"CAREY ACT" DOES NOT HOLD AGAINST A PRIOR FILING

Judge Walters Decides That Contests Are Not Natural Outlets for Water—Decision in Ditch Case.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF THE STATE OF IDAHO IN AND FOR TWIN FALLS COUNTY.

A. B. Beverlin, Plaintiff, vs. Henry Workman, defendant.

This case, at the trial, resolved itself into three questions for determination, as follows:—
1st. Has, under the facts of this case, the plaintiff a right of way for a ditch over and across defendant's land?

2nd. Has the defendant a local right to flow the water from his land across the land of the plaintiff using certain natural depressions, locally called "coulees" as a means of conveyance?

3rd. Has plaintiff an interest in a certain flume situated on defendant's land?

From the evidence it appears without dispute that plaintiff built and constructed a certain ditch at the trial designated on the map used as "Ditch B" when the equal subdivision upon which it was constructed was public domain and prior to the date that the defendant filed upon said land.

If at the time plaintiff constructed "Ditch B" he had acquired the government land, had initiated or prepared to himself, under the laws of Idaho, a right to the use of water to be conveyed by said ditch, then the laws of the United States give to plaintiff the right of way for such ditch and land with an easement for the right of way, over the lands, nor how none, the ownership of the land may afterwards fall.

Rev. St. U. S. Sec. 2329-2340. Jennings vs. Kirk, 98 U. S. 523. Border vs. Water Co., 101 U. S. 274. Controversy for defendant's sake to evade the terms of the well known provisions of the United States statutes, by urging that in as much as the right of way to construct said ditch in question the land had been withdrawn from entry except under the provisions of the "Carey Act," and therefore, the State of Idaho had title in some measure to said land and it was not unaccepted public land and not subject to the title of the United States statutes above referred to.

I am thoroughly convinced under no merit in this view, and that land is acquired from defendant under the provisions of the "Carey Act," and in filing upon which, and in making the required filing, and in making application with the State, is still unaccepted public domain and is subject to all of the provisions of law relative to unaccepted public land, and in the manner of acquiring its title and that is regulated by the "Carey Act."

The national government deals with the settler upon such land through the State as if all the land were in open transaction, and the settler gets his title from the government to the State and from the State to the settler.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cryder will make their home in this city with Mr. and Mrs. Smith will live on the Osborn ranch.

At the young people are well known in Twin Falls where they have the respect and good will of the community who will congratulate them on their marriage. Monday evening a large number of their friends gathered to show their respect, and spent the evening making merry at the expense of the bridal couples.

The Vermont society composed of former residents of the good old Granite state, now living in Twin Falls, Idaho, were gathered at the home of Mrs. J. H. Seaver and held themselves to the Shoshone falls with well filled baskets of good things to eat and spend the evening in the most enjoyable and social good time. The following are the names of those who made up the jolly crowd:

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Seaver and two sons, Chas. E. Colles, W. H. Eldridge, Gordon D. McQuilvey, Mrs. H. A. Moore, Mrs. W. C. Colles, Mrs. E. W. Howard, Frank M. Skeels, Jno. H. Copelan, Frank F. Morrison, E. L. Lewis, E. L. Hester, and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Howe.

Mrs. Daniel Tarnipson returned Friday from a two week's visit with her sister in Council, this state.

the right in law to so flow the waste water from his holdings across the land of defendant, or any other source, in view of the fact of this case to be, plaintiff's land. In its natural state was not burdened with a flow of water in said "coulee" only during a few days during the year and possibly not every year; that during heavy rains and melting snows, then the law does not subject plaintiff's land to the burden of a flow of waste water from the land of defendant, or any other source, during the entire year of such times as a defendant selects to cause it to flow.

In irrigation one's fields, as all other matters in this State, a citizen must so use, control and care for his own property that its use by him does not injure his neighbor.

If it is a hardship or annoyance to him to be forced to control the waste water from his field, he may very rightly place this hardship and annoyance upon the author of the act, himself, and does not shift the burden to the shoulders of his neighbor.

His neighbor has the right to enjoy his land free from any easement of priority and Shoshone laws, except such as the law imposes, and the law does not impose any easement such as is here sought to be imposed. Defendant has caused the flow of such a quantity of waste water by offering testimony that part of this waste water is carried by a channel from the ditch and over which, of course, defendant is in no wise liable.

It is the plaintiff's contention that he is entitled to an interest in a certain flume. Judgment will follow in accordance with the findings of the court. Dated July 18th, 1908.

Edwards A. Walters, District Judge.

ALBA D. CRANDALL DIES SUDDENLY

Unexpected Demise Shocks the Whole Community

DEATH COMES AT THE END OF ONLY A SHORT ILLNESS

Deceased Has Been a Resident of Twin Falls Since 1891 and is Very Well Known All Over the Tract.

The city of Twin Falls was shocked last Friday morning by the report that A. D. Crandall, proprietor of the Washington livery stable, had died very suddenly at his home in the northwestern section of the city. Mr. Crandall had complained of feeling badly when ready to start down to his office and the fact so worried his wife that she telephoned to him to come home when that sufficient care could be given him. Mr. Crandall reached home a little later and had been home but a short time when the summons came.

The funeral services were held from Miller's chapel, Sunday afternoon and were attended by a large number of friends of the deceased and his family. Rev. John Goreley in a short discourse paid a glowing tribute to the man who had so suddenly departed from life's work. The remains were interred in the Twin Falls cemetery, with R. M. McCullister, J. J. Wall, W. H. Eldridge, J. E. Davies, John F. McGrew and S. T. Hamilton acting as pall bearers. The funeral cortege that acted as escort to the remains was the longest ever seen in this city and was justly tribute by his host of friends of the esteem with which he was held by everyone.

Alba D. Crandall who was fifty-eight years of age was born Oct. 10 1850 in Wisconsin where he with twelve brothers and sisters lived until his twelfth year, when the family moved to Minnesota. Mr. Crandall lived in the copper state until nearly thirty years ago, when the family moved to Idaho and later to North Idaho where he was married to Miss Louisa Herring in 1883. After an eight year residence in the above city the family moved to Teton and later to North Yakima, fourteen years being spent in those two cities. In the fall of 1891 Mr. Crandall was attracted to the new Twin Falls country and came to this place, entering into the fuel and grain business. By February of 1895 Mr. Crandall was ready to leave his wife and daughters come and the family set up housekeeping with the "other place" and ready to go to Twin Falls. Mr. Crandall bought the Washington stable, and continued the business up to his death.

Mr. Crandall was a man of quiet, unassuming disposition, but with a man of strong and sturdy character and one whose friendship one gained was more dependent upon enmity. In his death the whole community suffers loss and can sympathize deeply with the sorrowing wife and daughters.

FINE PROSPECT ON ELK MOUNTAIN

ELK MOUNTAIN MINING COMPANY HOLDS VALUABLE CLAIMS

C. W. Rohelmet, Secretary of Mining Company Visits in Twin Falls—Samples Show Run Above the Average.

It is time that Twin Falls is waking up to the fact that at the very door the two of the rich mining districts in the west and that unless steps are taken soon to check the trade from this territory, it will be elsewhere. Mr. C. W. Rohelmet, of Three Creek, Idaho, spent yesterday and today in this city planning stock in a mine located seven and a half miles from the southeast corner of this county but in the state of Nevada under which laws the company is incorporated.

