FRUITGROWERS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING HERE

The meeting was well attended by about fifty or more full-grower growers from Twin Falls and Jerome counties who represented the annual meeting of the Idaho Twin Fall County Growers' Association here Friday.

The speakers came here from a three-day convention at Trout Lake where they attended to business of the association.

The meeting was welcomed by J. H. Lewis of Pullman, president of the Idaho fruit marketing association. It urged united action among all full-growers to operate under the federal farm marketing act whenever possible.

HORSE PULLING CONTESTS MAY BE ARRANGED

Dynamometer Might Be Obtained for County Fairs to Measure Horse Pulling Contestants.

There may be horse-pulling contests at the county fairs of this section next fall as the result of action taken by the late executive committee here last week. Carlin county has appropriated $400 and Jerome county has authorized $200. But other county fairs have their budgets practically made up and it was not thought feasible to raise the necessary $1800 this season.

C. F. Zeigler of the United States, representing the dynamometer but as the state extension service, without the privilege of appealing, are meeting during county fairs to exist in order for the horse-pulling records to be official. It was decided to have Secretary L. H. Swerdlow investigate and learn whether satisfactory arrangements can be made for the extension service to use the dynamometer during the fair season and the United States company to use it privately at other seasons of the year.

The dynamometer costs $1700 at the factory and $1800 delivered here. It is equipped with measuring device in which teams pulling it will have its pulling weight automatically recorded without friction. This is desired to be rapidly changing in favor of a sport at county, district and state fairs throughout the country. Fair officials favor its use here if they can be obtained.

Haggardt

Miss Marcell Henderson submitted to the tunnel operation this week. She has been the victim of a severe attack of quinsy the past week.

Landing at the Guy Kennedy ranch is in full swing. The excellent weather has favored the landing of many more horses are reported. L. Wayman and family of Eaton, Colorado, have moved into the tenant house of W. W. Powell and are employed by Mr. Powell for the coming season.

Church services which have been held the past three weeks at the Haggardt school house on Friday evening, February 28. This party is for the members and their families.

Robert Meyer and family moved to the Haggardt Valley vicinity this week, where Mr. Meyer has employment for the coming year.

The local Neighbor club met at the home of Mrs. W. W. Powell Friday afternoon. This was a "No Hostess" meeting but delicious refreshments were prepared by Mrs. Powell and served by the members. It was decided at this meeting to hold the annual party at the Haggardt school house on Friday evening, February 28. This party is for the members and their families.

Dahl seeks rehearing. Dahl city has asked for a rehearing of its applications to install a city engine pumping power plant. This was previously denied by the supreme court on the grounds that it called for more money than the city's annual revenue.

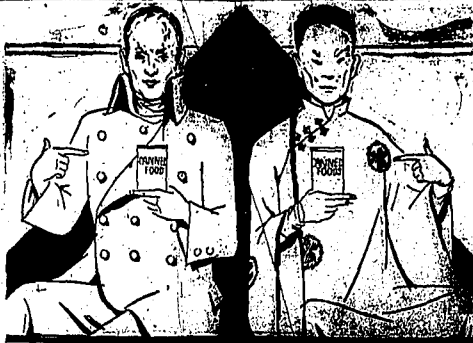

GIVES REPORT ON HOSPITAL. The 1929 hospital report submitted to the county commission by Mrs. Margaret Austin, superintendent, shows total receipts of $102,650.41, expenses of $92,625.25, and a balance of $9,995.16. Cash receipts were $71,697.64; earnings on account for county cases, $11,620.80; earnings on account for indigents, $6406.50; due on notes, $688.22; and on accounts, $213.82.

The 1929 patients during the year had an average of 55.41 per day. There were 192 county patients. Of the 1929 total, 670 were male and 658 female. Of the 1929 total, 32 were male and 30 were female. There were 122 deaths, 892 operations and 9010 laboratory examinations.

Salaries continued the biggest expense, totaling $42,275.27. Fuel cost $17,700.23, laundry $1870.25 and medical supplies $10,661.90. The number of patients averaged from 38 in January to 32 in September, the average number of employees ranged from 38 to 42 and of indigents from 10 to 12 during the year.

OFFICIAL SCHOOL VOTE IS GIVEN. At 7:30 a. m. on the vote cast at the recent school bond election showed a vote in favor of the $250,000 bond.

