VOTE FOR THE BONDS

Court House Not a Luxury, But a Necessity.

SOME PERTINENT FACTS FOR THE TAXPAYER.

Valuable Records in Constant Danger From Fire, Which, If Destroyed, Would Entail Heavy Expense to Replace.

On the fifth day of October the taxpayers of Twin Falls county will be called on to vote either "Bond-Yes" or "Bond-No" on the question of whether this county shall devote $150,000 for the erection and furnishing of a court house. By the majority of taxpayers the question has not been sufficiently considered and should a vote be taken upon the question, many many will vote in the negative because of lack of knowledge of conditions here. In order to bring the matter to the voters' attention, The Times will, each week, endeavor to give the taxpayers clear, definite information regarding the necessity for building a court house and the trip situation regarding the increase in taxation from bonds. Each week opinions from prominent business men will be published, together with those of some of the heaviest taxpayers among the farmers.

Contributions from any man on the tract will be welcomed and printed, no matter what his opinion may be on the subject. One of the strongest reasons that can be put forward in favor of the court house is that of protection for the records. While Twin Falls is a new county, yet even this early in its history, twice the number of instruments are filed each month than of the largest counties in the state. Ada county not excepted. This can mean only one thing and that is the fact that this county is rapidly accumulating a large number of valuable records which at present are in constant jeopardy, because no fire protection can be given them in the present quarters. These records comprise patents to land held here, mortgages, flood record, transfers of real and personal property, Carriage Act filings and in fact every record of legal proceedings is filed with the recorder and forms a part of property which, once destroyed, could never be replaced in a great many cases. These records are each day increasing in volume and value and the present value is estimated at about sixty thousand dollars. This in itself should be a pretty weighty argument for every rancher and every business man who has filed any document for record in the clerk's office. Another reason for better quarters is that the work of the recorder's office has grown to such an extent that the present quarters are too small to accommodate the clerical assistants and the office of the county superintendent is now being used to satisfy such demand.

G. O. P. PRIMARY ELECTION

The first Republican primary election for this county and for the state of Idaho was held on Monday, and was very successful from the standpoint of getting out the voters. With the exception of the candidate for county treasurer, C. J. Hahn, a spirited contest was made for each office, the candidates getting out and making a personal canvass in most cases. The following ticket was given the largest vote and will be the choice of the county convention, which meets next Tuesday.

The Primary Ticket.

COLORED MEN A HOODNOO.

Twin Falls Not Apparently in Same Class With Occidentals.

The Salt Lake Occidentals, a professional ball team, blew in last Saturday and since that time there has been mourning in the camp of the local fans, for the doubtful batters from Zion smote the ball on the nose for so many safe hits that, with the exception of Saturday's game, Twin Falls had little chance of winning. The boys played good ball, except for a few errors, and under ordinary circumstances, what would have been winning ball. The score for Saturday's game was 8 to 6 in favor of the Occidentals, and on Sunday the double-header resulted in two more victories for the colored players, 13-6 and 10 to 4.

VIEW THE GREAT TRACT

Eastern Men Given Glimpse of Scenery

FIELDS AND ORCHARDS GIVEN RICHED INSPECTION.

C. B. Hurt, of Boise, Pilot's Visitors—Automobile Trip Made to Blue Lakes Grade, Kimberly and Sucker Flat.

Nine prominent Easterners, representing some of the largest-bonding and trust companies in Chicago and other large-cities, arrived at the city Tuesday to take a look over the city and tract. They were met at the depot by a party of representative business men with automobiles and taken to the various places of interest, including a trip to the top of the grade at the Blue Lakes and back to the city by way of Kimberly, and then out to Sucker Flat. The object of the visit here was to give the capitalists an opportunity to personally obtain a knowledge of the conditions here, that they may better be able to look after their companies' interests when the question comes up of selling bonds for further irrigation projects in Southern Idaho. The party is made up of the following gentlemen: Messrs. Bowen, George and Jenks, Detroit; Philpot, Prentiss and Fitzsimmons, Chicago; Stacy, Toledo; Bailey, Dubuque; McWhorter, Omaha. The party remained here over night and left yesterday morning for Gooding via the Blue Lakes and the Northside country, where they will meet their special car and go to Alberta to inspect that irrigation project.