The company is called the Elk Mountain Mining company, and is capitalized at $500,000 with stock par value $100. Mr. Rohelmet is a very pleasant manner of fact salesman with nothing of the hot air artist in his makeup and every word he utters gives the impression that his belief is a lummer. In short conversation the gentleman gave a brief resume of the conditions there.

The mine which is about 6000 feet above the sea level is fifty-two miles from Wells, Nevada, with a road capable of carrying heavy loads. The mine is only twelve miles from the proposed electric line, however. The company has abundant material for the construction of five claims and four have been prospected and found to be equal to the Elk mine.

The ore taken out has assayed 10 per cent copper, seven ounces of silver and an ounce of gold. Besides this the rock formation, containing molybdenum, which sells at $1.45 per pound, has a two and a half foot vein, making the mine for this metal alone a regular bonanza.

The copper, gold and silver ore is in the form of sulphides and easily converted to the smelter with only the addition of some heavy sands. The trace in the outcropping for 4000 feet is about three feet wide. A tunnel two hundred feet long has been run and at present the tram railway is in operation from that point. The main body of the vein is only 150 feet from the tunnel and the distance from the vein to the tunnel is only 150 feet.

From the columns of editorials in the Capital News against Fred T. Dugan, it would appear that that sheet doesn't believe its own contention that the wily leader is down and out.

The efforts of the Brady papers in this state to predict his easy victory at the polls are of the "whittling through a graveyard" kind. It gives them courage even if it don't lay the ghost.

Mayor Haines of Boise last week said that politics were too dirty for him since the administrators have entered the ring. The mayor is apt to be lone-ome if he looks like a rotten egg mean than the clergy of this state.

The city police department has made a great improvement in the appearance of the streets and alley ways, getting the weeds cut and the rubbish cleaned. The next step is the compelling of the property owners to cut weeds on their premises.

The Statesman's investigation and exposure of the awful sins of Treasurer "Bojinger" would seem a little bit more consistent if they had included an investigation of the other branches of the state executive department. As it is, it looks like a case of spite work on the part of the paper that has not lost an opportunity of sticking up for the game through thick and thin. Most people will consider it a bluff at reform.

The people of this tract should see to it that no avowed candidate for the legislature gets their support, until he has pledged his support to a measure re-adjusting the membership of the state land office as to do away with any political juggling with rights of settlers under the Carey Act. The action of the board with reference to the turning over the canal system of the South Side should be a lesson to every rancher on this tract when he remembers that the actions of the land board are subject to no control by the courts.

A big-hearted, kindly, friendly, and delightful, humorous writer has passed from us through the death of Joel Chandler Harris, at Atlanta, last week, Friday. What has been said of Mr. Harris as an author is equally true of him as a man—his personality was as attractive as his writing. Always rattling, and even shy, he was sincerely dear to those who penetrated beyond that shyness, for they found geniality, genuine interest in large questions, and, above all, thorough sincerity and honesty of character. His "Uncle Remus" book had scientific value in that they were careful studies in folklore; but they had immensely higher value in that they charmed and pleased innumerable thousands of children. And in all his story writing there was a pleasant and cheerful touch that reflected in a natural way the sunny life in Northern Georgia, which Mr. Harris had absorbed from childhood and in which he delighted. The village and plantation life of this section is a most tempting subject for the short story writer and has been utilized by the late Richard Malcolm John and others, but none of his school have brought out the local color so distinctly, the dry, withering wit, and the shrewd wisdom of the Northern Georgian as did Joel Chandler Harris. It should be noted also that Mr. Harris did good service to the South in his editorial work on the Atlanta Constitution—a work which, in a quarter of a century. With his colleague, late Henry W. Grady, whose life he wrote, he did much to establish new ideas and an open-minded spirit toward the Nation, not only in Georgia but throughout the South.—Outlook.

The following article commenting on the political situation would seem an argument for the Republican cause rather than for the Democracy. If we are to see any real improvement in our affairs on property and can get the real article every time they pull the strings there would be little encouragement for the man out of work to vote any other ticket. At least the stimulated article would bring work at a time when it is most needed, the pre-election period.

The New-York Evening Post, however, although acknowledging "a certain improvement already visible" in industrial world, grows suspicious of so much organized effort to stifle recovery. We read "One can not hear the talk of those deep Republican counsels without becoming aware that a plan of this sort enters into all their political reasoning. Ask them what are the signs on the horizon of politics, and their answer is: Just now, of course, the party outlook is bleak. With all their men out of work, the railroad business had, so many manufacturers either shut down or running on part time, we are fast sure of any republican election were to be held to-morrow, we should expect a jolly good looking. But all this is going to be radically changed before the year is over. It has got to be. The mills will be open, prices will go up, stocks will boom.

We will attend to that. The party needs it, and is bound to have it. You will see.

"The theory is one of engaging simplicity. Money is now abundant and cheap. The railroads can borrow all they need. Banks are still a little cautious about lending to merchants and contractors and manufacturing concerns, but when the time comes, the golden rules will be set flowing in those directions, too, and then the Republican wilderness will bloom as the rose. Positive orders will be issued to the timid and reluctant. We have provided you the money, haven't we? Then use it to make employment and to create a semblance of good times, and we'll ask no other campaign contribution from you this year."

If the scheme works, the Republican party will not need be so shrinking as not to step forward and claim all the credit, again reminding the intelligent voter that, if he wants a chicken in the pot or forty acres and a cow, he knows how to cast his ballot so as to have all these things added unto him.—The Literary Digest.

BEHL TO INCORPORATE

Committee Appointed to Circulate Petition for Village Government.

Duhl, Idaho, July 21, 1908. Dr. Boyd of Twin Falls, was in Duhl last Thursday.

The Duhl Pressed Brick company works started Wednesday.

M. C. Ware has gone to Seattle for a short visit, with his family.

A. H. Hudson and son, of Salt Lake, were in town one day last week.

The Hotel Hild is putting up a laundry building adjacent to the hotel.

Leon Calhoun, of Austin, Idaho, was in town last Thursday and Friday.

O. H. Dickinson, and J. H. Barton, from Boise, were in town last week.

Open visitors to Duhl consisted of W. A. Watson, Thursday and E. W. Byrne, Friday.

O. S. Morrow and E. C. McMahon, of Severance, Idaho, spent part of last week in Duhl.

R. M. McMahon, who is to superintend the lot sale, came down from Twin Falls Monday.

H. C. Goers is spending a couple of weeks at Judge Boegs' ranch, going there to do some planting.

H. C. Throckold and E. L. Shea, of Contralia, Mo., were looking at real estate in Duhl and vicinity Friday.

E. C. Collican, who recently purchased land near here, left Thursday for Chicago and other eastern points.

Joe Day, the hustling real estate man, and N. C. Beebe, of Twin Falls were in Duhl, Sunday looking over the town.

R. A. Schnebeck, one of the organizers of the North Side project, or city, was in Duhl last Saturday and also on Monday.

Twin Falls visitors to Duhl last week not already mentioned were, F. G. Lesser, Alfred Peterson, E. V. Berg, H. C. McCluskey, S. D. Clinton, E. Gilliam and W. H. Kridger.

The Duhl Townsite company will have a public sale of lots next Thursday afternoon at revised price. All unsold and reserved lots being placed on the market.

P. E. Bartlett, of Albion, Wash., and Frank S. Held, of Chicago, were among the Sunday visitors to Duhl. Cateford visitors to Duhl were George Wade, Saturday and A. W. Wagon on Monday.

