FOR THE

By NANCY HART
Grades for the school lunch—how important—but how difficult to think of in the early morning rush when every minute counts. Perhaps no other dainty appetizer so children eat as much as does a fruited gelatin or a charlotte. Yet these are not the only things that are served for the school lunch.

Keep on hand a supply of ice cream cones. They cost only a cent or two so that next time you prepare a fruit loaf or a chocolate jelly, a variation of or a chocolate you may pour out of it into this safe container and set it aside for the school lunch the following day.

And make it a surprise—never seen hinted until the box is opened. At that the cold lunch leaves much to be desired when appetizers are flimsy. It is surprising to see how much these little "extras" do to keep children satisfied.

bravery and Efficiency of Telephone Workers Displayed at the Cleveland Clinic Disaster

It is a fact that the Cleveland Clinic disaster has shown the bravery and efficiency of the telephone workers. The workers were called upon to serve in an emergency and they did so with a courage and efficiency that is rarely seen.

Cleveland Clinic Building During Rescue Work

By JOHN D. O'BRIEN.
WITHIN thirty minutes of the first explosion in the Cleveland Clinic disaster in May, which took a toll of more than 125 lives, emergency telephone lines had been installed in front of the clinic building, and if the telephone workers had not been called upon to serve in an emergency, the disaster might have been averted.

irrigation projects, the loss to the fund because of mistakes which have been made in the location of projects, or on account of abandoned projects, will amount to only about 10 per cent; certainly no more than 15 per cent. This proportion of $20,000,000 cannot be regarded as excessive, in view of the profits which have accrued to the people who reside on these projects, and the creation of taxable property worth three times the total amount expended.

The amount received in the reclamation fund, so that as a business proposition the Government has made a wonderful financial investment, and in addition has made it possible for half a million people to secure a livelihood as a result of expenditures under the reclamation policy. This wonderful showing certainly warrants the Government in continuing the project. What Happened Before
Remember Stedden comes west to avoid trouble, but soon a most unfortunate love affair is his father.

The Rev. Dr. Stedden, a clergyman, who attributes much of the evil of the world to the "movies" and constantly inveighs against them. Mem, her lover, later Farnaby died in an accident, at the advice of Dr. Brestwick, gives her bad enough as an excuse for not being with her parents. A fall prevents her becoming a mother. In Arizona she had met.

Lava Lemario, an extra woman. After an accident, Mem becomes friendly with Mrs. Dack, a poor woman of Palm Springs, Arizona, and takes an interest in her bright daughter.

Terry Dack, who has a great gift of mimicry, inspired by a letter from Lava, leaves her parents. A fall prevents her becoming a mother. In Arizona she had met.

She turned and found herself blinded by the glare from a motor car. A little distance, dazzled as she was, she could see the giant hand that held before her a black pistol with a glint outlining its ugly muzzle.

Clymoure was sane enough to attempt no resistance, though he almost perished of chagrin. He endured the insolence of the masked stranger who stole the chain and wallet and the loose revolver. The blackguard held his clubbed pistol over Clymoure's head in moment, then forebore to strike, and dropped from the step with a

"Sorry to interrupt you folks, but I need your money."

She gets a job in a film laboratory, but later it is the real Mrs. Sturges from her home town, who talks of the evils of the movies and says the stars are forced to sell their souls. Mem then learns her mother is coming to visit her. Mem is worried about her finances. (Now Go On With The Story)

She sees a casting director, Arthur Tirore, and abruptly offers herself to him in return for a job in the movies. He tells her the talk about "paying the price" is all rot. Mem's will the "attention" of Mr. Bernard, head of the company, is directed to her. He offers her a chance. Soon she finds herself posing with Clymoure as a director's "girl."

Mem's father reads a publicity story calling her "the prettiest girl in America." He tells her to let a protest to his wife and daughter. Mem's fame begins to spread, and Clymoure, the director, takes an unusual interest in her. He is infatuated with Mem but tries to be aloof and professional to hide the fact from the outside world. (Now Go On With The Story)

Clymoure was dumb as long that Mem had time to cope to be afraid of what he would say. And to begin to wish that he would get it said, so that she could know what her answer would be.