MEN'S NEW FASHIONS

This is a relative term usually, but this season's styles are so out of the ordinary, especially for Young Men, that it has a distinct meaning this Fall. We attract only one kind of people to this store—those are the kind who want style, quality and moderate prices.

PUMPKIN PIES

Do you know what makes the difference between a good and a poor pumpkin pie? The pumpkin used is about the same in a good pie as in a poor one. The other ingredients—milk, eggs, sugar, spices, etc., used in liberal, instead of stingy quantities, make the difference. The baker who says, "Oh, half of those eggs, or one-third of that milk will make a cheaper pie and one that will sell all right," can never make a good pie. It is impossible to make a good pie by leaving out the good things. Our Pumpkin Pies are made to taste good;

"They tell at the table"

Forget your notion that a baker's pumpkin pie cannot taste good, and try one of ours. Fresh every day in time for lunch, at 20 cents each.

When he came out of his dressing room she was apparently still in the hands of the maid, so he dashed through the house as far as the library and drawing a check-book from one pocket, fished out a memorandum book from another and began to write up totals with a view to learning something about the various debts contracted at Shotover.

He seemed to owe everybody. Fortune had smitten him lip and thigh, and, a trifle concerned, he began covering a pad with figures until he knew where he stood. Then he drew a considerable check to Major Belwether's order, another to Alderode. Other fellows, too, he wrote checks to other people for various amounts, and he was very busy till he was aware of another Sylvia Landis was or presence near, writing at a desk he turned around in the corner. In his chair, Sylvia Landis was writing at a desk in the corner, and she looked up, nodding the little greeting that she always reserved for him even after five weeks' separation.

"I'm writing checks," she said. "I suppose you're writing to your mother."

"Why do you think so?" he asked curiously.

"You write to her every day, don't you?"

"Yes," he said. "But how do you know?"

She looked at him with unblinking deliberation. "You wrote every day. If it was to a woman, I wanted to know. And I told Grace Ferrall that I wrote to you. And then Grace told me. In there any other confession of my own pettiness that I can make to you?"

"Did you really care to whom I was writing?" he asked slowly.

"Care? I-it worried me. Was it not a pitifully common impulse? 'Sisters under our skin,' you know—I and the maid who dresses me. She would have minded, I don't think, the only generic difference. I wanted to know just the same. But that was before—"

"Before what?"

"Before I—please don't ask me to say it. I did once when you asked me."

"Before you cared for me—is that what you mean?"

"Yes. You are so cruelly honest when you wish to punish me. You are interested in me, too. I, that wretched Kemp Ferrall a lot of money, and I'm trying to find out how much seven and nine are to close accounts with Major Fogg."

Sylvia turned and continued his writing. And when the little sheaf of checks was ready to be coated them, laid them aside and, drawing a fat packet of fresh bank notes from his pocket, counted out the five hundred of him below stairs. These arranged for, he straightened up and glanced over his shoulder at Sylvia, but she was apparently absorbed in counting something on the ends of her fingers, so he turned smilingly to his desk and wrote a long letter to his mother—the same letter, affectionately boyish letter he had always written her, full of confidence, full of love, gayly anticipating his own return to her on the heels of the letter.

In his first letter to her from Shotover he had spoken casually of a Sylvia Landis. It seemed that she was familiar enough to his mother, who asked about her, and he had replied in another letter or two, a trifle emphatic in his praise of her, because from his mother's letters it was quite evident that she knew a good deal concerning the very unconventional affairs of Sylvia's family.

Of his swift and somewhat equivocal courtesy he had had nothing to say in his letters. In fact, he had had nothing to say about Sylvia at all, reserving that vital confidence for the clear sympathy and understanding which he looked forward to when he should see her and which, through dark days and bitter aftermaths, through struggle and defeat by his master vice, had never failed him yet, never faltered for an instant.