A special rate of two cents a mile from all Idaho points has been secured by the managers of the bucking contest to be held in Duhl, August 8th, and it is anticipated that an immense crowd will be in attendance.

H. W. Rath and E. T. Beal, of Omaha, made a visit to Duhl last Wednesday. Other out of town visitors the same day were C. H. McIntire, of Salt Lake, and W. A. Milner and Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Harwell of Roseworth, Idaho.

Attorney P. W. Monahan was absent a couple of days last week at Albia representing the defendant in the case of the Stearman & Co. vs. Shaffner. The defendant was charged with selling beer on Sunday in violation of the law. The leading witness for the prosecution fled from the state. The jury disagreed and the case was dismissed.

Misses A. Kelley and M. Norton, of St. Paul, Minn., who have been here the last five weeks, left Sunday evening for Seattle. They will visit in Seattle and Spokane and then return to their home in St. Paul. Miss Norton filed on an eighty 2 1/2 miles north-west of Duhl two years ago, and has bought another forty. Miss Kelley recently filed on an eighty a few miles west of town. Both of them are very enthusiastic about the country, and will return before many months.

H. W. Under, formerly of Colorado, but more recently of Spokane, arrived in Duhl last week to engage in the real estate business. Mr. Under was admitted to the Colorado bar and practices in that state, but does not intend for the present to engage in law practice here. He has had considerable experience in handling real estate in that state, and is confident in that line. His office will be in the Dr. Monroe building. We welcome him to the town and wish him success.

A meeting of Duhl citizens to consider the question of incorporating Duhl as a village was held Monday night. The sentiment was favorable to incorporation, and a committee to circulate a petition among the taxpayers was appointed, consisting of Fred Shurt, L. G. Haysford and C. S. Beebe. It is probable that the requisite number of signers will be secured and that Duhl will fall into the precinct with neighboring towns. Mrs. S. E. Smith and Miss Vera Gray Butler, of Filer were at Duhl Tuesday.

H. J. Idema returned last Thursday from a several weeks trip to Seattle and other points, reporting a very enjoyable visit.

Another running race took place last Saturday afternoon over the race course on Ninth street, the distance being something less than a quarter of a mile. Three horses took part in the race, viz., Ned, a black horse owned by George Eveheth, and ridden by Dr. J. W. Proctor; Soldier, a bay horse belonging to Frank Hayward, and ridden by Frank Anderson; and Nigger, a black horse belonging to Eveheth and Wiseman, Leonard Wiseman being the rider. Eveheth's black horse, Ned, won the race, Hayward's bay being second and the black named Nigger, last.

A party consisting of Governor Gooding, James H. Garfield, secretary of the Interior, P. H. Sewell, chief of the government reclamation service; Hugh A. Brown, private secretary of the Interior; a clerk in the department of the Interior; Parkes Lindsay connected with the reclamation press bureau; D. E. Burley, general passenger and ticket agent of the Oregon Short Line, and Paul S. A. Uebel, chief engineer of the North Side Land & Water company, came to Duhl on a special train Wednesday morning of last week and remained an hour or so, looking at the new school building and other objects of interest. The visit was a pleasant surprise to the people of Duhl. Secretary Garfield thinks this is a wonderful valley, and that the settlers have accomplished much in a short time.

J. N. Clyde is hauling out the material for his new home in the west part of town. Jim is putting up a good house and intends to make it look homelike. He says it will be some time before he gets married, but people are allowed to think.

Members of the Odd Fellows lodge who the locals have had and friends in the lodge rooms Saturday night, Ice cream and cake and lemonade was served us refreshments. The program was rendered in a manner very pleasing to all.

The score was a freak 22 to 8 and seven locals played. During the season the locals have had five games with Hansen taking three out of five and would have taken the other two had it not been for "money." Hansen is determined to test two stories on this last game. But still they took their medicine like brave boys and are willing to try it again some day.

ward the mystery of heredity.

"Do you mean, Mr. Steward, that heredity is an excuse for moral weakness?" she asked.

"I don't know. Those inheriting nothing of evil say it is no excuse."
"It is no excuse," he said.

"You speak with authority," he said,
"with more than you are aware of,"
she murmured, not-meaning to say it.
She stood up impulsively, her front faced toward the distant home, her rounded young figure poised in relief against the sky.

"Inherited or not, idleness, procrastination, are my besetting sins. Can't you suggest the remedy, Mr. Steward?"
"But they are only the throes of Time, and we kill the poor old gentleman."

"Leopold assassins," she repeated
passively.

"Here even had caught on the cliff brides. He knelt to release it, also looking down, noting an ugly tear in the fabric.

"Payment for my inquiries—the first instalment," she said, still looking down over his shoulder and watching his efforts to release her. "Thank you, Mr. Steward. I think we ought to start, don't you?"

He straightened up, smiling, awaiting her further pleasure. His pleasure being captured, she seated herself again, saying: "What I meant from heredity is no excuse for misconduct in people of our sort. Environment, not heredity, counts. And it's our business, who have every chance in the world, to make good."

He looked down, amused at the pleasant incongruity of voice and vernacular.

"What time is it?" she asked irrelevantly.

He glanced at his watch. She turned her eyes toward the level sun, unconscious and a little consciousness struck that it was too late for her to drive to Black Falls Crossing unless she started at once.

"Leave us then. The wind went down with the sun.
Doubtless he had forgotten to tell her the time. She had almost forgotten that she had asked him. With the absence of sunset, the influence of content, great over her. She saw him close his watch with the absented air which she already associated with him, and she let the question go from sheer disbeliever for the effort of repetition—the project a drive go—acquiescent, content that matters shape themselves without any interference from her. The sense of ease, of physical well-being, invaded her structure, her imagination, as if though tension somewhere had slack-ened.

The conversation drifted thitherly.
Sometimes he retired for to amusement, even a hushed laughter. Sometimes she laughingly agreed with his views. Sometimes she let them go unnoticed or, latent, on her own idea, shook her small head in amused disapproval.

The stillness over all, the deepening mellow light, the blessed indolence of the young world and their few years in it—youth—that was perhaps the key to it all, after all.

"Tomorrow," she mused aloud, kneed eroded in her clasped fingers—"tomorrow they'll pass, with great circumstances and fuss, a few antique wood-sides, their feet from the north—a few grouse, fever snips, a stray duck or two. Others will drive motor cars over bad roads. Others will ride, sail, golf—anything to kill the eternal tedium. You know the un-happily of the people here or coming,
don't you?"

"Who are they?"

She began, "The Leroy Mortimers?"
"Oh, no."
"Oh, Alderons and Captain Vaucher and the Page twins and Marlon?"

"Yes."
"Rena Bonnevall, the Tassel girl, Agatha Callington, Mrs. Vandenberg—all sorts, all sorts." And, with an inferior, "If I'm to drive I should like to know what time it is."

He informed her, and she, too indolent to pretend surprise and finding speech easier, told him that it was no business to permit her to forget.

His smiling severity under the rebuke aroused in her a slight resentment, as though he had taken something for granted.

Besides, she had grown uneasy. She had wired Quarrier, saying she would meet him and drive him over. He had replied at once, naming his train. He was an exact man and expected method and precision in others. She didn't exactly know how it might affect him if his reasonable demand was unsatisfied. She did not know him very well yet.