She felt a heaving uncertainty of herself. She could not imagine what he might do or say. She had not much experience of men, but enough to know that before long he would initiate the immemorial procedure that starts with an arm around her neck and a voyage after a kiss.

She told herself that the only right and proper thing to do would be to resist, protest, and prevent at any cost the profusion of her sacred integrity. If necessary, she must fight, scratch, scream, or even stab with her teeth for help to any passer-by, or, at a last resort, leap over the cliff and die for honor's sake.

But who was that she saw and was that herself that told each other so many things?

Hereafter told she that Mr. Clymoure could not be treated as an ordinary ruffian, an insolent, outrageous knave, a fiend. He had treated her with most delicate courtesy from the first, and given her his admiration, his praise his devotion, his mute but evident affection.

If he had her and received his love, she could hardly reward his patient civility with prompt indignation and violence and fear. That would make her the insolent, not him.

She must be very gentle with him and ask him kindly to forbear not to spoil her with his attentions that had just been given her.

Mr. Clymoure should propose marriage, that would make his advances acceptable.

Time came, though not at all. But he could not marry her and she did not want to marry him. She did not want a man's body just now. She was a free woman in a free country.

She was not free, however, from the vicinity of this wicked mountain beast. She was not free of the disaster of desire, the hunger to subvert and kiss and whisper to, the need to be kept warm in the cold loneliness of the world.

Her thoughts spun giddily in her nuptial, all entangled with a skin of are cold?"

Then he kissed them with call lips that he lifted at once to her and found them warm and strange, like a rose against his mouth.

He was not much surprised if here were the first, but he had never kissed—any if he had just invented kissing. Then in a frenzy of wonder he closed her face with all his power. He did not know that the wheel bristled, her side, and he felt a sharp pain.

But she thought to intimate her duty or to think of her soul. She thought only of the rupture of the communion, and her arms were around his neck and she clenched him with all the power of her arms.

Mem, shouting, she knew not whether, was awakened from her mad rapture by a low voice near her.

"Sorry to interrupt you folks, but I need your money!"

just wanting.

Sit pretty now and keep 'em till I get out or I'll—

His ear shot around the curve. Clymoure brought down his aching arm. They were very low men, ashamed of themselves to return to their late post about Mem's shoulders.

A revolver removed filed their souls with confusion; a remorse because of a wrong remorse, a disgust for an unaccepted temptation and for being so temptable.

A woman never quite forgives a man for not dying for her at the first opportunity. She probably never quite forgives him for dying either.

So the clever man evaluates the situation where a choice is required, as the virtuous man evaluates temptation while it is yet for all.

On the Screen

"THE FOUR FEATHERS"
AT IDAHO THEATRE

A carefully fabricated silent motion picture, in which strikingly devised "cinema" episodes of life in the Sudan, made up of the actual life of a British soldier in a Turkish desert, is now on display at the Idaho Theatre. To make it the Rogers, Cooper and Schoenbeck "Jack" de la Siamense jungle called "Congo," spent about a year in the same desert, filming some brilliant episodes in the familiar manner of their masterpiece, and then returning to California, he grafted them onto an adventure tale of somewhat familiar type and turned out an uneven but reasonably absorbing photoplay called "The Four Feathers."

"The best scenes in the picture, it should hardly surprise you to learn, are those that were obviously taken on the Cooper-Schoenbeck expedition. It is almost as if a scene on the stampede of the elephants in "Congo." Then there is the call to arms of the Sudanese camel corps, which is photographed with fine effectiveness.

The story tells how young English officer, in "The mid-Victorian days," found that he was a man of his kind, rejected from the army on the eve of a war with the rebellious tribesmen. Thereupon his three best friends, an Englishman, a Frenchman and a German, who had been gallant fellows, he is at heart, the only thing for him to do is to perform a feat of arms that is valor to show them their mistake.

