditch and turn water down the furrow, and my, how things do grow after they get water!"
"Here's the Twin Falls planter in a nutshell: plant in early Idaho agricultural extension department, early September, and state seed commission and through on the market before October at seventy-five to one hundred dollars per acre. Some lots will be pure and ideal some. Some contract to the poor seed for seed production purposes. All his winter kill or the wind don't blow must be sown and tested and it out in the spring, a little old past the requirements of the seed law or twenty dollars per acre law for Idaho before the seed can be sold, offered, exposed, distributed or held in possession for sale to Twin Falls where it yields up or distribution. To the men who purchase it, they are not all winter—if the conditions are favorable, it has happened to raise a crop—well, according to the state seed law, an income under the most favorable conditions of thirty dollars an acre or more. Or the eastern winter farmer who sows in the fall and harvests in the next August, if he doesn't establish seed dealer. All his winter kill or the wind don't blow must be sown and tested and it out in the spring, a little old past the requirements of the seed law or twenty dollars per acre law for Idaho before the seed can be sold, offered, exposed, distributed or held in possession for sale to Twin Falls where it yields up or distribution. A violation of this provision is considered a misdemeanor.

Farmers buying this seed for seed production should assist on the seed and analysis of the sample. 95 per cent seed may be undesirable for quality seed production. The consumer should be interested in the per cent of pure seed not mentioned. Five tenths of one percent impurity may contain 10 dollar per bushel; 750 sweet clover seed; 300 alfalfa seed; 300 clover seed which are inseparable. The presence of these foreign seeds would mean a sample of high purity undesirable for seed production purposes.
After the farmer has purchased a lot of seed he should send a two-ounce sample to the state seed laboratory, Boise, or to the hamilton seed laboratory, University of Idaho, Moscow, for detailed analysis as a further assurance that the seed is what he paid for.
The cost of red clover seed for an acre is only 50 per cent of the total cost of producing the crop. Mr. Allison concludes, "The cost of seed with that a long rate change has been the smallest item and the most important. The farmer realizes that pure seed is essential the more profitable will be the enterprise."

Warm Alaskan Picture Coming to the Orpheum
The popular misconception that Alaska is a country of continuous winter, ice and snow, is refuted by the Grandeur screen version of Rex Beach's famed novel, "The March of the Kangaroo." "Loving Reed Adair" and "Grand Search" which will be screened at the Orpheum Theatre Friday and Saturday.
The "March of the Kangaroo" is a thrilling tale of Alaskan adventure, and takes place almost entirely during the summer.
According to Rex Beach, the summer climate of central Alaska is a warm one that of the United States. It is a warm, sunny, and clear, which gives the territory a sweep from the tropic part Japan and down to North America, bringing a climate with that of a long rate change has been the smallest item and the only item appearing in the photograph is on the mountain peak. The interior of the country, however, is Arctic and in the north both the coast and the interior become intensely cold.

Grand Search played parts in a small troupe that toured Alaska 10 year ago and declares that the picture used in the screen play are perfect reproductions of buildings, arrangements in an Alaskan mining town.
The supporting cast in "The March of the Kangaroo" includes Lloyd Whitlock, Fred Emulsion, Adolph Altar, Maurice Murphy, Virginia Grove and Jack-Turner.

WHITE SNOW vs. WHITE FLY

Dr. Walter Carter's governmental report on the white fly situation will be made public soon.

In view of the demonstrated fact that absence of a damaging number of white flies is dependent upon a cold winter, and inasmuch as this section admittedly has endured the most severe winter in its history, there should be little conjecture regarding the content of the Carter report.

This means that 1929 should be a bumper beet year. This advance knowledge of prospective crop conditions is most valuable to growers. It means for example, that crop-plans may well be made in February if they have not already been decided upon.

With a smaller potato acreage in prospect in this locality, beets will doubtlessly and logically take the place of some of the land which produced tubers last season.

OUR LEGISLATURE

The Citizen has had very little to say about the present legislature.

There has been little that could be said. Legislatures and other such law-making bodies are proverbially subject to censure, whether they "do" or "don't." Also it takes little brains and less logic to shoot it into a legislature at long-distance range.

Too much is oft-times expected of a state legislature. It is quite possible that valiant services would be rendered the state if little was done excepting the enactment of constitutional requirements, and this is not said sarcastically.

