THE WAY OF LIFE

WHAT MAKES US WHAT WE
Recently there came into my possession the photographs of five brothers whom I have known very well all my life. The pictures were taken when the eldest of the five was only eight years old.

The first thing that impressed me was the resemblance of each one to all the others. Anbody looking at them, would have known at once that they are children of the same father and mother.

Even more striking was the fact that today, when their average age is forty, they seem to have changed very little. I had no difficulty in saying the baby brother on the desk and saying "This is Joe, and this is John."

One might almost jump to the conclusion, from such an exhibit, that experience and will-power have very little to do with character.

Yet I know that each of these five boys has been changed; and by the exercise of his own free will.

The hot temper of the eldest has been cooled by self-control; the one who has become far sweeter and more tolerant.

The intelligence of the youngest which led him to stick to new things and to leave them half finished, has been transformed into steady staying power.

By exercise and self-discipline the physical weakness of a third has been built up into solid health.

Another told me that he and his wife went to an orphan asylum to adopt a little boy. For a couple of hours they watched two hundred youngsters playing on the floor. One of them was trying to get the other onto a tin can. Then after a while he arranged to push it into place, only to take it off and start all over again.

"Well take that baby," said the man. "It will be a worker."

"Decided," I answered, "with a shrewd observer of the human race. He mentioned the man who had been the leader of his class at college and has never been heard of since.

"I have had some hidden illness," I said. "Perhaps he just couldn't amount to anything."

"My friend disagreed vigorously. "He could have changed himself," he said. "Deep down in his heart that man knows what he has failed."

Personally, I believe this. The picture of my five brothers tends to confirm this belief. They are what they were as children, but they are also different.

Each has moulded himself, and not merely been moulded. Not birth alone, but will power has made them what they are.

VOLUME 10. TWIN FALLS, TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1929. Number 51.

Supreme Court Declares Four-Year Amendment for State Officers Void

Decision Means That Terms of Present Incumbents of State Offices Expire a Year Hence—Election Next Year As Usual.

The Idaho supreme court handed down an important decision Thursday in declaring the four-year term amendment for elected state officials void because it was ambiguous and the voters had not been able to express their views on the proposed intended. Judge T. Bailey Lee wrote the decision which was the unanimous opinion of the supreme court judges.

It is stated that while the intention of the amendment was not written so to present the question of limiting the offices to four years, the supreme court pointed out that the amendment should have contained no reference to limiting terms should have specified the proposal to extend the term.

Meridian Man Sues
The case was brought to court when Mrs. E. Lane, a citizen of Meridian, instituted suit to require Secretary of State Fred E. Lewis to call an election for 1930. He had called an election in October. By the decision now in effect, the secretary of state and his officers will be subject to election again in 1930.

Lane contended that the amendment was ambiguous, making no reference to the terms of the amendment proposed; that the amendment was not entered on the journals of the state senate and the house of representatives, and that it was not retrospective.

The court ruled on only the question of ambiguity, holding the amendment to be void. "Arguments against the four-year term proposed were presented and briefly by Frank L. Stapleton, attorney for the secretary of state, and by Sweeney and Hawley and Hawley.

Decision Stated
"It will be seen," said the court's opinion, "that where the proposed amendment, expressly fixed the term of office as two or four years, thereby extending it from the term period of two years to four, the question submitted to the individual voter was whether or not the term should be merely limited to that duration, leaving the actual time of incumbency undisturbed."

Terms Are Ambiguous
"Could the voter, by attributing to the words employed their usual meaning in common parlance, have understood other than that a successful candidate might, under such amendment, hold office for one, two three or four years? As far as the voters were concerned, including the writer of this opinion, the answer is in the negative.

"It may be said the voter already knew that the term of office was two years. But how, in truth, could he know that, after the adoption of an amendment limiting an unexpired term to four years there would be retained in the legislation any mention of the term of office? It is contrary, the former constitutional provision as to terms of office would have been wholly abandoned, and in its stead would have appeared a declaration that the term of certain offices 'shall be limited to such periods as the voters may determine by their vote.'"

Explains Other Features
"From the language employed in the proposed amendment, it is clear that publication constitutes no part of submission, Justice Lee's opinion continues, "but is an act incidentally directed to a mere quietus of such submission. The submission is to be made at the ensuing election by immediate contact with the voters under the law the only method of submitting a public question to the individual voter is by proper ballot advising him directly or by general referendum, in the actual issue to be determined. And how can the voter be advised of the submission of the proposed amendment if the amendment is not published?"