He recovers Mr. William Powell from the clutches of the slave trade, meets the native carrier of a beleaguered frontier post from mutiny and otherwise conducts himself in a manner long forgotten by a little Negro boy hearing the somewhat Viking name of Harold Hightower, and by a tiny monkey that is an English gentleman and a motion picture hero.

In addition to Mr. Arlen, there are present such dependable actors as William Powell and Clive Brook who are, of course, excellent in brief roles. The most striking portrayal, however, are contributed by a little Negro boy hearing the somewhat Viking name of Harold Hightower, and by a tiny monkey that is an English gentleman and a motion picture hero.

In the end, though, it is those escaping

"SIDE STREET" AT ORPHEUM
Heretofore by critics as one of the outstanding films of the year, "Side Street," Radio Pictures' all-talking melodrama, opens Thursday at the Orpheum Theatre. The usual interest centers in the fact that in "Side Street" the three Moore brothers—Tom, Matt and Owen—appear costarred for the first time in their long screen careers.

The story provides an admirable characterization for each of these stars. It concerns a family of moderate circumstances living on Forty-third Street in New York. Owen, a carpenter, is a first-class surgeon, and Owen a racketeer who carefully hides from his family his method of livelihood. Eventually Tom is called upon to round up the gang of which Owen is the brain. When the latter finds he has ordered his lieutenant to take his own brother "for a ride," he beats Tom to the ren-

Fire Prevention Week Called

Governor H. C. Hildridge has announced the week beginning October 6 as Fire Prevention week and calls upon all citizens to observe in any appropriate way the importance of this matter. He recommended support for a campaign of education toward cutting down the havoc wrought each year by fire.

"The pull of smoke which hung low over the entire northwest recently impressed upon us more forcibly than words can do the danger to life and property by fire," he said. "Human lives, homes, farms, uncounted number of wild animals of the woods, hundreds of thousands of acres of forests have been destroyed."

In addition to the Moore brothers, the cast includes Kathryn Perry, wife of Owen Moore; Emma Dunn, Frank Sheridan, Walter McManis, Mildred Harris, Dan Wolheim, Al Hill and others of note.

Files Suit Against Bean Grower Here

The Southern Idaho Bean Growers' association has filed out in district court to hold S. H. Proctor to his contract in raising his beans only through the association. Proctor's three-year term expired last January, according to Manager C. E. Brewster, but he failed to give notice of his desire to withdraw and is accordingly obligated to sell his crop through the association in conformance with regulations. Mr. Proctor sold part of his beans to other agencies, causing the cooperative to take action to ward keeping its contract intact. The association posted a $1000 bond pending the granting of a temporary injunction which it asks be made permanent, present Proctor from selling his beans through any other agency.

BEET WEEKLY PER YEAR, $2.50

BIG GAME HUNTING

With the arrival of the big game hunting season numerous Idaho residents are doubly glad they live in a region which provides a sport that many in less favored sections would like to share in.

In counting the advantages of southern Idaho, do not forget to include the hunting and fishing resources.

It is a fact that many men in all sorts of vocations, purposely choose their places of abode on account of the facilities offered in this regard. They want to play as they work. They want opportunities for recreation.

All those who can should go to the mountains this fall and experience the thrill of big game hunting. Other men will spend hundreds of dollars and travel thousands of miles to enjoy the privileges that are right at our back door.

The proximity of big game hunting territory is certainly to be included in the list of resources of the Twinland Empire.

TWO OR FOUR-YEAR TERM

The people of Idaho and the occupants of state elective positions are entitled to know whether the present administration in Idaho was elected to serve two or four years.

The election took place nearly a year ago and still no one knows. In 13 months there will be another election; for whether the supreme court decides that present state officials are serving two or four-year terms, there will be a senator to elect, a congressman, and members of the supreme court along with the county and district judge, legislative and county officials.

It is only right that there should be an early decision in the matter for the good of the entire state, the officials and their constituency.

