BORAH IS NOW ON THE MAP

After all these years Senator W. E. Borah has got himself on the map geographically as well as politically, historically, oratorically, pyrotechnically and otherwise. The big peak which looms up more than 12,600 feet above sea level in the Pahsimero range of Lemhi county will henceforth be known as Mount Borah to all who study the rugged contours of Idaho. Due to the senator's outstanding position as an Idaho man—the state geographic commission, Lemhi county commissioners and others approved the name some time ago. Senator Borah sent word from Washington this week, accepting the honor as being "highly complimentary."

Moore Makes Western Trip

C. C. Moore, new governor of Idaho and now commissioner of the general land office at Washington, has just completed his first inspection tour of the western states to look over affairs with which his department is concerned. He reported substantial progress and development in all industrial lines, particularly in mining activities of which Idaho has a big part.

Mr. Moore visited land offices in Denver, Cheyenne, Salt Lake, Portland, Sacramento, San Francisco, Reno, Carson City, Helena and Blackfoot. He says the United States still has 102,000,000 acres of unappropriated public land, with enough more in Alaska to bring the total up to 400,000,000 acres, though little of it has been surveyed.

Armistice Day 1929

Eleven years ago, on this day, the most fearful holocaust of modern times came to its termination, and scenes of carnage, sacrifice and disaster were again clothed in the vestments of peace.

There came into being the glorious prospect of international amity, the hope for universal brotherhood among men of all nations and creeds that had long been envisioned by the guides and leaders of humanity.

Much has been done in furtherance of this beautiful ideal, much remains to be accomplished. Never was man faced with a more difficult or more inspiring task.

As we voice our thanks for the peace and prosperity of our land, let us give a thought to the brave souls who passed on that we might live in security and comfort; and let us, too, unite in prayer for the realization of the noble ideals promulgated by those who are dedicating themselves to the Christlike task of promoting world harmony and mutual understanding.

DEVIL-MAY-CARE

by ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE
ILLUSTRATED BY DONALD RILEY

SYNOPSIS

At a party in Palm Beach given by Mr. Cooper, Clara, Lawson, an attorney, meets Lucy Harkness, known as Devil-May-Care because of her adventurous, eventful life. In a game in which partners are chosen by lot, Clara and Lucy are paired. Clara is won by Tim Stevens, who has the greatest reputation as a successful heart-breaker. Lawson is a bit jealous. Tim Stevens and Lucy are heart-breaking. Lawson is a bit jealous. Tim Stevens and Lucy are heart-breaking. Lawson is a bit jealous. Tim Stevens and Lucy are heart-breaking.

"How do you know I can't play the game?" he demanded.

"With women, you mean! But of course you mean that. It's the only game you play. But you've never played it with my kind of woman, because my kind don't play with you."

"You're one that's going to," he said faintly.

"Think so?" She shook her head again. "This is Mrs. Clara's game we're playing. The other game is a little bit more serious. You don't know you've entered it," he contradicted, "that you have. You're here about the Minerva. You'll leave the Minerva when I'm damned good and ready to let you leave; not before. Now, do you play my game?"

Her eyes were dreamy; her sweet mouth drooped positively.

"If Fate intended, yes," she said. "Fate has been so very kind to me, thus far, that I cannot believe it intends me any such trick as playing such a game with you, Tim. I've come out with you, let's go back."

"Not," he told her, "until you've learned a little more of me."

"Admission went out with happiness," she said.

"Because when I enter a game I play it. Tim, you can't say as much to me."

(To Be Continued)

"Reverently? I've never regretted anything. Tim, I do like ever I do, because, it was ordained. Am I able to deflect the course of the universe? Then how can I deflect myself? I'm a projectile, Tim, aimed by some force on some remote target."

"Remotely? Maybe not. Perhaps I'm the target, Lucy," he suggested.

"You are—"

"Then, your, in God's name, come out here with me to-night!" he cried.

"Because when I enter a game I play it. Tim, you can't say as much to me."

"What do you want?" she asked.

"Offends! Is love offensive?"