Other welcome legislation is simplification of law, and sane changes over present methods of administering the law.

Tax reduction is always desirable, if possible. But the majority of the people of this state and county by their ballots did not indicate they were interested in tax reduction. Broadly speaking they reelected national, state and county administrations, legislative, as well as executive.

From present indications it is manifest that little if any tax reduction is in prospect in nation, state or county. It becomes more and more evident that our legislature ticks leadership; but despite this, it is almost certain that some good will come out of it yet.

COOPERATIVES TRIUMPH

Nineteen twenty-eight was a remarkably successful year for the various cooperative associations of the Twin-Land Empire, most of which have held their annual meetings and made public their annual reports.

What is more important, they have all, metaphorically hitched their belts for still greater accomplishments in 1929.

The cooperative idea is definitely planted in this region, with such large and successful enterprises as Twin Falls County Cooperative-Dairyman's association, Southern Idaho Bean Growers' association, Egg Producers, Turkey Growers' association and many lesser groups.

The Citizen congratulates these cooperatives and takes no little pride in having the privilege of working with them for continued service and benefit.

G. O. P. RUBIAYATS

Do beneath this dome where ends the Seventh street. Three legislative legislators meet And many a knot unravel not at all— Just milling 'round 's golden moments fleet.

Domes of all shapes, and sizes, large and small And some there were shone like a billiard ball! Some quiet tongues there were, and some That made much noise, but nothing say at all!

The Gov. may seek for wealth intangible And solons force, by his appointive will; This cash, not credit, builds a strong machine And Dave and Jack, though gone, seem present still.

To timber tax they cannot find a key; Power wears a veil through which they cannot see; No mineral wealth, it seems, do we contain. Reduce the tax on land! Ah, that can never be!

No man can answer. E'en Jack of Windsor town Is stumped for fear; twice has got him down. Solutions there are none to him revealed; Deep mystery, alike to sage or clown.

'Tis such a story down the ages rolled That makes one's shivers and one's cold. Great nations oft have over-taxed the earth And passed along to mingle with its mold.

Tax not the mine, McBeth in anguish prays; "Ten million bucks invested scarcely pays." What of the soil, where less is more than gain, And agriculture counts its numbered days?

For a decade the granger loudly eased Unequal taxing, it will surely bust. All those who stand the danger signal fires. Head it or not, the present scheme's unjust.

The Cigarette's will; 'twas in the message writ That we should tax the loathsome cigarette, And fix the pains and penalties for they Who bootleg makin'. It surely strains our wit.

In sixty days a tax to us assign To curb the feats, and quell the porcupine; And then expect that we can lower the tax! Quick to the tavern, drop our cares in wine.

At peace within the tavern's cozy place Methought I saw an old familiar face, A Bonnevillevill, yea; O, man it was. Fill-up your glasses, say here's ho for grace!

What ev'ning brings the trail with moon— To bait the totem, moaning, night and noon, And hides the tavern from official gaze. A taxless state! Shall we expect it soon?

THE BALANCED BOWLER OF BURL

Fourteen miles southwest of Burli in Twin Falls county the canyon of Salmon Falls Creek is 200 to 300 feet deep, has a brook leading to a natural ford of the stream which has been in use many years. Along for walls of the canyon at this point the lava has been worn by the elements into strange and freakish monuments, pinnacles and towers, from which the trailing and the community have received the name "Castlesford."

"Hill up on a ledge forming one side of the canyon is one of the most remarkable balanced rocks in the world, compared favorably with the well known widely advertised stone in the garden of the Gods. It is not difficult of access from the highway, and is well worth the time and trouble necessary for the tourist to see it. His first comment will be the ancient one to the effect that "There isn't any such animal."

The Burli rock is a massive, irregular, top-stalped slant, 18 feet high, 27 feet across the top, connected to its base by a pedestal only a few inches thick. All those ascending the danger signal that it may topple over any moment.

For the above description the writer is indebted to Mr. W. A. McCallum of the Burli Hermit. It is a current story that a local vandal once tried to bring this stone to earth with a pickaxe. When remonstrated with, he said he had lived there for 40 years and was tired of waiting for the damned thing to fall.