And, thinking of him now, she again made up her mind to give him the answer which he now had every reason to expect from her. This decision appeared to lubricate her conscience.
It ran more smoothly now, emitting fewer cracks.

"You say that you know Mr. Quarrier?" she began thoughtfully.

"Not well."
"I hope you will like him, Mr. Steward."
"I do not think he likes me, Miss Laudis. He has reasons not to."
She looked up, suddenly remembering: "Oh—since that scrape? What has Mr. Quarrier to do?" She did not quite get the question. A troubled silence followed. She was trying to remember the details—something she had paid small attention to at the time; something no foreign to her, so distant from her comprehension, that it had not touched her closely enough for her to remember exactly what this young man might have done to forfeit the good will of Howard Quarrier.

She looked at Steward. It was impossible that anything very bad could come from such a man. And, pursuing her reasoning aloud: "It couldn't have been very awful," she argued; "something foolish, at least, but not Mr. Quarrier. And that could not concern Mr.
Quarrier."

"I thought you did know; I thought you—remembered—while you were driving me over—from the station—that I was dropped from my club."
She flushed up. "Oh, but what had Mr. Quarrier to do with that?"
"He is a governor of that club."
"You mean that Mr. Quarrier had you—expelled?"

"What else could he do? A man who is idiot enough to risk making his own club notorious must take the consequences, and they say I took that risk.
Therefore Mr. Quarrier, Major Bet-weather—all the governors did their duty. I—naturally concluded that no governor of the Patrons club feels very kindly toward me."
Miss Laudis sat very still, her small head bent, a flush about brightening her fair face.

She recalled a few of the details now—the scandal—something of the story. Which particular act it was she could not remember, but she knew who had dined too freely had made the water, and this boy sitting beside her had accepted it and won it by bringing to the sacred precincts of the Patrons club a football girl disguised
in a man's evening dress.

That was bad enough. That somebody promptly discovered it was worse, but worst of all was the publicity, the club's name smirched, the young man expelled from one of the best two clubs in the metropolis.

To read of such things in the columns of a daily paper had meant little to her except to repel her. To hear it mentioned among a group of her own sort had left her incurious and indifferent, but now she saw it in a new light, with the young man who had figured in it seated beside her. Did such men as he, such attractive, well-bred, amusing men as he—do that sort of thing?

"Is that the kind of man you are,
Mr. Steward?" she said impulsively.

"It appears that I was, I don't know what I am now."
"The pity of it!" she said, still swayed by impulse. "Why did you do-didn't you know—realize what you were doing—bringing discredit on your own club?"

"I was in no condition to know, Miss Laudis."
The crude brutality of the expression might merely have hurt or disgusted her had she been less intelligent, nor, as it was, did she fully understand why he chose to use it—unless that he meant it—in self-punishment.

"It's rather shameful!" she said
hotly.

"Yes," he assented; "it's a bad beginning."
"A beginning? Do you mean to go on?"

He did not reply. His head was partly turned from her. She sat silent for awhile. The dog had returned to lie at Steward's feet, his brown eyes tracingly watching the man he had chosen for his friend, and the man, without turning his eyes, dropped one hand on the dog's head, caressing the silly ears.

Some sentimentalist had once said that no man who cared for animals could be wholly bad, his experience intimated her, as it was, did she fully understand why he chose to use it—unless that he meant it—in self-punishment.

She had committed against precept which appears to be one of those edifying thoughts trills peculiar to neither sex and common to both. Besides, her knowledge of such matters was as vague as her mind was healthy and body wholesome. Men who dined in-continentally were not remarkable for their morality. The actress habit, being incomprehensible to her, meant nothing, and she said innocently: "It is not for such things that we drop men, Mr.
Steward. You know that, of course."
"But what do you drop men?"

"For falsehood, deception, any dishonesty."
"And you don't drop a man when you read in the papers that one of the best two clubs in town has expelled
a member?"

She gave him a troubled glance, and

The following is the full text of the platform adopted unanimously by the representatives of the Democracy of the United States in the National Convention assembled, reaffirming our belief in the principles of the party. We rejoice at the increasing signs of an awakening throughout the country. The various investigations have traced graft and political corruption to the representatives of predatory trusts and held before the unsuspecting methods by which they have defrauded elections and perpetrated fraud upon the commonsense public through servant officials of whom they have raised to place and power. The consequence of the nation is now aroused to free the government from the grip of those who have added a business to the favor-seeking corruption; it must become again the people's government and the nation restored in all its departments according to the Jeffersonian maxim of "equality for all and special privileges to none."

Shall the people rule? Is the overshadowing issue which manifests itself in the questions now under discussion. Office Holders. Coincident with the enormous increase in the expenditure of a third addition to the number of office holders. During the past year 33,784 were added, compared with 23,000 in the past six years of Republican administration the total number of new offices created, aside from many constant offices, during the past year being an additional expenditure of nearly $700,000,000 as against only 10,275 new offices created during the Cleveland and McKinley administrations. We denounce this growing increase in the number of office holders as not only wasteful but also as a clear indication of a deliberate purpose on the part of the administration to keep the Republican party in power and to expand the number of office holders.

Arbitrary Power of Speaker. The abuse of executive power designed by the fathers of the constitution to be the popular branch of our government, responsive to the public will. The house of representatives as controlled in recent years by the Republican party has become a legislative body responsive to the will of a majority of its members, but has come under the absolute domination of a speaker who has entire control of its deliberations and power of legislation. We have observed with amazement the manner in which our federal government has obtained the enactment of measures desired by a majority of its members. When legislative government becomes a failure when one member in the person of the speaker is more powerful than the entire assembly.

We demand that the house of representatives shall again become a deliberative body, controlled by a majority of its members, and not by the speaker, and we pledge ourselves to adopt such rules and regulations as will enable a majority of its members to direct its deliberations and control legislation. Patronage. We condemn, as a violation of the spirit of our constitution, the action of the present administration in the patronage of its high office to secure the nomination of one of its cabinet officers. A forced succession in the present administration has been a public sentiment that is life tenure in that office. No good intention on the part of the executive and his cabinet officers, but the result is the establishment of a dynasty. The right of the people to freely select their officials is inalienable and cannot be destroyed.

Fidelity of Campaign Contributions. We demand federal legislation for the criminalization of partnership which has existed between corporations of this country and the Republican party under the pretense of the contributions of great sums of money wherewith to purchase elections they should be allowed to continue substantially unopposed in their efforts to encroach upon the rights of the people. All reasonable doubt as to the nature of the relation has been forever dispelled by the sworn testimony of witnesses examined in the insurance investigation in New York. We demand that the present administration by the Republican national committee of a single individual, that he himself, in the personal receipt of campaign contributions for the present administration, should over a quarter of a million dollars to be used in a single state during the campaign hours of the present administration in order that this practice shall be stopped for all time, we demand the passage of a statute providing imprisonment for any officer of a corporation who shall either contribute on behalf of, or consent to the contribution by a corporation of any money or thing of value to be used in furthering the election of a president or a vice president of the United States or any member of the cabinet therefor.

We denounce the action of the Republican party, having complete control of the federal government, in the last congress, to compel the publication of the names of the contributors of an amount not exceeding $1000 in campaign funds, and point to the evidence of their inactivity, when they sought by an absolute embargo to prevent the publication of the names of the contributors of the bill, as a further evidence of their intention to conduct the campaign in such a manner as to keep vast sums of money, wrasted from favor-seeking corporations. We call attention to the fact that the bill was passed at the convention at Chicago refused, when the issue was presented to it, to declare against such practices. We pledge the Democratic party to the enactment of a law prohibiting any corporation from contributing to a campaign for the election of any such contributions above a reasonable minimum.