Commendation Green, who is also governor of Michigan, adds:
"From your department commander to all service men, and to all veterans' organizations, I send greetings and best wishes for a merry Christmas and a happy prosperous New Year."

CREAMERY MEN TO MEET
The fourth annual convention of the Idaho State Creamery Operators' association will be held at Pocatello January 8 and 9 according to the president, C. P. Jensen of Boise.

Caraway Don't Like Contract

Senator Caraway, chairman of the senate lobby committee, last week asked the federal farm board to repudiate agreements that had been made between its chairman, Alexander Legge, with several large grain dealing companies, including Julius H. Barnes, chairman of President Hoover's business advisory council and head of a $20,000,000 grain produce firm.

Chairman Caraway expressed the opinion that the agreement was not in the interests of the farmers on the basis of the farm product act. Chairman Legge's contention in a letter of explanation to the senator would not consider it, stating the lobby committee's records are only of personal transactions.

Congress Lays Off For Awhile Tariff Ignored

Congress adjourned the last of the week for a two-week holiday. The tariff measure was sidetracked while the senate and the house were in session of emergency bills that occurred with the opening of the regular session of congress.

The most important was the quick passage of the $100,000,000 income tax reduction recommendation and, announced by President Hoover, chief secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon. This bill heavy support had been opposed by a few congressmen on the grounds that it would not prove beneficial in the way it was intended to do.

Another matter quickly passed was a measure to make Richard E. Byrd a rear admiral on the retired list of the navy. Commander Byrd has been in the antarctic region since the fall of 1928. Recently he flew 1000 miles from his supply base over the South Pole and back. His achievements in polar explorations caused his recommendation for promotion without opposition.

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE TO MEET FRIDAY

New Water Supply for Twin Falls Likely to Be Recommended at Stockholders Meeting

With two members of the Resolutions committee of the Twin Falls Canal company absent Friday afternoon, an action to call an annual stockholders meeting on matters to be presented at the annual stockholders meeting in January. Those present received up to 1:30 o'clock next Friday afternoon when resolutions may be more definitely considered.

Manager John F. Hayes attended the session and discussed with the members the advisability of providing a new water supply for Twin Falls. That had been suggested in one matter that would probably be formed into a resolution. It is related to the proposition of stopping water deliveries or a means of overcoming the sewage on the tract.

M. J. Sweeney and Chairman C. E. McClain, Twin Falls, both expressed the opinion that it would not be necessary to draw up a plan outlining regarding the water delivery in case that live directly been put before the stockholders by the directors for voting January 7.

Manager Hayes had the opinion that he believed the Twin Falls canal obtain an adequate water supply from the underground waters which supply Rock Creek near the town of Rock Creek. Filings were made on a water source some three years ago but nothing has been done in the way of carrying out of these essential articles.

Idaho Hay Is Still Banned

The position of Idaho as the governor of Montana, Washington and Oregon to lift the ban against Oregon state alfalfa hay in order that the surplus in the southern part of the state might be transported to relieve a shortage in Northern Idaho was defeated by those states.

Oregon and Washington refuse to permit Idaho hay within their borders for fear of introducing the alfalfa weed which is hard to eradicate. Montana agreed to permit shipment of timothy and wild hay, but refuse to lift the ban on alfalfa.

Defenbach Is Candidate For Idaho Governor

Almost immediately after the Idaho supreme court announced its decision declaring the four-year term amendment null and void, a surprise announcement was made by Governor Defenbach, secretary of the primary election in 1930.

This statement was made from his Grand, Oregon, as Defenbach was returning to Boise. He said he favored the restoration of "simplification" of government rather than by cutting of salaries and other such means. He promised liberal aid for roads and schools, and the full of governmental expenses would be eliminated by cutting of these essential articles.

Verdict of Guilty Brought in by District Court Jury in Forgery Case Saturday

Bond of Miss Viola Lowe Charged With Forgery Raised to $2500; Will Be Sentenced Friday.

The district court jury returned at 8:15 o'clock Sunday morning with a verdict of guilty against Miss Viola Lowe, whose trial on forgery charges had lasted since Monday Saturday afternoon. The case was considered for about two hours, they went to dinner and resumed their discussion until 12:15 o'clock Sunday morning when they retired.

One juror held out for acquittal at that time but shortly after reconvening he was convinced of the guilt of the defendant and the verdict became unanimous.