"You mean I do like you, of course I do," he said.

"Oh, by God! that's carrying it a bit too far! Just a bit too far!"

"If you don't mind it, I'll do it to a certain point, but when you indicate that I'm unclean, I'll stop."

"You are—"

"Then, your, in God's name, come out here with me to-night!" he cried.

"Because when I enter a game I play it. Tim, you can't say as much to me."

"Why hurt on him? I'd never met him until to-night," she said.

"The Minerva was one of the finest boats of its kind in Southern waters, and often though she'd seen the craft, they hadness a little nod of approbation to-night. The polished woodwork reflected the stars; the chairs sparkled with silver and brass. The fittings of the cabin looked like the fittings of the most boats afloat; the canopy not looked, in this silver light as though made of colored damask. And upon the table laid for two the Minerva's aleward had expended not merely time but taste."

"This call owned by Mrs. E. N. Enery of Parkville, Va., has a fine crown, underfoot firm, sturdy, flat front legs. The call is three months old."

Believe It Or Not!

"You mean... make love to me?" she shook her head. "I don't need her assistance. Love can only be made when two people are in the pretty position. And I shall never engage in that little game with you."

"Sure?"

"She stared at him, taking no warning from his eagerness. "Pos-oh-lute, old thing. She straightened up in her chair. "Get on, let's drop matters. I said I'd be as nice as possible. But 'possible' ends at talk of flirtation and long before flirtation begins, here, yours, Tim."

"She leaped to her feet. The Minerva's lines had been cast off, and the propeller had begun to move. She ran to the low rail and stood poised upon it for a moment. But the stone pier was already twenty feet away."

SCORES POLICY OF EXAMINATION

Dr. Bennion Says School Tests Are Out of Date and Unfair.

One of the interesting features of the two addresses given at Teachers' Institute here recently by Dr. Adam S. Bennion of Salt Lake City was his criticism of the system of passing or retaining students on the basis of examination papers. Dr. Bennion explained how this so unnerve and excites the average student that it is impossible for him to give a fair account of himself through examination at the last of the school. It is one of the old-fashioned and illogical methods which are being rapidly abolished in up-to-date schools of the country today, he said.

Dr. Bennion indicated where there is a psychological difference in young people, some of whom respond to the ordeal of an examination without being rattled, just as they can through many social experiences, while others respond in a different way to such tests. The result is that very often a moderate-grade student will pass with a higher mark than the student who has shown considerably better records throughout the year, due solely to the difference in their emotional responses which should have nothing to do with determining school marks.

Does Students Harm

Dr. Bennion's indicated policy in his talk: if you as teachers are still following that old idea, for heaven's sake wake up and realize what is doing to the mental and girls who are entitled to pass but who cannot meet the extension of examination day with a clear understanding of their studies as they have had during the school year.

Dr. Bennion has for years held important educational positions in Utah and is now in charge of the personnel department of the Utah Power and Light company. His duty is to question applicants for jobs and place them in the positions for which he finds them best suited, considering all the features of their character, not merely their scholastic training.

Big Manhunt Ends in North

One of the greatest and most dramatic hunts ever conducted in the north country ended early this week with the finding of eight Canadian strikers stranded on an island in the Arctic ocean north of the Canadian shore line. They had drifted out from the coast of Baker lake in the wild country north of Toronto and west of Hudson bay.

The men explained they used ran out of gasoline and landed in the sea near McMurdo Island upon which the eight men pulled their machines, then rationed their limited fuel supplies and waited for rescue or death. They were finally discovered by Eskimos who carried news of their location to settlements inland.

Grasshoppers Found Lacking

Because quite a few grasshoppers existed this summer in the Grimm alfalfa seed growing section between Springfield and American Falls, farmers there started out September 15th to the pests to combat next year and asked County Agent M. L. Tilley of Hingham county and Claude Winkler, head of the department of entomology of the state extension division, to make an investigation of the alfalfa seed.