Rights of the States. Believing with Jefferson, in the support of the state governments in all their rights as the most competent administration for each interest, and the surest bulwark against anti-nationalism, a constitutional amendment specifically authorizing congress to levy and collect a tax upon individual and corporate incomes to the end that the burden of its proper share of the burdens of the federal government be equitably distributed. The courts of justice are the bulwark of our liberties and we yield to none in our purpose to maintain their power and independence to the bench a long line of distinguished judges, who have added to the credit of the judiciary, the honor and respect which must be maintained. We resent the attempt of the Republican party to raise a false issue of "protecting the judiciary," an unjust reflection upon the great body of our citizens to assume that they are in any way interested in the function of the courts to interpret the laws which the people create, and if the laws appear to work in favor of any measure which they desire. The only basis upon which the integrity of our courts can stand is that of answering justice and protection to the personal liberty and property of our citizens. If judicial processes may be abused, we should guard against abuse. Experience has proven the present law relating to injunctions, and we reiterate the pledge of our national platform of 1896 and 1904 in favor of a measure which would prevent the use of injunctions in such cases as are now provided for by law in cases of indirect contempt. Questions of judicial process have arisen especially in connection with industrial disputes. We deem that the question of injunctions should be treated with rigid impartiality in any cases in which an injunction would not issue if no injury or damage were done. The expanding organization of industry makes it essential that there should be no abridgment of the right of wage earners and producers to organize for the protection of wages and the improvement of labor conditions, and that such organizations and their members should not be regarded as illegal combinations in restraint of trade.

We favor to be shown day on all government works. We pledge the Democratic party to the enactment of law by congress as far as the federal jurisdiction extends for a general employees liability not covering injury to body or loss of life to employees. We pledge the Democratic party to the enactment of a law creating a department of labor represented separately in the president's cabinet which department shall include the subject of mines and mining. Postal Savings Bank. We favor a postal savings bank and that it be constituted so as to keep the deposited money in the vicinity of the depositor. We pledge the Democratic party in proposing postal savings banks under a plan of conduct by which the government will collect the deposits from rural communities and deposit the same, while under government charge, in the hands of the local banks, thus producing the circulating medium of the protecting regions and unjustly favoring the speculative market.

Protection of American Citizens. We pledge ourselves to insist upon the just and lawful protection of our citizens at home and abroad, and to use all proper methods to secure for them, whether native born or naturalized, and without distinction of race or color, the same rights and liberties and the enjoyment of all rights open to them under our treaty; and if under existing treaties the right of travel and transit is denied to American citizens or recognition withheld from American passports by any country on the ground of race or color, we will promptly negotiate with the governments of such countries to secure the removal of these unjust discriminations. We demand that all over the world a duty authenticated passport issued by the government of the United States to an American citizen shall be held as a passport that in an American citizen and shall entitle him to the treatment due him as such. Civil Service. The law pertaining to the civil service should be honestly and rigidly enforced to the end that merit and ability be the standard of promotion, and most and promotions rather than services rendered to a political party.

Reasons. We favor a generous pension policy both as a matter of justice to the surviving veterans and their dependents, and as a means to collect the country of the necessity of maintaining a large standing army. Agricultural and Mechanical Education. We favor the extension of agricultural, mechanical and industrial education. We therefore favor the establishment of district agricultural experiment stations and secondary agricultural and mechanical colleges in the several states. We favor the election of the United States senators by direct vote of the people and regard the reform as the gateway to other reforms. We welcome Oklahoma to the citizenship of the United States as the superior beginning of a great state. Arizona and New Mexico. The national Democratic party has for the last five years favored the admission of Arizona and New Mexico as separate states of the federal union, and recognizing that the people of these territories are ready to successfully maintain separate state governments, we favor the immediate admission of these territories as separate states.

Waterways. Water furnishes the cheapest means of government, having control of navigable waterways, and we favor their full and free use. We earnestly favor the immediate adoption of a liberal and comprehensive plan for improving the waterways of the United States to meet the needs of commerce, and to secure that end, we favor when practicable the connection of the Great Lakes with the Mississippi river, and the navigable rivers, bays and harbors, and with each other, by artificial canals, with a view of perfecting a system of inland waterways to be navigable by vessels of standard draft. We favor the co-ordination of the various services of the government connected with the navigation in one service for the purpose of aiding the completion of such a system of inland waterways; and we favor the creation of a fund under the control of the Federal Board. We favor federal aid to state and local authorities in the construction and maintenance of such works. Telegraph and Telephone. We pledge the Democratic party to the enactment of a law to regulate the rates and services of telegraph and telephone companies engaged in the transmission of messages between the cities, under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission. Natural Resources. We repeat the demand for internal development and for the conservation of our natural resources contained in previous platforms, the enforcement of which Roosevelt vainly sought from a reactionary party; and we insist upon the preservation, protection and replacement of needed forests, the preservation of the public domain, the conservation of the production of the national resources in timber, coal, iron and oil against monopoly, the development of our water power, the conservation of every other useful property, including the irrigation of arid lands, the reclamation of swamp lands, the development of water power and the preservation of electric power generally from the control of monopoly and to this end we urge the creation of a government owned, state and municipal, both separately and in co-operation. Forest Reserve. We insist upon policy of administration of our forest reserves which shall relieve it of the abuses which have arisen thereunder, and which shall be far as practicable conform to the policy of the national platform which shall enable the owners of such lands to be secured by treaty with other powers. Recognizing the independence of the Hawaiian Islands, we should retain such lands as may be necessary for coaling stations and naval bases. Alaska and Porto Rico. We demand for the people of Alaska and Porto Rico the full enjoyment of the rights and privileges of a territorial form of government and the officials appointed to administer the government of all our territories and possessions of this country should be thoroughly qualified by previous bona fide residence. Panama Canal. We believe that the Panama canal will prove a great victory to our country and favor its speedy completion. Pan-American. We demand the importance and advantages of developing closer ties of panamerican friendship and commerce between the United States and her sister republics in Latin America and favor the taking of such steps consistent with Democratic policies for better acquaintance, greater mutual confidence and free exchange of trade, as will be of lasting benefit to this group of American republics, and to the advancement of government, industries and interests all to our own. Economy in Administration. The Republican congress in the session just ended has made appropriations amounting to $1,008,000,000, exceeding the total expenditures of the previous congress by $100,000,000 and leaving a deficit of more than $60,000,000 for the fiscal year. We denounce the heedless waste of the people's money which has resulted in this appalling increase as a shameful violation of all prudent conditions of government, and as no less than a crime against the millions of working women and men from whom earnings the great proportion of the national income is derived. It is not surprising that in the face of this enormous increase in the national debt, the present congress contains no reference to economic administration or promising thereof in the future. We demand that the present administration should be held to the strictest economy in every department of the government, and that it should be held to the strictest economy in every department of the government, and that it should be held to the strictest economy in every department of the government.

Like a Potato. Sunday afternoon I overheard Mary and Bert discussing the morning's Sunday-school lesson. Bert, who has all faith in his sister's superior knowledge, eagerly inquired, "Mary, what does God look like?" "I was surprised at Mary's prompt and solemn reply:—'Bert God looks like a potato.'"