Judge Hugh A. Baker raised the amount of her bonds from $1000 to $2500 and set Friday, December 27, as the day for sentencing. The case was furnished by T. J. Lloyd and C. H. Lowe, conviction for forgery is a penitentiary offense.

During the morning ended Friday night, Saturday being occupied with rebuttal arguments of Attorney General C. H. Larson and the defense counsel, J. W. Taylor and J. W. Porter, with reading of instructions to the jury by Judge Baker. The courtroom was well filled throughout the trial.

Miss Lowe Testifies
Miss Lowe was the main witness in her own behalf. She testified the stand for more than an hour Friday night and attempted to explain the many details of the forgery case. She testified she had no recollection of the forgery case. She testified she had no recollection of the forgery case. She testified she had no recollection of the forgery case.

Case Smith Money
Miss Lowe could not describe Smith money, saying he was just a name. She testified she had seen him only three times. The first occasion was on October 1, 1928, when she saw him at the residence of her brother-in-law, who is a contractor in the city. She testified she had seen him in his hotel room.

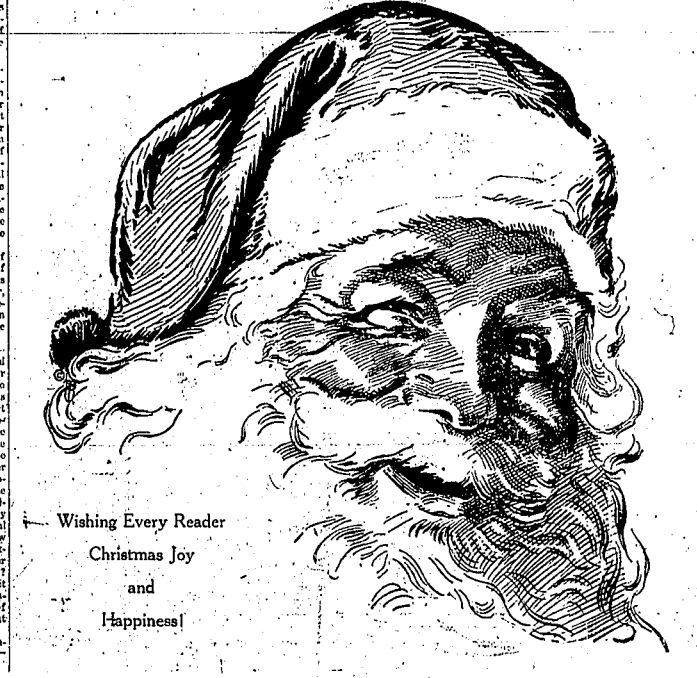

Christmas Tree

PLANTS MAKE RECORDS
Increased storage facilities are reported to have enabled Lovison apple growers to store their crops until last week. The crop proved, more than 65,000 boxes of late varieties are held there for that purpose. Only about one-third of the crop, comprising early varieties have been marketed.

Serial Numbers Correct
If some other person unknown had those numbers, he would know the last serial number recorded. No one had access to the records in the county superintendent's office.

More Evidence Submitted
Attorney Larson, submitted evidence in support of his contention that the name "Bester" had been forged. An official of that district had been in the office could have identified the name when this name was mentioned. She corrected it, telling Miss Lowe the name was "Bester" and not "Bester."

DEVIL-MAY-CARE

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE
ILLUSTRATED BY DONALD RILEY

(What Happened Before)

At a party in Palm Beach given by Mr. Cooper, Clara, Lucien, an attorney, meets Lucy Harkness, known as Devil-May-Care because of her adventurous, eventful life in a game in which partners for the evening are chosen by lot. It is won by Tim Stevens, who has a great reputation as a successful heart-breaker. Lucien is a bit jealous. Tim Stevens tells her they are going aboard his boat the Minerva, and she accepts in order not to be a quitter. Asked if she is sorry that she is not with him, Lucy says she is not and that recently Fate has arranged for her to meet him.

Tim Stevens tells her that he is looking awfully after Lucien. Ahead Stevens' boat, the Minerva, Stevens tells Lucy of his love. When she replies with contempt for him, he grows violently angry and she becomes afraid of him. He says he will let her go to the Minerva until she accepts him. To escape him, she leaps into the water from her cabin window, swimming short distances under water.

Lucy reaches land and meets Dr. Ferguson Faunce on an island. He takes care of her and takes her home. Everyone is worried about her, and when she meets Stevens he is extremely angry. He is so violent in his protestations of love, Stevens informs Lucy that Stevens must raise a quarter of a million dollars to get her back in five o'clock. Lucy goes to her bank and raises the sum.