CHINESE OR FRENCH

THINGS are getting to the place where no one can claim credit for anything without a voice. The latest occurrence of this kind is the Chinese race. The Chinese race is a very old one, but it is not so old as the French race. The Chinese race is a very old one, but it is not so old as the French race.

Later, it was found that the Chinese race was not so old as the French race. The Chinese race is a very old one, but it is not so old as the French race. The Chinese race is a very old one, but it is not so old as the French race.

The total output was only thirty million cans—not so much as our modern cherry output. After the war, the passing of hand-work in the canneries began, which would make the process quicker, more reliable and cheaper. Other inventions, having to do with sterilization, were made, too, and from that time, the modern canning trade developed.

War and Romance. The story of how Apert made his discovery is true romance. During the latter part of the eighteenth century, France was indulging in the idea of eating canned food. The French people were not used to eating canned food, but they were interested in it.

Until the Civil War, canning was a small business; the products were expensive and did not always keep. It was not until the Civil War that the canning industry began to grow.

Such a condition is undesirable. It is a simple matter for the modern canner to have, on his own kitchen shelf the equivalent of a garden which combines all climates, from that of the tropical pineapple to that of the northern raspberry.

CUSTARDS

The rule for both boiled and baked custards is five eggs to a quart of milk and a tablespoon of sugar for each egg. Cream and custards that are to be frozen require more sugar than those that are not. When making custards, it is important to stir them constantly to prevent curdling. A very moderate degree of heat must be employed for all custards, cream and custards made of the yolks of eggs. Do not turn the vessel containing the custard into the water until the latter is at the boiling point, and remove the instant the custard is nicely set.

YOU CAN'T PLEASE EVERYBODY

The world is full of good natured people who try to agree with everybody. If they have any opinions of their own, they conceal them in their effort to avoid hurting someone else's feelings. But they don't get anywhere. They don't gain the respect or the confidence of anybody, and they count for nothing, or next to it, in the lives and affairs of their families and their communities.

How far would a minister get on his mission if he tried to make his sermons please everybody in the congregation? The question answers itself. The politician who flatters all of his constituents and agrees with whatever any of them think seldom gets elected and if he does he is even more seldom reelected. The business man who would let every customer tell him how to run his store would soon be bankrupt. And the newspaper editor who did not have any opinions of his own but ran his paper to suit the suppressed views of everyone of his subscribers would find himself in a sorry fix.

There is one sound rule for everyone who is ambitious to get along in the world and to be a respected member of his community, his state and his country. That rule is to form his or her own opinions, form them in the light of reason and change them only if reasonably convinced that they were wrong and then to stand by them, courteously but firmly. Even those who disagree will respect the man who honestly and sincerely folds to an opposing view. And it is better to be respected than merely tolerated.

BEAN TRUST

Evidence that the Federal Farm Marketing Act, under which the so-called farm relief board is operating, is destined to result in unnecessary bitterness between co-operators and the already established marketing agencies such as grain elevators, commission houses, etc., is seen in editorial comment from a current bean trade magazine which says in part:

"We consider the dealers unwise unless they immediately take steps also to become organized on a national scale. There is no real reason why Colorado dealers and New York dealers and Michigan and California, cannot work out an organization program whereby existing state associations, and others which could be formed, will become joined in a national federation. If they don't intend to fold up their tents and let the growers have the field, they must do something of the sort. A small state association will be no match for a national group of bean growers."

What does this mean? It is the foreshadowing of war which must never be permitted. There is a reasonable ground for both elements in the controversy. The rights of both must be protected and preserved.

There is a place for both grower associations and for dealers. If the latter are to organize, the reasons should not be to fight, but to render friendly, cooperative help and assistance to cooperative marketing.

COSTS AND FARM INCOME

In his annual report L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange, declares that the task before the American farmer is not only to produce efficiently, but also to reduce to every opportunity the costs of production.

In other words, the farmer's profit depends upon his being able to produce his crops at a cost below the price at which he must sell them, rather than upon the size of the crops themselves.

Obviously one of the chief aids to economical production is the employment of modern equipment suitable to the needs of the individual farmer concerned. Such equipment, judiciously selected, effectively used, and taken care of when not in use, is essential to success under present-day conditions.