In Trouble. Little Newman's mother had faith fully tried to answer his questions in regard to death and the future life from one of his books, but when he died just his soul would go to heaven. One day he came running in from his play and in excitement cried, "Ma, when does your soul go to heaven, what am I going to button my pants to?"—The August Delinctor.

Grazing and Waterfowl Investigations

Mr. A. F. Potter, chief of the branch of grazing, United States Forest Bureau, will leave Washington Thursday, July 16, for Santa Fe, New Mexico. The first object of his trip is to confer with Governor Curry, July 17, with regard to the proposed additions to the Pecos National Forest. An examination of the withdrawn land will be made for the purpose of determining what part of it shall be added to the National Forest and what part retained. It is expected that this examination will take ten days or two weeks.

On the first of September, Mr. Potter and Mr. D. D. Brown, of the Forest Service, will start from Phoenix, Arizona, to make an examination of the land within the Verde National Forest, for the purpose of making recommendations regarding the regulation of grazing. These Forests were created primarily for the purpose of securing favorable conditions of water flow, so that special care will need to be exercised to prevent grazing from defeating this object.

An agreement has been made between the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture, for investigation of the effect of the grazing of sheep and goats upon the watersheds within National Forests which are important to irrigation. Mr. Potter and Mr. Brown will therefore cooperate in these investigations with officials of the Reclamation Service. Mr. Gifford Pinchot, Forester, has written to the Water Users' Association and to the Presidents of both the Cattle Growers and Sheep Raisers associations in Arizona, informing them of the proposed examination and inviting them to arrange to have representatives of their several interests accompany the representatives of the government, if they desired to do so.

RAILROADS MAY RAISE RATES

Trunk Lines Considering Advance On Some Commodities.

A conference of railroad presidents extended their morning and afternoon sessions last week at the office of the Trunk Line association here on the subject of the proposed rates for commodities to be carried at the close of the conference a statement was given out by Mr. McCain, the secretary of the association, as follows: "The question of an advance in freight rates was discussed at length and reports from the committee having charge of the checking of rates were considered, but it was found that this work had not progressed to such a point as to make definite action practicable at this time."

Asked whether this indicated a decision not to raise rates, Mr. McCain was noncommittal, nor would he confirm or deny the report of any controversy in the conference over the proposed increase. No date was set for another meeting. Freight Director Deano of the Washash tonlet confirmed Mr. McCain's statement that no definite action had been taken. The principal obstacles that stand in the way of a general and horizontal increase, it is said, are State laws prohibiting the raising of rates if there was any possibility of the trunk lines abandoning their intention of making railroad increases, Mr. Deano replied: "No increase will be made on many classes of commodities, but that before very long—Sail Lake Tribune."

A Wife Ready.

Little Dorothy could not have paid her father a higher compliment, or better expressed her love for him than when she said, "Papa, I would like to tell you something if you won't tell mamma."

"Why don't you want mamma to know it, daughter?" "Well you tell her things I say, and she laughs at them, and I don't want her to know this."

"Let papa hear what you have to say anyhow." "Well I have often thought that if mamma were to die I would like to marry you."—The August Delinctor.

"But you are still a member of the other, in your own mind. You're holding. It was common, thoroughly disgraceful and unpardonable! And with every word uttered incessantly warning in his heart toward him whom she was chastening, "It was not a mistake. It was worse than being simply bad. It was stupid!"

He nodded, one-hand slowly curving the dog's head where it lay across his knees. She watched him a moment, hestitated, then, smiling a little, "So now I know the worst about you, do you not?" she concluded.

He did not answer. She waited, the smile still curving her red mouth. Had she been too severe? she wondered. "You may help me to my feet," she said sweetly. She was very young.

He rose at once, holding out his hands to aid her to that pleasantly impersonal manner no suited to him, and now that she stood together in the purple dusk of the uplands—two people young enough to take one another seriously. They walked for awhile, subdued, soberly picking their path through the white glare of the misty lamps. It began to feel doubtful as they went down from a reaction which was natural, partly because she was not at all sure whether either Quarrier or Major Belwether would rank of the terms she was already on with Seward. Upon which she objected? She had never dreamed either of these gentlemen. Besides, she already had a temporary interest in Seward—the interest that women always cherish, quite unaccountably, the man who shows shortcomings they have consented to overlook.

As they crossed the headland through the deepening dusk the acetylene lamps on a cluster of mortar cans sprang up. They were not lit, but the scrub. The windows of Shotover House were brilliantly illuminated.

"Our shooting party has returned," she said.

They crossed the drive through the white glare of the misty lamps. Two people were passing—groans with dogs and guns and fluffy bundles of game birds; several women in motor costumes, velvet affairs; a man or two in shooting tweed or khaki suits.

As they entered the hall together she turned to him, an indolent smile curving her lips; then, with a little nod, friendly and sweet, she left him standing at the open door of the gunroom.

CHAPTER THREE

THE first person he encountered in the gunroom was Quarrier, who favored him with an ex-presidential stare and a low, quite perturbation and noncommittal. It was plain enough that he had not expected to meet Seward at Shotover House.

Kemp Ferrall, a dark, stocky, active man of forty, was in the act of drinking a glass when through the bottom he caught sight of Seward. He flushed in a gulp and advanced, one muscular hand outstretched. "Hello, Seward, how do you get on?" he said. He was a low, quite perturbation and noncommittal. It was plain enough that he had not expected to meet Seward at Shotover House.

Quarrier looked at him, pausing a moment. "Yes," he said coolly, "he's my dog."

For a fraction of a second the two men's eyes encountered; then Seward glanced at the dog and turned on his heel with the slightest shrug, and that is all there was to the incident—an anxious, perplexed puppy sniffed at the dog, turned, jerking, twisting, rustling, looking pitiously back at his unwilling feet and over the polished floor.

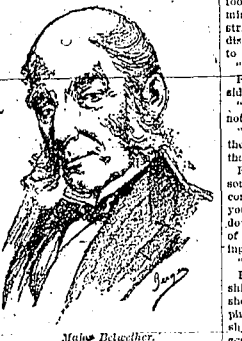

So Seward walked on alone through the misty water to his room, and as he overtook her he saw that she was looking at the dog and turned on his heel with the slightest shrug, and that is all there was to the incident—an anxious, perplexed puppy sniffed at the dog, turned, jerking, twisting, rustling, looking pitiously back at his unwilling feet and over the polished floor.

"These little brown saps you call woodcock," he began—"two big ones and three little ones"—"Blitzing a smoky pipe, but of all the damnable dogs and covers!" "Hotten," said Mortimer thickly. "Ferrall, you'll eat and sleep, and it's well enough for you to go bounding into him."

capital if one can manage to hit the beggars." "Oh, everybody misses in my shooting," observed Ferrall—"that is, everybody except Stephen Seward, who hit the only left barrel, Crack, and" turning to Albigence, "it's his taking money from you, Blinsky, which explains me that 'you're time for the left' preference for preferring."

The smiling kerdish declined and took an easier position in his chair, extending a pair of little lanky legs draped in baggy tweed kalleker-socks and leather spats. Mortimer, indignantly, objected to his slouch with whisky, reached for the decanter. The aromatic perfume of the spirits aroused Seward, and he instinctively nodded his desire to a servant.

This act he takes one thing," he observed to Ferrall. Then something in his host's expression arrested the glass at his lips. He had already been using the decanter—a good deal. Except Mortimer, nobody was doing that sort of thing as freely as he.