Lucy goes to Stevens to help him, but he refuses to take money from a woman to whom he is not married. So Lucy marries this man that she hates, and promptly runs away from him, going to her staunch friend Dr. Ferguson Faunce to take what she has done.

Stevens sets out on a trip. Lucy is saved, and finds herself aboard the Minerva, wondering what happened to Dr. Faunce. Dr. Faunce is aboard the Minerva also. Stevens threatens to kill Faunce unless Lucy yields to him. To save Faunce's accident, Lucy expresses love for Stevens. A few minutes later he starts her by saying he doesn't want her, and never will.

(Now Go On With The Story)

He came up to Lucy one evening at the Everglades. She dined inside with the Lutz Petersens, and was now one of their party seated outside in Orange, as the lovely dancing place is named.

"You had a fine supper on in the Lucy—is it St. Louis?—development. Guess I've had enough."

She shrugged carelessly. "If you don't want to tell me if you think it's not to be repeated. Perhaps you've gathered I'm not particularly fond of Tim haven't you?"

She could not have told him, had her life depended on it, why she made this remark. It was a vulgar remark, sneering at one's own husband, and no one, save Ferguson Faunce and Tim himself, had ever heard her state, since marriage, that she disliked Tim. Her indignation, she might inform people, but not Tim.

"I'm wondering . . . you knowing what you know . . . well, you won't mind learning that he's going to learn a little lesson, tonight."

"How?" she asked. "Caution that had been unobscured by a combination of circumstances, came back to him. "Oh, well, you'll know it—morrow." She shrug "indifferently. Then she laughed cynically. "Why do you laugh?" he inquired. She was tremendously over-pleasurably tolerant as she replied. "After all, Mr. Lucien, you're a very bright man, and all that, but . . . Tim Stevens is . . . But I mustn't hurt your feelings."

"You don't think I could out-maneuver him?" he demanded. She shrugged again. "Hardly."

Caution given, not right yielding the least now and fled yelling away. "Well, I have! I have! Lucy—of St. Lucie—why isn't worth a hoot unless he has a watermelon. There's a cloud upon the life to Seminoe Creek, and the bridges across it. My clients claim that they have an opinion on the land east of the creek. Stevens claims it's his. But to-night we're destroying the bridges across the creek. It's a narrow morning, bright and early we're beginning work on a dam that will deflect the creek, far from the island, so that it will flow through our property, levee as a waterway, and deprive him of it. It means that our property, back from the ocean, will be worth triple what it commands today, and that Stevens' land will decrease proportionately."

"But why destroy the bridges?" he asked. "Because those bridges give him access, by motor car, to the property east of the creek, and we want to defy his development. If we take him weeks to replace the bridges, even if the court decided against us, and says that we don't own them, we had the right to destroy them. So you see while he's rebuilding bridges, we'll be going out our developments. It's really his scheme. He said that the public wouldn't bite at two developments, both so grand, so near together, so . . . I'm sure ready here."

"But the courts may say the bridges are Tim's, eh?" he laughed. "And we'll pay him damages for destroying his property. They may even make us destroy our dam and raise the creek to him. But we'll have been selling our property to the public and getting in some cash returns on, our investment. Stevens' who's up to his neck this minute and who must get in some public money, will be out in the cold. We'll buy him in our own terms."

"I see," Clara, going to pull down bridges, over Seminoe Creek. Lucien told me . . . Just as Clara . . . "Bliss you! you don't need to tell me why!" cried Stevens. He stared at her. "But why do you . . . what do you care . . ."

"All right, Lucy! You'll see a fight, come on!" He looked at Dr. Faunce. He spoke with a rapidity and assurance that started his wife. He seemed to grasp all angles of a situation in a moment.

"Even Clara—and Lord knows he's pulled plenty raw deals—wouldn't start anything like this without old John Law behind him. Probably has a sheriff or two; I'll be toughly in the wrong. Doctor, but they'll get away with anything over my dead carcass, and no way else. So . . . how about you?"

The freight tremor on Faunce's vindictive mind. "Why spoil what promises to be a cheery party, by talk of illegality?" he laughed. "I've always disliked the law, anyway. Let's stop it on the face to-night."

Stevens' great arm described a semicircle, and his palm thumped soundly on the surgeon's back. "Atta kid! Any one with nerve enough to dig out an appendix has plenty heart. Let's go. Got a gun?"