AUTUMN

Autumn in Idaho is here. Summer is definitely behind us and Winter is poking his silver head around the corner.

No season of the year compares with Idaho in the fall. Tansy air, clear skies and clearer nights. Golden harvests. Red apples. Bird hunting. Variegated leaves. Wild flowers in the mountains. Stillness.

Autumn is here to enjoy.

BEAN PRICES

It appears that nothing but good can come from the work of the bean price committee. Its actions embody the epitome of cooperation; organization, agreement.

Practically every agricultural commodity in the country that is successfully marketed is sold with a pre-arranged minimum price.

Everyone recognizes that there is a fair price for beans or anything else. But the price too high and the consuming public will merely refuse to buy in its accustomed manner, which is disastrous for the growers.

When the price is low, the grower suffers, but buyers are indifferent; they can only consume a certain amount of food anyway.

Many prices are set, best prices are set, contract bean prices are set. Now the setting of a minimum selling price for one of the Twinland Empire's important crops is logical and advantageous.

USING FARM WASTE

While many useful products are now made from former farm waste, such as straw, corncobs, cotton seed, and so on, there is still a wide field for further utilization of such material which is being explored by scientists.

It is well known that the by-products of many industrial operations practically represent the profits of the plants. Whenever science enables the farmer to convert his waste material to profitable use the agriculture situation will doubtless be improved.

In seeking means for doing this the Department of Agriculture is employing capable chemists and other scientists continually. The success which has attended their efforts in recent years gives much promise for an ultimate satisfactory solution of the farm waste problem.

'Cher-choo!'
'He's Mr. Habbit sneezing as he reads the news' paper.

'Cher-choo!' It was Billie this time. Then a little time elapsed and Bobbi's went 'cher-choo!'

'What's all this sneeze party?' she asked.
'He's Habbit kept on reading his paper while the two children kept on with their lessons.'

'I'll tell you what we'll do tomorrow,' said Billie. 'We'll go and see the top-sneezed Habbit. It has been a long time since we saw him, and I know he is getting looser without.' Then Billie went 'cher-choo!'

'Sneezes all over this breeze?' asked Mrs. Habbit.
'What's all this breeze?' asked Mrs. Habbit. 'I heard you tell Mrs. White-Habbit that you did hope we would be like our father, so when he sneezes we sneeze too.'

'That's a great idea,' laughed Mrs. Habbit. 'I'll go with you.'
'Cher-choo!' said Mr. Habbit. 'CHER-CHOO!' went Mrs. Habbit.

'What's the matter?' asked Mrs. Habbit. 'Was that an auto tire exploded?'
'Then he went on reading his paper and all was quiet for a long time.'

Every Fall Press the juice and strain from three-fourths of a number 2 can of red dried cherries into a sieve. Boil three-fourths cup sugar, one and one-half cups water and three tablespoons corn syrup until the syrup thickly, then pour it to Mr. John Dow and mailed it Saturday. This was the letter Paul might about 8:30 o'clock but he was opening it, the officer suddenly confronted him and demanded his surrender.

This first letter written by Mr. Kneph was as follows:
'Dear friends:
I received your letter yesterday morning and am sorry to say that you are not guessing right. I don't know your name and don't know who you are.'

Pufahl explained that he wanted the money to buy rabbits and some other things, 'intending that he intended to pay it back even if it took the rest of his life.'

FRUIT HARVEST IN FULL SWING AT THIS TIME

Weather Conditions Ideal and Apple Crop Will Be Much Larger Than Last Year Inspector Says.

With the weather prevailing the last several days the apple harvest is getting into full swing...

This year's apple crop locally will amount to from 1100 to 1200 carloads compared with between 700 and 800 last year...

Mr. Gilson said Monday that the present conditions could be better, and that the fruit has fully recovered from the situation at the present time...

This was in connection with a statement by W. H. Wicks, chief field inspector at Boise...

The apple harvest should be nearly finished by the end of this week, the inspector said...

Some favorable conditions in the fact that due to cool weather recently late spraying was not required to an appreciable extent...