He set his glass on the table thoughtfully. A tinge of color had crept into his lean cheeks. Ferrall, too, suddenly uncomfortable, started up, saying something about drinking. Several men arose a trifle stiffly, feeling in every joint the result of the first day's shooting after all those idle months. Mortimer got up with an unfeigned groan, and followed, leaving his glass untouched.

One or two other men came in from the stairway room. All greeted Seward amiably, all excepting one, who may not have been him—an elderly, plump, soft-spoken man in white dressing-chop whiskers and the profile of a benevolent buck rabbit.

"How do you do, Mr. Belwether?" said Seward in a low voice without offering him his hand. "I don't know," Belwether saw him, bless you—yes, indeed! And though Seward continued not to offer his hand, Major Belwether meant to have it, bless your heart, and his fingers followed, leaving his glasses untouched.

There was something about his soft warm hands which had always attracted Seward in the company and texture of a noisily hatched bird. It had been some time since he had shaken hands with Major Belwether. It was apparent that the bird had not agitated him since that time.

"Suppose my arm through the protection of Lord Albigence's shooting jacket, hooking the other in Seward's reluctant elbow and driving Mortimer ahead of him, along the corridor until he had reached the door of the stairs, his hand's little legs trotting back at his unwilling feet and over the polished floor with the slightest shrug, and that is all there was to the incident—an anxious, perplexed puppy sniffed at the dog, turned, jerking, twisting, rustling, looking pitiously back at his unwilling feet and over the polished floor."

Seward turned off down his corridor, unaware that the Seward's own following chase at his heels until he heard Quarrier's even, colorless voice, "Ferrall, would you be good enough to send Seward to your room?"

Seward, turning around. Quarrier looked at him, pausing a moment. "Yes," he said coolly, "he's my dog."

For a fraction of a second the two men's eyes encountered; then Seward glanced at the dog and turned on his heel with the slightest shrug, and that is all there was to the incident—an anxious, perplexed puppy sniffed at the dog, turned, jerking, twisting, rustling, looking pitiously back at his unwilling feet and over the polished floor.

"Oh, yes. All I care about is how my mother took it." "Of course she was cut up, I suppose?" "Yes. You know how she would look at a thing of that sort—not that any of the nine and seventy jarring acts would care, but those few thousands lavishing the edges, butting in half or three-quarters inside, and the people who can't afford to overlook the victim of a fashionable club's displeasure—those and a woman like my mother and several other decent middle people who happen to count in town."

Ferrall, his legs swinging lazily, thought again, then, "Who was the girl, Stephen?" "I don't think the papers mentioned her name," said Seward gravely.

"Oh, I beg your pardon, I thought she was some notorious actress. Every body said so. Who were those canting fools who put you up to it? Never mind if you don't care to tell. But the stiches are they are candidates for club discipline as well as you. It was up to them to face the governors, I think."

"No, I think not." Ferrall, legs swinging busily, considered him. "Too bad," he mused. "They need not have dropped you."

"Oh, they had to. But as long as the Lemon takes no action I can live that down."

Ferrall nodded. "I came in to say something—a message from Grace—confound it, what was it? Oh, could you—before dinner—now—just sit down and write that infernal scribble of yours made a sketch of a man chasing a gun dog?"

"Why, yes, if Mrs. Ferrall wishes." He walked over to the desk in his shirt sleeves, sat down, drew a blank sheet of writing paper, and began to plug his pen, drew carelessly a gun slyly, setting down a flourish. He looked at the stable and after him, bare-headed, sun in hand, the middle of noon.

"Put a Vaudeville heart on him," grumbled Ferrall, over his shoulder. "There? O Lord, but you have hit it! Put a ticked saddle on the cur—there!" "Who is this supposed to be?" began Seward looking up. But "Waig" checked his little scribble, the still wet sketch and making for the door.

Seward stroled into the bathroom, washed a spot or two of ink from his fingers, returned and buttoned his waistcoat, then, concluding an unheeded toilet, went out and down the stairway to the bed living room. There were a number of people there—Mrs. Leroy Mortimer, very fetching with her James—the coloring, thick lips and eyes that started just enough; Lena Bonnestel, smooth, violet eyes, blond and rather stunning in a peculiar innocent way; Miss Calithness, very pink and slightly attractive; and the Page boys, William Gordon, the lightest slay and interested and having a splendid time with any woman who could afford the intellectual leisure.

Seward spoke pleasantly to them all. Other people drifted down—Morton Page, who looked like a schoolmaster and rode like a demon; Ellen Shannon, pink and white as a thorn blossom, with the desire to stay in the berry grey eyes; Kathryn Tassel and Mrs. Verdenheim, whom he did not know, and finally his hostess, Grace Ferrall, with her elegant, almost frank, face, full of the grace and frankness and the figure of an adolescent.

She gave Seward one pretty sun-brown hand and held the other above his, holding it a moment in her light grasp. "Stephen, Stephen," she said under her breath, "it's because I've a few things to read you about that I've asked you to Sitowver."

"I suppose I know," he said. "I should like you to do. I've a letter to-night from my mother." "From my mother?" "I want you to go over it—with me—if we can find a minute after dinner."

She released his hand, turning partly away. "I will be in the room," he announced, so cut that dog story in two. Will you give me your arm, Major Belwether?" "How?" to her cousin Mr. Quarrier, who turned from Miss Leroy to listen. "Will you please try to reflect when you are to take in and do it?" And as she passed Seward in a low voice, mischievous and slangy.

"Sylvia Lavilla for yours, as she says she should have enough of you on the ellipse." The others appeared to know how to pair according to some previous notice. Seward turned to Sylvia Lavilla with the pleasure of his good fortune, but a sharp twist in his face that her own brightened in response.

"You're," she said slyly, "you can't escape me. There is no use in looking wittily at Agatha Calithness"—"be wittily"—"or receding your eyes"—"ah" slipping her rounded bare arm through the arm he offered. "You can't guess what I've done tonight. Nobody can guess except Grace Ferrall and one other person. And if you try to look behind me I may get you—somebody between sherry and cognac—oh, yes, I've done two things—I have your dog for you?"

"Not Sagamore?" he said incredulously. "No, I'm not getting him. I'm getting 'Certainty'—Sagamore. It said to Mr. Quarrier, I want Sagamore, and when he tried to give him to me I made him stop his cheek. Now you may draw another for me at your leisure. It's Seward. Tell me, are you pleased?" for she was looking for the troubled hesitation in his face, and she saw it dawdling.

"Mr. Quarrier doesn't like me, you know, and since that break of yours at the club." "But I do," she said coolly. "I told him how much pleasure it would give me. That is sufficient, is it not, for everybody concerned?" "But I don't mean to." "No, that concerns you and me (to be continued)."

Choice of Lots Will Be Determined by Drawing

The country surrounding Hansen shows for itself, there is no better. Hansen is the trading point of a splendid community, settled upon the richest of land irrigated from the great Twin Falls canal system. The land is second to none and farms are fully demonstrated.

Six miles from Hansen on Rock Creek, are orchards which have been bearing for over twenty years and on which the trees are loaded with peaches, pears, apples, apricots, plums, etc., today.

Hansen has splendid railway facilities and a splendid graded school, and it will have water works, electric lights and power, as soon as these utilities can be installed.