GLAR NAMES SPEAKERS FOR WOOLGROWERS

National Officials and Others Scheduled to Address 600 Sheepmen at Annual Convention.

Secretary M. C. Clear of the Idaho Woolgrowers' association reports from Butte a "list of prominent organization officials and sheepmen who will address the convention at Idaho Falls January 9, 10 and 11. A member of the federal farm is invited to tell the sheepmen how to benefit from the farm offers made by that farm."

F. H. Marshall of Salt Lake City, secretary of the national association and a leading sheep grower of the west, has recently returned from Washington where he presented the views of sheepmen regarding the tariff on wool. Frank J. Ingersoll of Spencer, Idaho, president of the national association for 17 years, will discuss leading problems of the industry.

R. J. Wilson, secretary of the Wyoming association and recently named secretary of the National Selling Agency for the marketing of wool, has also spent about four months in Washington and will present first-hand views of the situation as indicated by conditions he found there through interviews with sheepgrowers and tariff experts regarding the wool conditions.

Forrest Listed R. H. Rutledge, supervisor of the district forest office at Ogden, will discuss forest ranging and feeding of livestock. R. C. Pollock of the National Livestock and Meat Board will discuss the benefits received from the advertising of lamb-as-in food. He has had charge of this campaign and will present results obtained throughout the country.

Other men expected to give addresses include George T. Williams of the Wool Market and Standardization department of Washington; H. W. Dunlap, assistant secretary of agriculture, J. Walker of Ohio and Sam Ketter who has spoken at sheepmen's conventions before.

"I can want to see fair play without being professionalized, can't I?"

"All right, Lucy! You'll see a fight, come on!"

"Even Clara—and Lord knows he's pulled plenty raw deals—wouldn't start anything like this without old John Law behind him. Probably has a sheriff or two; I'll be toughly in the wrong. Doctor, but they'll get away with anything over my dead carcass, and no way else. So . . . how about you?"

LAWYERS THAT ARE NOT LAWS

The administration of criminal justice in America is in a disgraceful condition. The man who said that is the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Hon. William Howard Taft, once President of the United States.

We have too many laws which are not laws. A citizen can hardly go about his daily business without violating some law of which he never heard and which nobody obeys. In Connecticut it is illegal to travel on the road or highway on Sunday. In New York it is, or was until very recently, illegal to operate a motor-propelled vehicle on a highway unless a man on horseback carrying a red flag or lantern rode a quarter of a mile ahead of it!

Congress and State Legislatures try to "make" laws. No law is a good law unless the people whom it affects agree that it is a good law. In the early days of popular lawmaking people gathered to tell each other what the law was in their districts, the law being rules of conduct agreed on by common consent.

The idea that a Congress or a Legislature has a right to impose an unpopular law is a reversion to the old myth of the divine right of kings. Because a law is old is no proof that it is good. Times change but the law lags behind.

Lawyers and judges live in the past. Lawyers dominate our legislative bodies and try to make new laws, intended to fit present conditions, comply with principles and practices long outdated. One result of this is that law and justice often mean two different things. Poor men and honest men hesitate to go to law; they fear legal technicalities which have no relation to justice.

All law ought to be based on common sense and so plain and simple that any man with an average sense of fair play could tell without asking a lawyer whether he was violating the law or not. Then everybody else would know it, and intelligent public opinion alone would keep us all on the right side of the law or punish us promptly if we overstepped the line.

A GIFT TO IDAHO

That was a mighty fine Christmas gift the Supreme Court put in the socks of Mr. Idaho Voter when it rendered its decision Thursday declaring the four-year term for state elective officials, void.

It will be remembered that a proposed amendment to the state constitution changing the term of elective state officials from two to four years was adopted at the last election by a majority of 1.7 per cent of the voters. At the time it was quite generally believed that the measure would not apply to officials elected on the same day that the amendment was voted upon, but it was later ruled that such was the case.

The matter raised an uproar, because, if put into effect, it meant that Idahoans would vote upon their state officials only in presidential years with the result, perhaps that whatever party elected a president would also be swept into office in Idaho without regard to merit. Elements in all parties deplored such a contingency as unwholesome.

It was also brought out that little economy would result, for biennial state-wide elections would nevertheless be necessary to choose congressmen, members of the state supreme court, the state mine inspector and United States senators. Many other arguments were presented, aside from the purely legal ones, the most potent of the latter being that the question was improperly submitted on the ballot. It was on these grounds that the supreme court voided adoption of the constitutional amendment.