"Don't you know," said the neighbor, "that that stone contains over 6,000 cubic feet of lava and weighs between 400 and 500 tons? If you had broken through the stone you would have kept killed."

The fellow said he knew it; said it was worth it.

The pivot has since been artificer, from which the trailing and the community have received the name "Castlesford."

These precariously balanced objects are deceiving. The top of the Woodworth building weighs several inches out of plumb in a high wind; it could vibrate several times as many feet without tipping over. The leaning tower of Pisa in Italy, 170 feet high, is 14 feet out of perpendicular at its top. Visitors often hesitate to climb its stairs; it looks ready to fall. It has looked just that way since A. D. 1350.

POTATO OUTLOOK FOR 1929

(As released by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics January 29).

Potato growers in nearly all parts of the United States suffered such terrific losses from over-production in 1928 that there is little probability that an excess acreage will be planted this season. Preliminary reports on the acreage which growers intend to plant indicate that if the crop is given average care, production in 1929 may be expected to vary from 400,000,000 bushels about in the proportion that growing conditions are more favorable or less favorable than usual.

The acreage planted to potatoes in 1928 was dependent on weather conditions at planting time that the acreage planted was not so greatly affected from what farmers reported in 1927. The reports in the January reports indicated an intended increase in planting of 13 per cent. Abandonment from frost, hail, and blight, was rather heavy, and the increase in the estimated harvested acreage was 1928 1,000,000. In January, 1929, an intended increase of 7 per cent in planting was reported and the acreage available for harvest was about 10 per cent smaller than they planned last year, indicating the probability of a harvested acreage slightly less than 1927.

In estimating the acreage of potatoes to be planted next season, allowance must be made for the upward trend in yields that is resulting from more intensive methods of production. If average growing conditions are experienced this season and yield follows the trend of recent years, a yield of about 117 bushels per acre must be expected. If this yield is secured on an average 11 per cent below that available for harvest in 1928, production will be around 400,000,000 bushels and supplies after July 1 will be about equal to the average during the last ten years. In considering prospects for next year, it should, however, be borne in mind that yields have been relatively low when seed has been cheap and potato growers discouraged. This year, farmers are planning to use a little more seed per acre, but the crop may not receive the usual attention. In view of the conditions of intended acreage, only a decrease in production, they are sufficiently uniform to indicate that the principal reductions in acreage are to be expected in the early states, in the commercial sections of the second early season, in California, Kansas, and in the important northwestern section extending from Michigan to North Dakota. Substantial reductions are also to be expected in Idaho and Colorado. Maine reports a decrease of about 8 per cent and New York a decrease of 4 per cent, but there are as yet no indications of any reaction in the average in Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, Nebraska and South Dakota and a few other scattering states are planning slight increases. On the whole, the acreages reported as intended in the late potato states were well balanced.

THE FUMBLE FAMILY

intended in the late potato states were well balanced. The reports in the states indicate only slight reductions in the intended acreage of late potatoes, for yields there have been increasing and because of local markets, commercial growers seemed to have succeeded in securing fair returns in the last two years of rather low prices. This large acreage close to the market justifies the decrease reported as intended in the commercial late potato areas further west, where the depression this season is most severe.

The early potato states that market before July have a real problem this year. On January 1, 1929, the potato stock in hands of growers and local dealers were close to the record January holdings of 6 years ago, being estimated at 151,000,000 bushels compared with about 100,000,000 bushels last year. To permit early potatoes to sell to advantage in competition with these storage potatoes, production must be reduced sufficiently to keep early potatoes in a luxury class. This was accomplished in the Spring of 1928 and 1929, but, in each case, a radical reduction in acreage was necessary. This year, growers in their early states apparently intend to decrease their acreage about 25 per cent. Such a reduction would relieve the situation somewhat, but it would still leave prospects somewhat less favorable than usual.

INFERIOR SPUD SALES OPPOSED

Advertising and sale of inferior potatoes that would grade no higher than No. 2's on the New York market as choice Idaho potatoes has caused a protest among certain dealers in the Gen. state who have discovered the product being thus offered for sale on the open market.

An Idaho Falls man brought back a bagload of spuds labeled "Idaho baking potatoes," the neighbor of the potato farmers which were mislabeled, diseased, rotten, and otherwise inferior. Only four spuds in the box would grade as No. 1's.