A large grain warehouse will be completed in time for this year's crop. A bank will be opened as soon as the building is completed. Several business buildings will also be erected and mercantile houses opened. The O. S. L. Railway will build a depot and stock yards in Hansen.

Hansen is surrounded by highly cultivated farms, and a thriving community is there to show what has been done. All we ask is investigation and a business inspection.

JOHN SIMMONS MARRIED

Prominent Hansen Man Weds Bride From Volmer.

Hansen, July 19, 1908. Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Newby are the proud parents of a boy, born last Friday, July 17th.

Ed. Smith and family came up from his Piler ranch on Monday to stay for a few days.

Mrs. W. N. Rose and family are to start this week for Soda Springs to spend some time visiting her parents and other relatives and friends.

Parties from Twin Falls are frequenting the streets of Hansen. The trees and the fine leaf and all appearances are encouraging for the new town.

The Hansen Townsite Co., are putting a 100 barrel elevator on their lot opposite the postoffice, and are intending to put up a building 75 feet front by 50 feet.

Mr. Browning is painting his farm house and otherwise improving his newly acquired property—getting ready to make a fine appearance at the opening of the Hansen townsite.

W. L. Good of Spokane has purchased the building and stock owned by W. N. Rose and will put in a large stock of goods at once.

Three children are expected to arrive the first of next week. Mrs. Good has been holding a position as postmistress in a suburb of Spokane and will have the necessary qualifications to take charge of the office here.

Mr. John Simmons, of Twin Falls, and Miss Mary Burrows, of Volmer, were married Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Charles E. Dunaway, three miles east of Volmer.

Only a few friends and relatives of the bride and groom were present at the ceremony. J. S. McDonald, of Volmer, officiated. After a short honeymoon trip the happy couple will make their home in Twin Falls county. Both parties are well known in Volmer where they have hosts of friends who wish them a long and happy life.

The foregoing notice was taken from the Nez Perce Herald. Mr. Simmons and bride are now enroute for this place where they will reside on his fine ranch west of town.

No one was prepared for the serious runaway that occurred last Saturday.

Had it not been for the accident, it would have been a long and happy day by some member of John Simmons' family, and appearing as guests and trustworthily had been to see their home on the streets.

The merry party that was thrown by Miss Merl, who was driving, out between the wheels, and breaking her jaw, inflicting a very painful and serious injury. Miss Merl jumped out later and except for the nervous shock, was not badly hurt.

Miss Merl was taken to the hospital today for treatment, it being necessary for a silver plate to be inserted in the jaw to hold the fracture in place. Dr. Bird was fortunate in reaching the hospital when the accident occurred and had charge of the case. The many friends of the twin county are excited and hope to see them again on the streets.

BIG BOOST FOR GOOD ROADS

Plan to Hold a Monster Meeting in St. Paul in December.

Unless something unforeseen occurs St. Paul will probably entertain some of the largest and the biggest good roads meeting ever held in Minnesota or the surrounding states. George W. Cooley, state highway engineer, is planning on such a meeting, and if the necessary arrangements can be made, as now seems probable, it will be held.

The idea of holding a monster good roads meeting was conceived by Mr. Cooley after the meeting recently held in St. Paul, to which the county commissioners as well as others interested in good roads were invited.

This meeting showed the widespread interest in the matter throughout the state. He expected between 100 and 200 to attend, but the attendance grew to about 600, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The same feeling has been shown in the meetings which he has addressed in the smaller towns throughout the state, the farmers coming in to attend the meetings in large numbers and showing an active interest in the good road problem.

Mr. Cooley, who has been in charge of the road problem for some time, is well known in the field thoroughly, and Mr. Cooley "it will be an exposition of roadmaking machinery and materials, with practical talks by men of wide experience in the various details of the work.

In a large meeting of this kind much better results can be obtained than by the smaller local meetings because in such a meeting as we expect to hold the manufacturers will have exhibits of all kinds of machinery used in roadmaking, and we can have speakers of wide experience at such a meeting which is impossible for all of the smaller meetings.

A question box would be a feature, and through this means any one confronted by special problems in roadmaking would be able to get the advice of the man qualified to give it.

"I have not yet decided definitely on the plan, but there is a general demand for such a meeting, and if it can possibly be done the plans will be carried out."

Mr. Cooley's plan is to eliminate the "hot air" talk about good roads generally and to make it an instructive meeting by having men go to St. Paul who know about the practical details of roadmaking.

Those who will go will do so for the purpose of learning something about the building of good roads, and it is the intention to meet this expectation fully. The meeting will probably last one week. The exhibits will cover stone crushers, road rollers, steel and concrete brick work, culverts and all sorts of machinery material used in road building.

For Sale. 40 acres choice land, no rocks, lava recently, 4 1/2 miles of Ruhl $49.00 acre price. Will probably find one week. The exhibits will cover stone crushers, road rollers, steel and concrete brick work, culverts and all sorts of machinery material used in road building.

Odorous and Dustless Roads.

Consult T. H. Norton, writing to the state department from Chemnitz, Germany, says that a Saxon firm has introduced a road building composition which has been tried on the macadamized streets of Leipzig and other places with much success. The material is thus described.

It is a mixture of the heavier residual oils obtained in the distillation of coal tar with high boiling hydrocarbons. The method of mixing apparently involves a certain degree of chemical combination, in which phenol and similar constituents play a role. The manufacturing material is prepared for use by heating in iron caldrons, identical with those used for asphalt, to temperatures ranging from 212 to 233 degrees F. (100 to 120 C.).

It is then sprayed evenly over the surface of a roadway with a special form of apparatus and under such high pressure that the fluid mass penetrates to a certain extent into the upper layer of dust or dirt. The result is the formation of a compact lustrous black coating which meets the demands of heavy traffic and is not disintegrated by dust particles. A method adopted in the new process over the methods hitherto employed for the same purpose and based upon the use of ordinary tar is the total absence of odor after the application.

Barnum & Bailey at Shoshone.

It is a pleasure to announce the fact that on August 7 the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth will give two performances in Shoshone, thus affording an opportunity to the people of this city to visit the great old amusement enterprise the world has ever known.

For fifty-four years the Barnum & Bailey show has led the world in all matters pertaining to big amusements. There is not a country on earth where it is not as well known as in America nor a city of any size in the world where its mammoth tents have not been pitched. It is a feature which and the peasantry has marveled at it, and all the world, civilized and savage, has contributed to its multiplicity of attractions.

The spirit of its great founder, one of the most wonderful men in all history, P. T. Barnum, still lives in the policy of the present management, which the perfect system put into operation by the great James A. Bailey, is still in operation. This season the show is much larger than ever before, and the additional interest attaches to it because the parade, a feature which for several seasons has been missing, is again in its customary place.

For four years visiting circuses and mechanics have been working day and night at the foreign work-shops of the show at Stockton-Trent, England, building this great street wagon and the result of their labors now is expressing itself in the most costly and longest street parade that has ever passed through the streets of any city.

The program in the great exhibition tent opens with a new spectacle, machine building, clowning, and other. The rider gracefully arched across the gap to a spring platform the other turning a complete somersault around it and landing in the net.

The circus this season numbers 1,600 people, 700 horses, 108 cages of animals, 5 railroad trains, 20 camels and nearly all the elephants in America.

It is the passing of two automobiles high above the heads of the people, while leaping a 50 foot gap. The velocity is gained by a lightning-like dash down a steep steel incline, one machine bumping close behind the other.