Another important feature of profitable farming is the raising of as much food and feed as possible at home. As has been so often pointed out, the cow, sow and hen, with hay, pasture and a good garden, are among the most valuable adjuncts of a sound farm program.

The decisions made along these lines during the next few weeks will largely determine the farmer's profit or loss during 1930.

Horace Addis for the past several years fieldman for the Idaho Farmer in this territory has been transferred to Pendleton, Oregon, where he will be engaged in similar work for the Oregon Farmer. Mr. Addis has hundreds of friends in this locality who will regret to learn of his leaving the territory but who will follow his future with interest and wish for him continued success in the important work in which he is engaged.

Thanks to the action of the special session of the state legislature just held, motorists will soon be paying a nickel tax on every gallon of gasoline purchased for motor vehicle purposes. The increase was an administration measure, and the administration must bear all the responsibilities of the proposition, whether good or bad. Twin Falls county's legislative delegation was against the tax and therein were interpreting the public attitude here.

MANGERSHIP SETTLED

The Citizen here wishes to express the public's thanks to John E. Hayes, until Saturday night the general manager of the Twin Falls Canal company.

During the brief year he served in that capacity, he labored long and diligently for the company and brought to his position a degree of intelligence and skill, based on practical knowledge and experience that will be difficult to duplicate. It is to be hoped that the Hayes family may continue to make this community their home. Regardless of the reasons which lead up to the break between Mr. Hayes and the canal board, no one will deny the former manager full measure of praise and appreciation for his services and sacrifices, but many will regret that conditions apparently prevent his remaining at the helm.

The new manager, John Iron, who has come up through the ranks, is accorded congratulations for being chosen to succeed a worthy predecessor. As watermaster, Mr. Iron has been a fixture through the years with the canal company and his promotion is a well-deserved one.

No apologies need be expressed for the several actions of the canal board. The members thereof were the choice of the stockholders; they are all experienced directors and must be credited with being more familiar with the workings of the canal system than are persons out of touch with company affairs. They certainly have only the best interests of the company and the shareholders at heart and are entitled to the cooperation of every stockholder in fulfilling duties, at best oftentimes difficult tasks, in the doing of which they receive but little thanks.

The managership question is now settled, at least for 10 months, and another highly successful canal company season is anticipated.

WHY CHINESE STARVE TO DEATH

Newspaper dispatches a few weeks ago carried the startling headlines: "Two Million Chinese Doomed to Die!"

China is in the grip of a food famine. Millions are dying of slow starvation. Hundreds of thousands have already died since Winter began, and there is no human power which can save the rest of those who are threatened.

Yet China is mainly an agricultural country, and its people are highly efficient producers of crops. They practice scientific methods of crop rotation and fertilization and maintain the yield of any given piece of ground year after year. Why, then, do the Chinese starve?

They starve because they have no livestock. That is the explanation which Mr. Renick W. Dunlap, U. S. Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, gives, with convincing arguments in favor of that statement.

"The Chinese lack that great reserve of food which is represented by the vast herds and flocks of America," says Mr. Dunlap. "In a land dependent entirely upon its plant crops for food, one crop failure is likely to mean famine. Our livestock industries represent a great reserve of foodstuffs, something which we may draw upon in time of need, and build up a time of surplus. A large crop year is carried along a year or so in the form of hogs and cattle."

Before livestock became an essential part of general farming, famine conditions were likely to arise anywhere, as they formerly did frequently in parts of Europe and within recent years over extensive areas of India, where the religion of the people forbids the taking of life and meat food is unknown.

In the United States there are still agricultural sections where almost no livestock is kept, and these are the sections in which the farmers have the hardest time to get along. One of the most important parts of agricultural education in America in the past forty years has been the effort on the part of Federal and state agricultural departments, and the agricultural colleges, to introduce diversified farming into these one-crop regions.

It is surprising to learn that more than two-thirds of all the land included in the farms of the United States is devoted to growing feed for livestock or for their pasturage. This in addition to the great herds which graze on the open ranges not included in farms. And more than half of the annual value of the farm products of America is the value of the cattle, hogs, sheep, horses, mules and animal by-products raised on the farms.