So he brought his letter to a close with a tender and uneasy inquiry concerning her health, which, she had intimated, was not exactly satisfactory, and for that reason she had opened the house in the town in order to be near Dr. Grisby, their family doctor.

Sealing and directing the letter, he looked up to see Sylvia standing at his elbow. She dropped a light hand on his shoulder for a second, barely touching him—a fugitive caress, delicate as the smile hovering on her lips, as the shy tenderness in her eyes.

"More letters to your sweetheart?" she asked, abandoning her hand to him.

"One more, the last before I see her. I wish you could see her, Sylvia."

"I wish so, too," she answered simply, seating herself on the arm of his chair, as though it were a side-saddle.

"Would she care for me, do you think?" asked the girl in a low voice.

"I think so, for your real self!"

"I know—she could only feel contempt for me as I am."

"She is old fashioned," he said reverently.

"That means all that is best in a woman—the old fashion of truth and faith in honor, the old old fashion of love. Ah that is best, Stephen; all that is worth the love of a man. Some day somebody will 'revive' those fashions."

"Will you?"

"Dear they would not become me," she said, the tenderness in her eyes deepening a little, and she touched his head lightly in humorous caress.

"But shall we do with the waning daylight?" she asked. "It is my last day with you. I told Howard it was my last day with you and I did not care to be disturbed."

"You probably didn't say it that way," he commented, amused.

"I did."

"How much of that sort of thing is he prepared to stand?" asked Seward curiously.

"How much? I don't know. I don't believe he cares—It's my uncle, Major Belwether, who is making things unpleasant for me. I had to tell Howard, you know."

"What?" exclaimed Seward incredulously.

"Certainly. Do you think my conduct has passed without protest?"

"You told Quarrier?" he repeated.

"You who imagine I could do otherwise?" she asked coolly. "I have that much decency left. Certainly I told him. Do you suppose that after what we did, what I admitted to you, that I could meet him as usual? Do you think I am afraid of him?"

"I thought you were afraid of losing him," muttered Seward.

"I was dreadfully. And the morning after you and I had been imprudent enough to sit up until nearly daylight and do what we did I made him take a long walk with me, and I told him plainly that I cared for you, that I was too selfish and cowardly to marry you, and that if he couldn't put away his love he was at liberty to terminate the engagement without notice."

"What did he say?" stammered Seward.

"I was informed that he held me strictly and precisely to my promise; that he would never release me voluntarily, though I was, of course, at liberty to do what I chose. My poor friend, he cares no more for love than do I! I happen to be the one woman in New York whom he considers absolutely suitable for him—by race, by breeding, by virtue of appearance and presence eminently fitted to complete the material portion of his fortune and estate."

Her voice had hardened as she spoke. Now it rang a little at the end, and she laughed unpleasantly.

"It appears that I was a little truer to myself than you gave me credit for—a little truer to you, a little less treacherous, less shameless, than you must have thought me. But I have gone to my limit of decency, and were I ten times more in love with you than I am I could not put away the position and power offered me, but I will not lie for it nor betray it."

She dropped one arm on the back of his chair and rested her chin on it, starting at him with her shoulders.

"That's how it had to be, you see, when I found that I cared for you. There was nothing to do but to tell him. He trusts me enough to marry me. He will be safe enough as far as my personal conduct is concerned," she added naively. "It seems that I am capable of love, but I am incapable of its degradation."

Seward, leaning heavily forward over his desk, rested his head in both hands, and she stood from her perch on the arm of the chair, pressing her hot cheeks against his hands—a moment only; then, with a gasp, she turned, hurried up in a great armchair by the fire, head tipped back, blue gaze concentrated on him.

"The thing for you to do," she said, "is to get up and see me right now and throw me into a hammock and drive us both to the parson's. I'd hate you for it as much as I'd love you, but I'd make you an interesting wife."

"It may do that," he said, lifting his head from his hands.