The Citizen has consistently maintained that it would be inimical to Idaho's future were the amendment permitted by the courts to stand even though the legality of its adoption had not been questioned. As schisms could have no part in the supreme court's decision, it is indeed fortunate that there were sufficient legal grounds to render the proposed amendment invalid. Thanks should be expressed to whoever it was that innocently worded the question on the ballot.

If any measure is to be placed it must be directed against the newspapers of the state for not giving wider publicity to the demerits of the proposed amendment, so that voters could have been well apprised of the situation before balloting in favor or against the measure.

The supreme court is to be congratulated on its brilliant decision and the attorneys who volunteered their services in opposing adoption of the law are deserving of praise for their public services.

Princess Silhouette Is Played

With Many Variations

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

The adult audience with which individuals are juggling the new pieces there to make them be coming to every type is something to admire. It is amazing what a variety there are making of the play in its very essence, the princess theme in every conceivable variation. After all, it would seem that the so-called princess silhouette, which is coming such vogue in the theatre, is nothing more or less than a starting point of adventure for designers who, through artificial fabric manipulations, are creating at new goals of sartorial achievement.

In the picture, dress design which "princess" is along lines, a silhouette, is shown at its best. The new style, the silhouette, is a new type of silhouette, which is a new type of silhouette. There we see fabric manipulation brought to a high point. Attempts are being made to combine the silhouetting possibilities of the new princess lines as fashion interpreters.

The Children's Home Finding and Aid Society of Idaho

Dear Friend of Idaho's Homeless Children:

This is an appeal to YOU from the very heart of Idaho's homeless and neglected children—those little children who are denied home life and home joys.

Have you ever seen these youngsters as they come to the Children's Home—little lives warped and twisted, but which can yet be directed into channels of usefulness and happiness?

They come with brave, patient, cheerful smiles. They are fighting a brave fight that you, in the outside world seldom hear about—sensitive—with many hidden heartaches—because they are deprived of proper parental care.

Is there one person who would rejoice to be their friend? For the truth is that, unless YOU will be that friend and send us money to carry on our work, many of them must suffer this extreme neglect longer and perhaps NEVER WIN.

Our Christmas appeal goes out each year and many forget! Please, do not put it off thinking the other person will do it, or that your little amount is not worth while. Please, help if it is only a dime. Put the gift, a dime, a dollar, two dollars, ten or any amount, in the little red stocking and then breathe a prayer that God will give us wisdom and strength to deal with this great problem.

If you belong to a church, club, or lodge, please use your influence in getting your organization to send a contribution to the Children's Home for Christmas.

Please, will you give your attention? Start the little red stocking homebound and your gift will bring a thrill of gladness to the children which we trust you will feel in sending it.

Anxiously awaiting your gift, I am,

Yours for the children,

LILLIAN M. CARSE

State Superintendent, Boise, Idaho.

BARNES GIVES VIEWS AGAINST COOP POLICIES

National Business Leader Approves Lending Money to Farmers On Present Farm Board Plan.

Testifying before the senate lobby committee last week Julius I. Barnes, chairman of the board of the United States chamber of commerce, opposed the granting to farm cooperatives of funds equal to the current value of their product. He was questioned for several hours concerning his recent meeting with Alexander Leggo of the farm board regarding lending to agriculture for crop marketing.

Barnes is head of a $3,000,000 grain exporting company and chairman of a business committee recently organized by the president to consider business matters. He stated that "it will be found to stimulate such acreage as to produce more of such crops as wheat, corn and soybeans, and added that grain does not think it fair to extend to cooperative farmers and to the cooperative farmers such loans as are proposed.

"If that is open to all farmers," he said, "it would be in a different way, not in the form of a premium to join a cooperative organization, but that kind of loaning to an organization will be open to all farmers. That will not form a cooperative in this country. It will do what it does in the first time stress starts."

Barnes was accused by Chairman Caraway of being an "independent witness" and his testimony was referred to by Senator Blaine of Wisconsin as "indefinite."

He had been previously criticized, with holding a helpful attitude toward the farm board, although the president of this senate committee, chairman of commerce, William Butterworth, at the same time wrote a letter to Chairman Leggo expressing similar views toward the farm board policy of loaning money to cooperative farm organizations. Barnes retorted when interviewed in the senate.