"They did and found very few grasshopper pests in places where they were most likely to be found. They considered the absence of the eggs due to the cold wet weather coming just at the time when the hoppers usually lay their eggs. This other prevalent theory doing so or else caused some destructive influence to occur, resulting in a promising year for the alfalfa seed growers there next year."

Defenbach To Address Lodge

Masons of this region will hold their annual "get-together" at the Grand November 14 with State Treasurer Byron Defenbach as the principal speaker. He was grand master when the Gooding lodge was instituted, personally conducting the ceremony and in a recognized authority on Masonic lodge history of this state as well as of natural history on which he has written frequently. Other officials of the order are scheduled to attend this social function.

ROADS ALL GOOD

The last road report of the state highway department says that recent rains have benefited the roads in different sections. No snow has fallen yet to block the higher passes. The only obstructions are near Jerome and this is being pushed to completion by force freezing weather sets in. Some work will continue during the winter.

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. Mitchell, with Mrs. Will Coplin, assistant hostess. Mrs. E. A. Finkbeiner has returned from Oakland, California, where she visited at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ruth Blohm, several days.

Shearer Heads New Bank Organization

Guy H. Shearer, president of the First National bank here, was elected president of the new organization. Crawford Moore of Boise, president of the First National National bank at Boise, told of progress conditions in the country and in Idaho, particularly with reference to the abundant agricultural harvest. GAS

In commenting upon a recent Citizen editorial on the subject of gasoline prices, the weekly Idaho Pioneer at Boise dismisses the subject with the following:

Twin Falls is kicking because they can buy gasoline in Pocatello for nineteen cents a gallon, whereas in Twin Falls it costs ten cents more. But Twin Falls should remember that it costs money to live in a high-class city. (Lend me ten bucks, Twin.)

Talking about Borah and his chances of re-nomination at the hands of the Republicans next year, the Idaho Statesman takes occasion to suggest that the next Republican state convention be held in Boise, which, an authority of the Statesman, is Senator Borah's home town. Very good idea; then perhaps the distinguished senator would find time to walk over and attend a Republican state convention, seeing as how it would take but a few minutes of his time!

UNFAIR COMPETITION

In its report to the 44th annual convention of the National Editorial Association this year the legislative committee of the organization again condemned the government's practice of competing with private printers. The committee declared that "the hope of the publishing industry in obtaining relief from the unfair competition of the Post Office Department rests solely upon President Hoover's pledges to the American people."

This statement was based upon President Hoover's inaugural address, in which he said that the last election was a mandate to eliminate operation by the government of business in competition with its citizens.

For more than half a century the government has printed envelopes at less than cost for individuals and firms in competition with the privately owned printing plants of the country, operated by citizens and taxpayers. Many millions of dollars have thus been lost to these citizens, with a corresponding loss to the taxpayers at large, who through taxes have paid for the government's deficit.

In supplying these printed envelopes at less than cost, because of President Hoover's often expressed opposition to this sort of unfair competition by the government, the small publishers and printers of the country, as represented by the National Editorial Association, have hopes that he may at the opportune time take an interest in the matter and lend his great influence toward getting Uncle Sam out of this petty business.

In its report to the 44th annual convention of the National Editorial Association this year the legislative committee of the organization again condemned the government's practice of competing with private printers.

The committee declared that "the hope of the publishing industry in obtaining relief from the unfair competition of the Post Office Department rests solely upon President Hoover's pledges to the American people."

This statement was based upon President Hoover's inaugural address, in which he said that the last election was a mandate to eliminate operation by the government of business in competition with its citizens.

For more than half a century the government has printed envelopes at less than cost for individuals and firms in competition with the privately owned printing plants of the country, operated by citizens and taxpayers.

Many millions of dollars have thus been lost to these citizens, with a corresponding loss to the taxpayers at large, who through taxes have paid for the government's deficit.

In supplying these printed envelopes at less than cost, because of President Hoover's often expressed opposition to this sort of unfair competition by the government, the small publishers and printers of the country, as represented by the National Editorial Association, have hopes that he may at the opportune time take an interest in the matter and lend his great influence toward getting Uncle Sam out of this petty business.