"You've a year to do it in," she observed. "By the way, you're to take me in to dinner, as you did the first night. Do you remember? I asked Grace Ferrall then to make her night today. Heigho! It was years ago, wasn't it, that I drove up to the station and saw a very attractive and perplexed young man looking anxiously about for somebody to take him to dinner? About the notorious Mr. Seward! Dear, I didn't mean to hurt you! You know, K. silly! Mayn't I have my little joke about your badness—your reprehensible badness of reputation? There are a few bad just better smile. How dare you frighten me by making me think I had hurt you? Besides, you are probably unrepentant."

She watched him closely for a moment or two, then, "Are you unrepentant?"

"About what?"

"About your general wickedness—about the house in the town, for example."

"What girl?" he asked coldly.

"That reminds me that you have told me absolutely nothing about her."

"There is nothing to tell," he said in a tone as if he were to her in its quality that she sat up as though listening to an unknown voice.

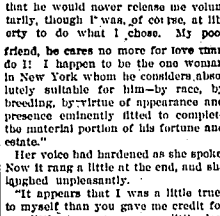

Tone and words so completely excluded her from the new intimacy into which she had tentatively drifted that both suddenly developed a significance from sheer contempt. Who was the girl, then, of whom he had absolutely nothing to say? What was

New goods are coming in daily and all in all we expect to make this the most interesting store on the Twin Falls Tract. Ring out the old, ring in the new

The Shoe Department

The exhibition of new FALL GOODS now has the center of the stage, and the New Creations, in their many styles, qualities and colors, make a very interesting exhibit. Aside from this superb showing of new merchandise, we are closing out at astonishingly low prices the remaining odds and ends from our Summer lines. Many short lengths of all materials and the low price is quite an attractive feature. Whether it be now Fall Styles or an occasional bargain purchase that you are thinking of, this store will supply you. The people of Twin Falls generally appreciate this latter fact, which explains the reason for the splendid crowds of visitors seen in our aisles daily.

The state law requires that a detailed financial statement of the condition of each county be published each year, in which statement the expenditures are given by each voucher separately. Twin Falls county has not had such a statement since its formation and great many taxpayers are beginning to wonder and make inquiries. It would seem only just that the people should know how their money has been spent.

Some one expressed surprise because the Leader-Herald did not give unequalled approval of all that was done at the Republican State convention. That was because the party does not make the Leader-Herald. While it makes no denial—in short, is proud of the fact that there is no wobbling about the Republicanism—it does not follow that it can approve of unmet measures, merely because the Republican party make the mistake of advancing them. Happily there was not much in the recent convention that needed to be disapproved, but the Leader-Herald at no time expects to palliate or excuse those guilty of violating their instructions.—Nampa Leader-Herald.

Several of the politicians about town are already clamoring against the primary system, claiming that it allows the minority to rule and dictate the ticket. When it comes to a case of minority rule, if any system can beat the politician's caucus, The Times would like to be shown. When a group of a half dozen men can meet in a little back office and fix up a slate and later go into the caucus and pass it through, as in the present caucus system, regardless of the wishes of the majority, the minority can be said to control. But just how can you figure it out with the direct primary system used in a number of Eastern states. Is more than one can understand, and it is just barely possible that the politicians do not understand it themselves. If the cities with their over-crowded conditions, control in the primary, there is no help on earth for the outside district in the caucus where the city delegates outnumber them numerically and out-general them in the proceedings. But if the men who object to the primary system will observe this one feature they will find that the independent vote in the city has always turned toward the best man, no matter where he is located, and in this way upset the calculations of the bosses in the city, who, under ordinary caucus, could swing the whole city toward the ring's candidate. Another good which has come from the primary system is the aid it gives the chief reform movement in turning out from office the hoodlums of the machine politics. The whip of the boss loses its power when he has to face two ballots of the people, as under the direct primary system, because it makes it impossible for him to keep tabs on the votes of his henchmen. Twin Falls county went into this primary election unprepared for some of the difficulties which have arisen—difficulties that can be remedied with very little trouble. The friends of the primary system do not feel that the county has lost anything by the trial given this year and that by another year a careful explanation of the workings to the voters would result in a larger vote and a more intelligent vote.