Orpheum Theatre Here Adds New Giant Neon Sign

A huge new neon sign in this week being installed. The Orpheum, it is 30 feet in length, the letters spelling the name of the theatre reading perpendicularly. J. Anderson, manager of the Twin Falls Amusement company, owners of the Orpheum theatre building, states the sign, in addition to the neon lettering, will display 300 lights. The installation is being made by the Neon Display company of Los Angeles, with special construction crew who transported the sign here by truck.

This new improvement, which coincides, one of the largest display signs in Twin Falls, is being added as an expense of several thousand dollars, and is expected to add materially to the "white way" effect of Main avenue as well as being an attraction for the traveling, additional patrons to the theatre's local playhouse.

CATTLEMAN VS. SHEPHERD

F. H. Wilson, F. W. Funcher and Frank Brubaker, cattlemen of Custer and Lemhi counties have filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus requiring Judge Adair of Blackfoot to release a demurrer which had been filed in Custer district in the contest over range rights in the upper Salmon country. Brubaker brought in a flock of sheep which fell in the trap which the cattlemen claim prior right by 25 years' use. They contend that the sheep will ruin the range for cattlemen and demand retention of their rights immediately before that damage has been done.

STUDENTS VISIT AT THEIR HOMES

Students of the Gregg Business college are taking their Christmas vacation by going to their homes outside of Twin Falls according to M. S. Hoover, manager. Special enrollment days, which will be held on January 6 and 7, will be organized in all commercial subjects for the new semester.

The school is divided into five departments under the direction of the following persons: Miss Pauline K. Johnson, Miss Shortland; Miss Mildred Tota of Twin Falls for Typewriting; Miss Rosemary Cavan of Blackfoot for English; Miss Thekla Barton of Wendell for Bookkeeping; and M. S. Hoover for commercial law and penmanship.

Mr. Hoover says the college has just completed its most successful year and needs not only its own students but all other available stenographers during the holiday rush.

IDAHO MEN ASK VISIT OF FARM BOARD MEMBER

Governing and Organization Leaders Requesting to See Director of Farm Board

Four men prominent in agriculture organization work in Idaho are requesting to see the director of the Farm Board in order to personally ask C. C. Truesdell, member of the federal farm board, to visit this state and explain methods of securing farm loans to finance profitable marketing and storage of products. The four men are: Mr. J. H. Huddleston, a fruitgrower and farmer; Governor H. V. Phillips; Mr. J. H. Huddleston, a fruitgrower and farmer; and Mr. J. H. Huddleston, a fruitgrower and farmer.

The Idaho delegation to California includes M. L. Dean, director of the state bureau of agriculture; President H. B. Gardner of the Fruitland Fruitgrowers' association; Mr. J. H. Huddleston of that organization; and Henry A. McElmerry, president of the Idaho State Fruitgrowers' association.

The governor promised the farm board that he would arrange several regional meetings at which their representative could address the assembly of farmers expected in various phases of agriculture. It was suggested these meetings might be at Pocatello, Boise and Moscow; give the whole state access to the information to be given.

BASKETBALL UNDERWAY

Basketball started Thursday night with Twin Falls teams playing three games and Filer in Twin Falls boys team defeated Hollister by 35 to 4. The Brain girls defeated Castelford 31 to 9, and the girls of the Junior High of Castelford 37 to 6. The Filer girls defeated Kimberly 23 to 17 and the boys won from Kimberly 24 to 16. The game was not thoroughly under way after the New Year.

SNOW PLOWS IN ACTION

With the big storm that came last week, the state department of public works put a number of large snowplows, rollers and tractors on the job clearing the highways. No attempts are made to keep the mountain passes where drifts are frequently 20 feet deep, but the road to Halley and Ketchikan is one that is kept open this winter if possible. Considerable more equipment is being used this season.

TESTING THE TESTERS

One Babcock tester lost his license and three others have been placed in the hands of George H. Tucker of the bureau of dairying of the state department of agriculture who announced several days ago that an investigation would be made regarding a number of testers whose equipment was reported to discriminate against the farmer. This was found to be the case, the creamery companies which employed the testers being also notified. Other Babcock testers have been called to appear for investigation regarding their measurements of milk.

RANGERS LEAVE HILLS

Rangers of the Shoshone national forest have left their posts and went into winter quarters at various communities. Ben Mahoney of Hatfield, Youngblood at Elgin; C. K. Jensen at Rogerson; and E. E. Stuck at Okley. The men will compile reports on the forest during the winter, their only field work being to notch timber to be used for wood. They are now marking Christmas trees for people of this territory.