The same folks who were hoping a couple of years ago that Lindy would make some food break that would give them a chance to throw mud at him are the ones that are now chuckling because it looks as if Admiral Byrd would be stuck in the Antarctic ice for another year. There is a perversity about unsuccessful people which makes them hate success and gloat over the misfortunes of those whom the rest of the world respects. This perversity is too often reflected in the American mind.

Last week's issue of The Saturday Evening Post carried a letter from the State Game Warden R. E. Thomas in reply to an editorial printed by the magazine in January condemning the so-called slaughter of deer in the Shoshone basin preserve last fall.

We often wonder whether those noisy Senators carry on that way around home.

To err is human. And in some cases about the only evidence that the erring brother is such.

If our friends send us any more chain letters we'll sick Mr. Henderson of Shreveport on 'em.

The boys in Congress are hoping the farmers' feeling of relief will last until after the election next fall.

THE INVADER

As to an invasion of the country of Idaho would have looked very much the same one hundred and twenty-five years, perhaps a thousand years ago, as it does today. Inanimate nature has changed very little. Our developed areas are still more streams and pools, less than seven per cent of Idaho is under cultivation.

Our five great rivers in 1805, as they did in 1930, took their winding ways down to the west. Most of the land was mountainous, with plateaus and valleys, and to the south there were vast areas of sagebrush desert. Over them plain the coyote chased the rabbit; in the timber, cougar, bobcat, grizzly and other beasts competed in the capturing of wild goats, sheep, elk and deer. These elusive game animals were not so numerous then as now. Flocks of antelope grazed along the timbered fringes of the plains, but buffalo were not plentiful and were dying out.

In springtime the silver herd of salmon moved to the shallow waters of the rivers to their spawning grounds. There to spawn and die. At times they were so numerous as to almost block the streams; and men might almost walk across on their wriggling backs. But bear and animals swarmed in the lacustrine and bayous.

Politically, it was no man's land. By the precarious ring of discovery Columbus had taken it from the Indians. In 1813, at the mouth of the Columbia in 1792, Alexander Mackenzie had crossed the continent in the far north in 1795, but no white man had ever stood on the American divide of the Rockies or seen any part of the great inland empire.

If possession and use is the test of ownership, the Indians title was as good as the Indians. Idaho is still sparsely settled. We have only five or six people to each section of land. An Indian family of five could have claimed on an average about two townships. Painted arrows, round-backed horses on the ridges or propped and fished along the brushy stream, guarded themselves with fish in summer, stored to the verge of cannibalism in fall, and on the approach of winter, roamed off to the divide into the deadly measure of the Blackfoot and the Gros Ventre.

They had no implements of steel. Their ineffective bows were of yew or cedar, arrows, often of sharpened reeds. Fiction tells that they lived in freedom and plenty; history records lives of hunger, privation, hunger, and the constant fear of violent death. It was into such a land and among such a people that the invader came.

One August afternoon in 1805 a young American army officer toiled up the diminishing waters of the Missouri to the then western boundary of the United States. Holding aloft the Stars and Stripes, he stood upon the continental divide, and looked downward and westward into the state we live in.

"VERY LATESTS"

By MARY MARSHALL

The winter display of sports dresses for Florida is of little interest to the average person in the north, who cannot afford to take a vacation at Palm Beach except as the fashion shows by the smart dressmakers in February are those which will prevail everywhere for next summer's wear.

Among those now being shown, dresses with short sleeves are smarter than those with no sleeves at all, and possibly better for the summer has come in earnest the sleeveless dress save for evening wear, will soon actually prevail. To be sure among the smart new daytime dresses you may see many made without sleeves, but these are always accompanied by a belted jacket or short cape so that at least the upper part of the arms is covered.

In taking inventory of your last summer's wardrobe you may find a number of sporty dresses of the sleeveless sort. An attempt to supply these dresses with sleeves would prove futile since you could hardly hope to match the material, but if the skirts are long enough to supply the needed three or four inches below the knees you may bring them up to date by means of a little separate jacket of silk or linen.

To be sure there is the latest vogue to be considered and last season's sport dresses almost all retained the low waistline but with the help of a narrow belt placed several inches above the hips the normal waistline may be indicated. Because that you do not find this belt too closely for we are still a long way from the tight belts that prevailed when waistlines were normal before.

The dress pictured is of pale blue silk embroidered in brown and white and trimmed with white.