DIRECT PRIMARY AND NEW IDEA IN NEW JERSEY.

This year for the first time the voters of New Jersey will make their nominations for state officers without the intervention of conventions. Through the efforts of Senator Colby and his associates in the New Idea movement, the last legislature established the direct primary system, and its first trial will be made on September 22nd. The new law was a victory in the fight between the New Idea and the boss-and-corruption-controlled machine; the next battle in this contest will come at the first primary under the new system. Everett Colby is seeking re-nomination to the state senate, and three of his associates who have been members of the assembly are also seeking re-nomination, while a fourth is put forward for sheriff. For three years Mr. Colby has upheld in the senate, against the bitter opposition of the Republican machine and the corporations who have held the state in their unrelenting grasp for years, the cause of popular government. At the very beginning of his career in the senate he asserted his independence, fearlessly boistering the party caucus when it tried to bid him to vote for measures which he knew were vicious. He fought without flinching for the "new idea" that the corporations should not receive special and inequitable privileges at the expense of the people. And the fight was not without results. Aided by able associates in the assembly, and backed by a gradually aroused public sentiment, Senator Colby was largely instrumental in passing acts limiting public service franchises to twenty years (with an extension to forty years in case the citizens of a municipality so vote); increasing the taxes paid by the railroads, which had been notoriously low, so that they now pay two and a half million dollars more each year; allowing the voters to express at the primaries their choice for United States senator; increasing the rate of taxation of franchises, formerly two and a half per cent on the gross receipts, one-half of one per cent each year, until the rate of five per cent is reached; establishing the principle of civil service reform; repealing the notorious promoter's liability law which cut down the statute of limitations one-third in the case of promoters; and establishing a railway commission with limited powers. In addition, a telling blow was struck at boss domination by the adoption in the assembly of a rule requiring a committee to report a bill within two hours on demand of fifteen members of the body. In the old days many a bill distasteful to the corporate interests had slumbered in committee, while the machine members of the assembly would not have been willing to oppose in open session where their position would be made a matter of record. The new rule was one important application of the principle that is included in the New Idea, that all political activity, all legislation, all governmental action, shall be carried on in the open, where the people can see what is taking place and can know whom to hold responsible for the results. The New Idea men have accomplished much, and perhaps as important a part of their work as any is their arousing and education of public opinion, and their forcing both parties to support measures gratifying to the people, but distasteful to the corporations and their tools. But much remains which they want to do, and which the people ought to want them to do. The creation of a public utility commission like that of New York state, reform of the election law along the lines of the Massachusetts system, an adequate employers liability act, the further regulation of taxation, a law for the regulation of lobbying, and the extension of the principle of local home rule are further reforms that they are fighting for. And against these admirable measures what have their opponents to present? "Regularly," loyalty to the party machine, and beyond that, nothing. This silence on the issues which vitally concern all the people is one of the avowed indelicacies brought by Senator Colby against his opponents. Under the old plan of nominating candidates by convention, the party adopted a platform which contained the issues for which the candidates stood. With the direct primary there is no party platform, and the voters can know what the respective candidates stand for only by their own utterances. Senator Colby and his associates are announcing every day their position on the important questions involved in the election. Their opponents only proclaim their "regularity," and discuss national issues. The fight for the New Idea is apparently circumscribed within a single county, but its effect has been felt all over the state, and the influence of its example in many another state. With their first trial of the direct primary system, the people of Essex county have a splendid opportunity to strike a staggering blow at boss rule and corruption, and to give heart by their example to the friends of government by the people for the people throughout the country.—Outlook.

INVESTIGATE STATE TREASURER.

Impromptu Call Reveals Nothing Discreditible to State Official.