BONUS RIGHTS EXPIRE AFTER JANUARY FIRST

U. S. Veterans Bureau Head Warns of Closing Date - Blanks May Be Secured Locally.

Approximately 400 Idaho veterans are in danger of losing an average of $1000 each if immediate action is not taken by them in applying for adjusted compensation certificates, commonly known as soldiers' bonuses.

The above statement was made by C. H. Huddleston, manager of the U. S. veterans bureau, in discussing the problems of the bureau.

Mr. Huddleston explained that under an act of congress, all applications must be on file by January 2, 1930. He stated that any veteran who served between April 6, 1917, and November 12, 1918, is eligible to file application in the event that he had more than 90 days of service. This applies, according to Mr. Huddleston, to widows and children of ex-service men who died either in the line of duty or as a result of dependent parents of deceased veterans.

However, the amount a veteran 60 years of age, it will be necessary for them to show that they were dependent upon the deceased veteran before payment can be made to them. If the mother is a widow and 60 years of age she is presumed to be dependent and payment will be made to her in ten equal quarterly installments. This also applies to the father if the mother is dead.

If the amount due is less than $50 it will be paid in cash, but if more than $50, the veterans will receive the balance in the nature of a paid-up 20-year endowment policy. When these certificates are two years old they have a loan value approximately 85 per cent of the face value of the certificate. This loan feature increases each year, enabling the veteran to realize a cash benefit prior to the date of maturity.

Mr. Huddleston states that a large percentage of the veterans have availed themselves of the loan privilege, many of the veterans having money obtained thereby to pay off notes due as a result of their farming activities. These loans are made directly to the veterans by the Boise office of the bureau.

Application blanks can be secured from the office of the bureau in Boise or in Twin Falls from the office of Terry Prater. In the event that it is not practicable to secure an application blank the veteran should make an informal application by letter to either the war department, navy department or military department, which will be the branch of service in which he served.

Deaths

TAYLOR

The death of C. B. Taylor, first justice of the Peace in Twin Falls and owner of hotels and restaurants here and in various other towns, died the last of the week in Portland, where he had gone for his health November 25. The body was taken to Blackfoot for burial. His wife and several children survive.

larger sheet of additional photographs and other papers Friday afternoon, calling Mrs. Rose J. Wilson, county superintendent, to the stand to identify them.

He first presented each one, in turn, asking Mrs. Wilson if it was recognized by her the print and the book which Miss Lowe had kept. Mrs. Wilson examined each record for the print and the book which she had kept. She recognized them.

That was the last testimony submitted by the state. It came as a surprise and defense counsel asked for an early adjournment to give them time to examine the new school orders presented.

Byington Case Related

Judge Baker ruled out on a number of occasions, evidence of the U. S. veterans bureau in discussing an alleged fraudulent transaction paid over by a man named E. H. Byington in 1928. Byington, he said, in January of that year had visited here and contracted with a number of rural school districts for a number of ventilating apparatus and other school equipment. This was to be delivered July 1. But meanwhile Byington is alleged to have collected school orders from each district for the amount of goods they ordered.

Defense counsel submitted this in an effort to show that all collection had been taken advantage of by some persons unknown who had attempted to shift responsibility on Miss Lowe. All this material was ruled out by Judge Jones.

Students Come Home

Students have been coming home for the holidays during the last four days from Moscow, Pocatello and California. In particular, several scores of young people from Twin Falls have been at various colleges and universities in Idaho and adjoining states. The University student special will carry these back shortly after the New Year, when the veterans will also leave.

JURORS DISMISSED

With the ending of the Lowe case, jurors were excused for the holidays and advised by Judge Hugh A. Baker to appear for further service in mid-January. Court will reconvene then with a number of civil cases on the docket.

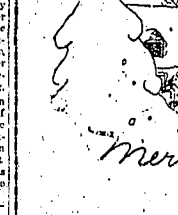

Forged handwriting in attempted disburse which was shown to have grown more efficient during the several years' time was identified positively by Ed Musgrave, former district clerk at the Twin Falls Bank and Trust company, who cashed the $480 Berger school order, and also by George King, Denver handwriting expert, and by Charles Kingsley, Boise handwriting expert. Other witnesses made less positive statements that it was forged handwriting. The audit has continued on rural school district records, all of which had not reported when the trial began. Attorney Larson of this city has filed an affidavit for $13,000. Attorney Larson of this city has filed an affidavit for $13,000. Attorney Larson of this city has filed an affidavit for $13,000.