Without explanation for his action, Governor Frank R. Gooding ordered another special general examination of the state treasurer's office September 10th. This, perhaps, will be the last of what has been a series of investigations made by the present executive. Treasurer Hastings, although taken by surprise, declared his office was in absolutely perfect shape and issued a statement of the state money on hand, which follows: Deposits in 26 banks.....$681,450.00 Cash on hand.....$2,000.00 Boise City, National.....$372.25 Bank of Commerce.....10,262.50 Capital State.....24,324.24 Warrants.....5,259.80

Total.....$704,033.02 Believing this examination was for the purpose of politically discrediting him, Treasurer Hastings posted rewards in various parts of the state, offering as high as $1,000 to charity should any error in his cash accounts be discovered.

"An unwarrantable attack has been made on me from two isolated sources," declared Mr. Hastings, "but it seems pertinent to me that, out of 110 papers in the State of Idaho, naught but two have contained statements derogatory to my record."

"State Examiner C. D. Gosnell has examined my books a great many times and states that he has never found one cent lacking," Mr. Cheney, the bank examiner, has done likewise and announces similar result.

"A declaration was made at a recent caucus of the fourth judicial district to the effect that I had deposited a half million dollars of the state money without security. This is a lie, the bank examiner, has done likewise and announces similar result. To secure $729,500 deposited in the sixty-eight banks, I have never ignored a bank which has requested state money, irrespective of its views."

The following figures were given out by Treasurer Hastings, which are a record in themselves of what has been accomplished in his office during his incumbency:

Interest derived from the use of public funds by his predecessor for the year 1906.....	$ 4,056.68
For the year 1907.....	$ 9,597.69
Interest derived from the use of public funds by C. A. Hastings for the year 1907.....	$18,289.94

DISCUSSED FIRE PROTECTION.

Council Spent Monday Evening on Fire Protection Problem.

While acknowledging the need of fire protection, the city council is still at sea as to just what kind of apparatus can be effectively used for the residence portion and various plans were discussed. But the chief difficulty with installing any system is the old story of too little money for even the present expenses. If hydrants were put in all over the residence portion the cost of water rental would increase the expense about four hundred dollars per month, and the council could not see how that much money could be raised without a special tax or bond issue. The matter is still in the air and any suggestion from the business men as to a remedy would, no doubt, be gladly received by the city fathers.

School Notes.

The total enrollment is now 725, with 100 of these in the high school. The largest high school in the Southern part of the state. All departments of the work are well advanced, and school is running smoothly now. The eighth grade transferred to the Gibson building this week and half the seventh to the Baptist church is being seated for the second grade.

This system of class-individual instruction, with two teachers to the room, is giving good satisfaction. We are especially glad of this, as the system has increased what would ordinarily be a very crowded condition of our schools.

The high school is planning a reception, to be given Friday evening, at the high school ball in honor of the freshman class. Mr. Pierce is organizing a football team among the high school boys. The outlook for a strong team is very promising. Our first league game will be played October first with the Normal school at Ashton.

Something new in novelties all the time at Booth's.

15,000 Acres

Lands Ever Offered

Under "Carey Act" --- 15,000 Acres

15,000 Acres

THESE Fruit Lands are conceded, by competent judges and men of experience, to be unquestionably the best in the entire West for fruits, early vegetables and melons of all kinds.

Here late frosts do not occur; the Spring season, comes two to three weeks earlier than in the lands of greater elevation. This early season enables the fruit, melon or vegetable grower to put his product on the market at a time when he realizes the top market price, and before competition interferes with marketing his crop. This means, or else lands lying as it does on the south bank of the famous Snake River, protected from cold and severe winds. In the early Spring, by high, lava bluffs on both sides of the river, makes this possible.

The soil is of the best, composed of a combination of lava, ash and sandy, erosive matter, all of which give it perfect strength, as well as its drainage, essential elements for high-class fruit and vegetable land.

The tract of land is parcelled into entire lengths by Snake River and the MAIN LINE of the OREGON SHORT LINE RAILROAD, making easy the shipping and marketing of all products.

A telephone line is being built the entire length of ditch; also good wagon roads.

Forty acres of this land planted to fruits, berries and melons will, in ten years, make an independent fortune, and will add ready sale at $1,600 to $2,000 per acre. This is not exceptional, for good orchard land elsewhere has sold as high as $3,000 per acre.

An up-to-date cannery will be constructed at King Hill (which is centrally located to this project) for the express purpose of creating a market for the product of this land and vicinity, enabling settlers to make profit almost from the beginning.

Don't forget the date. THE OPENING and "DRAWING" will take place at KING HILL, IDAHO, October 12th.

15,000 ACRES OF CHOICE FRUIT LAND IN SUNNY SOUTHERN IDAHO. TIME IS SHORT.

WHAT TAFT'S ELECTION MEANS

GIVES CLOSE VIEW OF THE RE-PUBLICAN NOMINEE

Ten Years' Association with Candidate of Mr. Taft, the man who I feel is in an especial sense, the representative of all that in which I most believe in political life.

On Oyster Day, Sept. 14--A letter written by the president to Conrad Kohrs, of Helena, Mont., at the time friends was made public tonight. The communication, it was explained, was called forth by William J. Bryan's statement that he was the president's heir and natural successor. The letter follows:

Sagamore Hills, Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 10--My Dear Mr. Kohrs: I have received your letter about the candidacy of Mr. Taft, the man who I feel is in an especial sense, the representative of all that in which I most believe in political life.

The last few years have seen a great awakening of the public conscience and the growth of a stern determination to put an end to corruption and unfair dealing, political, economic, social. It is urgently necessary that this great reform movement should go on, but no reform movement is healthy if it goes on by spasms; if it is marked by periods of frenzied activity, followed by equally violent periods of reaction.

True Friend of Reform.

The true friend of reform, the true foe of abuses, is the man who steadily perseveres in fighting wrongs, in warring against abuses, but whose character and training are such that he never promises what he cannot perform, that he always a little more than makes good when he does what he promises, and who, while steadily advancing, never permits himself to be led into foolish excesses which would damage the very cause he champions.

Mr. Taft's Qualities.

In Mr. Taft we have a man who combines all of these qualities to a degree which no other man in our public life, since the Civil war, has surpassed. To a flaming hatred of injustice, to a scorn of all that is base and mean, to a hearty sympathy with the oppressed, he unites entire disinterestedness, courage, both moral and physical of the very highest type and a kindly generosity of nature which makes him feel that all his fellow countrymen are very truly his friends and brethren, that their interests are his, and that all his great qualities are to be spent with lavish freedom in their service.

Friend of Wage Worker.

The honest wage-worker, the honest farmer, the honest mechanic or small trader, or man of small means, can feel that in a peculiar sense Mr. Taft will be his representative because of the very fact that he has the same scorn for the demagogue that he has for the corruptionist, and that he would front threats of personal violence from a mob with the unflinching and lofty indifference with which he would front the bitter anger of the wealthiest and most powerful corporations. Broad though his sympathies are, there is in him not the slightest sliver of weakness or consideration of personal interest, any more than of fear for his personal safety, could make him swerve a hair's breadth from the course which he regards as right and in the interest of the whole people.

President's Interest.

I have naturally a peculiar interest in the success of Mr. Taft, and in seeing him backed by a majority in both houses of congress, which will heartily support his policies. For the last ten years, while I have been governor of New York and president, I have been thrown into the closest intimacy with him, and he and I have on every essential point stood in hearty agreement. I should to shoulder to shoulder. We have the same views as to what is demanded by the national interest and honor, both within our own borders and as regards the interests of this nation with other nations. There is no fight for decency and fair dealing which I have waged in which I have not had his heartiest and most effective sympathy and support, and the policies for which I stand are his policies as much as mine.

Let all be guided by what he has himself done, by what his administration, in which he has played so conspicuous a part, has done. But to illustrate just what his attitude is, let me touch on two matters now prominent in the public mind.

Railroads and Trusts.

The railroad problem is itself one of the most intricate and complex and most intricate problems of our civilization; for its proper solution we need not merely honest men, but good judgment, good sense and entire fairness. Demagogues in such a matter is as certain to work evil as corruption itself. He will not favor a man to raise the wages of railroad employees to the highest point and at the same time reduce rates to the lowest point is promising what neither he nor anyone else can perform, and if the effort to perform were attempted disaster would result to both shipper and the wage-worker, and ruin to the business interests of the country.

The Man to be Relied Upon.

The man to trust in such a matter as this is the man, who, like Judge Taft, does not promise too much, but who could not be away from the duty by any argument, by any consideration; who will wage relentless war on the successful wrong-doer among railroad men as among all other men; who will do all that can be done to secure legitimately low rates for the shippers, and at the same time among the rates thus secured; but who will neither promise nor attempt to secure rates so low that the wage-earner would lose his earnings and the shareholder, whose money built the road, his profits. He will not favor a ruinous experiment like government ownership of railroads; he will stand against any kind of confiscation of honestly acquired property, but he will work effectively for the most efficient type of government supervision and control of railroads, so as to secure just and fair treatment of the people as a whole.

What is here said as to his attitude on the money question applies to the whole question of trusts. He will promise nothing on this subject unless he firmly believes he can make his promise good.

True Friend of Labor.

It is there is one body of men more than another who support me, and have a right to challenge on behalf of Secretary Taft. It is the body of wage-workers of this country. A staunch friend, a fairer and truer representative, they cannot find within the borders of the United States. He will do everything in his power, except to do that which is wrong; he will do wrong for no man, and therefore can be trusted by all men. During the ten years of my intimate acquaintance with him, since I have myself, as governor and president, been obliged to deal practically with labor problems, he has been one of the men upon whose judgment and aid I could always rely in doing everything possible for the cause of the wage worker, or with both hands and head.

Mr. Taft has been attacked because of the intemperate and unjust attacks of the bench. I am content to rest his case on these very intemperate attacks. He will not consent to limit the power of the courts, or to put a stop to anything wherever found. This very fact should make the labor people feel a peculiar confidence in him.

He is not a man who is part of the great traditions of the bench. They are the rights of the wage worker of any class, whether at capitalists or of laborers. They set forth and stand by the rights of the wage worker, to organize and to strike, as unequivocally as they set forth and stand by the doctrine of the right of the employer to that would spell destruction to the nation as a whole.

Right Principles Laid Down.

No reasonable organization would now hesitate to condemn the abuses against which Judge Taft's intemperate attacks are directed. He has therein so wisely and so firmly laid down a charter of liberty for all of us, for wage workers, for employers, for the general public; for they rest on the principles of fair dealing for all, for even-handed justice for all. They mark the judge who regarded them as standing for the rights of the whole people; as far as daylight is from darkness, so far is justice from the mob, or the cringing tool of craft, corrupt and corrupting combination.

Employer's Liability.

In one of his decisions, upon the bench Judge Taft upheld in the strongest terms, and for the first time gave full vitality to the principle of the employer's liability for injuries done workmen.

This was before any national law on the subject was enacted. Judge Taft's sense of right, his indignation against the state courts, but which was an attitude that is not fair and just, drove him to take a position which was violently condemned by short-sighted capitalists and employers of labor, which was so far in advance of the time that it was not generally upheld by the state courts, but which are now embodying in the law of the land. Judge Taft was a leader, a pioneer, while on the bench, in the effort to get justice for the wage worker, in the establishment of his rights; and all up-to-date and far-sighted laboring men should hold it to his credit that at the same time he fearlessly stood against the abuses of labor, just as fearlessly as he stood against the abuses of capital.

Will Be President of All.

If elected he has shown by his deeds that he will be president of no class but of the people as a whole; he can be trusted to stand stoutly against the two real enemies of our democracy--the Anarchy of the Parisian mandate, though it is hard to turn directly from the platted skirt to the gored--the latter looks base and unbusinesslike to our uneducated eye. Therefore, there is a constant demand for triumphant hands, for fists in the bottom, for buttons--for anything, in fact, that will let us down gently to the fork skirt. Some of the now gored skirts are very pretty and smart--The September Delineator.

HANSEN WEDDING.
